To the Reader.

This Figure, that thou here seest put,
Was for gentle Shakespeare cut;
Wherein the Graver had a strife
with Nature, to out-do the life:
O, could he but have drawn his wit
As well in brasse, as he has hit
His face; the Print would then surpasse
All, that was ever writ in brasse.
But, since he cannot, Reader, looke
Not on his Picture, but his Booke.

WILLIAM

Earle of Pembroke, &c. Lord Chamberlaine to the Kings most Excellent Maiesty.

AND

PHILIP

Earle of Montgomery, &c. Gentleman of his Maiesties Bed-Chamber. Both Knights of the most Noble Order of the Garter, and our singular good LORDS.

Right Honourable,

WHilst we studie to be thankful in our particular, for the many fauors we haue receiued from your L.L we are faine vpon the ill fortune, to mingle two the most diuerse things that can bee, feare, and rashnesse; rashnesse in the enterprize, and feare of the successe. For, when we valew the places your H.H. sustaine, we cannot but know them dignity greater, then to descend to the reading of these trifles: and, while we name them trifles, we haue depriu'd our selues of the defence of our Dedication. But since your L.L. haue beene pleas'd to thinke these trifles some-thing, heeretofore: and haue prosequuted both them, and their Authour liuing, with so much fauour: we hope, that (they out-liuing him, and he not hauing the fate, common with some, to be exequutor to his owne writings) you will vse the like indulgence toward them, you haue done

vnto their parent. There is a great difference, whether any Booke choose his Patrones, or finde them: This hath done both. For, ſo much were your L. L. likings of the ſeuerall parts, when they were acted, as before they were publiſhed, the Volume ask'd to be yours. We haue but collected them, and done an office to the dead, to procure his Orphanes, Guardians; without ambition either of ſelfe-profit, or fame: onely to keepe the memory of ſo worthy a Friend, & Fellow alive, as was our SHAKESPEARE, by humble offer of his playes, to your moſt noble patronage. Wherein, as we haue iuſtly obſerued, no man to come neere your L. L. but with a kind of religious addreſſe; it hath bin the height of our care, who are the Preſenters, to make the preſent worthy of your H. H. by the perfection. But, there we muſt alſo craue our abilities to be conſiderd, my Lords. We cannot go beyond our owne powers. Country hands reach foorth milke, creame, fruites, or what they haue: and many Nations (we haue heard) that had not gummes & incenſe, obtained their requeſts with a leauened Cake. It was no fault to approch their Gods, by what meanes they could: And the moſt, though meaneſt, of things are made more precious, when they are dedicated to Temples. In that name therefore, we moſt humbly conſecrate to your H. H. theſe remaines of your ſeruant Shakeſpeare; that what delight is in them, may be euer your L. L. the reputation his, & the faults ours, if any be committed, by a payre ſo carefull to ſhew their gratitude both to the liuing, and the dead, as is

To the great Variety of Readers.

Reader, more than welcome, for I can scarce tell whether I should style thee Gentle, or Ingenious, or Judicious, or Learned, or Honourable, or Christian, or by all these attributes, because I suppose thou art endued with them all, or the most of them, at least I am sure I have so found thee, and therefore have presumed to entitle thee by them all. Now, whether I have done thee right herein or no, I am not to be judged by my self, but by thee, for I have done it to please thee, and if I have not done it to thy liking, I am sure I have done it against my own. Thou art the Mirror of my Muse, the Patron of my Pains, the Life of my Labours, the Grace of my Writings, the Crown of my Glory, and the Honour of my Name; and therefore I am sure thou wilt not envy me the Encomiums which I have given thee, since they are all due unto thee. Thou art the Life that animates my Lines, the Spirit that inspires my Soul, the Genius that guides my Pen, the Hand that leads my Thoughts, the Judgment that governs my Fancy, the Wit that sharpens my Conceits, the Memory that records my Notions, the Reason that rectifies my Opinions, the Eye that observes my Errors, the Ear that listens to my Censures, the Tongue that speaks my Mind, the Heart that loves my Friends, and the Soul that animates my whole Body. Thou art the Touchstone that tries my Gold, the Balance that weighs my Words, the Rule that squares my Actions, the Square that proportions my Figures, the Line that directs my Courses, the Card that points my Way, the Compass that bounds my Travels, the Port that receives my Wearied Muse, and the Haven that entertains my Tired Thoughts. Thou art the Object of my Love, the Subject of my Labours, the Mistress of my Affections, the Life of my Delights, the Joy of my Heart, the Crown of my Head, the Darling of my Eyes, the Apple of my Eye, the Treasure of my Soul, and the Saint of my Devotion. Thou art the Theme of my Praises, the Argument of my Verses, the Matter of my Poems, the Subject of my Songs, the Burden of my Ballads, the Life of my Rhymes, the Grace of my Numbers, the Air of my Tunes, the Ear of my Auditors, the Delight of my Readers, the Pleasure of my Hearers, the Content of my Friends, the Credit of my Profession, the Honour of my Country, the Glory of my Nation, the Wonder of Strangers, the Admiration of Beholders, the Envy of Rivals, the Scorn of Detractors, the Contempt of Slanderers, the Reproach of Backbiters, the Shame of Calumniators, the Confusion of Impudent Persons, the Disgrace of Malicious Tongues, the Vexation of Envious Minds, the Torment of Malevolent Spirits, the Plague of Ignorant Souls, the Curse of Barbarous Natures, and the Hell of Wicked Consciences. Thou art the Reward of my Pains, the Recompence of my Labours, the Requital of my Studies, the Satisfaction of my Endeavours, the Contentment of my Desires, the Accomplishment of my Hopes, the Fruition of my Wishes, the Possession of my Thoughts, the Enjoyment of my Affections, the Life of my Delights, the Joy of my Heart, the Crown of my Head, the Darling of my Eyes, the Apple of my Eye, the Treasure of my Soul, and the Saint of my Devotion. Thou art the Theme of my Praises, the Argument of my Verses, the Matter of my Poems, the Subject of my Songs, the Burden of my Ballads, the Life of my Rhymes, the Grace of my Numbers, the Air of my Tunes, the Ear of my Auditors, the Delight of my Readers, the Pleasure of my Hearers, the Content of my Friends, the Credit of my Profession, the Honour of my Country, the Glory of my Nation, the Wonder of Strangers, the Admiration of Beholders, the Envy of Rivals, the Scorn of Detractors, the Contempt of Slanderers, the Reproach of Backbiters, the Shame of Calumniators, the Confusion of Impudent Persons, the Disgrace of Malicious Tongues, the Vexation of Envious Minds, the Torment of Malevolent Spirits, the Plague of Ignorant Souls, the Curse of Barbarous Natures, and the Hell of Wicked Consciences.

Behold Reader, we contemn, worthily, to be esteemed the Author's Client, who dedicates his Book to his Patron, for Gain, or Reward, or Preferment, or Favour, or Credit, or Honour, or Glory, or Fame, or Applause, or Love, or Affection, or Friendship, or Kindness, or Courtesy, or Civility, or Humanity, or Gentleness, or Meekness, or Patience, or Temperance, or Chastity, or Modesty, or Sobriety, or Discretion, or Wisdom, or Knowledge, or Learning, or Judgment, or Understanding, or Reason, or Memory, or Invention, or Fancy, or Wit, or Eloquence, or Rhetoric, or Poetry, or Music, or Mirth, or Pleasure, or Delight, or Joy, or Comfort, or Consolation, or Ease, or Quiet, or Peace, or Rest, or Sleep, or Death, or Life, or Heaven, or Hell, or Purgatory, or Limbo, or Paradise, or Elysium, or Tartarus, or Erebus, or Styx, or Acheron, or Phlegethon, or Cocytus, or Lethe, or Avernus, or Stygian Lake, or Fiery Lake, or Brimstone Lake, or Pool of Fire, or Pool of Brimstone, or Pool of Hell, or Pool of Damnation, or Pool of Perdition, or Pool of Destruction, or Pool of Ruin, or Pool of Misery, or Pool of Torment, or Pool of Anguish, or Pool of Grief, or Pool of Sorrow, or Pool of Woe, or Pool of Lamentation, or Pool of Mourning, or Pool of Weeping, or Pool of Crying, or Pool of Howling, or Pool of Gnashing of Teeth, or Pool of Wailing, or Pool of Groaning, or Pool of Sighing, or Pool of Sobbing, or Pool of Tears, or Pool of Blood, or Pool of Water

The AVTHOR
Mr. WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE:
what he hath left vs.

[illegible]

Of all that insolent Greece, or haughtie Rome
  Sent forth, or since did from their ashes come,
Triumph, my Britaine, thou hast one to show
  To whom all Scenes of Europe homage owe.
He was not of an age, but for all time!
  And all the Muses still were in their prime,
When like Apollo he came forth to warme
  Our eares, or like a Mercury to charme!
Nature her selfe was proud of his designes,
  And joy'ed to weare the dressing of his lines!
Which were so richly spun, and woven so fit,
  As, since, she will vouchsafe no other Wit.
The merry Greeke, tart Aristophanes,
  Neat Terence, witty Plautus, now not please
But antiquated, and deserted lye
  As they were not of Natures family.
Yet must I not give Nature all: Thy Art,
  My gentle Shakespeare, must enjoy a part
For though the Poets matter, Nature be,
  His Art doth give the fashion. And, that he,
Who casts to write a living line, must sweat,
  (such as thine are) and strike the second heat
Upon the Muses anvile: turne the same,
  (And himselfe with it) that he thinkes to frame
Or for the stage, or to the curious, come,
  To make a Poem eternall, as becomes
Thy learned Poets made as well as borne.
And such wert thou! Looke how the fathers face
  Lives in his issue, even so the race
Of Shakespeares mind, and manners brightly shines
  In his well turned, and true filed lines:
In each of which, he seemes to shake a Lance,
  As brandish't at the eyes of ignorance.
Sweet Swan of Avon! what a sight it were
  To see thee in our waters yet appeare,
And make those flights upon the bankes of Thames,
  That so did take Eliza, and our James!
But stay, I see thee in the Hemisphere
  Advanc'd, and made a Constellation there!
Shine forth, thou Starre of Poets, and with rage,
  Or influence, chide, or cheere the drooping Stage,
Which, since thy flight fro hence, hath mourn'd like night,
  And despaires day, but for thy Volumes light.

Vpon the Lines and Life of the Famous Scenicke Poet, Master WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

THose hands, which you so clapt, go now, and wring
You Britaines braue; for done are Shakespeares dayes:
His dayes are done, that made the dainty Playes,
Which made the Globe of heau'n and earth to ring.
Dry'de is that veine, dry'd is the Thespian Spring,
Turn'd all to teares, and Phœbus clouds his rayes
That corpes, that coffin now besticke those bayes,
Which crown'd him Poet first, then Poets King.
If Tragedies might any Prologue haue,
All those he made, would scarse make one to this:
Where Fame, now that he gone is to the graue
(Deaths publique tyring house) the Nuncius is.
For though his line of life went soone about,
The life yet of his lines shall neuer out.

THE TEMPEST.

Actus primus, Scena prima.

A tempestuous noise of Thunder and Lightning heard. Enter a Ship-master, and a Boat-swaine

Master

Boat-swaine.

Boats. Here Master. What cheere?

Mast. Good, speake to th'Mariners: fall to't, yarely, or we run our selues a ground, bestirre, bestirre Exit.

Enter Mariners

Boats. Heigh my hearts, cheerely, cheerely my harts. yare, yare. Take in the toppe-sale: Tend to th'Masters whistle. Blow till thou burst thy winde, if roome enough.

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Anthonio, Ferdinando, Gonzalo, and others.

Alon. Good Boatswaine haue care. Where's the Master? Play the men.

Boats. I pray now keepe below.

Anth. Where is the Master Boson?

Boats. Do you not heare him? You marre our labour, Keepe your Cabines: you do assist the storme.

Gonz. Nay, good be patient.

Boats. When the Sea is heere, what cares these roarers for the name of King? To Cabine, silence: trouble vs not.

Gon. Good, yet remember whom thou hast aboord.

Boats. None that I more loue then my selfe. You are a Counsellor, if you can command these Elements to silence, and worke the peace of the present, we will not hand a rope more, vse your authoritie: If you cannot, giue thankes you haue liu'd so long, and make your readie cabine in your Cabine for the mischance of the houre, if it so hap. Cheerely good hearts: out of our way I say. Exit.

Gon. I haue great comfort from this fellow: methinks he hath no drowning marke vpon him, his complexion is perfect Gallowes. stand fast good Fate to his hanging, make the rope of his destiny our cable, for our owne doth little aduantage: If he be not borne to bee hang'd, our case is miserable. Exit.

Enter Boatswaine.

Boats. Downe with the top-Mast: yare, lower, lower, bring her to Try with Maine-course. A plague—— vpon this howling: they are louder then the weather or our office. Yet againe? What do you heere? Shall we giue ore and drowne? Haue you a mind to sinke?

A cry within. Enter Sebastian, Anthonio & Gonzalo.

Seba. A pox o'your throat, you bawling, blasphemous incharitable Dog.

Boats. Worke you then.

Anth. Hang cur, hang, you whoreson insolent Noyse-maker, we are lesse afraid to be drowned then thou art.

Gonz. I'le warrant him for drowning, though the Ship were no stronger then a Nut-shell, and as leaky as an vnstanched wench.

Boats. Lay her a hold a hold, set her two courses off to Sea againe, lay her off.

Enter Mariners wet

Mari. All lost, to prayers to prayers, all lost.

Boats. What must our mouths be cold?

Gonz. The King, and Prince, at prayers, let's assist them, for our case is as theirs.

Seba. I am out of patience

Ant. We are merely cheated of our liues by drunkards, This wide-chopt-rascall, would thou might'st lye drowning the washing of ten Tides.

Gonz. He'le be hang'd yet,

Though euery drop of water sweare against it,
And gape at wid'st to glut him. A confused noyse within.
Mercy on vs.
We split, we split, Farewell my wife and children,
Farewell brother: we split, we split, we split.

Ant. Let's all sinke with' King

Seb. Let's take leaue of him. Exit.

Gonz. Now would I giue a thousand furlongs of Sea, for an Acre of barren ground. Long heath, Browne furres, any thing. the wills aboue be done, but I would fain dye a dry death. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Prospero and Miranda.

Mira. If by your Art (my dearest father) you haue
Put the wild waters in this Roare, allay them:
The skye it seemes would powre down stinking pitch,
But that the Sea, mounting to th' welkins cheeke,
Dashes the fire out. Oh! I haue suffered
With those that I saw suffer: A braue vessell

(Who had no doubt some noble creature in her)
Dash'd all to peeces. O the cry did knocke
Against my very heart: poore soules, they perish'd.
Had I bynature God of power, I would
Haue funcke the Sea within the Earth, or ere
It should the good Ship so haue swallow'd, and
The freighting Soules within her.
Prof. Be collected,
No more amazement: Tell your piteous heart
there's no harme done.
Mira. O woe the day.
Prof. No harme
I haue done nothing, but in care of thee
(Of thee my deere one; thee my daughter) who
Art ignorant of what thou art, naught knowing
Of whence I am, nor that I am more better
Then Prospero, Master of a full poore cell,
And thy no greater Father.
Mira. More to know
Did neuer meddle with my thoughts.
Prof. 'Tis time
I should informe thee further: Lend thy hand
And plucke my Magick garment from me. So,
Lye there my Art: wipe thou thine eyes, haue comfort,
The direfull spectacle of the wracke which touches
The very vertue of compassion in thee
I haue with verie prouidence vsed the Act
So safely ordered, that there is no soule
No not so much perdition as an hayre
Betid to any creature in the vessell
Which thou heard'st cry, which thou saw'st sinke. Sit
For thou must now know further.
Mira. You haue often
Begun to tell me what I am, but stopt
And left me to a bootelesse inquisition,
Concluding, stay: not yet.
Prof. The hour's now come
The very minute bids thee ope thine eare,
Obey, and be attentiue. Canst thou remember
A time before we came vnto this Cell?
I do not thinke thou canst, for then thou was't not
Out three yeeres old.
Mira. Certainly Sir, I can.
Prof. By what? by any other house, or person?
Of any thing the Image tell me, that
Hath kept with thy remembrance.
Mira. 'Tis farre off
And rather like a dreame then an assurance
That my remembrance warrants. Had I not
Foure, or fiue women once, that tended me?
Pro. Thou had'st; and more Miranda. But how is it
That this liues in thy minde? What seest thou else
In the dark-backward and Abisme of Time?
If thou remembrest ought ere thou came'st here,
How thou came'st here thou mayst.
Mira. But that I doe not.
Prof. Twelue yeere since (Miranda) twelue yeere since,
Thy father was the Duke of Millaine and
A Prince of power.
Mira. Sir, are not you my Father?
Prof. Thy Mother was a peece of vertue, and
She said, thou wast my daughter; and thy father
Was Duke of Millaine, and his only heire,
And Princesse no worse issued.
Mira. O the heauens,
What foule play had we, that we came from thence?
Or blessed was't we did?
Prof. Both, both my Girle,
By foule-play (as thou saist) were we heau'd thence,
But blessedly holpe hither.
Mira. O my heart bleedes
To thinke oth' teene that I haue turn'd you to,
Which is from my remembrance, please you, farther;
Prof. My brother and thy vncle, call'd Antonio
I pray thee marke me, that a brother should
Be so perfidious: he, whom next thy selfe
Of all the world I lou'd, and to him put
The manage of my state, as at that time
Through all the signories it was the first,
And Prospero, the prime Duke, being so reputed
In dignity, and for the liberall Artes,
Without a paralell; those being all my studie,
The Gouernment I cast vpon my brother,
And to my State grew stranger, being transported
And rapt in secret studies, thy false vncle
(Dost thou attend me?)
Mira. Sir, most heedefully.
Prof. Being once perfected how to graunt suites,
How to deny them, who t'aduance, and who
To trash for ouer-topping; new created
The creatures that were mine, I say, or chang'd 'em,
Or else new formed 'em; hauing both the key,
Of Officer, and office, set all hearts i'th' State
To what tune pleas'd his eare, that now he was
The ivy which had hid my princely Trunck,
And suckes fresh verdure out on't. Thou attend'st not?
Mira. O good Sir, I doe.
Prof. I pray thee marke me.
I thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicated
To closenes and the bettering of my mind
With that, which but by being so retir'd
O're-prized all popular rate, my false brother
Awak'd an euill nature, and my trust
Like a good parent, did beget of him
A falsehood in proportion, as great
As my trust was: which had indeed no limit,
A confidence sans bound. He being thus Lorded,
Not only with what my reuenew yeelded,
But what my power might else exact. Like one
Who hauing into truth, by telling of it,
Made such a sinner of his memorie
To credit his owne lie, he did beleeue
He was indeed the Duke, out o'th' Substitution
And executing th'outward face of Royaltie
With all prerogatiue: hence his Ambition growing:
Do'st thou heare?
Mira. Your tale, Sir, would cure deafenesse.
Prof. To haue no Screene between this part he plaid,
And him he plaid it for, he needes will be Absolute Millaine. Me (poore man) my Librarie
Was Dukedome large enough: of temporall royalties
He thinks me now incapable. Confederates
(So dry he was for Sway) with King of Naples
To giue him Annuall tribute, doe him homage
Subiect his Coronet, to his Crowne and bend
The Dukedom yet vnbow'd (alas poore Millaine)
To most ignoble stooping
Mira. Oh the heauens!
Prof. Marke his condition, and th'euent, then tell me
If this might be a brother.
Mira. I should sinne
To thinke but Nobly of my Grand-mother,

Good

Good wombes haue borne bad sonnes.
Pro. Now the Condition.
This King of Naples being an Enemy
To me inueterate, hearkens my Brothers suit,
Which was, That he in lieu o'th' premises,
Of homage, and I know not how much Tribute,
Should presently extirpate me and mine
Out of the Dukedome, and confer faire Millaine
With all the Honors, on my brother: Whereon
A treacherous Armie leuied, one midnight
Fated to th' purpose, did Antonio open
The gates of Millaine, and i'th' dead of darkenesse
The ministers for th' purpose hurried thence
Me, and thy crying selfe.
Mir. Alack, for pitty!
I not remembring how I cride out then
Will cry it ore againe: it is a hint
That wrings mine eyes to't.
Pro. Heare a little further.
And then I'le bring thee to the present businesse
Which now's vpon's: without the which, this story
Were most impertinent.
Mir. Wherefore did they not
That hour destroy vs?
Pro. Well demanded wench:
My Tale prouokes that question. Deare they durst not,
So deare the loue my people bore me: nor set
A marke so bloody on the businesse: but
With colours fairer, painted their foule ends.
In few, they hurried vs aboord a Barke,
Bore vs some Leagues to Sea, where they prepared
A rotten carkasse of a Butt, not rigg'd,
Nor tackle, sayle, nor mast: the very rats
Instinctiuely haue quit it: There they hoyst vs
To cry to th' Sea, that roares to vs; to sigh
To th' winds, whose pity, sighing back againe
Did vs but louing wrong.
Mir. Alack, what trouble
Was I then to you?
Pro. O, a Cherubin
Thou was't that did preserue me. Thou didst smile,
Infused with a fortitude from heauen,
When I haue deck't the sea with drops full salt,
Vnder my burthen groan'd, which raised in me
An vndergoing stomacke, to beare vp
Against what should ensue.
Mir. How came we a shore?
Pro. By prouidence diuine,
Some food we had, and some fresh water that
A noble Neapolitan, one
Out of his Charity (who being then appointed Master of this designe) did giue vs, with Rich garments, linnens, stuffs and necessaries
Which since haue steeded much: so of his gentlenesse
Knowing I lou'd my bookes: he furnish'd me
From mine owne Library, with volumes that
I prize aboue my Dukedome.
Mir. Would I might
But euer see that man.
Pro. Now I arise,
Sit still, and heare the last of our sea-sorrow.
Here in this Iland we arriu'd, and here
Haue I, thy Schoolemaster, made thee more profit
Than other Princesse can, that haue more time
For vainer hours, and Tutors, not so careful.
Mir. Heauens thank you for't. And now I pray you Sir,
For still 'tis beating in my mind; your reason
For raising this Sea-storme?
Pro. Know thus far forth.
By accident most strange, bountifull Fortune
(Now my deere Lady) hath mine enemies
Brought to this shore: And by my prescience
I find my Zenith doth depend vpon
A most auspicious starre, whose influence
If now I court not, but omit, my fortunes
Will euer after droope. Here cease more questions,
Thou art inclin'd to sleepe: 'tis a good dulnesse,
And giue it way: I know thou canst not choose.
Come away, Seruant, come: I am ready now,
Approach my Ariel. Come Enter Ariel.
Ar. All haile, great Master, graue Sir, haile: I come
To answer thy best pleasure, be't to fly,
To swim, to diue into the fire, to ride
On the curled clowds: to thy strong bidding, task
Ariel, and all his Qualitie.
Pro. Hast thou, Spirit,
Performd to point, the Tempest that I bad thee.
Ar. To euery Article.
I boorded the Kings ship: now on the Beake,
Now in the Waste, the Deake, euery Cabyn,
I flam'd amazement. Sometime I'ld diuide
And burne in many places, on the Top-mast,
The Yards and Bore-sprit would I flame distinctly,
Then meete, and ioyne. Ioues Lightnings, the precursors
O'th' dreadfull Thunder-claps, more momentary
And sight-outrunning were not: the fire, and cracks
Of sulphurous roaring, the most mighty Neptune
Seeme to besiege, and make his bold waues tremble,
Yea his dread Trident shake.
Pro. My braue Spirit,
Who was so firme, so constant, that this coyle
Would not so much as moue?
Ar. Not a soule
But felt a feauer of the madde, and play'd
Some tricke of desperation. All but Mariners
Plunged in the foaming brine, and quit the vessell,
Then all a fire with me: the King's sonne Ferdinand
With hayre vp-staring (then like reeds, not hayre)
Was the first man that leapt; cride hell is empty,
And all the Diuels are here.
Pro. Why that's my spirit!
But was not this nye shore?
Ar. Close by, my Master.
Pro. But are they Ariel, safe?
Ar. Not a haire perished.
On the contrary, their garments not a blemish,
But fresher than before: and as thou bad'st me,
In troops I haue dispersed them 'bout the Isle.
The King's sonne haue I landed by himselfe,
Whom I left cooling of the Ayre with sighes,
In an odde Angle of the Isle, and sitting
His armes in this sad knot.
Pro. Of the Kings ship,
The Mariners say how thou hast disposd,
And all the rest o'th' Fleete?
Ar. Safely in harbour
Is the Kings ship: in the deepe Nooke where once
Thou calldst me vp at midnight to fetch dewe
From the still-vext Bermoothes, there she's hid,
The Mariners all vnder hatches stowed,
Who with a Charme ioyn'd to their suffred labour
I haue left asleepe: and for the rest o'th' Fleete

(Whil'st I dispers'd, they all haue met againe,
And are vpon the Mediterranian Flote
Bound sadly home for Naples
Supposing that they saw the King ship wrackt,
And his great person perish.
Pro. Ariel, thy charge
Exactly is performd, but there's more worke
What is the time o'th day?
Ar. Past the mid season.
Pro. At least two Glasses: the time 'twixt six & now
Must by vs both be spent most precious.
Ar. Is there more toyle? Since you haue giuen me pains,
Let me remember thee what thou hast promis'd,
Which is not yet perform'd me.
Pro. How now? moody?
What is't thou canst demand?
Ar. My Liberty.
Pro. Before the time be out? no more:
Ar. I prethee,
Remember I haue done thee worthy seruice,
Told thee no lyes, made thee no mistakings, seru'd
Without or grudge or grumblings: thou did promise
To bate me a full yeare.
Pro. Do'st thou forget
From what a torment I did free thee? Ar. No.
Pro. Thou do'st, & think'st it much to tread ooze
Of the salt deepe,
To run vpon the sharpe wind of the North,
To do me businesse in the veines o'th Earth
When it is bak'd with frost.
Ar. I do not Sir.
Pro. Thou lyest, malignant Thing: hast thou forgot
The foule Witch Sycorax who with Age and Enuy
Was growne into a hoope? hast thou forgot her?
Ar. No Sir.
Pro. Thou hast: where was she borne? speak, tell me:
Ar. Sir, in Argier.
Pro. Oh, was she so? I must
Once in a moneth recount what thou hast bin,
Which thou forgetst. This damn'd Witch Sycorax
For mischiefes manifold, and sorceries terrible
To enter human hearing, from Argier
Thou know'st was banish'd: for one thing she did
They would not take her life. Is not this true? Ar. I, Sir
Pro. This blew-eyed hag was hither brought with child,
And here was left by the Saylors: thou my slaue, as such,
As thou report'st thy selfe was the Instrument,
And for thou was't a spirit too delicate
To act her earthy and abhord commands,
Refusing her grand hests, she did confine thee
By help of her more potent Ministers,
And in her most vnmitigable rage,
Into a cloue'n Pine, within which rift
Imprison'd, thou did painefully remaine
A dozen yeeres: within which space she di'd,
And left thee there: where thou did'st vent thy groanes
As fast as Mill-wheeles strike. Then was this Island,
Saue for the son, that she did litter here,
A freckled whelpe, hag-borne) not honour'd with
A humane shape.
Ar. Yes Caliban her sonne.
Pro. Dull thing, I say so: he, that Caliban
Whom now I keepe in seruice: thou best know'st
What torment I did finde thee in: thy groanes
Did make wolues howle, and penetrate the breasts
Of ever-angry Beares; it was a torment
To lay vpon the damn'd, which Sycorax
Could not againe vndoe: it was mine Art,
When I arriu'd, and heard thee, that made gape
The Pyne, and let thee out.
Ar. I thanke thee Master.
Pro. If thou more murmur'st, I will rend an Oake
And peg thee in his knotty entrailes, till
Thou hast howl'd away twelue winters.
Ar. Pardon, Master,
I will be correspondent to command
And do my spriting, gently.
Pro Do so: and after two dayes
I will discharge thee.
Ar. That's my noble Master:
What shall I do? say what? what shall I do?
Pro. Goe make thy selfe like a Nymph o'th' Sea,
Be subiect to no sight but thine, and mine: inuisible
To euery eye-ball else: goe take this shape
And hither come in't: goe: hence
With diligence. Exit.
Pro. Awake, deere hart awake, thou hast slept well,
Awake.
Mir The strangenes of your story, put Heauinesse in me.
Pro Shake it off. Come on,
We'll visit Caliban, my slaue, who neuer
Yeelds vs kinde answere.
Mir 'Tis a villaine Sir, I do not loue to looke on.
Pro. But as 'tis
We cannot miss him: he do's make our fire,
Fetch in our wood, and serues in offices
That profit vs. What ho! slaue! Caliban:
Thou earth, thou speake.
Cal. (within) There's wood enough within.
Pro. Come forth I say, there's other busines for thee:
Come thou Tortoys, when? Enter Ariel like a water-
Fine apparition: my quaint Ariel, Nymph.
Hearke in thine eare.
Ar. My Lord, it shall be done. Exit.
Pro. Thou poysonous slaue, got by the deuill himselfe Vpon thy wicked Dam; come forth. Enter Caliban.
Cal. As wicked dewe, as ere my mother brush'd
With Rauens feather from vnwholesome Fen
Drop on you both: A Southwest blow on yee,
And blister you all ore.
Pro. For this be sure, to night thou shalt haue cramps,
Side stitches, that shall pen thy breath vp, Vrchins
Shall for that vast of night, that they may worke
All exercise on thee: thou shalt be pinch'd
As thicke as hony-combe, each pinch more stinging
Then Bees that made 'em.
Cal I must eat my dinner:
This Island's mine by Sycorax my mother,
Which thou tak'st from me: when thou cam'st first
Thou strok'st me, & made much of me: would'st giue me
Water with berries in't: and teach me how
To name the bigger Light, and how the lesse
That burne by day, and night: and then I lou'd thee
And shew'd thee all the qualities o'th' Isle,
The fresh Springs, Brine-pits; barren place and fertill,
Curs'd be I that did so: All the Charmes
Of Sycorax: Toades, Beetles, Batts light on you:
For I am all the Subiects that you haue,
Which first was mine owne King: and here you sty me
In this hard Rocke, whiles you do keepe from me
The rest o'th' Island.

Pro. Thou

Pro. Thou most lying slaue
Whom stripes may moue, not kindnesse. I haue vs'd thee
(Filth as thou art) with humane care, and lodg'd thee
In mine owne Cell, till thou didst seeke to violate
The honor of my childe.
Cal. Oh ho, oh ho, would't had been done
Thou didst preuent me, I had peopled else
This Ile with Calibans
Mira. Abhorred Slaue,
Which any print of goodnesse will not take,
Being capable of all ill: I pittied thee,
Took paines to make thee speak, taught thee each houre
One thing or other: when thou didst not (sauage)
Know thine owne meaning, but would'st gabble like
A thing most brutish, I endow'd thy purposes
With words that made them known. But thy vile race
(Though thou didst learne) had that in't, which good Natures
Could not abide to be with: therefore wast thou
Deseruedly confin'd into this Rocke, who deseru'st
Deseru'st more then a prison.
Cal. You taught me Language, and my profit on't
Is, I know how to curse. The red plague rid you
For learning me your language.
Pro. Hag-seed, hence:
Fetch vs wood, and bee quick (thou'rt best
To answer other businesse. Shrug'st thou (Malice)
If thou neglect'st, or dost vnwillingly
What I command, Ile racke thee with old Cramps,
Fill all thy bones with Aches, make thee roare,
That beasts shall tremble at thy dyn.
Cal. No, pray thee.
I must obey, his Art is of such power,
It would controll my Dam goddesse Setebos,
And make a vassaile of him.
Pro. So slaue, hence.

Exit Caliban.

Enter Ferdinand, and Ariel, inuisible playing and singing.

Ariel Song. Come vnto these yellow sands,
And then take hands:
Curtsied when you haue, and kist
The wilde waues whist:
Foote it featly here, and there, and sweet Sprites beare
the burthen. (Burthen dispersedly.)
Hark, hark, bowgh wawgh the watch-dogges barke,
bowgh wawgh.
Ar. Hark, hark, I heare the strayne of strutting Chanticlere
Cry Cocke-a-diddle-dowe.
Fer. Where should this Musicke be? I'th'ayre, or th'earth?
It sounds no more: and sure it waytes vpon
Some God o'th'Iland, sitting on a banke,
Weeping againe the King my Fathers wracke.
This Musicke crept by me vpon the waters
Allaying both their fury, and my passion
With it's sweet ayre: thence I haue follow'd it
(Or it hath drawne me rather) but 'tis gone.
No, it begins againe.
Ariel Song. Full fathom fiue thy Father lies,
Of his bones are Corrall made:
Those are pearles that were his eyes,
Nothing of him that doth fade,
But doth suffer a Sea-change
Into something rich & strange
Sea Nymphs hourly ring his knell
Burthen ding dong.
Harke now I heare them, ding-dong bell.
Fer. The Ditty do's remember my drowned father,
This is no mortall businesse, nor do sound

That the earth owes. I heare it now aboue me.
Pro. The fringed Curtaines of thine eye aduance,
And say what thou seest yond.
Mira. What is't a Spirit?
Lord, how it looks about. Beleeue me Sir,
It carries a braue forme. But 'tis a spirit.
Pro. No wench, it eats, and sleepes, & hath such senses
As we haue, such. This Gallant which thou seest
Was in the wracke: and but he's something stain'd
With greefe (that's beauties canker) you might call him
A goodly person: he hath lost his fellowes,
And strayes about to find 'em.
Mira. I might call him
A thing diuine, for nothing naturall
I euer saw so Noble.
Pro. It goes on I see
As my soule prompts it. Spirit, fine spirit, Ile free thee
Within two dayes for this.
Fer. Most sure the Goddesse
On whom these aires attend. Vouchsafe my pray'r
May know if you remaine vpon this Island,
And that you will some good instruction giue
How I may beare me here. My prime request
(Which I do last pronounce, is (O you wonder!)
If you be Maid, or no?
Mira. No wonder Sir,
But certainly a Maid.
Fer. My Language? Heauens!
I am the best of them that speake this speech,
Were I but where 'tis spoken.
Pro. How? the best?
What wer't thou if the King of Naples heard thee?
Fer. A single thing, as I am now, that wonders
To heare thee speake of Naples. He do's heare me,
And that he do's, I weep: my selfe am Naples,
Who with mine eyes, neu'r since at ebbe, beheld
The King my Father wrack't.
Mira. Alacke, for mercy.
Fer. Yes faith, and all his Lords, the Duke of Millaine
And his braue Sonne, being twaine.
Pro. The Duke of Millaine
And his more braue Daughter, could controll thee
If now 'twere fit to do't. At the first sight
They haue chang'd eyes. Delicate Ariel,
Ile set thee free for this. A word good Sir,
I feare you haue done your selfe some wrong. A word.
Mira. Why speakes my Father so vngently? This
Is the third man that ere I saw: the first
That ere I sigh'd for: pitty mooue my father
To be inclin'd my way.
Fer. O if a Virgin,
And your affection not gone forth, Ile make you
The Queene of Naples.
Pro. Soft Sir, one word more.
They are both in either eyes powres: But this swift businesse
I must vneasie make, least too light winning
Make the prize light. One word more, I charge thee
That thou attend me. Thou do'st here vsurpe
The name thou ow'st not, and hast put thy selfe
Vpon this Island, as a spy, to win it
From me, the Lord on't.
Fer. No, as I am a man.
Mira. There's nothing ill, can dwell in such a Temple,
If the ill-spirit haue so fayre a house,
Good things will striue to dwell with't.
Pro. Follow me.

Prof. Speake not you for him: hee's a Traitor: come,
Ile manacle thy necke and feete together:
Sea water ſhalt thou drinke: thy food ſhall be
The freſh-brooke Muſſels, wither'd roots, and huskes
Wherein the Acorne cradled. Follow.
Fer. No,
I will reſiſt ſuch entertainment, till
Mine enemy ha's more pow'r.
He draws, and is charmed from moving
Mira. O deere Father,
Make not too raſh a triall of him, for
Hee's gentle, and not fearfull.
Prof. What I ſay,
My foote my Tutor? Put thy ſword vp Traitor,
Who mak'ſt a ſhew, but dar'ſt not ſtrike: thy conſcience
Is ſo poſſeſt with guilt: Come, from thence,
For I can heere diſarme thee with this ſticke,
And make thy weapon drop.
Mira. Beſeech you father.
Prof. Hence: hang not on my garments.
Mira. Sir haue pity,
Ile be his ſurety.
Prof. Silence: One word more
Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee: What,
An aduocate for an Impoſtor? Huſh:
Thou think'ſt there is no more ſuch ſhapes as he,
(Having ſeene but him and Caliban:) Foolliſh wench,
To th'moſt of men, this is a Caliban,
And they to him are Angels.
Mira. My affections
Are then moſt humble: I haue no ambition
To ſee a goodlier man.
Prof. Come on, obey:
Thy Nerues are in their infancy againe,
And haue no vigour in them.
Fer. So they are:
My ſpirits, as in a dreame, are all bound vp:
My Fathers loſſe, the weakneſſe which I feele,
The wracke of all my friends, nor this mans threats,
To whom I am ſubdude, are but light to me,
Might I but through my priſon once a day
Behold this Mayd: all corners elſe o'th'Earth
Let liberty make vſe of: ſpace enough
Haue I in ſuch a priſon.
Prof. It workes: Come on.
Thou haſt done well, fine Ariel: follow me,
Harke what thou elſe ſhalt do mee
Mira. Be of comfort,
My Fathers of a better nature (Sir)
Then he appeares by ſpeech: this is vnwonted
Which now came from him.
Prof. Thou ſhalt be as free
As mountaine windes; but then exactly do
All points of my command.
Ariell. To th'ſyllable.
Prof. Come follow: ſpeake not for him. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scœna Prima.

Enter Alonſo, Sebaſtian, Anthonio, Gonzalo, Adrian, Franciſco, and others.

Gonz. Beſeech you Sir, be merry; you haue cauſe,
(So haue we all) of ioy; for our eſcape
Is much beyond our loſſe; our hint of woe
Is common, every day, ſome Saylors wife,
The Maſters of ſome Merchant, and the Merchant
Haue iuſt our Theame of woe: But for the miracle,
(I meane our preſeruation) few in millions
Can ſpeake like vs: then wiſely (good Sir) weigh
Our ſorrow, with our comfort.
Alonſ. Prethee peace.
Seb. He receiues comfort like cold porredge.
Ant. The Viſitor will not giue him o're ſo.
Seb. Looke, hee's winding vp the watch of his wit,
By and by it will ſtrike.
Gon. Sir.
Seb. One: Tell.
Gon. When euery greefe is entertaind,
That's offer'd comes to th'entertainer.
Seb. A dollor.
Gon. Dolour comes to him indeed, you haue ſpoken truer then you purpos'd.
Seb. You haue taken it wiſelier then I meant you ſhould.
Gon. Therefore my Lord.
Ant. Fie, what a ſpend-thrift is he of his tongue.
Alon I pre-thee ſpare.
Gon. Well, I haue done: But yet
Seb. He will be talking.
Ant. Which, of he, or Adrian, for a good wager,
Firſt begins to crow?
Seb. The old Cocke.
Ant. The Cockrell.
Seb. Done: The wager?
Ant. A Laughter.
Seb. A match.
Adr. Though this Iſland ſeeme to be deſert.
Seb. Ha, ha, ha.
Ant. So: you're paid.
Adr. Vninhabitable, and almoſt inacceſſible.
Seb Yet
Adr. Yet
Ant. He could not miſſe't.
Adr. It muſt needs be of ſubtle, tender, and delicate temperance.
Ant. Temperance was a delicate wench.
Seb. I, and a ſubtle, as he moſt learnedly deliuer'd.
Adr. The ayre breathes vpon vs here moſt ſweetly.
Seb. As if it had Lungs, and rotten ones.
Ant. Or, as 'twere perfum'd by a Fen.
Gon. Heere is euery thing aduantageous to life.
Ant. True, ſaue meanes to liue.
Seb. Of that there's none, or little.
Gon. How luſh and luſty the graſſe lookes? How greene?
Ant. The ground indeed is tawny.
Seb. With an eye of greene in't.
Ant. He miſſes not much.
Seb. No: he doth but miſtake the truth totally.
Gon. But the rarety of it is, which is indeed almoſt beyond credit.
Seb. As many vouch't rarieties are.
Gon. That our Garments being (as they were) drencht in the Sea, hold notwithſtanding their freſhneſſe and gloſſes, being rather new dy'de then ſtain'd with ſalte
[redacted]
Ant. If but one of his pockets could ſpeake, would it not ſay he lyes?
Seb. I, or very falſely pocket vp his report.

Gon.

Gon. Me thinkes our garments are now as freſh as when we put them on firſt in Affricke, at the marriage of the kings faire daughter Claribel to the king of Tunis.

Seb. 'Twas a ſweet marriage, and we proſper well in our returne.

Adri. Tunis was neuer grac'd before with ſuch a Paragon to their Queene.

Gon. Not ſince widdow Dido's time.

Ant. Widow? A pox o'that: how came that Widdow in? Widdow Dido!

Seb. What if he had ſaid Widdower Æneas too? Good Lord, how you take it?

Adri. Widdow Dido ſaid you? You make me ſtudy of that: She was of Carthage, not of Tunis.

Gon. This Tunis Sir was Carthage.

Adri. Carthage? Gon. I aſſure you Carthage.

Ant. His word is more then the miraculous Harpe.

Seb. He hath rais'd the wall, and houſes too.

Ant. What impoſſible matter will he make eaſy next?

Seb. I thinke hee will carry this Iſland home in his pocket, and giue it his ſonne for an Apple.

Ant. And ſowing the kernels of it in the Sea, bring forth more Islands.

Gon. I. Ant. Why in good time.

Gon. Sir, we were talking, that our garments ſeeme now as freſh as when we were at Tunis at the marriage of your daughter, who is now Queene.

Ant. And the rareſt that ere came there.

Seb. Bate (I beſeech you) widdow Dido.

Ant. O Widdow Dido? I, Widdow Dido.

Gon. Is not Sir my doublet as freſh as the firſt day I wore it? I meane in a ſort.

Ant. That ſort was well fiſh'd for.

Gon. When I wore it at your daughters marriage.

Alon. You cram theſe words into mine eares, againſt the ſtomacke of my ſenſe: would I had neuer Married my daughter there: For comming thence My ſonne is loſt, and (in my rate) ſhe too, Who is ſo farre from Italy removed, I ne're againe ſhall ſee her: O thou mine heire Of Naples and of Millaine, what ſtrange fiſh Hath made his meale on thee?

Fran. Sir he may liue, I ſaw him beate the ſurges vnder him, And ride vpon their backes; he trod the water Whoſe enmity he flung aſide: and breſted The ſurge moſt ſwolne that met him: his bold head 'Bone the contentious waues he kept, and oared Himſelfe with his good armes in luſty ſtroke To th'ſhore; that ore his waue-worne baſis bowed As ſtooping to releeue him: I not doubt He came aliue to Land.

Alon. No, no, hee's gone.

Seb. Sir you may thank your ſelfe for this great loſſe, That would not bleſſe our Europe with your daughter, But rather looſe her to an Affrican, Where ſhe at leaſt, is baniſh'd from your eye, Who hath cauſe to wet the greeſe on't.

Alon. Pre-thee peace.

Seb. You were kneel'd too, & importun'd otherwiſe By all of vs: and the faire ſoule her ſelfe Weigh'd betweene loathneſſe, and obedience, at Which end o'th'beame ſhould bow: we haue loſt your ſon, I feare for euer: Millaine and Naples haue Mo widdowes in them of this buſineſſe making, Then we bring men to comfort them: The faults your owne.

Alon. So is the deer'ſt oth'loſſe.

Gon. My Lord Sebaſtian, The truth you ſpeake doth lacke ſome gentleneſſe, And time to ſpeake it in: you rub the ſore, When you ſhould bring the plaiſter.

Seb. Very well. Ant. And moſt Chirurgeonly.

Gon. It is foule weather in vs all, good Sir, When you are cloudy.

Seb. Foule weather? Ant. Very foule.

Gon. Had I plantation of this Iſle my Lord.

Ant. Hee'd ſow't with Nettle-ſeed.

Seb. Or dockes, or Mallowes.

Gon. And were the King on't, what would I do?

Seb. Scape being drunke, for want of Wine.

Gon. I'th'Commonwealth I would (by contraries) Execute all things. For no kinde of Traffike Would I admit: No name of Magiſtrate. Letters ſhould not be knowne: Riches, pouerty, And vſe of ſeruice, none: Contract, Succeſſion, Borne, bound of Land, Tilth, Vineyard none. No vſe of Metall, Corne, or Wine, or Oyle. No occupation, all men idle, all: And Women too, but innocent and pure: No Soueraignty.

Seb. Yet he would be King on't.

Ant. The latter end of his Common-wealth forgets the beginning.

Gon. All things in common Nature ſhould produce Without ſweat or endeuour. Treaſon, felony, Sword, Pike, Knife, Gun, or need of any Engine Would I not haue: but Nature ſhould bring forth Of it owne kinde, all foyſon, all abundance To feed my innocent people.

Seb. No marrying 'mong his ſubiects?

Ant. None (man) all idle; Whores and Knaues,

Gon. I would with ſuch perfection gouerne Sir. T'excell the Golden Age.

Seb. 'Saue his Maieſty. Ant. Long liue Gonzalo.

Gon. And do you marke me, Sir? (me.

Alon. Pre-thee no more: thou doſt talke nothing to

Gon. I do well beleeue your Highneſſe, and did it to minniſter occaſion to theſe Gentlemen, who are of ſuch ſenſible and nimble Lungs, that they alwayes vſe to laugh at nothing.

Ant. 'Twas you we laugh'd at.

Gon. Who, in this kind of merry fooling am nothing to you: ſo you may continue, and laugh at nothing ſtill.

Ant. What a blow was there giuen?

Seb. And it had not falne flat-long.

Gon. You are Gentlemen of braue mettal: you would lift the Moone out of her ſpheare, if ſhe would continue in it fiue weekes without changing.

Enter Ariell playing ſolemne Muſicke.

Seb. We would ſo, and then go a Bat-fowling.

Ant. Nay good my Lord be not angry.

Gon. No I warrant you, I will not aduenture my diſcretion ſo weakly: Will you laugh me aſleepe, for I am very heauy.

Ant. Go ſleepe, and heare vs.

Alon. What, all ſo ſoone aſleepe? I wiſh mine eyes Would (with themſelues) ſhut vp my thoughts, I finde they are inclin'd to do ſo.

Seb. Pleaſe you Sir. Do not omit the heauy offer of it: It ſildome viſits ſorrow, when it doth, it is a Comforter.

Ant.

Ant. We two my Lord, will guard your person,
While you take your rest, and watch your safety.
Alon. Thanke you. Wondrous heauy
Seb. What a strange drowsinesse possesses them?
Ant. It is the quality o'th' Clymate.
Seb. Why
Doth it not then our eye-lids sinke? I finde
Not my selfe disposd to sleepe.
Ant. Nor I, my spirits are nimble.
They fell together all, as by consent
They dropt, as by a Thunder-stroke. What might Worthy Sebastian? O, what might? No more:
And yet, me thinkes I see it in thy face,
What thou should'st be: th'occasion speakes thee, and
My strong imagination sees a Crowne
Dropping upon thy head.
Seb. What art thou Noble?
Ant. Do you not heare me speake?
Seb. I do, and surely
It is a sleepy Language, and thou speak'st
Out of thy sleepe. What is it thou didst say?
This is a strange repose, to be asleepe
With eyes wide open, standing, & going, and
And yet to fast asleepe.
Ant. Noble Sebastian,
Thou let'st thy fortune sleepe, die rather, wink'st
Whiles thou art waking.
Seb. Thou do'st snore distinctly,
There's meaning in thy snores.
Ant. I am more serious than my custome: you
Must be so too, if heed me: which to do,
Trebles thee o're.
Seb. Well: I am standing water.
Ant. Ile teach you how to flow.
Seb. Do so: to ebbe
Hereditary Sloth instructs me.
Ant. O!
If you but knew how you the purpose cherish
Whiles thus you mocke it: how in stripping it
You more inuest it: ebbing men, indeed
(Most often) do so neere their fortunes dye
By their owne feare, or sloth.
Seb. Prethee say on,
The setting of thine eye, and cheeke proclaime
A matter from thee: and a birth indeed,
Which throwes thee much to yeeld.
Ant. Thus, sir:
Although this Lord of weake remembrance, this
Who shall be of as little memory
When he is earth'd, hath (heere new) left by all
(For hee's a Spirit of perswasion, only Professes to perswade) the King his sonne's alive,
'Tis as impossible that he's vndrown'd,
As he that sleepes heere, swims.
Seb. I haue no hope
That he's vndrown'd.
Ant. O, out of that no hope,
What great hope haue you? No hope that way, Is Another way so high a hope, that euen
Ambition cannot pierce a winke beyond
But doubt discovery there. Will you grant with me
That Ferdinand is drown'd.
Seb. He's gone.
Ant. Then tell me, who's the next heire of Naples?
Seb. Claribell.
Ant. She that is Queene of Tunis: she that dwells
Ten leagues beyond mans life: she that from Naples
Can haue no note, vnlesse the Sun were post:
The Man i'th Moone's too slow, till new-borne chinnes
Be rough, and Razor-able. She that from whom
We all were sea-swallow'd, though some cast againe,
(And by that destiny) to performe an act
Whereof, what's past is Prologue; what to come
In yours and my discharge.
Seb. What stuffe is this? How say you?
'Tis true my brothers daughter's Queene of Tunis,
So is she heyre of Naples, 'twixt which Regions
There is some space.
Ant. A space, whose ev'ry cubit
Seemes to cry out, how shall that Claribell
Measure vs backe to Naples? keepe in Tunis,
And let Sebastian wake. Say, this were death
That now hath seiz'd them, why they were no worse
Than now they are: There be that can rule Naples
As well as he that sleepes: Lords, that can prate
As amply, and vnnecessarily
As this Gonzallo. I my selfe could make
A Chough as deepe chat. O, that you bore
The minde that I do, what a sleepe were this
For your aduancement? Do you vnderstand me?
Seb. Me thinkes I do.
Ant. And how do's your content
Tender your owne good fortune?
Seb. I remember
You did supplant your Brother Prospero.
Ant. True.
And looke how well my Garments sit vpon me,
Much feater then before. My brothers seruants
Were then my fellowes, now they are my men.
Seb. But for your conscience.
Ant. I, sir: where lies that? If 'twere a kybe
'Twould put me to my Slipper: But I feele not
This Deity in my bosome. Twenty consciences
That stand 'twixt me, and Milan, candied be they,
And melted ere they molest. Heere lies your Brother,
No better then the earth he lies vpon,
If he were that which now he's like (that's dead)
Whom I with this obedient steele (three inches of it)
Can lay to bed for euer: whiles you doing thus,
To the perpetual wink for aye might put
This ancient morsell, this Sir Prudence, who Should not vpbraid our course: for all the rest
They'le take suggestion, as a Cat laps milke,
They'le tell the clocke, to any businesse that
We say befits the houre.
Seb. Thy case, deere Friend
Shall be my president: As thou got'st Millaine,
I'le come by Naples: Draw thy sword, one stroke
Shall free thee from the tribute which thou paiest,
And I the King shall loue thee.
Ant. Draw together:
And when I reare my hand, do you the like
To fall it on Gonzalo.
Seb. O, but one word.
Enter Ariell with Musicke and Song.
Ariel. My Master through his Art foresees the danger
That you (his friend) are in, and sends me forth
(For else his project dies) to keepe them liuing.
Sings in Gonzalos eare.
While you here do snoaring lie,
Open-ey'd Conspiracie
His time doth take:

If of Life you keepe a care,
Shake off slumber and beware.
Awake awake.

Ant. Then let vs both be sodaine.

Con. Now, good Angels preserue the King.

Alo. Why how now hoa awake? Why are you drawne?
Wherefore this ghastly looking?

Gon. What's the matter?

Seb. Whiles we stood here securing your repose,
(Euen now) we heard a hollow burst of bellowing
Like Bulls, or rather Lyons: did't not wake you?
It strooke mine eare most terribly.

Alo. I heard no'ght.

Ant. O, 'twas a din to fright a Monsters eare,
To make an earthquake: sure it was the roare
Of a whole heard of Lyons.

Alo. Heard you this Gonzalo?

Gon. Vpon mine honour Sir, I heard a humming,
(And that a strange one too) which did awake me:
I shak'd you Sir, and cride: as mine eyes opened,
I saw their weapons drawne: there was a noyse,
That's verily: 'tis best we stand vpon our guard;
Or that we quit this place: let's draw our weapons.

Alo. Lead off this ground, and let's make further search
For my poore Sonne.

Gon. Heauen keepe him from these Beasts.
For he is sure i'th Iland.

Alo. Lead away. Exeunt.

Ari. Prospero my Lord, shall know what I haue
So King goes safely on to seeke his Sonne. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Caliban, with a burthen of wood: a noyse of Thunder heard.

Cal. All the infections that the Sunne sucks vp
From Bogs, Fens, Flats, on Prosper fall, and make him
By inch-meale a Disease: his Spirits heare me,
And yet I needes must curse: but they'll nor pinch,
Fright me with Vrchyn shewes, pitch me i'th mire,
Nor lead me like a fire-brand in the darke
Out of my way, vnlesse he bid 'em: but
For euery trifle are they set vpon me:
Sometime like Apes, that moe and chatter at me,
And after bite me: then like Hedgehogs, which
Lye tumbling in my barefoote way, and mount
Their pricks at my footfall: sometime am I
All wound with Adders, who with cloues and hisses
Doe hisse me into madnesse: Lo now Lo.
Here comes a Spirit of his, and to torment me Trinculo.
For bringing wood in slowly: I'le fall flat,
Perchance he will not minde me.

Tri. Here's neither bush nor shrub to bear off any weather at all, and another Storme brewing, I heare it sing i'th wind: yond same blacke cloud, yond huge one, looks like a foule bumbard that would shed his liquor. If it should thunder, as it did before, I know not where to hide my head: yond same cloud cannot choose but fall by pailfuls. What haue we here, a man, or a fish? dead or aliue? a fish, he smels like a fish: a very ancient and fish-like smell: a kinde of, not of the newest poore-John: a strange fish: were I in England now (as once I was) and had but this fish painted, not a holiday-foole there but would giue a peece of siluer: there would this Monster, make a man: any strange beast there, makes a man: when they will not giue a doit to relieue a lame beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian. Leg'd like a man, and his Fingers like Armes: warme o'my troth. I doe now let loose my opinion; hold it no longer; this is no fish, but an Islander, that hath lately suffered by a Thunderbolt. Alas, the storme is come againe: my best way is to creepe vnder his Gaberdine: there is no other shelter hereabout: Misery acquaints a man with strange bed-fellowes. I will here shrowd till the dregges of the storme be past.

Enter Stephano singing.

Ste. I shall no more to sea, to sea, here shall I die ashore.
This is a very scuruy tune to sing at a mans
Funerall: well, here's my comfort. Drinkes.

Sings. The Master, the Swabber, the Boate-swaine and I,
The Gunner and his Mate
Lou'd Mall, Meg and Marrian and Margerie,
But none of us car'd for Kate.
For she had a tongue with a tang,
Would cry to a Sailor goe hang:
She lou'd not the sauour of Tar nor of Pitch,
Yet a Tailor might scratch her where ere she did itch.
Then to sea boyes, and let her go hang.
This is a scuruy tune too:
But here is my comfort. drinkes.

Cal. Do not torment me, oh

Ste. What's the matter?
Haue we diuels here?
Doe you put tricks vpon's with Saluages, and Men of Inde? ha? I haue not scap'd drowning, to be afeard now of your four legges: for it hath been said; as proper a man as ere went on foure legges, cannot make him giue ground: and it shall be said so againe, while Stephano breathes at'nostrils.

Cal. The Spirit torments me sigh.

Ste. This is some Monster of the Ile, with foure legs, who hath got (as I take it) an Ague: where the deuil should he learne our language? I will giue him some reliefe if it be but for that: if I can recouer him, and keepe him tame, and get to Naples with him, he's a present for any Emperour that euer trod on Neates-leather.

Cal. Do not torment me 'prethee: I'le bring my wood home faster.

Ste. He's in his fit now; and does not talke after the wisest: he shall taste of my bottle: if he haue neuer drunke wine afore, it will go neere to remoue his Fit. If I can recouer him, and keepe him tame, I will not take too much for him; he shall pay for him that hath him, and that soundly.

Cal. Thou dost me yet but little hurt; thou wilt anon, I know it by thy trembling: Now Prosper works vpon thee.

Ste. Come on your wayes: open your mouth: here is that which will giue language to you Cat, open your mouth; this will shake your shaking, I can tell you and that soundly: you cannot tell who's your friend; open your chaps againe.

Tri. I should know that voyce:
It should be,

But

But heere is drowne; and theere are Furies. O defend me,

Ste. Powre legges and two voices; a most delicate Monster: his forward voice now is to speake well of his friend: his backward voice is to vtter foule speeches, and to detract. If all the wine in my bottle will recouer him, I will helpe his Ague. Come: Amen. I will powre some in thy other mouth.

Tri. Stephano.

Ste. Doth thy other mouth call me? Mercy, mercy! This is a diuell, and no Monster: I will leaue him, I haue no long Spoone.

Tri. Stephano: if thou beest Stephano touch me, and speake to me: for I am Trinculo: be not afeard, thy good friend Trinculo.

Ste. If thou beest Trinculo, come forth: I'le pull thee by the lesser legges: and if any be Trinculo's legges, these are they. Thou art very Trinculo indeede: how camst thou to be the siege of this Moone-calfe? Can he vent Trinculos?

Tri. I take him to be kild with a thunder-stroke: but art thou not dropt from heauen? I hope now thou art not drownd. Is the Storme ouerblowne? I hid me vnder the dead Moone-calfes gaberdine, for feare of the Storme: And art thou liuing Stephano? O Stephano, two Neapolitanes scap'd?

Ste. Prethee come not turne me about, my stomacke is not constant.

Cal. These be fine things, and if they be not sprites: that's a braue God, and beares Celestiall liquor: I will kneele to him.

Ste. How did'st thou scape? How camst thou hither? Swear by this bottle how thou camst hither. I escap'd vpon a butt of Sacke, which the Sailors heaued ouer-board, by this Bottle which I made of the barke of a Tree with mine owne hands, since I was cast a-shore.

Cal. I'le sweare vpon that Bottle to be thy true subiect, for the liquor is not earthly.

Ste. Here: sweare then how thou escapedst.

Tri. Swom ashore man, like a Ducke: I can swim like a Ducke, I'le be sworne.

Ste. Here, kisse the booke: though thou canst swim like a Ducke, thou art made like a Goose.

Tri. O Stephano, hast any more of this?

Ste. The whole Butt man: my Cellar is in a rocke by the sea-side, where my Wine is hid. How now Moone-Calfe, how does thine Ague?

Cal. Hast thou not dropt from heauen?

Ste. Out o'th Moone I doe assure thee. I was the Man i'th Moone, when time was.

Cal. I haue seene thee in her, and I doe adore thee: My Mistris shewed me thee, and thy Dog and thy Bush.

Ste. Come, sweare to that, kisse the booke: I will furnish it anon with new Contents. Sweare.

Tri. By this good light, this is a very shallow Monster: I afeard of him? A very weake Monster: The Man i'th Moone?

A most poore credulous Monster.

Well drawne Monster in good sooth.

Cal. I'le shew thee euery fertile inch o'th Island: and I will kisse thy foote: I prethee be my god.

Tri. By this light, a most perfidious, and drunken Monster, when's god's asleepe, he'le rob his Bottle.

Cal. Ile kisse thy foot: Ile sweare my selfe thy Subiect.

Ste. Come on then: downe and sweare.

Tri. I shall laugh my selfe to death at this puppy-headed Monster: a most scuruie Monster: I could finde in my heart to beate him.

Ste. Come, kisse.

Tri. But that the poore Monster's in drinke: An abhominable Monster.

Cal. I'le shew thee the best Springs: I'le plucke thee Berries: I'le fish for thee: and get thee wood enough. A plague vpon the Tyrant that I serue; I'le beare him no more Sticks, but follow thee thou wondrous man.

Tri. A most ridiculous Monster, to make a wonder of a poore drunkard.

Cal. I prethee let me bring thee where Crabs grow; and I with my long nayles will digge thee pig-nuts, shew thee a Iayes nest, and instruct thee how to snare the nimble Marmazet: I'le bring thee to clustring Filberts, and sometimes I'le get thee young Seamells from the Rocke. Wilt thou go with me?

Ste. I prethee now lead the way without any more talking. Trinculo, the King and all our company else being drown'd, we will inherit here. Here, beare my bottle: Fellow Trinculo, we'll fill him by and by a-gaine.

Caliban Sings drunkenly.

Farewell Master; farewell, farewell.

Tri. A howling Monster: a drunken Monster.

Cal. No more dams I'le make for fish,
Nor fetch in firing at requiring,
Nor scrape trencher, nor wash dish,
'Ban 'ban Cacaliban
Has a new Master: get a new Man.

Freedom hey-day, hey-day freedom, freedom hey-day, freedom.

Ste. O brave Monster, lead the way. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scæna Prima.

Enter Ferdinand, bearing a Log.

Fer. There be some Sports are painfull, & their labor
Delight in them sets off: some kinds of baseneſſe
Are nobly vndergone, and most poore matters
Point to rich ends. This my mean taske
Would be as heauy to me, as odious, but
The Mistris which I serue, quickens what's dead,
And makes my labors pleasures. O She is
Ten times more gentle, then her Father's crabbed;
And he's compos'd of harshneſſe. I must remoue
Some thousands of these Logs, and pile them vp,
Vpon a sore iniunction: my sweet Mistris
Weepes when she sees me worke, & saies, such baseneſſe
Had neuer like Executor. I forget:
But these sweet thoughts doe euen refresh my labours,
Most busie lest when I doe it. Enter Miranda and Prospero,

Mir. Alas now pray you behind.
Worke not so hard: I would the lightning had
Burnt vp those Logs that you are enioynd to pile:
Pray set it downe, and rest you: when this burnes
'Twill weepe for having wearied you: my Father
Is hard at study; pray now rest your selfe,

He's

Hee's safe for these three houres.
Fer. O most deere Mistris,
The Sun will set before I shall discharge
What I must striue to do.
Mir. If you'l sit downe
Ile beare your Logges the while: pray giue me that,
Ile carry it to the pile.
Fer. No precious Creature,
I had rather crack my sinewes, breake my backe,
Then you should such dishonor vndergoe,
While I sit lazy by.
Mir. It would become me
As well as it do's you; and I should do it
With much more ease: for my good will is to it,
And yours it is against.
Pro. Poore worme thou art infected,
This visitation shewes it.
Mir. You looke wearily.
Fer. No, noble Mistris, 'tis fresh morning with me
When you are by at night. I do beseech you
Chiefely, that I might set it in my prayers,
What is your name?
Mir. Miranda, O my Father,
I haue broke your hest to say so.
Fer. Admir'd Miranda,
Indeede the top of Admiration, worth
What's deerest to the world! full many a Lady
I haue ey'd with best regard, and many a time
Th'harmony of their tongues, hath into bondage
Brought my too diligent eare: for seuerall vertues
Haue I lik'd seuerall women, neuer any
With so full soule, but some defect in her
Did quarrell with the noblest grace she ow'd,
And put it to the foile. But you, O you,
So perfect, and so peerelesse, are created
Of euerie Creatures best.
Mir. I do not know
One of my sexe; no womans face remember
Saue from my glasse, mine owne: Nor haue I seene
More that I may call men, than you good friend,
And my deere Father: how features are abroad
I am skilelesse of; but by my modestie
(The iewell in my dower) I would not wish
Any Companion in the world but you
Nor can imagination forme a shape
Besides your selfe, to like of: but I prattle
Something too wildely, and my Fathers precepts
I therein do forget.
Fer. I am, in my condition
A Prince (Miranda) I do thinke a King
(I would not so) and would no more endure
This wodden slauerie, than to suffer
The flesh-flie blow my mouth: heare my soule speake.
The very instant that I saw you, did
My heart flie to your seruice, there resides
To make me slaue to it, and for your sake
Am I this patient Logge-man.
Mir. Do you loue me?
Fer. O heauen; O earth, beare witnes to this sound,
And crowne what I professe with kinde euent
If I speake true: if hollowly, inuert
What best is boaded me, to mischiefe: I,
Beyond all limit of what else i'th world
Do loue, prize, honor you.
Mir. I am a foole
To weepe at what I am glad of.
Pro. Faire encounter
Of two most rare affections: heauens raine grace
On that which breeds betweene 'em.
Fer. Wherefore weepe you?
Mir. At mine vnworthinesse, that dare not offer
What I desire to giue; and much lesse take
What I shall die to want: But this is trifling,
And all the more it seekes to hide it selfe,
The bigger bulke it shewes. Hence bashfull cunning,
And prompt me plaine and holy innocence.
I am your wife, if you will marrie me;
If not, Ile die your maid: to be your fellow
You may refuse me, but Ile be your seruant
Whether you will or no.
Fer. My Mistris (deerest)
And I thus humble euer.
Mir. My husband then?
Fer. I, with a heart as willing
As bondage ere of freedome: heere's my hand.
Mir. And mine, with my heart in't, and now farewel
Till halfe an houre hence.
Fer. A thousand, thousand. Exeunt.
Pro. So glad of this as they I cannot be,
Who are surpris'd with all; but my reioycing
At nothing can be more: Ile to my booke,
For yet ere supper time must I performe
Much busines appertaining. Exit.

Scœna Secunda.

Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo.

Ste. Tell not me, when the Butt is out we will drinke water, not a drop before; therefore beare vp, & boord em Seruant Monster, drinke to me.
Trin. Seruant Monster? the folly of this Iland, they say there's but fiue vpon this Isle, we are three of them,
if th'other two be brain'd like vs, the State totters.
Ste. Drinke seruant Monster when I bid thee, thy eies are almost set in thy head.
Trin. Where should they be set else? hee were a braue Monster indeede if they were set in his taile.
Ste. My man-Monster hath drown'd his tongue in sacke: for my part the Sea cannot drowne me, I swam ere I could recouer the shore, fiue and thirtie Leagues off and on, by this light thou shalt be my Lieutenant Monster, or my Standard.
Trin. Your Lieutenant if you list, hee's no standard.
Ste. Wee'l not run Monsieur Monster.
Trin. Nor go neither; but you'l lie like dogs, and yet say nothing neither.
Ste. Moone-calfe, speak once in thy life, if thou beest
a good Moone-calfe.
Cal. How does thy honour? Let me licke thy shooe.
Ile not serue him, he's not valiant.
Trin. Thou best most ignorant Monster, I am in case to iustle a Constable: why, thou debosh'd Fish thou, was there euer man a Coward, that hath drunk so much Sacke as I to day? wilt thou tell a monstrous lie, being but halfe a Fish, and halfe a Monster?
Cal. Loe, how he mockes me, wilt thou let him my Lord?

Cal.

Trin. Lord, quoth he? that a Monster should be such a Naturall?

Cal. Loe, loe againe: bite him to death I prethee.

Ste. Trinculo, keepe a good tongue in your head: If you proue a mutineere, the next Tree: the poore Monster's my subiect, and he shall not suffer indignity.

Cal. I thanke my noble Lord. Wilt thou be pleas'd to hearken once againe to the suite I made to thee?

Ste. Marry will I kneele, and repeate it, I will stand, and so shall Trinculo.

Enter Ariell inuisible.

Cal. As I told thee before, I am subiect to a Tyrant, A Sorcerer, that by his cunning hath cheated me Of the Iland

Ariel. Thou lyest.

Cal. Thou lyest, thou ieasting Monkey thou: I would my valiant Master would destroy thee. I do not lye.

Ste. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in's tale, By this hand, I will supplant some of your teeth.

Trin. Why, I said nothing.

Ste. Mum then, and no more: proceed.

Cal. I say by Sorcery he got this Isle From me, he got it. If thy Greatnesse will Reuenge it on him, (for I know thou dar'st) But this Thing dare not.

Ste. That's most certaine.

Cal. Thou shalt be Lord of it, and Ile serue thee.

Ste. How now shall this be compast? Canst thou bring me to the party?

Cal. Yea, yea my Lord, Ile yeeld him thee asleepe, Where thou maist knocke a nayle into his head.

Ariell. Thou liest, thou canst not.

Cal. What a py'de Ninnie's this? Thou scuruy patch: I do beseech thy Greatnesse giue him blowes, And take his bottle from him. When that's gone, He shall drinke nought but brine, for Ile not shew him Where the quicke Freshes are.

Ste. Trinculo, run into no further danger: Interrupt the Monster one word further, and by this hand, I'll turne my mercie out o'doores, and make a Stockfish of thee.

Trin. Why, what did I? I did nothing: Ile go farther off.

Ste. Didst thou not say he lyed?

Ariell. Thou liest.

Ste. Do I take you at your word, Giue me your hand, I am sorry I beate you: But while you liue, keepe a good tongue in your head.

Cal. Within this halfe houre will he be asleepe, Wilt thou destroy him then?

Ste. I on mine honour.

Ariell. This will I tell my Master.

Cal. Thou mak'st me merry: I am full of pleasure, Let vs be iocond. Will you troule the Catch You taught me but whileare?

Ste. At thy request Monster, I will do reason, Any reason. Come on Trinculo, let vs sing.

Sings.

Flout 'em, and cout 'em: and skout 'em, and flout 'em,
Thought is free.

Cal. That's not the tune,

Ariell plaies the tune on a Tabor and Pipe.

Ste. What is this same?

Trin. This is the tune of our Catch, plaid by the picture of No-body.

Ste. If thou beest a man, shew thy selfe in thy likenes: If thou beest a diuell, take't as thou list.

Trin. O forgiue me my sinnes.

Ste. He that dies payes all debts: I defie thee; Mercy vpon vs.

Cal. Art thou afeard?

Ste. No Monster, not I.

Cal. Be not afeard, the Isle is full of noyses, Sounds, and sweet aires, that giue delight and hurt not: Sometimes a thousand twangling Instruments Will hum about mine eares; and sometime voices, That if I then had wak'd after long sleepe, Will make me sleepe againe, and then in dreaming, The clouds methought would open, and shew riches Ready to drop vpon me, that when I wak'd I cri'de to dreame againe.

Ste. This will proue a braue kingdome to me, Where I shall haue my Musicke for nothing.

Cal. When Prospero is destroy'd.

Ste. That shall be by and by: I remember the storie.

Trin. The sound is going away. Lets follow it, and after do our worke.

Ste. Leade Monster, We'l follow: I would I could see this Taborer, He layes it on.

Trin. Wilt come?

Ile follow Stephano.

Exeunt

Scena

Hee's but a Sot, as I am; nor hath not One Spirit to command: they all do hate him As rootedly as I. Burne but his Bookes, He ha's braue Vtensils (for so he calles them) Which when he ha's a house, hee'l decke withall. And that most deeply to consider, is The beautie of his daughter: he himselfe Cals her a non-pareill: I neuer saw a woman But only Sycorax my Dam, and she; But she as farre surpasseth Sycorax, As great'st do's least.

Ste. Is it so braue a Lasse?

Cal. I Lord, she will become thy bed, I warrant, And bring thee forth braue brood.

Ste. Monster, I will kill this man: his daughter and I will be King and Queene, saue our Graces: and Trinculo and thy selfe shall be Vice-royes: Dost thou like the plot Trinculo?

Trin. Excellent.

Ste. Giue me thy hand, I am sorry I beate thee: But while thou liu'st keepe a good tongue in thy head.

Cal. Within this halfe houre will he be asleepe, Wilt thou destroy him then?

Ste. I on mine honour.

Ariell. This will I tell my Master.

Cal. Thou mak'st me merry: I am full of pleasure, Let vs be iocond. Will you troule the Catch You taught me but whileare?

Trin. The sound is going away. Lets follow it, and after do our worke.

Ste. Leade Monster, We'l follow: I would I could see this Taborer, He layes it on.

Trin. Wilt come?

Ile follow Stephano.

Exeunt

Scena

Scena Tertia.

Enter Alonſo, Sebaſtian, Anthonio, Gonzallo, Adrian, Franciſco, &c.

Gon. By't lakin, I can goe no further, Sir.
My old bones akes: here's a maze trod indeede
Through fourth-rights, & Meanders: by your patience,
I needes muſt reſt me.
Al. Old Lord, I cannot blame thee,
Who, am my ſelfe attach'd with wearineſſe
To th'dulling of my ſpirits: Sit downe, and reſt.
Euen here I will put off my hope, and keepe it
No longer for my Flatterer: he is drown'd
Whom thus we ſtray to finde, and the Sea mocks
Our fruſtrate ſearch on land: well, let him goe
Ant. I am right glad, that he's ſo out of hope:
Doe not for one repulſe forgoe the purpoſe
That you reſolu'd t'effect.
Seb. The next advantage will we take thoroughly.
Ant. Let it be to night,
For now they are oppreſs'd with travaile, they
Will not, nor cannot vſe ſuch vigilance
As when they are freſh.
Solemne and ſtrange Muſicke: and Proſper on the top (inuiſible:) Enter ſeuerall ſtrange Shapes, bringing in a Banket, and dance about it with gentle actions of ſalutations, and inuiting the King, &c. to eate, they depart.
Seb. I ſay to night: no more.
Al. What's a matter is this? my good friends, harke
Gon. Marueilous ſweet Muſicke
Alo. Giue vs kind keepers, heauens: what were theſe?
Seb. A liuing Drollerie: now I will beleeue
That there are Vnicornes: that in Arabia
There is one Tree, the Phœnix throne, one Phœnix
At this houre reigning there.
Ant. Ile beleeue both:
And what doe ſel e want credit come to me
And Ile be ſworne 'tis true: Trauellers ne're did lye,
Though fooles at home condemne em.
Gon. If in Naples
I ſhould report this now, would they beleeue me?
If I ſhould ſay I ſaw ſuch Iſlands;
(For certes, theſe are people of the Iſland)
Who though they are of monſtrous ſhape, yet note
Their manners are more gentle, kinde, then of
Our humaine generation you ſhall finde
Many, nay almoſt any.
Pro. Honeſt Lord,
Thou haſt ſaid well: for ſome of you there preſent,
Are worſe then diuels.
Al. I cannot too much muſe
Such ſhapes, ſuch geſture, and ſuch ſound expreſſing
(Although they want the vſe of tongue) a kinde
Of excellent dumbe diſcourſe.
Pro. Praiſe in departing.
Fr. They vaniſh'd ſtrangely.
Seb. No matter, ſince (macks.
They haue left their Viands behinde; for wee haue ſtoW'le pleaſe you taſte of what is here?
Alo. Not I. (Boyes
Gon. Faith Sir, you needs not feare: when wee were
Who would beleeue that there were Mounteyneeres.
Dew-lapt, like Bulls, whoſe throats had hanging at'em
Wallets of fleſh? or that there were ſuch men
Whoſe heads ſtood in their breſts: which now we finde
Each putter out of fiue for one, will bring vs
Good warrant of.
Al. I will ſtand to, and feede,
Although my laſt, no matter, ſince I feele
The beſt is paſt. brother: my Lord, the Duke,
Stand too, and doe as we.
Thunder and Lightning. Enter Ariell (like a Harper) claps his wings vpon the Table, and with a quient deuice the Banquet vaniſhes.
Ari. You are three men of ſinne, whom deſtiny
That hath to inſtrument this lower world,
And what is in't: the neuer ſurfeited Sea,
Hath cauſ'd to belch vp you; and on this Iſland,
Where man doth not inhabit, you 'mongſt men,
Being moſt vnfit to liue. I haue made you mad;
And even with ſuch like valour men hang, and drowne
Their proper ſelues: you fooles, I and my fellowes
Are miniſters of Fate, the Elements
Of whom your ſwords are temper'd, may as well
Wound the loud windes, or with bemockt-at-Stabs
Kill the ſtill cloſing waters, as diminiſh
One dowe that's in my plumbe. My fellow miniſters
Are like-inuulnerable: if you could hurt,
Your ſwords are now too maſſie for your ſtrengths,
And will not be vplifted: But remember
(For that's my buſineſſe to you) that you three
From Millaine did ſupplant good Proſpero,
Expoſd vnto the Sea (which hath requit it)
Him, and his innocent child: for which foule deed,
The Powres, delaying, (not forgetting) haue
Incenſd the Seas, and Shores, yea, all the Creatures
Againſt your peace. Thee of thy Sonne, Alonſo
They haue bereft; and doe pronounce by me
Lingring perdition (worſe then any death
Can be at once) ſhall ſtep by ſtep attend
You and your waves, whoſe wraths to guard you from,
Which here, in this moſt deſolate Iſle, elſe falls
Vpon your hearts, is nothing but heart-ſorrow,
And a clere life enſuing.
He vaniſhes in Thunder: then (to ſoft Muſicke) Enter the Shapes againe, and dance, (with mockes and mowes) and carrying out the Table.
Pro. Brauely the figure of this Harpe, haſt thou
Perform'd (my Ariell) a grace it had deuouring:
Of my Inſtruction, haſt thou nothing bated
In what thou had'ſt to ſay: ſo with good life,
And obſeruation ſtrange, my meanes
Their ſeuerall kindes haue done: my high charmes work,
And theſe (mine enemies) are all knit vp
In their diſtractions: they now are in my powre,
And in theſe fits, I leaue them, while I viſit
Young Ferdinand (whom they ſuppoſe is drown'd)
And his, and mine lou'd darling.
Gon. I'th name of ſomething holy, Sir, why ſtand you
In this ſtrange ſtare?
Al. O, it is monſtrous: monſtrous
Me thought the billowes ſpoke, and told me of it,
The windes did ſing it to me: and the Thunder
(That deepe and dreadfull Organ-Pipe) pronounc'd
The name of Proſper: it did baſe my Treſpaſſe,
Therefore my Sonne i'th Ooze is bedded; and
I'le ſeeke him deeper then ere plummet ſounded,
And with him there lye mudded. Exit.
Seb. But one feend at a time,
Ile fight their Legions ore.

Ant. Be thou my Second. Exeunt.
Gon. All three of them are desperate: their great guilt
(Like poyson giuen to worke a great time after)
Now gins to bite the spirits. I doe beseech you
(That are of suppler ioynts) follow them swiftly,
And hinder them from what this extasie
May now prouoke them to.
Ad. Follow, I pray you. Exeunt omnes.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Prospero, Ferdinand, and Miranda.

Pro. If I haue too austerely punish'd you,
Your compensation makes amends, for I
Haue giuen you here, a third of mine owne life,
Or that for which I liue; who, once againe
I tender to thy hand: All thy vexations
Were but my trials of thy loue, and thou
Hast strangely stood the test: here, afore heauen
I ratifie this my rich gift: O Ferdinand,
Doe not smile at me, that I boast her of,
For thou shalt finde she will out-strip all praise
And make it halt, behinde her.
Fer. I doe beleeue it
Against an Oracle.
Pro. Then, as my guest, and thine owne acquisition
Worthily purchas'd, take my daughter: but
If thou do'st breake her Virgin-knot, before
All sanctimonious ceremonies may
With full and holy right, be minister'd,
No sweet aspersion shall the heauens let fall
To make this contract grow; but barraine hate,
Sower-ey'd disdaine, and discord shall bestrew
The vnion of your bed, with weedes so loathly
That you shall hate it both: Therefore take heede,
As Hymens Lamps shall light you.
Fer. As I hope
For quiet dayes, faire Issue, and long life,
With such loue, as 'tis now the murkiest den,
The most opportune place, the strongst suggestion,
Our worser Genius can, shall neuer melt
Mine honor into lust, to take away
The edge of that dayes celebration,
When I shall thinke, or Phœbus Steeds are founderd,
Or Night kept chain'd below.
Pro. Fairely spoke:
Sit then, and talke with her, she is thine owne.
What Ariell; my industrious seruant Ariell. Enter Ariell.
Ar. What would my potent master? here I am.
Pro. Thou, and thy meaner fellowes, your last seruice
Did worthily performe: and I must vse you
In such another tricke: goe bring the rabble
(Ore whom I giue thee powre) here, to this place:
Incite them to quicke motion, for I must Bestow vpon the eyes of this yong couple
Some vanity of mine Art: it is my promise,
And they expect it from me.
Ar. Presently?
Pro. I, with a twinckle.
Ar. Before you can say come, and goe,
And breathe twice; and cry, so, so,
Each one tripping on his Toe,
Will be here with mop, and mowe.
Doe you loue me Master? no?
Pro. Dearely, my delicate Ariell. doe not approach
Till thou do'st heare me call.
Ar. Well: I conceiue. Exit.
Pro. Looke thou be true: doe not giue dalliance
Too much the raigne: the strongest oathes, are straw
To th'fire ith' blood: be more abstemious,
Or else good night your vow.
Fer. I warrant you, Sir,
The white cold virgin Snow, vpon my heart
Abates the ardour of my Liuer.
Pro. Well.
Now come my Ariell, bring a Corolary,
Rather then want a Spirit; appear, & pertly. Soft musick.
No tongue: all eyes: be silent. Enter Iris.
Ir. Ceres, most bounteous Lady, thy rich Leas
Of Wheate, Rye, Barley, Fetches, Oates and Pease;
Thy Turphie-Mountaines, where liue nibling Sheepe,
And flat Medes thetchd with Stouer, them to keepe
Thy banks with pioned, and twilled brims
Which spungie April, at thy best betrims;
To make cold Nymphes chast crownes; & thy broome-
Whose shadow the dismissed Batchelor loues, (groues;
Being lasse-lorne: thy pole-clipt vineyard,
And thy Sea-marge sterrile, and rockey-hard,
Where thou thy selfe do'st ayre, the Queene o'th Skie,
Whose watry Arch, and messenger, am I.
Bids thee leaue these, & with her soueraigne grace, Iuno
Here on this grasse-plot, in this very place descends.
To come, and sport: here Peacocks flye amaine:
Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertaine. Enter Ceres.
Cer. Haile, many-coloured Messenger, that nere
Do'st disobey the wife of Iupiter:
Who, with thy saffron wings, vpon my flowres
Diffusest hony drops, refreshing showres,
And with each end of thy blew bowe do'st crowne
My boskie acres, and my vnshrubd downe,
Rich scarph to my proud earth: why hath thy Queene
Summond me hither, to this short gras'd Greene?
Ir. A contract of true Loue, to celebrate,
And some donation freely to estate
On the bles'd Louers.
Cer. Tell me heauenly Bowe,
If Venus or her Sonne, as thou do'st know,
Doe now attend the Queene? since they did plot
The meanes, that dusky Dis, my daughter got,
Her, and her blind-Boyes scandald company,
I haue forsworne.
Ir. Of her societie
Be not afraid. I met her deitie
Cutting the clouds towards Paphos: and her Son
Dooue-drawn with her: here thought they to haue done
Some wanton charme, vpon this Man and Maide,
Whose vowes are, that no bed-right shall be paid
Till Hymens Torch be lighted: but in vaine,
Mars hot Minion is returnd againe,
Her waspish headed Sonne, has broke his arrowes,
Swears he will shoote no more, but play with Sparrowes,
And be a Boy right out.
Cer. High'st Queene of State,
Great Iuno comes, I know her by her gate.
Iu. How do's my bounteous sister? goe with me
To blesse this twaine that they may prosperous be,
And honourd in their Issue. They Sing.
Iu. Honor, riches, marriage, blessing,
Long continuance, and increasing,
Hourly ioyes, be still vpon you,

Iuno

Iuno ſings her bleſſings on you.
Earths increaſe, foyſon plentie,
Barnes, and Garners, neuer empty.
Vines, with cluſtring bunches growing,
Plants, with goodly burthen bowing:
Spring come to you at the fartheſt.
In the very end of Harueſt.
Scarcity and want ſhall ſhun you,
Ceres bleſſing ſo is on you

Fer. This is a moſt maieſticke vision, and Harmonious charmingly. may I be bold
To thinke theſe ſpirits?
Pro. Spirits, which by mine Art
I haue from their confines call'd to enact
My preſent fancies.
Fer. Let me liue here euer,
So rare a wondred Father, and a wife
Makes this place Paradiſe
Pro. Sweet now, ſilence
Iuno and Ceres whiſper ſeriouſly,
There's ſomething elſe to doe: hush, and be mute
Or elſe our ſpell is marr'd.
Iuno and Ceres whiſper, and ſend Iris on employment.
Iris. You Nimphs call'd Nayades of y' wauering brookes,
With your ſedg'd crownes, and euer harmleſſe looke,
Leaue your criſpe channels, and on this greene-Land
Anſwere your ſummons, Iuno do's command
Come temperate Nimphes, and helpe to celebrate
A Contract of true Loue: be not too late.
Enter certaine Nimphes.
You Sun-burn'd Sicklemen of Auguſt weary,
Come hether from the furrow, and be merry,
Make holly day: your Rye-ſtraw hats put on,
And theſe freſh Nimphes encounter euery one
In Country footing.
Enter certaine Reapers (properly habited:) they ioyne with the Nimphes, in a graceful dance towards the end whereof, Proſpero ſtarts ſodainly, and ſpeakes, after which to a ſtrange hollow and confuſed noiſe, they heauily vaniſh.
Pro. I had forgot that foule conſpiracy
Of the beaſt Caliban, and his confederates
Againſt my life: the minute of their plot
Is almoſt come: Well done, auoid: no more.
Fer. This is ſtrange: your fathers in ſome paſſion
That workes him ſtrongly.
Mir. Neuer till this day
Saw I him touch'd with anger, ſo diſtemper'd
Pro. You doe looke (my ſon) in a mou'd ſort,
As if you were diſmaid: be cheerefull Sir,
Our Reuels now are ended: Theſe our actors,
(As I foretold you) were all Spirits, and
Are melted into Ayre, into thin Ayre,
And like the baſeleſſe fabricke of this viſion
The Clowd-capt Towres, the gorgeous Pallaces,
The ſolemne Temples, the great Globe it ſelfe,
Yea, all which it inherit, ſhall diſſolue,
And like this inſubſtantiall Pageant faded
Leaue not a racke behinde: we are ſuch ſtuffe
As dreames are made on; and our little life
Is rounded with a ſleepe: Sir, I am vext,
Beare with my weakeneſſe, my old braine is troubled:
Be not diſturb'd with my infirmitie,
If you be pleas'd, retire into my Cell,
And there repoſe, a turne or two, Ile walke
To ſtill my beating minde.
Fer. Mir. We wiſh your peace. Exit.

Pro. Come with a thought; I thank thee Ariell: come.
Enter Ariell.
Ar. Thy thoughts I cleaue to, what's thy pleaſure?
Pro. Spirit: We muſt prepare to meet with Caliban.
Ar. I my Commander, when I preſented Ceres
I thought to haue told thee of it, but I fear'd
Leaſt I might anger thee.
Pro. Say againe, where didſt thou leaue theſe varlots?
Ar. I told you Sir, they were red-hot with drinking,
So full of valour, that they ſmote the ayre
For breathing in their faces: beate the ground
For kiſſing of their feete; yet alwaies bending
Towards their proiect: then I beate my Tabor,
At which like vnback't colts they prickt their eares,
Aduanc'd their eye-lids, lifted vp their noſes
As they ſmelt muſicke, ſo I charm'd their eares
That Calfe-like, they my lowing follow'd, through
Tooth'd briars, ſharpe firzes, pricking goſſe, & thorns,
Which entred their fraile ſhins: at laſt I left them
I'th' filthy mantled poole beyond your Cell,
There dancing vp to th'chins, that the foule Lake
Ore ſtunck their feet.
Pro. This was well done (my bird)
Thy ſhape inuiſible retaine thou ſtill.
The trumpery in my houſe, goe bring it hither
For ſtale to catch theſe theeues. Ar. I go, I goe. Exit.
Pro. A Deuill, a borne-Deuill, on whoſe nature
Nurture can neuer ſticke: on whom my paines
Humanely taken, all, all loſt, quite loſt,
And, as with age, his body vglier growes,
So his minde cankers: I will plague them all,
Euen to roaring: Come, hang on them this line.
Enter Ariell, loaden with gliſtering apparell, &c. Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo, all wet.
Cal. Pray you tread ſoftly, that the blinde Mole may not heare a foot fall: we now are neere his Cell.
St. Monſter, your Fairy, which you ſay is a harmles Fairy,
Has done little better then plaid the Iacke with vs.
Trin. Monſter, I do ſmell all horſe-piſſe, at which
My noſe is in great indignation.
Ste. So is mine. Do you heare Monſter: If I ſhould
Take a diſpleaſure againſt you: Looke you.
Trin. Thou were but a loſt Monſter.
Cal. Good my Lord, giue me thy fauour ſtill,
Be patient, for the prize Ile bring thee too
Shall hudwinke this miſchance: therefore ſpeake ſoftly,
All's huſht as midnight yet.
Trin. I, but to looſe our bottles in the Poole.
Ste. There is not onely diſgrace and diſhonor in that Monſter, but an infinite loſſe.
Trin. That's more to me then my wetting:
Yet this is your harmleſſe Fairy, Monſter.
Ste. I will fetch off my bottle,
Though I be o're eares for my labour.
Cal. Pre-thee (my King) be quiet. Seeſt thou heere
This is the mouth o'th Cell: no noiſe, and enter:
Do that good miſchiefe, which may make this Iſland
Thine owne for euer, and I thy Caliban
For aye thy foot-licker.
Ste. Giue me thy hand,
I do begin to haue bloody thoughts.
Trin. O King Stephano, O Peere: O worthy Stephano, Looke what a wardrobe heere is for thee.
Cal. Let it alone thou foole, it is but trash
Trin. Oh, ho, Monſter: we know what belongs to a frippery, O King Stephano.

Ste. Put off that gowne (Trincolo) by this hand Ile haue that gowne.

Trn. Thy grace shall haue it. (meane

Cal. The dropsie drowne this foole, what doe you
To doate thus on such luggage? let's alone
And doe the murther first: if he awake,
From toe to crowne wee'l fill our skins with pinches,
Make vs strange stuffe

Ste. Be you quiet (Monster) Mistris line, is not this my Ierkin? now is the Ierkin vnder the line: now Ierkin you are like to lose your haire, & proue a bald Ierkin.

Trin. Doe, doe, we steale by line and leuell, and't like your grace.

Ste. I thank thee for that ieſt; heer's a garment for't: Wit shall not goe vn-rewarded while I am King of this Country: Steale by line and leuell, is an excellent passe of pate: there's another garment for't.

Trn. Monster, come put some lime vpon your fingers, and away with the rest.

Cal. I will haue none on't: we shall loose our time,
And all be turn'd to Barnacles, or to Apes
With forcheads villanous low.

Ste. Monster, lay to your fingers: helpe to beare this away, where my hogshead of wine is, or I'll turne you out of my kingdome: goe to, carry this.

Trn. And this.

Ste I, and this.

A noyse of Hunters heard. Enter diuers Spirits in shape of Dogs and Hounds, hunting them about: Prospero and Ariel setting them on.

Pro. Hey Mountaine, hey

Ari. Siluer: there it goes, Siluer.

Pro. Fury, Fury: there Tyrant, there: harke, harke.
Goe, charge my Goblins that they grinde their ioynts
With dry Conuulsions, shorten vp their sinewes
With aged Cramps, & more pinch-spotted make them,
Then Pard, or Cat o' Mountaine.

Ari. Harke, they roare.

Pro. Let them be hunted soundly: At this houre
Lies at my mercy all mine enemies:
Shortly shall all my labours end, and thou
Shalt haue the ayre at freedome: for a little
Follow, and doe me seruice. Exeunt.

Actus quintus: Scœna Prima.

Enter Prospero (in his Magicke robes) and Ariel.

Pro. Now do's my Project gather to a head:
My charmes crackle not: my Spirits obey, and Time
Goes vpright with his carriage: how's the day?

Ari. On the sixt houre, at which time, my Lord
You said our worke should cease.

Pro. I did say so,
When first I rais'd the Tempest: say my Spirit,
How fares the King, and 's followers?

Ari. Confin'd together
In the same fashion, as you gaue in charge,
Just as you left them; all prisoners Sir
In the Lime-grone which weather-fends your Cell,
They cannot boudge till your release: The King,
His Brother, and yours, abide all three distracted,
And the remainder mourning ouer them,
Brim full of sorrow, and dismay: but chiefly
Him that you term'd Sir, the good old Lord Gonzallo,
His teares runs downe his beard like winters drops
From eaues of reeds: your charm so strongly works 'em
That if you now beheld them, your affections
Would become tender.

Pro. Dost thou thinke so, Spirit?

Ar. Mine would, Sir, were I humane.

Pro. And mine shall.
Hast thou (which art but aire) a touch, a feeling
Of their afflictions, and shall not my selfe,
One of their kinde, that relish all as sharpely,
Passion as they, be kindlier mou'd then thou art?
Though with their high wrongs I am strook to th'quick,
Yet, with my nobler reason, gainst my furie
Do I take part: the rarer Action is
In vertue, then in vengeance: they, being penitent,
The sole drift of my purpose doth extend
Not a frowne further: Goe, release them Ariell,
My Charmes Ile breake, their senses Ile restore,
And they shall be themselues.

Ar. Ile fetch them, Sir. Exit.

Pro. Ye Elues of hils, brooks, stãding lakes & groues,
And ye, that on the sands with printlesse foote
Do chase the ebbing-Neptune, and doe flie him
When he comes backe: you demy-Puppets, that
By Moone-shine doe the greene sowre Ringlets make,
Whereof the Ewe not bites: and you, whose pastime
Is to make midnight-Mushrumps, that reioyce
To heare the solemne Curfewe, by whose ayde
(Weake Masters though ye be) I haue bedymm'd
The Noone tide Sun, call'd forth the mutenous windes,
And twixt the greene Sea, and the azur'd vault
Set roaring warre: To the dread rattling Thunder
Haue I giuen fire, and rifted Ioues stowre Oke
With his owne Bolt: The strong bass'd promontorie
Haue I made shake, and by the spurs pluckt vp
The Pyne, and Cedar. Graues at my command
Haue wak'd their sleepers, op'd, and let 'em forth
By my so potent Art. But this rough Magicke
I heere abiure: and when I haue requir'd
Some heauenly Musicke (which euen now I do)
To worke mine end vpon their Senses, that
This Ayrie-charme is for, I'le breake my staffe,
Bury it certaine fadomes in the earth,
And deeper then did euer Plummet sound
Ile drowne my booke. Solemne musicke.

Heere enters Ariel before: Then Alonso with a franticke gesture, attended by Gonzalo. Sebastian and Anthonio in like manner attended by Adrian and Francisco: They all enter the circle which Prospero had made, and there stand charm'd: which Prospero obseruing, speakes.

A solemne Ayre, and the best comforter,
To an vnsettled fancie, Cure thy braines
(Now vselesse) boile within thy skull: there stand
For you are Spell-stopt.
Holy Gonzallo, Honourable man,
Mine eyes ev'n sociable to the shew of thine
Fall fellowly drops: The charme dissolues apace,
And as the morning steales vpon the night
(Melting the darkenesse) so their rising senses
Begin to chace the ignorant fumes that mantle
Their clearer reason. O good Gonzallo
My true preserver, and a loyall Sir,
To him thou follow'st; I will pay thy graces
Home both in word, and deede: Most cruelly

Didst

Did thou Alonſo, vſe me, and my daughter:
Thy brother was a furtherer in the Act,
Thou art pinch'd for't now Sebaſtian. Fleſh, and bloud,
You, brother mine, that entertaine ambition,
Expell'd remorſe, and nature, whom, with Sebaſtian
(Whoſe inward pinches therefore are moſt ſtrong)
Would here haue kill'd your King: I do forgiue thee,
Vnnaturall though thou art: Their vnderſtanding
Begins to ſwell, and the approching tide
Will ſhortly fill the reaſonable ſhore
That now lyes foule, and muddy: not one of them
That yet lookes on me, or would know me. Ariell,
Fetch me the Hat, and Rapier in my Cell,
I will diſcaſe me, and my ſelfe preſent
As I was to the ſtrute Milane quickly Spirit,
Thou ſhalt ere long be free.

Ariell ſings, and helps to attire him.

Where the Bee ſucks, there ſucke I,
In a Cowſlips bed, and,
There I couch when Owles do cry,
On the Bats back I do flie
after Summer merrily.
Merrily, merrily ſhall I liue now
Vnder the bloſſom that hangs on the bough.

Pro. Why that's my dainty Ariell: I ſhall miſſe
Thee, but yet thou ſhalt haue freedome: ſo, ſo, ſo.
To the Kings ſhip, inuiſible as thou art,
There ſhalt thou finde the Mariners aſleepe
Vnder the Hatches: the Maſter and the Boat-ſwaine
Being awake, enforce them to this place,
And preſently, I pre'thee.

Ar. I drinke the aire before me, and returne
Or ere your pulſe twice beate. Exit.

Gon. All torment, trouble, wonder, and amazement
Inhabits heere: ſome heauenly power guide vs
Out of this fearefull Country.

Pro. Behold Sir King
The wronged Duke of Milane, Proſpero:
For more aſſurance that a liuing Prince
Do's now ſpeake to thee, I embrace thy body,
And to thee and thy Company, I bid
A hearty welcome.

Alo. Whether thou beeſt he or no,
Or ſome enchanted tryfle to abuſe me,
(As late I haue beene I not know) thy Pulſe
Beats as of fleſh, and blood: and ſince I ſaw thee,
Th'affliction of my minde amends, with which
I feare a madneſſe held me: this muſt crave
(And if this be at all) a moſt ſtrange ſtory.
Thy Dukedome I reſigne, and do entreat
Thou pardon me my wrongs: But how ſhould Proſpero
Be liuing, and be heere?

Pro. Firſt, noble Friend,
Let me embrace thine age, whoſe honor cannot
Be meaſur'd, or confin'd.

Gonz. Whether this be,
Or be not, I'le not ſweare.

Pro. You do yet taſte
Some ſubtilties o'th'Iſle, that will not let you
Beleeue things certaine. Welcome, my friends all,
But you, my brace of Lords were I ſo minded
I heere could plucke his Highneſſe frowne vpon you
And iuſtifie you Traitors: at this time
I will tell no tales.

Seb. The Diuell ſpeakes in him:

Pro. No:
For you (moſt wicked Sir) whom to call brother
Would euen infect my mouth, I do forgiue
Thy rankeſt fault; all of them: and require
My Dukedome of thee, which, perforce I know
Thou muſt reſtore.

Alo. If thou beeſt Proſpero
Giue vs particulars of thy preſeruation,
How thou haſt met vs heere, whom three howres ſince
Were wrackt vpon this ſhore? where I haue loſt
(How ſharp the point of this remembrance is)
My deere ſonne Ferdinand.

Pro. I am woe for't, Sir

Alo. Irreparable is the loſſe, and patience
Saies, it is paſt her cure.

Pro. I rather thinke
You haue not ſought her helpe, of whoſe ſoft grace
For the like loſſe, I haue her ſooueraigne aid,
And reſt my ſelfe content.

Alo. You the like loſſe?

Pro. As great to me, as late, and ſupportable
To make the deere loſſe, haue I meanes much weaker
Then you may call to comfort you; for I
Haue loſt my daughter.

Alo. A daughter?
Oh heauens, that they were liuing both in Naples
The King and Queene there, that they were, I wiſh
My ſelfe were mudded in that oo-zie bed
Where my ſonne lies: when did you loſe your daughter?

Pro. In this laſt Tempeſt. I perceiue theſe Lords
At this encounter doe ſo much admire,
That they deuoure their reaſon, and ſcarce thinke
Their eies do offices of Truth: Their words
Are natural breath: but howſoeu'r you haue
Been iuſtified from your ſenſes, know for certain
That I am Proſpero, and that very Duke
Which was thruſt forth of Milaine, who moſt ſtrange
Vpon this ſhore, where you were wrackt, was landed
To be the Lord on't. No more yet of this,
For 'tis a Chronicle of day by day,
Not a relation for a breake-faſt, nor
Befitting this firſt meeting. Welcome, Sir;
This Cell's my Court: heere haue I few attendants,
And Subiects none abroad: pray you looke in:
My Dukedome ſince you haue giuen me againe,
I will requite you with as good a thing,
At leaſt bring forth a wonder, to content ye
As much, as me my Dukedome.

Here Proſpero diſcouers Ferdinand and Miranda, playing at Cheſſe.

Mir. Sweet Lord, you play me falſe.

Fer. No my deareſt loue,
I would not for the world. (wrangle,

Mir. Yes, for a ſcore of Kingdomes, you ſhould
And I would call it faire play.

Alo. If this proue
A viſion of the Iſland, one deere Sonne
Shall I twice loſe.

Seb. A moſt high miracle.

Fer. Though the Seas threaten they are merciful:
I haue curs'd them without cauſe.

Alo. Now all the bleſſings
Of a glad father, compaſſe thee about.
Ariſe and ſay how thou cam'ſt heere.

Mir. O wonder!
How many goodly creatures are there heere?
How beauteous mankinde is? O braue new world

That has ſuch people in't.

Pro. 'Tis new to thee. (play?

Alo. What is this Maid, with whom thou waſt at
Your eld'ſt acquaintance cannot be three houres:
Is the the goddeſſe that hath ſeuer'd vs,
And brought vs thus ſo neere?

Fer. Sir, ſhe's mortall,
But by immortall Prouidence, ſhe's mine,
I choſe her when I could not aſke my father
For his aduice, nor thought I had one: She
Is daughter to this famous Duke of Millaine,
Of whom, ſo often I haue heard renowne,
But neuer ſaw before: of whom I haue
Receiu'd a ſecond life; and ſecond father
This Lady makes him to me.

Alo. I am hers.
But O, how odly will it ſound that I
Muſt aske my childe forgiueneſſe!

Pro. There's ſome ſinne,
Let vs not burthen our remembrances, with
A heauineſſe that's gone.

Gon. I haue inly wept,
Or ſhould haue ſpoke ere this: looke downe you gods
And on this couple driue gentle hornes
For this is you, that haue chalk'd forth the way
Which brought vs hither.

Alo. I ſay Amen, Gonzalo

Gon. Was Millaine thruſt from Millaine, that his Iſſue
Should become Kings of Naples? O reioyce
Beyond a common ioy, and ſet it downe
With gold on laſting Pillers: In one voyage
Did Claribell her daughter to Tunis,
And ſonne to the King of Naples, poſſeſſe a Wife,
Where ſhe her ſelfe was loſt: Proſpero, his Dukedome
In a poore Iſle: and all of vs, our ſelues,
When no man was his owne.

Alo. Giue me your hands:
Let griefe and ſorrow ſtill embrace his heart
That doth not wiſh you ioy.

Gon. Be it ſo, Amen.

Enter Ariell, with the Maſter and Boatſwaine amazedly following.

O looke Sir, looke Sir, here is more of vs:
I prophecied, if a Gallowes were on land
This fellow could not drowne: Now blaſphemy,
That ſwear'ſt Grace o'erboard, not an oath on ſhore;
Haſt thou no mouth by land?
What is the newes?

Bot. The beſt newes is, that we haue ſafely found
Our King and company: The next, our Ship,
Which but three glaſſes ſince, we gaue out ſplit,
Is tyte and yare and bravely rig'd, as when
We firſt put out to Sea.

Ari. Sir, all this ſeruice
Haue I done ſince I went.

Pro. My trickſie Spirit.

Alo. These are not naturall euents, they ſtrengthen
From ſtrange to ſtranger: ſay, how came you hither?

Bot. If I did think, Sir, I were well awake,
I'ld ſtriue to tell you: we were dead of ſleepe
And (how we know not) all clapt vnder hatches,
Where but euen now, with ſtrange, and ſeuerall noyſes
Of roaring, ſhrieking, howling, gingling chaines,
And more diuerſity of ſounds, all horrible,
We were a waked; ſtraight way, at liberty,
Where we, in all our trim, freſhly beheld
Our royall, good, and gallant Ship: our Maſter
Capring to eyes her: on a trice, ſo pleaſe you,
Euen in a dreame, were we diuided from them,
And were brought moaping hither.

Ari. Was't well done?

Pro. Bravely (my diligence) thou ſhalt be free.

Alo. This is as ſtrange a Maze, as ere men trod,
And there is in this buſineſſe, more then nature
Was euer conduct of: ſome Oracle
Muſt reſcribe our knowledge.

Pro. Sir, my Leige,
Doe not infect your mind, with beating on
The ſtrangeneſſe of this buſineſſe, at pickt leiſure
(Which ſhall be ſhortly ſingle) I'le reſolue you,
(Which to you ſhall ſeeme probable) of euery
These happened accidents: till when, be cheereful
And think of each thing well: Come hither Spirit,
Set Caliban and his companions free
Vntye the Spell. How fares my gracious Sir?
There are yet miſſing of your Companie
Some few odde Lads, that you remember not.

Enter Ariell, driuing in Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo, in their ſtolne Apparell.

Ste. Euery man ſhift for all the reſt, and let
No man take care for himſelfe, for all is
But trouble: double and treble Monſter Caraſſo.

Tri. If these be true ſpies which I weare in my head, here's a goodly ſight.

Cal. O Setebos, theſe be brane Spirits indeede:
How fine my Maſter is? I am afraid
He will chaſtiſe me.

Seb. Ha, ha:
What things are theſe my Lord Anthonio?
Will money buy 'em?

Ant. Very ſure, one of them
Is a plaine fiſh, and no doubt marketable.

Pro. Marke but the badges of theſe men, my Lords,
Then ſay if they be true: This mis-ſhapen knaue;
His Mother was a Witch, and one ſo ſtrong
That could controule the Moone, make flowes, and ebbs,
And deale in her command, without her power:
These three haue robd me, and this demy-deuill;
For he's a baſtard one, haue plotted with them
To take my life: two of theſe Fellowes you
Muſt know, and owne, this Thing of darkeneſſe, I Acknowledge mine.

Cal. I ſhall be pinch't to death.

Alo. Is not this Stephano, my drunken Butler?

Seb. He is drunke now,
Where had he wine?

Alo. And Trinculo is reeling ripe: where ſhould they Finde this grand Liquor that hath gilded 'em?
How cam'ſt thou in this pickle?

Tri. I haue bin in ſuch a pickle ſince I ſaw you laſt,
That I feare me will neuer out of my bones
I ſhall not feare fly-blowing.

Seb. Why how now Stephano?

Ste. O touch me not I am not Stephano, but a Cramp.

Pro. You'ld be King o'the Iſle, Sirha?

Ste. I ſhould haue bin a ſore one then.

Alo. This is a ſtrange thing as ere I look'd on

Pro. He is as diſproportion'd in his Manners
As in his ſhape. Goe Sirha, to my Cell,
Take with you your Companions: as you looke
To haue my pardon, trim it handſomely

Cal. I that I will: and I'le be wiſe hereafter

And seeke for grace: what a thrice double Asse
Was I to take this drunkard for a god?
And worship this dull foole?
Pro. Goe sirra, away. (to Cal.
Ant. Hence, and bestow your luggage where you
Seb. Or stole it rather.
Pro. Sir, I invite your Highnesse, and your traine
To my poore Cell, where you shall take your rest
For this one night, which part of it, Ile waste
With such discourse, as I not doubt, shall make it
Goe quicke away: The story of my life
And the particular accidents gone by
Since I came to this Isle: And in the morne
I le bring you to your ship, and hence to Naples,
Where I have hope to see the nuptiall
Of these our deere-belou'd, solemnized,
And thence retire me to my Millaine, where
Every third thought shall be my grave.
Alo. I long
To heare the story of your life; which must Take the ears strangely.
Pro. Ile deliver all,
And promise you calme Seas, auspicious gales,
And saile so expeditious, that shall catch
Your Royall fleete farre off. My Ariel, chicke
That is thy charge. Then to the Elements
Be free, and fare thou well: please you draw neere.
Exeunt omnes

EPILOGVE,
Spoken by Prospero.

NOw my Charmes are all o're throwne,
And what strength I have's mine owne
Which is most faint: now 'tis true
I must be here confinde by you,
Or sent to Naples. Let me not
Since I have my Dukedome got,
And pardon the deceiver, dwell
In this bare Island, by your Spell,
But release me from my bands
With the helpe of your good hands:
Gentle breath of yours, my Sailes
Must fill, or else my project failes,
Which was to please. Now I want
Spirits to enforce, Art to enchant,
And my ending is despaire,
Vnlesse I be relieu'd by prayer
Which pierces so, that it assaults
Mercy it selfe, and frees all faults.
As you from crimes would pardon'd be,
Let your Indulgence set me free Exit

THE

THE Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Actus primus, Scena prima.

Valentine: Protheus, and Speed.

Valentine.

Cease to perswade, my louing Protheus;
Home-keeping youth, haue euer homely wits.
Were't not affection chaines thy tender dayes
To the sweet glances of thy honour'd Loue,
I rather would entreat thy company,
To see the wonders of the world abroad,
Then (liuing dully sluggardiz'd at home)
Weare out thy youth with shapelesse idlenesse.
But since thou lou'st; loue still, and thriue therein,
Euen as I would, when I to loue begin.

Pro. Wilt thou be gone? Sweet Valentine adew,
Think on thy Protheus, when thou (hap'ly) seest
Some rare note-worthy obiect in thy trauaile.
Wish me partaker in thy happinesse,
When thou do'st meet good hap; and in thy danger,
(If euer danger do enuiron thee)
Commend thy grieuance to my holy prayers,
For I will be thy beadel-man, Valentine.

Val. And on a loue-booke pray for my successe?

Pro. Vpon some booke I loue I will pray for thee.

Val. That's on some shallow Story of deepe loue,
How young Leander cross'd the Hellespont.

Pro. That's a deepe Story, of a deeper loue,
For he was more then ouer-shooes in loue.

Val. 'Tis true; for you are ouer-boots in loue,
And yet you neuer swom the Hellespont.

Pro. Ouer the Boots? nay giue me not the Boots.

Val. No, I will not; for it boots thee not.

Pro. What?

Val. To be in loue; where scorne is bought with groanes:
Coy looks, with hart-sore sighes: one fading moments mirth,
With twenty watchfull, weary, tedious nights;
If hap'ly won, perhaps a hapelesse gaine;
If lost, why then a grieuous labour won,
How euer: but a folly bought with wit,
Or else a wit by folly vanquished.

Pro. So, by your circumstance, you call me foole.

Val. So, by your circumstance, I feare you'll proue.

Pro. 'Tis Loue you cauill at, I am not Loue.

Val. Loue is your master, for he masters you,
And he that is so yoked by a foole,
Me thinkes should not be chronicled for wise.

Pro. Yet Writers say; as in the sweetest Bud
The eating Canker dwels; so eating Loue
Inhabits in the finest wits of all.

Val. And Writers say, as the most forward Bud
Is eaten by the Canker ere it blow,
Euen so by Loue, the young, and tender wit
Is turn'd to folly, blasting in the Bud,
Loosing his verdure, euen in the prime,
And all the faire effects of future hopes.
But wherefore waste I time to counsaile thee
That art a votary to fond desire?
Once more adieu: my Father at the Road
Expects my comming, there to see me ship'd.

Pro. And thither will I bring thee Valentine.

Val. Sweet Protheus, no: Now let vs take our leaue:
To Millaine let me heare from thee by Letters
Of thy successe in loue; and what newes else
Betideth here in absence of thy Friend:
And likewise will visite thee with mine.

Pro. All happinesse bechance to thee in Millaine.

Val. As much to you at home: and so farewell. Exit.

Pro. He after Honour hunts, I after Loue;
He leaues his friends, to dignifie them more;
I loue my selfe, my friends, and all for loue.
Thou Iulia thou hast metamorphis'd me:
Made me neglect my Studies, loose my time;
Warre with good counsaile; set the world at nought;
Made Wit with musing, weake; hart sick with thought.

Sp. Sir Protheus: 'saue you: saw you my Master?

Pro. But now he parted hence to embarque for Millaine.

Sp. Twenty to one then, he is ship'd already,
And I haue plaid the Sheepe in loosing him.

Pro. Indeede a Sheepe doth very often stray,
And if the Shepheard be awhile away.

Sp. You conclude that my Master is a Shepheard then, and I Sheepe?

Pro. I doe.

Sp. Why then my hornes are his hornes, whether I wake or sleepe.

Pro. A fully answere, and fitting well a Sheepe.

Sp. This proues me still a Sheepe.

Pro. True: and thy Master a Shepheard.

Sp. Nay, that I can deny by a circumstance.

Pro. It shall goe hard but ile proue it by another.

Sp. The Shepheard seekes the Sheepe, and not the Sheepe the Shepheard; but I seeke my Master, and my Master seekes not me: therefore I am no Sheepe.

Pro. The Sheepe for fodder follow the Shepheard, the Shepheard for foode followes not the Sheepe: thou for wages followest thy Master, thy Master for wages followes not thee: therefore thou art a Sheepe.

Sp. Such another proofe will make me cry baa.

Pro. But do'st thou heare: gau'st thou my Letter to Iulia?

Sp. I

Sp. I Sir: I (a loft-Mutton) gaue your Letter to her (a lac'd-Mutton) and she (a lac'd-Mutton) gaue mee (a loft-Mutton) nothing for my labour.

Pro. Here's too small a Pasture for such store of Muttons.

Sp. If the ground be ouer-charg'd, you were best sticke her.

Pro. Nay, in that you are astray: 'twere best pound you.

Sp. Nay Sir, lesse then a pound shall serue me for carrying your Letter

Pro. You mistake; I meane the pound, a Pinfold.

Sp. From a pound to a pin? fold it over and ouer,
'Tis threefold too little for carrying a letter to your louer

Pro. But what said she?

Sp. I.

Pro. Nod-I, why that's noddy.

Sp. You mistooke Sir, I say she did nod;
And you aske me if she did nod, and I say I

Pro. And that set together is noddy

Sp. Now you haue taken the paines to set it together, take it for your paines.

Pro. No, no, you shall haue it for bearing the letter.

Sp. Well, I perceiue I must be fain to beare with you.

Pro. Why Sir, how doe you beare with me?

Sp. Marry Sir, the letter very orderly,
Hauing nothing but the word noddy for my paines.

Pro. Beshrew me, but you haue a quicke wit.

Sp. And yet it cannot ouer-take your slow purse.

Pro. Come, come, open the matter in briefe; what said she.

Sp. Open your purse, that the money, and the matter may be both at once deliuered.

Pro. Well Sir: here is for your paines: what said she?

Sp. Truely Sir, I thinke you'll hardly win her

Pro. Why? could'st thou perceiue so much from her?

Sp. Sir, I could perceiue nothing at all from her;
No, not so much as a ducket for deliuering your letter
And being so hard to me, that brought your minde;
I feare she'll proue as hard to you in receiuing your minde.
Giue her no token but stones, for she's as hard as steele.

Pro. What said she, nothing?

Sp. No, not so much as take this for thy paines (me;
To testifie your bounty, I thank you, you haue cestern'd
In requital whereof, henceforth, carry your letters your selfe: And so Sir, I'le commend you to my Master.

Pro. Go, go, be gone to saue your Ship from wrack,
Which cannot perish hauing thee aboarde,
Being destin'd to a drier death on shore:
I must goe send some better Messenger,
I feare my Iulia would not daigne my lines,
Receiuing them from such a worthlesse post. Exit.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Iulia and Lucetta.

Iul. But say Lucetta (now we are alone)
Would'st thou then counsaile me to fall in loue?

Luc. I Madam, so you stumble not vnheedfully.

Iul. Of all the faire resort of Gentlemen,
That euery day with par'le encounter me,
In thy opinion which is worthiest loue?

Luc. Please you repeat their names, ile shew my minde.
According to my shallow simple skill.

Iul. What think'st thou of the faire sir Eglamoure

Luc. As of a Knight, well-spoken, neat, and fine,
But were I you, he neuer should be mine.

Iul. What think'st thou of the rich Mercatio?

Luc. Well of his wealth; but of himselfe, so so

Iul. What think'st thou of the gentle Protheus?

Luc. Lord, Lord: to see what folly raignes in vs.

Iul. How now? what meanes this passion at his name?

Luc. Pardon deare Madam, 'tis a passing shame,
That I (vnworthy body as I am)
Should censure thus on louely Gentlemen

Iul. Why not on Protheus, as of all the rest?

Luc. Then thus: not many good, I thinke him best.

Iul. Your reason?

Luc. I haue no other but a womans reason
I thinke him so, because I thinke him so.

Iul. And would'st thou haue me cast my loue on him?

Luc. I if you thought your loue not cast away.

Iul. Why he, of all the rest, hath neuer moou'd me.

Luc. Yet he, of all the rest, I thinke best loues ye.

Iul. His little speaking, shewes his loue but small.

Luc. Fire that's closest kept, burnes most of all.

Iul. They doe not loue, that doe not shew their loue.

Luc. Oh, they loue least, that let men know their loue.

Iul. I would I knew his minde.

Luc. Peruse this paper Madam.

Iul. To Iulia: say, from whom?

Luc. That the Contents will shew.

Iul. Say, say: who gaue it thee?

Luc. Sir Valentines page: & sent I think from Protheus.
He would haue giuen it you, but I being in the way,
Did vnder your name receiue it: pardon the fault I pray.

Iul. Now (by my modesty) a goodly Broker
Dare you presume to harbour wanton lines?
To whisper, and conspire against my youth?
Now trust me, 'tis an office of great worth,
And you an officer fit for the place:
There: take the paper: see it be return'd,
Or else returne no more into my sight.

Luc. To plead for loue, deserues more fee, then hate.

Iul. Will ye be gon?

Luc. That you may ruminate. Exit.

Iul. And yet I would I had o're-look'd the Letter;
It were a shame to call her backe againe,
And pray her to a fault, for which I chid her.
What fool is she, that knowes I am a Maid,
And would not force the letter to my view?
Since Maides, in modesty, say no, to that,
Which they would haue the profferer construe, I.
Fie, fie: how way-ward is this foolish loue;
That (like a testie Babe) will scratch the Nurse,
And presently, all humbled kisse the Rod?
How churlishly, I chid Lucetta hence,
When willingly, I would haue had her here?
How angerly I taught my brow to frowne,
When inward ioy enforc'd my heart to smile?
My penance is, to call Lucetta backe
And aske remission, for my folly past.
What hoe: Lucetta.

Luc. What would your Ladiship?

Iul. Is't neere dinner time?

Luc. I would it were,
That you might kill your stomacke on your meat,

And

And not vpon your Maid.
Iu. What is't that you
Tooke vp so gingerly?
Lu. Nothing.
Iu. Why didst thou stoope then?
Lu. To take a paper vp, that I let fall.
Iul. And is that paper nothing?
Lu. Nothing concerning me.
Iul. Then let it lye, for those that it concernes.
Lu. Madam, it will not lye where it concernes,
Vnlesse it haue a false Interpreter.
Iul. Some loue of yours, hath writ to you in Rime.
Lu That I might sing it (Madam) to a tune:
Giue me a Note, your Ladiship can set
Iul As little by such toyes, as may be possible:
Best sing it to the tune of Light O, Loue.
Lu. It is too heauy for so light a tune.
Iu. Heauy? belike it hath some burden then?
Lu. I: and melodious were it, would you sing it,
Iu. And why not you?
Lu. I cannot reach so high.
Iu. Let's see your Song
How now Minion?
Lu. Keepe tune there still; so you will sing it out
And yet me thinkes I do not like this tune.
Iu. You do not?
Lu. No (Madam) tis too sharpe.
Iu. You (Minion) are too saucie.
Lu. Nay, now you are too flat;
And marre the concord, with too harsh a descant:
There wanteth but a Meane to fill your Song.
Iu. The meane is drownd with you vnruly base.
Lu. Indeede I bid the base for Protheus.
Iu. This babble shall not henceforth trouble me;
Here is a coile with protestation:
Go, get you gone: and let the papers lye:
You would be fingring them, to anger me.
Lu. She makes it strange, but she would be best pleas'd
To be so angred with another Letter.
Iu. Nay, would I were so angred with the same:
Oh hatefull hands, to teare such louing words,
Iniurious Wasps, to feede on such sweet honny,
And kill the Bees that yeelds it, with your stings;
Ile kisse each seuerall paper, for amends:
Looke, here is writ, kinde Iulia: vnkinde Iulia,
As in reuenge of thy ingratitude,
I throw thy name against the bruzing-stones,
Trampling contemptuously on thy disdaine.
And here is writ, Loue wounded Protheus.
Poore wounded name: my bosome, as a bed,
Shall lodge thee till thy wound be throughly heal'd;
And thus I search it with a souereigne kisse.
But twice, or thrice, was Protheus written downe:
Be calme (good winde) blow not a word away,
Till I haue found each letter, in the Letter,
Except mine own name: That, some whirle-winde beare
Vnto a ragged, fearefull, hanging Rocke,
And throw it thence into the raging Sea.
Loe, here in one line is his name twice writ
Poore forlorne Protheus, passionate Protheus:
To the sweet Iulia: that ile teare away:
And yet I will not, sith so prettily
He couples it, to his complaining Names;
Thus will I fold them, one vpon another;
Now kisse, embrace, contend, doe what you will.
Lu. Madam: dinner is ready and your father staies.
Iu. Well, let vs goe.
Lu. What, shall these papers lye, like Tel-tales here?
Iu. If you respect them; best to take them vp.
Lu. Nay, I was taken vp, for laying them downe.
Yee here they shall not lye, for catching cold.
Iu. I see you haue a months minde to them.
Lu. I (Madam) you may say what sights you see;
I see things too, although you iudge I winke.
Iu. Come, come, will please you goe. Exeunt.

Scœna Tertia.

Enter Antonio and Panthino. Protheus.

Ant. Tell me Panthino, what sad talke was that,
Wherewith my brother held you in the Cloyster?
Pan. 'Twas of his Nephew Protheus, your Sonne.
Ant. Why? what of him?
Pan. He wondred that your Lordship
Would suffer him, to spend his youth at home,
While other men, of slender reputation
Put forth their Sonnes, to seeke preferment out.
Some to the warres, to try their fortune there;
Some, to discouer Islands farre away:
Some, to the studious Vniuersities;
For any, or for all these exercises,
He said, that Protheus, your sonne, was meet;
And did request me, to importune you
To let him spend his time no more at home;
Which would be great impeachment to his age,
In hauing knowne no trauaile in his youth.
Ant. Nor need'st thou much importune me to that Whereon, this month I haue bin hamering.
I haue consider'd well, his losse of time,
And how he cannot be a perfect man,
Not being tryed, and tutord in the world.
Experience is by industry atchiu'd,
And perfected by the swift course of time:
Then tell me, whether were I best to send him?
Pan. I thinke your Lordship is not ignorant
How his companion, youthfull Valentine,
Attends the Emperour in his royall Court.
Ant. I know it well. (thither.
Pan. 'Twere good, I thinke, your Lordship sent him
There shall he practise Tilts, and Turnaments;
Heare sweet discourse, conuerse with Noble-men,
And be in eye of every Exercise
Worthy his youth, and nobleness of birth.
Ant. I like thy counsaile: well hast thou aduis'd:
And that thou mayst perceiue how well I like it,
The execution of it shall make knowne;
Euen with the speediest expedition,
I will dispatch him to the Emperors Court.
Pan. To morrow, may it please you, Don Alphonso,
With other Gentlemen of good esteeme
Are iourneying, to salute the Emperor,
And to commend their seruice to his will.
Ant. Good company: with them shall Protheus go:
And in good time: now will we breake with him.
Pro. Sweet Loue, sweet lines, sweet life,
Here is her hand, the agent of her heart;
Here is her oath for loue, her honors paune;

O that our Fathers would applaud our loues
To seale our happinesse with their consents.
Pro. Oh heauenly Iulia.
Ant. How now? What Letter are you reading there?
Pro. May't please your Lordship, 'tis a word or two
Of commendations sent from Valentine;
Deliuer'd by a friend, that came from him.
Ant. Lend me the Letter: Let me see what newes.
Pro. There is no newes (my Lord) but that he writes
How happily he liues, how well-belou'd,
And daily graced by the Emperor;
Wishing me with him, partner of his fortune.
Ant. And how stand you affected to his wish?
Pro. As one relying on your Lordships will,
And not depending on his friendly wish.
Ant. My will is something sorted with his wish:
Muse not that I thus suddainly proceed;
For what I will, I will, and there an end:
I am resolu'd, that thou shalt spend some time
With Valentinus, in the Emperors Court;
What maintenance he from his friends receiues,
Like exhibition thou shalt haue from me.
To morrow be in readinesse, to goe,
Excuse it not: for I am peremptory.
Pro. My Lord I cannot be so soone prouided,
Please you deliberate a day or two.
Ant. Look what thou want'st shalbe sent after thee:
No more of stay: to morrow thou must goe;
Come on Panthino; you shall be imployd,
To hasten on his Expedition.
Pro. Thus haue I shund the fire, for feare of burning,
And drench'd me in the sea, where I am drown'd.
I fear'd to shew my Father Iulias Letter,
Least he should take exceptions to my loue,
And with the vantage of mine owne excuse
Hath he excepted most against my loue.
O how this spring of loue resembleth
The vncertaine glory of an Aprill day,
Which now shewes all the beauty of the Sun,
And by and by a cloud takes all away.
Pan. Sir Protheus, your Fathers call's for you,
He is in hast, therefore I pray you go.
Pro. Why this it is: my heart accords thereto,
And yet a thousand times it answer's no.

Exeunt. Finis.

Actus secundus: Scœna Prima.

Enter Valentine, Speed, Siluia.

Speed. Sir, your Gloues.
Valen. Not mine: my Gloues are on.
Sp. Why then this may be yours: for this is but one.
Val. Ha? Let me see: I, giue it me, it's mine:
Sweet Ornament, that deckes a thing diuine,
Ah Siluia, Siluia.
Speed. Madam Siluia: Madam Siluia.
Val. How now Sirha?
Speed. She is not within hearing Sir.
Val. Why sir, who bad you call her?
Speed. Your worship sir, or else I mistooke.
Val. Well: you'll still be too forward.
Speed. And yet I was last chidden for being too slow.
Val. Goe to, sir, tell me: do you know Madam Siluia?
Speed. Shee that your worship loues?
Val. Why, how know you that I am in loue?
Speed. Marry by these special markes: first you haue learn'd (like Sir Proteus) to wreath your Armes like a Male-content: to relish a Loue-song, like a Robin-red-breast: to walke alone like one that had the pestilence: to sigh, like a Schoole-boy that had lost his A. B. C. to weep like a yong wench that had buried her Grandam: to fast, like one that takes diet: to watch, like one that feares robbing: to speake puling, like a beggar at Hallow-Masse: You were wont, when you laugh'd, to crow like a cocke; when you walk'd, to walke like one of the Lions: when you fasted, it was presently after dinner: when you look'd sadly, it was for want of money. And now you are Metamorphis'd with a Mistris, that when I looke on you, I can hardly thinke you my Master.
Val. Are all these things perceiu'd in me?
Speed. They are all perceiu'd without ye.
Val. Without me? they cannot.
Speed. Without you? nay, that's certaine: for without you were so simple, none else would: but you are so without these follies, that these follies are within you, and shine through you like the water in an Vrnall: that not an eye that sees you, but is a Physician to comment on your Malady.
Val. But tell me: do'st thou know my Lady Siluia?
Speed. Shee that you gaze on so, as she sits at Supper?
Val. Hast thou obseru'd that? euen she I meane.
Speed. Why sir, I know her not.
Val. Do'st thou know her by my gazing on her, and yet know'st her not?
Speed. Is she not hard-fauour'd, sir?
Val. Not so faire (boy) as well fauour'd.
Speed. Sir, I know that well enough.
Val. What do'st thou know?
Speed. That shee is not so faire, as (of you) well-fauour'd.
Val. I meane that her beauty is exquisite,
But her fauour infinite.
Speed. That's because the one is painted, and the other out of all count.
Val. How painted? and how out of count?
Speed. Marry sir, so painted to make her faire, that no man counts of her beauty.
Val. How esteem'st thou me? I account of her beauty.
Speed. You neuer saw her since she was deform'd.
Val. How long hath she beene deform'd?
Speed. Euer since you lou'd her.
Val. I haue lou'd her euer since I saw her,
And still I see her beautifull.
Speed. If you loue her, you cannot see her.
Val. Why?
Speed. Because Loue is blinde: O that you had mine eyes, or your owne eyes had the lights they were wont to haue, when you chidde at Sir Proteus, for going vngarter'd.
Val. What should I see then?
Speed. Your owne present folly, and her passing deformitie: for he being in loue, could not see to garter his hose, and you, being in loue, cannot see to put on your hose.
Val. Belike (boy) then you are in loue, for last morning You could not see to wipe my shoos.
Speed. True sir: I was in loue with my bed, I thanke you, you swing'd me for my loue, which makes mee the bolder bolder to chide you, for yours.

Val. In conclusion, I stand affected to her.
Speed. I would you were set, so your affection would cease.
Val. Last night she enioyn'd me,
To write some lines to one she loues.
Speed. And haue you?
Val. I haue.
Speed. Are they not lamely writt?
Val. No (Boy) but as well as I can do them
Peace, here she comes.
Speed. Oh excellent motion; oh exceeding Puppet:
Now will he interpret to her.
Val. Madam & Mistres, a thousand good-morrows.
Speed. Oh, 'giue ye-good-ev'n: here's a million of manners.
Sil. Sir Valentine, and seruant, to you two thousand.
Speed. He should giue her interest: & she gines it him.
Val. As you enioynd me; I haue writ your Letter
Vnto the secret, nameles friend of yours
Which I was much vnwilling to proceed in,
But for my duty to your Ladiship.
Sil. I thanke you (gentle Seruant) 'tis very Clerkly done.
Val. Now trust me (Madam) it came hardly-off
For being ignorant to whom it goes,
I writ at random, very doubtfully.
Sil. Perchance you think too much of so much pains?
Val. No (Madam) so it stead you I will write
Please you command, a thousand times as much.
And yet ——
Sil. A pretty period: well, I ghesse the sequell;
And yet I will not name it: and yet I care not.
And yet, take this againe: and yet I thanke you:
Meaning henceforth to trouble you no more.
Speed. And yet you will; and yet, another yet.
Val. What meanes your Ladiship?
Doe you not like it?
Sil. Yes yes: the lines are very quaintly writ,
But (since vnwillingly) take them againe.
Nay, take them.
Val. Madam, they are for you.
Sil. I, I entreat them Sir at my request.
But I will none of them; they are for you:
I would haue had them writ more movingly.
Val. Please you, Ile write your Ladiship another.
Sil. And when it's writ: for my sake read it ouer,
And if it please you, so: if not: why so.
Val. If it please me, (Madam?) what then?
Sil. Why if it please you, take it for your labour:
And so good-morrow Seruant. Exit Sil.
Speed. Oh Iest vnseene: inscrutible: inuisible,
As a nose on a mans face, or a Weathercocke on a steeple
My Master sues to her: and she hath taught her Suitor,
He being her Pupill, to become her Tutor
Oh excellent deuise, was there euer heard a better?
That my master being scribe,
To himselfe should write the Letter?
Val. How now Sir?
What are you reasoning with your selfe?
Speed. Nay: I was rime: 'tis you y' haue the reason.
Val. To doe what?
Speed. To be a Spokes-man from Madam Siluia.
Val. To whom?
Speed. To your selfe: why, she woes you by a figure.
Val. What figure?
Speed. By a Letter, I should say.
Val. Why she hath not writ to me?
Speed. What need she,
When shee hath made you write to your selfe?
Why, doe you not perceiue the Iest?
Val. No, beleeue me.
Speed. No beleeuing you indeed Sir:
But did you perceiue her earnest?
Val. She gaue me none, except an angry word.
Speed. Why she hath giuen you a Letter.
Val. That's the Letter I writ to her friend.
Speed. And y' letter hath she deliuer'd, & there an end.
Val. I would it were no worse.
Speed. Ile warrant you, 'tis as well:
For often haue you writ to her: and she in modesty,
Or else for want of idle time, could not againe reply,
Or fearing els some messenger, y' might her mind discouer
Her selfe hath taught her Loue himself, to write vnto her
All this I speak in print, for in print I found it. (louer.
Why muse you sir, 'tis dinner time.
Val. I haue dyn'd.
Speed. I, but hearken sir: though the Camelion Loue can feed on the ayre, I am one that am nourish'd by my victuals; and would faine haue meate: oh bee not like your Mistresse, be moued, be moued. Exeunt.

Scæna secunda.

Enter Protheus, Iulia, Panthion.

Pro. Haue patience, gentle Iulia:
Iul. I must where is no remedy.
Pro. When possibly I can, I will returne.
Iul. If you turne not: you will return the sooner:
Keepe this remembrance for thy Iulia's sake.
Pro. Why then wee'll make exchange;
Here, take you this.
Iul. And seale the bargaine with a holy kisse.
Pro. Here is my hand, for my true constancie:
And when that howre ore-slips me in the day,
Wherein I sigh not (Iulia) for thy sake,
The next ensuing howre, some foule mischance
Torment me for my Loues forgetfulnesse:
My father staies my comming: answere not
The tide is now: nay, not thy tide of teares,
That tide will stay me longer then I should,
Iulia, farewell: what, gon without a word?
I, so true loue should doe: it cannot speake,
For truth hath better deeds, then words to grace it.
Panth. Sir Protheus: you are staid for.
Pro. Goe: I come, I come:
Alas, this parting strikes poore Louers dumbe.
Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Launce, Panthion.

Launce. Nay, 'twill be this howre ere I haue done weeping: all the kinde of the Launces, haue this very fault: I haue receiu'd my proportion, like the prodigious sonne,

Sonne, and am going with Sir Protheus to the Imperialls Court: I thinke Crab my dog, be the sowrest natured dogge that liues: My Mother weeping: my Father wayling: my Sister crying: our Maid howling: our Catte wringing her hands, and all our house in a great perplexitie, yet did not this cruell-hearted Curre shedde one teare: he is a stone, a very pibble stone, and has no more pitty in him then a dogge: a Iew would haue wept to haue seene our parting: why my Grandam hauing no eyes, looke you, wept her selfe blinde at my parting: nay, Ile shew you the manner of it. This shooe is my father: no, this left shooe is my father; no, no, this left shooe is my mother: nay, that cannot bee so neyther: yes; it is so, it is so: it hath the worser sole: this shooe with the hole in it, is my mother: and this my father: a veng'ance on't, there 'tis: Now sir, this staffe is my sister: for, looke you, she is as white as a lilly, and as small as a wand: this hat is Nan our maid: I am the dogge: no, the dogge is himselfe, and I am the dogge. oh, the dogge is me, and I am my selfe: I; so, so: now come I to my Father; Father, your blessing: now should not the shooe speake a word for weeping: now should I kisse my Father; well, hee weepes on. Now come I to my Mother: Oh that she could speake now, like a would-woman: well, I kisse her: why there 'tis; heere's my mothers breath vp and downe: Now come I to my sister; marke the moane she makes: now the dogge all this while sheds not a teare: nor speakes a word: but see how I lay the dust with my teares.

Panth. Launce, away, away: a Boord: thy Master is ship'd, and thou art to post after with oares: what's the matter? why weep'st thou man? away ase, you'l loose the Tide, if you tarry any longer.

Laun. It is no matter if the tide were lost, for it is the vnkindest Tide, that euer any man tide.

Panth. What's the vnkindest tide?

Laun. Why, he that's tide here, Crab my dog.

Pant. Tut, man: I meane thou'lt loose the flood, and in loosing the flood, loose thy voyage, and in loosing thy voyage, loose thy Master, and in loosing thy Master, loose thy seruice, and in loosing thy seruice: —— why dost thou stop my mouth?

Laun. For feare thou shouldst loose thy tongue.

Panth. Where should I loose my tongue?

Laun. In thy Tale.

Panth. In thy Taile.

Laun. Loose the Tide, and the voyage, and the Master, and the Seruice, and the tide: why man, if the Riuer were drie, I am able to fill it with my teares: if the winde were downe, I could driue the boate with my sighes.

Panth. Come: come away man, I was sent to call thee.

Laun. Sir: call me what thou dar'st.

Pant. Wilt thou goe?

Laun. Well, I will goe.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Valentine, Siluia, Thurio, Speed, Duke, Protheus.

Sil. Seruant.

Val. Mistris.

Spee. Master, Sir Thurio frownes on you.

Val. I Boy, it's for loue.

Spee. Not of you.

Val. Of my Mistresse then.

Spee. 'Twere good you knockt him.

Sil. Seruant, you are sad.

Val. Indeed, Madam, I seeme so.

Thu. Seeme you that you are not?

Val. Hap'ly I doe.

Thu. So doe Counterfeyts.

Val. So doe you.

Thu. What seeme I that I am not?

Val. Wise.

Thu. What instance of the contrary?

Val. Your folly.

Thu. And how quoat you my folly?

Val. I quoat it in your Ierkin.

Thu. My Ierkin is a doublet.

Val. Well then, Ile double your folly.

Thu. How?

Sil. What, angry, Sir Thurio, do you change colour?

Val. Giue him leaue, Madam, he is a kind of Camelion.

Thu. That hath more minde to feed on your blood, then liue in your ayre.

Val. You haue said Sir.

Thu. I Sir, and done too for this time.

Val. I know it wel sir, you alwaies end ere you begin.

Sil. A fine volly of words, gentlemẽ, & quickly shot off.

Val. 'Tis indeed, Madam, we thank the giuer.

Sil. Who is that Seruant?

Val. Your selfe (sweet Lady) for you gaue the fire, Sir Thurio borrows his wit from your Ladiships lookes, And spends what he borrowes kindly in your company.

Thu. Sir, if you spend word for word with me, I shall make your wit bankrupt. (words,

Val. I know it well sir: you haue an Exchequer of And I thinke, no other treasure to giue your followers: For it appeares by their bare Liueries That they liue by your bare words.

Sil. No more, gentlemen, no more: Here comes my father.

Duk. Now, daughter Siluia, you are hard beset. Sir Valentine, your father is in good health. What say you to a Letter from your friends Of much good newes?

Val. My Lord, I will be thankfull, To any happy messenger from thence.

Duk. Know ye Don Antonio, your Countriman?

Val. I, my good Lord, I know the Gentleman To be of worth, and worthy estimation, And not without desert so well reputed.

Duk. Hath he not a Sonne?

Val. I, my good Lord, a Son, that well deserues The honor, and regard of such a father.

Duk. You know him well?

Val. I knew him as my selfe: for from our Infancie We haue conuerst, and spent our howres together, And though my selfe haue beene an idle Trewant, Omitting the sweet benefit of time To clothe mine age with Angel-like perfection: Yet hath Sir Protheus (for that's his name) Made vse, and fare aduantage of his dayes: His yeares but yong, but his experience old: His head vn-mellowed, but his Iudgement ripe; And in a word (for far behinde his worth Comes all the praises that I now bestow.)

He is compleat in feature, and in minde,
With all good grace, to grace a Gentleman.
Duke. Beshrew me sir, but if he make this good
He is as worthy for an Empresse loue,
As meet to be an Emperors Councellor:
Well, Sir: this Gentleman is come to me
With Commendation from great Potentates,
And heere he meanes to spend his time a while,
I thinke 'tis no vn-welcome newes to you.
Val. Should I haue wish'd a thing, it had beene he.
Duke. Welcome him then according to his worth:
Siluia, I speake to you, and you Sir Thurio,
For Valentine, I need not cite him to it,
I will send him hither to you presently.
Val. This is the Gentleman I told your Ladiship
Had come along with me, but that his Mistresse
Did hold his eyes, lockt in her Christall lookes.
Sil. Be-like that now she hath enfranchis'd them
Vpon some other pawne for fealty.
Val. Nay sure, I thinke she holds them prisoners still.
Sil. Nay then he should be blind, and being blind
How could he see his way to seeke out you?
Val. Why Lady, Loue hath twenty paire of eyes.
Thur. They say that Loue hath not any.
Val. To see such Louers, Thurio, as your selfe,
Vpon a homely obiect, Loue can winke.
Sil. Haue done, haue done: here comes the Gentleman.
Val. Welcome, deer Protheus: Mistris, I beseech you
Confirme his welcome, with some speciall fauor.
Sil. His worth is warrant for his welcome hether,
If this be he you oft haue wish'd to heare from.
Val. Mistris, it is: sweet Lady, entertaine him
To be my fellow-seruant to your Ladiship.
Sil. Too low a Mistres for so high a seruant.
Pro. Not so, sweet Lady, but too meane a seruant
To haue a looke of such a worthy a Mistresse.
Val. Leaue off discourse of disabilitie:
Sweet Lady, entertaine him for your Seruant.
Pro. My dutie will I boast of, nothing else.
Sil. And dutie neuer yet did want his meed.
Seruant, you are welcome to a worthlesse Mistresse
Pro. Ile die on him that saies so but your selfe.
Sil. That you are welcome?
Pro. That you are worthlesse. (you.
Thur. Madam, my Lord your father would speak with
Sil. I wait vpon his pleasure: Come Sir Thurio,
Goe with me: once more, new Seruant welcome;
Ile leaue you to confer of home affaires,
When you haue done, we looke too heare from you.
Pro. We'll both attend vpon your Ladiship.
Val. Now tell me: how do all from whence you came?
Pro. Your friends are well, & haue thē much cōmended.
Val. And how doe yours?
Pro. I left them all in health.
Val. How does your Lady? & how thriues your loue?
Pro. My tales of Loue were wont to weary you,
I know you ioy not in a Loue-discourse.
Val. I Protheus, but that life is alterd now,
I haue done pennance for contemning Loue,
Whose high emperious thoughts haue punish'd me
With bitter fasts, with pennerniall groues,
With nightly teares, and daily hart-sore sighes,
For in reuenge of my contempt of loue,
Loue hath chas'd sleepe from my enthralled eyes,
And made them watchers of mine owne hearts sorrow.
O gentle Protheus, Loue's a mighty Lord,
And hath so humbled me, as I confesse
There is no woe to his correction,
Nor to his Seruice, no such ioy on earth:
Now, no discourse, except it be of loue:
Now can I breake my fast, dine, sup, and sleepe,
Vpon the very naked name of Loue.
Pro. Enough; I read your fortune in your eye:
Was this the Idoll, that you worship so?
Val. Euen She; and is she not a heauenly Saint?
Pro. No; But she is an earthly Paragon.
Val. Call her diuine.
Pro. I will not flatter her.
Val. O flatter me: for Loue delights in praises.
Pro. When I was sick, you gaue me bitter pils,
And I must minister the like to you.
Val. Then speake the truth by her; if not diuine,
Yet let her be a principalitie,
Soueraigne to all the Creatures on the earth.
Pro. Except my Mistresse.
Val. Sweet: except not any,
Except thou wilt except against my Loue.
Pro. Haue I not reason to prefer mine owne?
Val. And I will help thee to prefer her too:
Shee shall be dignified with this high honour,
To beare my Ladies traine, lest the base earth
Should from her vesture chance to steale a kisse,
And of so great a fauor growing proud,
Disdaine to roote the Sommer-swelling flowre,
And make rough winter euerlastingly.
Pro. Why Valentine, what Bragadisme is this?
Val. Pardon me (Protheus) all I can is nothing,
To her, whose worth, makes other worthies nothing;
Shee is alone.
Pro. Then let her alone.
Val. Not for the world: why man, she is mine owne,
And I as rich in having such a Iewell
As twenty Seas, if all their sand were pearle,
The water, Nectar, and the Rocks pure gold.
Forgiue me that I doe not dreame on thee,
Because thou seest me doate vpon my loue:
My foolish Riuall that her Father likes
(Onely for his possessions are so huge)
Is gone with her along, and I must after,
For Loue (thou know'st is full of iealousie.)
Pro. But she loues you? (howre,
Val. I, and we are betroathd: nay more, our mariage
With all the cunning manner of our flight
Determin'd of: how I must climbe her window,
The Ladder made of Cords, and all the means
Plotted, and 'greed on for my happinesse.
Good Protheus goe with me to my chamber,
In these affaires to aid me with thy counsaile.
Pro. Goe on before: I shall enquire you forth:
I must vnto the Road, to dis-embarque
Some necessaries, that I needs must vse,
And then Ile presently attend you.
Val. Will you make haste? Exit.
Pro. I will.
Euen as one heate, another heate expels,
Or as one naile, by strength driues out another.
So the remembrance of my former Loue
Is by a newer obiect quite forgotten,
Is it mine, or Valentines praise?
Her true perfection, or my false transgression?
That makes me reasonlesse, to reason thus?
Shee is faire; and so is Iulia that I loue,
(That

(That I did loue, for now my loue is thaw'd,
Which like a waxen Image 'gainſt a fire
Beares no impreſſion of the thing it was.)
Me thinkes my zeale to Valentine is cold,
And that I loue him not as I was wont:
O, but I loue his Lady too-too much,
And that's the reaſon I loue him ſo little.
How ſhall I dote on her with more aduice,
That thus without aduice begin to loue her?
'Tis but her picture I haue yet beheld,
And that hath dazel'd my reaſons light:
But when I looke on her perfections,
There is no reaſon, but I ſhall be blinde.
If I can checke my erring loue, I will,
If not, to compaſſe her Ile vſe my skill.

Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Speed and Launce.

Speed. Launce, by mine honeſty welcome to Padua.

Laun. Forſweare not thy ſelfe, ſweet youth, for I am not welcome. I reckon this alwaies, that a man is neuer vndon till hee be hang'd, nor neuer welcome to a place, till ſome certaine ſhot be paid, and the Hoſteſſe ſay welcome.

Speed. Come-on you mad-cap: Ile to the Ale-houſe with you preſently; where, for one ſhot of fiue pence, thou ſhalt haue fiue thouſand welcomes: But ſirha, how did thy Maſter part with Madam Iulia?

Laun. Marry after they cloas'd in earneſt, they parted very fairely in ieſt.

Spee. But ſhall ſhe marry him?

Laun. No.

Spee. How then? ſhall he marry her?

Laun. No, neither.

Spee. What, are they broken?

Laun. No; they are both as whole as a fiſh.

Spee. Why then, how ſtands the matter with them?

Laun. Marry thus, when it ſtands well with him, it ſtands well with her.

Spee. What an aſſe art thou, I vnderſtand thee not.

Laun. What a blocke art thou, that thou canſt not? My ſtaffe vnderſtands me?

Spee What thou ſay'ſt?

Laun. I, and what I do too: looke thee Ile but leane, and my ſtaffe vnderſtands me.

Spee. It ſtands vnder thee indeed.

Laun. Why, ſtand-vnder, and vnder-ſtand is all one.

Spee. But tell me true, will't be a match?

Laun. Aske my dogge, if he ſay I, it will: if he ſay no, it will: if he ſhake his taile, and ſay nothing, it will.

Spee. The concluſion is then, that it will.

Laun. Thou ſhalt neuer get ſuch a ſecret from me, but by a parable.

Spee. 'Tis well that I get it ſo: but Launce, how ſay'ſt thou that that my maſter is become a notable Louer?

Laun. I neuer knew him otherwiſe.

Spee. Then how?

Laun. A notable Lubber: as thou reporteſt him to bee.

Spee. Why, thou whorſon Aſſe, thou mak'ſt it me.

Laun. Why Foole, I meant not thee, I meant thy Maſter.

Spee. I tell thee, my Maſter is become a hot Louer.

Laun. Why, I tell thee I care not, though hee burne himſelfe in Loue. If thou wilt goe with me to the Ale-houſe; if not, thou art an Hebrew, a Iew, and not worth the name of a Chriſtian.

Spee. Why?

Laun. Becauſe thou haſt not ſo much charity in thee as to goe to the Ale with a Chriſtian. Wilt thou goe?

Spee. At thy ſeruice.

Exeunt.

Scæna Sexta.

Enter Protheus ſolus

Pro. To leaue my Iulia, ſhall I be forſworne?
To loue faire Siluia, ſhall I be forſworne?
To wrong my friend, I ſhall be much forſworne,
And euen that Powre which gaue me firſt my oath
Prouokes me to this three-fold periurie.
Loue bad me ſweare, and Loue bids me for-ſweare;
O ſweet-ſuggeſting Loue, if thou haſt ſin'd,
Teach me (thy tempted ſubiect) to excuſe it.
At firſt I did adore a twinkling Starre
But now I worſhip a celeſtiall Sunne.
Vnheedfull vowes may heedfully be broken,
And he wants wit, that wants reſolued will,
To learne his wit, t'exchange the bad for better;
Fie, fie, vnreuerend tongue, to call her bad,
Whoſe ſouereignty ſo oft thou haſt preferr'd,
With twenty thouſand ſoule-confirming oathes.
I cannot leaue to loue; and yet I doe:
But there I leaue to loue, where I ſhould loue.
Iulia I looſe, and Valentine I looſe,
If I keepe them I needs muſt looſe my ſelfe
If I looſe them, thus finde I by their looſe,
For Valentine, my ſelfe: for Iulia Siluia.
I to my ſelfe am deerer then a friend
For Loue is ſtill moſt precious in it ſelfe,
And Siluia (witneſſe heauen that made her faire)
Shewes Iulia but a ſwarthy Ethiope.
I will forget that Iulia is aliue,
Remembring that my Loue to her is dead.
And Valentine Ile hold an Enemie,
Ayming at Siluia as a ſweeter friend.
I cannot now proue conſtant to my ſelfe,
Without ſome treachery vs'd to Valentine.
This night he meaneth with a Corded-ladder
To climbe celeſtiall Siluia's chamber window,
My ſelfe in counſaile his competitor.
Now preſently Ile giue her father notice
Of their diſguiſing and pretended flight
Who (all inrag'd) will baniſh Valentine
For Thurio he intends ſhall wed his daughter,
But Valentine being gon, Ile quickely croſſe
By ſome ſlie tricke, blunt Thurio's dull proceeding.
Loue lend me wings, to make my purpoſe ſwift
As thou haſt lent me wit, to plot this drift.

Exit

Scœna Septima.

Enter Iulia and Lucetta.

Iul. Counsaile, Lucetta, gentle girle assist me,
And eu'n in kinde loue, I doe coniure thee,
Who art the Table wherein all my thoughts
Are visibly Character'd, and engrau'd,
To lesson me, and tell me some good meane
How with my honour I may vndertake
A iourney to my louing Protheus.
Luc. Alas, the way is wearisome and long.
Iul. A true-deuoted Pilgrime is not weary
To measure Kingdomes with his feeble steps,
Much lesse shall she that hath Loues wings to fly,
And when the flight is made to one so deere,
Of such diuine perfection as Sir Protheus
Luc. Better forbeare, till Protheus make returne.
Iul. Oh, know'st thou not, his lookes are my soules food?
Pity the dearth that I haue pined in,
By longing for that food so long a time.
Didst thou but know the inly touch of Loue,
Thou would'st as soone goe kindle fire with snow
As seeke to quench the fire of Loue with words.
Luc. I doe not seeke to quench your Loues hot fire,
But qualifie the fires extreame rage,
Lest it should burne aboue the bounds of reason
Iul. The more thou dam'st it vp, the more it burnes.
The Current that with gentle murmure glides
(Thou know'st) being stop'd, impatiently doth rage:
But when his faire course is not hindered,
He makes sweet musicke with th'enamelled stones,
Giuing a gentle kisse to euery sedge
He ouer-taketh in his pilgrimage.
And so by many winding nookes he straies
With willing sport to the wilde Ocean
Then let me goe, and hinder not my course:
Ile be as patient as a gentle streame,
And make a pastime of each weary step,
Till the last step haue brought me to my Loue,
And there Ile rest, as after much turmoile
A blessed soule doth in Elizium
Luc. But in what habit will you goe along?
Iul. Not like a woman, for I would preuent
The loose encounters of lasciuious men
Gentle Lucetta, fit me with such weedes
As may beseeme some well reputed Page.
Luc. Why then your Ladiship must cut your haire.
Iul. No girle, Ile knit it vp in silken strings,
With twentie odde-conceited true-loue knots:
To be fantastique, may become a youth
Of greater time then I shall shew to be. (chest
Luc. What fashion (Madam) shall I make your breech-
Iul. That fits as well, as tell me (good my Lord)
What compasse will you weare your Farthingale?
Why eu'n what fashion thou best likes (Lucetta.)
Luc. You must needs haue them with a cod-peece (Madam)
Iul. Out, out, (Lucetta) that will be ill-fauoured. (dam)
Luc. A round hose (Madam) now's not worth a pin
Vnlesse you haue a cod-peece to stick pins on.
Iul. Lucetta as thou lou'st me let me haue
What thou think'st meet, and is most mannerly.
But tell me (wench) how will the world repute me
For vndertaking so vnstaid a iourney?
I feare me it will make me scandaliz'd.
Luc. If you thinke so, then stay at home, and go not.
Iul. Nay, that I will not.
Luc. Then neuer dreame on infamy, but go:
If Protheus like your iourney, when you come,
No matter who's displeas'd, when you are gone:
I feare me he will scarce be pleas'd with all.
Iul. That is the least (Lucetta) of my feare:
A thousand oathes, an Ocean of his teares,
And instances of infinite of Loue,
Warrant me welcome to my Protheus.
Luc. All these are seruants to deceitfull men.
Iul. Base men, that vse them to so base effect;
But truer starres did gouerne Protheus birth,
His words are bonds, his oathes are oracles,
His loue sincere, his thoughts immaculate,
His teares, pure messengers, sent from his heart,
His heart, as far from fraud, as heauen from earth.
Luc. Pray heau'n he prooue so when you come to him.
Iul. Now, as thou lou'st me, do him not that wrong,
To beare a hard opinion of his truth:
Onely deserue my loue, by louing him,
And presently goe with me to my chamber
To take a note of what I stand in need of,
To furnish me vpon my longing iourney:
All that is mine I leaue at thy disposE,
My goods, my Lands, my reputation,
Only, in lieu thereof, dispatch me hence:
Come; answere not: but to it presently,
I am impatient of my tarriance.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius, Scena Prima.

Enter Duke, Thurio, Protheus, Valentine, Launce, Speed.

Duke Sir Thurio, giue vs leaue (I pray) a while,
We haue some secrets to confer about.
Now tell me Protheus, what's your will with me?
Pro. My gracious Lord, that which I would discouer,
The Law of friendship bids me to conceale,
But when I call to minde your gracious fauours
Done to me (vndeseruing as I am)
My duty pricks me on to vtter that
Which else, no worldly good should draw from me:
Know (worthy Prince) Sir Valentine my friend
This night intends to steale away your daughter:
My selfe am one made priuy to the plot.
I know you haue determin'd to bestow her
On Thurio, whom your gentle daughter hates,
And should she thus be stolne away from you,
It would be much vexation to your age.
Thus (for my duties sake) I rather chose
To crosse my friend in his intended drift,
Then (by concealing it) heap on your head
A pack of sorrowes, which would presse you downe
(Being vnpreuented) to your timelesse graue.
Duke. Protheus, I thank thee for thine honest care,
Which to requite, command me while I liue.
This loue of theirs, my selfe haue often seene,
Haply when they haue iudg'd me fast asleepe,
And oftentimes haue purpos'd to forbid

Sir

Sir Valentine her companie and my Court
But fearing leſt my iealous aymе might erre,
And ſo (vnworthily) diſgrace the man
(A raſhneſſe that I euer yet haue ſhun'd)
I gaue him gentle lookes, thereby to finde
That which thy ſelfe haſt now diſclos'd to me
And that thou maiſt perceiue my feare of this,
Knowing that tender youth is ſoone ſuggeſted,
I nightly lodge her in an vpper Towre,
The key whereof, my ſelfe haue euer kept:
And thence ſhe cannot be conuay'd away.
Pro. Know (noble Lord) they haue deuis'd a meane
How he her chamber-window will aſcend,
And with a Corded-ladder fetch her downe:
For which, the youthfull Louer now is gone,
And this way comes he with it preſently.
Where (if it pleaſe you) you may intercept him.
But (good my Lord) doe it ſo cunningly
That my diſcouery be not aymed at:
For, loue of you, not hate vnto my friend,
Hath made me publiſher of this preſence
Duke. Vpon my Honor, he ſhall neuer know
That I had any light from the of this.
Pro. Adieu, my Lord, Sir Valentine is coming.
Duk. Sir Valentine, whether away ſo faſt?
Val. Pleaſe it your Grace, there is a Meſſenger
That ſtayes to beare my Letters to my friends,
And I am going to deliuer them.
Duk. Be they of much import?
Val. The tenure of them doth but ſignifie
My health, and happy being at your Court.
Duk. Nay then, no matter; ſtay with me a while,
I am to breake with thee of ſome affaires
That touch me neere, wherein thou muſt be ſecret.
'Tis not vnknown to thee, that I haue ſought
To match my friend Sir Thurio, to my daughter.
Val. I know it well (my Lord) and ſure the Match
Were rich and honourable: beſides the gentleman
Is full of Vertue, Bounty, Worth, and Qualities
Beſeeming ſuch a Wife, as your faire daughter:
Cannot your Grace win her to fancie him?
Duk. No, truſt me, She is peeuiſh, ſullen, froward,
Proud, diſobedient, ſtubborne, lacking duty,
Neither regarding that ſhe is my childe,
Nor fearing me, as if I were her father:
And may I ſay to thee, this pride of hers
(Vpon aduice) hath drawne my loue from her,
And where I thought the remnant of mine age
Should haue beene cherifh'd by her childe-like duty,
I now am full reſolu'd to take a wife,
And turne her out, to who will take her in:
Then let her beauty be her wedding dowre
For me, and my poſſeſſions ſhe eſteemes not.
Val. What would your Grace haue me to do in all this?
Duk. There is a Lady in Verona heere
Whom I affect: but ſhe is nice, and coy,
And nought eſteemes my aged eloquence.
Now therefore would I haue thee to my Tutor
(For long agone I haue forgot to court,
Beſides the faſhion of the time is chang'd)
How, and which way I may beſtow my ſelfe
To be regarded in her ſun-bright eye.
Val. Win her with gifts, if ſhe reſpect not words,
Dumbe Iewels often in their ſilent kinde
More then quicke words, doe moue a womans minde.
Duk. But ſhe did ſcorne a preſent that I ſent her,
Val. A woman ſometime ſcorns what beſt contents her.
Send her another, neuer giue her o're,
For ſcorne at firſt, makes after-loue the more.
If ſhe doe frowne, 'tis not in hate of you,
But rather to beget more loue in you.
If ſhe doe chide, 'tis not to haue you gone,
For why, the fooles are mad, if left alone.
Take no repulſe, whatſoeuer ſhe doth ſay,
For, get you gone, ſhe doth not meane away.
Flatter, and praiſe, commend, extoll their graces:
Though ne're ſo blacke, ſay they haue Angells faces,
That man that hath a tongue, I ſay is no man,
If with his tongue he cannot win a woman.
Duk. But ſhe I meane, is promis'd by her friends
Vnto a youthfull Gentleman of worth,
And kept ſecurely from reſort of men,
That no man hath acceſſe by day to her.
Val. Why then I would reſort to her by night.
Duk. I, but the doores be lockt, and keyes kept ſafe,
That no man hath recourſe to her by night.
Val. What lets but one may enter at her window
Duk. Her chamber is aloft, far from the ground,
And built ſo ſheluing, that one cannot climbe it
Without apparant hazard of his life.
Val. Why then a Ladder quaintly made of Cords
To caſt vp, with a paire of anchoring hookes,
Would ſerue to ſcale another Hero's towre,
So bold Leander would aduenture it.
Duk. Now as thou art a Gentleman of blood
Aduiſe me, where I may haue ſuch a Ladder.
Val. When would you vſe it? pray ſir, tell me that.
Duk. This very night; for Loue is like a child
That longs for euery thing that he can come by.
Val. By ſeuen a clock, ile get you ſuch a Ladder.
Duk. But harke thee: I will goe to her alone,
How ſhall I beſt conuey the Ladder thither?
Val. It will be light (my Lord) that you may beare it
Vnder a cloake, that is of any length.
Duk. A cloake as long as thine will ſerue the turne?
Val. I my good Lord.
Duk. Then let me ſee thy cloake,
Ile get me one of ſuch another length.
Val. Why any cloake will ſerue the turne, my Lord.
Duk. How ſhall I faſhion me to weare a cloake?
I pray thee let me ſee thy cloake vpon me.
What Letter is this ſame? what's here? To Siluia?
And here an Engine fit for my proceeding?
Ile be ſo bold to breake the ſeale forſooth.

Sylu. What ho, ſeruant?
And here they come to me, that I ſtand thus.
Oh, could their Maſter come, and go as well,
Home to his Seruants, friends, and Countrey they are bound.
As Heralds, Thoughts, with ſpeede to their deſired home,
Leſt I (their hope) that thither them importune
Do curſe the grace that with ſuch grace hath bleſt them,
Becauſe my ſelfe do want my ſeruants fortune.
I curſe my ſelfe, for they are ſent by me,
That they ſhould harbour where their Lord ſhould be.

What's here? Siluia, this night I will enfranchiſe thee.
'Tis ſo: and here's the Ladder for the purpoſe.
Why Phaeton (for thou art Merops ſonne)
Wilt thou aſpire to guide the heauenly Carre?
And with thy daring folly burne the world?
Wilt thou reach ſtars, becauſe they ſhine on thee?

Goe base Intruder, ouer-weening Slaue,
bestow thy fawning smiles on equall mates,
And thinke my patience, (more then thy desert)
Is priuiledge for thy departure hence.
Thanke me for this, more then for all the fauors
Which (all too-much) I haue bestowed on thee.
But if thou linger in my Territories
Longer then swiftest expedition
Will giue thee time to leaue our royall Court,
By heauen, my wrath shall farre exceed the loue
I euer bore my daughter, or thy selfe.
Be gone, I will not heare thy vaine excuse,
But as thou lou'st thy life, make speed from hence.
Val. And why not death, rather then liuing torment?
To die is to be banish'd from my selfe,
And Siluia is my selfe: banish'd from her
Is selfe from selfe. A deadly banishment:
What light, is light, if Siluia be not seene?
What ioy, is ioy, if Siluia be not by?
Vnlesse it be to thinke that she is by
And feed vpon the shadow of perfection.
Except I be by Siluia in the night,
There is no musicke in the Nightingale.
Vnlesse I looke on Siluia in the day,
There is no day for me to looke vpon.
Shee is my essence, and I leaue to be;
If I be not by her fayre influence
Foster'd, illumin'd, cherish'd, kept aliue.
I flie not death, to flie his deadly doome,
Tarry I heere, I but attend on death,
But flie I hence, I flie away from life.
Pro. Run after him, man, and fetch him out.
Lan. So ho, soft, sir, soft, soft ——
Pro. What seest thou
Lan. Him we goe to finde,
There's not a haire on's head, but 'tis a Valentine
Pro. Valentine?
Val. No
Pro. Who then? his Spirit?
Val. Neither.
Pro. What then?
Val. Nothing.
Lan. Can nothing speake? Master, shall I strike?
Pro. Whom wouldst thou strike?
Lan. Nothing.
Pro. Vnname, forbeare.
Lan. Why Sir, I'le strike nothing: I pray you.
Pro. Sirra, I say forbeare: friend Valentine, a word.
Lan. My eares are stopt, & cannot hear good newes,
So much of bad already hath possest them.
Pro. Then in dumbe silence will I bury mine,
For they are harsh, vntuneable, and bad.
Val. Is Siluia dead?
Pro. No, Valentine
Val. No Valentine, indeed, for sacred Siluia,
Hath she forsworne me?
Pro. No, Valentine.
Val. No Valentine, if Siluia haue forsworne me.
What is your newes?
Lan. Sir, there is a proclamation, y'are vanish'd.
Pro. That thou art banish'd: oh that's the newes,
From hence, from Siluia, and from me thy friend.
Val. Oh, I haue fed vpon this woe already,
And now excesse of it will make me surfet.
Doth Siluia know that I am banish'd?
Pro. I, I, and she hath offered to the doome
(Which vn-reuerst stands in effectuall force)
A Sea of melting pearle, which some call teares;
Those at her fathers churlish feete she tendred,
With them vpon her knees, her humble selfe,
Wringing her hands, whose whitenes so became them,
As if but now they waxed pale for woe:
But neither bended knees, pure hands held vp,
Sad sighes, deepe grones, nor siluer-shedding teares
Could penetrate her vncompassionate Sire;
But Valentine, if he be tane, must die.
Besides, her intercession chaf'd him so,
When she for thy repeale was suppliant,
That to close prison he commanded her,
With many bitter threats of biding there.
Val. No more: vnles the next word that thou speak'st
Haue some malignant power vpon my life:
If so, I pray thee breath it in mine eare,
As ending Antheme of my endlesse dolor.
Pro. Cease to lament for that thou canst not helpe,
And study helpe for that which thou lament'st.
Time is the Nurse, and breeder of all good;
Hope, if this may not stay, thou canst not see thy loue:
Time, if this staying will abridge thy life:
Hope is a louers staffe, walke hence with that
And manage it against despairing thoughts:
Thy letters may be here, though thou are hence,
Which, being writ to me, shall be deliuer'd
Euen in the milke-white bosome of thy Loue.
The time now serues not to expostulate,
Come, I'le conuey thee through the City-gate,
And ere I part with thee, confer at large
Of all that may concerne thy Loue-affaires.
As thou lou'st Siluia (though not for thy selfe)
Regard thy danger, and along with me.
Val. I pray thee Launce, and if thou seest my Boy
Bid him make haste, and meet me at the North-gate.
Pro. Goe sirra, finde him out: Come Valentine.
Val. Oh my deere Siluia; hapelesse Valentine.
Launce. I am but a foole, looke you, and yet I haue the wit to think my Master is a kinde of a knaue: but that's all one, if he be but one knaue: He liues not now that knowes me to be but one, yet I am in loue, but a Louer he thinkes not: I care not for that neyther, because I loue crabbes: well, yet I haue gone well in my loue

Sp. Marry, the son of my Grand-father.

La. O illiterate loyterer, it was the sonne of thy Grand-mother: this proues that thou canst not read.

Sp. Come foole, come: try me in thy paper.

La. There: and S. Nicholas be thy speed.

Sp. Inprimis she can milke.

La. I that she can.

Sp. Item, she brewes good Ale.

La. And thereof comes the prouerbe. (Blessing of your heart, you brew good Ale)

Sp. Item, she can sowe

La. That's as much as to say (Can she so?)

Sp. Item she can knit.

La. What need a man care for a stock with a wench, When she can knit him a stocke

Sp. Item, she can wash and scoure.

La. A speciall vertue: for then we need not be washt, and scowr'd.

Sp. Item, she can spin.

La. Then may I set the world on wheeles, when she can spin for her liuing.

Sp. Item, she hath many nameles vertues.

La. That's as much as to say bastard vertues: that indeede know not their fathers; and therefore haue no names.

Sp. Here follow her vices.

La. Close at the elbowe.

Sp. Item, she is not to be spoken in respect of her breath.

La. Well: that fault may be mended with a breakfast: read on.

Sp. Item, she hath a sweet mouth.

La. That makes amends for her sowre breath.

Sp. Item, she doth talke in her sleepe.

La. It's no matter for that; so she sleepe not in her talke.

Sp. Item, she is slow in words.

La. O villaine, that set this downe among her vices; To be slow in words, is a womans onely vertue I pray thee out with't, and place it for her chiefe vertue

Sp. Item, she is proud.

La. Out with that too: It was Eues legacie, and cannot be ta'ne from her.

Sp. Item, she hath no teeth.

La. I care not for that neither: because I loue crusts.

Sp. Item, she is curst.

La. Well: the best is, she hath no teeth to bite.

Sp. Item, she will often praise her liquor.

La. If her Liquor be good, she shall: if she will not, I will; for good things should be praised.

Sp. Item, she is too liberall.

La. Of her tongue she cannot, for that's writ downe she is slow of: of her purse she shewes, for that we'll keepe shut: Now of another thing she may, and that cannot I keepe. Well proceede.

Sp. Item, she hath more hayre then wit, and more faults then hayres, and more wealth then faults.

La. Stop there, I'le haue her: she was mine, and not mine, twice or thrice in that last Article: rehearse that once more.

Sp. Item, she hath more hayre then wit.

La. More hayre then wit: it may be ile proue it: The couer of the salt, hides the salt, and therefore it is more then the salt; the hayre that couers the wit, is more then the wit; for the greater hides the lesse: What's next?

Sp. And more faults then hayres.

La. That's monstrous: O that that were out.

Sp. And more wealth then faults.

La. Why that word makes the rest gracious. Well, I'le haue her: and if it be a match, as nothing is impossible.

Sp. What then

La. Why then, will I tell thee, that thy Master staies for thee at North-gate.

Sp. For me?

La. For thee? I, who art thou? he hath staid for a better man then thee.

Sp. And must I go to him?

La. Thou must run to him, for thou hast staid so long, that going will scarce serue the turne.

Sp. Why couldst not tell me so sooner? 'pox on your loue Letters.

La. Now will he be swinged for reading my Letter. An vnmannerly slaue, that will thrust himselfe into secrets: Ile after, to reioyce in the boyes correction. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Duke, Tharia, Protheus

Du. Sir Thurio, feare not but that she will loue you Now I am come a hunting here my selfe.

Th. Since once she hath denyed me first, Fo[r] wooing me, yet can not she abide me most, Least I am determinate to obtaine her.

Iul. This weake impresse of loue is as a figure Trenched in ice, which with an houres heate Dissolues to water, and doth loose his forme. A little time will melt her frozen thoughts, And worthlesse Valentine shall be forgot. How now Protheus, is your countryman According to our Proclamation, gone?

Pro. Gone my good Lord.

Iul. My daughter takes his going grieuously?

Pro. A little time my Lord will kill that griefe.

Du. So I beleeue: but Thurio makes not so. Protheus, the good conceit I hold of thee, (For thou hast shewne some signe of good desert) Makes me the better to confer with thee.

Pro. Longer then I prooue loyall to your Grace, Let me not liue, to looke vpon your Grace.

Du. Thou know'st how willing I would effect The match betweene sir Thurio, and my daughter?

Pro. I doe my Lord.

Du. And also I thinke, thou art not ignorant How she opposes her against my will.

Pro. She did my Lord, when Valentine was here.

Du. I, and perseuers to, for euer so. What might we doe to make the girle forget The loue of Valentine, and loue Sir Thurio?

Pro. The best way is to slander Valentine, With falshood, cowardize, and poore discent: Three things, that women highly hold in hate.

Du. I, but she'll think that it is spoke in hate.

Pro. I, if his enemy deliuer it. Therefore it must with circumstance be spoken By one, whom she esteemeth as his friend.

Du. Then you must vndertake to slander him.

Pro.

Pro. And that my Lord I shall be loath to doe:
'Tis an ill office for a Gentleman,
Especially against his very friend.
Du. Where your good word cannot advantage him,
Your slander never can endamage him;
Therefore the office is indifferent,
Being intreated to it by your friend.
Pro. You haue prevayled (my Lord) if I can doe it
By ought that I can speake in his dispraise,
She shall not long continue loue to him.
But say this weede her loue from Valentine,
It followes not that she will loue Thurio.
Th. Therefore as you vnwinde her loue from him;
Least it should ravell, and be good to none,
You must prouide to bottome it on me.
Which must be done, by praising me as much
As in your worth Captaine of her heart.
Du. And, Protheus, we dare trust you in this kinde,
Because we know (on Valentines report)
You are already Loues firme votary,
And cannot soone revolt, and change your mind.
Vpon this warrant, shall you haue access,
Where you with Thurio may contend at large
For her in dumpish, weake disabled wise.
And for your friends sake will be glad of you,
Where you may temper her by your perswasion,
To hate young Valentine, and loue my friend.
Pro. As much as I can doe, I will effect:
But you (sir Thurio, are not sharpe enough)
You must lay lime, to tangle her desires
By wailefull Sonnets, whose composed rimes
Should be full fraught with seruiceable vowes.
Du. I, much is the force of heauen-bred Poesie.
Pro. Say that vpon the altar of her beauty
You sacrifice your teares, your sighes, your heart:
Write till your inke be dry: and with your teares
Moist it againe: and frame some feeling line,
That may discouer such integrity:
For Orpheus Lute, was strung with Poets sinewes,
Whose golden touch could soften steele and stones;
Make Tygers tame, and huge Leuiathans
Forsake vnsounded deepes, to dance on Sands.
After your dire-lamenting Elegies,
Visit by night your Ladies chamber-window
With some sweet Consort: To their instruments
Tune a deploring dumpe: the night's dead silence
Will well become such sweet complaining grieuance.
This, or else nothing, will inherit her.
Du. This discipline shewes thou hast been in loue.
Th. And thy aduice this night, ile put in practise:
Therefore, sweet Protheus, my direction-giuer,
Let vs into the City presently
To sort some Gentlemen, well skill'd in Musicke.
I haue a Sonnet, that will serue the turne
To gratifie the good acceptance.
Du. About it Gentlemen.
Pro. We'll wait vpon your Grace, till after Supper,
And afterward determine our proceedings.
Du. Euen now about it, I will pardon you. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Valentine, Speed, and certaine Out-lawes.
1. Out-l. Fellowes, stand fast: I see a passenger.
2. Out. If there be ten, shrinke not, but down with 'em.
3. Out. Stand sir, and throw vs that you haue about ye.
If not: we'll make you sit, and rifle you.
Sp. Sir we are vndone; these are the Villaines
That all the Trauailers doe feare so much.
Val. My friends.
1 Out. That's not so, sir: we are your enemies.
2. Out. Peace: we'll heare him.
3. Out. I by my beard will we: for he is a proper man.
Val. Then know that I haue little wealth to loose;
A man I am, crost with aduersitie:
My riches, are these poore habiliments,
Of which, if you should here disfurnish me,
You take the sum and substance that I haue.
2. Out. Whether trauell you?
Val. To Verona.
1. Out. Whence came you?
Val. From Millaine.
3. Out. Haue you long soiourn'd there? (Said,
Val. Some sixteene moneths, and longer might haue
If crooked fortune had not thwarted me.
1. Out. What, were you banish'd thence?
Val. I was.
2 Out. For what offence?
Val. For that which now torments me to rehearse;
I kill'd a man, whose death I much repent,
But yet I slew him manfully, in fight,
Without false vantage, or base treachery.
1 Out. Why ne're repent it, if it were done so;
But were you banish'd for so small a fault?
Val. I was, and held me glad of such a doome.
2 Out. Haue you the Tongues?
Val. My youthfull trauaile, therein made me happy,
Or else I often had beene often miserable.
3 Out. By the bare scalpe of Robin Hoods fat Fryer,
This fellow were a King, for our wilde faction.
1. Out. We'll haue him: Sirs, a word.
Sp. Master, be one of them.
It's an honourable kinde of theeuery.
Val. Peace villaine.
2. Out. Tell vs this: haue you any thing to take to?
Val. Nothing but my fortune.
3. Out. Know then, that some of vs are Gentlemen,
Such as the fury of vngouern'd youth
Thrust from the company of awfull men.
My selfe was from Verona banished,
For practising to steale away a Lady,
And heire and Neece, allide vnto the Duke.
2. Out. And I from Mantua, for a Gentleman,
Who, in my moode, I stab'd vnto the heart.
1. Out. And I, for such like petty crimes as these.
But to the purpose: for we cite our faults,
That they may hold excus'd our lawlesse liues;
And partly seeing you are beautified
With goodly shape; and by your owne report,
A Linguist, and a man of such perfection,
As we doe in our quality much want.
2. Out. Indeede because you are a banish'd man,
Therefore, aboue the rest, we parley to you:
Are you content to be our Generall?
To make a vertue of necessity,
And liue as we doe in this wildernesse?
3. Out. What saist thou? wilt thou be of our consort?
Say I, and be the captaine of vs all:
We'll doe thee homage, and be rul'd by thee,
Loue thee, as our Commander, and our King.

1. Out.

1. Out. But if thou ſcorne our curteſie, thou dyeſt.
2. Out. Thou ſhalt not liue, to brag what we haue of-
Val. I take your offer, and will liue with you, (fer d.
Prouided that you do no outrages
On ſilly women, or poore paſſengers.
3. Out. No, we deteſt ſuch vile baſe practiſes.
Come, goe with vs, we'll bring thee to our Crewes,
And ſhow thee all the Treaſure we haue got;
Which, with our ſelues, all reſt at thy diſpoſe. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Protheus, Thurio, Iulia, Hoſt, Muſitian, Siluia.

Pro. Already haue I bin falſe to Valentine,
And now I muſt be as vnioſt to Thurio,
Vnder the colour of commending him,
I haue acceſſe my owne loue to prefer.
But Siluia is too faire, too true, too holy,
To be corrupted with my worthleſſe guifts;
When I protect true loyalty to her,
She twits me with my falſehood to my friend;
When to her beauty I commend my vowes,
She bids me thinke how I haue bin forſworne
In breaking faith with Iulia, whom I lou'd;
And notwithſtanding all her ſodaine quips,
The leaſt whereof would quell a louers hope
Yet (Spaniel-like) the more ſhe ſpurnes my loue,
The more it growes, and fawneth on her ſtil,
But here comes Thurio; now muſt we to her window,
And giue ſome euening Muſique to her eare.
Th. How now, ſir Protheus, are you crept before vs?
Pro. I gentle Thurio, for you know that loue
Will creepe in ſeruice, where it cannot goe.
Th. I, but I hope, Sir, that you loue not here.
Pro. Sir, but I doe: or elſe I would be hence.
Th. Who, Siluia?
Pro. I, Siluia, for your ſake.
Th. I thanke you for your owne: Now Gentlemen
Let's tune, and to it luſtily a while.
Ho. Now, my yong gueſt; me thinks your' allycholly;
I pray you why is it?
Iu. Marry (mine Hoſt) becauſe I cannot be merry.
Ho. Come, we'll haue you merry: ile bring you where you ſhall heare Muſique, and ſee the Gentleman that you ask'd for.
Iu. But ſhall I heare him ſpeake.
Ho. I that you ſhall.
Iu. That will be Muſique.
Ho. Harke, harke.
Iu. Is he among theſe?
Ho. I: but peace, let's hoare'm.

Song. Who is Siluia? what is ſhe?
That all our Swaines commend her?
Holy, faire, and wiſe is ſhe,
The heauen ſuch grace did lend her,
that ſhe might admired be.
Is ſhe kinde as ſhe is faire?
For beauty liues with kindneſſe:
Loue doth to her eyes repaire,
To helpe him of his blindneſſe:
And being help'd, inhabits there.
Then to Siluia, let vs ſing,
That Siluia is excelling,
She excels each mortall thing
Vpon the dull earth dwelling,
To her let vs Garlands bring.

Ho. How now? are you ſadder then you were before,
How doe you, man? the Muſicke likes you not.
Iu. You miſtake: the Muſitian likes me not
Ho. Why, my pretty youth?
Iu. He plaies falſe (father)
Ho. How out of tune on the ſtrings.
Iu. Not ſo; but yet
So falſe that he grieues my very heart-ſtrings.
Ho. You haue a quicke eare. (heart
Iu. I, I would I were deafe: it makes me haue a ſlow
Ho. I perceiue you delighte not in Muſique.
Iu. Not a what, when it iarres ſo.
Ho. Harke, what fine change is in the Muſique.
Iu. I: that change is the ſpight.
Ho. You would haue them alwaies play but one thing.
Iu. I would alwaies haue one play but one thing.
But Hoſt, doth this Sir Protheus, that we talke on,
Often reſort vnto this Gentlewoman?
Ho. I tell you what Launce his man told me,
He lou'd her out of all nicke.
Iu. Where is Launce?
Ho. Gone to ſeeke his dog, which to morrow, by his Maſters command, hee muſt carry for a preſent to his Lady.
Iu. Peace, ſtand aſide, the company parts.
Pro. Sir Thurio, feare not you, I will to pleade,
That you ſhall ſay my cunning drift excels.
Th. Where meete we?
Pro. At Saint Gregories well.
Th. Farewell.
Pro. Madam good eu'n to your Lad ſhip.
Sil. I thanke you for your Muſique (Gentlemen)
Who is that that ſpake?
Pro. One (Lady, if you knew his pure hearts truth,
You would quickly learne to know him by his voice.
Sil. Sir Protheus as I take it.
Pro. Sir Protheus (gentle Lady) and your Seruant.
Sil. What's your will?
Pro. That I may compaſſe yours.
Sil. You haue your wiſh; my will is euen this,
That preſently you hie you home to bed
Thou ſubtile, periur'd, falſe, diſloyall man.
Think'ſt thou I am ſo ſhallow, ſo conceitleſſe,
To be ſeduced by thy flattery,
That haſt deceiu'd ſo many with thy vowes?
Returne, returne and make thy loue amends:
For me (by this pale queene of night I ſweare)
I am ſo farre from granting thy requeſt,
That I deſpiſe thee, for thy wrongful ſuite;
And by and by intend to chide my ſelfe,
Euen for this time I ſpend in talking to thee.
Pro. I grant (ſweet loue) that I did loue a Lady,
But ſhe is dead.
Iu. I were falſe, if I ſhould ſpeake it;
For I am ſure ſhe is not buried.
Sil. Say that ſhe be; yet Valentine thy friend
Surniues; to whom (thy ſelfe art witneſſe)
I am betroth'd; and art thou not aſham'd
To wrong him, with thy importunacy?

Pro.

Pro. Likewise heare that Valentine is dead.
Sil. And so suppose am I: for in her grave
Assure thy selfe, my loue is buried.
Pro. Sweet Lady, let me rake it from the earth.
Sil. Goe to thy Ladies graue and call hers thence,
Or at the least, in hers, sepulcher thine.
Iul. He heard not that.
Pro. Madam: if your heart be so obdurate:
Vouchsafe me yet your Picture for my loue,
The Picture that is hanging in your chamber:
To that I'le speake, to that I'le sigh and weepe:
For since the substance of your perfect selfe
Is else deuoted, I am but a shadow,
And to your shadow, will I make true loue.
Iul. If 'twere a substance you would sure deceiue it,
And make it but a shadow, as I am.
Sil. I am very loath to be your Idoll Sir;
But, since your falsehood shall become you well
To worship shadowes, and adore false shapes,
Send to me in the morning, and ile send it:
And so, good rest.
Pro. As wretches haue ore-night
That wait for execution in the morne.
Iul. Host, will you goe?
Ho. By my hallidome, I was fast asleepe.
Iul. Pray you, where lies Sir Protheus?
Ho. Marry, at my house:
Trust me, I thinke 'tis almost day.
Iul. Not so: but it hath bin the longest night
That ere I watch'd, and the most heauiest.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Eglamore, Siluia.

Eg. This is the houre that Madam Silu'a
Entreated me to call, and know her minde:
Tis' some great matter shee'ld employ me in.
Madam, Madam.
Sil. Who cals?
Eg. Your seruant, and your friend;
One that attends your Ladiships command.
Sil. Sir Eglamore, a thousand times good morrow.
Eg. As many (worthy Lady) to your selfe:
According to your Ladiships impose,
I am thus early come, to know what seruice
It is your pleasure to command me in.
Sil. Oh Eglamore thou art a Gentleman (Thinke not I flatter (for I sweare I doe not)
Valiant, wise, remorse-full, well accomplish'd.
Thou art not ignorant what deere good will
I beare vnto the banish'd Valentine:
Nor how my father would enforce me marry
Vaine Thurio (whom my very soule abhorr'd).
Thy selfe hast loued, and I haue heard thee say
No griefe did euer come so neere thy heart,
As when thy Lady, and thy true-loue died,
Vpon whose Graue thou vow'dst pure chastitie:
Sir Eglamore, I would to Valentine
To Mantua where I heare, he makes abode,
And for the wayes are dangerous to passe,
I doe desire thy worthy company,
Vpon whose faith and honor, I repose.
Vrge not my fathers anger (Eglamoure)
But thinke vpon my griefe (a Ladies griefe)
And on the instice of my flying hence,
To keepe me from a most vnholy match,
Which heauen and fortune still rewards with plagues.
I doe desire thee, euen from a heart
As full of sorrowes, as the Sea of sands,
To beare me company, and goe with me:
If not, to hide what I haue said to thee,
That I may venture to depart alone.
Eg. Madam, I pitty much your grieuances,
Which, since I know they vertuously are plac'd,
I giue consent to goe along with you,
Recking as little what betideth me,
As much, I wish all good befortune you.
When will you goe?
Sil. This euening comming.
Eg. Where shall I meete you?
Sil. At Frier Patrickes Cell,
Where I intend holy Confession.
Eg. I will not faile your Ladiship:
Good morrow (gentle Lady.)
Sil. Good morrow, kinde Sir Eglamoure. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Launce, Protheus, Iulia, Siluia.

Lan. When a mans seruant shall play the Curre with him (looke you) it goes hard: one that I brought vp of a puppy: one that I sau'd from drowning, when three or foure of his blinde brothers and sisters went to it: I haue taught him (euen as one would say precisely, thus I would teach a dog) I was sent to deliuer him, as a present to Mistris Silua, from my Master; and I came no sooner into the dyning-chamber, but he steps me to her Trencher, and steales her Capons-leg: O, 'tis a foule thing when a Cur cannot keepe himselfe in all companies: I would haue (as one should say) one that takes vpon him to be a dog indeede, to be, as it were, a dog at all things. If I had not had more wit then he, to take a fault vpon me that he did, I thinke verily hee had bin hang'd for't: sure as I liue he had suffer'd for't: you shall iudge: Hee thrusts me himselfe into the company of three or foure gentleman-like-dogs, vnder the Dukes table: hee had not bin there (blesse the marke) a pissing while, but all the chamber smelt him: out with the dog (saies one) what cur is that (saies another) whip him out (saies the third) hang him vp (saies the Duke.) I hauing bin acquainted with the smell before, knew it was Crab; and goes me to the fellow that whips the dogges: friend (quoth I) you meane to whip the dog: I marry doe I (quoth he) you doe him the more wrong (quoth I) 'twas I did the thing you wot of: he makes me no more adoe, but whips me out of the chamber: how many Masters would doe this for his Seruant? nay, ile be sworne I haue sat in the stockes, for puddings he hath stolne, otherwise he had bin executed: I haue stood on the Pillorie for Geese he hath kil'd, otherwise he had suffered for't: thou think'st not of this now: nay, I remember the tricke you serv'd me, when I tooke my leaue of Madam Silu'a: did not not I bid thee ſtill marke me, and doe as I do; when did'ſt thou ſee me heaue vp my leg, and make water againſt a Gentlewomans farthingale? did'ſt thou euer ſee me doe ſuch a tricke?

Pro. Sebaſtian is thy name: I like thee well,
And will employ thee in ſome ſeruice preſently.

Iu. In what you pleaſe, ile doe what I can.

Pro. I hope thou wilt.
How now you whor-ſon peazant,
Where haue you bin theſe two dayes loytering?

La. Marry Sir; I carried Miſtris Siluia the dogge you bad me.

Pro. And what ſaies ſhe to my little Iewell?

La. Marry ſhe ſaies your dog was a cur, and tels you currish thanks is good enough for ſuch a preſent.

Pro. But ſhe receiu'd my dog?

La. No indeede did ſhe not: Here haue I brought him backe againe.

Pro. What, didſt thou offer her this from me?

La. I Sir, the other Squirrill was ſtolne from me By the Hangmans boyes in the market place, And then I offer'd her mine owne, who is a dog As big as ten of yours, & therefore the guift the greater.

Pro. Goe, get thee hence, and finde my dog againe, Or nere return againe into my ſight.
Away, I ſay: ſtayeſt thou to vexe me here?
A Slaue, that ſtill an end, turnes me to ſhame
Sebaſtian, I haue entertained thee,
Partly that I haue need of ſuch a youth,
That can with ſome diſcretion doe my buſineſſe:
For 'tis no truſting to yond foolish Lowt;
But chiefely, for thy face, and thy behauiour,
Which (if my Augury deceiue me not)
Witneſſe good bringing vp, fortune, and truth:
Therefore know thee, for this I entertaine thee.
Go preſently, and take this Ring with thee,
Deliuer it to Madam Siluia;
She lou'd me well, deliuer'd it to me.

Iul. It ſeemes you lou'd not her, not to know her token:
She is dead belike?

Pro. Not ſo: I thinke ſhe liues.

Iul. Alas.

Pro. Why do'ſt thou cry alas?

Iul. I cannot chooſe but pitty her.

Pro. Wherefore ſhould'ſt thou pitty her?

Iul. Because, meth inkes that ſhe lou'd you as well
As you doe loue your Lady Siluia:
She dreames on him, that has forgot her loue,
You doate on her, that cares not for your loue.
'Tis pitty Loue, ſhould be ſo contrary:
And thinking on it, makes me cry alas.

Pro. Well: giue her that Ring and therewithall
This Letter: that's her chamber: Tell my Lady,
I claime the promiſe for her heauenly Picture:
Your meſſage done, hye home vnto my chamber,
Where thou ſhalt finde me ſad, and ſolitarie.

Iul. How many women would doe ſuch a meſſage?
Alas poore Protheus, thou haſt entertain'd
A Foxe, to be the Shepheard of thy Lambs;
Alas, poore foole, why doe I pitty him
That with his very heart, deſpiſeth me?
Becauſe he loues her, he deſpiſeth me,
Becauſe I loue him, I muſt pitty him.
This Ring I gaue him, when he parted from me,
To binde him to remember my good will
And now am I (vnhappy Meſſenger)
To plead for that, which I would not obtaine,
To carry that, which I would haue refus'd;
To praiſe his faith, which I would haue diſpraiſ'd.
I am my Maſters true confirmed Loue,
But cannot be true ſeruant to my Maſter,
Vnleſſe I proue falſe traitor to my ſelfe.
Yet will I woe for him, but yet ſo coldly,
As (heauen it knowes) I would not haue him ſpeed.
Gentlewoman, good day. I pray you be my meane
To bring me where to ſpeake with Madam Siluia.

Sil. What would you with her, if that I be ſhe?

Iul. If you be ſhe, I doe intreat your patience
To heare me ſpeake the meſſage I am ſent on.

Sil. From whom?

Iul. From my Maſter, Sir Protheus, Madam.

Sil. O: he ſends you for a Picture?

Iul. I, Madam.

Sil. Vrſula, bring my Picture there,
Goe, giue your Maſter this: tell him from me,
One Iulia, that his changing thoughts forget
Would better fit his Chamber, then this Shadow.

Iul. Madam, pleaſe you peruſe this Letter;
Pardon me (Madam) I haue vnaduis'd
Deliuer'd you a paper that I ſhould not;
This is the Letter to your Ladiſhip.

Sil. I pray thee let me looke on that againe.

Iul. It may not be: good Madam pardon me.

Sil. There, hold
I will not looke vpon your Maſters lines.
I know they are ſtuft with proteſtations,
And full of new-found oathes, which he will breake
As eaſily as I doe teare his paper.

Iul. Madam, he ſends your Ladſhip this Ring.

Sil. The more ſhame for him, that he ſends it me;
For I haue heard him ſay a thouſand times,
His Iulia gaue it him, at his departure.
Though his falſe finger haue prophan'd the Ring,
Mine ſhall not doe his Iulia ſo much wrong.

Iul. She thankes you.

Sil. What ſai'ſt thou?

Iul. I thanke you Madam, that you tender her:
Poore Gentlewoman, my Maſter wrongs her much.

Sil. Do'ſt thou know her?

Iul. Almoſt as well as I doe know my ſelfe.
To thinke vpon her woes, I doe proteſt
That I haue wept a hundred ſeuerall times.

Sil. Belike ſhe thinks that Protheus hath forſook her?

Iul. I thinke ſhe doth: and that's her cauſe of ſorrow.

Sil. Is ſhe not paſſing faire?

Iul. She hath bin fairer (Madam) then ſhe is,
When ſhe did thinke my Maſter lou'd her well;
She, in my iudgement, was as faire as you.
But ſince ſhe did neglect her looking glaſſe,
And threw her Sun-expelling Maſque away,
The ayre hath ſtaru'd the roſes in her cheekes,
And pinch'd the lilly-tincture of her face,
That now ſhe is become as blacke as I.

Sil. How tall was ſhe?

Iul. About my ſtature: for at Pentecoſt,
When all our Pageants of delight were plaid,
Our youth got me to play the womans part,
And I was trim'd in Madam Iulia gowne,
Which ſerued me as fit, by all mens iudgements,
As if the garment had bin made for me.
Therefore I know ſhe is about my height,
And at that time I made her weepe a good,

For I did play a lamentable part.
(Madam, 'twas Ariadne, paſſioning
For Theſeus periury, and vniuſt flight;
Which I to make it acted with my teares:
That my poore Mistris moued therewithall,
Wept bitterly: and would I might be dead,
If I in thought felt not her very ſorrow.
Sil. She is beholding to thee (gentle youth)
Alas (poore Lady, deſolate, and left,
I weepe my teate to thinke vpon thy words:
Here youth, there is my purſe; I giue thee this (well.
For thy ſweet Mistris ſake, becauſe thou lou'ſt her. Fare-
Iul. And ſhe ſhall thanke you for't, if ere you know
A vertuous gentlewoman, milde, and beautifull. (her.
I hope my Masters ſuit will be but cold,
Since ſhe reſpects my Mistris loue ſo much.
Alas, how loue can trifle with it ſelfe:
Here is her Picture: let me ſee, I thinke
If I had ſuch a Tyre, this face of mine
Were full as louely, as is this of hers;
And yet the Painter flatter'd her a little,
Vnleſſe I flatter with my ſelfe too much.
Her haire is Aburne, mine is perfect Yellow;
If that be all the difference in his loue,
Ile get me ſuch a couloured Perrywig:
Her eyes are grey as glaſſe, and ſo are mine:
I, but her fore-head's low, and mine's as high.
What ſhould it be that he reſpects in her,
But I can make reſpectiue in my ſelfe?
If this fond Loue, were not a blinded god.
Come ſhadow, come, and take this ſhadow vp,
For 'tis thy riuall: O thou ſenceleſſe forme,
Thou ſhalt be worſhip'd, kiſs'd, lou'd, and ador'd;
And were there ſence in his Idolatry,
My ſubſtance ſhould be ſtatue in thy ſtead.
Ile vſe thee kindly, for thy Mistris ſake
That vs'd me ſo: or elſe by Ioue, I vow,
I ſhould haue ſcratch'd out your vnſeeing eyes,
To make my Master out of loue with thee. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Eglamoure. Siluia.

Egl. The Sun begins to guild the weſterne ſkie,
And now it is about the very houre
That Siluia at Fryer Patricks Cell ſhould meet me,
She will not faile, for Louers breake not houres,
Vnleſſe it be to come before their time,
So much they ſpur their expedition.
See where ſhe comes. Lady a happy euening.
Sil. Amen, Amen. goe on (good Eglamoure)
Out at the Poſterne by the Abbey wall;
I feare I am attended by ſome Spies.
Egl. Feare not: the Forreſt is not three leagues off,
If we recouer that, we are ſure enough. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Thurio, Protheus, Iulia, Duke.

Th. Sir Protheus, what ſaies Siluia to my ſuit?
Pro. Oh Sir, I finde her milder then ſhe was,
And yet ſhe takes exceptions at your perſon.
Thu. What? that my leg is too long?
Pro. No, that it is too little. (der.
Thu. Ile weare a Boote, to make it ſomewhat rou-
Pro. But loue will not be ſpurd to what it loathes.
Thu. What ſaies ſhe to my face?
Pro. She ſaies it is a faire one.
Thu. Nay then the wanton lyes: my face is blacke.
Pro. But Pearles are faire; and the old ſaying is,
Blacke men are Pearles, in beauteous Ladies eyes.
Thu. 'Tis true, ſuch Pearles as put out Ladies eyes,
For I had rather winke, then looke on them.
Thu. How likes ſhe my diſcourſe?
Pro. Ill, when you talke of war.
Thu. But well, when I diſcourſe of loue and peace.
Iul. But better indeede, when you hold you peace.
Thu. What ſayes ſhe to my valour?
Pro. Oh Sir, ſhe makes no doubt of that.
Iul. She needes not, when ſhe knowes it cowardize.
Thu. What ſaies ſhe to my birth?
Pro. That you are well deriu'd.
Iul. True: from a Gentleman, to a foole.
Thu. Conſiders ſhe my Poſſeſſions?
Pro. Oh, I: and pitties them.
Thu. Wherefore?
Iul. That ſuch an Aſſe ſhould owe them.
Pro. That they are out by Leaſe.
Iul. Here comes the Duke.
Du. How now ſir Protheus; how now Thurio?
Which of you ſaw Eglamoure of late?
Thu. Not I.
Pro. Not I.
Du. Saw you my daughter?
Pro. Neither.
Du. Why then
She's fled vnto that peaſant, Valentine;
And Eglamoure is in her Company:
'Tis true: for Frier Laurence met them both
As he, in pennance wander'd through the Forreſt:
Him he knew well: and gueſs'd that it was ſhe,
But being maſk'd, he was not ſure of it.
Beſides ſhe did intend Confeſſion
At Patricks Cell this euen, and there ſhe was not.
Theſe likelihoods confirme her flight from hence;
Therefore I pray you ſtand, not to diſcourſe,
But mount you preſently, and meete with me
Vpon the riſing of the Mountaine foote
That leads toward Mantua, whether they are fled:
Diſpatch (ſweet Gentlemen) and follow me.
Thu. Why this it is, to be a peeuiſh Girle,
That flies her fortune when it followes her:
Ile after; more to be reueng'd on Eglamoure,
Then for the loue of reck-leſſe Siluia.
Pro. And I will follow, more for Siluia loue
Then hate of Eglamoure that goes with her.
Iul. And I will follow, more to croſſe that loue
Then hate for Siluia, that is gone for loue. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Siluia, Out-Lawes.
1. Out. Come, come be patient:

We

We must bring you to our Captaine.
Sil. A thousand more mischances then this one
Haue learn'd me how to brooke this patiently.
2 Out. Come, bring her away.
1 Out. Where is the Gentleman that was with her?
3 Out. Being nimble footed, he hath out-run vs.
But Moyses and Valerius follow him:
Goe thou with her to the West end of the wood,
There is our Captaine: We'll follow him that's fled,
The Thicket is beset, he cannot scape.
1 Out. Come, I must bring you to our Captains caue.
Feare not: he beares an honourable minde,
And will not vse a woman lawlesly.
Sil. O Valentine: this I endure for thee.

Exeunt.

Scœna Quarta.

Enter Valentine, Protheus, Silvia, Iulia, Duke, Thurio, Out lawes.

Val. How vse doth breed a habit in a man?
This shadowy desart, vnfrequented woods
I better brooke then flourishing peopled Townes:
Here can I sit alone, vnseene of any,
And to the Nightingales complaining Notes
Tune my distresses, and record my woes.
O thou that dost inhabit in my brest,
Leaue not the Mansion so long Tenantlesse,
Lest growing ruinous, the building fall,
And leaue no memory of what it was.
Repaire me, with thy presence, Silvia.
Thou gentle Nimph, cherish thy forlorne swaine.
What hallowing, and what stir is this to day?
These are my mates, that make their wills their Law,
Haue some vnhappy passenger in chace:
They loue me well: yet I haue much to doe
To keepe them from vncivill outrages.
Withdraw thee Valentine: who's this comes heere?
Pro. Madam this service I haue done for you
(Though you respect not aught your seruant doth)
To hazard life, and rescue you from him,
That would haue forc'd your honour, and your loue,
Vouchsafe me for my meed, but one faire looke:
(A smaller boone then this I cannot beg,
And lesse then this, I am sure you cannot giue.)
Val. How like a dreame is this? I see, and heare:
Loue, lend me patience to forbeare a while.
Sil. O miserable, vnhappy that I am.
Pro. Vnhappy were you (Madam) ere I came:
But by my coming, I haue made you happy.
Sil. By thy approach thou mak'st me most vnhappy.
Iul. And me, when he approcheth to your presence.
Sil. Had I beene seazed by a hungry Lion,
I would haue beene a breake-fast to the Beast,
Rather then haue false Protheus rescue me:
Oh heauen be iudge how I loue Valentine,
Whose life's as tender to me as my soule,
And full as much (for more there cannot be)
I doe detest false periur'd Protheus:
Therefore be gone, solicit me no more.
Pro. What dangerous action, stood it next to death
Would I not vndergoe, for one calme looke?
Oh 'tis the curse in Loue, and still approu'd
When women cannot loue, where they're belou'd.
Sil. When Protheus cannot loue, where he's belou'd.
Read ouer Iulia's heart, (thy first best Loue)
For whose deare sake, thou didst then rend thy faith
Into a thousand oathes; and all those oathes,
Descended into periury, to loue me,
Thou hast no faith left now, vnlesse thou'dst two,
And that's farre worse then none: better haue none
Then plurall faith, which is too much by one:
Thou Counterfeyt, to thy true friend.
Pro. In Loue,
Who respects friend?
Sil. All men but Protheus.
Pro. Nay, if the gentle spirit of moving words
Can no way change you to a milder forme,
Ile woo you like a Souldier, at armes end,
And loue you 'gainst the nature of Loue: force ye.
Sil. Oh heauen.
Pro. Ile force thee yeeld to my desire.
Val. Ruffian: let goe that rude vncivill touch,
Thou friend of an ill fashion.
Pro. Valentine.
Val. Thou cõmon friend, that's without faith or loue,
For such is a friend now: treacherous man,
Thou hast beguil'd my hopes; nought but mine eye
Could haue perswaded me: now I dare not say
I haue one friend aliue; thou would'st disproue me:
Who should be trusted, when one's right hand
Is periured to the bosome? Protheus
I am sorry I must never trust thee more,
But count the world a stranger for thy sake:
The priuate wound is deepest: oh time, most accurst:
'Mongst all foes that a friend should be the worst?
Pro. My shame and guilt confounds me:
Forgiue me Valentine: if hearty sorrow
Be a sufficient Ransome for offence,
I tender't heere: I doe as truely suffer,
As ere I did commit.
Val. Then I am paid:
And once againe, I doe receiue thee honest;
Who by Repentance is not satisfied,
Is nor of heauen, nor earth; for these are pleas'd.
By Penitence th'Eternalls wrath's appeas'd:
And that my loue may appeare plaine and free,
All that was mine, in Silvia, I giue thee.
Iul. Oh me vnhappy.
Pro. I poke to the Boy.
Val. Why, Boy!
Why wag how now? what's the matter? look vp: speak.
Iul. O good sir, my master charg'd me to deliuer a ring to Madam Silvia: which (out of my neglect) was neuer done.
Pro. Where is that ring? boy?
Iul. Heere 'tis: this is it.
Pro. How? let me see.
Why this is the ring I gaue to Iulia.
Iul. Oh, cry you mercy sir, I haue mistooke:
This is the ring you sent to Silvia.
Pro. But how cam'st thou by this ring? at my depart
I gaue this vnto Iulia.
Iul. And Iulia her selfe did giue it me,
And Iulia her selfe hath brought it hither.
Pro. How? Iulia?
Iul. Behold her, that gaue aime to all thy oathes,
And entertain'd 'em deepely in her heart.
How oft hast thou with periury cleft the roote?
Oh Protheus, let this habit make thee blush.

Be thou asham'd that I haue tooke vpon me,
Such an immodest rayment; if shame liue
In a disguise of loue?
It is the lesser blot modesty findes,
Women to change their shapes, then men their minds.
Pro. Then men their minds? 'tis true: oh heauen, were man
But Constant, he were perfect; that one error
Fils him with faults: makes him run through all th'sins;
Inconstancy falls-off, ere it begins:
What is in Siluia's face, but I may spie
More fresh in Iulia's, with a constant eye?
Val. Come, come: a hand from either:
Let me be blest to make this happy close:
'Twere pitty two such friends should be long foes.
Pro. Beare witnes (heauen) I haue my wish for euer.
Iul. And I mine.
Out-l. A prize: a prize; a prize.
Val. Forbeare, forbeare I say: It is my Lord the Duke.
Your Grace is welcome to a man disgrac'd,
Banished Valentine.
Duke. Sir Valentine?
Thu. Yonder is Siluia: and Siluia's mine.
Val. Thurio giue backe; or else embrace thy dead:
Come not within the measure of my wrath:
Doe not name Siluia thine: if once againe,
Verona shall not hold thee: heere she stands,
Take but possession of her, with a Touch:
I dare thee, but to breath vpon my Loue.
Thur. Sir Valentine, I care not for her, I
I hold him but a foole that will endanger
His Body, for a Girle that loues him not:
I claime her not, and therefore she is thine.
Duke. The more degenerate and base art thou
To make such meanes for her, as thou hast done,
And leaue her on such slight conditions.
Now, by the honor of my Ancestry,
I doe applaud thy spirit, Valentine,
And thinke thee worthy of an Empresse loue:
Know then, I heere forget all former greefes,
Cancell all grudge, repeale thee home againe,
Plead a new state in thy vn-riual'd merit,
To which I thus subscribe: Sir Valentine,
Thou art a Gentleman, and well deriu'd,
Take thou thy Siluia, for thou hast deseru'd her.
Val. I thank your Grace, y gift hath made me happy:
I now beseech you (for your daughters sake)
To grant one Boone that I shall aske of you.
Duke. I grant it (for thine owne) what ere it be.
Val. These banish'd men, that I haue kept withall,
Are men endu'd with worthy qualities:
Forgiue them what they haue committed here,
And let them be recall'd from their Exile:
They are reformed, ciuill, full of good,
And fit for great employment (worthy Lord.)
Duke. Thou hast preuaild, I pardon them and thee:
Dispose of them, as thou knowst their deserts.
Come, let vs goe, we will include all iarres,
With Triumphes, Mirth, and rare solemnity.
Val. And as we walke along, I dare be bold
With our discourse, to make your Grace to smile.
What thinke you of this Page (my Lord?)
Duke. I thinke the Boy hath grace in him, he blushes.
Val. I warrant you (my Lord) more grace, then Boy.
Duke. What meane you by that saying?
Val. Please you, Ile tell you, as we passe along,
That you will wonder what hath fortuned:
Come Protheus, 'tis your pennance, but to heare
The story of your Loues discouered.
That done, our day of marriage shall be yours,
One Feast, one house, one mutuall happinesse. Exeunt.

THE
Merry Wiues of Windſor.

Actus primus, Scena prima.

Enter Iuſtice Shallow, Slender, Sir Hugh Euans, Maſter Page, Falſtaffe, Bardolph, Nym, Piſtoll, Anne Page, Miſtreſſe Ford, Miſtreſſe Page, Simple.

Shallow.

SIr Hugh, perſwade me not: I will make a Star-Chamber matter of it, if hee were twenty Sir Iohn Falſtaffs, he ſhall not abuſe Robert Shallow Eſquire. (Coram.

Slen. In the County of Glocester, Iuſtice of Peace and

Shal. I (Coſen Slender) and Cuſt-alorum.

Slen. I, and Ratolorum too; and a Gentleman borne (Maſter Perſon) who writes himſelfe Armigero, in any Bill, Warrant, Quittance, or Obligation, Armigero.

Shal. I that I doe, and haue done any time theſe three hundred yeeres.

Slen. All his ſucceſſors (gone before him) hath don't: and all his Anceſtors (that come after him) may: they may giue the dozen white Luces in their Coate.

Shal. It is an olde Coate.

Euans. The dozen white Lowſes doe become an old Coat well: it agrees well paſſant: It is a familiar beaſt to man, and ſignifies Loue.

Shal. The Luſe is the freſh-fiſh, the ſalt-fiſh, is an old Coate.

Slen. I may quarter (Coz).

Shal. You may, by marrying.

Euans. It is marring indeed, if he quarter it.

Shal. Not a whit.

Euan. Yes per-lady: if he has a quarter of your coat, there is but three Skarts for your ſelfe, in my ſimple coniectures: but that is all one: if Sir Iohn Falſtaffe haue committed diſparagements vnto you, I am of the Church, and will be glad to do my beneuolence, to make attonements and compremiſes betweene you.

Shal. The Councell ſhall heare it, it is a Riot.

Euan. It is not meet the Councell heare a Riot: there is no feare of Got in a Riot. The Councell ſhall looke you ſhall deſire to feare the feare of Got, and not to feare a Riot: take your vizaments in that.

Shal. Ha; o'my life, if I were yong againe, the ſword ſhould end it.

Euans. It is petter that friends is the ſword, and end it: and there is alſo another deuice in my prains, which peraduenture prings good diſcretions with it. There is Anne Page, which is daughter to Maſter Thomas Page, which is pretty virginity.

Slen. Miſtreſſe Anne Page? ſhe has browne haire, and ſpeakes ſmall like a woman.

Euans. It is that ferry perſon for all the orld, as iuſt as you will deſire, and ſeuen hundred pounds of Moneyes, and Gold, and Siluer is her Grand-fire vpon his deaths-bed, (Got deliuer to a ioyfull reſurrections) giue, when ſhe is able to ouertake ſeuenteene yeeres old. It were a good motion, if we leaue our pribbles and prabbles, and deſire a marriage betweene Maſter Abraham, and Miſtris Anne Page.

Slen. Did her Grand-ſire leaue her ſeuen hundred pound?

Euan. I, and her father is make her a petter penny.

Slen. I know the young Gentlewoman, ſhe has good gifts.

Euan. Seuen hundred pounds, and poſſibilities, is good gifts.

Shal. Well, let vs ſee honeſt Maſter Page: is Falſtaffe there?

Euan. Shall I tell you a lye? I doe deſpiſe a liar, as I doe deſpiſe one that is falſe, or as I deſpite one that is not true: the Knight Sir Iohn is there, and I beſeech you be ruled by your well-wiſhers. I will peate the doore for Maſter Page. What hoa? Got-pleſſe your houſe heere.

Mr. Page. Who's there?

Euan. Here is Got's pleſſing and your friend and Iuſtice Shallow and here young Maſter Slender, that peraduentures ſhall tell you another tale, if matters grow to your likings.

Mr. Page. I am glad to ſee your Worſhips well: I thanke you for my Venſon Maſter Shallow.

Shal. Maſter Page, I am glad to ſee you: much good do it your good heart. I wiſht your Venſon better, it was ill killed. How doth good Miſtreſſe Page? and I thanke you alwayes with my heart, la: with my heart.

Mr. Page. Sir, I thanke you.

Shal. Sir I thanke you: by yea, and no I doe.

Mr. Pa. I am glad to ſee you good Maſter Slender.

Slen. How does your fallow Greyhound, Sir, I heard ſay he was out-run on / Cotſall.

Mr. Pa. It could not be iudg'd, Sir.

Slen. You'll not confeſſe: you'll not confeſſe.

Shal. That he will not, 'tis your fault: 'tis a good dogge.

Mr. Pa. A Cur, Sir.

Shal. Sir he's a good dog and a faire dog: can there be more ſaid? he is good and faire. Is Sir Iohn Falſtaffe here?

Mr. Pa. Sir, he is within: and I would I could doe a good office betweene you.

Euan. It is ſpoke as a Chriſtians ought to ſpeake.

Shal. He hath wrong'd me (Maſter Page.)

Mr. Pa. Sir, he doth in ſome ſort confeſſe it.

Shal. If it be confeſſed, it is not redreſſed; is not that ſo (M. Page?) he hath wrong'd me, indeed he hath, at a word he hath: beleeue me, Robert Shallow Eſquire, ſaith he is wronged.

Ma. Pa. Here comes Sir Iohn.

Fal. Now, Maſter Shallow, you'll complaine of me to the King?

Shal. Knight, you haue beaten my men, kil'd my deere, and broke open my Looge.

Fal. But not kiſs'd your Keepers daughter?

Shal. Tut, a pin: this ſhall be anſwer'd.

Fal. I will anſwere it ſtrait, I haue done all this: That is now answer'd

Shal. The Councell ſhall know this.

Fal. 'Twere better for you if it were known in counſell: you'll be laugh'd at.

Eu. Pauca verba; (Sir Iohn) good worts.

Fal. Good worts? good Cabidge; Slender, I broke your head: what matter haue you againſt me?

Slen. Marry ſir, I haue matter in my head againſt you, and againſt your cony-catching Rafcals, Bardolf, Nym, and Piſtoll.

Bar. You Banbery Cheeſe.

Slen. I, it is no matter

Piſt. How now, Mephoſtophilus?

Slen. I, it is no matter.

Nym. Slice, I ſay; pauca pauca: Slice, that's my humor.

Slen. Where's Simple my man? can you tell, Coſen?

Eua. Peace, I pray you. Now let vs vnderſtand: there is three Vmpires in this matter, as I vnderſtand; that is, Maſter Page (fidelicet Maſter Page), & there is my elfe, (fidelicet my ſelfe) and the three party is (laſtly, and finally) mine Hoſt of the Gater.

Ma Pa. We three to heare it, & end it between them.

Euan. Fery goo't, I will make a prieſe of it in my note-booke, and we wil afterwards orke vpon the cauſe, with as great diſcreetly as we can.

Fal. Piſtoll.

Piſt. He heares with eares.

Euan. The Teuill and his Tam: what phraſe is this? he heares with eare? why, it is affectations.

Fal. Piſtoll, did you picke M. Slenders purſe?

Slen. I, by theſe gloues did hee, or I would I might neuer come in mine owne great chamber againe elſe, of ſeauen groates in mill-ſixpences, and two Edward Shouelboords, that coſt me two ſh illing and two pence a peece of Yead Miller: by theſe gloues.

Fal. Is this true, Piſtoll?

Euan. No, it is falſe, if it is a picke-purſe.

Piſt. Ha, thou mountaine Forreyner: Sir Iohn, and Maſter mine, I combat challenge of this Latine Bilboe: word of deniall in thy labras here; word of denial; froth, and ſcum thou lieſt.

Slen. By theſe gloues, then 'twas he.

Nym. Be auis'd ſir, and paſſe good humours: I will ſay marry trap with you, if you runne the nut-hooks humor on me, that is the very note of it

Slen. By this hat, then he in the red face had it: for though I cannot remember what I did when you made me drunke, yet I am not altogether an aſſe.

Fal. What ſay you Scarlet, and Iohn?

Bar. Why ſir, (for my part) I ſay the Gentleman had drunke himſelfe out of his fiue ſentences.

Eu. It is his fiue ſences: fie, what the ignorance is.

Bar. And being fap, ſir, was (as they ſay) caſheerd, and ſo conclusions paſt the Car-eires.

Slen. I, you ſpake in Latten then too: but 'tis no matter; Ile ne're be drunk whilſt I liue againe, but in honeſt, ciuill, godly company for this tricke: if I be drunke, Ile be drunke with thoſe that haue the feare of God, and not with drunken knaues.

Euan. So got-udge me, that is a vertuous minde.

Fal. You heare all theſe matters deni'd, Gentlemen; you heare it.

Mr. Page. Nay daughter, carry the wine in, wee'll drinke within.

Slen. Oh heauen: This is Miſtreſſe Anne Page.

Mr. Page How now Miſtris Ford?

Fal. Miſtris Ford, by my troth you are very well met: by your leaue good Miſtris.

Mr. Page. Wife, bid theſe gentlemen welcome: come, we haue a hot Venſon paſty to dinner; Come gentlemen, I hope we ſhall drinke downe all vnkindneſſe.

Slen. I had rather then forty ſhillings I had my booke of Songs and Sonnets heere: How now Simple, where haue you beene? I muſt wait on my ſelfe, muſt I? you haue not the booke of Riddles about you, haue you?

Sim Booke of Riddles? why did you not lend it to Alice Short-cake vpon Allhallowmas laſt, a fortnight afore Michaelmas.

Shal. Come Coz, come Coz, we ſtay for you: a word with you Coz: marry this, Coz: there is as 'twere a tender, a kinde of tender, made a farre-off by Sir Hugh here: doe you vnderſtand me?

Slen. I Sir, you ſhall finde me reaſonable; if it be ſo, I ſhall doe that that is reaſon.

Shal. Nay, but vnderſtand me.

Slen. So I doe Sir.

Euan. Giue eare to his motions; (M. Slender) I will deſcription the matter to you, if you be capacity of it.

Slen. Nay, I will doe as my Cozen Shallow ſaies: I pray you pardon me, he's a Iuſtice of Peace in his Countrie, ſimple though I ſtand here.

Euan. But that is not the queſtion: the queſtion is concerning your marriage.

Shal. I, there's the point Sir.

Eu. Marry is it: the very point of it, to Mi. Anne Page.

Slen. Why if it be ſo; I will marry her vpon any reaſonable demands.

Eu. But can you affection the 'oman, let vs command to know that of your mouth, or of your lips: for diuers Philoſophers hold, that the lips is parcell of the mouth: therfore preciſely, cã you carry your good wil to ỹ maid?

Sh. Coſen Abraham Slender, can you loue her?

Slen. I hope ſir, I will do as it ſhall become one that would doe reaſon.

Eu. Nay, got's Lords, and his Ladies, you muſt ſpeake poſſitable, if you can carry-her your deſires towards her.

Shal. That you muſt:
Will you, (vpon good dowry) marry her?

Slen. I will doe a greater thing then that, vpon your requeſt (Coſen) in any reaſon.

Shal. Nay conceiue me, conceiue mee, (ſweet Coz): what I doe is to pleaſure you (Coz:) can you loue the maid?

Slen. I will marry her (Sir) at your requeſt; but if there bee no great loue in the beginning, yet Heauen may decreaſe it vpon better acquaintance, when wee are married, and haue more occaſion to know one another: I hope vpon familiarity will grow more content: but if you ſay mary-her, I will mary-her, that I am freely diſſolued, and diſſolutely.

Eu. It

En. It is a fery diſcretion-anſwere; ſaue the fall is in the'ord, diſſolutely: the ort is (according to our meaning) reſolutely: his meaning is good.

Sh. I: I thinke my Coſen meant well.

Sl. I, or elſe I would I might be hang'd (la.)

Sh. Here comes faire Miſtris Anne; would I were yong for your ſake, Miſtris Anne.

An. The dinner is on the Table, my Father deſires your worſhips company.

Sh. I will wait on him, (faire Miſtris Anne.)

En. Od's pleſſed-will: I will not be abſence at the grace.

An. Will't pleaſe your worſhip to come in, Sir?

Sl. No, I thank you forſooth, hartely, I am very well.

An. The dinner attends you, Sir.

Sl. I am not a-hungry, I thanke you, forſooth: goe, Sirha, for all you are my man, goe wait vpon my Coſen Shallow: a Iuſtice of peace ſometime may be beholding to his friend, for a Man; I keepe but three Men, and a Boy yet, till my Mother be dead: but what though, yet I liue like a poore Gentleman borne.

An. I may not goe in without your worſhip: they will not ſit till you come.

Sl. I'faith, Ile eate nothing: I thanke you as much as though I did.

An. I pray you Sir walke in.

Sl. I had rather walke here (I thanke you.) I bruz'd my ſhin th'other day, with playing at Sword and Dagger with a Maſter of Fence (three veneys for a diſh of ſtew'd Prunes) and by my troth, I cannot abide the ſmell of hot meate ſince. Why doe your dogs barke ſo? be there Beares i'th' Towne?

An. I thinke there are, Sir, I heard them talk'd of.

Sl. I loue the ſport well, but I ſhall as ſoone quarrell at it, as any man in England: you are afraid if you ſee the Beare looſe, are you not?

An. I indeede Sir.

Sl. That's meate and drinke to me now: I haue ſeene Sackerſon looſe, twenty times, and haue taken him by the Chaine: but (I warrant you, the women haue ſo cride and ſhrekt at it, that it paſt. But women indeede, cannot abide 'em, they are very ill-fauour'd rough things.

Ma.Pa. Come, gentle M. Slender, come; we ſtay for you.

Sl. Ile eate nothing, I thanke you Sir.

Ma.Pa. By cocke and pie, you ſhall not chooſe, Sir: come, come.

Sl. Nay, pray you lead the way.

Ma.Pa. Come on, Sir.

Sl. Miſtris Anne, your ſelfe ſhall goe firſt.

An. Not I Sir, pray you keepe on.

Sl. Truely I will not goe firſt: truely la, I will not doe you that wrong.

An. I pray you Sir.

Sl. Ile rather be vnmannerly, then troubleſome: you doe your ſelfe wrong indeede-la. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Euans, and Simple.

Eu. Go your waies, and aske of Doctor Caius houſe, which is the way; and there dwels one Miſtris Quickly; which is in the manner of his Nurſe; or his dry-Nurſe, or his Cooke; or his Laundry; his Waſher, and his Ringer.

Si. Well Sir.

Eu. Nay, it is better yet: giue her this letter; for it is a'woman that altogeathers acquaintãce with Miſtris Anne Page; and the Letter is to deſire, and require her to ſolicite your Maſters deſires, to Miſtris Anne Page: I pray you be gon: I will make an end of my dinner; there's Pippins and Cheeſe to come. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Falſtaffe, Hoſt, Bardolfe, Nym, Piſtoll, Page.

Fal Mine Hoſt of the Garter?

Ho. What ſaies my Bully Rooke? ſpeake ſcholler'ly, and wiſely.

Fal. Truely mine Hoſt; I muſt turne away ſome of my followers.

Ho. Diſcard, (bully Hercules) caſheere; let them wag, trot, trot.

Fal. I ſit at ten pounds a weeke.

Ho. Thou'rt an Emperor (Cæſar, Keiſer and Pheazar) I will entertaine Bardolfe. he ſhall draw; he ſhall tap: ſaid I well (bully Hector?)

Fa Doe ſo (good mine Hoſt.

Ho. I haue ſpoke; let him follow: let me ſee thee froth, and liue: I am at a word: follow.

Fal. Bardolfe, follow him. a Tapſter is a good trade: an old Cloake, makes a new Ierkin: a wither'd Seruingman, a freſh Tapſter: goe, adew.

Ba. It is a life that I haue deſir'd: I will thriue.

Piſt O baſe hungarian wight: wilt thou the ſpigot wield?

Ni. He was gotten in drinke: is not the humor conceited?

Fal. I am glad I am ſo acquit of this Tinderbox: his Theeſts were too open: his filching was like an vnſkilfull Singer, he kept not time.

Ni. The good humor is to ſteale at a minutes reſt.

Piſt. Conuay: the wiſe it call: Steale? foh: a fico for the phraſe.

Fal. Well ſirs, I am almoſt out at heele.

Piſt. Why then ſet Kibes on't.

Fal. There is no remedy: I muſt conicatch, I muſt ſhift.

Piſt. Yong Rauens muſt haue foode.

Fal. Which of you know Ford of this Towne?

Piſt. I ken the wight: he is of ſubſtance good.

Fal. My honeſt Lads, I will tell you what I am about.

Piſt. Two yards, and more.

Fal. No quips now Piſtoll (Indeede I am in the waſte two yards about: but I am now about no waſte: I am about thrift) briefely: I doe meane to make loue to Ford's wife. I ſpie entertainment in her: ſhee diſcourſes: ſhee carues: ſhe giues the leere of inuitation: I can conſtrue the action of her familiar ſtile, & the hardeſt voice of her behauior (to be engliſh'd rightly, is, I am Sir Iohn Falſtaffe)

Piſt. He hath ſtudied her will; and tranſlated her will, out of honeſty, into Engliſh.

Ni. The Anchor is deepe: will that humor paſſe?

Fal Now the report goes, ſhe has all the rule of her husbands Purſe: he hath a legend of Angels.

Piſt. As many diuels entertaine: and to her Boy ſay I.

Ni. The humor riſes: it is good: humor me the angels.

Fal. I haue writ me here a letter to her: & here another to Pages wife, who euen now gaue mee good eyes too: examin'd my parts with moſt iudicious illiads: ſometimes the beame of her view, gilded my foote: ſometimes my portly belly.

Piſt. Then did the Sun on dung-hill ſhine.

Nim. I thanke thee for that humour.

Fal. O ſhe did ſo courſe o're my exteriors with ſuch a greedy intention, that the appetite of her eye, did ſeeme to ſcorch me vp like a burning-glaſſe: here's another letter to her. She beares the Purſe too. She is a Region in Guiana: all gold, and bountie: I will be Cheaters to them both, and they ſhall be Exchequers to mee: they ſhall be my Eaſt and Weſt-Indies, and I will trade to them both: Goe, beare thou this Letter to Miſtris Page, and thou this to Miſtris Ford. we will thriue (Lads) we will thriue.

Piſt. Shall I Sir Pandarus of Troy become,
And by my ſide weare Steele? then Lucifer take all.

Nim. I will run no base humour: here take the humor-Letter; I will keepe the haviour of reputation.

Fal. Hold Sirrah, beare you theſe Letters tightly,
Saile like my Pinnace to theſe golden ſhores.
Rogues, hence auaunt, vanish like hayrie-lookes; goe,
Trudge, plod away o'th hoofe: ſeeke ſhelter packe
Falſtaffe will learne the honor of the age,
French-thrift, you Rogues, my ſelfe and ſkirted Page.

Piſt. Let Vultures gripe thy guts! for gourd and Fullam holds & high and low beguiles rich & poore,
Tetter de naste in pouch, when thou ſhalt lacke,
Base Phrygian Turke.

Nim. I haue operations
Which be haue no ſtomacke to.

Piſt. Wilt thou reuenge?

Nim. By Welkin and her Starre.

Piſt. With wit, or Steele?

Nim. With both the humors, I
I will diſcuſſe the humour of this Louſe to Ford

Piſt. And to Page ſhall eke ſuch cold
How Falſtaffe varlet vile)
His Doue will proue; his gold will hold,
And his ſoft couch defile.

Nim. My humour ſhall not coole: I will incenſe Ford to deale with poyſon. I will poſſeſſe him with yellow-neſſe, for the reuolt of mine is dangerous: that is my true humour.

Piſt. Thou art the Mars of Malecontents: I ſecond thee: troope on. Exeunt.

Scœna Quarta.

Enter Miſtreſſe Quickly, Simple, John Rugby, Doctor, Caius, Ferton.

Qu. What, John Rugby, I pray thee goe to the Caſement, and ſeeke if you can ſee my Maſter, Maſter Doctor Caius coming: if he doe (I'faith) and finde any body in the houſe, here will be an old abuſing of Gods patience, and the Kings Engliſh.

Ru. Ile goe watch.

Qu. Goe, and we'll haue a poſſet for't ſoone at night, (in faith) at the latter end of a Sea-cole-fire: An honeſt, willing kinde fellow, as euer ſeruant ſhall come in houſe withall: and I warrant you, no tell-tale, nor no breede-bate: his worſt fault is, that he is giuen to prayer; he is ſomething peeuiſh that way: but no body but has his faults: but let that paſſe. Peter Simple, you ſay your name is?

Si. I, for fault of a better.

Qu. And Maſter Slender's your Maſter?

Si. Itorſooth.

Qu. Do's he not weare a great round Beard, like a Glouers paring knife?

Si. No forſooth: he hath but a little wee-face; with a little yellow Beard: a Cane-coloured Beard.

Qu. A ſoftly-ſprighted man, is he not?

Si. I forſooth: but he is as tall a man of his hands, as any is betweene this and his head: he hath fought with a Warrener.

Qu. How ſay you: oh, I ſhould remember him: do's he not hold vp his head (as it were?) and ſtrut in his gate?

Si. Yes indeede do's he.

Qu. Well heauen ſend Anne Page, no worſe fortune. Tell Maſter Parſon Euans, I will doe what I can for your Maſter: Anne is a good girle, and I wiſh——

Ru. Out alas: here comes my Maſter.

Qu. We ſhall all be ſhent: Run in here, good young man; goe into this Cloſſet: he will not ſtay long: what John Rugby? John: what John I ſay? goe John, goe enquire for my Maſter, I doubt he be not well, that hee comes not home: (and downe, downe, adowne &c.)

Ca. Vat is you ſing? I doe not like des-toyes: pray you goe and vetch me in my Cloſſet, vnboyteene verd; a Box, a greene-a-Box: do intend vat I ſpeake? a greene-a-Box.

Qu. I forſooth ile fetch it you:
I am glad hee went not in himſelfe: if he had found the young man he would haue bin horne-mad.

Ca. Fe te fe fe, mai foy, il fait fort chaude, Ie man vas a la Court la grande affaires.

Qu. Is it this Sir?

Ca. Ouy meſtre le mon pocket, de prech quickly: Vere is dat knaue Rugby?

Qu. What John Rugby, John?

Ru. Here Sir.

Ca. You are John Rugby, and you are Iacke Rugby. Come, take-a-your Rapier, and come after my heele to the Court.

Ru. 'Tis ready Sir, here in the Porch.

Ca. By my troth: I tarry too long: od's-me Que ay ie oublie: dere is ſome Simples in my Cloſſet, dat I will not for the vnild I ſhall leaue behinde.

Qu. Ay-me, he'll finde the yong man there, and be mad.

Ca. O Diable, Diable: vat is in my Cloſſet?
Villanie, La-roone Rugby, my Rapier.

Qu. Good Maſter be content.

Ca. Wherefore ſhall I be content-a?

Qu. The yong man is an honeſt man.

Ca. What ſhall de honeſt man do in my Cloſſet: dere is no honeſt man dat ſhall come in my Cloſſet.

Qu. I beſeech you be not ſo flegmaticke: heare the truth of it. He came of an errand to mee, from Parſon Hugh.

Ca. Vell.

Si. I forſooth: to deſire her to——

Qu. Peace, I pray you.

Ca. Peace-a-your tongue: ſpeake-a-your Tale.

Si. To deſire this honeſt Gentlewoman (your Maid) to ſpeake a good word to Miſtris Anne Page, for my Maſter in the way of Marriage.

Qu. This is all indeede-la: but ile ne're put my finger in the fire, and needs not.

Ca. Sir Hugh ſend-a you? Rugby, baillow me ſome paper: tarry you a little-a-while.

Qu. I

Qui. I am glad he is so quiet: if he had bin throughly moued, you should haue heard him so loud, and so melancholy: but notwithstanding man, Ile doe you your Master what good I can: and the very yea, & the no is, y French Doctor my Master, (I may call him my Master, looke you, for I keepe his house, and I wash, ring, brew, bake, scowre, dresse meat and drinke, make the beds, and doe all my selfe.)

Simp. 'Tis a great charge to come vnder one bodies hand

Qui. Are you a wis'd o'that? you shall finde it a great charge: and to be vp early, and down late: but notwithstanding, to tell you in your eare, I would haue no words of it, my Master himselfe is in loue with Mistris Anne Page but notwithstanding that I know Anne's mind, that's neither here nor there.

Caius. You, Iack Nake, giue-a me Letters: Nay Hugh, by gar it is a fine knaue: will you not murder me? Parke, and I will teach a scurvy Iack-a-nape Priest to meddle, or make. —— you may be come it apace, you carry me? by gar I will cut all your two stones: by gar, he shall not haue a stone to throw at his dogge.

Qui. Alas he speakes but for his friend.

Caius. It is no matter a verd dis: sorry you tell a me dat I shall haue Anne Page for my self? by gar, I vill kill de Iack Priest: and I haue appointed mine Host of de Iarteer to measure our weapon: by gar, I will myself haue Anne Page.

Qui. Sir, the maid loues you, and all shall be well. We must giue folkes leaue to prate: what the good-ier.

Caius. Rugby, come to the Court with me: by gar, if I haue not Anne Page, I shall turne your head out of my dore. follow my heeles, Rugby.

Qui. You shall haue An- scales head of your owne: No, I know Anne's mind: for that, neuer a woman in Windsor knowes more of Anne's mind then I doe, nor can doe more then I doe with her, I thanke heauen.

Fenton. Who's within there, hoa?

Qui. Who's there, I trow? Come neere the house I pray you.

Fen. How now good woman, how dost thou?

Qui. The better that it pleases your good Worship to aske?

Fen. What newes? how do's pretty Mistris Anne?

Qui. In truth Sir, and she is pretty, and honest, and gentle, and one that is your friend, I can tell you that by the way, I praise heauen for it.

Fen. Shall I doe any good thinkst thou? shall I not loose my suit?

Qui. Troth Sir, all is in his hands aboue: but notwithstanding, Master Fenton, I'le be sworne on a booke she loues you. Haue not your Worship a wart about your eyes?

Fen. Yes marry haue I, what of that?

Qui. Well, thereby hangs a tale: good faith it is such another Nan, (but (I detest) an honest maid as euer broke bread: we had an hours talke of that wart: I shall neuer laugh but in that maids company: but (indeed) she is giuen too much to Allicholy and musing: but for you —— well —— goe too ——

Fen. Well, I shall see her to day: hold there's money for thee: let me haue thy voice in my behalfe: if thou seest her before me, commend me. ——

Qui. Will I? I faith that we will. And I will tell your Worship more of the Wart, the next time we haue confidence, and of other wooers.

Fen. Well, fare-well, I am in great haste now.

Qui. Fare-well to your Worship: truly an honest Gentleman: but Anne loues him not: for I know Anne's minde as well as another does: out vpon't, what haue I forgot. Exit.

Actus Secundus. Scœna Prima.

Mist. Page. What, haue scap'd Loue-letters in the holly-day time of my beauty, and am I now a subiect for them? let me see.

Ask me no reason why I loue you, for though Loue vse Reason for his Precision, he admits him not for his Counsailour you are merry, so am I: ha, ha, then there's more sympathie: you loue sacke, and so do I: would you desire better sympathie? Let it suffice thee Mistris Page, at the least if the Loue of Soldier can suffice, that I loue thee. I will not say, pity me, 'tis not a Soldier-like phrase, but I say, loue me.

By me,
Thine owne true Knight, by day or night:
Or any kinde of light, with all his might,
For thee to fight. Iohn Falstaffe.

What a Herod of Iurie is this? O wicked, wicked world! One that is well nie worne to peeces with age to show himselfe a young Gallant? What an vnweighed Behauiour hath this Flemish drunkard picke (with the Deuils name) out of my conuersation, that he dares In my Company what should I say to him? I was then Frugall of my mirth (heauen forgiue me) why I'le Exhibite a Bill in the Parliament for the putting downe of fat men, how shall I be reuenged on him? for reuenged I will be, as sure as his guts are made of puddings.

Mist. Ford. Mistris Page, trust me, I was going to your house.

Mist. Page. And trust me, I was coming to you: you looke very ill.

Mist. Ford. Nay, I'le nere beleeue that; I haue to shew to the contrary.

Mist. Page. 'Faith but you do in my minde.

Mist. Ford. Well I do then: yet I say, I could shew you to the contrary. O Mistris Page, giue me some counsaile.

Mist. Page. What's the matter, woman?

Mist. Ford. O woman, if it were not for one trifling respect, I could come to very good.

Mist. Page. Hang the trifle, woman, take the honour: what is it? dispence with trifles: what is it?

Mist. Ford. If I would but goe to hell, for an eternall moment or so, I could be knighted.

Mist. Page. What thou liest? Sir Alice Ford? these Knights will hacke, and so thou shouldst not alter the article of thy Gentry.

Mist. Ford. We burne day-light: here, read, read: perceiue how I might be knighted. I shall thinke the worse of fat men, as long as I haue an eye to make difference of mens liking: and yet he would not swear; praise

praiſe womens modeſty: and gaue ſuch orderly and well-behaued reproofe to al vncomelineſſe, that I would haue ſworne his diſpoſition would haue gone to the truth of his words: but they doe no more adhere and keep place together, then the hundred Pſalms to the tune of Greenſleeues: What tempeſt (I troa) threw this Whale, (with ſo many Tuns of oyle in his belly) a'ſhoare at Windſor? How ſhall I bee reuenged on him? I thinke the beſt way were, to entertaine him with hope, till the wicked fire of luſt haue melted him in his owne greaſe: Did you euer heare the like?

Miſ.Page. Letter for letter; but that the name of Page and Ford differs: to thy great comfort in this myſtery of ill opinions, heere's the twyn-brother of thy Letter: but let thine inherit firſt, for I proteſt mine neuer ſhall: I warrant he hath a thouſand of theſe Letters, writ with blancke-ſpace for different names (ſure more): and theſe are of the ſecond edition: hee will print them out of doubt: for he cares not what hee puts into the preſſe, when he would put vs two: I had rather be a Gianteſſe, and lye vnder Mount Pelion: Well; I will find you twentie laſciuious Turtles ere one chaſte man.

Miſ.Ford. Why this is the very ſame: the very hand, the very words: what doth he thinke of vs?

Miſ.Page. Nay I know not: it makes me almoſt readie to wrangle with mine owne honeſty. Ile entertaine my ſelfe like one that I am not acquainted withall: for ſure vnleſſe hee know ſome ſtrange ſinne in me, that I know not my ſelfe, hee would neuer haue boorded me in this furie.

Mi.Ford. Boording, call you it? Ile be ſure to keepe him aboue decke.

Ma.Page. So will I: if hee come vnder my hatches, Ile neuer to Sea againe: Let's bee reueng'd on him: let's appoint him a meeting, giue him a ſhow of comfort in his Suit, and lead him on with a fine baited delay, till hee hath pawn'd his horſes to mine Hoſt of the Garter.

Mi.Ford. Nay, I will conſent to act any villany againſt him, that may not ſully the charineſſe of our honeſty: o, that my husband ſaw this Letter: it would giue eternal food to his iealouſie.

Miſ.Page. Why look where he comes; and my good man too: hee's as farre from iealouſie, as I am from giuing him cauſe, and that (I hope) is an vnmeaſurable diſtance.

Miſ.Ford. You are the happier woman.

Miſ.Page. Let's conſult together againſt this greaſie Knight: Come hither.

Ford. Well: I hope, it be not ſo.

Piſt. Hope is a curtall-dog in ſome affaires.
Sir Iohn affects thy wife.

Ford. Why ſir, my wife is not young.

Piſt. He woos both high and low, both rich & poor, both yong and old, one with another (Ford) he loues the Gally-mawfry (Ford) perpend.

Ford. Loue my wife?

Piſt. With liuer, burning hot: prouent:
Or goe thou like Sir Actæon he, with
Ring-wood at thy heeles: O, odious is the name.

Ford. What name Sir?

Piſt. The horne I ſay: Farewell:
Take heed, haue open eye, for theeues doe foot by night.
Take heed, ere ſommer comes, or Cuckoo-buds do ſing.
Away ſir Corporall Nim:
Beleeue it (Page) he ſpeakes ſence.

Ford. I will be patient. I will find out this.

Nim. And this is true: I like not the humor of lying: hee hath wronged mee in ſome humors: I ſhould haue borne the humour'd Letter to her: but I haue a ſword: and it ſhall bite vpon my neceſſitie: he loues your wife; There's the ſhort and the long: My name is Corporall Nim: I ſpeak, and I auouch; 'tis true: my name is Nim: and Falſtaffe loues your wife: adieu, I loue not the humour of bread and cheeſe: adieu.

Page. The humour of it (quoth'a?) heere's a fellow frights Engliſh out of his wits.

Ford. I will ſeeke out Falſtaffe.

Page. I neuer heard ſuch a drawling-affecting rogue.

Ford. If I doe finde it: well.

Page. I will not beleeue ſuch a Cataian, though the Prieſt o' th'Towne commended him for a true man.

Ford. 'Twas a good ſenſible fellow: well.

Miſt. Page. Whether goe you (George!) harke you.

Miſ Ford. How now (ſweet Frank) why art thou melancholy?

Ford. I melancholy? I am not melancholy:
Get you home: goe.

Miſ.Ford. Faith, thou haſt ſome crochets in thy head, Now: will you goe, Miſtreſſe Page?

Miſ.Page. Haue with you: you'll come to dinner George? Looke who comes yonder: ſhee ſhall bee our Meſſenger to this paltrie Knight.

Miſ.Ford. Truſt me, I thought on her: ſhee'll fit it.

Miſ.Page. You are come to ſee my daughter Anne?

Qui. Ifaſooth: and I pray how do's good Miſtreſſe Anne?

Miſ.Page. Go in with vs and ſee: we haue an houres talke with you.

Page. How now Maſter Ford?

For. You heard what this knaue told me, did you not?

Page. Yes, and you heard what the other told me?

Ford. Doe you thinke there is truth in them?

Pag. Hang 'em ſlaues; I doe not thinke the Knight would offer it: But theſe that accuſe him in his intent towards our wiues, are a yoake of his diſcarded men: very rogues, now they be out of ſeruice.

Ford. Were they his men?

Page. Marry were they.

Ford. I like it neuer the beter for that,
Do's he lye at the Garter?

Page. I marry do's he: if hee ſhould intend this voyage toward my wife, I would turne her looſe to him; and what hee gets more of her, then ſharpe words, let it lye on my head.

Ford. I doe not miſdoubt my wife: but I would bee loath to turne them together: a man may be too confident: I would haue nothing lye on my head: I cannot be thus ſatisfied.

Page. Looke where my ranting-Hoſt of the Garter comes: there is either liquor in his pate, or mony in his purſe, when hee lookes ſo merrily: How now mine Hoſt?

Hoſt. How now Bully-Rooke: thou'rt a Gentleman Caueleiro Iuſtice, I ſay.

Shal. I follow, (mine Hoſt) I follow: Good-euen, and twenty (good Maſter Page.) Maſter Page, wil you go with vs? we haue ſport in hand.

Hoſt. Tell him Caueleiro-Iuſtice: tell him Bully-Rooke.

Shal. Sir, there is a fray to be fought, betweene Sir Hugh the Welch Prieſt, and Caius the French Doctor.

Ford. Good

Ford. Good mine Hoſt o'th'Garter: a word with you.

Hoſt. What ſaiſt thou, my Bully-Rooke?

Shal. Will you goe with vs to behold it? My merry Hoſt hath had the meaſuring of their weapons; and (I thinke) hath appointed them contrary places: for (beleeue mee) I heare the Parſon is no Ieſter: harke, I will tell you what our ſport ſhall be.

Hoſt. Haſt thou no ſuit againſt my Knight, my gueſt-Caualeire?

Shal. None, I proteſt: but Ile giue you a pottle of burn'd ſacke, to giue me recourſe to him, and tell him my name is Broome: onely for a ieſt.

Hoſt. My hand, (Bully:) thou ſhalt haue egreſſe and regreſſe, (ſaid I well,) and thy name ſhall be Broome. It is a merry Knight: will you goe An-heires?

Shal. Haue with you mine Hoſt.

Page. I haue heard the Frenchman hath good ſkill in his Rapier.

Shal. Tut ſir: I could haue told you more. In theſe times you ſtand on diſtance, your Paſſes, Stoccado's, and I know not what: 'tis the heart (Maſter Page) is all: 'tis heere: I haue ſeene the time, with my long ſword, I would haue made you fowre tall fellowes ſkippe like Rattes.

Hoſt. Heere boyes, heere, heere: ſhall we wag?

Page. Haue with you: I had rather heare them ſcold, than fight.

Ford. Though Page be a ſecure foole, and ſtands ſo firmely on his wiues frailty; yet, I cannot put-off my opinion ſo eaſily: ſhe was in his company at Page's houſe: and what they made there, I know not. Well, I will looke further into't, and I haue a diſguiſe to ſound Falſtaffe: if I finde her honeſt, I looſe not my labor: if ſhe be otherwiſe, 'tis labour well beſtowed. Exeunt.

Scœna Secunda.

Enter Falſtaffe, Piſtoll, Robin, Quickly, Bardolffe, Ford.

Fal. I will not lend thee a penny.

Piſt. Why then the world's mine Oyſter, which I, with ſword will open.

Fal. Not a penny: I haue beene content (Sir,) you ſhould lay my countenance to pawne: I haue grated vpon my good friends for three Repreeues for you, and your Coach-fellow Nim; or elſe you had look'd through the grate, like a Geminy of Baboones: I am damn'd in hell, for ſwearing to Gentlemen my friends, you were good Souldiers, and tall-fellowes. And when Miſtreſſe Bright loſt the handle of her Fan, I took't vpon mine honour thou hadſt it not.

Piſt. Didſt not thou ſhare? hadſt thou not fifteene pence?

Fal. Reaſon, you rogue, reaſon: thinkſt thou Ile endanger my ſoule, gratis? at a word, hang no more about mee, I am no gibbet for you: goe, a ſhort knife, and a throng, to your Manor of Pickt-hatch: goe, you'll not beare a Letter for mee you rogue? you ſtand vpon your honor! why, (thou vnconfinable baſeneſſe) it is as much as I can do to keepe the termes of my honor preciſe: I, I, I my ſelfe ſometimes, leauing the feare of heauen on the left hand, and hiding mine honor in my neceſſity, am faine to ſhuffle: to hedge, and to lurch, and yet, you Rogue, will en-ſconce your raggs; your Cat-a-Mountaine-lookes, your red-lattice phrases, and your bold-beating-oathes, vnder the ſhelter of your honor? you will not doe it? you?

Piſt. I doe relent: what would thou more of man?

Robin. Sir, here's a woman would ſpeake with you.

Fal. Let her approach.

Qui. Giue your worſhip good morrow.

Fal. Good morrow, good-wife.

Qui. Not ſo, and't please your worſhip.

Fal. Good maid then.

Qui. Ile be ſworne,
As my mother was the firſt houre I was borne.

Fal. I doe beleeue the ſwearer, what with me?

Qui. Shall I vouch-ſafe your worſhip a word, or two?

Fal. Two thouſand (faire woman) and Ile vouchſafe thee the hearing.

Qui. There is one Miſtreſſe Ford, (Sir) I pray come a little neerer this waies: I my ſelfe dwell with M. Doctor Caius.

Fal. Well, on, Miſtreſſe Ford, you ſay.

Qui. Your worſhip ſaies very true. I pray your worſhip come a little neerer this waies.

Fal. I warrant thee, no-bodie heares: mine owne people, mine owne people.

Qui. Are they ſo? heauen bleſſe them, and make them his Seruants.

Fal. Well, Miſtreſſe Ford, what of her?

Qui. Why Sir, thee's a good-creature; Lord, Lord, your Worſhip's a wanton: well, heauen forgiue you, and all of vs, I pray———.

Fal. Miſtreſſe Ford: come, Miſtreſſe Ford.

Qui. Marry this is the ſhort, and the long of it: you haue brought her into ſuch a Canaries, as 'tis wonderfull the beſt Courtier of them all (when the Court lay at Windſor) could neuer haue brought her to ſuch a Canarie: yet there has beene Knights, and Lords, and Gentlemen, with their Coaches, I warrant you Coach after Coach, letter after letter, gift after gift, ſmelling ſo ſweetly: all muſke, and ſo rattling, I warrant you, as muſke and golde, and in ſuch alligant termes, and in ſuch wine and ſugar of the beſt, and the faireſt, that would haue wonne any womans heart: and I warrant you, they could neuer get an eye-winke of her: I had my ſelfe twenty Angels giuen me this morning, but I defie all Angels (in any ſuch ſort, as they ſay) but in the way of honeſty: and I warrant you, they could neuer get her ſo much as ſippe on a cup with the prowdeſt of them all, and yet there has beene Lords a-ſay, (which is more) Pen-ſioners, but I warrant you all is one with her.

Fal. But what ſaies ſhee to mee? be briefe my good ſhee Mercurie.

Qui. Marry, ſhe hath receiu'd your Letter: for the which ſhe thankes you a thouſand times, and ſhe giues you to notifie that her husband will be abſence from his houſe, betweene ten and eleuen.

Fal. Ten, and eleuen.

Qui. I, forſooth: and then you may come and ſee the picture (ſhe ſayes) that you wot of. Maſters Ford her husband will be from home. alas, the ſweet woman leades an ill life with him: hee's a very iealouſie-man, ſhe leads a very frampold life with him, good hart.)

Fal. Ten, and eleuen.

Woman

Woman, commend me to her, I will not faile her.

Qui. Why, you ſay well: But I haue another meſſenger to your worſhip: Miſtreſſe Page hath her hearty commendations to you too: and let mee tell you in your eare, ſhee's as fartuous a ciuill modeſt wife, and one (I tell you) that will not miſſe you morning nor euening prayer, as any is in Windſor, who ere bee the other: and ſhee bade me tell your worſhip, that her husband is ſeldome from home, but ſhe hopes there will come a time. I neuer knew a woman ſo doate vpon a man; ſurely I thinke you haue charmes, la: yes in truth.

Fal. Not I, I aſſure thee; ſetting the attraction of my good parts aſide, I haue no other charmes.

Qui. Bleſſing on your heart for't.

Fal. But I pray thee tell me this: has Fords wife, and Pages wife acquainted each other, how they loue me?

Qui. That were a ieſt indeed: they haue not ſo little grace I hope, that were a tricke indeed. But Miſtris Page would deſire you to ſend her your little Page of all loues: her husband has a marueilous infection to the little Page: and truely Maſter Page is an honeſt man. Neuer a wife in Windſor leades a better life then ſhe do's: doe what ſhee will, ſay what ſhe will, take all, pay all, go to bed when ſhe liſt, riſe when ſhe liſt, all is as ſhe will: and truly ſhe deſerues it; for if there be a kinde woman in Windſor, ſhe is one: you muſt ſend her your Page, no remedie.

Fal. Why, I will.

Qui. Nay, but doe ſo then, and ſpeake you, hee may come and goe betweene you both: and in any caſe haue a nay-word, that you may know one anothers minde, and the Boy neuer neede to vnderſtand any thing; for 'tis not good that children ſhould know any wickednes: olde folkes you know, haue diſcretion, as they ſay, and know the world.

Fal. Farethee-well, commend mee to them both: there's my purſe, I am yet thy debter: Boy, goe along with this woman, this newes diſtracts me.

Piſt. This Puncke is one of Cupids Carriers,
Clap on more ſailes, purſue: vp with your fights
Giue fire: ſhe is my prize, or Ocean whelme them all.

Fal. Saiſt thou ſo (old Iacke) go thy wayes: Ile make more of thy olde body then I haue done: will they yet looke after thee? wilt thou after the expence of ſo much money, be now a gainer? good Body, I thanke thee: let them ſay 'tis groſſely done, ſo it bee fairely done, no matter.

Bar. Sir Iohn, there's one Maſter Broome below would faine ſpeake with you, and be acquainted with you; and hath ſent your worſhip a mornings draught of Sacke.

Fal. Broome is his name?

Bar. I Sir.

Fal. Call him in: ſuch Broomes are welcome to mee, that ore'flowes ſuch liquor: ah ha, Miſtreſſe Ford and Miſtreſſe Page, haue I encompaſs'd you? goe to, via.

Ford. Bleſſe you ſir.

Fal. And you ſir: would you ſpeake with me?

Ford. I make bold, to preſſe, with ſo little preparation vpon you.

Fal. You'r welcome, what's your will? giue vs leaue Drawer.

Ford. Sir, I am a Gentleman that haue ſpent much, my name is Broome.

Fal. Good Maſter Broome, I deſire more acquaintance of you.

Ford. Good Sir Iohn, I ſue for yours: not to charge you, for I muſt let you vnderſtand, I thinke my ſelfe in better plight for a Lender, then you are: the which hath ſomething emboldned me to this vnſeaſon'd intruſion: for they ſay, if money goe before, all waies doe lye open.

Fal. Money is a good Souldier (Sir) and will on.

Ford. Troth, and I haue a bag of money heere troubles me: if you will helpe to beare it (Sir Iohn) take all, or halfe, for eaſing me of the carriage.

Fal. Sir, I know not how I may deſerue to bee your Porter.

Ford. I will tell you ſir, if you will giue mee the hearing.

Fal. Speake (good Maſter Broome) I ſhall be glad to be your Seruant.

Ford. Sir, I heare you are a Scholler: (I will be briefe with you) and you haue been a man long knowne to me, though I had neuer ſo good means as deſire, to make my ſelfe acquainted with you. I ſhall diſcouer a thing to you, wherein I muſt very much lay open mine owne imperfection: but (good Sir Iohn) as you haue one eye vpon my follies, as you heare them vnfolded, turne another into the Regiſter of your owne, that I may paſſe with a reproofe the eaſier, ſith you your ſelfe know how eaſie it is to be ſuch an offender.

Fal. Very well Sir, proceed.

Ford. There is a Gentlewoman in this Towne, her husbands name is Ford.

Fal. Well Sir.

Ford. I haue long lou'd her, and I proteſt to you, beſtowed much on her: followed her with a doating obſeruance: Ingroſs'd opportunities to meete her: fee'd euery ſlight occaſion that could but nigardly giue mee ſight of her: not only bought many preſents to giue her, but haue giuen largely to many, to know what ſhee would haue giuen: briefly, I haue purſu'd her, as Loue hath purſued mee, which hath beene on the wing of all occaſions: but whatſoeuer I haue merited, either in my minde, or in my meanes, meede I am ſure I haue receiued none, vnleſſe Experience be a Iewell, that I haue purchaſed at an infinite rate, and that hath taught mee to ſay this,

" Loue like a ſhadow flies, when ſubſtance Loue purſues,
" Purſuing that that flies, and flying what purſues.

Fal. Haue you receiu'd no promiſe of ſatisfaction at her hands?

Ford. Neuer.

Fal. Haue you importun'd her to ſuch a purpoſe?

Ford. Neuer.

Fal. Of what qualitie was your loue then?

Ford. Like a fair houſe, built on another mans ground, ſo that I haue loſt my edifice, by miſtaking the place, where I erected it.

Fal. To what purpoſe haue you vnfolded this to me?

Ford. When I haue told you that, I haue told you all: Some ſay, that though ſhe appeare honeſt to mee, yet in other places ſhee enlargeth her mirth ſo farre, that there is ſhrewd conſtruction made of her. Now (Sir Iohn) here is the heart of my purpoſe: you are a gentleman of excellent breeding, admirable diſcourſe, of great admittance, authenticke in your place and perſon, generally allow'd for your many warlike, court-like, and learned preparations.

Fal. O Sir.

Ford. Beleeue it, for you know it: there is money; ſpend it, ſpend it, ſpend more; ſpend all I haue, onely giue

giue me ſo much of your time in exchange of it, as to lay an amiable ſiege to the honeſty of this Fords wife : vſe your Art of wooing ; win her to conſent to you : if any man may, you may as ſoone as any.

Fal. Would it apply well to the vehemency of your affection that I ſhould win what you would enioy? Methinkes you preſcribe to your ſelfe very prepoſterouſly.

Ford. O, vnderſtand my drift : ſhe dwells ſo ſecurely on the excellency of her honor, that the folly of my ſoule dares not preſent it ſelfe : ſhee is too bright to be look'd againſt. Now, could I come to her with any detection in my hand, my deſires had inſtance and argument to commend themſelues, I could driue her then from the ward of her purity, her reputation, her marriage-vow, and a thouſand other her defences, which now are too-too ſtrongly embattail'd againſt me : what ſay you too't, Sir Iohn?

Fal. Maſter Broome, I will firſt make bold with your money : next, giue mee your hand : and laſt, as I am a gentleman, you ſhall, if you will, enioy Fords wife.

Ford. O good Sir.

Fal. I ſay you ſhall.

Ford. Want no money (Sir Iohn) you ſhall want none.

Fal. Want no Miſtreſſe Ford (Maſter Broome) you ſhall want none. I ſhall be with her (I may tell you) by her owne appointment euen as you came in to me, her aſſiſtant, or goe-betweene, parted from me : I ſay I ſhall be with her betweene ten and eleuen : for at that time the ieelous-raſcally-knaue her husband will be forth : come you to me at night, you ſhall know how I ſpeed.

Ford. I am bleſt in your acquaintance : do you know Ford Sir?

Fal. Hang him (poore Cuckoldly knaue) I know him not : yet I wrong him to call him poore. They ſay the ieelous wittolly-knaue hath maſſes of money, for the which his wife ſeemes to me well-fauour'd : I will vſe her as the key of the Cuckoldly-rogues Coffer, & there's my harueſt-home.

Ford. I would you knew Ford, ſir, that you might auoid him, if you ſaw him.

Fal. Hang him, mechanicall-ſalt-butter rogue, I will ſtare him out of his wits : I will awe him with my cudgell : it ſhall hang like a Meteor ore the Cuckolds horne. Maſter Broome, thou ſhalt know, I will predominate ouer the peazant, and thou ſhalt lye with his wife. Come to me ſoone at night : Ford's a knaue, and I will aggrauate his ſtile : thou (Maſter Broome) ſhalt know him for knaue, and Cuckold. Come to me ſoone at night.

Ford. What a damn'd Epicurian-Raſcall is this? my heart is ready to crack with impatience : who ſaies this is improuident ieelouſie? my wife hath ſent to him, the howre is fixt, the match is made : would any man haue thought this? ſee the hell of hauing a falſe woman : my bed ſhall be abus'd, my Coffers ranſack'd, my reputation gnawne at, and I ſhall not onely receiue this villanous wrong, but ſtand vnder the adoption of abhominable termes, and by him that does mee this wrong : Termes, names : Amaimon ſounds well : Lucifer, well : Barbaſon, well : yet they are Diuel-additions, the names of fiends : But Cuckold, Wittoll, Cuckold! the Diuell himſelfe hath not ſuch a name. Page is an Aſſe, a ſecure Aſſe, hee will truſt his wife, hee will not be iealous : I will rather truſt a Fleming with my butter, Parſon Hugh the Welſh-man with my Cheeſe, an Iriſh-man with my Aqua-vitæ-bottle, or a Theefe to walke my ambling gelding, then my wife with her ſelfe. Then ſhe plots, then ſhee ruminates, then ſhee deuiſes : and what they thinke in their hearts they may effect ; they will breake their hearts but they will effect. Heauen bee prais'd for my iealouſie : eleuen o'clocke the howre. I will preuent this, detect my wife, bee reueng'd on Falſtaffe and laugh at Page. I will about it, better three houres too ſoone, then a minute too late : fie, fie, fie : Cuckold, Cuckold, Cuckold.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Caius, Rugby, Page, Shallow, Slender, Hoſt.

Caius. Iacke Rugby.

Rug. Sir.

Caius. Vat is the clocke, Iack?

Rug. 'Tis paſt the howre (Sir) that Sir Hugh promis'd to meet.

Cai. By gar, he has ſaue his ſoule, dat he is no-come : he ha's pray his Pible well, dat he is no-come : by gar (Iack Rugby) he is dead already if he be come.

Rug. Hee is wiſe Sir, hee knew your worſhip would kill him if he came.

Cai. By gar, de herring is no dead, ſo as I will kill him : take your Rapier, (Iacke) I will tell you how I will kill him.

Rug. Alas ſir, I cannot fence.

Cai. Villanie, take your Rapier.

Rug. Forbeare : heer's company.

Hoſt. Bleſſe thee, bully-Doctor.

Shal. 'Saue you Mr Doctor Caius.

Page. Now good Mr. Doctor.

Slen. 'Giue you good-morrow, ſir.

Caius. Vat be all you one, two, tree, fowre, come for?

Hoſt. To ſee thee fight, to ſee thee foigne, to ſee thee trauerſe, to ſee thee here, to ſee thee there, to ſee thee paſſe thy punctio, thy ſtock thy reuerſe, thy diſtance, thy montant. Is he dead, my Ethiopian? Is he dead, my Frauncis? ha, Bully? what ſayes my Eſculapius? my Galien? my heart of Eldertree, ha? is he dead bully-Stale? is he dead?

Cai. By gar, he is de Coward-Iack-Preſt of de vorld : he is not ſhow his face.

Hoſt. Thou art a Caſtalion king Vrinall : Hector of Greece, my Boy.

Cai. I pray you beare witneſſe, that me haue ſtay, ſixe or ſeuen, two tree howres for him, and hee is no-come.

Shal. He is the wiſer man (M. Doctor) he is a curer of ſoules, and you a curer of bodies : if you ſhould fight, you goe againſt the haire of your profeſſions : is it not true, Maſter Page?

Page. Maſter Shallow, you haue your ſelfe beene a great fighter, though now a man of peace.

Shal. Body-kins M. Page, though I now be old, and of the peace ; if I ſee a ſword out, my finger itches to make one : though wee are Iuſtices, and Doctors, and Church-men (M. Page) wee haue ſome ſalt of our youth in vs, we are the ſons of women (M. Page.)

Page. 'Tis true, Mr Shallow.

Shal. It will be found ſo, (M. Page.) M. Doctor Caius, I am come to fetch you home : I am ſworn of the peace : you haue ſhow'd your ſelfe a wiſe Phyſician, and Sir Hugh hath ſhowne himſelfe a wiſe and patient Churchman : you muſt goe with me, M. Doctor.

Hoſt. Par-

Hoſt. Pardon, Gueſt-Iuſtice; a Monſieur Mocke-[illegible]

Cai. Mock-vater? vat is dat?

Hoſt. Mock-water, in our Engliſh tongue, is Valour (Bully.)

Cai. By gar, then I haue as much Mock-vater as de Engliſhman: ſcurvy-lack-dog-Prieſt: by gar, mee vill cut his eares.

Hoſt. He will Clapper-claw thee tightly (Bully.)

Cai. Clapper-de-claw? vat is dat?

Hoſt. That is, he will make thee amends.

Cai. By-gar, me doe looke hee ſhall clapper-de-claw me, for by-gar, me vill haue it.

Hoſt. And I will prouoke him to't, or let him wag.

Cai. Me tanck you for dat.

Hoſt. And moreouer, (Bully) but firſt, Mr. Ghueſt, and M. Page, & eeke Caualeiro Slender, goe you through the Towne to Frogmore.

Page. Sir Hugh is there, is he?

Hoſt. He is there, ſee what humor he is in: and I will bring the Doctor about by the Fields: will it doe well?

Shal. We will doe it.

All. Adieu, good M. Doctor.

Cai. By-gar, me will kill de Prieſt, for he ſpeake for a lack-an-Ape to Anne Page.

Hoſt. Let him die: ſheath thy impatience: throw cold water on thy Choller: goe about the fields with mee through Frogmore, I will bring thee where Miſtris Anne Page is, at a Farm-houſe a Feaſting: and thou ſhalt woo her: Cride-game, ſaid I well?

Cai. By-gar, mee dancke you vor dat: by gar I loue you: and I ſhall procure 'a you de good Gueſts: de Earle, de Knight, de Lords, de Gentlemen, my patients.

Hoſt. For the which, I will be thy aduerſary toward Anne Page: ſaid I well?

Cai. By-gar, 'tis good: vell ſaid.

Hoſt. Let vs wag then.

Cai. Come at my heeles, Iack Rugby.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scœna Prima.

Enter Euans, Simple, Page, Shallow, Slender, Hoſt, Caius, Rugby.

Euans. I pray you now, good Maſter Slenders ſeruing-man, and friend Simple by your name; which way haue you look'd for Maſter Caius, that calls himſelfe Doctor of Phiſicke.

Sim. Marry Sir, the pittie-ward, the Parke-ward: euery way: olde Windſor way, and euery way but the Towne-way.

Euans. I moſt fehemently deſire you, you will alſo looke that way.

Sim. I will ſir.

Euans. 'Pleſſe my ſoule how full of Chollors I am, and trempling of mind! I ſhall be glad if he haue deceiued me: how melancholies I am? I will knog his Vrinalls about his knaues coſtard, when I haue good oportunities for the orke: 'Pleſſe my ſoule: To ſhallow Riuers to whoſe falls: melodious Birds ſings Madrigalls: There will we make our Peds of Roſes: and a thouſand fragrant poſies. To ſhallow: 'Mercie on mee, I haue a great diſpoſitions to cry. Melodious birds ſing Madrigalls: [illegible] When as I ſit in Pabilon: and a thouſand vagrom Poſies. To ſhallow, &c.

Sim. Yonder he is comming, this way, Sir Hugh.

Euans. Hee's welcome: To ſhallow Riuers, to whoſe falls: Heauen proſper the right: what weapons is he?

Sim. No weapons, Sir: there comes my Maſter, Mr. Shallow, and another Gentleman; from Frogmore, ouer the ſtile, this way.

Euans. Pray you giue mee my gowne, or elſe keepe it in your armes.

Shal. How now Maſter Parſon? good morrow good Sir Hugh: keepe a Gameſter from the dice, and a good Studient from his booke, and it is wonderfull.

Slen. Ah ſweet Anne Page.

Euans. 'Pleſſe you from his mercy-ſake, all of you.

Shal. What? the Sword, and the Word? Doe you ſtudy them both, Mr. Parſon?

Page. And youthfull ſtill, in your doublet and hoſe, this raw-rumaticke day?

Euans. There is reaſons, and cauſes for it.

Page. We are come to you, to doe a good office, Mr Parſon.

Euans. Fery-well: what is it?

Page. Yonder is a moſt reuerend Gentleman; who (be-like) hauing receiued wrong by ſome perſon, is at moſt odds with his owne grauity and patience, that euer you ſaw.

Shal. I haue liued foure-ſcore yeeres, and vpward: I neuer heard a man of his place, grauity, and learning, ſo wide of his owne reſpect.

Euans. What is he?

Page. I thinke you know him: Mr. Doctor Caius the renowned French Phyſician.

Euans. Got's-will, and his paſſion of my heart: I had as lief you would tell me of a meſſe of porredge.

Page. Why?

Euans. He has no more knowledge in Hibocrates and Galen, and he is a knaue beſides: a cowardly knaue, as you would deſires to be acquainted withall.

Page. I warrant you, hee's the man ſhould fight with him.

Slen. O ſweet Anne Page.

Shal. It appeares ſo by his weapons: keepe them aſunder: here comes Doctor Caius.

Page. Nay good Mr. Parſon, keepe in your weapon.

Shal. So doe you, good Mr. Doctor.

Hoſt. Diſarme them, and let them queſtion: let them keepe their limbs whole, and hack our Engliſh.

Cai. I pray you let-a-mee ſpeake a word with your eare; wherefore will you not meet-a me?

Euans. Pray you vſe your patience in good time.

Cai. By-gar, you are de Coward: de Iack dog: Iohn Ape.

Euans. Pray you let vs not be laughing-ſtocks to other mens humors: I deſire you in friendſhip, and I will one way or other make you amends: I will knog your Vrinal about your knaues Cogs-combe.

Cai. Diable: Iack Rugby: mine Hoſt de Iarteere haue I not ſtay for him, to kill him? haue I not at de place I did appoint?

Euans. As I am a Chriſtians ſoule, now looke you: this is the place appointed, Ile bee iudgement by mine Hoſt of the Garter.

Hoſt. Peace-quil ſay, Gallia and Gaule, French & Welſh, Soule-Curer, and Body-Curer.

Cai. I,

Cai. I, dat is very good, excellant.

Hoſt. Peace, I pray: here mine Hoſt of the Garter, Am I politike? Am I ſubtle? Am I a Machiuel? Shall I looſe my Doctor? No, he gues me the Potions and the Motions. Shall I looſe my Parſon? my Prieſt? my Sir Hugh? No, he gues me the Prouerbes, and the No-verbes. Giue me thy hand (Celeſtial) ſo: Boy.

Art. I haue deceiued you ſo often, I haue deſerued to weare your Liuery: but now I haue ſeene you in a right place. Your hearts are mighty, your skins are whole, and let burn Saint Ottes Crowne. Let vſ by our ſwords to pawne, follow me Lad of peace, follow, follow, follow.

Shal. Truſt me, a mad Hoſt: follow Gentlemen, follow.

Sen. O well ſung Anne Page.

Cai. And do I pertaine the deare: Haue you made-de-ſot of vs, ha, ha?

Eua. This is well, ſhe has made vs her vouching-boy: I deſire you that we may be friends, and let our prattles together to effect to morrow in the afternoone, when we may drink a boule at the Ordinary-comfort, and voyd our ſeuerall waies.

Cai. By gar me will kill de Prieſt, for him ſpeake me well of Anne Page: by gar me will kill him.

Eua. Well I will ſmite his noddles: pray you follow.

Scena Secunda.

Mr. Page, Ford, Fenton, Caius, Slender, Hoſt, Euans, Quiſ.

Mr. Pa. Nay haue you no more to ſay? Cannot I go with you, but muſt I tell you my buſineſſe? Will you looke vpon my daughter, and not know how to diſpoſe of her? Muſt ſhe needs go and marry with her fortune-tooke? Shall I not know how to beſtow her? Muſt ſhe be directed by her owne eyes, or eyes of other mens heads?

Slen. Indeed I had rather haue ſpoken with her my ſelfe, then haue had any man elſe: I know not how I haue offended: but that (if a man will take vpon him to be mad) he muſt anſwer it himſelfe.

Mr. Pa. You are too impatient to beare croſſes. Wife, where is your daughter?

Ford. Where is my wife, Sir?

Mr. Pa. Truly Sir, I care not where you wife, ſhe is not here.

Ford. I, and ſo I am perſwaded ſhe may be, and in company I take your couſen Fenton to be one of: and they two would marry.

Mr. Pa. Before I that euer I conſented.

Ford. Where haue you that peeuiſh vanity found?

Mr. Pa. I can tell you what the doctor tells me, and more is my husband and mine, what do you ſay, Sir Hugh?

Rob. Sir Iohn Falſtaffe.

Ford. Sir Iohn Falſtaffe.

Mr. Pa. He, he, I can neuer hit on's name; there is ſuch a league betweene my goodman, and he: is breake out.

Ford. Indeed then.

Mr. Pa. By your leaue (for I am ſicke) I will depart.

Ford. Has Page any braines? Hath he any eyes? Has he any thinking? Sure they ſleepe, he hath no vſe of them: why this boy will carue a Hen-cocke, or a Capon-cocke, or a Prieſt-cocke, or a Sparrow, or a knaue, or a foole, and he ſees not the right caſe. He takes Wiues for Boyes, and Children for Riches, and flatteries for Friendſhips, and wiues for Huſbands. I am ſhrunke in my wiues affection, and my goods are melted away in my wiues humour. Well, I will find you twenty laſciuious Turtles ere one chaſte man.

Hoſt. Hearke you, M. Ford, you ſimple Aſſe: to morrow is a great day at Heath: come, if you be men, follow mine Hoſt.

Ford. Well, I will looke further into't, and I will not baſely depart the houſe.

Cai. By gar, nor I too: there is ſome bodies deceiue my ſelfe.

Ford. Will you go with vs to behold it? My Hoſt hath had the meaſuring of their weapons, and (I think) hath appointed them contrary places: for (believe me) I heare the Parſon is no Ieſter. Hearke I will tell you what our ſport ſhall be.

Hoſt. Will you go Maſters?

Slen. Will you go, Couſen?

Cai. Will I follow mine Hoſt, I warrant you, for de ſport.

Ford. Will you go, Gentlemen?

All. Haue with you, to ſee this Monſter. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Mr. Ford, Mr. Page, Seruants, Robert, Ford, Fenton and Euans.

Mr. Ford. Where is Sir Iohn? Come, where is Sir Iohn?

Mr. Page. Quick, quick, where is the Knight?

Mr. Ford. I am glad I am ſo acquit of this tricke.

Mr. Page. Come, come, come.

Mr. Ford. Here, ſet it downe.

Mr. Page. Giue your men the charge we muſt be briefe.

Mr. Ford. Marrie as I told you before (Iohn & Robert) be ready here hard-by in the brew-houſe, & when I ſodainly call you, come forth, and (without any pauſe or ſtaggering) take this basket on your ſhoulders: that done, trudge with it in all haſte, and carry it among the Whitſters in Datchet Mead, and there empty it in the muddie ditch, cloſe by the Thames ſide.

Mr. Page. You will do it?

Mr. Ford. I haue told them ouer and ouer, they lacke no

Be gone, and come when you are call'd.

M.Page. Here comes little Robin. (with you?

Miſt.Ford. How now my Eyas-Muſket, what newes

Rob. My M.Sir Iohn is come in at your backe doore (Miſt.Ford, and requeſts your company.

M.Page. You little Iack-a-lent, haue you bin true to vs

Rob. I, I'le be ſworne: my Maſter knowes not of your being heere: and hath threatned to put me into euerla-ſting libertie, if I tell you of it: for he ſweares he'l turne me away.

Miſt.Page. Thou'rt a good boy: this ſecrecy of thine ſhall be a Tailor to thee, and ſhall make thee a new dou-blet and hoſe. I'le go hide me.

Mr.Ford. Do ſo: go tell thy Maſter, I am alone: Miſt. Page, remember you your Cue.

M.Page. I warrant thee, if I do not act it, hiſſe me.

Miſt.Ford. Go-too then: we'l vſe this vnwholeſome humidity, this groſſe watry Pumpion: we'l teach him to know Turtles from Iayes.

Fal. Haue I caught thee, my heauenly Iewell? Why now let me die, for I haue liu'd long enough: This is the period of my ambition: O this bleſſed houre.

Miſt.Ford. O ſweet Sir Iohn.

Fal. Miſtris Ford, I cannot cog, I cannot prate (Miſt Ford) now ſhall I ſin in my wiſh: I would thy Huſband were dead, I'le ſpeake it before the beſt Lord, I would make thee my Lady.

Miſt.Ford. I your Lady Sir Iohn? Alas, I ſhould be a pittifull Lady.

Fal. Let the Court of France ſhine vpon her, and call her faire: I'le proue it in any Ladie of Venetian admittance.

Miſt Ford. A plaine Kerchiefe, Sir Iohn: My browes become nothing elſe, nor that well neither.

Fal. Thou art a tyrant to ſay ſo: thou would'ſt make an abſolute Courtier, and the firme fixure of thy foote, would giue an excellent motion to thy gate, in a ſem-icircled Farthingale. I ſee what thou wert, if Fortune thy foe were not Nature thy friend: Come, thou can'ſt not hide it.

Miſt.Ford. Beleeue me, there's no ſuch thing in me.

Fal. What made me loue thee? Let that perſwade thee. There's ſomething extraordinary in thee: Come, I cannot cog, and ſay thou art this and that, like a many of theſe liſping-hauthorne buds, that come like women in mens apparrell, and ſmell like Bucklers-berry in ſimple time: I cannot, but I loue thee, none but thee; and thou deſerui'ſt it.

Miſt Ford. Do not betray me ſir, I feare you loue M.Page.

Fal. Thou might'ſt as well ſay, I loue to walke by the Counter-gate, which is as hatefull to me, as the reeke of a Lime-kill.

Miſt Ford. Well, heauen knowes how I loue you, And you ſhall one day finde it.

Fal. Keepe in that minde, I'le deſerue it.

Miſt Ford. Nay I muſt tell you, ſo you doe; Or elſe I could not be in that minde.

Hoſt. Miſtris Ford, Miſtris Ford: heere's Miſtris Page at the doore ſweating, and blowing, and looking wildely, and would needes ſpeake with you preſently.

Fal. She ſhall not ſee me, I will enſconce mee behinde the Arras.

Miſt Ford. Pray you do ſo, ſhe's a very tatling woman. What's the matter? How now?

Miſt.Page. O miſtris Ford what haue you done? You're ſham'd, y'are ouerthrowne, y'are vndone for euer.

M.Ford. What's the matter, good miſtris Page?

M.Page. O welladay, miſt.Ford, hauing an honeſt man to your husband, to giue him ſuch cauſe of ſuſpition.

M.Ford. What cauſe of ſuſpition?

M.Page. What cauſe of ſuſpition? Out vpon you: How am I miſtooke in you?

M.Ford. Why (alas) what's the matter?

M.Page. Your husband's comming hether (Woman) with all the Officers in Windſor, to ſearch for a Gentle-man, that he ſayes is heere now in the houſe; by your conſent to take an ill aduantage of his abſence: you are vndone.

M.Ford. 'Tis not ſo, I hope.

M.Page. Pray heauen it be not ſo, that you haue ſuch a man heere: but 'tis moſt certaine your husband's com-ming, with halfe Windſor at his heeles, to ſerch for ſuch a one, I come before to tell you: If you know your ſelfe cleere, why I am glad of it: but if you haue a friend here, conuey, conuey him out. Be not amaz'd, call all your ſenſes to you, defend your reputation, or bid farwell to your good life for euer.

M.Ford. What ſhall I do? There is a Gentleman my deere friend: and I feare not mine owne ſhame ſo much, as his perill. I had rather then a thouſand pound he were out of the houſe.

M.Page. For ſhame, neuer ſtand (you had rather, and you had rather:) your husband's heere at hand, bethinke you of ſome conueyance: in the houſe you cannot hide him. Oh, how haue you deceiu'd me? Looke, heere is a baſket, if he be of any reaſonable ſtature, he may creepe in heere, and throw foule linnen vpon him, as if it were going to bucking: Or it is whiting time, ſend him by your two men to Datchet-Meade.

M.Ford. He's too big to go in there: what ſhall I do?

Fal. Let me ſee't, let me ſee't, O let me ſee't: I'le in, I'le in: Follow your friends counſell, I'le in.

M.Page. What Sir Iohn Falſtaffe? Are theſe your Let-ters, Knight?

Fal. I loue thee, helpe mee away: let me creepe in heere: I'le neuer——

M.Page. Helpe to couer your maſter (Boy:) Call your men (Miſt.Ford.) You diſſembling Knight.

M.Ford. What Iohn, Robert, Iohn; Go, take vp theſe cloathes heere, quickly: Where's the Cowle-ſtaffe? Look how you drumble? Carry them to the Landreſſe in Dat-cher mead: quickly, come.

Ford. 'Pray you come neere: if I ſuſpect without cauſe, Why then make ſport at me, then let me be your ieſt, I deſerue it: How now? Whether beare you this?

Ser. To the Landreſſe forſooth?

M.Ford. Why, what haue you to doe whether they beare it? You were beſt meddle with buck-waſhing.

Ford. Buck? I would I could waſh my ſelfe of ſ Buck: Buck, buck, buck, I buck: I warrant you Buck, And of the ſeaſon too; it ſhall appeare.
Gentlemen, I haue dream'd to night, I'le tell you my dreame: heere, heere, heere bee my keyes, aſcend my Chambers, ſearch, ſeeke, finde out: I'le warrant wee'le vnkennell the Fox. Let me ſtop this way firſt: ſo, now vncape.

You wrong your ſelfe too much.

Ford. True (maſter Page) vp Gentlemen,
You ſhall ſee ſport anon:

Follow

Follow me Gentlemen.

Euans. This is fery fantaſticall humors and iealouſies.

Caius. By gar, 'tis no-tne faſhion of France.
It is not iealous in France.

Miſt Page Is there not a double excellency in this?

Miſt Ford. I know not which pleaſes me better,
That my husband is deceiued, or Sir Iohn

Miſt. Page. What a taking was he in, when your husband askt who was in the basket?

Miſt. Ford. I am halfe afraid he will haue need of waſhing; ſo throwing him into the water, will doe him a benefit.

Miſt. Page Hang him diſhoneſt raſcal! I would all of the ſame ſtraine, were in the ſame diſtreſſe.

Miſt Ford I thinke my husband hath ſome ſpeciall ſuſpition of Falſtaffs being here: for I neuer ſaw him ſo grоſſe in his iealouſie till now.

Miſt. Page. I will ſpeake of it to try him, and we will yet haue more trickes with Falſtaffe: his diſſolute diſeaſe will ſcarce obey this medicine.

Miſt Ford Shall we ſend that fooliſh Carion, Miſt. Quickly to him, and excuſe his throwing into the water, and giue him another hope, to betray him to another puniſhment?

Miſt. Page. We will do it: let him be ſent for to-morrow eight a clocke to haue amends.

Ford. I cannot finde him: may be the knaue bragg'd of that he could not compaſſe.

Miſt. Page. Heard you that?

Miſt Ford. You vſe me well, M. Ford? Do you?

Ford. I, I do ſo.

Mi. Ford. Heauen make you better then your thoghts

Ford. Amen.

Mr. Page. You do your ſelfe mighty wrong (M. Ford)

Ford. I, I: I muſt beare it.

Eu. If there be any pody in the houſe & in the chambers, and in the coffers, and in the preſſes heauen forgiue my ſins at the day of iudgement

Caius. Be gar, nor I too: there is no-bodies.

Page. Fy, fy, M Ford, are you not aſham'd? What ſpirit, what deuill ſuggeſts this imagination? I would not haue your diſtemper in this kinde, for the welth of Windſor Caſtle.

Ford. 'Tis my fault (M. Page) I ſuffer for it.

Euans. You ſuffer for a pad conſcience: your wife is as honeſt a o'mans, as I will deſires among fiue thouſand, and fiue hundred too.

Cai By gar, I ſee 'tis an honeſt woman

Ford. Well, I promiſd you a dinner: come, come, walk in the Parke, I pray you pardon me: I will hereafter make knowne to you why I haue done this. Come wife, come Mi. Page, I pray you pardon me. Pray heartily pardon me.

Page. Let's go in Gentlemen, but (truſt me) we'l mock him: I doe inuite you to-morrow morning to my houſe to breakfaſt: after we'l a Birding together, I haue a fine Hawke for the buſh. Shall it be ſo:

Ford. Any thing.

Eu. If there is one, I ſhall make two in the Compaſſe

Ca. If there be one, or two, I ſhall make a-tother

Ford. Pray you go, M. Page.

Eua. I pray you now remembrance to-morrow on the lowſie knaue, mine Hoſt.

Cai. Dat is good by gar, with all my heart.

Eua. A lowſie knaue, to haue his gibes, and his mockeries. Exeunt.

Scæna Quarta.

Enter Fenton, Anne, Page, Shallow, Slender, Quickly, Page, Miſt. Page.

Fen. I ſee I cannot get thy Fathers loue,
Therefore no more turne me to him (ſweet Nan.)

Anne. Alas, how then?

Fen. Why thou muſt be thy ſelfe.
He doth obiect, I am too great of birth,
And that my ſtate being gall'd with my expence,
I ſeeke to heale it only by his wealth
Beſides theſe, other barres he layes before me,
My Riots paſt, my wilde Societies,
And tells me 'tis a thing impoſſible
I ſhould loue thee, but as a property.

An. May be he tells you true.

Fen. No, heauen ſo ſpeed me in my time to come,
Albeit I will confeſſe, thy Fathers wealth
Was the firſt motiue that I woo'd thee (Anne)
Yet wooing thee, I found thee of more valew
Then ſtamps in Gold, or ſummes in ſealed bagges
And 'tis the very riches of thy ſelfe,
That now I aime at.

An. Gentle M. Fenton,
Yet ſeeke my Fathers loue, ſtill ſeeke it Sir,
If opportunity and humbleſt ſuite
Cannot attaine it, why then hark you hither.

Shal. Breake their talke Miſtreſs Quickly,
My Kinſman ſhall ſpeake for himſelfe.

Slen. Ile make a ſhaft or a bolt on't, ſlid, 'tis but venture.

Shal. Be not diſmaid.

Slen. No, ſhe ſhall not diſmay me:
I care not for that, but that I am afeard.

Quic. Hoſt ye M. Slender would ſpeak a word with you.

An. I come to him. This is my Fathers choice.
O what a world of vile ill-fauour'd faults
Lookes handſome in three hundred pounds a yeere?

Quic. And how does good Maſter Fenton?
Pray you a word with you

Shal. Shee's comming; to her Coz:
O boy, thou had'ſt a father.

Slen. I had a father (M. Anne) my vncle can tell you good ieſts of him: pray you Vncle tell Miſt. Anne the ieſt how my Father ſtole two Geeſe out of a Pen, good Vnckle.

Shal. Miſtreſs Anne, my Coz loues you.

Slen. I that I do, as well as I loue any woman in Glocerſhire.

Shal. He will maintaine you like a Gentlewoman.

Slen. I that I will, come cut and long-taile, vnder the degree of a Squire.

Shal. He will make you a hundred and fiftie pounds ioyncture.

Anne. Good Maſter Shallow let him woo for himſelfe.

Shal. Marrie I thanke you for it: I thanke you for that good comfort. She calls you (Coz) I leaue you.

Anne. Now Maſter Slender.

Slen. Now good Miſtreſs Anne.

Anne. What is your will?

Slen. My will? Odd's-hart-lings, that's a prettie ieſt indeede: I ne're made my Will yet (I thanke heauen) I am not ſuch a ſickely creature, I giue Heauen praiſe.

Anne. I meane M. Slender, what would you with me?
Slen. I [illegible] how neere it would be or nothing [illegible] made mowers of [illegible] mercers
[illegible] go [illegible] I can you may take your [illegible] heere comes.
Page. Now Mr Slender, I [illegible] Mr.
Wee how now? What does Mr Fenton here?
You wrong me Sir, thus still to haue my house
I told you Sir, my daughter is disposed of
Fen. Nay Mr Page be not impatient.
Mrs Page. Good M Fenton come not to my child.
Page. She is no match for you.
Fen. Sir, will you heare me?
Page. No, good M. Fenton.
Come, M. Slender, come Slender, in;
[illegible] M. Fenton)
[illegible] Speake Mistris Page.
Fen. Good Mr Page, for that I loue your daughter
[illegible] as I do,
Perfect [illegible] kisses, and manners,
[illegible] colours of my loue,
[illegible] Let me haue your good will
Anne. Good mother, do not marry me to yond foole.
Mrs Page. I meane it not, I seeke you a better husband [illegible] master M Doctor.
[illegible] had rather [illegible] quicke with earth,
[illegible] with Lungs.
Mrs Page. Come, trouble not your selfe good M.
Fenton, I will not be your friend, nor enemy
My daughter will I question how she loues you,
And as I finde her, so am I affected:
Till then, farewell Sir, she must needs go in,
Her father will be angry.
Fen. Farewell gentle Mistris: farewell Nan.
[illegible] Nay, mistris, will you
[illegible] a sole, and a dish apiece?
[illegible] M. Fenton, this is my doing.
[illegible] once to night,
[illegible] Nan's dish of prawnes.
[illegible] good fortune, a thousand
[illegible] through fire & water
[illegible] however, I would my Maister had Mistris Anne, or I would Master Slender had her, or (in sooth I would) M Fenton had her, I will do what I can for them all, three or two of them, they could, and I would [illegible] as my word, but speciously for M. Fenton. Well, I must of another errand to Sir Iohn Falstaffe from my two Mistresses: what a beast am I to slacke it. Exeunt

Scena Quinta.

Enter Falstaffe, Bardolfe, Quickly, Ford.
[illegible]
Fal. Heere Sir
Fal. [illegible] put a toste in [illegible] beare it in a basket like a barrow of butchers proffer: and to be throwne in the Thames? Well, if I be serued, I shall haue another tricke. I haue my braines ta'ne out and buttered, and giue them to a dogge for a
New-yeares gift. The rogues slighted me into the riuer with as little remorse, as they would haue drown'd a blinde bitches Puppies, fifteene i'th litter: and you may know by my size, that I haue a kinde of alacrity in sinking [illegible] could not haue repeas'd me downe,
I should haue been [illegible] the flesh of a dead man, and what a thing should I haue been, when I had been swel'd? I should haue been a Mountaine of Mummie.
Bar. Here's M. Quickly Sir to speake with you.
Fal. Come let me poure in some Sack to the Thames water: for my bellies as cold as if I had swallow'd snowballs, for pills to coole the reines. Call her in.
Bar. Come in woman.
Qui. By your leaue: I cry you mercy!
Giue your worship good morrow.
Fal. Take away these Chalices:
Go, brew me a pottle of Sacke finely.
Bard. With Egges Sir?
Fal. Simple of it selfe: Ile no Pullet-Sperme in my brewage How now?
Qui. Marry Sir, I come to your worship from M. Ford.
Fal. Ast ford: I haue had Ford enough. I was throwne into the Ford; I haue my belly full of Ford.
Qui. Alas the day, (good-heart) that was not her fault she do's so take on with her men; they mistooke their erection (promise.
Fal. So did I mine, to build vpon a foolish Woman's
Qui. Well, she laments Sir for it, that it would yern your heart to see it. Her husband goes this morning a birding, she desires you once more to come to her, betweene eight and nine: I must carry her word quickely, she'll make you amends I warrant you.
Fal. Well, I will visit her, tell her so: and bidde her thinke what a man is: Let her consider his frailety, and then iudge of my merit.
Qui. I will tell her.
Fal. Do so. Betweene nine and ten saist thou?
Qui. Eight and nine Sir.
Fal. Well, be gone: I will not misse her.
Qui. Peace be with you Sir.
Fal. I meruaile I heare not of Mr Broome: he sent me word to stay within: I like his money well.
Oh, heere he comes
Ford. Blesse you Sir.
Fal. Now M. Broome, you come to know
What hath past betweene me, and Ford's wife.
Ford. That indeed (Sir Iohn) is my businesse
Fal. M. Broome I will not lye to you,
I was at her house the houre she appointed me.
Ford. And how speed you Sir?
Fal. very ill-fauouredly M. Broome.
Ford. How so Sir, did she change her determination?
Fal. No (M Broome) but the peaking Cornuto her husband M Broome, dwelling in a continuall larum of iea-lousie comes me in the instant of our encounter, after we had embrac't, kist, protested, & (as it were) spoke the prologue of our Comedy: and at his heele, a rabble of his companions [illegible] and by his diuel-temper,
and [illegible] for his wiues Loue.
Ford. How? my Wife was there?
Fal. Why I was there.
Ford. And he was out for you, & could not find you?
Fal. You shall heare. As good [illegible] would haue it, comes in one Mist Page giues me intelligence of Fords approach and his [illegible] on, and Fords wiues distracted,
they conuey'd me into a buck-basket.

Ford

Ford. A Buck-basket?

Fal. Yes a Buck-basket ram'd mee in with foule Shirts and Smockes, Socks, foule Stockings, greate Napkins, (Maſter Broome) there was the rankeſt compound of villanous ſmell, that ever offended noſtrill.

Ford. And how long ay you there?

Fal. Nay, you ſhall heare (Maſter Broome) what I haue ſuffered, to bring this woman to me, for your good. Being thus cram'd in the Basket, a couple of Ford's knaues his Hindes, were call forth by their Miſtreſſe, to carry mee in the name of foule Cloathes to Datcheret: they tooke me on their ſhoulders, met the iealous knaue their Maſter in the doore, who aſk'd them once or twice what they had in their Basket: I quak'd for feare leaſt the Lunatique Knaue would haue ſearch'd it: but Fate (for a while) ordain'd he ſhould be a Cuckold: held his hand: well: on I went: bleſſed an houre: into the Ditch they caſt me: with the foule Shirts: and there was I for foure houres ſtifled: (as I ſhall anſwere it Maſter Broome) I ſhall ſmell of it this ſeuenight. Neuer did Witch take more paines in Charming, than I did in Conſuring: that ſhall be my laſt Worke, I aſſure you. Next to be throwne into the Thames: and cooled glowing hot, in that ſcalding Liquor. Is not Eyſell enough to ſower Sweete Diſpoſitions? Is not Water enough to coole an Vnreaſonable Heate? Well: I ſuffer'd, I ſuffer'd for it: yet is this no Charme for Cold, nor a Med'cine for Moiſt: my Traine is almoſt choakt with the ſtinke of foule Linnen, that in the waſhing hath almoſt ſtifled me. Nay, you ſhall heare (Maſter Broome) what I haue ſuffered, to bring this woman to me, for your good. Being thus cram'd in the Basket, a couple of Ford's knaues his Hindes, were call forth by their Miſtreſſe, to carry mee in the name of foule Cloathes to Datcheret: they tooke me on their ſhoulders, met the iealous knaue their Maſter in the doore, who aſk'd them once or twice what they had in their Basket: I quak'd for feare leaſt the Lunatique Knaue would haue ſearch'd it: but Fate (for a while) ordain'd he ſhould be a Cuckold: held his hand: well: on I went: bleſſed an houre: into the Ditch they caſt me: with the foule Shirts: and there was I for foure houres ſtifled: (as I ſhall anſwere it Maſter Broome) I ſhall ſmell of it this ſeuenight. Ford. In good ſadneſſe Sir, I am ſorry, that for my ſake you haue ſuffered all this.
My ſuite then is deſperate: You'll vndertake her no more?

Fal. Maſter Broome, I will be throwne into Etna, as I haue beene into Thames, ere I will leaue her thus. Her Husband is this morning gone a Birding: I haue receiued from her another ambaſſe of meeting: 'twixt eight and nine is the houre (Maſter Broome).

Ford. 'Tis paſt eight already Sir.

Fal. Is it? Then will I addreſſe me to my appointment. Come to me at your conuenient leiſure, and you ſhall know how I ſpeede: and the concluſion ſhall be crowned with your enioying her. Adieu. You ſhall haue her Maſter Broome. Maſter Broome, you ſhall cuckold Ford.

Ford. Hum: ha? Is this a viſion? Is this a dreame? Do I ſleepe? Maſter Ford awake, awake Maſter Ford: there's a hole made in your beſt coate. Maſter Ford, this is to be married; this is to haue Linnen, and Buck-baskets. Well, I will proclaime my ſelfe what I am. I will now take the Lecher: he is at my houſe: he cannot ſcape me: 'tis impoſſible he ſhould: he cannot creepe into a halfe-penny purſe, nor into a Pepper-Box: But leaſt the Deuill that guides him, ſhould aide him, I will ſearch impoſſible places: though what I am, I cannot auoyde; yet to be what I would not, ſhall not make me tame. If I haue hornes, to make one mad, let the prouerbe goe with me, Ile be horne-mad. Exeunt

Actus Quartus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Miſtris Page, Quickly, William, Euans.

Mil. Page. Is he at Maſter Fords already, thinkeſt thou?

Qui. Sure he is by this, or will be preſently; but truely he is very courageous mad, about his throwing into the water. Miſtreſſe Ford deſires you to come ſodainely.

Mil. Pag. Ile be with her by and by: Ile but bring my yong man here to ſchoole. Looke where his Maſter comes, 'tis a playing day I ſee. How now Sir Hugh, no ſchoole to day?

Eua. No Maſter, becauſe it is the Boyes leaue to play.

Qui. Well ſaid, fellow Comfort.

Mil. Pag. Come hither, William, hold vp your head; come.

Mil. Pag. Come on Sirra; hold vp your head, anſwere your Maſter, be not afraid.

Eua. William, how many Numbers is in Nownes?

Will. Two.

Qui. Truely I thought there had been one Number more, becauſe they ſay, Od's Nownes.

Eua. Peace your tatlings. What is Faire, William?

Will. Pulcher.

Qui. Powle-cats? there are fairer things than Powle-cats, ſure.

Eua. You are a very ſimplicity 'oman. I pray you peace. What is Lapis, William?

Will. A Stone.

Eua. And what is a Stone, William?

Will. A Pebble.

Eua. No, it is Lapis. I pray you remember in your prain.

Will. Lapis.

Eua. That is good William. What is Lapis, William?

Will. A Stone.

Eua. And what is a Stone, William?

Will. A Pebble.

Eua. No, it is Lapis. Vse it no more, than a Stone, and be remembers it.

Will. Well, I will vſe it then.

Eua. Harke you, what is your name, William?

Will. Jacke Rugby.

Eua. What is the Accuſatiue Caſe of Mons?

Will. Mons? A Hill.

Eua. What is the Genitiue Caſe multitudinis?

Will. Forſooth I forget.

Eua. Sticke not to tell me, William. Remember, William, Focatiue is caret.

Qui. And that's a good roote.

Eua. Oman, forbear.

Mil. Pag. Peace.

Eua. What is your Genitiue Caſe plurall, William?

Will. Genitiue Caſe?

Eua. I.

Will. Genitiue Caſe: horum, harum, horum.

Qui. Vengeance of Ginyes Caſe, fie on her, neuer name her, child, if ſhe be a whore.

Eua. For ſhame 'oman.

Qui. You do ill to teach the child ſuch words: he teaches him to hic, and to hac, which they'll do faſt enough of themſelues, and to call horum, fie vpon you.

Eua. Oman

Euans. O man, art thou lunatics? Haſt thou no vnderſtanding for thy Caſes, & the numbers of the Genders? Thou art as good a Chriſtian creature, as I would deſire.

Mrs. Page. Prethee hold thy peace.

Euans. Shew me now (for my ſtudy) the declenſions of your Pronounes.

Will. Forſooth, I haue forgot.

Euans. It is Qui, quæ, quod, if you forget your Quies, your Ques, and your Quods, you muſt be preeches. Goe your waies and play, go.

Mr. Page. He is a better ſcholler then I thought he was.

Euans. He is a good ſprag memory: Farewel Mrs. Page.

Mrs. Page. Adieu good Sir Hugh.
Get you home boy. Come we ſtay too long. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Falſtaffe, Miſt. Ford, Miſt. Page, Seruants Ford, Page, Caius, Euans, Shallow.

Fal. Miſt. Ford. Your ſorrow hath eaten vp my ſufferance: I ſee you are obſequious in your loue, and I profeſſe requitall to a hayre: not only Miſt. Ford, in the ſimple office of loue, but in all the accoutrement, complement, and ceremony of it. But are you ſure of your husband now?

Mrs. Ford. He's a birding (ſweet Sir Iohn).

Mr. Page. What hoa, goſſip Ford! what hoa.

Mrs. Ford. Step into th'chamber, Sir Iohn.

Mrs. Page. How now (ſweet heart), whole at home before vs?

Mrs. Ford. Why none but mine owne people.

Mrs. Page. Indeed?

Mrs. Ford. No certainly. Speake loader.

Mrs. Page. In truth, Maiſter Ford, you haue no body here.

Mrs. Ford. Why?

Mrs. Page. Why woman, your husband is in his olde lines againe: he ſo vexes me with my husband, for ſeruing him a Subpœna, to appeare before the Lords at Ludlow to morrow, or next day, for old matters of forty yeares ſtanding, time out of mind, time out of memory, and I know not what: that my husband came not home till foure of the clocke, that he ſtood in his owne doore, and could not be ſeene, with ſuch other Iniurious, vngodly, diſordered, and farre vnſeemely carriages, as euer honeſt wiues endured: but I am glad the Knight is not here now, he ſhall ſee his owne foolerie.

Mrs. Ford. How neere is he Miſtris Page?

Mrs. Page. Hard by, at ſtreet end, he will be here anon.

Mrs. Ford. I am vndone, the Knight is here.

Mrs. Page. Why then you are vtterly ſham'd, & he's but a dead man. What a woman are you? Away with him, away with him, better ſhame then murther.

Mrs. Ford. Which way ſhould he go? How ſhould I beſtow him? ſhall I put him into the basket againe?

Fal. No, I come no more i'th Basket:
May I not go out ere he come?

Mrs. Page. Alas: three of Mr. Fords brothers watch the doore with Piſtols, that none ſhall iſſue out: otherwiſe you might ſlip away ere hee came: But what make you heere?

Fal. What ſhall I do? Ile creepe vp into the chimney.

Mrs. Ford. There they alwaies vſe to diſcharge their Birding-peeces: creepe into the Kill-hole.

Fal. Where is it?

Mrs. Ford. He will ſeeke there on my word: Neyther Preſſe, Coffer, Cheſt, Trunke, Well, Vault, but he hath an abſtract for the remembrance of ſuch places, and goes to them by his Note: There is no hiding you in the houſe.

Fal. Ile go out then.

Mrs. Ford. If you goe out in your owne ſemblance, you die Sir Iohn, vnleſſe you go out diſguis'd.

Mrs. Ford. How might we diſguiſe him?

Mrs. Page. Alas the day I know not, there is no womans gowne bigge enough for him: otherwiſe he might put on a hat, a muffler, and a kerchiefe, and ſo eſcape.

Fal. Good hearts, deuiſe ſomething: any extremitie, rather than a miſchiefe.

Mrs. Ford. My Maids Aunt the fat woman of Braineford, has a gowne aboue.

Mrs. Page. On my word it will ſerue him: ſhee's as big as he is: and there's her thrum'd hat, and her muffler too: run vp Sir Iohn.

Mrs. Ford. Go, go, ſweet Sir Iohn: Miſtris Page and I will looke ſome linnen for your head.

Mrs. Page. Quicke, quicke, wee'le come dreſſe you ſtraight: put on the gowne the while.

Mrs. Ford. I would my husband would meete him in this ſhape: he cannot abide the old woman of Braineford; he ſweares ſhe's a witch, forbad her my houſe, and hath threatned to beate her.

Mrs. Page. Heauen guide him to thy husbands cudgell: and the diuell guide his cudgell afterwards.

Mrs. Ford. But is my husband comming?

Mrs. Page. I in good ſadneſſe is he, and talkes of the basket too, howſoeuer he hath had intelligence.

Mrs. Ford. Wee'l try that: for Ile appoint my men to carry the basket againe, to meete him at the doore with it, as they did laſt time.

Mrs. Page. Nay, but hee'l be heere preſently: let's go dreſſe him like the witch of Braineford.

Mrs. Ford. I'le firſt direct my men, what they ſhall doe with the basket: Goe vp, Ile bring linnen for him ſtraight.

Mrs. Page. Hang him diſhoneſt Varlet,
We cannot miſuſe enough,
We'll leaue a proofe by that which we will doo,
Wiues may be merry, and yet honeſt too:
We do not act that often ieſt, and laugh,
'Tis old, but true, Still Swine eat all the draugh.

Mrs. Ford. Go Sirs, take the baskes againe on your ſhoulders: your Maſter is hard at doore: if hee bid you ſet it downe, obey him: quickly, diſpatch.

1 Ser. Come, come, take it vp.

2 Ser. Pray heauen it be not full of Knight againe.

1 Ser. I hope not, I had liefe as beare ſo much lead.

Ford. I, but if it proue true (Mr. Page) haue you any way then to vnfoole me againe. Set downe the basket villaine. ſome body call my wife: Youth in a basket; Oh you Panderly Raſcals, there's a knot: a gin, a packe, a conſpiracie againſt me: Now ſhall the diuel be ſham'd. What wife I ſay: Come, come forth: behold what honeſt

…e I cloathes you forth to bleaching.

Page. Why, diſpaire M. Ford, you are not to goe loote any longer, you muſt be preſent.

Euans. Why, this is Lunatickes: this is madde, as a mad dogge.

Shal. Indeed M. Ford, this is not well indeed.

Ford. So say I too Sir, come hither Miſtris Ford, Miſtris Ford, the honeſt woman, the modeſt wife, the vertuous creature, that hath the ielous foole to her husband I ſuſpect without cauſe (Miſtris) do I?

Miſt. Ford. Heauen be my witneſſe you do if you ſuſpect me in any dishoneſty.

Ford. Well ſaid Braſen-face, hold it out. Come forth ſirrah.

Miſt Ford. Are you not aſham'd let the cloths alone.

Ford. I ſhall finde you anon.

Euan. 'Tis vnreaſonable; will you take vp your wiues cloathes? Come, away.

Ford. Empty the basket I ſay.

M. Ford. Why man, why?

Ford. Maſter Page, as I am a man, there was one conuay'd out of my houſe yeſterday in this basket: why may not he be there againe, in my houſe I am ſure he is: my intelligence is true, my ielouſie is reaſonable, pluck me out all the linnen.

Miſt. Ford. If you find a man there, he ſhall dye a Fleas death.

Page. Here's no man.

Shal. By my fidelity this is not well Mr. Ford: This wrongs you.

Euans. Mr Ford, you muſt pray, and not follow the imaginations of your owne heart: this is iealouſie.

Ford. Well: hee's not heere I ſeeke for.

Page. No, nor no where elſe but in your braine.

Ford. Helpe to ſearch my houſe this one time: if I find not what I ſeeke, ſhew no colour for my extremity: Let me for euer be your Table-ſport: Let them ſay of me, As iealous as Ford, that ſearch'd a hollow Wall-nut for his wife's Leman. Satisfie me once more, once more ſearch with me.

M. Ford. What hoa (Miſtris Page,) come you and the old woman downe: my husband will come into the Chamber.

Ford. Old woman? what old woman's that?

M. Ford. Why it is my maids Aunt of Braineford.

Ford. A witch, a Queane, an olde couzening queane. Haue I not forbid her my houſe. She comes of errands do ſhe? We are ſimple men, wee do not know what's brought to paſſe vnder the profeſſion of Fortune-telling. She works by Charmes, by Spells, by th' Figure, & ſuch dawbry as this is, beyond our Element: wee know nothing. Come downe you Witch, you Hagge you come downe I ſay.

Miſt. Ford. Nay, good ſweet husband, good Gentlemen, let him ſtrike the old woman.

Miſt. Page. Come mother Prat, Come giue me your hand.

Ford. Ile Prat-her. Out of my doore, you Witch, you Ragge, you Bagge, you Poulcat, you Runnion, out: I'le conſure you, I'le fortune-tell you.

Miſt. Page. Are you not aſham'd?
I think you'll beate the poore woman.

Miſt Ford. Nay: he will do it, 'tis a goodly credite for you.

Ford. Hang her witch.

Euan. By yea and no, I think the o'man is a witch indeed: I like not when a 'o'man has a great peard: I ſpie a great peard vnder his muffler.

Ford. Will you follow Gentlemen I beſeech you follow: ſee but the iſſue of my iealouſie: If I cry out thus vpon no traile, neuer truſt me when I open againe.

Miſt Page. Truſt me he beate him moſt pittifully.

Miſt Ford. Nay by th' Maſſe that he did not: he beate him moſt vnpittifully, me thought.

Miſt Page. Ile haue the cudgell hallow'd, and hung o're the Altar, it hath done meritorious ſeruice.

Miſt Ford. What think you? May we with the warrant of woman-hood and the witneſſe of a good conſcience, purſue him with any further reuenge?

M. Page. The ſpirit of wantonneſſe is ſure ſcar'd out of him, if the diuel haue him not in fee-ſimple, with fine and recouery, he will neuer (I think) in the way of waſte attempt vs againe.

Miſt. Ford. Shall we tell our husbands how we haue ſerued him?

Miſt Page. Yes, by all meanes: if it be but to ſcrape the figures out of your husbands braines: if they can finde in their hearts the poore vnuertuous fat knight ſhall be any further afflicted, wee two will ſtill be the miniſters.

Miſt. Ford. Ile warrant, they'l haue him publikely ſham'd, and me thinkes there would be no period to the ieſt ſhould he not be publikely ſham'd.

Miſt Page. Come, to the Forge with it, then ſhape it: I would not haue things coole. Exeunt

Scena Tertia.

Enter Hoſt and Bardolfe.

Bar. Sir, the Germane deſires to haue three of your horſes: the Duke himſelfe will be to morrow at Court, and they are going to meet him.

Hoſt. What Duke ſhould that be comes ſo ſecretly? I heare not of any in the Court. Let me ſpeake with the Gentlemen: they ſpeake Engliſh?

Bar. I Sir, Ile call him to you.

Hoſt. They ſhall haue my horſes, but Ile make them pay: I'le ſauce them, they haue had my houſes a week at command: I haue turn'd away my other gueſts, they muſt come off, Ile ſawce them come. Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Enter Page, Ford, Miſtris Page, Miſtris Ford, and Euans.

Eua. 'Tis one of the beſt diſcretions of a woman as euer I did looke vpon.

Page. And did he ſend you both theſe Letters at an inſtant?

Miſt Page. Within a quarter of an houre.

Ford. Pardon me (wife.) Henceforth do what ſ wilt: I rather will ſuſpect the Sunne with cold,
Then thee with wantonneſſe. Now doth thy honor ſtand

'In

(In him that was of late an Heretike)
As firme as faith.
Page. 'Tis well, 'tis well, no more
Be not as extreme in submission
But as extreme in offring fashion.
Yet couertly (for so much the matter holds)
Appoint a meeting with this old fat-fellow,
Where we may take him and disgrace him for it.
Ford. There is no better way then that they spoke of.
Page. How? to send him word they'll meete him in the Parke at midnight? Fie, fie, he'll neuer come.
Eu. You say he has been throwne into the Riuers and has been grieuously peaten, as an old man: me-thinkes there should be terrors in him, that he should not come. Me-thinkes his flesh is punish'd, he shall haue no desire.
Page. So think I too.
Mist. Ford. Deuise but how you'l vse him when he comes,
And let vs two deuise to bring him thither.
Mist. Page. There is an old tale goes, that Herne the Hunter, (time out of mind) walkes in the Parke euery night, with a great pair of Hornes on his head, like a Forrester, and there he blasts the tree, and takes the cattle, and makes milch-kine yeeld blood, and shakes a dreadfull chaine in a most hideous and terrible manner.
You haue heard of such a Spirit, and well you know the superstitious idle-headed Eld
Receiued, and did deliuer to our age
This tale of Herne the Hunter, for a truth.
Page. Why yet there want not many that do feare
In deepe of night to walke by this Hernes Oake.
But what of this?
Mist. Ford. Marry this is our deuise,
That Falstaffe at that Oake shall meete with vs.
Page. Well, eene it must be doubted but he'll come,
And in this shape, when you haue brought him thither,
What shall be done with him? What is your plot?
Mist. Pa. That likewise haue we thought vpon, & that Nan Page my daughter and my little sonne,
And three or foure more of their growth, we'll dresse
Like Vrchins, Ouphes and Fairies, greene and white,
With rounds of waxen tapers on their heads,
And rattles in their hands: vpon a sodaine,
As Falstaffe, she and I are newly met,
Let them from forth a saw-pit rush at once
With some diffused song: vpon their sight
We two, in great amazedness will fly:
Then let them all encircle him about,
And Fairy like, to-pinch the vncleane Knight;
And aske him why that houre of Fairy Reuell,
In their so sacred paths he dares to tread
In shape profane.
Ford. And till he tell the truth,
Let the supposed Fairies pinch him sound,
And burne him with their Tapers.
Mist. Page. The truth being known,
We'll all present our selues, dis-horne the spirit,
And mock him home to Windsor.
Ford. The children must
Be practis'd well to this, or they'll ne're do't.
Eua. I will teach the children their behauiours: and I will be like a Iacke-an-Apes also, to burne the Knight with my Taber.
Ford. That will be excellent,
Ile go buy them vizards.
Mist. Page. My Nan shall be the Queene of all the Fairies, finely attired in a robe of white.
Page. That silke will I go buy, and in that time
Shall M. Slender steale my Nan away,
And marry her at Eaton. Go, send to Falstaffe straight.
Ford. Nay, Ile to him again in name of Broome,
He'll tell me all his purpose, sure he'll come.
Mist. Page. Feare not you that. Go get vs properties
And tricking for our Fayries.
Euans. Let vs about it.
It is admirable pleasures, and ferry honest knaueries.
Mist. Page. Go Mist. Ford,
Send quickly to Sir Iohn, to know his mind.
Ile to the Doctor, he hath my good will,
And none but he to marry with Nan Page.
That Slender, though well landed, is an Idiot:
And he, my husband best of all affects.
The Doctor is well monied, and his friends
Potent at Court: he, none but he shall haue her,
Though twenty thousand worthier come to craue her.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Host, Simple, Falstaffe, Bardolfe, Euans, Caius, Quickly.

Host. What would'st thou haue (Boore) what? (thick skin) speake, breathe, discusse: breefe, short, quicke, snap.
Simp. Marry Sir, I come to speake with Sir Iohn Falstaffe from M. Slender.
Host. There's his Chamber, his House, his Castle, his standing-bed, and truckle-bed: 'tis painted about with the story of the Prodigall, fresh and new: go, knock and call: he'll speake like an Anthropophaginian vnto thee: knock I say.
Simp. There's an olde woman, a fat woman gone vp into his chamber: Ile be so bold as stay Sir till she come downe: I come to speake with her indeed.
Host. Ha? A fat woman? the Knight may be robb'd: Ile call. Bully Knight! Bully Sir Iohn! speake from thy Lungs Military: Art thou there? it is thine Host, thine Ephesian calles.
Fal. How now, mine Host?
Host. Here's a Bohemian Tartar tarries the comming downe of thy fat-woman. Let her descend (Bully) let her descend: my Chambers are honourable: Fie, priuacy? Fie.
Fal. There was (mine Host) an old-fat-woman euen now with me, but she's gone.
Simp. Pray you Sir, was't not the Wise-woman of Brainford?
Fal. I marry was it (Muffled fhell) what would you with her?
Simp. My Master (Sir) my master Slender, sent to her seeing her go through the streets to know (Sir) whether one Nim (Sir, that beguil'd him of a chaine, had the chaine or no.
Fal. I spake with the old woman about it.
Sim. And what sayes she, I pray Sir?
Fal. Marry she sayes, that the very same man that beguil'd Master Slender of his Chaine, cozon'd him of it.
Simp. I would I could haue spoken with the Woman her ſer ſeruice. I had other things to haue ſpoken with her too, from him.

Fal. What are they? let vs know.

Hoſt. I come quicke.

Fal. I may not conceale them Sir.)

Hoſt. Conceale them, or thou dyeſt.

Sim. Why Sir, they were nothing but about Miſtris Anne Page, to know if it were my Maſters fortune to haue her, or no.

Fal. 'Tis, and his fortune.

Sim. What Sir?

Fal. To haue her or no. Go, ſay the woman told me ſo.

Sim. May I be bold to ſay ſo Sir?

Fal. I Sir, like who more bold.

Sim. I humbly thank your worſhip: I ſhall make my Maſter glad with theſe tydings.

Hoſt. Thou are clearely: thou art clearely, Sir Hugh, was there a wiſe woman with thee?

Fal. I that there was, mine Hoſt, one that hath taught me more wit, then euer I learn'd before in my life: and I paid nothing for it neither, but was paid for my learning.

Bar. Out alas (Sir) cozonage, meere cozonage.

Hoſt. Where be my horſes? ſpeake well of them varletto.

Bar. Run away with the cozoners: for ſo ſoone as I came beyond Eaton, they threw me off, from behinde one of them, in a ſlough of myre, and ſet ſpurres, and away, like three Germane-hangmen, three Doctor Fauſtuſſes.

Hoſt. They are gone but to meete the Duke villaine, doſt not ſay they be fled: Germanes are honeſt men.

Euan. Where is mine Hoſt?

Hoſt. What is the matter Sir?

Euan. Haue a care of your entertainments: there is a friend of mine come to Towne, tells me there is three Cozen-Iermans, that has cozened all the Hoſts of Readins, of Maidenhead, of Cole-brooke, of horſes and money. I tell you for good will, (looke you) you are wiſe, and full of gibes, and vlouting-ſtocks: and 'tis not conuenient you ſhould be cozoned. Fare you well.

Car. Ver' is mine Hoſt de Iarteere?

Hoſt. Here (Maſter Doctor) in perplexitie, and doubtfull dilemma.

Car. I cannot tell vat is dat: but it is tell-a-me, dat you make grand preparation for a Duke de Iamanie: by my troth there is no Duke that the Court is know, to come: I tell you for good will: adieu.

Hoſt. Hay-de-hay, my humour goe: all the Knight I am vndone: fly, run, hue, and cry (villaine) I am vndone.

Fal. I would all the world might be cozoned, for I haue been cozoned and beaten too. If it ſhould come to the eare of the Court how I haue been transformed, and how my transformation hath been waſhed, and cudgeld, they would melt me out of my fat drop by drop, and liquor Fiſhermens-boots with me: I warrant they would whip me with their fine wits, till I were as creſt-falne as a dride-peare. I neuer proſpered, ſince I forſware my ſelfe at Primero. Well, if my wind were but long enough, I would repent. Now? Whence come you?

Qui. From the two parties forth.

Fal. The Deuell take one partie, and his Dam the other: and ſo they ſhall be both beſtowed. I haue ſuffer'd more for their ſakes, more then the villanous inconſtancie of man kinde is able to indure. I will ſhuffle no more for them: let a man make a Horſe-bord of me, and ride vp and downe on me at their pleaſures, cudgell my heeles with a dry cudgell, and ſee how I can endure it. Yes I warrant, ſpeake (for they ſhall run) and I will, as little as I can, indure it. Will they come? Speake.

Qui. Mine Host de Iarteere hath one of the keyes of the backe-gate, and is now about the Well of Brainford, and there they meane to meete. Hee hath diſcouered all the deſtruction of vs, and how we might be reuenged on the two Knights. Hee hath deliuered me the Counterfeite Stockings, the Coate, and the Beard, and inſtructed me in my part: and I am ſure I haue acted it to the life.

Fal. Well, come vp to my Chamber. Good Maſter Quickly, let them haue their full meaſure of coldneſſe, for my boanes ſhake: I haue a Feauer vpon me, and blowes? I was beaten more then euer the Counters of the Hand-bow ſtaues was beaten vpon the Woolſack of Bramford. Well, I will haue a new ſtratagem, and deuiſe a new deuiſe, that ſhall be worth the deuiſing, and worth the telling. Come vp to my Chamber.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Fenton, Host.

Hoſt. Maſter Fenton, talke not to me, my mind is heauy, I will giue ouer all.

Fen. Yet heare me ſpeake: aſſiſt me in my purpoſe,
And as I am a gentleman, Ile giue thee
A hundred pound in gold, more then your loſſe.

Hoſt. I will heare you, Maſter Fenton, and I will, at the leaſt, keepe your counſell.

Fen. From time to time I haue acquainted you
With the deare loue I beare to faire Anne Page,
Who mutually hath anſwer'd my affection,
(So farre forth as her ſelfe might be her owne Guide)
Hauing the hearty conſent of her Father:
Nor thinke I haue not forcibly perſiſted,
Thereto aſſiſted by the pleaſing helpe
Of beauteous Anne. Nor are theſe ſecret worke
Vnfurniſht with faire proſpect of proceed:
For Maiſter Slender (whom her Father holds
Meete for his daughter, determining
That euening ſhall be the abſolute night
Of their cleare Inſurrection) hath this euening
Appointed to conueigh faire Anne Page
Into the ſhadowy Buſhes, and in Oke
There owe the Ceremonie. Now Sir,
Her Mother (euen ſtrong againſt that match
And firme for Doctor Caius) hath appointed
That euening for her, and the Doctor too
Hath bought a maske, and a traine, and therewithall
Hath drawne the pretty Virgin to conſent
To ſteale away by night to Fathers houſe,
Marry to his Will: in this diſguiſe
He comes to meete his wiſh faire Anne.
To this intent ſhee's apparelled: now Sir,
The Doctor doates on his diſguiſe as much
As ſhe of feare: now thus it reſts,
Her Father means ſhe ſhall be all in white,
And in that habit when Slender ſees his time
To take her by the hand, and bid her go,
She ſhall goe with him. Her Mother hath intended
(The better to deuote her to the Doctor,
For they muſt all be maſkt and vizarded)

That

Gibbs Bindery

That quaint in greene, ſhe ſhall be looſe en-roab'd,
With ribonds-pendant, flaring 'bout her head;
And when the Doctor ſpies his vantage ripe,
To pinch her by the hand, and on that token,
The maid hath giuen conſent to go with him.

Host. What meanes ſhe to deceiue me? Caiter, or Mother?

Fen. Both (my good Host) to go along with me:
And heere it reſts, that you'l procure the Vicar
To ſtay for me at Church, 'twixt twelue, and one,
And in the lawfull Name of marrying,
To giue our hearts vnited ceremony.

Host. Well, husband your deuice, Ile to the Vicar,
Bring you the Maid, you ſhall not lacke a Prieſt.

Fen. So ſhall I euermore be bound to thee;
Beſides, Ile make a preſent recompence. Exeunt

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Falſtaffe, Quickly, and Ford.

Fal. Pre'thee no more prattling: go, Ile hold, this is the third time: I hope good luck lies in odde numbers. Away, go, they ſay there is Diuinity in odde numbers, either in natiuity, chance or death. Away.

Qui. Well, I'le go, I'le go, and I pray God it proue true. As much as I can to get you a paire of hornes.

Fal. Away I ſay, time weares, hold vp your head & mince. How now M. Broome? Maiſter Broome, the matter will be knowne anon, or neuer. Be you in the Parke about midnight at Hernes-Oake, and you ſhall ſee wonders.

Ford. Went you not to her yeſterday Sir, as you told me you had appointed?

Fal. I went to her Maſter Broome as you ſee, like a poore-old-man, but I came from her Maſter Broome like a poore-old-woman, that ſame knaue Ford (her husband) hath the moſt mad diuell of iealouſie in him, Maſter Broome, that euer gouern'd frenzie. I will tell you, he beate me grieuouſly in the ſhape of a woman: for in the ſhape of Man (Maſter Broome) I feare not Goliah with a Weauers beame, becauſe I know alſo life is a Shuttle: I am in haſt, go along with mee, Ile tell you all (Maſter Broome). Since I pluck'd Geeſe, plaide Truant, and whipt Top, I knew not what 'twas to be beaten, till lately. Follow mee, Ile tell you ſtrange things of this knaue Ford, on whom to night I will be reuenged, and I will deſcribe each ſeuerall hower of our meeting. Follow, ſtrange things in hand (Maſter Broome) follow. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Page, Shallow, Slender.

Page. Come, come: wee'll couch i'th Caſtle-ditch, till we ſee how the Light of our Fairies. Remember ſon Slender my

Sen. I forſooth, I haue ſpoke with her, & we haue a nay-word, how to know one another. I come to her in white, and cry Mum; ſhe cries Budget, and by that we know one another.

Shal. That's good too: But what needes either your Mum, or her Budget? The white will decipher her well enough. It hath ſtrooke ten a'clocke.

Page. The night is darke, Light and Spirits will become it wel: Heauen proſper our ſport. No man means euill but the deuill, and we ſhal know him by his hornes. Lets away: follow me. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Miſt. Page, Miſt. Ford, Caius.

Miſt. Page. Mr Doctor, my daughter is in green, when you ſee your time, take her by the hand, away with her to the Deanerie, and diſpatch it quickly: go before into the Parke: we two muſt go together.

Cai. I know vat I haue to do, adieu.

Miſt. Page. Fare you well (Sir.) my husband will not reioyce ſo much at the abuſe of Falſtaffe, as he will chafe at the Doctors marrying my daughter: But 'tis no matter, better a little chiding, then a great deale of heart-breake.

Miſt. Ford. Where is Nan now? and her troop of Fairies? and the Welch-deuill Herne?

Miſt. Page. They are all couch'd in a pit hard by Hernes Oake, with obſcur'd Lights; which at the very inſtant of Falſtaffes and our meeting, they will at once diſplay to the night.

Miſt. Ford. That cannot chooſe but amaze him.

Miſt. Page. If he be not amaz'd he will be mock'd: If he be amaz'd, he will euery way be mock'd.

Miſt. Ford. Wee'll betray him finely.

Miſt. Page. Againſt ſuch Lewdſters, and their lechery, Thoſe that betray them, do no treachery.

Miſt. Ford. The houre drawes-on: to the Oake, to the Oake. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Euans and Fairies.

Euans. Trib, trib Fairies: Come, and remember your parts: be pold (I pray you) follow me into the pit, and when I giue the watch-'ords, do as I pid you: Come, come, trib, trib. Exeunt

Scena Quinta.

Enter Falſtaffe, Miſtris Page, Miſtris Ford, Euans, Anne Page, Fairies, Page, Ford, Quickly, Slender, Fenton, Caius, Piſtoll.

Fal. The Windſor-bell hath ſtroke twelue: the Minute drawes-on: Now the hot-bloodied-Gods aſſiſt me! Remember Ioue, thou was't a Bull for thy Europa, Ioue ſet on thy hornes. O powerfull Ioue, that in ſome reſpects makes a Beaſt a Man: in ſome other, a Man a beaſt. You were alſo (Iupiter) a Swan, for the loue of Leda: O omnipotent

omnipotent Loue, how neere the God drew to the complexion of a Goose: a fault done first in the forme of a beast, (O Ioue, a beastly fault:) and then another fault, in the semblance of a Fowle, thinke on't (Ioue) a fowle fault. When Gods haue hot backes, what shall poore men do? For me, I am heere a Windsor Stagge, and the fattest (I thinke) i'th Forrest. Send me a coole rut-time (Ioue) or who can blame me to piſſe my Tallow? Who comes heere? my Doe?

M. Ford. Sir Iohn! Art thou there (my Deere?) My male-Deere?

Fal. My Doe, with the blacke Scut? Let the skie raine Potatoes: let it thunder, to the tune of Greene-ſleeues, haile-kilſing Cone-cors, and how'r downe: Let there come a tempeſt of prouocation, I will ſhelter me heere.

M. Ford. Miſtris Page is come with me, ſweet heart.

Fal. Diuide me like a brib'd-Buck, each a Haunch: I will keepe my ſides to my ſelfe, my ſhoulders for the fellow of this walke; and my Horns I bequeath your husbands. Am I a Woodman, ha? Speake I like Herne the Hunter? Why, now is Cupid a child of conſcience, he makes reſtitution. As I am a true ſpirit, welcome.

M. Page. Alas, what noiſe?

M. Ford. Heauen forgiue our ſinnes.

Fal. What ſhould this be?

M. Ford. & Page. Away, away.

Fal. I think the deuill will not haue me damn'd, Leaſt the oyle in my head ſhould ſet hell on fire; He would neuer elſe croſſe me thus.

Enter Fairies.

Qui. Fairies black, gray, greene, and white, You Moone-ſhine reuellers, and ſhades of night. You Orphan heires of fixed deſtiny, Attend your office, and your quality. Crier Hob-goblyn, make the Fairy Oyes.

Piſt. Elues, liſt your names: Silence you aiery toyes. Cricket, to Windſor-chimnies ſhalt thou leape: Where fires thou find'ſt vnrak'd, and hearths vnſwept, There pinch the Maids as blew as Bill-berry, Our radiant Queene, hates Sluts, and Sluttery.

Fal. They are Fairies, he that ſpeaks to them ſhall die, Ile winke, and couch: No man their works muſt eye.

Eu. Where's Bede? Go you, and where you find a maid That ere ſhe ſleepe has thrice her prayers ſaid, Raiſe vp the Organs of her fantaſie, Sleepe ſhe as ſound as carelleſſe infancie, But thoſe as ſleepe, and thinke not on their ſins, Pinch them armes, legs, backes, ſhoulders, ſides, & ſhins.

Qui. About, about:
Search Windſor Caſtle (Elues) within, and out. Strew good lucke (Ouphes) on euery ſacred roome, That it may ſtand till the perpetuall doome, In ſtate as wholſome, as in ſtate 'tis fit, Worthy the Owner, and the Owner it. The ſeuerall Chaires of Order, looke you ſcowre With iuyce of Balme; and euery precious flowre, Each faire Inſtalment, Coate, and ſeuerall Creſt, With loyall Blazon, euermore be bleſt. And Nightly-meadow-Fairies, looke you ſing Like to the Garters-Compaſſe, in a ring, Th'expreſſure that it bares: Greene let it be, More fertile-freſh then all the Field to ſee: And, Hony ſoit Qui Mal-y-penſe, write In Emrold tuffes, Flowres purple, blew, and white, Like Saphire-pearle, and rich embroderie, Buckled below faire Knight-hoods bending knee; Fairies vſe Flowres for their characterie. Away, diſperſe: But till 'tis one a clocke, Our Dance of Cuſtome, round about the Oke Of Herne the Hunter, let vs not forget. (ſet:

Eua. Pray you lock hand in hand; your ſelues in order And twenty glow-wormes ſhall our Lanthornes bee To guide our Meaſure round about the Tree. But ſtay, I ſmell a man of middle earth.

Fal. Heauens defend me from that Welſh Fairy, Leaſt he tranſforme me to a peece of Cheeſe.

Piſt. Vile worme, thou waſt ore-look'd euen in thy birth.

Qui. With Triall-fire touch me his finger end: If he be chaſte, the flame will backe deſcend And turne him to no paine: but if he ſtart, It is the fleſh of a corrupted hart.

Piſt. A triall, come.

Eua. Come: will this wood take fire?

Fal. Oh, oh, oh.

Qui. Corrupt, corrupt, and tainted in deſire. About him (Fairies) ſing a ſcornfull rime, And as you trip, ſtill pinch him to your time.

The Song.

Fie on ſinneſull phantaſie! Fie on Luſt, and Luxurie!
Luſt is but a bloody fire, kindled with vnchaſte deſire,
Fed in heart whoſe flames aſpire,
As thoughts do blow them higher and higher
Pinch him (Fairies) mutually: Pinch him for his villanie.
Pinch him, and burne him, and turne him about,
Till Candles, & Star-light, & Moone-ſhine be out.

Page. Nay do not flye, I thinke we haue watcht you now: Will none but Herne the Hunter ſerue your turne?

M. Page. I pray you come, hold vp the ieſt no higher. Now (good Sir Iohn) how like you Windſor wiues? See you theſe husbands? Do not theſe faire yoakes Become the Forreſt better then the Towne?

Ford. Now Sir, whoſe a Cuckold now? Mr Broome, Falſtaffe is a Knaue, a Cuckoldly knaue, Heere are his hornes Maſter Broome: And Maſter Broome, he hath enioyed nothing of Ford's, but his Buck-basket, his cudgell, and twenty pounds of money, which muſt be paid to Mr Broome, his horſes are arreſted for it, Mr Broome.

M. Ford. Sir Iohn, we haue had ill lucke: we could neuer meete. I will neuer take you for my Loue againe, but I will alwayes count you my Deere.

Fal. I do begin to perceiue that I am made an Aſſe.

Ford. I, and an Oxe too: both the proofes are extant.

Fal. And theſe are not Fairies? I was three or foure times in the thought they were not Fairies, and yet the guiltineſſe of my mind, the ſodaine ſurprize of my powers, droue the groſſeneſſe of the foppery into a receiu'd beleefe, in deſpight of the teeth of all rime and reaſon, that they were Fairies. See now how wit may be made a Jacke-a-Lent, when 'tis vpon ill imployment.

Euans. Sir Iohn Falſtaffe, ſerue Got, and leaue your deſires, and Fairies will not pinſe you.

Ford. Well ſaid Fairy Hugh.

Euans. And leaue you your iealouzies too, I pray you.

Ford.

Ford. I will not term thrust my wife againe, to shun art more in good English

Fal. Have I lasted by braine, the Sun, and drinke it, that it wants matter to prevent so grosse ore-reaching as this? Am I ridden with a Welch Goate too? Shall I have a Coxcombe of Frize? 'Tis time I were choakt with a peece of toasted Cheese.

Eva. Seese is not good to give putter; your belly is all putter.

Fal. Seese, and Putter? Have I liv'd to stand at the taunt of one that makes fritters of English? This is enough to be the decay of lust and late-walking through the Realme.

Mist Page. Why Sir Iohn, do you use me thus? Or that my seeming honest vertue out of our hearts by the head and shoulders, and have given our selves without scruple to hell, that ever the devill could have made you our delight?

Ford. What a hodge-pudding? A bag of flax?

Mist. Page. A puffe man?

Page. Old, cold, wither'd, and of intolerable entrailes?

Ford. And one that is as slanderous as Satan?

Page. And as poore as Iob?

Ford. And as wicked as his wife?

Evan. And given to fornications, and to taverns and sacke, and wine and Metheglins, and to drinkings, and swearings and starings, pribbles and prabbles?

Fal. Well, I am your Theame: you have the start of me: I am dejected: I am not able to answer the Welch Flannell. Ignorance it selfe is a plummet o're me: use me as you will.

Ford. Marry Sir, we'll bring you to Windsor, to one Mr. Broome, that you have cozen'd of money, to whom you should have bin a Pander: over and above that you have suffered, I think, to repay that money will be a biting affliction.

Page. Yet be cheerefull Knight: thou shalt eate a posset to night at my house, where I will desire Mr. Broome to come: and at my wives desire, she shall pay him all: for indeed Mr. Fenton hath married my daughter.

Mist. Page. Doctors doubt that:
If Anne Page be my daughter she is (by this) Doctour Caius wife.

Page. Sonne? How now? How now Sonne,
Have you dispatch'd?

Slen. Dispatch'd? I'le make the best in Glostershire know on't: would I were hang'd la, else.

Slen. I came yonder at Eaton to marry Mistris Anne Page, and she's a great lubberly boy. If it had not been i'th Church, I would have swing'd him, or he should have swing'd me. If I did not thinke it had been Anne Page, would I might never stirre, and 'tis a Post-masters Boy.

Page. Upon my life then you tooke the wrong.

Slen. What need you tell me that? I think so, when I tooke a Boy for a Girle. If I had bene married to him, (for all he was in womans apparrell) I would not have had him.

Page. Why this is your owne folly,
Did not I tell you how you should know my daughter,
By her garments?

Slen. I went to her in greene, and cried Mum, and she cride budget, as Anne and I had appointed, and yet it was not Anne but a Post-masters boy.

Mist. Page. Good George be not angry. I knew of your purpose: turn'd my daughter into white, and indeed she is now with the Doctor at the Deanry, and there married.

Caius. Vere is Mistris Page? by gar I am cozened, I ha married oon Garsoon a boy; oon peasant, by gar. A boy it is not Anne Page: by gar, I am cozened.

Mist. Page. Why? did you take her in white?

Caius. Ie by gar, and 'tis a boy: be gar, Ile raise all Windsor.

Ford. This is knaverie. Who hath got the right Anne?

Page. My heart misgives me, here comes Mr. Fenton.
How now Mr. Fenton?

Anne. Pardon good Father, good my mother, pardon.

Page. Now Mistris?
How chance you went not with Mr. Slender?

Mist. Page. Why went you not with Mr. Doctor, maid?

Fen. You do amaze her: hear the truth of it,
You would have married her most shamefully,
Where there was no proportion held in love.
The truth is, she and I (long since contracted)
Are now so sure that nothing can dissolve us.
The offence is holy, that she hath committed,
And this deceit loses the name of craft,
Of disobedience, or unduteous title,
Since therein she doth evitate and shun
A thousand irreligious cursed hours,
Which forced marriage would have brought upon her.

Ford. Stand not amaz'd, here is no remedy:
In love the heavens themselves do guide the state,
Money buyes Lands, and wives are sold by fate.

Fal. I am glad, though you have tane a speciall stand to strike at me, that your Arrow hath glanc'd.

Page. Well, what remedy? Fenton, heaven give thee joy, what cannot be eschew'd, must be embrac'd.

Fal. When night-dogges run, all sorts of Deere are chac'd.

Mist Page. Well, I will muse no further. Mr Fenton,
Heaven give you many, many merry dayes:
Good husband, let us every one go home,
And laugh this sport o're by a Countrie fire,
Sir Iohn and all.

Ford. Let it be so. Sir Iohn.
To Master Broome you yet shall hold your word,
For he, to night, shall lye with Mistris Ford. Exeunt.

FINIS.

MEASVRE,
For Measure.

Actus primus, Scena prima.

Enter Duke, Escalus, Lords.

Duke.

Escalus.

Esc. My Lord. (Exit.

Duke. Of Gouernment, the properties to vn-
Would seeme in me t'affect speech & discourse,
Since I am put to know, that your owne Science
Exceedes (in that) the lists of all aduice
My strength can giue you: Then no more remaines
But that, to your sufficiency, as your worth is able,
And let them worke. The nature of our People,
Our Cities Institutions, and the Termes
For Common Iustice, y'are as pregnant in
As Art, and practise, hath inriched any
That we remember. There is our Commission,
From which, we would not haue you warpe; call hither,
I say, bid come before vs Angelo:
What figure of vs, think you, he will beare.
For you must know, we haue with speciall soule
Elected him our absence to supply;
Lent him our terror, dreft him with our loue,
And giuen his Deputation all the Organs
Of our owne powre. What thinke you of it?

Esc. If any in Vienna be of worth
To vndergoe such ample grace, and honour,
It is Lord Angelo.

Enter Angelo.

Duke. Looke where he comes.

Ang. Always obedient to your Graces will,
I come to know your pleasure.

Duke. Angelo:
There is a kinde of Character in thy life,
That to th'obseruer, doth thy history
Fully vnfold. Thy selfe, and thy belongings
Are not thine owne so proper, as to waste
Thy selfe vpon thy vertues; they on thee
Heauen doth with vs, as we, with Torches doe,
Not light them for themselues. For if our vertues
Did not goe forth of vs, 'twere all alike
As if we had them not. Spirits are not finely touch'd,
But to fine issues: nor nature neuer lends
The smallest scruple of her excellence,
But like a thrifty goddesse, she determines
Her selfe the glory of a creditour,
Both thanks, and vse; but I do bend my speech
To one that can my part in him aduertise,
Hold therefore Angelo:
In our remoue, be thou at full, our selfe:
Mortallitie and Mercie in Vienna
Liue in thy tongue, and heart: Old Escalus
Though first in question, is thy secondary.
Take thy Commission.

Ang. Now good my Lord
Let there be some more test, made of my mettle,
Before so noble, and so great a figure
Be stamp't vpon it.

Duke. No more euasion:
We haue with a leauen'd, and prepared choice
Proceeded to you; therefore take your honors:
Our haste from hence is of so quicke condition,
That it prefers it selfe, and leaues vnquestion'd
Matters of needfull value: We shall write to you
As time, and our concernings shall importune,
How it goes with vs, and doe looke to know
What doth befall you here. So fare you well:
To th'hopefull execution doe I leaue you,
Of your Commissions.

Ang. Yet giue leaue (my Lord,)
That we may bring you something on the way.

Duke. My haste may not admit it,
Nor need you (on mine honor) haue to doe
With any scruple; your scope is as mine owne,
So to inforce, or qualifie the Lawes
As to your soule seemes good: Giue me your hand,
Ile priuily away: I loue the people,
But doe not like to stage me to their eyes:
Though it doe well, I doe not relish well
Their lowd applause, and Aues vehement:
Nor doe I thinke the man of safe discretion
That do's affect it. Once more fare you well.

Ang. The heauens giue safety to your purposes.

Esc. Lead forth, and bring you backe in happinesse. Exit.

Duke. I thanke you, fare you well.

Esc. I shall desire you, Sir, to giue me leaue
To haue free speech with you; and it concernes me
To looke into the bottome of my place:
A powre I haue, but of what strength and nature,
I am not yet instructed.

Ang. 'Tis so with me: Let vs with-draw together,
And we may soone our satisfaction haue
Touching that point.

Esc. Ile wait vpon your honor. Exeunt.

Scena

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lucio, and two other Gentlemen.

Luc. If the Duke, with the other Dukes, come not to composition with the King of Hungary, why then all the Dukes fall vpon the King.

1 Gent. Heauen grant vs its peace, but not the King of Hungaries.

2. Gent. Amen.

Luc. Thou conclud'st like the Sanctimonious Pirat, that went to sea with the ten Commandements, but scrap'd one out of the Table.

2. Gent. Thou shalt not Steale?

Luc. I, that he raz'd.

1. Gent. Why? 'twas a commandement, to command the Captaine and all the rest from their functions. they put forth to steale: There's not a Souldier of vs all, that in the thanks-giuing before meate, do raliish the petition well, that praies for peace.

2. Gent. I neuer heard any Souldier dislik't.

Luc. I beleeue thee. for I thinke thou neuer was't where Grace was said.

2. Gent. No? a dozen times at least

1. Gent. What? in meeter?

Luc. In any proportion or in any language

1. Gent. I thinke, or in any Religion.

Luc. I, why not? Grace, is Grace, despight of all controuersie: as for example; Thou thy selfe art a wicked villaine, despight of all Grace

1. Gent. Well: there 'went but a paire of sheeres betweene vs.

Luc. I grant: as there may betweene the Lists, and the Veluet. Thou art the List.

1. Gent. And thou the Veluet; thou art good veluet; thou'rt a three pild-peece I warrant thee. I had as lief be a Lyst of an English Kersey, as be pil'd, as thou art pil'd, for a French Veluet. Do I speake feelingly now?

Luc. I thinke thou do'st: and indeed with most painfull feeling of thy speech: I will, out of thine owne confession, learne to begin thy health; but, whilst I liue forget to drinke after thee.

1. Gent. I think I haue done my selfe wrong, haue I not?

2. Gent. Yes, that thou hast whether thou art tainted, or free. Enter Bawde.

Luc. Behold, behold, where Madam Mitigation comes. I haue purchas'd as many diseases vnder her Roofe,
As come to

2. Gent. To what, I pray?

Luc. Iudge.

2. Gent. To three thousand Dollours a yeare.

1. Gent. I, and more.

Luc. A French crowne more.

1. Gent. Thou art alwayes figuring diseases in me; but thou art full of error, I am sound.

Luc. Nay, not (as one would say) healthy; but so sound, as things that are hollow; thy bones are hollow; Impiety has made a feast of thee.

1 Gent. How now, which of your hips has the most profound Sciatica?

Bawd. Well, well: there's one yonder arrested, and carried to prison, was worth fiue thousand of you all.

2 Gent. Who's that I pray thee?

Bawd. Marry Sir, that's Claudio, Signior Claudio.

1. Gent. Claudio to prison? 'tis not so.

Bawd. Nay, but I know 'tis so: I saw him arrested: saw him carried away: and which is more, within these three daies his head to be chop'd off.

Luc. But, after all this fooling, I would not haue it so: Art thou sure of this?

Bawd. I am too sure of it: and it is for getting Madam Iulietta with childe.

Luc. Beleeue me this may be: he promis'd to meete me two howres since, and he was euer precise in promise keeping.

2. Gent. Besides you know, it drawes something neere to the speech we had to such a purpose.

1. Gent. But most of all agreeing with the proclamation.

Luc. Away: let's goe learne the truth of it. Exit.

Bawd. Thus, what with the war; what with the sweat, what with the gallowes, and what with pouerty, I am Custom-shrunke. How now? what's the newes with you. Enter Clowne.

Clo. Yonder man is carried to prison.

Bawd. Well: what has he done?

Clo. A Woman.

Bawd. But what's his offence?

Clo. Groping for Trowts, in a peculiar Riuer.

Bawd. What? is there a maid with child by him?

Clo. No: but there's a woman with maid by him. you haue not heard of the proclamation, haue you?

Bawd. What proclamation, man?

Clow. All howses in the Suburbs of Vienna must bee pluck'd downe.

Bawd. And what shall become of those in the Citie?

Clow. They shall stand for seed: they had gon downe too, but that a wise Burger put in for them.

Bawd. But shall all our houses of resort in the Suburbs be pull'd downe?

Clow. To the ground, Mistris.

Bawd. Why heere's a change indeed in the Commonwealth: what shall become of me?

Clow. Come: feare not you: good Counsellors lacke no Clients: though you change your place, you needes not change your Trade: Ile bee your Tapster still; courage, there will bee pitty taken on you; you that haue worne your eyes almost out in the seruice, you will bee considered.

Bawd. What's to doe heere, Thomas Tapster? let's withdraw?

Clo. Here comes Signior Claudio, led by the Prouost to prison: and there's Madam Iuliet. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Prouost, Claudio, Iuliet, Officers, Lucio, & 2. Gent.

Cla. Fellow, why do'st thou show me thus to th'world?
Beare me to prison, where I am committed.

Pro. I do it not in euill disposition,
But from Lord Angelo by speciall charge.

Clau. Thus can the demy-god (Authority)
Make vs pay downe, for our offence, by waight
The words of heauen; on whom it will, it will,
On whom it will not (so) yet still 'tis iust. (straine.

Luc. Why how now Claudio? whence comes this re-

Cla. From too much liberty, (my Lucio) Liberty
As surfet is the father of much fast,
So euery Scope by the immoderate vse
Turnes to restraint: Our Natures doe pursue

Like

Like Rats that ravin downe their proper Bane,
A thirsty evill: and when we drinke, we die.

Luc. If I could speake so wisely vnder an arrest, I would send for certaine of my Creditors: and yet, to say the truth, I had as liefe haue the foppery of freedome, as the morality of imprisonment. What's thy offence, Claudio?

Cla. What? but to speake of, would offend againe.

Luc. What, is't murder?

Cla. No.

Luc. Lechery?

Cla. Call it so.

Pro. Away, Sir, you must goe.

Cla. One word, good friend. Lucio, a word with thee.

Luc. A hundred.
If they'll doe you any good. Is Lechery so look'd after?

Cla. Thus stands it with me: vpon a true contract
I got possession of Iulietta's bed:
You know the Lady, she is fast my wife,
Saue that we doe the denunciation lacke
Of outward Order. This we came not to,
Only for propagation of a Dowre
Remaining in the Coffer of her friends,
From whom we thought it meet to hide our Loue
Till time had made them for vs. But it chances
The stealth of our most mutuall entertainment
With Character too grosse, is writ on Iuliet.

Luc. With childe, perhaps?

Cla. Vnhappily, euen so.
And the new Deputie now for the Duke,
Whether it be the fault and glimpse of newnes,
Or whether it be the body publique, be
A horse whereon the Gouernor doth ride,
Who newly in the Seate, that it may know
He can command, lets it straight feele the spur:
Whether the Tirranny be in his place,
Or in his Eminence that fills it vp,
I stagger in: but this new Gouernor
Awakes me all the enrolled penalties
Which haue (like vnscowr'd Armor hanging by the wall)
So long, that nineteene Zodiacks haue gone round
And none of them been worne; and for a name
Now puts the drowsie and neglected Act
Freshly on me: 'tis surely for a name.

Luc. I warrant it is: And thy head stands so tickle on thy shoulders, that a milke-maid, if she be in loue, may sigh it off. Send after the Duke and appeale to him.

Cla. I haue done so, but he's not to be found.
I prethee (Lucio) doe me this kinde seruice:
This day, my sister should the Cloyster enter,
And there receiue her approbation.
Acquaint her with the danger of my state,
Implore her, in my voice, that she make friends
To the strict deputie: bid her selfe assay him,
I haue great hope in that: for mine owne youth
There is a prone and speechlesse dialect,
Such as moue men: beside she hath a prosperous Art
When she will play with reason, and discourse,
And well she can perswade.

Luc. I pray she may; as well for the encouragement of the like, which else would stand vnder grieuous imposition: as for the enioying of thy life, who I would be sorry should be thus too much lost, at a game of ticke-tacke. Ile to her.

Cla. I thanke you good friend Lucio.

Luc. Within two houres.

Cla. Come Officer, away. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Duke and Frier Thomas.

Duk. No: holy Father, throw away that thought;
Beleeue not that the dribbling dart of Loue
Can pierce a compleat bosome: why, I desire thee
To giue me secret harbour, hath a purpose
More grace, and wrinkled, then the aimes, and ends
Of burning youth.

Fri. May your Grace speake of it?

Duk. My holy Sir, none better knowes then you
How I haue euer lou'd the life remou'd,
And held in idle price to haunt assemblies
Where youth, and cost, a wilfe braue keepes.
I haue deliuer'd to Lord Angelo
(A man of stricture and firme abstinence)
My absolute power, and place here in Vienna,
And he supposes me trauell'd to Poland,
(For so I haue strewed it in the common eare)
And so it is receiu'd. Now pious Sir,
You will demand of me, why I do this.

Fri. Gladly, my Lord.

Duk. We haue strict Statutes and most biting Lawes,
(The needfull bits, and curbes to headstrong weeds,)
Which for this fourteene yeares we haue let slip,
Euen like an ore-prowne Lyon in a Caue
That goes not out to prey: Now as fond Fathers,
Hauing bound vp the threatning twigs of birch,
Only to stick it in their Children's sight,
For terror, not to vse, in time the rod
More mock'd, then fear'd: so our Decrees,
Dead to infliction, to themselues are dead,
And liew the plucks Iustice by the nose,
The Baby beates the Nurse, and quite athwart
Goes all decorum.

Fri. It rested in your Grace
To vnloose this tide-vp Iustice, when you pleas'd:
And it in you more dreadfull would haue seem'd
Then in Lord Angelo.

Duk. I doe feare: too dreadfull.
Sith 'twas my fault to giue the people scope,
'Twould be my tirranny to strike and gall them,
For what I bid them doe: For, we bid this be done
When euil deedes haue their permissiue passe,
And not the punishment: therefore indeede (my Father)
I haue on Angelo impos'd the office,
Who may in the ambush of my name strike home,
And yet, my nature neuer in the fight
To doom the doer. And to behold his sway
I will, as 'twere a brother of your Order,
Visit both Prince, and People. Therefore I pre'thee
Supply me with the habit, and instruct me
How I may formally in person beare
Like a true Frier. More reasons for this action
At our more leysure, shall I render you;
Only this one: Lord Angelo is precise,
Stands at a guard with Enuy: scarce confesses
That his blood flowes: or that his appetite
Is more to bread then stone: hence shall we see
If power change purpose: what our Seemers be. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Isabell and Francisca a Nun.

Isa. And haue you Nuns no farther priuiledges?
Nun. Are not those large enough?
Isa. Yes truely, I speake not as desiring more,
But rather wishing a more strict restraint
Vpon the Sisterhood, the Votarists of Saint Clare.
Lucio within.
Luc. Hoa? peace be in this place.
Isa. Who's that which cals?
Nun. It is a mans voice: gentle Isabella
Turne you the key, and know his businesse of him;
You may; I may not: you are yet vnsworne
When you haue vowd, you must not speake with men,
But in the presence of the Prioresse,
Then if you speake, you must not show your face;
Or if you show your face, you must not speake.
He cals againe: I pray you answere him.
Isa. Peace and prosperous: who's that cals?
Luc. Haile Virgin, (if you be) as those cheeke-Roses
Proclaime you are no lesse: can you so steed me,
As bring me to the sight of Isabella,
A Nouice of this place, and the faire Sister
To her vnhappie brother Claudio?
Isa. Why her vnhappy Brother? Let me aske,
The rather for I now must make you know
I am that Isabella, and his Sister.
Luc. Gentle & faire: your Brother kindly greets you;
Not to be weary with you, he's in prison.
Isa. Woe me; for what?
Luc. For that, which if my selfe might be his bayle,
He should receiue his punishment, in thankes:
He hath got his friend with childe.
Isa. Sir, make me not your story.
Luc. 'Tis true, I would not, though 'tis my familiar sin,
With Maids to seeme the Lapwing, and to feed
Tongue, far from heart: play with all Virgins so:
I hold you as a thing en-skied, and sainted,
By your renouncement, an immortal spirit
And to be talk'd with in sincerity,
As with a Saint.
Isa. You doe blaspheme the good, in mocking me.
Luc. Doe not beleeue it: fewnes, and truth; 'tis thus,
Your brother, and his louer haue embrac'd:
As those that feed, grow full: as blossoming Time
That from the seednes, the bare fallow brings
To teeming foyson: euen so her plenteous wombe
Expresseth his full Tilth, and husbandry.
Isa. Some one with childe by him? my cosen Iuliet?
Luc. Is she your cosen?
Isa. Adoptedly, as schoole-maids change their names
By vaine, though apt affection.
Luc. She it is.
Isa. O, let him marry her.
Luc. This is the point.
The Duke is very strangely gone from hence;
Bore many gentlemen (my selfe being one)
In hand, and hope of action: but we doe learne,
By those that know the very Nerues of State,
His giuing-out, were of an infinite distance
From his true meant designe: vpon his place,
(And with full line of his authority)
Gouernes Lord Angelo; A man, whose blood
Is very snow-broth: one, who neuer feeles
The wanton stings, and motions of the sence;
But doth rebate, and blunt his naturall edge
With profits of the minde: Studie, and fast
He (to giue feare to vse, and libertie,
Which haue, for long, run-by the hideous law,
As Myce, by Lyons) hath pickt out an act,
Vnder whose heauy sence, your brothers life
Falls into forfeit: he arrests him on it,
And followes close the rigor of the Statute
To make him an example: all hope is gone,
Vnlesse you haue the grace, by your faire prayer
To soften Angelo: And that's my pith of businesse
'Twixt you, and your poore brother.
Isa. Doth he so,
Seeke his life?
Luc. Has censur'd him already,
And as I heare, the Prouost hath a warrant
For's execution.
Isa. Alas: what poore
Abilitie's in me, to doe him good.
Luc. Assay the powre you haue.
Isa. My power? alas, I doubt.
Luc. Our doubts are traitors
And makes vs loose the good we oft might win,
By fearing to attempt: Goe to Lord Angelo
And learne to know, when Maidens sue
Men giue like gods: but when they weepe and kneele,
All their petitions, are as freely theirs
As they themselues would owe them.
Isa. Ile see what I can doe.
Luc. But speedily.
Isa. I will about it straight;
No longer staying, but to giue the Mother
Notice of my affaire: I humbly thanke you:
Commend me to my brother: soone at night
Ile send him certaine word of my successe.
Luc. I take my leaue of you.
Isa. Good sir, adieu. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scœna Prima.

Enter Angelo, Escalus, and seruants, Iustice.
Ang. We must not make a scar-crow of the Law,
Setting it vp to feare the Birds of prey,
And let it keepe one shape, till custome make it
Their perch, and not their terror.
Esc. I, but yet
Let vs be keene, and rather cut a little
Then fall, and bruise to death: alas, this gentleman
Whom I would saue, had a most noble father,
Let but your honour know
(Whom I beleeue to be most strait in vertue)
That in the working of your owne affections,
Had time cohered with Place, or place with wishing,
Or that the resolute acting of our blood
Could haue attaind th'effect of your owne purpose,
Whether you had not sometime in your life
Er'd in this point, which now you censure him,
And pull'd the Law vpon you.
Ang. 'Tis one thing to be tempted (Escalus)

Another thing to fall: I deny
The Iury passing on the Prisoners life
May in the sworne-twelue haue a theefe,or two
Guiltier then him they try;what's open made to Iustice,
That Iustice seizes; What knowes the Lawes
That theeues do passe on theeues? 'Tis very pregnant,
The Iewell that we finde,we stoope,and take it,
Because we see it; but what we doe not see,
We tread vpon,and neuer thinke of it.
You may not so extenuate his offence,
For I haue had such faults; but rather tell me
When I, that censure him,do so offend,
Let mine owne Iudgement patterne out my death,
And nothing come in partiall. Sir,he must dye.

Enter Prouost

Esc. Be it as your wisedome will.
Ang. Where is the Prouost?
Pro. Here if it like your honour.
Ang. See that Claudio
Be executed by nine to morrow morning,
Bring him his Confessor,let him be prepar'd,
For that's the vtmost of his pilgrimage.
Esc. Well: heauen forgiue him; and forgiue vs all:
Some rise by sinne,and some by vertue fall
Some run from brakes of Ice,and answere none,
And some condemned for a fault alone.

Enter Elbow, Froth, Clowne, Officers.

Elb. Come,bring them away: if these be good people in a Common-weale, that do nothing but vse their abuses in common houses, I know no law: bring them away.
Ang. How now Sir, what's your name? And what's the matter?
Elb. If it please your honour, I am the poore Dukes Constable, and my name is Elbow; I do lease vpon Iustice Sir, and do bring in here before your good honor, two notorious Benefactors
Ang. Benefactors? Well: What Benefactors are they? Are they not Malefactors?
Elb. If it please your honour, I know not well what they are: but precise villaines they are, that I am sure of and void of all prophanation in the world, that good Christians ought to haue.
Esc. This comes off well: here's a wise Officer.
Ang. Goe to: What quality are they of? Elbow is your name?
Why do'st thou not speake Elbow?
Clo. He cannot Sir: he's out at Elbow.
Ang. What are you Sir?
Elb. He Sir? a Tapster Sir: parcell Baud: one that serues a bad woman: whose house Sir was (as they say) pluckt downe in the Suburbs: and now she professes a hot-house; which,I thinke is a very ill house too.
Esc. How know you that?
Elb. My wife Sir? whom I detest before heauen, and your honour.
Esc. How? thy wife?
Elb. I Sir: whom I thanke heauen is an honest woman.
Esc. Do'st thou detest her therefore?
Elb. I say sir, I will detest my selfe also,as well as she, that this house,if it be not a Bauds house,it is pitty of her life, for it is a naughty house.
Esc. How do'st thou know that, Constable?
Elb. Marry sir, by my wife, who,if she had bin a woman Cardinally giuen, might haue bin accus'd in fornication,adultery,and all vncleanlinesse there.
Esc. By the woman's meanes?
Elb. I sir,by Mistris Ouer-dons meanes: but as she spit in his face, so she defide him.
Clo. Sir, if it please your honor,this is not so.
Elb. Prouest before these varlets here,thou honorable man prouse it.
Esc. Do'st you heare how he misplaces?
Clo. Sir, she came in great with childe: and longing (saving your honors reuerence) for stew'd prewyns: sir we had but two in the house, which at that very distant time stood, as it were in a fruit dish(a dish of some three pence,your honours haue seene such dishes)they are not China dishes, but very good dishes.
Esc. Go too: go too: no matter for the dish sir.
Clo. No indeede sir not of a pin; you are therein in the right: but,to the point: As I say, this Mistris Elbow, being (as I say) with childe, and being great bellied,and longing (as I said) for prewyns: and hauing but two in the dish (as I said) Master Froth here,this very man, hauing eaten the rest(as I said)&(as I say) paying for them very honestly: for,as you know Master Froth,I could not giue you three pence againe.
Fro. No indeede.
Clo. Very well: you being then if you be remembred, cracking the stones of the foresaid prewyns.
Fro. I,so I did indeede.
Clo. Why,very well: I telling you then(if you be remembred) that such a one, and such a one, were past cure of the thing you wot of,vnlesse they kept very good diet, as I told you.
Fro. All this is true.
Clo. Why very well then.
Esc. Come you are a tedious foole: to the purpose: what was done to Elbowes wife, that he hath cause to complaine of? Come me to what was done to her.
Clo. Sir, your honor cannot come to that yet.
Esc. No sir,nor I meane it not.
Clo. Sir, but you shall come to it, by your honours leaue: And I beseech you, looke into Master Froth here sir,a man of foure score pound a yeare; whose father died at Hallowmas: Was't not at Hallowmas Master Froth?
Fro. All-hallond Eue.
Clo. Why very well: I hope here be truthes: he Sir, sitting as I say,in a lower chaire,Sir,'twas in the bunch of Grapes, where indeede you haue a delight to sit,haue you not?
Fro. I haue so, because it is an open roome,and good for winter.
Clo. Why very well then: I hope here be truthes.
Ang. This will last out a night in Russia
When nights are longest there: Ile take my leaue,
And leaue you to the hearing of the cause;
Hoping you'le finde good cause to whip them all. Exit.
Esc. I thinke no lesse: good morrow to your Lordship. Now Sir, come on: What was done to Elbowes wife, once more?
Clo. Once Sir? there was nothing done to her once.
Elb. I beseech you Sir,aske him what this man did to my wife.
Clo. I beseech your honor,aske me.
Esc. Well sir, what did this Gentleman to her?
Clo. I beseech you sir,looke in this Gentlemans face good Master Froth looke vpon his honor; 'tis for a good purpose: doth your honor marke his face?

Esc. I sir, very well.

Clo. Nay, I beseech you marke it well.

Esc. Well, I doe so.

Clo. Doth your honor see any harme in his face?

Esc. Why no.

Clo. Ile be supposd vpon a booke, his face is the worst thing about him: good then: if his face be the worst thing about him, how could Master Froth doe the Constables wife any harme? I would know that of your honour.

Esc. He's in the right (Constable) what say you to it?

Elb. First, and it like you, the house is a respected house; next, this is a respected fellow; and his Mistris is a respected woman.

Clo. By this hand Sir, his wife is a more respected person then any of vs all.

Elb. Varlet, thou lyest; thou lyest wicked varlet: the time is yet to come that shee was euer respected with man, woman, or childe.

Clo. Sir, shee was respected with him, before he married with her.

Esc. Which is the wiser here? Iustice or Iniquitie? Is this true?

Elb. O thou caytiffe! O thou varlet! O thou wicked Hannibal! I respected with her, before I was married to her? If euer I was respected with her, or she with me, let not your worship thinke mee the poore Duke's Officer: proue this, thou wicked Hannibal, or Ile haue mine action of battry on thee.

Esc. If he tooke you a box o'th'eare, you might haue your action of slander too.

Elb. Marry I thanke your good worship for it: what is't your Worships pleasure I shall doe with this wicked Caitiffe?

Esc. Truly Officer, because he hath some offences in him, that thou wouldst discouer, if thou couldst, let him continue in his courses, till thou know'st what they are.

Elb. Marry I thanke your worship for it: Thou seest thou wicked varlet now, what's come vpon thee. Thou art to continue now thou Varlet, thou art to continue.

Esc. Where were you borne, friend?

Froth. Here in Vienna, Sir.

Esc. Are you of fourescore pounds a yeere?

Froth. Yes, and 't please you sir.

Esc. So: what trade are you of, sir?

Clo. A Tapster, a poore widdowes Tapster.

Esc. Your Mistris name?

Clo. Mistris Ouer-don.

Esc. Hath she had any more then one husband?

Clo. Nine, sir: Ouer-don by the last.

Esc. Nine? come hether to me, Master Froth; Master Froth, I would not haue you acquainted with Tapsters; they will draw you Master Froth, and you will hang them: get you gon, and let me heare no more of you.

Fro. I thanke your worship: for mine owne part, I neuer come into any roome in a Tap-house, but I am drawne in.

Esc. Well: no more of it Master Froth: farewell: Come you hether to me, M^r. Tapster: what's your name M^r. Tapster?

Clo. Pompey.

Esc. What else?

Clo. Bum, Sir.

Esc. Troth, and your bum is the greatest thing about you, so that in the beastliest sence, you are Pompey the great; Pompey, you are partly a bawd, Pompey; howsoeuer you colour it in being a Tapster, are you not? come, tell me true, it shall be the better for you.

Clo. Truly sir, I am a poore fellow that would liue.

Esc. How would you liue Pompey? by being a bawd? what doe you thinke of the trade Pompey? is it a lawfull trade?

Clo. If the Law would allow it, sir.

Esc. But the Law will not allow it Pompey; nor it shall not be allowed in Vienna.

Clo. Do's your Worship meane to geld and splay all the youth of the City?

Esc. No, Pompey.

Clo. Truely Sir, in my poore opinion they will too't then: if your worship will take order for the drabs and the knaues, you need not to feare the bawds.

Esc. There is pretty orders beginning I can tell you: It is but heading, and hanging.

Clo. If you head, and hang all that offend that way but for ten yeare together; you'll be glad to giue out a Commission for more heads: if this law hold in Vienna ten yeare, Ile rent the fairest house in it after three pence a Bay: if you liue to see this come to passe, say Pompey told you so.

Esc. Thanke you good Pompey; and in requitall of your prophesie, harke you: I aduise you let me not finde you before me againe vpon any complaint whatsoeuer; no, not for dwelling where you doe: if I doe Pompey, I shall beat you to your Tent, and proue a shrewd Cæsar to you: in plaine dealing Pompey, I shall haue you whipt; so for this time, Pompey, fare you well.

Clo. I thanke your Worship for your good counsell; but I shall follow it as the flesh and fortune shall better determine. Whip me? no, no, let Carman whip his Iade, The valiant heart's not whipt out of his trade. Exit.

Esc. Come hether to me, Master Elbow: come hither Master Constable: how long haue you bin in this place of Constable?

Elb. Seuen yeere, and a halfe sir.

Esc. I thought by the readinesse in the office, you had continued in it some time: you say seauen yeares together.

Elb. And a halfe sir.

Esc. Alas, it hath been great paines to you: they do you wrong to put you so oft vpon't. Are there not men in your Ward sufficient to serue it?

Elb. 'Faith sir, few of any wit in such matters: as they are chosen, they are glad to choose me for them; I do it for some peece of money, and goe through with all.

Esc. Looke you bring mee in the names of some sixe or seuen, the most sufficient of your parish.

Elb. To your Worships house sir?

Esc. To my house: fare you well: what's a clocke, thinke you?

Iust. Eleuen, Sir.

Esc. I pray you home to dinner with me.

Iust. I humbly thanke you.

Esc. It grieues me for the death of Claudio
But there's no remedie.

Iust. Lord Angelo is seuere.

Esc. It is but needfull.
Mercy is not it selfe, that oft lookes so,
Pardon is still the nurse of second woe:
But yet, poore Claudio; there is no remedie.
Come Sir. Exeunt.

Scæna

Scena Secunda.

Enter Provost, Seruant

Ser. Hee's hearing of a Cause; he will come straight,
I'le tell him of you.
Pro. 'Pray you doe; Ile know
His pleasure, may be he will relent; alas
He hath but as offended in a dreame,
All Sects, all Ages smack of this vice, and he
To die for't?

Enter Angelo.

Ang. Now, what's the matter Prouost?
Pro. Is it your will Claudio shall die to morrow?
Ang. Did not I tell thee yea? hadst thou not order?
Why dost thou aske againe?
Pro. Lest I might be too rash.
Vnder your good correction, I haue seene
When after execution, Iudgement hath
Repented ore his doome.
Ang. Goe to; let that be mine,
Doe you your office, or giue vp your Place,
And you shall well be spar'd.
Pro. I craue your Honours pardon:
What shall be done Sir, with the groaning Iuliet?
Shee's very neere her howre.
Ang. Dispose of her
To some more fitter place, and that with speed.
Ser. Here is the sister of the man condemn'd,
Desires accesse to you.
Ang. Hath he a Sister?
Pro. I my good Lord, a very vertuous maid,
And to be shortly of a Sister-hood,
If not already.
Ang. Well; let her be admitted,
See you the Fornicatresse be remou'd,
Let her haue needfull, but not lauish meanes,
There shall be order for't.

Enter Lucio and Isabella.

Pro. 'Saue your Honour. (will
Ang. Stay a little while; y'are welcome: what's your
Isab. I am a wofull Suitor to your Honour,
'Please but your Honor heare me.
Ang. Well; what's your suite.
Isab. There is a vice that most I doe abhorre,
And most desire should meet the blow of Iustice;
For which I would not plead, but that I must,
For which I must not plead, but that I am
At warre, twixt will, and will not.
Ang. Well: the matter?
Isab. I haue a brother is condemn'd to die,
I doe beseech you let it be his fault,
And not my brother.
Pro. Heauen giue thee moouing graces.
Ang. Condemne the fault, and not the actor of it,
Why euery fault 's condemn'd ere it be done:
Mine were the very Cipher of a Function
To fine the faults, whose fine stands in record,
And let goe by the Actor.
Isab. Oh iust, but seuere Law:
I had a brother then; heauen keepe your honour.
Luc. Giue't not ore so: to him againe, entreat him,
Kneele downe before him, hang vpon his gowne,
You are too cold: if you should need a pin,
You could not with more tame a tongue desire it
To him, I say.
Isab. Must he needs die?
Ang. Maiden, no remedie
Isab. Yes: I doe thinke that you might pardon him,
And neither heauen, nor man grieue at the mercy.
Ang. I will not doe't.
Isab. But can you if you would?
Ang. Looke what I will not, that I cannot doe.
Isab. But might you doe't & do the world no wrong
If so your heart were touch'd with that remorse,
As mine is to him?
Ang. Hee's sentenc'd, 'tis too late.
Luc. You are too cold.
Isab. Too late? why no: I that doe speak a word
May call it againe: well, beleeue this
No ceremony that to great ones longs,
Not the Kings Crowne; nor the deputed sword,
The Marshals Truncheon, nor the Iudges Robe
Become them with one halfe so good a grace
As mercie does. If he had bin as you, and you as he,
You would haue slipt like him, but he like you
Would not haue been so sterne.
Ang. Pray you be gone.
Isab. I would to heauen I had your potencie,
And you were Isabell! should it then be thus?
No: I would tell what 'twere to be a Iudge,
And what a prisoner.
Luc. I, touch him, there's the vaine.
Ang. Your Brother is a forfeit of the Law,
And you but waste your words.
Isab. Alas, alas
Why all the soules that were, were forfeit once,
And he that might the vantage best haue tooke,
Found out the remedie: how would you be,
If he, which is the top of Iudgement, should
But iudge you, as you are? Oh, thinke on that,
And mercie then will breathe within your lips
Like man new made.
Ang. Be you content, fayre Maid)
It is the Law, not I, condemne your brother,
Were he my kinsman, brother, or my sonne,
It should be thus with him: he must die to morrow.
Isab. To morrow? oh, that's sodaine,
Spare him, spare him
Hee's not prepar'd for death; euen for our kitchins
We kill the fowle of season: shall we serue heauen
With lesse respect then we doe minister
To our grosse selues? good, good my Lord, bethink you;
Who is it that hath di'd for this offence?
There's many haue committed it.
Luc. I, well said
Ang. The Law hath not bin dead, though it hath slept
Those many had not dar'd to doe that euill
If the first that did th' Edict infringe
Had answer'd for his deed. Now 'tis awake,
Takes note of what is done, and like a Prophet
Looks in a glasse that shewes what future euils
Either now, or by remissenesse, new conceiu'd,
And so in progresse to be hatch'd, and borne,
Are now to haue no successiue degrees,
But here they liue to end.
Isab. Yet shew some pittie.
Ang. I shew it most of all, when I show Iustice;
For then I pitie those I doe not know,
Which a dismis'd offence, would after gaule

And

And doe him right, that answering one foule wrong
Lies not to act another. Be satisfied;
Your Brother dies to morrow; be content.
Isab. So you must be ſ first that gives this sentence,
And hee, that suffers: Oh, it is excellent
To have a Giants strength: but it is tyrannous
To vse it like a Giant.
Luc. That's well said.
Isab. Could great men thunder
As Ioue himselfe do's, Ioue would never be quiet,
For every pelting petty Officer
Would vse his heaven for thunder;
Nothing but thunder: Mercifull heaven,
Thou rumbler her with thy sharpe and sulphorous bolt
Spits the vn-wedgeable and gnarled Oke,
Then the soft Mertle. But man, proud man,
Drest in a little briefe authoritie,
Most ignorant of what he's most assur'd,
(His glassie Essence) like an angry Ape
Plaies such phantastique tricks before high heaven,
As makes the Angels weepe: who with our spleenes,
Would all themselues laugh mortall.
Luc. Oh, to him, to him wench: he will relent,
Hee's comming: I perceiue't.
Pro. Pray heaven she win him.
Isab. We cannot weigh our brother with our selfe,
Great men may iest with Saints: tis wit in them,
But in the lesse fowle prophanation.
Luc. Thou't i'th right (Girle) more o'that.
Isab. That in the Captaine's but a cholericke word,
Which in the Souldier is flat blasphemie.
Luc. Art auis'd o'that? more on't.
Ang. Why doe you put these sayings vpon me?
Isab. Because Authoritie, though it erre like others,
Hath yet a kinde of medicine in it selfe
That skins the vice o'th top; goe to your bosome,
Knock there, and aske your heart what it doth know
That's like my brothers fault: if it confesse
A naturall guiltinesse, such as is his,
Let it not sound a thought vpon your tongue
Against my brothers life.
Ang. Shee speakes, and 'tis such sence
That my Sence breeds with it; fare you well.
Isab. Gentle my Lord, turne backe.
Ang. I will bethinke me: come againe to morrow.
Isa. Hark, how I le bribe you: good my Lord turn back.
Ang. How? bribe me?
Is. I, with such gifts that heauen shall share with you.
Luc. You had mar'd all else.
Isab. Not with fond Sickles of the tested-gold,
Or Stones, whose rate are either rich, or poore
As fancie values them: but with true prayers,
That shall be vp at heauen, and enter there
Ere Sunne rise: prayers from preserued soules,
From fasting Maides, whose minds are dedicate
To nothing temporall.
Ang. Well: come to me to morrow
Luc. Goe to: 'tis well; away.
Isab. Heauen keepe your honour safe.
Ang. Amen.
For I am that way going to temptation,
Where prayers crosse.
Isab. At what hower to morrow,
Shall I attend your Lordship?
Ang. At any time fore-noone.
Isab. 'Saue your Honour.
Ang. From thee: euen from thy vertue.
What's this? what's this? is this her fault, or mine?
The Tempter, or the Tempted, who sins most? ha?
Not she: nor doth she tempt: but it is I,
That, lying by the Violet in the Sunne,
Doe as the Carrion do's, not as the flowre,
Corrupt with vertuous season: Can it be,
That Modesty may more betray our Sence
Then womans lightnesse? having waste ground enough,
Shall we desire to raze the Sanctuary
And pitch our euils there? oh fie, fie, fie:
What dost thou? or what art thou Angelo?
Dost thou desire her fowly, for those things
That make her good? oh, let her brother liue:
Theeues for their robbery haue authority,
When Iudges steale themselues: what, doe I loue her,
That I desire to heare her speake againe?
And feast vpon her eyes? what is't I dreame on?
Oh cunning enemy, that to catch a Saint,
With Saints dost bait thy hooke: most dangerous
Is that temptation, that doth goad vs on
To sinne, in louing vertue: neuer could the Strumpet
With all her double vigor, Art, and Nature
Once stir my temper: but this vertuous Maid
Subdues me quite: Euer till now
When men were fond, I smild, and wondred how. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Duke and Provost.

Duke. Haile to you, Provost, so I thinke you are.
Pro. I am the Prouost: whats your will, good Frier?
Duke. Bound by my charity, and my blest order,
I come to visite the afflicted spirits
Here in the prison: doe me the common right
To let me see them: and to make me know
The nature of their crimes, that I may minister
To them accordingly.
Pro. I would do more then that, if more were needfull
Enter Iuliet.
Looke here comes one: a Gentlewoman of mine,
Who falling in the flawes of her owne youth,
Hath blisterd her report: She is with childe,
And he that got it, sentenc'd: a young man,
More fit to doe another such offence,
Then dye for this.
Duke. When must he dye?
Pro. As I do thinke to morrow.
I haue prouided for you, stay a while
And you shall be conducted.
Duke. Repent you (faire one) of the sin you carry?
Iul. I doe; and beare the shame most patiently.
Du. Ile teach you how you shal arraign your conscience
And try your penitence, if it be sound,
Or hollowly put on.
Iul. Ile gladly learne.
Duke. Loue you the man that wrong'd you?
Iul. Yes, as I loue the woman that wrong'd him.
Duke. So then it seemes your most offence full act
Was mutually committed.
Iul. Mutually.
Duke. Then was your sin of heauier kinde then his.
Iul. I doe confesse it, and repent it (Father.)

'Tis

Duk. 'Tis meet so (daughter) but least you do repent
As that the sin hath brought you to this shame,
Which sorrow is alwaies toward our selues, not heauen,
Showing we would not spare heauen, as we loue it,
But as we stand in feare.
Isa. I doe repent me, as it is an euill,
And take the shame with ioy.
Duke. There rest:
Your partner (as I heare) must die to morrow,
And I am going with instruction to him:
Grace goe with you, Benedicite. Exit.
Isa. Must die to morrow? oh iniurious Loue
That respits me a life, whose very comfort
Is still a dying horror.
Pro. 'Tis pitty of him. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Angelo.

An. When I would pray, & think, I thinke, and pray
To seuerall subiects: heauen hath my empty words,
Whilst my Inuention, hearing not my Tongue,
Anchors on Isabell: heauen in my mouth,
As if I did but onely chew his name,
And in my heart the strong and swelling euill
Of my conception: the state whereon I studied
Is like a good thing, being often read
Growne feard, and tedious: yea, my Granitie
Wherein (let no man heare me) I take pride,
Could I, with boote, change for an idle plume
Which the ayre beats for vaine: oh place, oh forme,
How often dost thou with thy case, thy habit
Wrench awe from fooles, and tye the wiser soules
To thy false seeming? Blood, thou art blood,
Let's write good Angell on the Deuills horne
'Tis not the Deuills Crest: how now? who's there?
Enter Seruant.
Ser. One Isabell, a Sister, desires access to you
Ang. Teach her the way: oh heauens
Why does my blood thus muster to my heart,
Making both it vnable for it selfe,
And dispossessing all my other parts
Of necessary fitnesse?
So play the foolish throngs with one that swounds,
Come all to help him, and to hop the ayre
By which hee should reuiue: and euen so
The generall subiect to a well-wisht King
Quit their owne part, and in obsequious fondnesse
Crowd to his presence, where their vntaught loue
Must needs appear offence: how now faire Maid.
Enter Isabella.
Isab. I am come to know your pleasure.
An. That you might know it, would much better please me,
Then to demand what 'tis: your Brother cannot liue.
Isab. Euen so: heauen keepe your Honor.
Ang. Yet may he liue awhile: and it may be
As long as you, or I: yet he must die.
Isab. Vnder your Sentence?
Ang. Yea.
Isab. When, I beseech you: that in his Reprieue
(Longer, or shorter) he may be so fitted
That his soule sicken not.
Ang. Ha! fie, these filthy vices: It were as good
To pardon him, that hath from nature stolne
A man already made, as to remit
Their sawcie sweetnes, that do coyne heauens Image
In stamps that are forbid: 'tis all as easie,
Falsely to take away a life true made,
As to put mettle in restrained meanes
To make a false one.
Isab. 'Tis set downe so in heauen, but not in earth.
Ang. Say you so: then I shall pose you quickly.
Which had you rather, that the most iust Law
Now tooke your Brothers life, and to redeeme him
Giue vp your body to such sweet vncleannesse
As she that he hath staind?
Isab. Sir, beleeue this,
I had rather giue my body, then my soule.
Ang. I talke not of your soule: our compell'd sins
Stand more for number, then for accompt.
Isab. How say you?
Ang. Nay, I'll not warrant that: for I can speake
Against the thing I say. Answere to this,
I (now the voyce of the recorded Law)
Pronounce a sentence on your Brothers life,
Might there not be a charitie in sinne
To saue this Brothers life?
Isab. Please you to doo't,
Ile take it as a perill to my soule,
It is no sinne at all, but charitie.
Ang. Pleas'd you to doo't, at peril of your soule
Were equall poize of sinne, and charitie.
Isab. That I do beg his life, if it be sinne
Heauen let me beare it: you granting of my suit,
If that be sin, Ile make it my Morne-prayer,
To haue it added to the faults of mine,
And nothing of your answere.
Ang. Nay, but heare me
Your sence pursues not mine: either you are ignorant,
Or seeme so craftie; and that's not good.
Isab. Let me be ignorant, and in nothing good,
But graciously to know I am no better.
Ang. Thus wisdome wishes to appeare most bright,
When it doth tax it selfe: As these blacke Masques
Proclaime an enshield beauty ten times louder
Then beauty could displayed. But marke me,
To be receiued plaine, Ile speake more grosse:
Your Brother is to dye.
Isab. So.
Ang. And his offence is so, as it appeares,
Accountant to the Law, vpon that paine.
Isab. True.
Ang. Admit no other way to saue his life
(As I subscribe not that, nor any other,
But in the losse of question) that you, his Sister,
Finding your selfe desir'd of such a person,
Whose credit with the Iudge, or owne great place,
Could fetch your Brother from the Manacles
Of the all-building-Law: and that there were
No earthly meane to saue him, but that either
You must lay downe the treasures of your body,
To this supposed, or else to let him suffer:
What would you doe?
Isab. As much for my poore Brother as my selfe;
That is: were I vnder the tearmes of death,
Th'impression of keene whips, I'ld weare as Rubies,
And strip my selfe to death, as to a bed,
That longing haue bin sicke for, ere I'ld yeeld
My body vp to shame.

Ang. That

Ang. Then must your brother die.
Isa. And 'twer the cheaper way:
Better it were a brother dide at once,
Then that a sister, by redeeming him
Should die for euer.
Ang. Were not you then as cruell as the Sentence,
That you haue slander'd so?
Isa. Ignomie in ransome, and free pardon
Are of two houses: lawfull mercie,
Is nothing kin to foule redemption.
Ang. You seem'd of late to make the Law a tyrant,
And rather proou'd the sliding of your brother
A merriment, than a vice.
Isa. O pardon me my Lord, it oft falls out
To haue, what we would haue,
We speake not what we meane;
I something do excuse the thing I hate,
For his aduantage that I dearely loue.
Ang. We are all fraile.
Isa. Else let my brother die,
If not a feodarie but only he
Owe, and succeed thy weaknesse.
Ang. Nay women are frailes too.
Isa. I, as the glasses where they view'd themselues,
Which are as easie broke as they make formes.
Women! Help heauen; men their creation marre
In profiting by them. Nay, call vs ten times frailes,
For we are soft, as our complexions are,
And credulous to false prints.
Ang. I think it well:
And from this testimonie of your owne sex
(Since I suppose we are made to be no stronger
Then faults may shake our frames) let me be bold;
I do arrest your words. Be that you are,
That is a woman; if you be more, you're none:
If you be one (as you are well exprest
By all externall warrants) shew it now,
By putting on the destin'd Liuerie.
Isa. I haue no tongue but one; gentle my Lord,
Let me entreate you speake the former language.
Ang. Plainly conceiue I loue you.
Isa. My brother did loue Iuliet,
And you tell me that he shall die for it.
Ang. He shall not for loue me.
Isa. I know your vertue hath a licence in't,
Which seemes a little fouler than it is,
To plucke on others.
Ang. Beleeue me on mine Honor,
My words expresse my purpose.
Isa. Ha! Little honor, to be much beleeu'd,
And most pernitious purpose! Seeming, seeming.
I will proclaime thee Angelo, looke for't:
Sign me a present pardon for my brother,
Or with an out-stretcht throate Ile tell the world aloud
What man thou art.
Ang. Who will beleeue thee Isabell?
My vnsoyld name, th'austeerenesse of my life,
My vouch against you, and my place i'th State,
Will so your accusation ouer-weigh,
That you shall stifle in your owne report,
And smell of calumnie. I haue begun,
And now I giue my sensuall race the reine,
Fit thy consent to my sharpe appetite,
Lay by all nicetie, and prolixious blushes
That banish what they sue for: Redeeme thy brother,
By yeelding vp thy bodie to my will,
Or else he must not only die the death,
But thy vnkindnesse shall his death draw out
To lingring sufferance: Answer me to morrow,
Or by the affection that now guides me most,
Ile proue a Tyrant to him. As for you,
Say what you can, my false, o're-weighs your true. Exit.
Isa. To whom should I complaine? Did I tell this,
Who would beleeue me? O perilous mouthes
That bear in them, one and the selfesame tongue,
Either of condemnation, or approofe,
Bidding the Law make curtsie to their will,
Hooking both right and wrong to th'appetite,
To follow as it drawes. Ile to my brother,
Though he hath falne by prompture of the blood,
Yet hath he in him such a minde of Honor,
That had he twenty heads to tender downe
On twenty bloodie blockes, hee'ld yeeld them vp,
Before his sister should her bodie stoope
To such abhord pollution.
Then, Isabell liue chaste, and brother die;
More than our Brother, is our Chastitie.
Ile tell him yet of Angelo's request,
And fit his mind to death, for his soules rest. Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Duke, Claudio, and Provost.

Duke. So then you hope of pardon from Lord Angelo?
Cla. The miserable haue no other medicine
But only hope: I'haue hope to liue, and am prepar'd to die.
Duke. Be absolute for death: either death or life
Shall thereby be the sweeter. Reason thus with life:
If I do loose thee, I do loose a thing
That none but fooles would keepe: a breath thou art,
Seruile to all the skyie-influences,
That dost this habitation where thou keep'st
Hourely afflict: Merely, thou art death's foole,
For him thou labour'st by thy flight to shun,
And yet runn'st toward him still. Thou art not noble,
For all th'accommodations that thou bear'st,
Are nurst by basenesse: Thou'rt by no meanes valiant,
For thou dost feare the soft and tender forke
Of a poore worme: thy best of rest is sleepe,
And that thou oft prouok'st, yet grossely fear'st
Thy death, which is no more. Thou art not thy selfe,
For thou exists on many a thousand graines
That issue out of dust. Happie thou art not,
For what thou hast not, still thou striu'st to get,
And what thou hast forgett'st. Thou art not certaine,
For thy complexion shifts to strange effects,
After the Moone. If thou art rich, thou'rt poore,
For like an Asse, whose backe with Ingots bowes;
Thou beart'st thy heauie riches but a iourney,
And death vnloads thee: Friend hast thou none.
For thine owne bowels which do call thee, fire
The meere effusion of thy proper loines
Do curse the Gowt, Sapego, and the Rheume
For ending thee no sooner. Thou hast nor youth, nor age
But as it were an after-dinners sleepe
Dreaming on both, for all thy blessed youth
Becomes as aged, and doth beggar the times
Of palsied-Eld: and when thou art old, and rich

Thou

Thou haſt neither heate, affection, limbe, nor beautie
To make thy riches pleaſant: what's yet in this
That beares the name of life? Yet in this life
Lie hid moe thouſand deaths; yet death we feare
That makes theſe odds, all euen.
Cla. I humbly thanke you.
To ſue to liue, I finde I ſeeke to die,
And ſeeking death, finde life: Let it come on.
Enter Iſabella.
Iſab. What hoa? Peace heere; Grace, and good companiе.
Pro. Who's there? Come in, the wiſh deſerues a welcome.
Duke. Deere ſir, ere long Ile viſit you againe.
Cla. Moſt holie Sir, I thanke you.
Iſa. My buſineſſe is a word or two with Claudio.
Pro. And very welcom. Looke Signior, here's your ſiſter.
Duke. Prouoſt, a word with you.
Pro. As manie as you pleaſe.
Duke. Bring them to heare me ſpeak, where I may be conceal'd.
Cla. Now ſiſter, what's the comfort?
Iſa. Why,
As all comforts are; moſt good, moſt good indeede,
Lord Angelo having affaires to heauen
Intends you for his ſwift Ambaſſador,
Where you ſhall be an euerlaſting Leiger;
Therefore your beſt appointment make with ſpeed,
To Morrow you ſet on.
Clau. Is there no remedie?
Iſa. None, but ſuch remedie, as to ſaue a head
To cleaue a heart in twaine.
Clau. But is there anie?
Iſa. Yes brother, you may liue;
There is a diuelliſh mercie in the Judge,
If you'l implore it, that will free your life,
But fetter you till death.
Cla. Perpetuall durance?
Iſa. I euen ſo, perpetuall durance, a reſtraint
Through all the worlds vaſtiditie you had
To a determin'd ſcope.
Clau. But in what nature?
Iſa. In ſuch a one, as you conſenting too't,
Would barke your honor from that trunke you beare,
And leaue you naked.
Clau. Let me know the point.
Iſa. Oh, I do feare thee Claudio, and I quake,
Leaſt thou a feaſorous life ſhouldſt entertaine,
And ſix or ſeuen winters more reſpect
Then a perpetuall Honor. Dar'ſt thou die?
The ſence of death is moſt in apprehenſion,
And the poore Beetle that we treade vpon
In corporall ſufferance, finds a pang as great,
As when a Giant dies.
Cla. Why giue you me this ſhame?
Thinke you I can a reſolution fetch
From flowrie tenderneſſe? If I muſt die,
I will encounter darkneſſe as a bride,
And hugge it in mine armes.
Iſa. There ſpake my brother: there my fathers graue
Did vtter forth a voice. Yes, thou muſt die:
Thou art too noble, to conſerue a life
In baſe appliances. This outward ſainted Deputie,
Whoſe ſetled viſage, and deliberate word
Nips youth i'th head, and follies doth emmew
As Falcon doth the Fowle, is yet a diuel:
His filth within being caſt, he would appeare
A pond, as deepe as hell.
Cla. The prenzie, Angelo?
Iſa. Oh 'tis the cunning Liuerie of hell,
The damneſt bodie to inueſt, and couer
In prenzie gardes; doſt thou thinke Claudio,
If I would yeeld him my virginitie
Thou might'ſt be freed?
Cla. Oh heauens, it cannot be.
Iſa. Yes, he would giu't thee, from this rank offence
So to offend him ſtill. This night's the time
That I ſhould do what I abhorre to name,
Or elſe thou dieſt to morrow.
Clau. Thou ſhalt not do't.
Iſa. O, were it but my life,
I'de throw it downe for your deliuerance
As frankely as a pin.
Clau. Thankes deere Iſabell.
Iſa. Be readie Claudio, for your death to morrow.
Clau. Yes. Has he affections in him,
That thus can make him bite the Law by th'noſe,
When he would force it? Sure it is no ſinne,
Or of the deadly ſeuen it is the leaſt.
Iſa. Which is the leaſt?
Cla. If it were damnable, he being ſo wiſe,
Why would he for the momentarie tricke
Be perdurable fin'de? Oh Iſabell.
Iſa. What ſaies my brother?
Cla. Death is a fearefull thing
Iſa. And ſhamed life, a hatefull.
Cla. I, but to die, and go we know not where,
To lie in cold obſtruction, and to rot,
This ſenſible warme motion, to become
A kneaded clod; And the delighted ſpirit
To bath in fierie floods, or to reſide
In thrilling Region of thicke-ribbed Ice,
To be impriſon'd in the viewleſſe windes
And blowne with reſtleſſe violence round about
The pendant world: or to be worſe then worſt
Of thoſe, that lawleſſe and incertaine thought,
Imagine howling, 'tis too horrible.
The weareſt, and moſt loathed worldly life
That Age, Ache, penurie, and imprizonment
Can lay on nature, is a Paradiſe
To what we feare of death.
Iſa. Alas, alas.
Cla. Sweet Siſter, let me liue.
What ſinne you do, to ſaue a brothers life,
Nature diſpenſes with the deede ſo farre,
That it becomes a vertue.
Iſa. Oh you beaſt,
Oh faithleſſe Coward, oh diſhoneſt wretch,
Wilt thou be made a man, out of my vice?
Is't not a kinde of Inceſt, to take life
From thine owne ſiſters ſhame? What ſhould I thinke,
Heauen ſhield my Mother plaid my Father faire:
For ſuch a warped ſlip of wildernеſſe
Nere iſſu'd from his blood. Take my defiance,
Die, periſh: Might but my bending downe
Repreeue thee from thy fate, it ſhould proceede.
Ile pray a thouſand prairs for thy death,
No word to ſaue thee.
Cla. Nay heare me Iſabel.
Iſa. Oh fie, fie, fie:
Thy ſinne's not accidentall, but a Trade;

Mercie

Mercy to thee would prone it selfe a Bawd,
'Tis best that thou dieft quickly.

Cla. Oh heare me Isabella.

Duk. Vouchsafe a word, yong sister, but one word.

Isa. What is your Will.

Duk. Might you dispense with your leysure, I would by and by haue some speech with you the satisfaction I would require, is likewise your owne benefit.

Isa. I haue no superfluous leysure, my stay must be stolen out of other affaires: but I will attend you a while.

Duke. Son, I haue ouer-heard what hath past between you & your sister. Angelo had neuer the purpose to corrupt her; onely he hath made an assay of her vertue, to practise his judgement with the disposition of natures. She (hauing the truth of honour in her) hath made him that gracious denniall, which he is most glad to receiue: I am Confessor to Angelo, and I know this to be true, therefore prepare your selfe to death: do not satisfie your resolution with hopes that are fallible, to morrow you must die, goe to your knees, and make ready.

Cla. Let me aske my sister pardon. I am so out of loue with life, that I will sue to be rid of it

Duke. Hold you there: farewell; Prouost, a word with you.

Pro. What's your will (father?)

Duk. That now you are come, you wil be gone leaue me a while with the Maid, my minde promises with my habit, no loffe shall touch her by my company.

Pro. In good time. Exit.

Duk. The hand that hath made you faire, hath made you good: the goodnes that is cheape in beauty, makes beauty briefe in goodnes; but grace being the soule of your complexion, shall keepe the body of it euer faire: the assault that Angelo hath made to you, Fortune hath conuaid to my vnderstanding; and but that frailty hath examples for his falling, I should wonder at Angelo. how will you doe to content this Substitute, and to saue your Brother?

Isab. I am now going to resolue him: I had rather my brother die by the Law, then my sonne should be vnlawfullie borne. But (oh) how much is the good Duke deceiu'd in Angelo: if euer he returne, and I can speake to him, I will open my lips in vaine, or discouer his gouernment.

Duke. That shall not be much amisse: yet, as the matter now stands, he will auoid your accusation: he made triall of you onelie. Therefore fasten your eare on my aduisings, to the loue I haue in doing good; a remedie presents it selfe. I doe make my selfe beleeue that you may most vprighteously do a poor wronged Lady a merited benefit; redeem your brother from the angry Law; doe no staine to your owne gracious person, and much please the absent Duke, if peraduenture he shall euer returne to haue hearing of this businesse.

Isab. Let me heare you speake farther; I haue spirit to do any thing that appeares not fowle in the truth of my spirit.

Duke. Vertue is bold, and goodnes neuer fearefull: Haue you not heard speake of Mariana the sister of Frederick the great Souldier, who miscarried at Sea?

Isa. I haue heard of the Lady, and good words went with her name.

Duke. Shee should this Angelo haue married: was affianced to her oath, and the nuptiall appointed: between which time of the contract, and limit of the solemnitie, her brother Frederick was wrackt at Sea, hauing in that perished vessell, the dowry of his sister: but marke how heauily this befell to the poore Gentlewoman, there she lost a noble and renowned brother, in his loue toward her, euer most kinde and naturall: with him the portion and sinew of her fortune, her marriage dowry: with both, her combynate-husband, this well-seeming Angelo.

Isab. Can this be so? did Angelo so leaue her?

Duke. Left her in her teares, & dried not one of them with his comfort: swallowed his vowes whole, pretending in her, discoueries of dishonor: in few, bestow'd her on her owne lamentation, which she yet weares for his sake: and he, a marble to her teares, is washed with them, but relents not.

Isab. What a merit were it in death to take this poore maid from the world? what corruption in this life, that it will let this man liue? But how out of this can shee auaile?

Duke. It is a rupture that you may easily heale: and the cure of it not only saues your brother, but keepes you from dishonor in doing it.

Isab. Shew me how (good Father.)

Duk. This fore-named Maid hath yet in her the continuance of her first affection: his vniust vnkindenesse (that in all reason should haue quenched her loue) hath (like an impediment in the Current) made it more violent and vnruly: Goe you to Angelo, answere his requiring with a plausible obedience, agree with his demands to the point: onely referre your selfe to this aduantage; first, that your stay with him may not be long: that the time may haue all shadow, and silence in it: and the place answere to conuenience: this being granted in course, and now follows all: wee shall aduise this wronged maid to steed vp your appointment, goe in your place: if the encounter acknowledge it selfe hereafter, it may compell him to her recompence; and heere, by this is your brother saued, your honor vntainted, the poore Mariana aduantaged, and the corrupt Deputy scaled. The Maid will I frame, and make fit for his attempt: if you thinke well to carry this as you may, the doublenes of the benefit defends the deceit from reproofe. What thinke you of it?

Isab. The image of it giues me content already, and I trust it will grow to a most prosperous perfection.

Duk. It lies much in your holding vp: haste you speedily to Angelo, if for this night he intreat you to his bed, giue him promise of satisfaction: I will presently to S. Lukes; there at the moated-Grange resides this dejected Mariana; at that place call vpon me, and dispatch with Angelo, that it may be quickly.

Isab. I thank you for this comfort: fare you well good father. Exit.

Enter Elbow, Clowne, Officers.

Elb. Nay, if there be no remedy for it, but that you will needes buy and sell men and women like beasts, we shall haue all the world drinke browne & white bastard.

Duk. Oh heauens, what stuffe is heere.

Clow. 'Twas neuer merry world since of two vsuries the merriest was put downe, and the worser allow'd by order of Law; a fur'd gowne to keepe him warme; and furd with Foxe and Lamb-skins too, to signifie, that craft being richer then Innocency, stands for the facing.

Elb. Come your way sir: 'blesse you good Father Frier.

Duk. And you good Brother Father; what offence hath this man made you, Sir?

Elb. Marry

Elb. Marry Sir, he hath offended the Law; and Sir, we take him to be a Theefe too Sir for wee haue found vpon him Sir, a strange Pick-lock, which we haue sent to the Deputie.

Duke. Fie, sirrah, a Bawd, a wicked bawd,
The euil that thou causeſt to be done,
That is thy meanes to liue. Do thou but thinke
What 'tis to cram a maw, or clout a sacke
From such a filthie vice: say to thy selfe
From their abhominable and beastly touches
I drinke, I eate away my selfe, and liue
Card to a beesome that is hanging ſor it,
So finkingly depend vpon the Comment, go mend.

Clo. Indeed, it does ſtinke in ſome ſort, Sir,
But yet Sir I would proue.

Duke. Nay, tis true: for euen ſuch vices speake for themſelues.
Thou wilt proue ſo. Take him to priſon Officer:
Correction, and Inſtruction muſt both worke
Ere this rude beaſt will profit.

Elb. He muſt before the Deputy Sir, he has giuen him warning: the Deputy cannot abide a Whore-maſter: if he be a Whore-monger, and comes before him, he were as good go a meere deſperate.

Duke. True: we were beſt therefore if we could get women from our Iailes, to geld and ſplay all the youth of the City.

Elb. Truely Sir, I'le take a Wife-hood rather then be one.

Clo. I ſpy comfort, I cry baile: here's a Gentleman and a friend of mine.

Lucio. How now, noble Pompey? What, at the wheeles of Cæſar? Art thou led in triumph? What, ſtand'ſt thou for the Pillorie? What's the matter? Is Pompey growne honeſt now, for putting the hand in the pocket, and extracting clutch'd? What reply? Ha? What ſay'ſt thou to this Tune, Matter, and Method? Is't not drowned i'th' laſt raine? Ha? What ſay'ſt thou, Trot? Is the world as it was Man? Which is the way? Is it ſad, and few words? Or how? The trick of it?

Duke. Still thus, and nothing ſpeakes.

Lucio. How doſt thou deere Mortality? How goes Maſter-Procures health? Ha?

Clo. Troth Sir, ſhee hath eaten vp her beſts, and ſhe is herſelfe in the tub.

Lucio. Why 'tis good: it is the right of it: it muſt be ſo. Euer your freſh Whore, and your powder'd Bawd: an vnſhunned conſequence it muſt be ſo. Art going to priſon Pompey?

Clo. Yes faith Sir.

Lucio. Why 'tis not amiſſe Pompey. Farewell: goe ſay I ſent thee thither. For debt Pompey? Or how?

Elb. For being a bawd, for being a bawd.

Lucio. Well, then impriſonment is due of a bawd, why 'tis his right. Bawd is he doubtleſſe and of antiquity too: bawd-borne. Farewell good Pompey. Commend me to the priſon Pompey: you will turne good husband now Pompey, you will keepe the houſe.

Clo. I hope Sir your good Worſhip will be my bayle?

Lucio. No indeed will I not Pompey, it is not the wear. I will pray (Pompey) to encreaſe your bondage if you take it not patiently. Why, your mettle is the more. Adieu truſty Pompey.
Bleſſe you Friar.

Duke. And you.

Lucio. Do's Bridget paint ſtill Pompey? Ha?

Elb. Come your way ſir, come.

Clo. You will not baile me then Sir?

Lucio. Then Pompey, nor now. What newes abroad Friar? What newes?

Elb. Come your way ſir, come.

Lucio. Goe to kennell Pompey, goe.
What newes Friar of the Duke?

Duke. I know none: can you tell me of any?

Lucio. Some ſay he is with the Emperor of Ruſſia, other ſome he is in Rome: but where is he think'ſt thou?

Duke. I know not where: but wherſoeuer, I wiſh him well.

Lucio. It was a mad fantaſticall tricke of him to ſteale from the State, and vſurpe the beggerie he was neuer borne to. Lord Angelo Dukes it well in abſence: he puts tranſgreſſion to't.

Duke. He do's well inough.

Lucio. A little more lenitie to Lecherie would doe no harme in him. Something too crabbed that way, Friar.

Duke. It is too general a vice, and ſeuerer execution would ſtill leaue it raging. Well: good morrow to you, good Friar.

Lucio. Yes good morrow to the ſeuerer execution, ſeuerely executed, ſeuerely vſed, ſeuerely miſ-vſed, ſeuerely to eate, ſeuerely to ſleepe, ſeuerely to Feaſt, ſeuerely to Faſt, ſeuerely to Get, and ſeuerely to Spend: and yet to come abroad with a ſeuere viſage, and not make Authority a Woman, for I am ſure there is no vertue ſo ſurely apparelled. Sirra, a word with you. If your worſhip I take to be one, can reſolue me in a queſtion, I would gladly ſtand and be reſolued.

Duke. Sir, I am buſie: but if you will ſay any thing briefly, I will heare you.

Lucio. I thanke your worſhip: I ſhall be briefe enough, I warrant you. I am told in priſon, that I am a Libertine, a Wencher, a Common Cuſtomer, a Hanger on, a Viſitant, a Gameſter, a Drinker, and I know not what: which I confeſſe I cannot deny, but I hope your worſhip will not hold me any thing the worſe for that.

Duke. Sir, I hold you not the worſe for that.

Lucio. I thanke your worſhip for your good opinion: and do but ſtand in need of it. I heare the Duke is returned: I would I knew when, not that I wiſh him any harme, but that I am deſirous to ſhew him what a Rogue I am: it is my deſire to haue him ſee me hanged.

Duke. Doubtleſſe you ſhall, if my conceit be not falſe of him.

Lucio. Why, I can hide nothing from you Sir, for I am full of vices. Firſt, I am giuen to drinke, and I am a Knowne Drunkard: I haue ſpent much vpon Whores, and haue in my youth run into the danger of a Diſeaſe: I am full of Quarrels, and do but ſtand in need of meate, to become as groſſe as any man of Angleterre: and thus when I am faſting, I am prone to lye downe vpon the baſeſt wrongs that lye before me: all which I confeſſe, I do for my hope of Saluation, that I am reſolued to forſake, and a number more, that I purpoſe to forſake.

Duke. You are deepely in the right Sir, and leaue me ſpace.

Lucio. Why, what a wheedling thing is this to haue him, for the receiuing of a Cod-piece, to take away the life of a man? Would the Duke that is abſent, haue done this? Ere ever I haue ſung a ranterre penny-worth of baſeſt ballads, he would haue paide for the printing a thouſand. Euen ſuch a one is he, for all the learned ſeeming of the face, to see him: and that inſtructed him to mercie.

Duke. I never heard the abſent Duke much detected for Women: he was not inclin'd that way.

Lucio. O Sir, you are deceiued.

Duke. 'Tis not poſſible.

Lucio. Who, not the Duke? Yes, your beggar of fifty: and his vſe was, to put a ducket in her Clack-diſh. The Duke had Crochets in him. He would be drunke too, that let me inform you.

Duke. You do him wrong ſurely.

Lucio. Sir, I was an inward of his: a ſhie fellow was the Duke, and I believe I know the cauſe of his withdrawing.

Duke. What (I prethee) might be the cauſe?

Lucio. No pardon: 'tis a ſecret muſt be locked within the teeth and the lips: but this I can let you vnderſtand, the greater file of the ſubiect held the Duke to be wiſe.

Duke. Wiſe? Why no queſtion but he was.

Lucio. A very ſuperficiall, ignorant, vnweighing fellow.

Duke. Either this is enuie in you, folly, or miſtaking. The very ſtreame of his life, and the buſineſſe he hath helmed, muſt vpon a warranted need, giue him a better proclamation. Let him be but teſtimonied in his owne bringings forth, and he ſhall appeare to the enuious, a Scholler, a Stateſman, and a Soldier. Therefore you ſpeake vnskilfully: or if your knowledge be more, it is much darkened in your malice.

Lucio.

Luc. Sir, I know him, and I loue him.

Duke. Loue talkes with better knowledge, & knowledge with deare loue.

Luc. Come Sir, I know what I know.

Duke. I can hardly beleeue that, since you know not what you ſpeake. But if euer the Duke returne (as our prayers are he may) let me deſire you to make your anſwer before him: If it bee honeſt you haue ſpoke, you haue courage to maintaine it: I am bound to call vpon you, and I pray you your name?

Luc. Sir, my name is Lucio, well known to the Duke.

Duke. He ſhall know you better Sir, if I may liue to report you.

Luc. I feare you not.

Duke. O you hope the Duke will return no more, or you imagine me too vnkinde a iudge to depoſe you in your noble and vertuous enterprize?

Luc. Well: before I truſt to the mercie of ſo graue a iudge, I care not if I doe you any little pleaſure. Will you further anie thing againſt me?

Duke. I know you for a gentleman of report, marrie I'll waite vpon your truer carriage, but I ſay true, it is for your friendly care that you ſhould not dye to morrow, or no?

Luc. Why no more then due: For I thinke you know it is but the Duke's pleaſure.

Duke. Why ſhould he die Sir?

Luc. Why? For filling a bottle with a Strumpets mightie: I would the Duke we talke of were return'd againe: this vngouern'd State of his is intolerable. We haue reuocations euery Action of our liues, for pleaſuring, or reuenging. It is too franke. Marrie how long his abſence may be wiſht for, there are many obſcure Prouerbs that make doubt of it. Some ſay he is gone to the Emperor Prester John, for the white Bull. Some, that he is retir'd to the Moone, according to the Almanack, where he obſerues the ſtarres moſt religiouſly. But that he is carried into Exile, I haue as much aſſurance, as a man can haue that lookes vpon nothing. A very reaſonable iealouſie is like to doe him good. For my part, I commend him for it: Make it the faſhion, and the vertue of the time, and I ſhall thinke the beſt of it. Marrie I would the Duke we talke of were return'd againe. This

Actus Quartus. Scœna Prima.

Enter Mariana, and Boy singing.

Song. Take, oh take those lips away,
that so sweetly were forsworne,
And those eyes the breake of day
lights that doe mislead the Morne;
But my kisses bring againe, bring again,
Seales of loue, but seal'd in vaine, seal'd in vaine.

Enter Duke.

Mar. Breake off thy song, and haste thee quick away,
Here comes a man of comfort, whose aduice
Hath often still'd my brawling discontent.
I cry you mercie, Sir, and well could wish
You had not found me here so musicall.
Let me excuse me, and beleeue me so,
My mirth it much displeas'd, but pleas'd my woe.

Duke. 'Tis good, though Musick oft hath such a charme
To make bad, good; and good prouoake to harme.
I pray you tell me, hath any body enquir'd for mee here to day; much vpon this time haue I promis'd here to meete.

Mar. You haue not bin enquir'd after: I haue sat here all day.

Enter Isabell.

Duke. I doe constantly beleeue you: the time is come euen now. I shall craue your forbearance a little, may be I will call vpon you anone for some aduantage to your selfe.

Mar. I am alwayes bound to you, Exit.

Duke. Very well met, and well come
What is the newes from this good Deputie?

Isab. He hath a Garden circummured with Bricke,
Whose westerne side is with a Vineyard back'd;
And to that Vineyard is a planched gate,
That makes his opening with this bigger Key:
This other doth command a little doore,
Which from the Vineyard to the Garden leades,
There haue I made my promise, vpon the
Heauy midle of the night, to call vpon him.

Duke. But shall you on your knowledge find this way?

Isab. I haue ta'ne a due and wary note vpon't,
With whispering, and most guiltie diligence,
In action all of precept, he did show me
The way twice o're.

Duke. Are there no other tokens
Betweene you 'greed, concerning her obseruance?

Isab. No none, but only a repaire i'th darke,
And that I haue possest him, my most stay
Can be but briefe: for I haue made him know,
I haue a Seruant comes with me along
That stayes vpon me, whose perswasions
I come about my Brother.

Duke. 'Tis well borne vp.
I haue not yet made knowne to Mariana
A word of this: what hoa, within; come forth,
I pray you be acquainted with this Maid,
She comes to doe you good.

Isab. I doe desire the like.

Duke. Do you perswade your selfe that I respect you?

Mar. Good Frier, I know you do, and haue found it.

Duke. Take then this your companion by the hand
Who hath a storie readie for your eare.
I shall attend your leisure, but make haste
The vaporous night approaches.

Mar. Wilt please you walke aside. Exeunt

Duke. Oh Place, and greatnes: millions of false eies
Are stucke vpon thee: volumes of report
Run with these false, and most contrarious Quest
Vpon thy doings: thousand escapes of wit
Make thee the father of their idle dreame,
And racke thee in their fancies. Welcome, how agreed?

Enter Mariana and Isabella

Isab. Shee'll take the enterprize vpon her father,
If you aduise it.

Duke. It is not my consent,
But my entreaty too.

Isa. Little haue you to say
When you depart from him, but soft and low,
Remember now my brother.

Mar. Feare me not.

Duke Nor gentle daughter, feare you not at all:
He is your husband on a pre-contract:
To bring you thus together 'tis no sinne,
Sith that the Iustice of your title to him
Doth flourish the deceit. Come, let vs goe,
Our Corne's to reape, for yet our Tithes to sow. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Provost and Clowne.

Pro Come hither sirha; can you cut off a mans heade

Clo. If the man be a Bachelor Sir, I can:
But if he be a married man, he's his wiues head,
And I can neuer cut off a womans head.

Pro. Come sir, leaue me your snatches, and yeeld me a direct answere. To morrow morning are to die Claudio and Barnardine. Here is in our prison a common executioner, who in his office lacks a helper, if you will take it on you to assist him, it shall redeeme you from your Gyues: if not, you shall haue your full time of imprisonment, and your deliuerance with an vnpitied whipping, for you haue been a notorious bawd.

Clo. Sir, I haue been an vnlawfull bawd, time out of minde, but yet I will be content to be a lawfull hangman. I would be glad to receiue some instruction from my fellow partner.

Pro. What hoa, Abhorson: where's Abhorson there?

Enter Abhorson.

Abh Doe you call sir?

Pro. Sirha, here's a fellow will helpe you to morrow in your execution: if you think it meete, compound with him by the yeere, and let him abide here with you; if not, vse him for the present, and dismisse him, hee cannot plead his estimation with you: he hath been a Bawd.

Abh. A Bawd Sir? fie vpon him, he will discredit our mystery.

Pro. Goe too Sir, you weigh equally: a feather will turne the Scale. Exit.

Clo. Pray sir, by your good fauour: for surely sir, a good fauour you haue, but that you haue a hanging look: Doe you call it, your occupation a Mystery?

Abh. I Sir, a Miſterie.

Clo. Painting Sir, I haue heard ſay, is a Miſterie, and your Whores ſir, being members of my occupation, vſing painting, do proue my Occupation, a Miſterie: but what Miſterie there ſhould be in hanging, if I ſhould be hang'd, I cannot imagine.

Abh. Sir, it is a Miſterie.

Clo. Proote.

Abh. Euerie true mans apparrell fits your Theefe.

Clo. If it be too little for your theefe, your true man thinkes it big enough. If it be too big for your Theefe, your Theefe thinkes it little enough. So euerie true mans apparrell fits your Theefe.

Enter Prouoſt.

Pro. Are you agreed?

Clo. Sir, I will ſerue him; For I do finde your Hangman is a more penitent Trade then your Bawd: he doth oftner aske forgiuenesſe.

Pro. You, ſirrah, prouide your blocke and your Axe to morrow, 4 o'cleake.

Abh. Come on (Bawd) I will inſtruct thee in my Trade: follow.

Clo. I do deſire to learne ſir: and I hope if you haue occaſion to vſe me for your owne turne, you ſhall finde me yare. For truly ſir, for your kindneſſe, I owe you a good turne. Exit

Pro. Call hether Barnardine and Claudio:
Th'one has my pitie; not a iot the other,
Being a Murtherer, though he were my brother.

Enter a Seruant.

Looke, here's the Warrant Claudio, for thy death:
'Tis now dead midnight, and by eight to morrow
Thou muſt be made immortall. Where's Barnardine?

Clo. As faſt lock'd vp in ſleepe, as guiltleſſe labour,
When it lies ſtarke in the Iraueilers bones,
He will not wake.

Pro. Who can do good on him?
Well, go, prepare your ſelfe. But harke, what noiſe?
Heauen giue your ſpirits comfort: by, and by,
My paine is long pardon, or repreeue
For the moſt gentle Claudio. Welcome Father.

Enter Duke.

Duke. The beſt a wiſhing cannot bring you, ſleight,
Saue you, good Prouoſt: whoſe office is this night?

Pro. None (more the Carpe) worſhipfull.

Duke. Not Iſabels?

Pro. No.

Duke. They will then ere't be long.

Pro. What comfort is for Claudio?

Duke. There's ſome in hope.

Pro. It is a bitter Deputie.

Duke. Not ſo, not ſo: his life is parallel'd
Euen with the ſtroke and line of his great Iuſtice.
He doth with holy abſtinence ſubdue
That in himſelfe, which he ſpurres on his powre
To quaſhe in others: were he meal'd with that
Which he corrects, then were he tyrannous,
And not the be good, leſt off. Now are they come.
This a gentle Prouoſt, ſeldome when
The ſteeled Gaoler is the friend of men.
How now? what noiſe? That ſpirit's poſſeſt with haſt,
That wounds th'vnreſiſting Poſterne with theſe ſtrokes.

Pro. There he muſt ſtay vntil the Officer
Ariſe to let him in: is call'd vp.

Duke. Haue you no countermand for Claudio yet?
But he muſt die to morrow?

Pro. None Sir, none.

Duke. As neere the dawning Prouoſt, as it is,
You ſhall heare more ere Morning.

Pro. Happely
You ſomething know: yet I beleeue there comes
No countermand: no ſuch example haue we
Beſides, vpon the verie ſiege of Iuſtice,
Lord Angelo hath to the publike eare
Profeſt the contrary.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Duke. This is his Lords man.

Pro. And heere comes Claudio's pardon.

Meſſ. My Lord hath ſent you this note,
And by mee this further charge;
That you ſwerue not from the ſmalleſt Article of it,
Neither in time, matter, or other circumſtance.
Good morrow. for as I take it, it is almoſt day.

Pro. I ſhall obey him.

Duke. This is his Pardon purchas'd by ſuch ſin,
For which the Pardoner himſelfe is in
Hence hath offence his quicke celeritie,
When it is borne in high Authority
When Vice makes Mercie; Mercie's ſo extended,
That for the faults loue, is th offender friended.
Now Sir, what newes?

Pro. I told you.
Lord Angelo, belike, thinking me remiſſe
In mine Office, awakens mee
With this vnwonted putting on, methinks ſtrangely
For he hath not vs'd it before.

Duke. Pray you let's heare.

The Letter.

Whatſoeuer you may heare to the contrary, let Claudio be executed by foure of the clocke, and in the afternoone Barnardine: For my better ſatisfaction, let mee haue Claudios head ſent me by fiue. Let this be duely performed with a thought that more depends on it, then we muſt yet deliuer. Thus faile not to doe your Office, as you will anſwere it at your perill.

What ſay you to this Sir?

Duke. What is that Barnardine, who is to be executed in th'afternoone?

Pro. His name is Barnardine. I would I had done my ſelfe as much as to know the condition of this priſoner, who in proſperitie, being a priſoner not theſe foure yeeres old.

Duke. How came it, that the abſent Duke had not either deliuer'd him to his liberty, or executed him? I haue heard it was euer his manner to do ſo.

Pro. His friends ſtill wrought repreeues for him: And indeed his actions ſhow in the gouernment of Lord Angelo, came not to an vndoubtfu proofe.

Duke. It is now apparant?

Pro. Moſt manifeſt, and not denied by himſelfe.

Duke. Hath he borne himſelfe penitently in priſon? How ſeemes he to be touch'd?

Pro. A man that apprehends death no more dreadfully, but as a drunken ſleepe, careleſſe, wreakleſſe, and feare eſſe of what's paſt, preſent, or to come; inſenſible of mortality, and deſperately mortall.

Duke. He wants aduice.

Pro. He will heare none. he hath euermore had the liberty of the priſon: giue him leaue to eſcape hence, hee would not. Drunke many times a day, if not many dayes entirely drunke. We haue very oft awak'd him, as if to carrie him to execution, and ſhew'd him a ſeeming warrant for it, it hath not moued him at all.

Duke.

Duke. More of him anon: There is written in your brow Prouost, honestly and constancie; if I read it not truly, my ancient skill beguiles me: but in the boldnes of my cunning, I will lay my selfe in hazard: Claudio, whom heere you haue warrant to execute, is no greater forfeit to the Law, then Angelo who hath sentenc'd him. To make you vnderstand this in a manifested effect, I craue but foure dayes respit: for the which, you are to do me both a present, and a dangerous courtesie.

Pro. Pray Sir, in what?

Duke. In the delaying death.

Pro. Alacke, how may I do it? Hauing the houre limited, and an expresse command, vnder penalte to deliuer his head in the view of Angelo? I may make my case as Claudio's, to croise this in the smallest.

Duke. By the vow of mine Order, I warrant you, If my instructions may be your guide, [illegible] Let this Barnardine be this morning executed, And his head borne to Angelo.

Pro. Angelo hath seene them both, [illegible] And will discouer the fauour.

Duke. Oh, death's a great disguiser, and you may adde to it, Shaue the head, and tie the beard: and say it was the desire of the penitent to be so bar'de before his death: you know the course is common. If any thing fall to you vpon this, more then thankes and good fortune, by the Saint whom I professe, I will plead against it with my life.

Pro. Pardon me, good Father, it is against my oath.

Duke. Were you sworne to the Duke, or to the Deputie?

Pro. To him, and to his Substitutes.

Duke. You will thinke you haue made no offence, if the Duke auouch the iustice of your dealing?

Pro. But what likelihood is in that?

Duke. Not a resemblance, but a certainty; yet since I see you fearfull, that neither my coate, integrity, nor perswasion, can with ease attempt you, I will go further then I meant, to pluck all feares out of you. Looke you Sir, heere is the hand and Seale of the Duke: you know the Charracter I doubt not, and the Signet is not strange to you?

Pro. I know them both.

Duke. The Contents of this, is the returne of the Duke; you shall anon ouer-reade it at your pleasure: where you shall finde within these two dayes, he will be heere. This is a thing that Angelo knowes not, for hee this very day receiues letters of strange tenor, perchance of the Dukes death, perchance entering into some Monasterie, but by chance nothing of what is writ. Looke, th'vnfolding Starre calles vp the Shepheard; put not your selfe into amazement, how these things should be: all difficulties are but easie when they are knowne. Call your executioner, and off with Barnardines head. I will giue him a present shrift, and aduise him for a better place. Yet you are amaz'd, but this shall absolutely resolue you: Come away, it is almost cleere dawne. Exit

Scena Tertia.

Enter Clowne.

Clo. I am as well acquainted heere, as I was in our house of profession: one would thinke it were Mistris Ouer-dons owne house, for here be many of her old Customers. First, here's yong Mr Rash, hee's in for a commoditie of browne paper, and olde Ginger, nine score and seuenteene pounds, of which hee made five Markes readie money: marrie then, Ginger was not much in request, for the olde Women were all dead. Then is there heere one Mr Caper, at the suite of Master Three-Pile the Mercer, for some foure suites of Peach-colour'd Satten, which now peaches him a beggar. Then haue we heere, yong Dizie, and yong Mr Deepe-vow, and Mr Copper-spurre, and Mr Starue-Lacky the Rapier and dagger man, and yong Drop-heire that kild o-the Pudding, and Mr Forthright the Tiler, and braue Mr Shoote the great Trauailer, and wilde Halfe-Canne that hath'd Pots and I thinke forty more all great doers in our Trade, and are now for the Lords take.

Enter Abhorson.

Abh. Sirrah, bring Barnardine hether.

Clo. Mr Barnardine, you must rise and be hang'd, Mr Barnardine.

Abh. What hoa Barnardine.

Barnardine within.

Bar. A pox o'your throats: who makes that noyse there? What are you?

Clo. Your friends Sir, the Hangman: You must be so good Sir to rise and be put to death.

Bar. Away you Rogue, away, I am sleepie.

Abh. Tell him he must awake, And that quickly too.

Clo. Pray Master Barnardine, awake till you are executed, and sleepe afterwards.

Abh. Go in to him, and fetch him out.

Clo. He is comming Sir, he is comming: I heare his Straw rustle.

Enter Barnardine.

Abh. Is the Axe vpon the blocke, sirrah?

Clo. Very ready Sir.

Bar. How now Abhorson? What's the newes with you?

Abh. Truly Sir, I would desire you to clap into your prayers: for looke you, the Warrants come.

Bar. You Rogue, I haue bin drinking all night, I am not fitted for't.

Clo. O, the better Sir: for he that drinkes all night, and is hanged betimes in the morning, may sleepe the sounder all the next day.

Enter Duke.

Abh. Looke you Sir, heere comes your ghostly Father: do we rest now thinke you?

Duke. Sir, induced by my charitie, and hearing how hastily you are to depart, I am come to aduise you, Comfort you, and pray with you.

Bar. Friar, not I: I haue bin drinking hard all night, and I will haue more time to prepare mee, or they shall beat out my braines with billets: I will not consent to die this day, that's certaine.

Duke. Oh Sir, you must: and therefore I beseech you Looke forward on the iourne you shall go.

Bar. I sweare I will not die to day for any mans perswasion.

Duke. But heare you.

Bar. Not a word: if you haue any thing to say to me, come to my Ward: for thence will not I to day

Exit

Enter Prouost.

Duke. Vnfit to liue, or die: oh grauell heart.

After him (Fellowes) bring him to the blocke.
Pro. Now Sir, how do you finde the prisoner?
Duke. A creature vnpre-par'd, vnmeet for death,
And to transport him in the minde he is,
Were damnable.
Pro. Heere in the prison, Father.
There died this morning of a cruell Feauor,
One Ragozine, a most notorious Pirate,
A man of Claudio's yeares: his beard, and head
Iust of his colour. What if we do omit
This Reprobate, till he were well enclin'd,
And satisfie the Deputie with the visage
Of Ragozine, more like to Claudio?
Duke. Oh, 'tis an accident that heauen prouides.
Dispatch it presently, the houre drawes on
Prefixt by Angelo: See this be done,
And sent according to command, whiles I
Perswade this rude wretch willingly to die.
Pro. This shall be done (good Father) presently.
But Barnardine must die this afternoone,
And how shall we continue Claudio,
To saue me from the danger that might come,
If he were knowne aliue?
Duke. Let this be done.
Put them in secret holds, both Barnardine and Claudio,
Ere twice the Sun hath made his iournall greeting
To yond generation, you shall heare
Your safeties manifested.
Pro. I am your free dependant. Exit.
Duke. Quicke, dispatch, and send the head to Angelo
Now will I write Letters to Angelo,
(The Prouost he shall beare them) whose contents
Shall witnesse to him I am neere at home:
And that by great Iniunctions I am bound
To enter publikely: him ile desire
To meet me at the consecrated Fount,
A League below the Citie: and from thence,
By cold gradation, and weale-ballanc'd forme
We shall proceed with Angelo.
Enter Prouost.
Pro. Heere is the head, Ile carrie it my selfe.
Duke. Conuenient is it: Make a swift returne,
For I would commune with you of such things,
That want no eare but yours.
Pro. Ile make all speede. Exit
Isabell within him.
Isa. Peace hoa, be heere.
Duke. The tongue of Isabell. She's come to know,
If yet her brothers pardon be come hither:
But I will keepe her ignorant of her good,
To make her heauenly comforts of dispaire,
When it is least expected.
Enter Isabella.
Isa. Hoa, by your leaue.
Duke. Good morning to you, faire, and gracious daughter.
Isa. The better giuen me by so holy a man,
Hath yet the Deputie sent my brothers pardon?
Duke. He hath releas'd him, Isabell, from the world,
His head is off, and sent to Angelo.
Isa. Nay, but it is not so.
Duke. It is no other,
Shew your wisedome daughter in your close patience.
Isa. Oh, I will to him, and plucke out his eies.
Duke. You shall not be admitted to his sight.
Isa. Vnhappie Claudio, wretched Isabell,
Injurious world, most damned Angelo.
Duke. This nor hurts him, nor profits you a iot,
Forbeare it therefore, giue your cause to heauen,
Marke what I say, which you shal finde
By euery syllable a faithful veritie.
The Duke comes home to morrow: nay dry your eyes,
One of our Conuent, and his Confessor
Giues me this instance: Already he hath carried
Notice to Escalus and Angelo,
Who do prepare to meete him at the gates, (dome,
There to giue vp their powre: If you can pace your wis-
In that good path that I would wish it go,
And you shal haue your bosome on this wretch,
Grace of the Duke, reuenges to your heart,
And general Honor.
Isa. I am directed by you.
Duke. This Letter then to Friar Peter giue,
'Tis that he sent me of the Dukes returne:
Say, by this token, I desire his compane
At Mariana's house to night. Her cause, and yours
Ile perfect him withall, and he shal bring you
Before the Duke; and to the head of Angelo
Accuse him home and home. For my poore selfe,
I am combined by a sacred Vow,
And shall be absent. Wend you with this Letter:
Command these fretting waters from your eies
With a light heart; trust not my holie Order
If I pervert your course: whose heere?
Enter Lucio.
Luc. Good 'euen;
Friar, where's the Prouost?
Duke. Not within Sir.
Luc. Oh pretie Isabella, I am pale at mine heart, to see thine eyes so red: thou must be patient; I am faine to dine and sup with water and bran: I dare not for my head fill my belly. One fruitful Meale would set me too't: but they say the Duke will be heere to Morrow. By my troth Isabell I lou'd thy brother, if the olde fantastica Duke of darke corners had bene at home, he had liued
Duke. Sir, the Duke is marueilous little beholding to your reports, but the best is, he liues not in them.
Luc. Friar, thou knowest not the Duke so wel as I do: he's a better woodman then thou tak'st him for.
Duke. Well: you'l answer this one day. Fare ye well.
Luc. Nay tarrie, Ile go along with thee,
I can tel thee pretty tales of the Duke.
Duke. You haue told me too many of him already sir if they be true: if not true, none were enough.
Lucio. I was once before him for getting a Wench with child.
Duke. Did you such a thing?
Luc. Yes marrie did I; but I was faine to forswear it, They would else haue married me to the rotten Medler.
Duke. Sir your company is fairer then honest, rest you well.
Lucio. By my troth Ile go with thee to the lanes end: if bawdy talke offend you, we'el haue very litle of it: nay Friar, I am a kind of Burre, I shal sticke. Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Enter Angelo & Escalus.
Esc. Every Letter he hath writ, hath disuouch'd other.
Ang.

Au. In most vneuen and distracted manner, his actions show much like to madnesse, pray heauen his wisedome bee not tainted: and why meet him at the gates and redeliuer our authorities there?

Esc. I ghesse not.

Ang. And why should wee proclaime it an houre before his entring, that if any craue redresse of iniustice, they should exhibite their petitions in the street?

Esc. He showes his reason for that: to haue a dispatch of Complaints, and to deliuer vs from deuices hereafter, which shall then haue no power to stand against vs.

Ang. Well: I beseech you let it bee proclaim'd betimes i'th' morne. Ile call you at your house: giue notice to such men of sort and suite as are to meete him.

Esc. I shall sir: fare you well. Exit.

Ang. Good night.
This deede vnshapes me quite, makes me vnpregnant
And dull to all proceedings. A deflowred maid,
And by an eminent body, that enforc'd
The Law against it? But that her tender shame
Will not proclaime against her maiden losse,
How might she tongue me? yet reason dares her no,
For my Authority beares of a credent bulke,
That no particular scandall once can touch
But it confounds the breather. He should haue liu'd
Saue that his riotous youth with dangerous sense
Might in the times to come haue tane reuenge
By so receiuing a dishonor'd life
With ransome of such shame: would yet he had liued.
Alack, when once our grace we haue forgot,
Nothing goes right, we would, and we would not. Exit.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Duke and Frier Peter.

Duke. These Letters at fit time deliuer me.
The Prouost knowes our purpose and our plot,
The matter being a foote, keepe your instruction
And hold you euer to our speciall drift,
Though sometimes you doe blench from this to that
As cause doth minister: Goe call at Flauius's house,
And tell him where I stay: giue the like notice
To Valentius, Rowland, and to Crassus,
And bid them bring the Trumpets to the gate:
But send me Flauius first.

Peter. It shall be speeded well.

Enter Varrius.

Duke. I thank thee Varrius, thou hast made good haste,
Come, we will walke: There's other of our friends
Will greet vs heere anon: my gentle Varrius. Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Isabella and Mariana.

Isab. To speak so indirectly I am loath,
I would say the truth, but to accuse him so
That is your part, yet I am aduis'd to doe it,
He saies, to vaile full purpose.

Mar. Be rul'd by him.

Isab. Besides he tells me, that if peraduenture
He speake against me on the aduerse side,
I should not thinke it strange, for 'tis a physicke
That's bitter, to sweet end.

Enter Peter.

Mar. I would Frier Peter

Isab. Oh peace, the Frier is come.

Peter. Come I haue found you out a stand most fit,
Where you may haue such vantage on the Duke
He shall not passe you:
Twice haue the Trumpets sounded.
The generous, and grauest Citizens
Haue hent the gates, and very neere vpon
The Duke is entring:
Therefore hence away. Exeunt

Actus Quintus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Duke, Varrius, Lords, Angelo, Escalus, Lucio, Citizens at seuerall doores.

Duke. My very worthy Cosen, fairely met,
Our old, and faithfull friend, we are glad to see you.

Ang. Esc. Happy returne be to your royall grace.

Duke. Many and harty thankings to you both:
We haue made enquiry of you, and we heare
Such goodnesse of your Iustice, that our soule
Cannot but yeeld you forth to publique thankes
Forerunning more requitall.

Ang. You make my bonds still greater.

Duke. Oh your desert speaks loud, & I should wrong it
To locke it in the wards of couert bosome
When it deserues with characters of brasse
A forted residence 'gainst the tooth of time,
And razure of oblituon: Giue me your hand
And let the Subiect see, to make them know
That outward courtesies would faine proclaime
Fauours that keepe within: Come Escalus,
You must walke by vs, on our other hand.
And good supporters are you.

Enter Peter and Isabella.

Peter. Now is your time
Speake loud, and kneele before him.

Isab. Iustice, O royall Duke, vaile your regard
Vpon a wrong'd (I would faine haue said a Maid)
Oh worthy Prince, dishonor not your eye
By throwing it on any other obiect,
Till you haue heard me, in my true complaint,
And giuen me Iustice, Iustice, Iustice, Iustice.

Duke. Relate your wrongs;
In what, by whom? be briefe:
Here is Lord Angelo shall giue you Iustice,
Reueale your selfe to him.

Isab. Oh worthy Duke,
You bid me seeke redemption of the diuell,
Heare me your selfe: for that which I must speake
Must either punish me, not being beleeu'd,
Or wring redresse from you:
Heare me: oh heare me, heere.

Ang. My Lord, her wits I feare me are not firme:
She hath bin a suitor to me, for her Brother
Cut off by course of Iustice.

Isab. By course of Iustice.

Ang. And she will speake most bitterly, and strange.

Isab. Most

Isab. Most strange: but yet most truely will I speake,
That Angelo's forsworne, is it not strange?
That Angelo's a murtherer, is't not strange?
That Angelo is an adulterous thiefe,
An hypocrite, a virgin violator,
Is it not strange? and strange?
Duke. Nay it is ten times strange?
Isab. It is not truer he is Angelo,
Then this is all as true, as it is strange,
Nay, it is ten times true, for truth is truth
To th'end of reckning
Duke. Away with her: poore soule
She speakes this, in th'infirmity of sence
Isa. Oh Prince, I conjure thee, as thou believ'st
There is another comfort, then this world,
That thou neglect'st me not, with that opinion
That I am touch'd with madnesse: make not impossible
That which but seemes like thee: seeming impossible
But one, the wickedst caitiffe on the ground
May seeme as shie, as grave, as just, as absolute:
As Angelo, even so may Angelo
In all his dressings, caracts, titles formes,
Be an arch-villaine. Believe it, royall Prince
If he be lesse, he's nothing, but he's more,
Had I more name for badnesse.
Duke. By mine honesty
If she be mad, as I believe no other,
Her madnesse hath the oddest frame of sense,
Such a dependancy of thing, on thing,
As ere I heard in madnesse.
Isab. Oh gracious Duke
Harpe not on that; nor do not banish reason
For inequality, but let your reason serve
To make the truth appeare, where it seemes hid,
And hide the false seemes true.
Duke. Many that are not mad
Have sure more lacke of reason
What would you say?
Isab. I am the Sister of one Claudio,
Condemn'd upon the Act of Fornication
To loose his head, condemn'd by Angelo,
I, in probation of a Sisterhood,
Was sent to by my Brother; one Lucio
As then the Messenger
Luc. That's I, and't like your Grace
I came to her from Claudio, and desir'd her,
To try her gracious fortune with Lord Angelo,
For her poore Brothers pardon
Isab. That's he indeede.
Duke. You were not bid to speake.
Luc. No, my good Lord,
Nor wish'd to hold my peace.
Duke. I wish you now then,
Pray you take note of it: and when you have
A businesse for your selfe. pray heaven you then
Be perfect.
Luc. I warrant your honor.
Duke. The warrant's for your selfe. take heede to't
Isab. This Gentleman told somewhat of my Tale.
Luc. Right.
Duke. It may be right, but you are i'the wrong
To speake before your time: proceed,
Isab. I went
To this pernicious Caitiffe Deputie.
Duke. That's somewhat madly spoken.
Isab. Pardon it,
The phrase is to the matter.
Duke. Mended againe: the matter: proceed.
Isab. In briefe, to set the needlesse processe by:
How I perswaded, how I prayd, and kneel'd,
How he refeld me, and how I replide
(For this was of much length) the vild conclusion
I now begin with griefe, and shame to utter.
He would not, but by gift of my chaste body
To his concupiscible intemperate lust
Release my brother; and after much debatement,
My sisterly remorse, confutes mine honour,
And I did yeeld to him: But the next morne betimes,
His purpose surfetting, he sends a warrant
For my poore brothers head.
Duke. This is most likely.
Isab. Oh that it were as like as it is true. (speak'st,
Duke. By heaven (fond wretch) thou knowst not what thou
Or else thou art suborn'd against his honour
In hatefull practise: first his Integritie
Stands without blemish: next it imports no reason,
That with such vehemency he should pursue
Faults proper to himselfe: if he had so offended
He would have weigh'd thy brother by himselfe,
And not have cut him off. Some one hath set you on Confesse the truth, and say by whose advice
Thou cam'st heere to complaine.
Isab. And is this all?
Then oh you blessed Ministers above
Keepe me in patience, and with ripened time
Unfold the evill, which is heere wrapt up
In countenance: heaven shield your Grace from woe,
As I thus wrong'd, hence unbelieved goe.
Duke. I know you'ld faine be gone: An Officer:
To prison with her: Shall we thus permit
A blasting and a scandalous breath to fall,
On him so neere us? This needs must be a practise;
Who knew of your intent and comming hither?
Isa. One that I would were heere, Frier Lodowick.
Duke. A ghostly Father, belike:
Who knowes that Lodowicke?
Luc. My Lord, I know him, 'tis a meddling Fryer,
I doe not like the man: had I power, I say my Lord,
For certaine words he spoke against your Grace
In your retirment, I had swing'd him soundly.
Duke. Words against mee? this 'a good Fryer belike
And to set on this wretched woman here
Against our Substitute: Let this Fryer be found.
Luc. But yesternight my Lord, she and that Fryer
I saw them at the prison: a sawcy Fryar,
A very scuruy fellow.
Peter. Blessed be your Royall Grace:
I have stood by my Lord, and I have heard
Your royall eare abus'd: first hath this woman
Most wrongfully accus'd your Substitute,
Who is as free from touch, or soyle with her
As she from one ungot.
Duke. We did believe no lesse.
Know you that Frier Lodowick that she speakes of?
Peter. I know him for a man divine and holy,
Not scuruy, not a temporary medler
As he's reported by this Gentleman:
And on my trust, a man that never yet
Did (as he vouches) misreport your Grace.
Luc. My Lord, most villanously, believe it.
Peter. Well: he in time may come to cleare himselfe;
But at this instant he is sicke, my Lord:

Of

Of a strange Feauor vpon his meere request
Being come to knowledge, that there was complaint
Intended 'gainst Lord Angelo, came I hether
To speake as from his mouth, what he doth know
Is true, and false. And what he with his oath
And all probation will make vp full cleare
Whensoeuer he's conuented. First for this woman,
To iustifie this worthy Noble man
So vulgarly and personally accused,
Her shall you heare disproued to her eyes,
Till she her selfe confesse it.
Duk. Good Frier let's heare it.
Do you not smile at this, Lord Angelo?
O heauen the vanity of wretched fooles!
Giue vs some seates. Come cousin Angelo,
In this I'le be impartiall; be you Iudge
Of your owne cause. Is this the Witnesse Friar?

Enter Mariana.

First let her shew her face, and after speake.
Mar. Pardon my Lord, I will not shew my face
Vntill my husband bid me.
Duke. What are you married?
Mar. No my Lord.
Duke. Are you a Maid?
Mar. No my Lord.
Duke. A Widow then?
Mar. Neither my Lord.
Duke. Why you are nothing then: neither Maid, Widow, nor Wife?
Lucio. My Lord she may be a Punke, for many of them are neither Maid, Widow, nor Wife.
Duke. Silence there, I haue in structions else
To prattlers be silence.
Lucio. We my Lord.
Mar. My Lord I do confesse I ne're was married,
And I confesse besides, I am no Maid.
I haue kno vn my husband, yet my husband
Knowes not, that euer he knew me.
Lucio. He was drunke then my Lord, it can be no better.
Duke. For the benefit of silence, would thou were so too.
Lucio. Well, my Lord.
Duke. This is no witnesse for Lord Angelo.
Mar. Now I come to't my Lord.
She'l accuse him of Fornication,
In selfe same manner, doth accuse my husband,
And charges him, my Lord, with such a time,
When I'de depriu'd him of the Garments
With all to effect of Loue.
Ang. Charges she more than me?
Mar. Not that I know.
Duke. No? you say your husband?
Mar. Why no, my Lord, and more than Angelo,
Who thinkes he knowes, that he ne're knew my body,
But knowes, he thinkes, that he knowes Isabels.
Ang. This is a strange abuse. Let's see thy face.
Mar. My husband bid me now I will vnmaske.
This is that face, thou cruell Angelo
Which once thou swor'st was worth the looking on.
This is the hand, which with a vow'd contract
Was fast belocked in thine. This is the body
That took away the match from Isabell,
And did supplie thee at thy garden-house
In her Imagined person.
Duke. Know you this woman?
Lucio. Carnally she sayes.
Duk. Sirha, no more.
Lucio. Enough my Lord.
Ang. My Lord I must confesse, I know this woman,
And fiue yeeres since there was some speech of marriage
Betwixt my selfe, and her: which was broke off,
Partly for that her promised proportions
Came short of Composition, But in chiefe
For that her reputation was disualued
In leuitie. Since which time of fiue yeeres
I neuer spake with her, saw her, nor heard from her
Vpon my faith, and honor.
Mar. Noble Prince,
As there comes light from heauen and words from breath,
As there is sence in truth, and truth in vertue,
I am affianced this mans wife, as strongly
As words could make vp vowes. And my good Lord,
But Tuesday night last gone, in's garden house,
He knew me as a wife. As this is true,
Let me in safety raise me from my knees,
Or else for euer be confixed here
A Marble Monument.
Ang. I did but smile till now,
Now, good my Lord, giue me the scope of Iustice,
My patience here is touch'd. I do perceiue
These poore informall women, are no more
But instruments of some more mightier member
That sets them on. Let me haue way, my Lord
To finde this practise out.
Duke. I, with my heart,
And punish them to your height of pleasure.
Thou foolish Friar, and thou pernicious woman
Compact with her that's gone, think'st thou thy oathes,
Though they would swear downe each part of Saint,
Were testimonies against his worth, and credit
That's seal'd in approbation? you, Lord Escalus
Sit with my Cosen, lend him your kinde paines
To finde out this abuse, whence 'tis deriu'd.
There is another Friar that set them on,
Let him be sent for.
Peter. Would he were here, my Lord, for he indeed
Hath set the women on to this Complaint,
Your Prouost knowes the place where he abides,
And him may fetch with speed.
Duke. Doe it instantly.
And you, my noble and well warranted Cosen
Whom it concernes to heare this matter forth,
Doe with your iniuries as seemes you best
In any chastisement, I for a while
Will leaue you, but stir not you till you haue
Well determin'd vpon these Slanderers. Exit
Esc. My Lord, we'l do it throughly. Signior Lucio, did not you say you knew that Friar Lodowick to be a dishonest person?
Lucio. Cucullus non facit Monachum, honest in nothing but in his Clothes, and one that hath spoke most villanous speech of the Duke.
Esc. We shall intreate you to abide here till he come, and enforce them against him: we shall find this Friar a notable fellow.
Lucio. As any in Vienna, on my word.
Esc. Call that same Isabell here once againe, I would speake with her: pray you, my Lord giue me leaue to question, you shall see how I'le handle her.
Lucio. Not better than he, by her owne report.
Esc. Say you?
Lucio. Marry sir, I think, if you handled her priuately shee

She would sooner confesse, perchance publikely she'll be asham'd.

Enter Duke, Provost, Isabella.

Esc. I will goe darkely to worke with her.

Luc. That's the way: for women are light at mid-night.

Esc. Come on Mistris, here's a Gentlewoman, Denies all that you have said.

Luc. My Lord here comes the rascall I spoke of, Here, with the Provost?

Esc. In very good time: speake not you to him, till we call upon you.

Luc. Mum.

Esc. Come Sir, did you set these women on to slander Lord Angelo? they have confess'd you did.

Duke. 'Tis false.

Esc. How? Know you where you are?

Duke. Respect to your great place; and let the diuell Be sometime honour'd, for his burning throne. Where is the Duke? 'tis he should heare me speake.

Esc. The Duke is vs: and we will heare you speake, Looke you speake iustly.

Duke. Boldly, at least. But oh poore [illegible] Come you to seeke the Lamb here of the [illegible] Good night to your redreste. Is the Duke gone? Then is your cause gone too. The Duke's [illegible] Is stole out of your [illegible] And put your [illegible] Who is it you come to accuse?

Luc. This gentleman, and the I spoke of.

Esc. Why, every word I say thee shall proue good, yet: Is it not strange that Desdemonas woman, Should taxe me of such base temptation, And the vnshaped vse of his supper-cease, To plant an obseruance, and prompt me to it, From the Duke himself? to take me vp at such a time? I leach mischiefe, to catch vp men with: we shall proue (if you Can stay by it, but we will know his purpose) What? vnquiet?

Duke. Because it is not the Duke dare No more stretch this finger of mine, than he Dare coact his owne Lawes: Sustaine Lawes, Neither Prouoked, nor Mou'd by Crueltie, Nor Nature neuer lookes on Heresie Without deepe shame, regard, or terror. Where I have seene corruption boyle and bubble, Till it ore-run the Stew: Lawes, for all faults, But faults so countenanc'd, that the strong Statutes Stand like the forfeites in a Barbers shop, As much in mocke, as marke.

Esc. Slander to th' State Away with him to prison.

Ang. What can you vouch against him Signior Lucio? Is this the man that you did tell vs of?

Luc. 'Tis he, my Lord: come hither goodman bald-pate, doe you know me?

Duke. I remember you Sir, by the sound of your voice, I met you at the Prison, in the absence of the Duke.

Luc. O, did you so? and do you remember what you said of the Duke

Duke. Most notedly, Sir.

Luc. Do you so Sir: And was the Duke a flesh-monger, a foole, and a coward, as you then reported him to be?

Duke. You must (Sir) change persons with me, ere you make that my report: you indeede spoke so of him, and much more, much worse.

Luc. Oh thou damnable fellow: did not I plucke thee by the nose, for thy speeches?

Duke. I protest, I loue the Duke, as I loue my selfe.

Ang. Harke how the villaine would close now, after his treasonable abuses.

Esc. Such a one is not to be talk'd withall: Away with him to prison: Where is the Provost? away with him to prison: lay bolts enough vpon him: let him speak no more: away with those Giglets too, and with the other confederate companion.

Duke. Stay Sir, stay a while.

Ang. What, resists he? helpe him Lucio.

Luc. Come sir, come sir, come sir: foh sir, why you bald-pated lying rascall: you must be hooded must you? show your knaues visage with a poxe to you: show your sheepe-biting face, and be hang'd an houre: will not off?

Duke. Thou art the first knaue, that ere mad'st a Duke. First Provost, let me bayle these gentle three. Sneake not away Sir, for the Fryer, and you, Must haue a word anon: lay hold on him.

Luc. This may proue worse then hanging.

Duke. What you have spoke, I pardon: sit you downe, We'll borrow place of him; Sir, by your leaue. Hast thou or word, or wit, or impudence, That yet can doe thee office? If thou hast Rely vpon it, till my tale be heard, And hold no longer out.

Ang. Oh, my dread Lord, I should be guiltier than my guiltinesse, To thinke I can be vndiscernable, When I perceiue your grace, like powre diuine, Hath look'd vpon my passes. Then good Prince, No longer Session hold vpon my shame, But let my Triall, be mine owne Confession. Immediate sentence then, and sequent death, Is all the grace I beg.

Duke. Come hither Mariana, Say wast thou ere contracted to this woman?

Ang. I was my Lord.

Duke. Go take her hence, and marry her instantly. Do you the office (Fryer) which consummate, Returne you heere againe: goe with him Provost. Exit.

Esc. My Lord, I am more amaz'd at his dishonor, Than at the strangenesse of it.

Duke. Come hither Isabell, Your Fryer is now your Prince: As I was then Aduertysing, and holy to your businesse, (Not changing heart with habit) I am still, Attorney'd at your seruice.

Isab. Oh giue me pardon That I, your vassaile, haue imploid, and pain'd Your vnknowne Soueraignetie.

Duke. You are pardon'd Isabell: And now, deere Maide, be you as free to vs. Your Brothers death I know sits at your heart: And you may maruaile, why I obscur'd my selfe, Labouring to saue his life: and would not rather Make rash remonstrance of my hidden powre, Than let him so be lost: oh most kinde Maid, It was the swift celeritie of his death, Which I did thinke, with slower foot came on, That brain'd my purpose: but peace be with him, That life is better life past fearing death, Than that which lives to feare: make it your comfort,

So

So happy is your Brother.

Enter Angelo, Mariana, Peter, Provost.

Isab. I doe my Lord.

Duke. For this new-married man, approaching here,
Whose salt imagination yet hath wrong'd
Your well defended honor, you must pardon
For Mariana's sake: But as he adiudg'd your Brother,
Being criminall, in double violation
Of sacred Chastitie, and of promise-breach,
Thereon dependant for your Brothers life,
The very mercy of the Law cries out
Most audible, euen from his proper tongue.
An Angelo for Claudio, death for death
Haste still paies haste, and leasure, answers leasure;
Like doth quit like, and Measure still for Measure
Then Angelo, thy fault's thus manifested,
Which though thou would'st deny, denies thee vantage,
We doe condemne thee to the very block
Where Claudio stoop'd to death, and with like haste.
Away with him.

Mar. Oh my most gracious Lord,
I hope you will not mocke me with a husband?

Duke. It is your husband mock't you with a husband.
Consenting to the safe-guard of your honor,
I thought your marriage fit: else Imputation,
For that he knew you might reproach your life
And choake your good to come: For his Possessions,
Although by confiscation they are ours;
We doe instate, and widow you withall,
To buy you a better husband.

Mar. Oh my deere Lord,
I craue no other, nor no better man.

Duke. Neuer craue him, we are definitiue.

Mari. Gentle my Liege.

Duke. You doe but loose your labour.
Away with him to death: Now Sir, to you.

Mar. Oh my good Lord, (sweet Isabell) take my part,
Lend me your knees, and all my life to come,
I'll lend you all my life to doe you seruice.

Duke. Against all sence you doe importune her,
Should she kneele downe, in mercie of this fact,
Her Brothers ghost, his paued bed would breake,
And take her hence in horror.

Mar. Isabell
Sweet Isabel, doe yet but kneele by me,
Hold vp your hands, say nothing; I'll speake all.
They say best men are moulded out of faults,
And for the most, become much more the better
For being a little bad: So may my husband.
Oh Isabel: will you not lend a knee?

Duke. He dies for Claudio's death.

Isab. Most bounteous Sir.
Looke if it please you, on this man condemn'd,
As if my Brother liu'd: I partly thinke,
A due sincerity gouerned his deedes,
Till he did looke on me: Since it is so,
Let him not die: my Brother had but Iustice,
In that he did the thing for which he dide.
For Angelo, his Act did not ore-take his bad intent,
And must be buried but as an intent
That perish'd by the way: thoughts are no subiects
Intents, but meerely thoughts.

Mar. Meerely my Lord.

Duke. Your suite's vnprofitable: stand vp I say.
I haue bethought me of another fault.
Prouost, how came it Claudio was beheaded
At an vnusual hower?

Pro. It was commanded so.

Duke. Had you a special warrant for the deed?

Pro. No my good Lord: it was by priuate message.

Duke. For which I doe discharge you of your office,
Giue vp your keyes.

Pro. Pardon me, noble Lord,
I thought it was a fault, but knew it not,
Yet did repent me after more aduice,
For testimony whereof, one in the prison
That should by priuate order else haue died,
I haue reserued aliue.

Duke. What's he?

Pro. His name is Barnardine.

Duke. I would thou had'st done so by Claudio,
Go fetch him hither, let me looke vpon him.

Esc. I am sorry, one so learned and so wise
As you Lord Angelo, haue still appear'd,
Should slip so grosselie, both in the heat of blood
And lack of temper'd iudgement afterward.

Ang. I am sorrie, that with reuerence I inuocate,
As mocking me with bald vnpittied scorne,
That I may face as much as may be yet,
Thy merit vnder God, and learne on earth
Enter Barnardine and Provost, Claudio, Iulietta.

Duke. Which is that Barnardine?

Pro. This my Lord.

Duke. There was a Frier told me of this man.
Sirra, thou art said to haue a stubborne soule
That apprehends no further than this world,
And squar'st thy life according: Thou'rt condemn'd
But for those earthly faults, I quit them all,
And pray thee take this mercie to prouide
For better times to come. Frier aduise him,
I leaue him to your hand. What muffled fellow's that?

Pro. This is another prisoner that I sau'd,
Who should haue died when Claudio lost his head,
As like almost to Claudio, as himselfe.

Duke. If he be like your brother, for his sake
Is he pardon'd: and for your louelie sake
Giue me your hand, and say you will be mine,
He is my brother too: But fitter time for that.
By this Lord Angelo perceiues he's safe,
Methinkes I see a quickning in his eye:
Well Angelo, your euill quits you well.
Looke that you loue your wife: her worth, worth yours
I finde an apt remission in my selfe;
And yet heere's one in place I cannot pardon,
You sirra, that knew me for a foole a Coward,
One all of Luxurie, an asse a mad man.
Wherein haue I so deseru'd of you
That you extoll me thus?

Luc. Faith my Lord, I spoke it but according to the trick. If you will hang me for it you may: but I had rather it would please you, I might be whipt.

Duke. Whipt first sir, and hang'd after.
Proclaime it Prouost round about the Citie,
If any woman wrong'd by this lewd fellow
(As I haue heard him sweare himselfe there's one whom he begot with childe) let her appeare,
And he shall marry her: the nuptiall finish'd,
Let him be whipt and hang'd.

Luc. I beseech your Highnesse doe not marry me to a Whore: your Highnesse said euen now I made you a Duke, good my Lord doe not recompence me, in making me a Cuckold.

Duke. Vpon

Duke. Vpon mine honor I will stay heere on Thy sainted true forgiuenesse, and therewith all
Take thy other offences take vnto thy trust,
And let me pleasure here executed.
Lucio. Marrying a punke my Lord is pressing to death,
Whipping and hanging.
Lucio. Slander a Diuorced vow'ne
See Claudio as you wrong'd loose, or else
Ioy to you Mariana, loue her Angelo,
I haue confest her, and I know thee honest,
Thanke good friend, Escalus, for thy much goodnesse,
There's more behinde that is more gratulate.
Thanks Prouost for thy care, and secrecie,
We shall imploy thee in a worthier place.
Forgiue him Angelo, that brought you home
The head of Ragozine for Claudio's,
Th'offence pardons it selfe. Deere Isabell,
I haue a motion much imports your good,
Whereto if you'll a willing eare incline;
What's mine is yours, and what is yours is mine.
So bring vs to our Pallace, where wee'll show
What's yet behinde, that meete you all should know.

The Comedie of Errors.

Actus primus, Scena prima.

Enter the Duke of Ephesus, with the Merchant of Siracusa, Iaylor, and other attendants.

Marchat.

PRoceed Solinus to procure my fall,
And by the doome of death end woes and all.
Duke. Merchant of Siracusa, plead no more
I am not partiall to infringe our Lawes;
The enmity and discord which of late
Sprung from the rancorous outrage of your Duke,
To Merchants our well-dealing Countrimen,
Who wanting gilders to redeeme their liues,
Haue crau'd his rigorous statutes with their bloods,
Excludes all pitty from our threatning lookes.
For since the mortall and intestine iarres
Twixt thy seditious Countrimen and vs,
It hath in solemne Synodes beene decreed,
Both by the Siracusians and our selues,
To admit no trafficke to our aduerse townes
Nay more, if any borne at Ephesus
Be seene at any Siracusian Marts and Fayres:
Againe, if any Siracusian borne
Come to the Bay of Ephesus, he dies:
His goods confiscate to the Dukes dispose,
Vnlesse a thousand markes be leuied
To quit the penalty, and to ransome him:
Thy substance, valued at the highest rate,
Cannot amount vnto a hundred Markes,
Therefore by Law thou art condemn'd to die.
Mer. Yet this my comfort, when your words are done,
My woes end likewise with the euening Sonne.
Duke. Well Siracusian; say in briefe the cause
Why thou departedst from thy native home?
And for what cause thou cam'st to Ephesus.
Mer. A heauier taske could not haue beene impos'd,
Then I to speake my griefes vnspeakeable:
Yet that the world may witnesse that my end
Was wrought by nature, not by vile offence
Ile vtter what my sorrow giues me leaue.
In Syracusa was I borne, and wedde
Vnto a woman, happy but for me,
And by me; had not our hap beene bad:
With her I liu'd in ioy, our wealth increast
By prosperous voyages I often made
To Epidamnum, till my factors death,
And he great care of goods at randone left,
Drew me from kinde embracements of my spouse;
From whom my absence was not fixe moneths olde,
Before her selfe (almost at fainting vnder
The pleasing punishment that women beare)
Had made prouision for her following me,
And soone, and safe, arriued where I was
There had she not beene long, but she became
A ioyfull mother of two goodly sonnes
And, which was strange, the one so like the other,
As could not be distinguished but by names
That very howre, and in the selfe-same inne,
A meane woman was deliuered
Of such a burthen Male, twins both alike
Those, for their parents were exceeding poore,
I bought, and brought vp to attend my sonnes
My wife, not meanely proud of two such boyes,
Made daily motions for our home returne
Vnwilling I agreed, alas, too soone we came aboord.
A league from Epidamnum had we saild
Before the always wind-obeying deepe
Gaue any Tragicke instance of our harme:
But longer did we not retaine much hope;
For what obscured light the heauens did grant,
Did but conuay vnto our fearefull mindes
A doubtfull warrant of immediate death,
Which though my selfe would gladly haue imbrac'd,
Yet the incessant weepings of my wife,
Weeping before for what she saw must come,
And pittious plainings of the pretty babes
That mourn'd for fashion, ignorant what to feare,
Forst me to seeke delayes for them and me.
And this it was (for other meanes was none)
The Sailors sought for safety by our boate,
And left the ship then sinking ripe to vs:
My wife, more carefull for the latter borne,
Had fastned him vnto a small spare Mast,
Such as sea-faring men prouide for stormes:
To him one of the other twins was bound,
Whilst I had beene like heedfull of the other.
The children thus dispos'd, my wife and I,
Fixing our eyes on whom our care was fixt,
Fastned our selues at either end the mast,
And floating straight, obedient to the streame,
Was carried towards Corinth, as we thought.
At length the sonne gazing vpon the earth,
Dispers'd those vapours that offended vs,
And by the benefit of his wished light
The seas waxt calme, and we discouered
Two ships from farre, making amaine to vs:
Of Corinth that, of Epidarus this,
But ere they came, oh let me say no more,
Gather the sequell by that went before.
Duke. Nay forward old man, doe not breake off so,

For we may pitty, though not pardon thee.
Merch. Oh had the gods done so, I had not now
Worthily tearm'd them mercileſſe to vs
For ere the ſhips could meet by twice fiue leagues,
We were encountred by a mighty rocke
Which being violently borne vp,
Our helpefull ſhip was ſplitted in the middſt,
So that in this vniuſt diuorce of vs,
Fortune had left to both of vs alike,
What to delight in, what to ſorrow for,
Her part, poore ſoule, ſeeming as burdened
With leſſer weight, but not with leſſer woe,
Was carried with more ſpeed before the winde,
And in our ſight they three were taken vp
By Fiſhermen of Corinth, as we thought
At length another ſhip had ſeiz'd on vs,
And knowing whom it was their hap to ſaue,
Gaue healthfull welcome to their ſhip-wrackt gueſts,
And would haue reft the Fiſhers of their prey,
Had not their backe beene very low of ſaile,
And therefore homeward did they bend their courſe
Thus haue you heard me ſeuer'd from my bliſſe,
That by miſfortunes was my life prolonged,
To tell ſad ſtories of my owne mishaps.
Duke. And for the ſake of them thou ſorroweſt for,
Doe me the fauour to dilate at full,
What haue befalne of them and they till now.
Merch. My yongeſt boy and yet my eldeſt care,
At eighteene yeeres became inquiſitiue
After his brother; and importun'd me
That his attendant, ſo his caſe was like,
Reft of his brother, but retain'd his name,
Might beare him company in the queſt of him:
Whom whilſt I laboured of a loue to ſee,
I hazarded the loſſe of whom I lou'd
Fiue Sommers haue I ſpent in fartheſt Greece,
Roming cleane through the bounds of Aſia,
And coaſting homeward, came to Epheſus
Hopeleſſe to finde, yet loth to leaue vnſought
Or that, or any place that harbours men.
But here muſt end the ſtory of my life,
And happy were I in my timely death,
Could all my trauels warrant me they liue.
Duke. Hapleſſe Egeon whom the fates haue markt
To bear the extremity of dire miſhap:
Now trouble me not with what more I am,
Againſt my Crowne my oath, my dignity,
Which Princes would they may not diſanull,
My ſoule ſhould ſue as aduocate for thee.
But though thou art adiudged to the death,
And paſſed ſentence may not be recal'd
But to our honours great diſparagement:
Yet will I fauour thee in what I can;
Therefore Marchant, Ile limit thee this day
To ſeeke thy helpe by beneficiall helpe,
Try all the friends thou haſt in Epheſus,
Beg thou, or borrow, to make vp the ſumme,
And liue: if no, then thou art doom'd to die:
Iaylor, take him to thy cuſtodie.
Iailor. I will my Lord.
Merch. Hopeleſſe and helpeleſſe doth Egeon wend,
But to procraſtinate his liueleſſe end. Exeunt

Enter Antipholus Erotes, a Marchant, and Dromio.
Mer. Therefore giue out you are of Epidamnum,
Leſt that your goods too ſoone be confiſcate.
This very day a Syracuſian Marchant
Is apprehended for a riuall here,
And not being able to buy out his life,
According to the ſtatute of the towne,
Dies ere the weanie ſunne ſet in the Weſt:
There is your monie that I had to keepe.
Ant. Goe beare it to the Centaure, where we hoſt,
And ſtay there Dromio, till I come to thee;
Within this houre it will be dinner time,
Till that Ile view the manners of the towne,
Peruſe the traders, gaze vpon the buildings,
And then returne and ſleepe within mine Inne,
For with long trauaile I am ſtiffe and wearie.
Get thee away.
Dro. Many a man would take you at your word,
And goe indeede, hauing ſo good a meane.
Exit Dromio.

Ant. A truſtie villaine ſir, that very oft,
When I am dull with care and melancholly,
Lightens my humour with his merry teſts:
What will you walke with me about the towne,
And then goe to my Inne and dine with me?
E. Mer. I am inuited ſir to certaine Marchants,
Of whom I hope to make much benefit:
I craue your pardon ſoone at fiue a clocke,
Please you, Ile meete with you vpon the Mart,
And afterward conſort you till bed time:
My preſent buſineſſe cals me from you now.
Ant. Farewell till then: I will goe looſe my ſelfe,
And wander vp and downe to view the Citie.
E. Mer. Sir, I commend you to your owne content
Exeunt.

Ant. He that commends me to mine owne content,
Commends me to the thing I cannot get:
I to the world am like a drop of water,
That in the Ocean ſeekes another drop,
Who falling there to finde his fellow forth,
(Vnſeene, inquiſitiue) confounds himſelfe.
So I, to finde a Mother and a Brother,
In queſt of them (vnhappie) looſe my ſelfe.

Enter Dromio of Ephesus.
Here comes the almanacke of my true date.
What now? How chance thou art return'd ſo ſoone.
E. Dro. Return'd ſo ſoone, rather approacht too late.
The Capon burnes, the Pig falls from the ſpit;
The clocke hath ſtrucken twelue vpon the bell.
My Miſtris made it one vpon my cheeke:
She is ſo hot becauſe the meate is colde:
The meate is colde, becauſe you come not home:
You come not home, becauſe you haue no ſtomacke:
You haue no ſtomacke, hauing broke your faſt
But we that know what 'tis to faſt and pray,
Are penitent for your default to day.
Ant. Stop in your winde ſir, tell me this I pray?
Where haue you left the mony that I gaue you.
E. Dro. Oh ſixe pence that I had a wenſday laſt,
To pay the Sadler for my Miſtris crupper:
The Sadler had it Sir, I kept it not.
Ant. I am not in a ſportiue humor now:
Tell me, and dally not, where is the monie?
We being ſtrangers here, how dar'ſt thou truſt
So great a charge from thine owne cuſtodie.
E. Dro. I pray you ieſt ſir as you ſit at dinner.
I from my Miſtris come to you in poſt:
If I returne I ſhall be poſt indeede.

For

For she will scoure your fault vpon my pate
Me thinkes your maw, like mine, should be your cooke,
And strike you home without a messenger
Ant. Come Dromio, come, these iests are out of season,
Reserue them till a merrier houre then this
Where is the gold I gaue in charge to thee?
E.Dro. To me sir? why you gaue no gold to me?
Ant. Come on sir knaue, haue done your foolishnes,
And tell me how thou hast disposd thy charge.
E.Dro. My charge was but to fetch you hô the Mart
Home to your house, the Phœnix sir to dinner;
My Mistris and her sister staies for you.
Ant. Now as I am a Christian sir, tell me,
In what safe place you haue bestowd my money,
Or I shall breake that merrie sconce of yours
That stands on tricks, when I am vndispos'd
Where is the thousand Marckes thou hadst of me
E.Dro. I haue some marks of yours vpon my pate
Some of my Mistris marks vpon my shoulders
But not a thousand marks between you both.
If I should pay your worship those againe
Perchance you will not beare them patiently
Ant. Thy Mistris marks? what Mistris slaue hast thou?
E.Dro. Your worships wife my Mistris at the Phœnix;
She that doth fast till you come home to dinner
And prayes that you will hie you home to dinner
Ant. What wilt thou flout me thus vnto my face
Being forbid? There take you that sir knaue.
E.Dro. What mean you sir, for God sake hold your hands
Nay, and you will not sir, Ile take my heeles. Exit.

Exeunt Dromio Ep

Ant. Vpon my life by some deuise or other,
The villaine is ore-wrought of all my money
They say this towne is full of cosenage,
As nimble iugglers that deceiue the eie
Darke working Sorcerers that change the minde
Soule-killing Witches, that deforme the bodie
Dissembling Cheaters, praising Mountebankes;
And many such like libertis of sinne
If it prooue so, I will be gone the sooner
Ile to the Centaur to goe seeke this slaue,
I greatly feare my money is not safe. Exit.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Adriana, wife to Antipholis Serepsius, with Luciana her Sister

Adr. Neither my husband nor the slaue returnd,
That in such haste I sent to seeke his Master?
Sure Luciana it is two a clocke.
Luc. Perhaps some Merchant hath inuited him,
And from the Mart he's somewhere gone to dinner
Good Sister let vs dine, and neuer fret;
A man is Master of his libertie:
Time is their Master, and when they see time,
They'll goe or come; if so, be patient Sister.
Adr. Why should their libertie than ours be more?
Luc. Because their businesse still lies out adore.
Adr. Looke when I serue him so, he takes it ill.
Luc. Oh, know he is the bridle of your will.
Adr. There's none but asses will be bridled so.
Luc. Why, headstrong liberty is lasht with woe:
There's nothing situate vnder heauens eye,
But hath his bound in earth, in sea, in skie.
The beasts, the fishes and the winged fowles
Are their males subiects, and at their controules:
Man more diuine, the Master of all these,
Lord of the wide world, and wide watry seas,
Indued with intellectual sence and soules,
Of more pre-eminence than fish and fowles,
Are masters to their females, and their Lords:
Then let your will attend on their accords.
Adr. This seruitude makes you to keepe vnwed
Luc. Not this, but troubles of the marriage bed.
Adr. But were you wedded you would beare some sway
Luc. Ere I learne loue, Ile practise to obey.
Adr. How if your husband start some other where?
Luc. Till he come home again, I would forbeare
Adr. Patience vnmou'd, no marueil though she pause,
They can be meeke, that haue no other cause
A wretched soule bruisd with aduersitie,
We bid be quiet when we heare it cries
But were we burdned with like weight of paine,
As much, or more, we should our selues complaine:
So thou that hast no vnkinde mate to greeue thee,
With vrging helpelesse patience would relieue me;
But if thou liue to see like right bereft,
This foole-beg patience in thee will be left
Luc. Well, I will marry one day but to trie.
Here comes your man, now is your husband nie.

Enter Dromio Eph

Adr. Say, is your tardie master now at hand?
E.Dro. Nay he's at two hands with me, and that my two ears can witnesse.
Adr. Say, didst thou speake with him? knowst thou his mind?
E. Dro. I, I he told his mind vpon mine eare,
Beshrew his hand I feare he will haue the worse.
Luc. Spake he so doubtfully, thou could'st not feele his meaning.
E. Dro. Nay he strooke so plainly I could too well feele his blowes, and withall so doubtfully, that I could scarce vnderstand them.
Adr. But say, I prethee is he coming home?
It seemes he hath great care to please his wife.
E. Dro. Why Mistresse, sure my Master is horne mad.
Adr. Horne mad thou villaine?
E Dro I meane not Cuckold mad,
But sure he is starke mad
When I desir'd him to come home to dinner,
He ask'd me for a thousand marks in gold.
'Tis dinner time quoth I; my gold, quoth he:
Your meat doth burne quoth I; my gold quoth he:
Will you come, quoth I; my gold, quoth he;
Where is the thousand markes I gaue thee villaine?
The Pigge quoth I, is burnd; my gold, quoth he:
My mistresse sir, quoth I; hang vp thy Mistresse
I know not thy mistresse, out on thy mistresse.
Luc. Quoth who?
E Dr. Quoth my Master, I know quoth he, no house, no wife, no mistresse: so that my arrant due vnto my tongue I thanke him, I bare home vpon my shoulders: for in conclusion, he did beate me there.
Adr. Go back againe, thou slaue & fetch him home.
Dro. Go backe againe, and be new beaten home?
For Gods sake send some other messenger.

Adr. Backe ſlaue, or I will breake thy pate a-croſſe.
Dro. And he will bleſſe y croſſe with other beating:
Betweene you, I ſhall haue a holy head.
Adr. Hence prating peſant, fetch thy Maſter home.
Dro. Am I to round with you, as you with me,
That like a foot-ball you doe ſpurne me thus?
You ſpurne me hence, and he will ſpurne me hither,
If I laſt in this ſeruice, you muſt caſe me in leather.
Luci. Fie how impatience lowreth in your face.
Adr. His company muſt do his minions grace,
Whil'ſt I at home ſtarue for a merrie looke:
Hath homely age th'alluring beauty tooke
From my poore cheeke? then he hath waſted it.
Are my diſcourſes dull? Barren my wit,
If voluble and ſharpe diſcourſe be marr'd,
Vnkindneſſe blunts it more then marble hard.
Doe their gay vestments his affections baite?
That's not my fault, hee's maſter of my ſtate.
What ruines are in me that can be found,
By him not ruin'd? Then is he the ground
Of my defeatures. My decayed faire,
A ſunnie looke of his, would ſoone repaire.
But, too vnruly Deere, he breakes the pale,
And feedes from home; poore I am but his ſtale.
Luci. Self-harming Ielouſie; fie beat it hence.
Adr. Vnfeeling fooles can with ſuch wrongs diſpence:
I know his eye doth homage other-where,
Or elſe, what lets but he would be here?
Siſter, you know he promis'd me a chaine,
Would that alone, a loue he would deſtraine,
So he would keepe faire quarter with his bed
I ſee the Iewell beſt enamaled
Will looſe his beauty: yet the gold bides ſtill
That others touch, and often touching will,
Where gold and no man that hath a name,
By falſhood and corruption doth it ſhame.
Since that my beauty cannot pleaſe his eie,
Ile weepe (what's elſe a ſad-eyed louers deede.
Luci. How many fond fooles ſerue mad Ielouſie?
Exit.

Enter Antipholus Erraſis.

Ant. The gold I gaue to Dromio is laid vp
Safe at the Centaur, and the heedfull ſlaue
Is wandred forth in care to ſeeke me out
By computation and mine hoſts report.
I could not ſpeake with Dromio, ſince at firſt
I ſent him from the Mart? ſee here he comes.

Enter Dromio Siracuſa.

How now ſir, is your merrie humor alter'd?
As you loue ſtrokes, ſo ieſt with me againe:
You know no Centaur? you receiu'd no gold?
Your Miſtreſſe ſent to haue me home to dinner?
My houſe was at the Phœnix? Waſt thou mad,
That thus ſo madlie thou did didſt anſwere me?
S.Dro. What anſwer ſir? when ſpake I ſuch a word?
E.Ant. Euen now, euen here, not halfe an howre ſince.
S.Dro. I did not ſee you ſince you ſent me hence
Home to the Centaur with the gold you gaue me.
Ant. Villaine, thou didſt denie the gold receiu,
And told'ſt me of a Miſtreſſe, and a dinner,
For which I hope thou felt'ſt I was diſpleas'd.
S.Dro. I am glad to ſee you in this merrie vaine,
What meanes this ieſt, I pray you Maſter tell me?
Ant. Yea, doſt thou ieere & flowt me in the teeth?
Think'ſt thou I ieſt? hold, take thou that, & that. Beats Dro.
S.Dr. Hold ſir, for Gods ſake, now your ieſt is earneſt,
Vpon what bargaine do you giue it me?
Antiph. Becauſe that I familiarie ſometimes
Doe vſe you for my foole, and chat with you,
Your ſawcineſſe will ieſt vpon my loue,
And make a Common of my ſerious howres,
When the ſunne ſhines, let foolish gnats make ſport,
But creepe in crannies, when he hides his beames:
If you will ieſt with me, know my aſpect,
And faſhion your demeanor to my lookes,
Or I will beat this method in your ſconce.
S.Dro. Sconce call you it? ſo you would leaue batte-ring, I had rather haue it a head, and you vſe theſe blowes long, I muſt get a ſconce for my head, and inſconce it too, or elſe I ſhall ſeek my wit in my ſhoulders, but I pray ſir, why am I beaten?
Ant. Doſt thou not know?
S.Dro. Nothing ſir, but that I am beaten
Ant. Shall I tell you why?
S.Dro. I ſir, and wherefore; for they ſay, euery why hath a wherefore.
Ant. Why firſt for flowting me, and then wherefore, for vrging it the ſecond time to me.
S.Dro. Was there euer anie man thus beaten out of ſeaſon, when in the why and the wherefore, is neither rime nor reaſon. Well ſir, I thanke you.
Ant. Thanke me ſir, for what?
S.Dro. Marry ſir, for this ſomething that you gaue me for nothing.
Ant. Ile make you amends next, to giue you nothing for ſomething. But ſay ſir, is it dinner time?
S.Dro. No ſir, I thinke the meat wants that I haue
Ant. In good time ſir, what's that?
S.Dro. Baſting
Ant. Well ſir, then 'twill be drie.
S.Dro. If it be ſir, I pray you eat none of it
Ant. Your reaſon?
S.Dro. Leſt it make you chollericke, and purchaſe me another drie baſting
Ant. Well ſir, learne to ieſt in good time, there's a time for all things
S.Dro. I durſt haue denied that before you were ſo chollericke
Ant. By what rule ſir?
S.Dro. Marry ſir, by a rule as plaine as the plaine bald pate of Father time himſelfe
Ant. Let's heare it.
S.Dro. There's no time for a man to recouer his haire that growes bald by nature.
Ant. May he not doe it by fine and recouerie?
S.Dro. Yes, to pay a fine for a perewig, and recouer the loſt haire of another man.
Ant. Why, is Time ſuch a niggard of haire, being (as it is) ſo plentifull an excrement?
S.Dro. Becauſe it is a bleſſing that hee beſtowes on beaſts, and what he hath ſcanted them in haire, hee hath giuen them in wit.
Ant. Why, but there's many a man hath more haire then wit.
S.Dro. Not a man of thoſe but he hath the wit to loſe his haire.
Ant. Why thou didſt conclude hairy men plain dealers without wit.
S.Dro. The plainer dealer, the ſooner loſt, yet he looſeth it in a kinde of jollitie.
Ant. For what reaſon.
S.Dro. For two, and ſound ones too.

Ant. Nay

An Nay not found I pray you

S.Dro. Sure ones then.

An Nay, not sure in a thing falsing

S.Dro. Certaine ones then

An Name them

S.Dro. The one to saue the money that he spends in trying the other, that at dinner they should not drop in his porrage.

An. You would all this time haue proou'd, there is no time for all things

S.Dro. Marry and did sir namely, in no time to recouer haire lost by Nature

An But your reason was not substantiall, why there is no time to recouer

S.Dro Thus I mend it. Time himselfe is bald, and therefore to the worlds end, will haue bald followers

An I knew 'twould be a bald conclusion: but soft, who wafts vs yonder

Enter Adriana and Luciana

Adri I,I. Antipholus, looke strange and frowne,
Some other Mistresse hath thy sweet aspects
I am not Adriana nor thy wife.
The time was once, when thou vnurg'd would'st vow,
That neuer words were musicke to thine eare,
That neuer obiect pleasing in thine eye,
That neuer touch well welcome to thy hand,
That neuer meate sweet-fauour'd in thy taste
Vnlesse I spake, or look'd, or touch'd, or carued to thee.
How comes it now, my Husband, oh how comes it,
That thou art then estranged from thy tender
Thy selfe I call it, being strange to me
That vndividable Incorporate
Am better then thy deere selfes better part
Ah doe not teare away thy selfe from me,
For know my loue: as easie mayst thou fall
A drop of water in the breaking gulfe,
And take vnmingled thence that drop againe
Without addition or diminishing,
As take from me thy selfe, and not me too
How deerely would it touch thee to the quicke,
Shouldst thou but heare I were licentious?
And that this body consecrate to thee,
By Ruffian Lust should be contaminate?
Wouldst thou not spit at me, and spurne at me,
And hurle the name of husband in my face,
And teare the stain'd skin of my Harlot brow,
And from my false hand cut the wedding ring,
And breake it with a deepe-diuorcing vow?
I know thou canst, and therefore see thou doe it.
I am possest with an adulterate blot,
My blood is mingled with the crime of lust:
For if we two be one, and thou play false,
I doe digest the poison of thy flesh,
Being strumpeted by thy contagion.
Keepe then faire league and truce with thy true bed,
I liue distain'd, thou vndishonoured

Antip. Plead you to me faire dame? I know you not.
In Ephesus I am but two houres old,
As strange vnto your towne, as to your talke,
Who euery word by all my wit being scand,
Wants wit in all, one word to vnderstand

Luci Fie brother, how the world is chang'd with you.
When were you wont to vse my sister thus?
She sent for you by Dromio home to dinner.

Ant. By Dromio? Drom by me.

Adr. By thee, and this thou didst returne from him.
That he did buffet thee, and in his blowes,
Denied my house for his, me for his wife

Ant Did you conuerse sir with this gentlewoman.
What is the course and drift of your compact?

S.Dro. I sir? I neuer saw her till this time

Ant Villaine thou liest, for euen her very words,
Didst thou deliuer to me on the Mart

S.Dro. I neuer spake with her in all my life

Ant How can she thus then call vs by our names?
Vnlesse it be by inspiration

Adri. How ill agrees it with your grauitie,
To counterfeit thus grossely with your slaue,
Abetting him to thwart me in my mood?
Be it my wrong you are from me exempt,
But wrong not that wrong with a more contempt
Come I will fasten on this sleeue of thine
Thou art an Elme my husband, I a Vine
Whose weakenesse married to thy stronger state,
Makes me with thee a part of conscience.
It ought possesse as much as I, beside,
Wrong'd I was first, and plighted faith to me,
Why plead'st not to the Maides
Who all for want of pleading will intrude,
I feele my fault, and heare my condemnation

Ant To me thee speakes, thee moues me for her sake,
What, was I married to her in my dreame?
Or sleepe I now, and thinke I heare all this?
What error drives our eies and eares amisse?
Vntill I know this sure vncertainty,
Ile entertaine the free'd fallacie

Luci Dromio goe bid the seruants spread for dinner

S.Dro O for my beads, I crosse me for a sinner
This is the fairie land, oh spight of spights,
We talke with Goblins, Owles and Sprights;
If we obay them not, this will ensue
They'll suck our breath, or pinch vs blacke and blew.

Luc. Why prat'st thou to thy selfe, and answer'st not
Dromio, thou Dromio thou snaile, thou slug, thou sot

S.Dro I am transformed Master, am I not?

Ant I think thou art in mind, and so am I

S.Dro. Nay Master, both in mind, and in my shape

Ant Thou hast thine owne shape

S.Dro. No I am an Ape

Luc If thou art chang'd to ought, 'tis to an Asse.

S.Dro 'Tis true she rides me and I long for grasse
'Tis so, I am an Asse, else it could neuer be,
But I should know her as well as she knowes me

Adri Come, come, no longer will I be a foole,
To put the finger in the eye and weepe
Whil'st man and Master laughes my woes to scorne:
Come sir to dinner, Dromio keepe the gate:
Husband I'll dine aboue with you to day,
And shriue you of a thousand idle pranks:
Sirra, if any aske you for your Master,
Say he dines forth, and let no creature enter:
Come sister, Dromio play the Porter well

Ant Am I in earth in heauen or in hell?
Sleeping or waking, mad or well aduisde:
Known vnto these, and to my selfe disguisde:
I'll say as they say, and perseuer so:
And in this mist at all aduentures go.

S.Dro Master, shall I be Porter at the gate?

Adri. I, and let none enter, least I breake your pate

Luc Come come, Antipholus, we dine too late

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Antipholus of Ephesus, his man Dromio, Angelo the Goldsmith, and Balthaser the Merchant.

E.Ant. Good signior Angelo you must excuse vs all,
My wife is shrewish when I keepe not howres;
Say that I lingerd with you at your shop
To see the making of her Carkanet,
And that to morrow you will bring it home.
But here's a villaine that would face me downe
He met me on the Mart, and that I beat him,
And charg'd him with a thousand markes in gold,
And that I did denie my wife and house;
Thou drunkard thou, what did'st thou meane by this?

E.Dro. Say what you will sir, but I know what I know,
That you beat me at the Mart I have your hand to show;
If your skin were parchment, & your blowes you gaue were ink,
Your owne hand-writing would tell you what I thinke.

E.Ant. I thinke thou art an asse.

E.Dro. Marry so it doth appeare
By the wrongs I suffer, and the blowes I beare,
I should kicke being kickt, and being at that passe,
You would keepe from my heeles, and beware of an asse.

E.Ant. Y'are sad signior Balthazar, pray God our cheere
May answer my good will, and your good welcom here.

Bal. I hold your dainties cheap sir, & your welcom deere.

E.Ant Oh signior Balthazar, either at flesh or fish,
A table full of welcome, makes scarce one dainty dish.

Bal Good meat sir is common that every churle affords.

Ant. And welcome more common, for thats nothing but words.

Bal Small cheere and great welcome, makes a merrie feast.

Ant. I, to a niggardly Host, and more sparing guest:
But though my cates be meane, take them in good part,
Better cheere may you haue, but not with better hart.
But soft, my doore is lockt; goe bid them let vs in.

E.Dro. Maud, Bridget, Marian, Cisley, Gillian, Ginne.

S.Dro. Mome, Malthorse, Capon, Coxcombe, Idiot, Patch,
Either get thee from the doore, or sit downe at the hatch
Dost thou conster thy time so ill, that y'alt let in the dore,
When one is one too many, goe get thee from the dore.

E.Dro. What patch is made our Porter? my Master stayes in the street.

S.Dro. Let him walke from whence he came, lest hee catch cold on's feet.

E.Ant. Who talkes within there? hoa, open the doore.

S.Dro. Right sir, Ile tell you when, and you'll tell me wherefore

Ant. Wherefore? for my dinner: I haue not din'd to day.

S Dro. Nor to day here you must not come againe when you may.

Ant. What art thou that keep'st mee out from the howse I owe?

S Dro The Porter for this time Sir, and my name is Dromio.

E. Dro O villaine, thou hast stolne both mine office and my name,
The one ne're got me credit, the other mickle blame:
If thou hadst beene Dromio to day in my place,
Thou would'st haue chang'd thy face for a name, or thy name for an asse

Enter Luce.

Luce. What a coile is there Dromio? who are those at the gate?

E.Dro. Let my Master in Luce.

Luce Faith no, hee comes too late, and so tell your Master.

E.Dro. O Lord I must laugh, haue at you with a Prouerbe,
Shall I set in my staffe.

Luce. Haue at you with another, that's when? can you tell?

S.Dro. If thy name be called Luce, Luce thou hast answer'd him well.

Ant. Doe you heare you minion, you'll let vs in I hope?

Luce. I thought to haue ask'd you.

S.Dro. And you said no.

E.Dro. So come helpe, well strooke, there was blow for blow.

Ant. Thou baggage let me in.

Luce. Can you tell for whose sake?

E.Dro. Master, knocke the doore hard.

Luce. Let him knocke till it ake.

Ant. You'll cry for this minion, if I beat the doore downe.

Luce. What needs all that, and a paire of stocks in the towne?

Enter Adriana.

Adr. Who is that at the doore y' keeps all this noise?

S.Dro. By my troth your towne is troubled with unruly boies.

Ant. Are you there Wife? you might haue come before.

Adr. Your wife sir knaue? go get you from the dore.

E. Dro If you went in paine Master, this knaue would goe sore.

Angelo. Heere is neither cheere sir, nor welcome, we would faine haue either.

Bal. In debating which was best, wee shall part with neither.

E.Dro. They stand at the doore, Master, bid them welcome hither.

Ant. There is something in the winde, that we cannot get in.

E.Dro. You would say so Master, if your garments were thin.
Your cake here is warme within: you stand here in the cold.
It would make a man mad as a Bucke to be so bought and sold.

Ant. Go fetch me something, Ile break ope the gate.

S.Dro Breake any breaking here, and Ile breake your knaues pate.

E.Dro. A man may breake a word with your sir, and words are but winde:
I and breake it in your face, so he break it not behinde.

S.Dro. It seemes thou want'st breaking, out vpon thee hinde.

E.Dro. Here's too much out vpon thee, I pray thee let me in

S Dro I, when fowles haue no feathers, and fish haue no fin.

Ant. Well, Ile breake in: go borrow me a crow.

E.Dro. A crow without feather, Master meane you so;

For

For a fish without a finne, ther's a fowle without a feather:
If a crow help vs in this, we'll plucke a crow together.
Ant. Go, get thee gon, fetch me an iron Crow.
Balth. Haue patience sir, oh let it not be so,
Herein you warre against your reputation,
And draw within the compasse of suspect
Th'vnuiolated honor of your wife.
Once this your long experience of your wisedome,
Her sober vertue, yeares, and modestie,
Plead on your part some cause to you vnknowne,
And doubt not sir, but she will well excuse
Why at this time the doores are made against you.
Be ruld by me, depart in patience,
And let vs to the Tyger all to dinner,
And about euening come your selfe alone,
To know the reason of this strange restraint
If by strong hand you offer to breake in
Now in the stirring passage of the day
A vulgar comment will be made of it;
And that supposed by the common rowt
Against your yet vngalled estimation,
That may with foule intrusion enter vs,
And dwell vpon your graue when you are dead;
For slander lies vpon succession,
For euer hows'd, where it gets possession.
Ant. You haue preuayl'd, I will depart in quiet,
And in the sight of mirth meane to be merry:
I know a wench of excellent discourse,
Prettie and witty: wilde, and yet too gentle,
There will we dine: this woman that I meane
My wife (but I protest without desert)
Hath oftentimes vpbraided me withall:
To her will we to dinner, get you home
And fetch the chaine, by this I know 'tis made,
Bring it I pray you to the Porpentine,
For there's the house: That chaine will I bestow
(Be it for nothing but to spight my wife)
Vpon mine hostesse there, good sir make haste:
Since mine owne doores refuse to entertaine me,
Ile knocke elsewhere, to see if they'l disdaine me.
Ang. Ile meet you at that place some houre hence.
Ant. Do so, this iest shall cost me some expence. Exeunt.

Enter Iuliana, with Ant phoma of Syracuse.

Iulia. And may it be that you haue quite forgot
A husbands office? shall Antipholus
Euen in the spring of Loue, thy Loue-springs rot?
Shall loue in buildings grow so ruinate?
If you did wed my sister for her wealth,
Then for her wealths-sake vse her with more kindnesse
Or if you like elsewhere doe it by stealth,
Muffle your false loue with some shew of blindnesse:
Let not my sister read it in your eye:
Be not thy tongue thy owne shames Orator:
Looke sweet, speake fast, become disloyaltie:
Apparell vice like vertues harbenger:
Beare a faire presence, though your heart be tainted,
Teach sinne the carriage of a holy Saint,
Be secret false: what need she be acquainted?
What simple theefe brags of his owne attaine?
'Tis double wrong to truant with your bed,
And let her read it in thy lookes at boord:
Shame hath a bastard fame, well managed,
Ill deeds is doubled with an euill word:
Alas poore women, make vs not beleeue
(Being compact of credit) that you loue vs;
Though others haue the arme, shew vs the sleeue:
We in your motion turne, and you may moue vs.
Then gentle brother get you in againe,
Comfort my sister, cheere her, call her wife;
'Tis holy sport to be a little vaine,
When the sweet breath of flatterie conquers strife.
S. Ant. Sweete Mistris, what your name is else I know not;
Nor by what wonder you do hit of mine.
Lesse in your knowledge, and your grace you show not,
Then our earths wonder, more then earth diuine.
Teach me deere creature how to think and speake.
Lay open to my earthie gros conceit,
Smothred in errors, feeble, shallow, weake,
The folded meaning of your words deceit.
Against my soules pure truth, why labour you,
To make it wander in an vnknowne field?
Are you a god? would you create me new?
Transforme me then, and to your power Ile yeeld
But if that I am I, then well I know,
Your weeping sister is no wife of mine
Nor to her bed no homage do I owe
Farre more, farre more: O see, see the doe I beseech
Oh train me not sweet Mermaide with thy note,
To drowne me in thy sister flood of teares
Sing Siren for thy selfe, and I will dote:
Spread ore the siluer waues thy golden haires;
And as a bud Ile take thee, and there lie
And in that glorious supposition think,
He gaines by death, that hath such meanes to die.
Let Loue, being light, be drowned if she sinke.
Luc. What are you mad, that you doe reason so?
Ant. Not mad, but mated how I doe not know.
Luc. It is a fault that springeth from your eye
Ant. For gazing on your beames faire sun being by.
Luc. Gaze when you should, and that will cleere your sight
Ant. As good to winke sweet loue, as looke on night.
Luc. Why call you me loue? Call my sister so.
Ant. Thy sisters sister.
Luc. That's my sister
Ant. No it is thy selfe, mine owne selfes better, part
Mine eies cleere eie, my deere heart, deerer heart,
My food, my fortune and my sweet hopes aime,
My sole earths heauen and my heauens claime.
Luc. All this my sister is, or else should be
Ant. Call thy selfe sister sweet, for I am thee.
Thee will I loue, and with thee lead my life;
Thou hast no husband yet, nor I no wife:
Giue me thy hand.
Luc. O soft sir, hold you still Ile fetch my sister to get her good will. Exit.

Enter Dromio, Syracusia.

Ant. Why how now Dromio, where runst thou so fast?
S. Dro. Doe you know me sir? Am I Dromio? Am I your man? Am I my selfe?
Ant. Thou art Dromio, thou art my man, thou art thy selfe.
Dro. I am an asse, I am a woman's man, and besides my selfe.
Ant. What woman's man? and how besides thy selfe?
Dro. Marrie sir, besides my selfe, I am due to a woman
One that claimes me, one that haunts me, one that will haue me.

Ant. What

Ant. What claime laies she to thee?

Dro. Marry sir, such claime as you would lay to your horse, and she would haue me as a beast, not that I being a beast she would haue me, but that she being a verie beastly creature layes claime to me.

Ant. What is she?

Dro. A very reuerent body: I such a one, as a man may not speake of, without he say sir reuerence. I haue but lease lucke in the match, and yet is she a wonderous fat marriage.

Ant. How dost thou meane a fat marriage?

Dro. Marry sir, she's the kitchin wench, & all grease, and I know not what vse to put her too, but to make a Lampe of her, and run her by her owne light. I warrant you, her age esteemes her worth a weeke: call her creature, call her foole, and a trusty kitchin wench will serue: how long is't now to Whitsontide?

Ant. What complexion is she of?

Dro. Swart like my shoo, but her face nothing like so cleane kept: for why she sweates a man may go ouer-shoes in the grime of it.

Ant. That's a fault that water will mend.

Dro. No, sir, 'tis in graine, Noahs flood could not do it.

Ant. What's her name?

Dro. Nell sir: but her name and three quarters, that's an Ell and three quarters, will not measure her from hippe to hippe.

Ant. Then she beares some breadth.

Dro. No longer from head to foot, then from hippe to hippe: she is sphericall, like a globe: I could find out Countries in her.

Ant. In what part of her body stands Ireland?

Dro. Marry in her buttocks, I found it out by the bogges.

Ant. Where Scotland?

Dro. I found it by the barrennesse, hard in the palme of the hand.

Ant. Where France?

Dro. In her forehead, armed and reuerted, making warre against her heire.

Ant. Where England?

Dro. I looked for the chalkie Cliffes, but I could find no whitenesse in them. But I guesse, it stood very high in her nose, with red and blew spots like a Rose.

Ant. Where Spaine?

Dro. Faith I saw it not: but I felt it hot in her breath.

Ant. Where America, the Indies?

Dro. Oh sir, vpon her nose, all ore embellished with Rubies Carbuncles, Saphires, declining their rich Aspect to the hot breath of Spaine, who sent whole Armadoes of Carracks to be ballast at her nose.

Ant. Where stood Belgia, the Netherlands?

Dro. Oh sir I did not looke so low. To conclude, the spirit of Diuination layd claime to me, call'd me Dromio, swore I was assured to her, told me what priuie markes I had about me, as the marke of my shoulder, the Mole in my neck, the great Wart on my left arme, that I amaz'd ran me from her as a witch. And I thinke, if my breast had not been made of faith, and my heart of Steele, she had transform'd me to a Curtaile dog, & made me turne i'th wheele.

Ant. Go hie thee presently post to the road,
And if the wind blow any way from shore,
I will not harbour in this Towne to night.
If any Barke put forth, come to the Mart,
Where I will walke till thou returne to me:
If euerie one knowes vs, and we know none,
'Tis time I thinke to trudge, packe, and be gone.

Dro. As from a Beare a man would run for life,
So flie I from her that would be my wife. Exit

Ant. There's none but Witches do inhabite heere,
And therefore 'tis hie time that I were hence:
She that doth call me husband, euen my soule
Doth for a wife abhorre. But her faire sister
Possest with such a gentle soueraigne grace,
Of such inchanting presence and discourse,
Hath almost made me Traitor to my selfe:
But least my sence be guilty to selfe wrong,
I le stop mine eares against the Mermaids song.

Enter Angelo with the Chaine

Ang. M Antipholus

Ant. I that's my name.

Ang. I know it well sir, loe here's the chaine,
I thought to haue tane you at the Porpentine,
The chaine vnfinish'd made me stay thus long.

Ant. What is your will that I shal do with this?

Ang. What please your selfe sir: I haue made it for you.

Ant. Made it for me sir, I bespoke it not.

Ang. Not once, nor twice, but twentie times you haue.
Go home with it, and please your Wife withall,
And soone at supper time ile visit you,
And then receiue my money for the chaine.

Ant. I pray you sir receiue the money now,
For feare you ne're see chaine, nor money more.

Ang. You are a merry man sir, fare you well. Exit.

Ant What I should thinke of this, I cannot tell:
But this I thinke, there's no man is so vaine,
That would refuse so faire an offer'd Chaine.
I see a man here needs not liue by shifts,
When in the streets he meetes such Golden gifts:
I le to the Mart, and there for Dromio stay,
If any ship put out, then straight away. Exit

Actus Quartus. Scæna Prima.

Enter a Merchant, Goldsmith, and an Officer.

Mar. You know since Pentecost the sum is due,
And since I haue not much importun'd you,
Nor now I had not, but that I am bound
To Persia, and want Guilders for my voyage.
Therefore make present satisfaction,
Or I le attach you by this Officer.

Gold. Euen iust the sum that I do owe to you,
Is growing to me by Antipholus,
And in the instant that I met with you,
He had of me a Chaine, at fiue a clocke
I shall receiue the money for the same
Pleaseth you walke with me downe to his house,
I will discharge my bond, and thanke you too.

Enter Antipholus Ephes. Dromio from the Courtizans.

Off. That labour may you saue. See where he comes.

Ant. While I go to the Goldsmiths house, go thou

And

And buy a rope and, that will I bestow
Among my wife, and their confederates,
For locking me out of my doores by day:
But soft I see the Goldsmith; get thee gone,
Buy thou a rope, and bring it home to me.
Dro. I buy a thousand pound a yeare, I buy a rope.
Exit Dromio
Ephi.Ant. A man is well holpe vp that trusts to you,
I promised your presence, and the Chaine,
But neither Chaine nor Goldsmith came to me
Belike you thought our loue would last too long
If it were chain'd together: and therefore came not.
Gold. Saying your merrie humor: here's the note
How much your Chaine weighs to the vtmost charect,
The finenesse of the Gold: and the charge: all fashion,
Which doth amount to three odde Duckets more
Then I stand debted to this Gentleman,
I pray you see him presently discharg'd,
For he is bound to Sea, and stayes but for it.
Anti. I am not furnish'd with the present monie:
Besides I haue some businesse in the towne.
Good Signior take the stranger to my house,
And with you take the Chaine, and bid my wife
Disburse the summe, on the receit thereof,
Perchance I will be there as soone as you.
Gold. Then you will bring the Chaine to her your selfe.
Anti. No beare it with you, least I come not time enough
Gold. Well sir, I will? Haue you the Chaine about you?
Ant. And if I haue not sir, I hope you haue
Or else you may returne without your money.
Gold. Nay come I pray you sir, giue me the Chaine
Both winde and tide stayes for this Gentleman,
And I too blame haue held him heere too long
Anti. Good Lord, you vse this dalliance to excuse
Your breach of promise to the Porpentine,
I should haue chid you for not bringing it,
But like a shrew you first begin to brawle.
Mar. The houre steales on, I pray you sir dispatch.
Gold. You heare how he importunes me, the Chaine.
Ant. Why giue it to my wife, and fetch your money.
Gold. Come, come, you know I gaue it you euen now.
Either send the Chaine, or send me by some token.
Ant. Fie, now you run this humor out of breath,
Come where's the Chaine, I pray you let me see it.
Mar. My businesse cannot brooke this dalliance,
Good sir say, whe'r you answer me, or no:
If not, Ile leaue him to the Officer.
Ant. I answer you? What should I answer you.
Gold. The monie that you owe me for the Chaine.
Ant. I owe you none, till I receiue the Chaine.
Gold. You know I gaue it you halfe an houre since.
Ant. You gaue me none, you wrong mee much to say so.
Gold. You wrong me more sir in denying it.
Consider how it stands vpon my credit.
Mar. Well Officer, arrest him at my suite
Offi. I do, and charge you in the Dukes name to obey me.
Gold. This touches me in reputation.
Either consent to pay this sum for me,
Or I attach you by this Officer.
Ant. Consent to pay thee that I neuer had:
Arrest me foolish fellow if thou dar'st.
Gold. Heere is thy fee, arrest him Officer
I would not spare my brother in this case,
If he should scorne me so apparantly.
Offic. I do arrest you sir, you heare the suite
Ant I do obey thee, till I giue thee baile
But sirrah, you shall buy this sport as deere,
As all the mettall in your shop will answer
Gold. Sir, sir, I shall haue Law in Ephesus,
To your notorious shame, I doubt it not.

Enter Dromio Sira. from the Bay.

Dro. Master, there's a Barke of Epidamnum,
That stayes but till her Owner comes aboord,
And then sir she beares away. Our traughtage sir,
I haue conuey'd aboord, and I haue bought
The Oyle, the Balsamum, and Aqua-vitæ
The ship is in her trim, the merrie winde
Blowes faire from land: they stay for nought at all,
But for their Owner, Master, and your selfe.
Ant. How now a Madman? Why thou peeuish sheep
What ship of Epidamnum stayes for me.
S.Dro. A ship you sent me too, to hier waftage
Ant. Thou drunken slaue, I sent thee for a rope,
And told thee to what purpose and what end.
S.Dro. You sent me for a ropes end as soone,
You sent me to the Bay sir, for a Barke.
Ant. I will debate this matter at more leisure
And teach your eares to list me with more heede:
To Adriana Villaine hie thee straight:
Giue her this key, and tell her in the Deske
That's couer'd o're with Turkish Tapistrie,
There is a purse of Duckets, let her send it:
Tell her, I am arrested in the streete,
And that shall bayle me: hie thee slaue, be gone.
On Officer to prison, till it come. Exeunt
S. Dromio To Adriana, that is where we din'd,
Where Dowsabell did claime me for her husband,
She is too big I hope for me to compasse,
Thither I must, although against my will.
For seruants must their Masters mindes fulfill. Exit

Enter Adriana and Luciana

Adr. Ah Luciana, did he tempt thee so?
Might it thou perceiue austerely in his eie,
That he did plead in earnest, yea or no:
Look'd he or red or pale, or sad or merrily?
What obseruation mad'st thou in this case?
Oh, his hearts Meteors tilting in his face
Luc. First he deni'de you had in him no right.
Adr. He meant he did me none: the more my spight
Luc. Then swore he that he was a stranger heere.
Adr And true he swore, though yet forsworne hee were.
Luc Then pleaded I for you
Adr. And what said he?
Luc. That loue I begg'd for you, he begg'd of me.
Adr. With what perswasion did he tempt thy loue?
Luc. With words, that in an honest suit might moue.
First, he did praise my beautie, then my speech.
Adr. Did'st speake him faire?
Luc. Haue patience I beseech.
Adr. I cannot, nor I will not hold me still,
My tongue, though not my heart, shall haue his will.
He is deformed, crooked, old, and sere,
Ill-fac'd, worse bodied, shapelesse euery where:
Vicious, vngentle, foolish, blunt, vnkinde,

Stigma-

Stigmatically in making worse in minde.
Luc. Who would be iealous then of such a one?
No euill lost is wail'd,when it is gone
Adr. Ah but I thinke him better then I say
And yet would herein others eies were worse:
Farre from her nest the Lapwing cries away;
My heart prayes for him,though my tongue doe curse.

Enter S.Dromio.

Dro. Here goe the deske,the purse,sweet now make haste.
Luc. How hast thou lost thy breath?
S.Dro. By running fast.
Adr. Where is thy Master Dromio? Is he well?
S.Dro. No,he is worse then hell:
A diuell in an euerlasting garment hath him;
On whose hard heart is button'd vp with steele
A Feind,a Fairie,pittilesse and rude.
A Wolfe,nay worse,a fellow all in buffe:
A backe friend,a shoulder clapper,one that countermands
The passages of alleys,creekes and narrow lands;
A hound that runs Counter,and yet draws dry-foot well,
One that before the Iudgment carries poore soules to hell.
Adr. Why man,what is the matter?
S.Dro. I doe not know the matter,he is rested on the case.
Adr. What is he arrested?tell me at whose suite?
S.Dro. I know not at whose suite he is arrested well;
but is in a suite of buffe which rested him,that can I tell.
Will you send him Mistris redemption,the money in his deske?
Adr. Go fetch it Sister:this I wonder at

Exit Luciana.

That he vnknowne to me should be in debt:
Tell me,was he arrested on a band?
S.Dro. Not on a band,but on a stronger thing:
A chaine,a chaine,doe you not here it ring?
Adr. What,the chaine?
S.Dro. No,no,the bell,'tis time that I were gone:
It was two ere I left him,and now the clocke strikes one.
Adr. The houres come backe,that did I neuer here.
S.Dro. Oh yes,if any houre meete a Serieant,a turnes backe for very feare.
Adr. As if time were in debt:how fondly do'st thou reason?
S.Dro. Time is a very bankerout,and owes more then he's worth to season.
Nay,he's a theefe too:haue you not heard men say,
That time comes stealing on by night and day?
If I be in debt and theft,and a Serieant in the way,
Hath he not reason to turne backe an houre in a day?

Enter Luciana.

Adr. Go Dromio there's the monie,beare it straight,
And bring thy Master home immediately.
Come sister,I am prest downe with conceit:
Conceit,my comfort and my iniurie.

Enter Antipho'us Syracusa.

There's not a man I meete but doth salute me
As if I were their well acquainted friend,
And euerie one doth call me by my name:
Some tender monie to me,some inuite me;
Some other giue me thankes for kindnesses;
Some offer me Commodities to buy.
Euen now a tailor cal'd me in his shop,
And shew'd me Silkes that he had bought for me,
And therewithall tooke measure of my body.
Sure these are but imaginarie wiles,
And Iapland Sorcerers inhabite here.

Enter Dromio.Sir.

S.Dro. Master,here's the gold you sent me for:what haue you got the picture of old Adam new apparel'd?
Ant. What gold is this?What Adam do'st thou meane?
S.Dro. Not that Adam that kept the Paradise:but that Adam that keepes the prison:hee that goes in the calues-skin,that was kil'd for the Prodigall:hee that came behinde you sir,like an euill angel,and bid you forsake your libertie.
Ant. I vnderstand thee not.
S.Dro. No?why 'tis a plaine case:he that went like a Base-Viole in a case of leather;the man sir,that when gentlemen are tired giues them a iob,and rests them sir,that takes pittie on decayed men,and giues them suites of durance:he that sets vp his rest to doe more exploits with his Mace,then a Morris Pike.
Ant. What thou meanst an officer?
S.Dro. I sir,the Serieant of the Band:he that brings any man to answer it that breakes his Band:one that thinkes a man alwaies going to bed,and saies,God giue you good rest.
Ant. Well sir,there rest in your foolerie:
Is there any ships puts forth to night?may we be gone?
S.Dro. Why sir,I brought you word an houre since,that the Barke Expedition put forth to night,and then were you hindred by the Serieant to tarry for the Hoy delay:Here are the angels that you sent for to deliuer you.
Ant. The fellow is distract,and so am I,
And here we wander in illusions:
Some blessed power deliuer vs from hence.

Enter a Curtizan.

Cur. Well met,well met,Master Antipholus.
I see sir you haue found the Goldsmith now:
Is that the chaine you promis'd me to day?
Ant. Satan auoide,I charge thee tempt me not.
S.Dro. Master,is this Mistris Satan?
Ant. It is the diuell.
S.Dro. Nay,she is worse,she is the diuels dam:
And here she comes in the habit of a light wench,and thereof comes,that the wenches say God dam me,That's as much to say,God make me a light wench:It is written,they appeare to men like angels of light,light is an effect of fire,and fire will burne:ergo,light wenches will burne,come not neere her.
Cur. Your man and you are marualous merrie sir.
Will you goe with me,we'll mend our dinner here?
S.Dro. Master,if do expect spoon-meate,or bespeake a long spoone.
Ant. Why Dromio?
S.Dro. Marrie he must haue a long spoone that must eate with the diuell.
Ant. Auoid then fiend,what tell'st thou me of supping?
Thou art,as you are all a sorceresse:
I coniure thee to leaue me,and be gone.
Cur. Giue me the ring of mine you had at dinner,
Or for my Diamond the Chaine you promis'd,
And I'le be gone sir,and not trouble you.
S.Dro. Some diuels aske but the parings of ones nayle,

a rush, a haire, a drop of blood, a pin, a nut, a cherrie-stone: but she more couetous, would haue a chaine: Master be wise, and if you giue it her, the deuell will shake her Chaine, and fright vs with it.

Cur. I pray you fir my Ring, or else the Chaine, I hope you do not meane to cheate me so?

Ant. Auant thou witch: Come Dromio lets vs go.

S Dro. Flie pride saies the Pea-cocke, Mistris that you know. Exit

Cur. Now out of doubt Antipholus is mad, Else would he neuer so demeane himselfe, A Ring he hath of mine worth fortie Duckets, And for the same he promis'd me a Chaine, Both one and other he denies me now. The reason that I gather he is mad, Besides this present instance of his rage, Is a mad tale he told to day at dinner, Of his owne doores being shut against his entrance. Belike his wife acquainted with his fits, On purpose shut the doores against his way. My way is now to hie home to his house, And tell his wife, that being Lunatike, He rush'd into my house, and took perforce My Ring away. This course I fitted haue to, For fortie Duckets is too much to loose

Enter Antipholus Ephes with a Iailer

An. Feare me not man, I will not breake away, Ile giue thee ere I leaue thee so much money To warrant thee as I am rested for. My wife is in a wayward moode to day, And will not lightly trust the Messenger, That I should be attach'd in Ephesus, I tell you 'twill sound harshly in her eares.

Enter Dromio Eph with a rope end

Heere comes my Man, I thinke he brings the money How now sir? Haue you that I sent you for?

E Dro. Here's that I warrant you will pay them all.

Ant. But where's the Money?

E Dro. Why sir, I gaue the Monie for the Rope.

Ant. Fiue hundred Duckets villaine for a rope?

E Dro. Ile serue you sir fiue hundred at the rate.

Ant. To what end did I bid thee hie thee home?

E. Dro. To a rope's end sir, and to that end am I return'd.

Ant. And to that end sir, I will welcome you

Offi. Good sir be patient.

E. Dro. Nay 'tis for me to be patient, I am in aduersitie

Offi. Good now hold thy tongue.

E. Dro. Nay, rather perswade him to hold his hands

Ant. Thou whoreson senselesse Villaine

E. Dro. I would I were senseless sir, that I might not feele your blowes.

Ant. Thou art sensible in nothing but blowes, and so is an Asse

E. Dro. I am an Asse indeede, you may prooue it by my long eares. I haue serued him from the houre of my Natiuitie to this instant, and haue nothing at his hands for my seruice but blowes. When I am cold, he heates me with beating: when I am warme, he cooles me with beating: I am waked with it when I sleepe, raised with it when I sit, driuen out of doores with it when I goe from home, welcom'd home with it when I returne, nay I beare it on my shoulders, as a begger woont her brat and I thinke when he hath lam'd me, I shall beg with it from doore to doore

Enter Adriana, Luciana, Courtizan, and a Schoolemaster, call'd Pinch.

Ant Come goe along, my wife is coming yonder

E Dro. Mistris respice finem, respect your end, or rather the prophesie, like the Parrat, beware the ropes end

Ant. Wilt thou still talke? Beats Dro

Cur How say you now? Is not your husband mad

Adr. His inciuility confirmes no lesse.
Good Doctor Pinch, you are a Conjurer,
Establish him in his true sence againe,
And I will please you what you will demand

Luc. Alas how fiery, and how sharpe he lookes

Cur. Marke how he trembles in his extasie.

Pinch. Giue me your hand, and let me feele your pulse.

Ant. There is my hand, and let it feele your care.

Pinch I charge thee Satan, hous'd within this man,
To yeeld possession to my holie prayers,
And to thy state of darkenesse hie thee straight,
I conjure thee by all the Saints in heauen.

Ant. Peace doting wizard, peace: I am not mad

Adr Oh that thou wert not, poore distressed soule

Ant. You Minion you, are these your Customers? Did this Companion with the saffron face
Reuell and feast it at my house to day,
Whilst vpon me the guilty doores were shut,
And I denied to enter in my house

Adr O husband, God doth know you din'd at home
Where would you had remained vntill this time,
Free from these slanders, and this open shame

Ant. Din'd at home? Thou Villaine, what sayest thou?

Dro. Sir sooth to say you did not dine at home.

Ant. Were not my doores lockt vp, and I shut out?

Dro. Perdie, your doores were lockt, and you shut out.

Ant. And did not she her selfe reuile me there?

Dro. Sans Fable, she her selfe reuil'd you there.

Ant. Did not her Kitchen maide raile, taunt, and scorne me?

Dro. Certes she did, the kitchin vestall scorn'd you.

Ant. And did not I in rage depart from thence?

Dro. In verities you did, my bones beares witnesse,
That since haue felt the vigor of his rage

Adr Is't good to sooth him in these contraries?

Pinch. It is no shame, the fellow finds his vaine,
And yeelding to him, humors well his frenzie.

Ant. Thou hast subborn'd the Goldsmith to arrest me.

Adr. Alas, I sent you Monie to redeeme you,
By Dromio heere, who came in hast for it.

Dro. Monie by me? Heart and good will you might,
But surely Master not a ragge of Monie.

Ant. Went'st not thou to her for a purse of Duckets.

Adri. He came to me, and I deliuer'd it

Luci. And I am witnesse with her that she did.

Dro. God and the Rope-maker beare me witnesse,
That I was sent for nothing but a rope.

Pinch. Mistris, both Man and Master is possest,
I know it by their pale and deadly lookes,

They

They must be bound and laide in some darke roome.
Ant. Say wherefore didst thou locke me forth to day,
And why dost thou deny the bagge of gold?
Adr. I did not gentle husband locke thee forth
Dro. And gentle M^r I receiu'd no gold:
But I confesse sir, that we were lock'd out.
Adr. Dissembling Villain, thou speak'st false in both
Ant. Dissembler, thou art false in all,
And art confederate with a damned packe,
To make a loathsome abiect scorne of me:
But with these nailes, Ile plucke out these false eyes,
That would behold me thus shamefully sport.

Enter three or foure, and offer to binde him. He strives

Adr. Oh binde him, binde him, let him not come neere me.
Pinch. More company, the fiend is strong within him
Luc Aye me poore man, how pale and wan he looks.
Ant. What will you murther me, thou Iaylor thou?
I am thy prisoner, wilt thou suffer them to make a rescue?
Offi. Masters let him go: he is my prisoner, and you shall not haue him.
Pinch. Go binde this man, for he is franticke too
Adr. What wilt thou do, thou peeuish Officer?
Hast thou delight to see a wretched man
Do outrage and displeasure to himselfe?
Offi. He is my prisoner, if I let him go,
The debt he owes will be requir'd of me
Adr. I will discharge thee ere I go from thee,
Beare me forthwith vnto his Creditor,
And knowing how the debt growes I will pay it
Good Master Doctor see him safe conuey'd
Home to my house, oh most vnhappy day
Ant. Oh most vnhappie time to speed
Dro. Master, I am heere entred in bond for you.
Ant. Out on thee Villaine, wherefore dost thou mad mee?
Dro. Will you be bound for nothing, be mad good Master, cry the diuell.
Luc God help poore soules, how idlely doe they talke.
Adr. Go beare him hence, sister go you with me.
Say now, whose suite is he arrested at?

Exeunt. Manet Offi. Adri. Luci. Courtizan

Offi. One Angelo a Goldsmith, do you know him?
Adr. I know the man: what is the summe he owes?
Offi. Two hundred Ducants.
Adr. Say, how growes it due.
Offi Due for a Chaine your husband had of him
Adr. He did bespeake a Chain for me, but had it not.
Cur. Whenas your husband all in rage to day
Came to my house, and tooke away my Ring,
The Ring I saw vpon his finger now,
Straight after did I meete him with a Chaine.
Adr. It may be so, but I did neuer see it.
Come Iailor, bring me where the Goldsmith is,
I long to know the truth hereof at large

Enter Antipholus Syracusia with his Rapier drawne, and Dromio Syra.

Luc. God for thy mercy, they are loose againe.
Adr. And come with naked swords,
Let's call more helpe to haue them bound againe.
Runne all out.

Off. Away, they'l kill vs.
Exeunt omnes, as fast as may be, frighted.
S. Ant. I see these Witches are afraid of swords
S. Dro. She that would be your wife, now ran from you.
Ant. Come to the Centaur, fetch our stuffe from thence:
I long that we were safe and sound aboord.
Dro. Faith stay heere this night, they will surely do vs no harme: you saw they speake vs fayre, giue vs gold me thinkes they are such a gentle Nation, that but for the Mountaine of mad flesh that claimes marriage of me, I could finde in my heart to stay heere still, and turne Witch.
Ant. I will not stay to night for all the Towne,
Therefore away, to get our stuffe aboord. Exeunt

Actus Quintus. Scæna Prima.

Enter the Merchant and the Goldsmith.

Gold. I am sorry Sir that I haue hindred you,
But I protest he had the Chaine of me,
Though most dishonestly he doth deny it
Mar. How is the man esteem'd heere in the Citie?
Gold. Of very reuerent reputation sir,
Of credit infinite, highly belou'd,
Second to none that liues heere in the Citie.
His word might beare my wealth at any time.
Mar. Speake softly, yonder as I thinke he walkes

Enter Antipholus and Dromio againe.

Gold. 'Tis so: and that selfe chaine about his necke,
Which he forswore most monstrously to haue
Good sir draw neere to me, Ile speake to him
Signior Antipholus, I wonder much
That you would put me to this shame and trouble,
And not without some scandall to your selfe,
With circumstance and oaths, so to denie
This Chaine, which now you weare so openly.
Beside the charge, the shame, imprisonment,
You haue done wrong to this my honest friend,
Who but for staying on our Controuersie,
Had hoisted saile, and put to sea to day:
This Chaine you had of me, can you deny it?
Ant. I thinke I had, I neuer did deny it.
Mar. Yes that you did sir, and forswore it too.
Ant. Who heard me to denie it or forsweare it?
Mar. These eares of mine thou knowst did hear thee:
Fie on thee wretch, 'tis pitty that thou liu'st
To walke where any honest men resort.
Ant. Thou art a Villaine to impeach me thus,
Ile proue mine honor, and mine honestie
Against thee presently, if thou dar'st stand:
Mar. I dare and do defie thee for a villaine,

They draw. Enter Adriana, Luciana, Courtezan, & others.

Adr. Hold, hurt him not for God sake, he is mad,
Some get within him, take his sword away:
Binde Dromio too, and beare them to my house.
S. Dro. Runne master run, for Gods sake take a house,
This is some Priorie, in, or we are spoyl'd. Exeunt to the Priorie.

Enter

Enter Ladie Abbesse

Ab. Be quiet people, wherefore throng you hither
Adr. To fetch my poore distracted husband hence,
Let vs come in, that we may binde him fast,
And beare him home for his recouerie.
Gold. I knew he was not in his perfect wits.
Mar. I am sorry now that I did draw on him.
Ab. How long hath this possession held the man.
Adr. This weeke he hath been heavie, sowre-sad,
And much different from the man he was
But till this afternoone his passion
Ne're brake into extremity of rage
Ab Hath he not lost much wealth by wrack of sea,
Buried some deere friend, hath not else his eye
Strayd his affection vnto vnlawfull loue,
A sinne prevailing much in youthfull men,
Who giue their eies the liberty of gazing
Which of these sorrowes is he subiect too?
Adr To none of these, except it be the last,
Namely, some loue that drew him out of home.
Ab. You should for that haue reprehended him.
Adr Why so I did
Ab. I but not rough enough.
Adr. As roughly as my modestie would let me.
Ab Haply in priuate
Adr And in assemblies too.
Ab. I, but not enough
Adr It was the copie of our Conference
In bed he slept not for my vrging it,
At boord he fed not for my vrging it
Alone, it was the subiect of my Theame.
In company I often glanced it:
Still did I tell him, it was vilde and bad
Ab. And thereof came it, that the man was mad.
The venome clamors of a iealous woman,
Poisons more deadly then a mad dogges tooth.
It seemes his sleepes were hindred by thy railing,
And thereof comes it that his head is light.
Thou saist his meate was sawc'd with thy vpbraidings,
Vnquiet meales make ill digestions,
Thereof the raging fire of feauer bred.
And what's a Feauer, but a fit of madnesse?
Thou saiest his sports were hindred by thy brawles.
Sweet recreation barr'd what doth ensue
But moodie and dull melancholly,
Kinsman to grim and comfortlesse dispaire,
And at her heeles a huge infectious troope
Of pale distemperatures, and foes to life?
In food in sport, and life-preseruing rest
To be disturb'd, would mad or man, or beast
The consequence is then thy iealous fits
Hath scar'd thy husband from the vse of wits
Luc She neuer reprehended him but mildely,
When he demean'd himselfe rough, rude, and wildly,
Why beare you these rebukes, and answer not?
Adr. She did betray me to my owne reproofe,
Good people enter and lay hold on him
Ab No, not a creature enters in my house.
Ad. Then let your seruants bring my husband forth
Ab Neither: he tooke this place for sanctuary,
And it shall priuiledge him from your hands,
Till I haue brought him to his wits againe,
Or loose my labour in assaying it
Adr I will attend my husband, be his nurse,
Diet his sickenesse, for it is my Office,
And will haue no attorney but my selfe,
And therefore let me haue him home with me.
Ab Be patient, for I will not let him stirre,
Till I haue vs'd the approoued meanes I haue,
With wholsome syrrops, drugges, and holie prayers
To make of him a formall man againe
It is a branch and parcell of mine oath,
A charitable duetie of my order,
Therefore depart, and leaue him heere with me.
Adr. I will not hence, and leaue my husband heere
And ill it doth beseeme your holinesse
To separate the husband and the wife.
Ab Be quiet and depart, thou shalt not haue him
Luc. Complaine vnto the Duke of this iniurie
Adr. Come go, I will fall prostrate at his feete,
And neuer rise vntill my teares and prayers
Haue won his grace to come in person hither,
And take perforce my husband from the Abbesse.
Mar. By this I think the Dial points at vne
Anon the iust at the Duke hither is wont
Comes in his way to the poore Gaole daily:
The place of depositions and the execution
Beare euen the confines of the Abbey heere.
Gold. Vpon what cause?
Mar. To see a reuerent Siracusian Merchant,
Who put vnluckily into this bay
Against the Lawes and Statutes of this Towne
Beheaded publikely for his offence.
Gold. See where they come, we will beare o'th' sadam
Luc Kneele to the Duke before he passe the Abbey

Enter the Duke of Ephesus, and the Merchant of Siracusa bare headed with the Headsman, & other Officers

Duke Yet once againe proclaime it publikely,
If any friend will pay the sum for him,
He shall not die so much we tender him
Adr. Iustice most sacred Duke against the Abbesse
Duke. She is a vertuous and a reuerend Lady,
It cannot be that she hath done thee wrong.
Adr May it please your Grace, Antipholus my husband,
Who I made Lord of me, and all I had,
At your important Letters this ill day,
A mole-cast entertained of mad extasie hath:
That desperately he hurried through the streete,
With him his bondman all as mad as he,
Doing displeasure to the Citizens,
Entering in their houses, beating thence
Both men, women, children, all that crost him.
Once did I get him bound, and sent him home,
Whilst to take order for the wrongs I went,
That here and there his furie had committed.
Anon I wot not, by what strong escape
He broke from those that had the guard of him,
And with his mad attendant and himselfe,
Each one with irefull passion, with drawne swords
Met vs againe, and madly bent on vs
Chac'd vs away, till raising of more aide
We came againe to binde them: then they fled
Into this Abbey, whether we pursu'd them,
And heere the Abbesse shuts the gates on vs,
And will not suffer vs to fetch him out,
Nor send him forth, that we may beare him hence

Therefore most gracious Duke with thy command,
Let him be brought forth, and borne hence for helpe.
Duke. Long since thy husband seru'd me in my warre
And I to thee ingag'd a Princes word,
When thou didst make him Master of thy bed,
To do him all the grace and good I could.
Go some of you, knocke at the Abbey gate,
And bid the Lady Abbesse come to me
I will determine this before I stirre.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Oh Mistris, Mistris, shift and saue your selfe,
My Master and his man are both broke loose,
Beaten the Maids a-row, and bound the Doctor,
Whose beard they haue sindg'd off with brands of fire,
And euer as it blaz'd, they threw on him
Great pailes of puddled myre to quench the haire;
My Master preaches patience to him, and the while
His man with Cizers nicks him like a foole:
And sure (vnlesse you send some present helpe)
Betweene them they will kill the Conjurer.
Adr. Peace foole, thy Master and his man are here,
And that is false thou dost report to vs.
Mes. Mistris, vpon my life I tell you true,
I haue not breath'd almost since I did see it.
He cries for you, and vowes if he can take you,
To scorch your face, and to disfigure you.

Cry within.

Harke, harke, I heare him, Mistris flie, be gone.
Duke. Come stand by me, feare nothing: guard with Halberds.
Adr. Ay me, it is my husband, witnesse you,
That he is borne about inuisible,
Euen now we hous'd him in the Abbey heere,
And now he's there, past thought of humane reason.

Enter Antipholus and E. Dromio of Ephesus.

E. Ant. Iustice most gracious Duke, oh grant me iu-
Euen for the seruice that long since I did thee,
When I bestrid thee in the warres, and tooke
Deepe scarres to saue thy life, euen with the blood
That then I lost for thee, now grant me iustice.
Mar. Fat. Vnlesse the feare of death doth make me dote,
I see my sonne Antipholus and Dromio.
E. Ant. Iustice (sweet Prince) against ỹ Woman there:
She whom thou gau'st to me to be my wife;
That hath abused and dishonored me,
Euen in the strength and height of injurie.
Beyond imagination is the wrong
That she this day hath shamelesse throwne on me.
Duke. Discouer how, and thou shalt finde me iust.
E. Ant. This day (great Duke) she shut the doores vpon me,
While she with Harlots feasted in my house.
Duke. A greeuous fault: say woman, didst thou so?
Adr. No my good Lord. My selfe, he, and my sister,
To day did dine together: so befall my soule,
As this is false he burdens me withall.
Luc. Nere may I looke on day, nor sleepe on night,
But she tels to your Highnesse simple truth.
Gold. O periur'd woman! They are both forsworne,
In this the Madman iustly chargeth them.
E. Ant. My Liege, I am aduised what I say,
Neither disturbed with the effect of Wine,
Nor heady-rash prouok'd with raging ire,
Albeit my wrongs might make one wiser mad.
This woman lock'd me out this day from dinner;
That Goldsmith there, were he not pack'd with her,
Could witnesse it: for he was with me then
Who parted with me to go fetch a Chaine,
Promising to bring it to the Porpentine,
Where Balthasar and I did dine together.
Our dinner done, and he not comming thither,
I went to seeke him. In the street I met him,
And in his companie that Gentleman
There did this periur'd Goldsmith sweare me downe,
That I this day of him receiu'd the Chaine,
Which God he knowes, I saw not. For the which,
He did arrest me with an Officer
I did obey, and sent my Peasant home
For certaine Duckets: he with none return'd.
Then fairely I bespoke the Officer
To go in person with me to my house
By'th'way, we met my wife, her sister, and a rabble more
Of vilde Confederates: Along with them
They brought one Pinch, a hungry leane-fac'd Villaine,
A meere Anatomie, a Mountebanke,
A thred-bare Iugler, and a Fortune-teller,
A needy-hollow-ey'd-sharpe-looking-wretch;
A liuing dead man. This pernicious slaue,
Forsooth tooke on him as a Conjurer:
And gazing in mine eyes, feeling my pulse,
And with no-face (as 'twere) out-facing me,
Cries out, I was possest. Then altogether
They fell vpon me, bound me, bore me thence,
And in a darke and dankish vault at home
There left me and my man, both bound together,
Till gnawing with my teeth my bonds in sunder,
I gain'd my freedome; and immediately
Ran hether to your Grace, whom I beseech
To giue me ample satisfaction
For these deepe shames, and great indignities.
Gold. My Lord, in truth, thus far I witnes with him.
That he din'd not at home, but was lock'd out.
Duke. But had he such a Chaine of thee, or no?
Gold. He had my Lord, and when he ran in heere,
These people saw the Chaine about his necke.
Mar. Besides, I will be sworne these eares of mine,
Heard you confesse you had the Chaine of him,
After you first forswore it on the Mart,
And thereupon I drew my sword on you:
And then you fled into this Abbey heere,
From whence I thinke you are come by Miracle.
E. Ant. I neuer came within these Abbey walls,
Nor euer didst thou draw thy sword on me.
I neuer saw the Chaine, so helpe me heauen.
And this is false you burthen me withall.
Duke. Why what an intricate impeach is this?
I thinke you all haue drunke of Circes cup:
If here you hous'd him, here he would haue bin.
If he were mad, he would not plead so coldly:
You say he din'd at home, the Goldsmith heere
Denies that saying. Sirra, what say you?
E. Dro. Sir he din'de with her there, at the Porpentine.
Cur. He did, and from my finger snacht that Ring.
E. Ant. Tis true (my Liege) this Ring I had of her.
Duke. Saw'st thou him enter at the Abbey heere?
Cur. As sure (my Liege) as I do see your Grace.
Duke. Why this is strange: Go call the Abbesse hither
I thinke you are all mated, or starke mad.

Exit

Exit one to the Abbesse.

Fa. Most mighty Duke, vouchsafe me speak a word.
Haply I see a friend will saue my life,
And pay the sum that may deliuer me.
Duke. Speake freely Siracusian what thou wilt.
Fath. Is not your name sir call'd Antipholus?
And is not that your bondman Dromio?
E. Dro. Within this houre I was his bondman sir,
But he I thanke him gnaw'd in two my cords,
Now am I Dromio, and his man, vnbound.
Fath. I am sure you both of you remember me.
Dro. Our selues we do remember sir by you:
For lately we were bound as you are now.
You are not Pinches patient, are you sir?
Father. Why looke you strange on me? you know me well.
E. Ant. I neuer saw you in my life till now.
Fa. Oh! griefe hath chang'd me since you saw me last,
And carefull houres with times deformed hand,
Haue written strange defeatures in my face:
But tell me yet, dost thou not know my voice?
Ant. Neither.
Fat. Dromio, nor thou?
Dro. No trust me sir, nor I.
Fa. I am sure thou dost?
E. Dromio. I sir, but I am sure I do not, and whatsoeuer a man denies, you are now bound to beleeue him.
Fath. Not know my voice, oh times extremity
Hast thou so crack'd and splitted my poore tongue
In seuen short yeares, that heere my onely sonne
Knowes not my feeble key of vntun'd cares?
Though now this grained face of mine be hid
In sap-consuming Winters drizled snow,
And all the Conduits of my blood froze vp:
Yet hath my night of life some memorie:
My wasting lampes some fading glimmer left;
My dull deafe eares a little vse to heare:
All these old witnesses, I cannot erre.
Tell me, thou art my sonne Antipholus.
Ant. I neuer saw my Father in my life.
Fa. But seuen yeares since, in Siracusa boy
Thou know'st we parted, but perhaps my sonne,
Thou sham'st to acknowledge me in miserie.
Ant. The Duke, and all that know me in the City,
Can witnesse with me that it is not so.
I ne're saw Siracusa in my life.
Duke. I tell thee Siracusian, twentie yeares
Haue I bin Patron to Antipholus,
During which time, he ne're saw Siracusa:
I see thy age and dangers make thee dote.

Enter the Abbesse with Antipholus Siracusa, and Dromio Sir

Abbesse. Most mightie Duke, behold a man much wrong'd.

All gather to see them.

Adr. I see two husbands, or mine eyes deceiue me.
Duke. One of these men is genius to the other:
And so of these, which is the naturall man,
And which the spirit? Who deciphers them?
S. Dromio. I Sir am Dromio, command him away.
E. Dro. I Sir am Dromio, pray let me stay.
S. Ant. Egeon art thou not? or else his ghost.
S. Drom. Oh my olde Master, who hath bound him heere?
Abb. Who euer bound him, I will loose his bonds,
And gaine a husband by his libertie.
Speake olde Egeon, if thou bee'st the man
That hadst a wife once call'd Æmilia,
That bore thee at a burthen two faire sonnes?
Oh if thou bee'st the same Egeon, speake:
And speake vnto the same Æmilia
Duke Why heere begins his Morning storie right:
These two Antipholus, these two so like,
And these two Dromio's, one in semblance:
Besides her vrging of her wracke at sea,
These are the parents to these children,
Which accidentally are met together.
Fa. If I dreame not, thou art Æmilia,
If thou art she, tell me, where is that sonne
That floated with thee on the fatall raft
Abb. By men of Epidamnum, he, and I,
And the twin Dromio, all were taken vp;
But by and by, rude Fishermen of Corinth
By force tooke Dromio, and my sonne from them,
And me they left with those of Epidamnum.
What then became of them, I cannot tell:
I, to this fortune that you see me in.
Duke. Antipholus thou cam'st from Corinth first:
S. Ant. No sir, not I, I came from Siracuse
Duke. Stay, stand apart, I know not which is which
E. Ant. I came from Corinth my most gracious Lord
E Dro. And I with him.
E. Ant. Brought to this Town by that most famous Warriour,
Duke Menaphon, your most renowned Vncle.
Adr. Which of you two did dine with me to day?
S. Ant. I, gentle Mistris
Adr. And are not you my husband?
E. Ant. No, I say nay to that
S. Ant. And so do I, yet did she call me so.
And this faire Gentlewoman her sister heere
Did call me brother. What I told you then,
I hope I shall haue leisure to make good,
If this be not a dreame I see and heare.
Goldsmith. That is the Chaine sir, which you had of mee.
S Ant. I thinke it be sir, I deny it not.
E. Ant. And you sir for this Chaine arrested me.
Gold I thinke I did sir, I deny it not.
Adr I sent you money sir to be your bayle
By Dromio, but I thinke he brought it not.
E Dro. No, none by me.
S. Ant. This purse of Duckets I receiu'd from you,
And Dromio my man did bring them me:
I see we still did meete each others man,
And I was tane for him, and he for me,
And thereupon these errors are arose.
E Ant. These Duckets pawne I for my father heere
Duke. It shall not needs, thy father hath his life.
Cur. Sir I must haue that Diamond from you.
E. Ant. There take it, and much thanks for my good cheere
Abb. Renowned Duke, vouchsafe to take the paines
To go with vs into the Abbey heere,
And heare at large discoursed all our fortunes,
And all that are assembled in this place:
That by this simpathized one dayes error
Haue suffer'd wrong. Goe, keepe vs companie,

And we shall make full satisfaction.
Thirtie three yeares haue I but gone in trauaile
Of you my sonnes, and till this present houre
My heauie burthen are deliuered:
The Duke my husband, and my children both,
And you the kalenders of their Nativity,
Go to a Gossips feast, and go with mee,
After so long greefe such Nativitie.
Duke. With all my heart, Ile Gossip at this feast.

Exeunt omnes. Manet the two Dromio's and two Brothers.

S. Dro. Master, shall I fetch your stuffe from shipboard?
E. An Dromio, what stuffe of mine hast thou embarkt
S. Dro Your goods that lay at host for in the Centaur.
S. Ant He speakes to me, I am your master Dromio.
Come go with vs, wee'l looke to that anon,
Embrace thy brother there, reioyce with him. Exit
S. Dro. There is a fat friend at your masters house,
That kitchin'd me for you to day at dinner:
She now shall be my sister, not my wife,
E. D Me thinks you are my glasse, & not my brother:
I see by you, I am a sweet-fac'd youth,
Will you walke in to see their gossipping?
S. Dro. Not I sir, you are my elder.
E. Dro. That's a question, how shall we trie it.
S. Dro. We'l draw Cuts for the Signior, till then, lead thou first
E. Dro. Nay then thus:
We came into the world like brother and brother:
And now let's go hand in hand, not one before another
Exeunt.

FINIS.

Much adoe about Nothing.

Actus primus, Scena prima.

Enter Leonato Gouernour of Messina, Innogen his wife, Hero his daughter, and Beatrice his Neece, with a messenger

Leonato.

I Learne in this Letter, that Don Peter of Arragon comes this night to Messina

Messe He is very neere by this: he was not three Leagues off when I left him

Leon. How many Gentlemen haue you lost in this action?

Messe But few of any sort, and none of name

Leon A victorie is twice it selfe, when the charge-full numbers: I finde heere that Don Peter hath bestowed much honor on a young Florentine, called Claudio.

Messe. Much deserued on his part, and equally remembred by Don Pedro, he hath borne himselfe beyond the promise of his age, doing in the figure of a Lambe, the feats of a Lion, he hath indeede better better'd expectation, then you must expect of me to tell you how.

Leo. He hath an Vncle heere in Messina, will be very much glad of it.

Messe. I haue already deliuered him letters, and there appeares much ioy in him, euen so much, that ioy could not shew it selfe modest enough, without a badge of bitternesse.

Leo. Did he breake out into teares?

Messe. In great measure

Leo. A kinde ouerflow of kindnesse, there are no faces truer, then those that are so washt, how much better is it to weepe at ioy then to ioy at weeping?

Bea. I pray you, is Signior Mountanto returned from the warres, or no?

Messe. I know none of that name, Lady, there was none such in the armie of any sort.

Leon. What is he that you aske for Neece?

Hero. My cousin meanes Signior Benedick of Padua

Messe. O he's returned, and as pleasant as euer he was.

Bear. He set vp his bils here in Messina, & challenged Cupid at the Flight, and my Vncle's foole reading the Challenge, subscribed for Cupid, and challenged him at the Burbolt. I pray you, how many hath he kil'd and eaten in these warres? But how many hath he kil'd? for indeed, I promis'd to eate all of his killing.

Leon. 'Faith Neece, you taxe Signior Benedicke too much, but he'l be meet with you, I doubt it not

Messe He hath done good seruice Lady in these wars.

Bear. You had musty victuall, and he hath holpe to eate it: he's a very valiant Trencher-man, he hath an excellent stomacke.

Messe And a good souldier too Lady.

Bear. And a good souldier to a Lady. But what is he to a Lord?

Messe A Lord to a Lord, a man to a man, stuft with all honourable vertues

Bear. It is so indeed, he is no lesse then a stuft man: but for the stuffing, well, we are all mortall

Leon. You must not (sir) mistake my Neece, there is a kind of merry warre betwixt Signior Benedick, & her: they neuer meet, but there's a skirmish of wit between them.

Bea. Alas, he gets nothing by that. In our last conflict, foure of his fiue wits went halting off, and now is the whole man gouerned with one: so that if he haue wit enough to keepe himselfe warme, let him beare it for a difference betweene himselfe and his horse. For it is all the wealth that he hath left, to be knowne a reasonable creature. Who is his companion now? He hath euery month a new sworne brother

Messe Is't possible?

Bear Very easily possible: he weares his faith but as the fashion of his hat, it euer changes with the next block

Messe. I see (Lady) the Gentleman is not in your booke

Bea. No, and he were, I would burne my study. But I pray you, who is his companion? Is there no young squarer now, that will make a voyage with him to the diuell?

Messe He is most in the company of the right noble Claudio.

Bea. O Lord, he will hang vpon him like a disease: he is sooner caught then the pestilence, and the taker runs presently mad. God helpe the noble Claudio: if he haue caught the Benedick, it will cost him a thousand pound ere he be cur'd

Messe I will hold friends with you Lady.

Bea. Do good friend.

Leo. You will neere run mad Neece.

Iohn. No, not till a hot Ianuary

Messe Don Pedro is approached.

Enter don Pedro Claudio Benedicke, Baltheser, and Iohn the bastard

Pedro. Good Signior Leonato, you are come to meet your trouble: the fashion of the world is to auoid cost, and you encounter it

Leon. Neuer came trouble to my house in the likenes of your Grace: for trouble being gone, comfort should remaine: but when you depart from me, sorrow abides, and happinesse takes his leaue.

Pedro You embrace your charge too willingly. I thinke this is your daughter.

Leonato. Her mother hath many times told me so

Benedi. Were you in doubt that you askt her?

Leonato. Signior Benedicke, no, for then were you a childe.

Pedro. You haue it full Benedicke, we may ghesse by this, what you are, being a man, truely the Lady fathers her selfe: be happie Lady, for you are like an honorable father.

Ben. If Signior Leonato be her father, she would not haue his head on her shoulders for al Messina, as like him as she is

Beat I wonder that you will still be talking, signior Benedicke, no body markes you.

Ben. What my deere Lady Disdaine! are you yet liuing?

Beat Is it possible Disdaine should die, while she hath such meete foode to feede it, as Signior Benedicke? Curtesie it selfe must conuert to Disdaine, if you come in her presence

Bene. Then is curtesie a turne-coate, but it is certaine I am loued of all Ladies, only you excepted: and I would I could finde in my heart that I had not a hard heart, for truely I loue none.

Beat. A deere happinesse to women they would else haue beene troubled with a pernicious Suter. I thanke God and my cold blood, I am of your humour for that, I had rather heare my Dog barke at a Crow, than a man sweare he loues me

Bene. God keepe your Ladiship still in that mind, so some Gentleman or other shall scape a predestinate scratcht face

Beat. Scratching could not make it worse, and 'twere such a face as yours were.

Bene. Well, you are a rare Parrat teacher.

Beat. A bird of my tongue, is better than a beast of yours

Ben. I would my horse had the speed of your tongue, and so good a continuer, but keepe your way a Gods name, I haue done.

Beat. You alwaies end with a Iades tricke, I know you of old.

Pedro. This is the summe of all: Leonato, signior Claudio, and signior Benedicke; my deere friend Leonato, hath inuited you all, I tell him we shall stay here, at the least a moneth, and he heartily prayes some occasion may detaine vs longer: I dare sweare hee is no hypocrite, but prayes from his heart

Leon. If you sweare, my Lord, you shall not be forsworne. let mee bid you welcome, my Lord, being reconciled to the Prince your brother: I owe you all duetie.

Iohn. I thanke you, I am not of many words, but I thanke you.

Leon. Please it your grace leade on?

Pedro. Your hand Leonato, we will goe together.

Exeunt. Manet Benedicke and Claudio.

Clau. Benedicke, didst thou note the daughter of signior Leonato?

Bene. I noted her not, but I looke on her.

Clau. Is she not a modest yong Ladie?

Bene Doe you question me as an honest man should doe, for my simple true iudgement? or would you haue me speake after my custome, as being a professed tyrant to their sexe?

Clau. No, I pray thee speake in sober iudgement.

Bene: Why yfaith me thinks shee's too low for a hie praise, too browne for a faire praise, and too little for a great praise, onely this commendation I can affoord her, that were shee other then she is, she were vnhandsome, and being no other, but as she is, I doe not like her.

Clau. Thou think'st I am in sport, I pray thee tell me truely how thou lik'st her.

Bene. Would you buie her, that you enquier after her?

Clau. Can the world buie such a Iewell?

Ben. Yea, and a case to put it into, but speake you this with a sad brow? Or doe you play the flowting iacke, to tell vs Cupid is a good Hare-finder, and Vulcan a rare Carpenter: Come, in what key shall a man take you to goe in the song?

Clau. In mine eie, she is the sweetest Ladie that euer I looke on.

Bene. I can see yet without spectacles, and I see no such matter: there's her cosin, and she were not possest with a furie, exceedes her as much in beautie, as the first of May doth the last of December: but I hope you haue no intent to turne husband, haue you?

Clau. I would scarce trust my selfe, though I had sworne the contrarie, if Hero would be my wife.

Bene Is't come to this? in faith hath not the world one man but he will weare his cap with suspition? shall I neuer see a batchelor of three score againe? goe to yfaith, an thou wilt needes thrust thy necke into a yoke, weare the print of it, and sigh away Sundaies: looke, don Pedro is returned to seeke you

Enter don Pedro, Iohn the bastard.

Pedr. What secret hath held you here, that you followed not to Leonatoes?

Benedi. I would your Grace would constraine mee to tell

Pedro. I charge thee on thy allegeance.

Ben. You heare, Count Claudio, I can be secret as a dumbe man, I would haue you thinke so (but on my allegiance, marke you this, on my allegiance) hee is in loue, With who? now that is your Graces part: marke how short his answere is, with Hero, Leonatoes short daughter.

Clau. If this were so, so were it vttred.

Benedi. Like the old tale, my Lord: it is not so, nor 'twas not so: but indeede, God forbid it should be so.

Clau. If my passion change not shortly, God forbid it should be otherwise.

Pedro. Amen, if you loue her, for the Ladie is verie well worthie

Clau. You speake this to fetch me in, my Lord.

Pedr. By my troth I speake my thought.

Clau. And in faith, my Lord, I spoke mine.

Benedi. And by my two faiths and troths, my Lord, I speake mine

Clau. That I loue her, I feele.

Pedr. That she is worthie, I know.

Benedi. That I neither feele how shee should be loued, nor know how shee should be worthie, is the opinion that fire cannot melt out of me, I will die in it at the stake.

Pedr. Thou wast euer an obstinate heretique in the despight of Beautie.

Clau. And neuer could maintaine his part, but in the force of his will.

Bene. That

Bene. That a woman conceiued me, I thanke her: that she brought me vp, I likewise giue her most humble thankes: but that I will haue a recheate winded in my forehead, or hang my bugle in an inuisible baldricke, all women shall pardon me: because I will not do them the wrong to mistrust any, I will doe my selfe the right to trust none: and the fine is, (for the which I may goe the finer) I will liue a Batchellor.

Pedro. I shall see thee ere I die, looke pale with loue.

Bene. With anger, with sicknesse, or with hunger, my Lord, not with loue: proue that euer I loose more blood with loue, then I will get againe with drinking, picke out mine eyes with a Ballet-makers pen, and hang me vp at the doore of a brothel-house for the sign of blinde Cupid

Pedro. Well, if euer thou dost fall from this faith, thou wilt proue a notable argument.

Bene. If I do, hang me in a bottle like a Cat & shoot at me, and he that hits me, let him be clapt on the shoulder, and cal'd Adam

Pedro. Well, as time shall trie: In time the sauage Bull doth beare the yoake.

Bene. The sauage bull may, but if euer the sensible Benedicke beare it, pluck off the bulles hornes, and set them in my forehead, and let me be vildely painted, and in such great Letters as they write, heere is good horse to hire: let them signifie vnder my sign, here you may see Benedicke the married man.

Clau. If this should euer happen, thou wouldst bee horne mad.

Pedro. Nay, if Cupid haue not spent all his Quiuer in Venice, thou wilt quake for this shortly.

Bene. I looke for an earthquake too then

Pedro. Well, you will temporize with the houres, in the meane time, good Signior Benedicke, repaire to Leonatos, commend me to him, and tell him I will not faile him at supper, for indeede he hath made great preparation.

Bene. I haue almost matter enough in me for such an Embassage, and so I commit you

Clau. To the tuition of God. From my house, if I had it.

Pedro. The fixt of July. Your louing friend, Benedick

Bene. Nay mocke not, mocke not, the body of your discourse is sometime guarded with fragments, and the guardes are but slightly basted on neither, ere you flout old ends any further, examine your conscience, and so I leaue you. Exit

Clau. My Liege, your Highnesse now may doe me good.

Pedro. My loue is thine to teach, teach it but how,
And thou shalt see how apt it is to learne
Any hard Lesson that may do thee good.

Clau. Hath Leonato any sonne my Lord?

Pedro. No childe but Hero, she's his only heire.
Dost thou affect her Claudio?

Clau. O my Lord,
When you went onward on this ended action,
I look'd vpon her with a souldiers eie,
That lik'd, but had a rougher taske in hand,
Than to driue liking to the name of loue
But now I am return'd, and that warre-thoughts
Haue left their places vacant: in their roomes,
Come thronging soft and delicate desires,
All prompting me how fayre yong Hero is,
Saying I lik'd her ere I went to warres.

Pedro. Thou wilt be like a louer presently,
And tire the hearer with a booke of words.
If thou dost loue faire Hero, cherish it,
And I will breake with her. Wast not to this end,
That thou beganst to twist so fine a story?

Clau. How sweetly doe you minister to loue,
That know loues griefe by his complexion!
But lest my liking might too sodaine seeme,
I would haue salu'd it with a longer treatise.

Ped What need ŷ bridge much broder then the flood?
The fayrest grant is the necessitie:
Looke what will serue, is fit: 'tis once, thou louest,
And I will fit thee with the remedie,
I know we shall haue reuelling to night,
I will assume thy part in some disguise,
And tell fayre Hero I am Claudio,
And in her bosome Ile vnclaspe my heart,
And take her hearing prisoner with the force
And strong encounter of my amorous tale:
Then after, to her father will I breake,
And the conclusion is, shee shall be thine,
In practise let vs put it presently. Exeunt

Enter Leonato and an old man, brother to Leonato.

Leo. How now brother, where is my coosen your sonne: hath he prouided this musicke?

Old. He is very busie about it, but brother, I can tell you newes that you yet dreamt not of.

Leo. Are they good?

Old. As the euents stamps them, but they haue a good couer: they shew well outward, the Prince and Count Claudio walking in a thick pleached alley in my orchard, were thus ouer-heard by a man of mine: the Prince discouered to Claudio that hee loued my neece your daughter and meant to acknowledge it this night in a dance, and if hee found her accordant, hee meant to take the present time by the top, and instantly breake with you of it.

Leo. Hath the fellow any wit that told you this?

Old. A good sharpe fellow, I will send for him, and question him your selfe.

Leo. No no; wee will hold it as a dreame till it appeare it selfe: but I will acquaint my daughter withall, that she may be the better prepared for an answer, if peradenture this be true. Go you and tell her of it. Cousins, you know what you haue to doe. O I cry you mercie friend, goe you with mee and I will vse your skill. good cosin haue a care this busie time. Exeunt

Enter Sir Iohn the Bastard, and Conrade his companion

Con. What the good yeere my Lord, why are you thus out of measure sad?

Iohn. There is no measure in the occasion that breeds, therefore the sadnesse is without limit.

Con. You should heare reason.

Iohn. And when I haue heard it, what blessing bringeth it?

Con. If not a present remedy, yet a patient sufferance.

Iohn. I wonder that thou (being as thou saist thou art, borne vnder Saturne) goest about to apply a morall medicine, to a mortifying mischiefe: I cannot hide what I am: I must bee sad when I haue cause, and smile at no mans iests, eat when I haue stomacke, and wait for no mans leisure sleepe when I am drowsie, and tend on no mans businesse, laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humor.

Con. Yea, but you must not make the full show of this, till you may doe it without controlment, you haue of late late stood out against your brother, and hee hath tane you newly into his grace, where it is impossible you should take root, but by the faire weather that you make your selfe, it is needfull that you frame the season for your owne haruest.

Iohn. I had rather be a canker in a hedge, then a rose in his grace, and it better fits my blood to be disdain'd of all, then to fashion a carriage to rob loue from any in this (though I cannot be said to be a flattering honest man) it must not be denied but I am a plaine dealing villaine. I am trusted with a muzzell, and enfranchised with a clog, therefore I haue decreed, not to sing in my cage: if I had my mouth, I would bite: if I had my liberty, I would do my liking: in the meane time, let me be that I am, and seeke not to alter me.

Con. Can you make no vse of your discontent?

Iohn. I will make all vse of it, for I vse it onely
Who comes here? what newes Borachio?

Enter Borachio.

Bor. I came yonder from a great supper, the Prince your brother is royall verily: marry it is to be Hero, and I can giue you intelligence of an intended marriage.

Iohn. Will it serue for any Modell to build mischiefe on? What is hee for a foole that betrothes himselfe to vnquietnesse?

Bor. Marry it is your brothers right hand.

Iohn. Who, the most exquisite Claudio?

Bor. Euen he.

Iohn. A proper squire, and who, and what, which way lookes he?

Bor. Marry on Hero, the daughter and Heire of Leonato.

Iohn. A very forward March-chicke, how came you acquainted?

Bor. Being entertain'd for a perfumer, as I was smoaking a musty roome, comes me the Prince and Claudio, hand in hand in sad conference: I whipt behind the Arras and there heard it agreed vpon, that the Prince should woo Hero for himselfe, and hauing obtain'd her, giue her to Count Claudio.

Iohn. Come, come, let vs thither, this may proue food to my displeasure, that young start-vp hath all the glorie of my ouerthrow: if I can crosse him any way, I bleese my selfe euery way, you are both sure, and will assist mee?

Conr. To the death my Lord.

Iohn. Let vs to the great supper, their cheere is the greater that I am subdued, would the Cooke were of my minde: shall we goe proue what's to be done?

Bor. Wee'll wait vpon your Lordship.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Leonato, his brother, his wife, Hero his daughter, and Beatrice his neece, and a kinsman.

Leonato. Was not Count Iohn here at supper?

Brother. I saw him not.

Beatrice. How tartly that Gentleman lookes, I neuer can see him, but I am heart-burn'd an howre after.

Hero. He is of a very melancholy disposition.

Beatrice. Hee were an excellent man that were made iust in the mid way betweene him and Benedicke, the one is too like an image and saies nothing, and the other too like my Ladies eldest sonne, euermore tatling.

Leon. Then haue Signior Benedicks tongue in Count Iohns mouth, and haue Count Iohns melancholy in Signior Benedicks face.

Beat. With a good legge, and a good foot vncle, and money enough in his purse, such a man would winne any woman in the world, if he could get her good will.

Leon. By my troth Neece, thou wilt neuer get thee a husband, if thou be so shrewd of thy tongue.

Brother. In faith shee's too curst.

Beat. Too curst is more then curst, I shall lessen Gods sending that way: for it is said, God sends a curst Cow short hornes, but to a Cow too curst he sends none.

Leon. So, by being too curst, God will send you no hornes.

Beat. Iust, if he send me no husband, for the which blessing I am at him vpon my knees euery morning and euening: Lord, I could not endure a husband with a beard on his face, I had rather lie in the woollen.

Leonato. You may light vpon a husband that hath no beard.

Beatrice. What should I doe with him? dresse him in my apparell, and make him my waiting gentlewoman? he that hath a beard, is more then a youth, and he that hath no beard, is lesse then a man: and he that is more then a youth, is not for me: and he that is lesse then a man, I am not for him: therefore I will euen take sixepence in earnest of the Berrord, and leade his Apes into hell.

Leon. Well then, goe you into hell.

Beat. No, but to the gate, and there will the Deuill meete mee like an old Cuckold with hornes on his head, and say, get you to heauen Beatrice, get you to heauen, heere's no place for you maids, so deliuer I vp my Apes, and away to S. Peter: for the heauens, hee shewes mee where the Batchellers sit, and there liue we as merry as the day is long.

Brother. Well neece, I trust you will be rul'd by your father.

Beatrice. Yes faith, it is my cosens duetie to make curtsie, and say, as it please you: but yet for all that cosin, let him be a handsome fellow, or else make an other curtsie, and say, father, as it please me.

Leonato. Well neece, I hope to see you one day fitted with a husband.

Beatrice. Not till God make men of some other mettall then earth, would it not grieue a woman to be ouermastred with a peece of valiant dust? to make account of her life to a clod of wayward marle? no vncle, ile none: Adams sonnes are my brethren, and truly I hold it a sinne to match in my kinred.

Leon. Daughter, remember what I told you, if the Prince doe solicit you in that kinde, you know your answere.

Beatrice. The fault will be in the musicke cosin, if you be not woed in good time: if the Prince be too important, tell him there is measure in euery thing, and so dance out the answere, for heare me Hero, wooing, wedding, and repenting, is as a Scotch iigge, a measure, and a cinque-pace: the first suite is hot and hasty like a Scotch iigge (and full as fantasticall) the wedding mannerly modest, (as a measure) full of state & ancientry, and then comes repentance, and with his bad legs falls into the cinque-pace faster and faster, till he sinkes into his graue.

Leonato.

Leonato. Coſin you apprehend paſſing ſhrewdly.

Beatrice I haue a good eye vncle, I can ſee a Church by day-light

Leon. The reuellers are entring brother, make good roome.

Enter Prince, Pedro, Claudio and Benedicke, and Balthaſar, or dumbe Iohn, Maskers with a drum.

Pedro. Lady, will you walke about with your friend?

Hero. So you walke ſoftly, and looke ſweetly, and ſay nothing, I am yours for the walke, and eſpecially when I walke away

Pedro. With me in your company.

Hero. I may ſay ſo when I pleaſe.

Pedro And when pleaſe you to ſay ſo?

Hero. When I like your fauour, for God defend the Lute ſhould be like the caſe.

Pedro. My viſor is Penthemons roofe, with a the houſe is Loue.

Hero. Why then your viſor ſhould be thatcht.

Pedro. Speake low if you ſpeake Loue.

Bene. Well, I would you did like me

Marg. So would not I for your owne ſake, for I haue many ill qualities

Bene Which is one?

Marg I ſay my prayers aloud.

Ben I loue you the better, the hearers may cry Amen

Marg God match me with a good dancer.

Balt. Amen

Marg. And God keepe him out of my ſight when the dance is done, answer Clarke

Balt. No more words the Clarke is answered.

Vrſula. I know you well enough, you are Signior Anthonio

Anth. At a word, I am not

Vrſula. I know you by the waggling of your head.

Anth To tell you true, I counterfeit him.

Vrſu. You could neuer do him ſo ill, vnleſſe you were the very man. Here's his dry hand vp & down you are he, you are he

Anth At a word I am not.

Vrſula Come come, do you think I do not know you by your excellent wit? can vertue hide it ſelfe? go to, mumme, you are he, graces will appeare, and there's an end.

Beat. Will you not tell me who told you ſo?

Bene No, you ſhall pardon me.

Beat Nor will you not tell me who you are?

Bened. Not now.

Beat That I was diſdainfull, and that I had my good wit out of the hundred merry tales: well, that was Signior Benedicke that ſaid ſo.

Bene. What's he?

Beat I am ſure you know him well enough

Bene Not I, beleeue me

Beat. Did he neuer make you laugh?

Bene. I pray you what is he?

Beat Why he is the Princes leaſter, a very dull foole, only his gift is, in deuiſing impoſſible ſlanders, none but Libertines delight in him, and the commendation is not in his wit, but in his villanie, for he both pleaſeth men and angers them, and then they laugh at him, and beat him. I am ſure he is in the Fleet, I would he had boorded me

Bene. When I know the Gentleman, Ile tell him what you ſay.

Beat. Do, do, he'l but breake a compariſon or two on me, which peraduenture (not marked, or not laught at) ſtrikes him into melancholy, and then there's a Partridge wing ſaued, for the foole will eate no ſupper that night. We muſt follow the Leaders.

Ben In euery good thing.

Beat. Nay, if they leade to any ill, I will leaue them at the next turning. Exeunt

Muſicke for the dance

Iohn. Sure my brother is amorous on Hero, and hath withdrawne her father to breake with him about it. the Ladies follow her, and but one viſor remaines

Borachio. And that is Claudio, I know him by his bearing

Iohn. Are not you Signior Benedicke?

Claud. You know me well, I am ſure.

Iohn Signior, you are very neere my Brother in his loue, he is enamor'd on Hero, I pray you diſwade him from her, ſhe is no equall for his birth you may do the part of an honeſt man in it.

Claudio. How know you he loues her?

Iohn. I heard him ſweare his affection.

Bor. So did I too, and he ſwore he would marrie her to night.

Iohn Come, let vs to the banquet. Exeunt Claud Thus anſwere I in name of Benedicke,

But heare theſe newes with the eares of Claudio

'Tis certaine ſo, the Prince woes for himſelfe:

Friendſhip is conſtant in all other things,

Saue in the Office and affaires of loue:

Therefore all hearts in loue vſe their owne tongues.

Let euery eye negotiate for it ſelfe,

And truſt no Agent: for beautie is a witch,

Againſt whoſe charmes, faith melteth into blood.

This is an accident of houſely proofe,

Which I miſtruſted not. Farewell therefore Hero.

Enter Benedicke.

Ben Count Claudio.

Clau Yea the ſame

Ben. Come, will you go with me?

Clau Whither?

Ben Euen to the next Willow, about your own buſineſſe, Count. What faſhion will you weare the Garland of? about your neck, like an Vſurers chaine? Or vnder your arme, like a Lieutenants ſcarfe? You muſt weare it one way, for the Prince hath got your Hero.

Clau. I wiſh him ioy of her.

Ben Why that's ſpoken like an honeſt Drouier, ſo they ſel Bullockes: but did you think the Prince would haue ſerued you thus?

Clau. I pray you leaue me.

Ben Ho now you ſtrike like the blind man, 'twas the boy that ſtole your meate, and you'l beat the poſt.

Clau If it will not be, Ile leaue you. Exit.

Ben. Alas poore hurt fowle, now will he creepe into ſedges. But that my Ladie Beatrice ſhould know me, & not know me! The Princes foole! Ha? It may be I goe vnder that title, becauſe I am merrie. yea but ſo I am apt to do my ſelfe wrong. I am not ſo reputed, it is the bate (though bitter) diſpoſition of Beatrice, that puts the world into her perſon, and ſo gaues me out. well, Ile be reuenged as I may.

Enter the Prince.

Pedro. Now Signior, where's the Count, did you ſee him?

Ben

Bene. Troth my Lord, I haue played the part of Lady Fame. I found him heere as melancholy as a Lodge in a Warren, I told him, and I thinke, told him true, that your grace had got the will of this young Lady. and I offered him my company to a willow tree, either to make him a garland, as being forsaken, or to binde him a rod, as being worthy to be whipt.

Pedro. To be whipt, what's his fault?

Bene. The flat transgression of a Schoole-boy, who being ouer-ioyed with finding a birds nest, shewes it his companion, and he steales it.

Pedro. Wilt thou make a trust, a transgression? the transgression is in the stealer.

Ben. Yet it had not beene amisse the rod had beene made, and the garland too, for the garland he might haue worne himselfe, and the rod hee might haue bestowed on you, who (as I take it) haue stolne his birds nest.

Pedro. I will but teach them to sing, and restore them to the owner

Bene. If their singing answer your saying, by my faith you say honestly.

Pedro. The Lady Beatrice hath a quarrell to you, the Gentleman that daunst with her, told her shee is much wrong'd by you.

Bene. O she misused me past the indurance of a block: an oake but with one greene leafe on it, would haue answered her: my very visor began to assume life, and scold with her: shee told mee, not thinking I had beene my selfe, that I was the Princes Iester, and that I was duller then a great thaw, huddling iest vpon iest, with such impossible conueiance vpon me, that I stood like a man at a marke, with a whole army shooting at me: shee speakes poynyards, and euery word stabbes: if her breath were as terrible as her terminations, there were no liuing neere her, she would infect to the north starre: I would not marry her, though she were indowed with all that Adam had left him before he transgrest, she would haue made Hercules haue turned spit, yea, and haue cleft his club to make the fire too: come, talke not of her, you shall finde her the infernall Ate in good apparell. I would to God some scholler would coniure her, for certainely while she is heere, a man may liue as quiet in hell, as in a sanctuary, and people sinne vpon purpose, because they would goe thither, so indeed all disquiet, horror, and perturbation follows her.

Enter Claudio and Beatrice, Leonato, Hero.

Pedro. Looke heere she comes

Bene. Will your Grace command mee any seruice to the worlds end? I will goe on the slightest arrand now to the Antypodes that you can deuise to send me on: I will fetch you a tooth-picker now from the furthest inch of Asia, bring you the length of Prester Iohns foot: fetch you a hayre off the great Cham's beard: doe you any embassage to the Pigmies, rather then hold three words conference, with this Harpy: you haue no employment for me?

Pedro. None, but to desire your good company.

Bene. O God sir, heeres a dish I loue not, I cannot indure this Lady tongue. Exit

Pedr. Come Lady, come, you haue lost the heart of Signior Benedicke

Beatr. Indeed my Lord, hee lent it me a while, and I gaue him vse for it, a double heart for a single one, marry once before he wonne it of me, with false dice, therefore your Grace may well say I haue lost it.

Pedro. You haue put him downe Lady, you haue put him downe.

Beat. So I would not he should do me, my Lord, least I should prouoke the mother of fooles: I haue brought Count Claudio, whom you sent me to seeke.

Pedro. Why how now Count, wherfore are you sad?

Claud. Not sad my Lord

Pedro. How then? sicke?

Claud. Neither, my Lord.

Beat. The Count is neither sad, nor sicke, nor merry, nor well: but ciuill Count, ciuill as an Orange, and something of a iealous complexion

Pedro. I faith Lady, I thinke your blazon to be true, though I'le be sworne, if hee be so, his conceit is false: heere Claudio, I haue wooed in thy name, and faire Hero is won, I haue broke with her father, and his good will obtained, name the day of marriage, and God giue thee ioy.

Leona. Count, take of me my daughter, and with her my fortunes: his grace hath made the match, & all grace say, Amen to it.

Beatr. Speake Count, tis your Qu.

Claud. Silence is the perfectest Herault of ioy, I were but little happy if I could say, how much? Lady, as you are mine, I am yours, I giue away my selfe for you, and dote vpon the exchange.

Beat. Speake cosin, or (if you cannot) stop his mouth with a kisse, and let not him speake neither.

Pedro. Infaith Lady you haue a merry heart.

Beatr. Yea my Lord I thanke it, poore foole it keepes on the windy side of Care, my cosin tells him in his eare that he is in my heart.

Claud. And so she doth cosin

Beat. Good Lord for alliance: thus goes euery one to the world but I, and I am sun-burn'd, I may sit in a corner and cry, heigh ho for a husband.

Pedro. Lady Beatrice, I will get you one

Beat. I would rather haue one of your fathers getting: hath your Grace ne're a brother like you? your father got excellent husbands, if a maid could come by them.

Prince. Will you haue me? Lady.

Beat. No, my Lord, vnlesse I might haue another for working-dates, your Grace is too costly to weare euery day: but I beseech your Grace pardon mee, I was borne to speake all mirth, and no matter.

Prince. Your silence most offends me, and to be merry, best becomes you, for out of question, you were born in a merry howre.

Beatr. No sure my Lord, my Mother cried, but then there was a starre danst, and vnder that was I borne: cosins God giue you ioy.

Leonato. Neece, will you looke to those things I told you of?

Beat. I cry you mercy Vncle, by your Graces pardon. Exit Beatrice.

Prince. By my troth a pleasant spirited Lady.

Leon. There's little of the melancholy element in her my Lord, she is neuer sad, but when she sleepes, and not euer sad then: for I haue heard my daughter say, she hath often dreamt of vnhappinesse, and waked her selfe with laughing.

Pedro. Shee cannot indure to heare tell of a husband.

Leonato. O, by no meanes, she mocks all her wooers out of suite.

Prince. She were an excellent wife for Benedick.

Leonato. O Lord, my Lord, if they were but a weeke married, married, they would talke themselues madde

Prince. Cosonte Claudio, when meane you to goe to Church?

Clau. To morrow my Lord, Time goes on crutches, till Loue haue all his rites

Leonato. Not till monday, my deare sonne, which is hence a iust seuen night, and a time too briefe too, to haue all things answer'd inde

Prince. Come, you shake the head at so long a breathing, but I warrant thee Claudio, the time shall not goe dully by vs, I will in the interim, vndertake one of Hercules labors, which is, to bring Signior Benedicke and the Lady Beatrice into a mountaine of affection, th'one with th'other, I would faine haue it a match, and I doubt not but to fash on it, if you three will but minister such assistance as I shall giue you direction.

Leonato. My Lord, I am for you, though it cost mee ten nights watchings.

Claud. And I my Lord.

Prin. And you to gentle Hero?

Hero. I will doe any modest office, my Lord, to helpe my cosin to a good husband.

Prin. And Benedick is not the vnhopefull'est husband that I know. thus farre can I praise him, hee is of a noble straine, of approued valour, and confirm'd honestie. I will teach you how to humour your cosin, that shee shall fall in loue with Benedicke, and I, with your two helpes, will so practise on Benedicke, that in despight of his quicke wit, and his queasie stomacke, hee shall fall in loue with Beatrice: if wee can doe this, Cupid is no longer an Archer, his glory shall be ours, for wee are the onely loue-gods, goe in with me, and I will tell you my drift. Exit.

Enter Iohn and Borachio.

Iohn. It is so, the Count Claudio shal marry the daughter of Leonato.

Bora. Yea my Lord, but I can crosse it.

Iohn. Any barre, any crosse, any impediment, will be medicinable to me, I am sicke in displeasure to him, and whatsoeuer comes athwart his affection, ranges euenly with mine, how canst thou crosse this marriage?

Bor. Not honestly my Lord, but so couertly, that no dishonestie shall appeare in me.

Iohn. Shew me breefely how.

Bor. I thinke I told your Lordship a yeere since, how much I am in the fauour of Margaret, the waiting gentlewoman to Hero.

Iohn. I remember

Bor. I can at any vnseasonable instant of the night, appoint her to look out at her Ladies chamber window.

Iohn. What life is in that, to be the death of this marriage?

Bor. The poyson of that lies in you to temper, goe you to the Prince your brother, spare not to tell him, that hee hath wronged his Honor in marrying the renowned Claudio, whose estimation do you mightily hold vp, to a contaminated stale, such a one as Hero.

Iohn What proofe shall I make of that?

Bor Proofe enough, to misuse the Prince, to vexe Claudio, to vndoe Hero, and kill Leonato, looke you for any other issue?

Iohn. Onely to despight them, I will endeauour any thing.

Bor. Goe then, finde me a meete howre, to draw on Pedro and the Count Claudio alone, tell them that you know that Hero loues me, intend a kinde of zeale both to the Prince and Claudio, (as in a loue of your brothers honor who hath made this match) and his friends reputation, who is thus like to be cosen'd with the semblance of a maid, that you haue discouer'd thus: they will scarcely beleeue this without triall: offer them instances which shall beare no lesse likelihood, than to see me at her chamber window, heare me call Margaret Hero; heare Margaret terme me Claudio, and bring them to see this the very night before the intended wedding, for in the meane time, I will so fashion the matter, that Hero shall be absent, and there shall appeare such seeming truths of Heroes disloyaltie that iealousie shall be call'd assurance, and all the preparation ouerthrowne.

Iohn. Grow this is to what aduerse issue it can, I will put in practise: be cunning in the working this, and thy fee is a thousand ducates

Bor. Be thou constant in the accusation, and my cunning shall not shame me.

Iohn. I will presently goe learne their day of marriage Exit.

Enter Benedicke alone.

Bene. Boy.

Boy. Signior.

Bene. In my chamber window lies a booke, bring it hither to me in the orchard.

Boy. I am heere already sir. Exit

Bene. I know that, but I would haue thee hence, and heere againe. I doe much wonder, that one man seeing how much another man is a foole, when he dedicates his behauiours to loue, will after hee hath laught at such shallow follies in others, become the argument of his owne scorne, by falling in loue, & such a man is Claudio. I haue known when there was no musicke with him but the drum and the fife, and now had hee rather heare the tabor and the pipe: I haue knowne when he would haue walkt ten mile afoot, to see a good armour, and now will he lie ten nights awake carueing the fashion of a new doublet. he was wont to speake plaine, & to the purpose, like an honest man & a soldier, and now is he turn'd orthographie, his words are a very fantasticall banquet, iust so many strange dishes: may I be so conuerted, & see with these eyes? I cannot tell, I thinke not: I will not be sworne, but loue may transforme me to an oyster but I'le take my oath on it, till he haue made an oyster of me, he shall neuer make me such a foole. one woman is faire, yet I am well: another is wise, yet I am well: another vertuous, yet I am well: but till all graces be in one woman, one woman shall not come in my grace. rich shee shall be, that's certain: wise, or Ile none: vertuous, or Ile neuer cheapen her: faire, or Ile neuer looke on her: milde, or come not neere me: Noble, or not for an Angell: of good discourse, an excellent Musitian, and her haire shall be of what colour it please God, hah! the Prince and Monsieur Loue, I will hide me in the Arbor.

Enter Prince, Leonato, Claudio, and Iacke Wilson.

Prin. Come, shall we heare this musicke?

Claud Yea my good Lord: how still the euening is,
As hush'd on purpose to grace harmonie.

Prin. See you where Benedicke hath hid himselfe?

Clau. O very well my Lord: the musicke ended,
We'll fit the kid-foxe with a penny worth

Prince. Come Balthasar, wee'll heare that song again

Balth. O good my Lord, taxe not so bad a voyce,
To slander musicke any more then once.

Prin. It is the witnesse still of excellency,

To

To slander Musicke any more then once.

Prince. It is the witnesse still of excellency,
To put a strange face on his owne perfection,
I pray thee sing, and let me woe no more.

Bene. Because you talke of wooing, I will sing,
Since many a wooer doth commence his suit
To her he thinkes not worthy, yet he woes,
Yet will he sweare he loues.

Prince. Nay pray thee come,
Or if thou wilt hold longer argument,
Do it in notes.

Balth. Note this before my notes,
There's not a note of mine that's worth the noting.

Prince. Why these are very crotchets that he speaks,
Note notes forsooth and nothing.

Bene. Now diuine ayre, now is his soule rauished, is it not strange that sheepes guts should hale soules out of mens bodies? well, a horne for my money when all's done.

The Song.

Sigh no more Ladies, sigh no more,
Men were deceiuers euer,
One foote in Sea and one on shore,
To one thing constant neuer,
Then sigh not so but let them go,
And be you blithe and bonny,
Conuerting all your sounds of woe,
Into Hey nony nony.

Sing no more ditties, sing no more,
Of dumps so dull and heavy,
The fraud of men was ever so,
Since summer first was leavy,
Then sigh not so, &c.

Prince. By my troth a good song.

Balth. And an ill singer my Lord.

Prince. Ha, no, no faith, thou singst well enough for a shift.

Bene. An he had been a dog that should have howled thus, they would haue hanged him, and I pray God his bad voyce bode no mischiefe, I had as lief haue heard the night-rauen, come what plague could haue come after it.

Prince. Yea marry, dost thou heare Balthasar? I pray thee get vs some excellent musicke, for to morrow night we would haue it at the Lady Heroes chamber window.

Balth. The best I can my Lord. Exit Balthasar.

Prince. Do so, farewell. Come hither Leonato, what was it you told me of to day, that your Neece Beatrice was in loue with signior Benedicke?

Cla. O, ha, ha, he, rare feathers I did neuer thinke that Lady would haue loued any man.

Leon. No nor I neither, but most wonderful that she should so dote on signior Benedicke, whom she hath in all outward behauiours seemed euer to abhorre.

Bene. Is it possible? sits the wind in that corner?

Leo. By my troth my Lord, I cannot tell what to thinke of it, but that she loues him with an inraged affection, it is past the infinite of thought.

Prince. May be she doth but counterfeit.

Cla. Faith like enough.

Leon. O God! counterfeit? there was neuer counterfeit of passion came so neere the life of passion as she discouers it.

Prince. Why what effects of passion shewes she?

Claud. Bare the hooke well, this fish will bite.

Leon. What effects my Lord? shee will sit you, you heard my daughter tell you how.

Clau. She did indeed.

Prin. How, how I pray you? you amaze me, I would haue thought her spirit had beene inuincible against all assaults of affection.

Leo. I would haue sworne it had, my Lord, especially against Benedicke.

Bene. I should thinke this a gull, but that the white-bearded fellow speakes it: knauery cannot sure hide himselfe in such reuerence.

Claud. He hath tane th'infection, hold it vp.

Prince. Hath she made her affection known to Benedicke?

Leonato. No, and sweares she neuer will, that's her torment.

Claud. 'Tis true indeed, so your daughter saies: shall, I saies she, that haue so oft encountred him with scorne, write to him that I loue him?

Leo. This saies she now when she is beginning to write to him, for she'll be vp twenty times a night, and there will she sit in her smocke, till she haue writ a sheet of paper: my daughter tells vs all.

Cla. Now you talke of a sheet of paper, I remember a pretty iest your daughter told vs of.

Leon. O when she had writ it, & was reading it ouer she found Benedicke and Beatrice betweene the sheete.

Claud. That.

Leon. O she tore the letter into a thousand halfpence, raild at her self, that she should be so immodest to write, to one that she knew would flout her: I measure him, saies she, by my owne spirit, for I should flout him if he writ to me, yea though I loue him, I should.

Clau. Then downe vpon her knees she falls, weepes, sobs, beates her heart, teares her hayre, prayes, curses, O sweet Beatrice, God giue me patience.

Leon. She doth indeed, my daughter saies so, and the extasie hath so much ouerborne her, that my daughter is sometime afeard she will doe a desperate out-rage to her selfe, it is very true.

Prince. It were good that Benedicke knew of it by some other, if she will not discouer it.

Clau. To what end? he would but make a sport of it, and torment the poore Lady worse.

Prin. And he should, it were an almes to hang him, shee's an excellent sweet Lady, and (out of all suspition,) she is vertuous.

Claudio. And she is exceeding wise.

Prince. In euery thing, but in louing Benedicke.

Leon. O my Lord, wisedome and blood combating in so tender a body, we haue ten proofes to one, that blood hath the victory, I am sorry for her, as I haue iust cause, being her Vncle, and her Guardian.

Prince. I would shee had bestowed this dotage on mee, I would haue daft all other respects, and made her halfe my selfe: I pray you tell Benedicke of it, and heare what he will say.

Leon. Were it good thinke you?

Clau. Hero thinkes surely she will die, for she saies she will die, if hee loue her not, and shee will die ere shee make her loue knowne, and she will die if hee woo her, rather than shee will bate one breath of her accustomed crossenesse.

Prin. She doth well, if she should make tender of her loue, loue, 'tis very possible hee l scorne it, for the man (as you know all) hath a contemptible spirit

Claud. He is a very proper man

Prin. He hath indeed a good outward happines

Claud. 'Fore God, and in my minde very wise.

Prin. He doth indeed shew some sparkes that are like wit.

Leon. And I take him to be valiant.

Prin. As Hector, I assure you, and in the managing of quarrels you may see he is wise, for either he auoydes them with great discretion, or vndertakes them with a Christian-like feare.

Leon. If hee doe feare God, a must necessarie keepe peace, if hee breake the peace, hee ought to enter into a quarrell with feare and trembling.

Prin. And so will he doe, for the man doth fear God, howsoeuer it seemes not in him, by some large iests he will make: well, I am sorry for your niece, shall we goe see Benedicke and tell him of her loue

Claud. Neuer tell him, my Lord, let her weare it out with good counsell

Leon. Nay that's impossible, she may weare her heart out first.

Prin. Well, we will heare further of it by your daughter, let it coole the while, I loue Benedicke well, and I could wish he would modestly examine himselfe, to see how much he is vnworthy to haue so good a Lady.

Leon. My Lord, will you walke? dinner is ready.

Claud. If he do not dote on her vpon this, I will neuer trust my expectation.

Prin. Let there be the same Net spread for her, and that must your daughter and her gentlewoman carry: the sport will be, when they hold one an opinion of anothers dotage, and no such matter, that's the Scene that I would see, which will be meerely a dumbe shew: let vs send her to call him into dinner. Exeunt.

Bene. This can be no tricke, the conference was sadly borne, they haue the truth of this from Hero, they seeme to pittie the Lady: it seemes her affections haue the full bent. loue me? why it must be requited: I heare how I am censur'd, they say I will beare my selfe proudly, if I perceiue the loue come from her: they say too, that she will rather die than giue any signe of affection: I did neuer thinke to marry, I must not seeme proud, happy are they that beare their detractions, and can put them to mending: they say the Lady is faire, 'tis a truth, I can beare them witnesse: and vertuous, 'tis so, I cannot reproue it, and wise, but for louing me, by my troth it is no addition to her witte, nor no great argument of her folly; for I will be horribly in loue with her I may chance haue some odde quirkes and remnants of witte broken on mee, because I haue rail'd so long against marriage: but doth not the appetite alter? a man loues the meat in his youth, that he cannot indure in his age. Shall quips and sentences, and these paper bullets of the braine awe a man from the careere of his humour? No, the world must be peopled. When I said I would die a batchelor, I did not think I should liue till I were married, here comes Beatrice. by this day, shee's a faire Lady, I doe spie some markes of loue in her.

Enter Beatrice.

Bene. Against my will I am sent to bid you come in to dinner.

Bene. Faire Beatrice, I thanke you for your paines.

Beat. I tooke no more paines for those thankes, than you take paines to thanke me, if it had been painefull, I would not haue come.

Bene. You take pleasure then in the message

Beat. Yea iust so much as you may take vpon a knifes point, and choake a daw withall: you haue no stomacke signior, fare you well. Exit.

Bene. Ha, against my will I am sent to bid you come into dinner, there is a double meaning in that. I tooke no more paines for those thankes, than you tooke paines to thanke me, that's as much as to say, any paines that I take for you is as easie as thankes. if I do not take pitty of her I am a villaine, if I loue her I am a Iew, I will goe get her picture Exit.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Hero, and two Gentlemen Margaret, and Vrsula.

Hero. Good Margaret runne thee to the parlour,
There shalt thou finde my Cousin Beatrice,
Proposing with the prince and Claudio,
Whisper her eare, and tell her I and Vrsula,
Walke in the Orchard, and our whole discourse
Is all of her, say that thou ouer-heard'st vs,
And bid her steale into the pleached bower,
Where hony-suckles ripened by the sunne,
Forbid the sunne to enter like fauourites,
Made proud by Princes, that aduance their pride,
Against that power, that bred it: there will she
To listen our purpose, this is thy office,
Beare thee well in it, and leaue vs alone.

Marg. Ile make her come, I warrant you presently.

Hero. Now Vrsula, when Beatrice doth come,
As we do trace this alley vp and downe,
Our talke must only be of Benedicke,
When I do name him, let it be thy part,
To praise him more than euer man did merit,
My talke to thee must be how Benedicke
Is sicke in loue with Beatrice: of this matter,
Is little Cupids crafty arrow made,
That only wounds by heare-say now begun,

Enter Beatrice.

For looke where Beatrice like a Lapwing runs
Close by the ground, to heare our conference.

Vrs. The pleasant'st angling is to see the fish
Cut with her golden oares the siluer Streame,
And greedily deuoure the treacherous bait:
So angle we for Beatrice, who euen now,
Is couched in the wood-bine couerture,
Feare you not my part of the Dialogue

Hero. Then go we neare her, that her eare loose nothing,
Of the false sweete baite that we lay for it:
No truely Vrsula, she is too disdainfull,
I know her spirits are as coy and wilde,
As Haggerds of the rocke

Vrsula. But are you sure,
That Benedicke loues Beatrice so intirely?

Hero. So says the Prince, and my new trothed Lord.

Vrs. And did they bid you tell her of it, Madam?

Hero. They did intreate me to acquaint her of it,
But I perswaded them if they lou'd Benedicke,

To wish him wrastle with affection,
And never to let Beatrice know of it.
Vrsula. Why did you so, doth not the Gentleman
Deserue as full as fortunate a bed,
As euer Beatrice could alcompt vpon
Hero. O God of loue! I know he doth deserue,
As much as may be yeelded to a man:
But Nature neuer fram'd a woman's heart,
Of prouder stuffe then that of Beatrice:
Disdaine and Scorne ride sparkling in her eyes,
Misprizing what they looke on, and her wit
Values it selfe so highly, that to her
All matter else seemes weake: she cannot loue,
Nor take no shape nor project of affection,
She is so self-endeared.
Vrsula. Sure I thinke so,
And therefore certainly it were not good
She knew his loue, lest she make sport at it.
Hero. Why you speake truth. I neuer yet saw man,
How wise, how noble, young, how rarely featur'd,
But she would spell him backward: if faire-fac'd,
She would sweare the gentleman should be her sister:
If blacke, why Nature drawing of an antique,
Made a foule blot: if tall, a launce ill-headed:
If low, an agot very vildly cut:
If speaking, why a vane blowne with all windes:
If silent, why a block moued with none.
So turnes she euery man the wrong side out,
And neuer gives to Truth and Vertue that
Which simply is her due.
Vrsula. Sure, sure, such carping is not commendable.
Hero. No, not to be so odde, and from all fashions,
As Beatrice is, cannot be commended:
Oh! wonder to heare her speake of Benedicke,
One would thinke she meant him: but no, one would laugh me
Out of my selfe presence, such dotage is it,
Then tell me how Leonato calls his wife,
Come away, away, now shall we hide vs,
It were a better deed then to saue a theefe
When he is hid so neere.
Vrsula. Yet tell me first,
Hero. Not a word more I charge thee vpon my loue,
And come with me to walke, I know
Assoone as euer I but name Benedicke,
As pale as death to me as to her:
Some Cupid kills with arrowes, some with traps. Exit
Beat. What fire is in mine eares? can this be true?
Stand I condemn'd for pride and scorne so much?
Contempt, farewell, and maiden pride, adew,
No glory lies behinde the backe of such.
And Benedicke loue on, I will requite thee,
Taming my wilde heart to thy louing hand.
If thou dost loue, my kindenesse shall incite thee
To binde our loues vp in a holy band.
For others say thou dost deserue, and I
Beleeue it better then reportingly. Exit.

Enter Prince, Claudio, Benedicke, and Leonato.

Prince. I doe but stay till your marriage be consummate, and then go I toward Arragon.

Claud. Ile bring you thither my Lord, if you'l vouchsafe me.

Prin. Nay, that would be as great a soyle in the new glosse of your marriage, as to shew a child his new coat and forbid him to weare it. I will only bee bold with Benedicke for his compaine, for from the crowne of his head, to the sole of his foot, he is all mirth, he hath twice or thrice cut Cupids bow-string, and the little hangman dare not shoot at him: he hath a heart as sound as a bell, and his tongue is the clapper, for what his heart thinkes, his tongue speakes.

Bene. Gallants, I am not as I have been.

Leo. So say I, methinkes you are sadder.

Claud. I hope he be in loue.

Iohn. I haugh'd at him to day, that's no true drop of blood in him to be truly touch't with loue, if he be sad he wants money.

Bene. I have the tooth-ach.

Prin. Draw it.

Bene. Hang it.

Claud. You must hang it first and draw it afterwards.

Prin. What sigh for the tooth-ach.

Leon. Where is but a humour or a worme.

Bene. Well, every one cannot master a griefe, but he that has it.

Claud. Yet say I, he is in loue.

Iohn. There is no appearance of fancie in him, vnlesse it be a fancie that he hath to strange disguises, as to be a Dutch man to day, a French man to morrow: vnlesse he have a fancie to this foolery, as it appeares he hath, he is no foole for fancie, as you would have it to appeare he is.

Claud. If he be not in loue with some woman, there is no beleeuing old signes, a brushes his hat a mornings. What should that bode?

Prin. Hath any man seene him at the Barbers?

Claud. No but the Barbers man hath been seene with him, and the olde ornament of his cheeke hath already stuft tennis balls.

Leon. Indeed he lookes yonger than he did, by the losse of a beard.

Prin. Nay a rubs himselfe with Ciuit, can you smell him out by that?

Claud. That's as much as to say, the sweet youth's in loue.

Prin. The greatest note of it is his melancholy.

Claud. And when was he wont to wash his face?

Prin. Yea, or to paint himselfe? for the which I heare what they say of him.

Claud. Nay, but his iesting spirit, which is now crept into a lute-string, and now gouern'd by stops.

Prince,

Prin. Indeed that tels a heauy tale for him: conclude, he is in loue

Clau. Nay, but I know who loues him.

Prince. That would I know too, I warrant one that knowes him not.

Cla. Yes, and his ill conditions, and in despight of all, dies for him.

Prin. Shee shall be buried with her face vpwards.

Bene. Yet is this no charme for the toothake. Old signior, walke aside with mee, I haue studied eight or nine wise words to speake to you, which these hobby-horses must not heare.

Prin. For my life to breake with him about Beatrice.

Clau. 'Tis euen so. Hero and Margaret haue by this played their parts with Beatrice, and then the two Beares will not bite one another when they meete.

Enter Iohn the Baſtard.

Baſt. My Lord and brother, God saue you.

Prin. Good den brother.

Baſt. If your leiſure ſerued, I would ſpeake with you.

Prince. In priuate?

Baſt. If it pleaſe you: yet Count Claudio may heare, for what I would ſpeake of, concernes him.

Prin. What's the matter?

Baſta. Means your Lordſhip to be married to morrow?

Prin. You know he does.

Baſt. I know not that when he knowes what I know.

Clau. If there be any impediment, I pray you diſcouer it.

Baſt. You may thinke I loue you not, let that appeare hereafter, and aym better at me by that I now will manifeſt, for my brother (I think he holds you well, and in deare tendernes of heart) hath holpe to effect your enſuing marriage; ſurely ſuit ill ſpent and labour ill beſtowed.

Prin. Why, what's the matter?

Baſtard. I came hither to tell you, and circumſtances ſhortned (for ſhe hath been too long a talking of) the Lady is diſloyall.

Clau. Who? Hero?

Baſt. Euen ſhee, Leonatoes Hero, your Hero, euery mans Hero.

Clau. Diſloyall?

Baſt. The word is too good to paint out her wickedneſſe, I could ſay ſhe were worſe, thinke you of a worſe title, and I will fit her to it. Wonder not till further warrant: goe but with mee to night, you ſhall ſee her chamber window entred, euen the night before her wedding day, if you loue her, then to morrow wed her. But it would better fit your honour to change your minde.

Claud. May this be ſo?

Prince. I will not thinke it.

Baſt. If you dare not truſt that you ſee, confeſſe not that you know: if you will follow mee, I will ſhew you enough, and when you haue ſeene more, & heard more, proceed accordingly.

Clau. If I ſee any thing to night, why I ſhould not marry her to morrow in the congregation, where I ſhould wedde, there will I ſhame her.

Prin. And as I wooed for thee to obtaine her, I will ioyne with thee to diſgrace her.

Baſt. I will diſparage her no farther, till you are my witneſſes, beare it coldly but till night, and let the iſſue ſhew it ſelfe.

Prin. O day vntowardly turned!

Claud. O miſchiefe ſtrangely thwarting!

Baſtard. O plague right well preuented! ſo will you ſay, when you haue ſeene the ſequele. Exit

Enter Dogberry and his compartner with the watch.

Dog. Are you good men and true?

Verg. Yea, or elſe it were pitty but they ſhould ſuffer ſaluation body and ſoule.

Dogb. Nay, that were a puniſhment too good for them if they ſhould haue any allegiance in them, being choſen for the Princes watch.

Verg. Well, giue them their charge, neighbour Dogberry.

Dog. Firſt who thinke you the moſt deſartleſſe man to be Conſtable?

Watch 1. Hugh Oat-cake Sir, or George Sea-coale, for they can write and reade.

Dog. Come hither neighbour Sea-coale, God hath bleſt you with a good name: to be a well fauoured man, is the gift of Fortune, but to write and reade, comes by Nature.

Watch 2. Both which Maſter Conſtable.

Dog. You haue: I knew it would be your anſwere well for your fauour ſir, why giue God thankes, & make no boaſt of it, and for your writing and reading, let that appeare when there is no need of ſuch vanity. You are thought here to be the moſt ſenſleſſe and fit man for the Conſtable of the watch: therefore bear you the lanthorne: this is your charge. You ſhall comprehend all vagrom men, you are to bid any man ſtand in the Princes name.

Watch 2. How if a will not ſtand?

Dogb. Why then take no note of him but let him go, and preſently call the reſt of the Watch together, and thank God you are rid of a knaue.

Verg. If he will not ſtand when he is bidden, he is none of the Princes ſubiects.

Dogb. True, and they are to meddle with none but the Princes ſubiects: you ſhall alſo make no noiſe in the ſtreets: for for the Watch to babble and talke, is moſt tolerable, and not to be indured.

Watch. We will rather ſleepe than talke, we know what belongs to a Watch.

Dogb. Why you ſpeake like an ancient and moſt quiet watchman, for I cannot ſee how ſleeping ſhould offend: only haue a care that your bills be not ſtolne: well, you are to call at all the Alehouſes, and bid them that are drunke get them to bed.

Watch. How if they will not?

Dogb. Why then let them alone till they are ſober: if they make you not then the better anſwere you may ſay, they are not the men you tooke them for.

Watch. Well ſir.

Dogb. If you meet a theefe you may ſuſpect him, by vertue of your office, to be no true man: and for ſuch kinde of men, the leſſe you meddle or make with them, why the more is for your honeſty.

Watch. If we know him to be a theefe ſhall we not lay hands on him?

Dogb. Truly by your office you may but I think they that touch pitch will be defiled: the moſt peaceable way for you, if you doe take a theefe, is, to let him ſhew himſelfe what he is, and ſteale out of your company.

Verg. You haue bin alwaies call'd a merciful man partner.

Dogb. Truely I would not hang a dog by my will, much more a man who hath any honeſtie in him.

Verges. If you ſtand a mans charge on the neglect you muſt call to the watch, and bid her ſtand.

Fran. How now? in the name of ſleepe and will not heare vs?

Dog. Why then departure in peace, and let the child wake her with her crying, for ſhe neuer that will not heare the Lambe when it baes, will never anſwer a calfe when he bleates.

Verges. Tis very true.

Dog. It is in the charge you conſtable are to preſent [illegible] you neuer ſuffer a Prince to goe, [illegible]

Verges. [illegible]

Dog. [illegible] man to ſtay him, [illegible] or with [illegible] out charge [illegible] to the watch-houſe, and bid [illegible] ſhall be [illegible]

Dog. Hang them [illegible] ſhall reſort be [illegible] keepe [illegible] ſeaſon, and [illegible] come [illegible]

Verges. [illegible] to go [illegible] bee?

Leo. One [illegible] you [illegible] goe-[illegible] by eſteeme it, [illegible] Leonato, [illegible]

Ant. [illegible]

Leon. [illegible]

Ant. [illegible]

Leon. [illegible]

Ant. Maſter [illegible] will [illegible]

Leon. [illegible]

Ant. [illegible] to [illegible]

Leon. [illegible]

Ant. [illegible] to [illegible] Dogberry.

Leon. [illegible]

Bor. I [illegible] the [illegible] or [illegible] [illegible] price [illegible]

Leon. [illegible]

[illegible] ſweft [illegible]

Leon. [illegible]

Bor. [illegible]

Leon. [illegible]

Ant. I [illegible] too but [illegible]

Bor. I [illegible] ſtale [illegible] ſeeke, [illegible] gentle man [illegible]

Leon. [illegible]

Con. [illegible]

Leon. [illegible] ſtormed theſe [illegible] about it, the Hot-bloods, betweene fourteene & fiue & thirtie, ſometimes faſhioning them like Pharaohs ſouldiours in the reuhe painted, ſometime like god bels priefts in the old Church window, ſometimes like the ſhaueu Hercules in the needle worke, worme eaten tapeſtrie, where his cod-peece ſeemes as maſſie as his club.

Con. All this, ſee, and ſee that the faſhion weares out more apparell then the man: but art not thou thy ſelfe giddie with the faſhion, too faſhion than thou ſhouldſt ſhifted out of thy ſute: to reaſon me of theſe things?

Bor. Not to neither, but know that I haue to night woo'd Margaret the Lady Hero's gentle-woman, by a caſe of Hop, the ſeance I can put vpon it: when ſhall I meete you noble Lord, to morrow or next day, and tell thee how the Prince Claudio and my Maſter planted, and placed, and poſſeſſed by my Maſter Don Iohn, [illegible] ſhall [illegible] a whole [illegible]

Con. Any bolt to Margaret was Hero?

Bor. Two [illegible] and [illegible] but [illegible] my Maſter knew I was Margaret and partly [illegible] would [illegible] make [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Hero. God giue mee joy to weare it, for my heart is exceeding heauy

Marga. 'Twill be heauier soone, by the weight of a man

Hero Fie vpon her, art not asham'd?

Marg Of what Lady? of speaking honourably? is not marriage honourable in a beggar? is not your Lord honourable without marriage? I thinke you would haue me say, sauing your reuerence a husband: and bad thinking doe not wrest true speaking, Ile offend no body, is there any harme in the heauier for a husband? none I thinke, and it be the right husband and the right wife, otherwise 'tis light and not heauy, ask my Lady Beatrice else, here she comes

Enter Beatrice.

Hero Good morrow Coze.

Beat. Good morrow sweet Hero

Hero. Why how now? do you speake in the sick tune?

Beat. I am out of all other tune, me thinkes

Mar Clap's into Light o'loue, that goes without a burden, do you sing it, and I'le dance it

Beat Ye Light o'loue with your heeles, then if your husband haue stables enough, you'll looke he'll neuer hacke his mares.

Mar. O illegitimate construction! I scorne that with my heeles

Beat. 'Tis almost fiue a cloche cosin, 'tis time you were ready, by my troth I am exceeding ill: heyho.

Mar For a hacke a horse, or a husband?

Beat. For the letter that begins them all H.

Mar Well, and you be not turn'd Turke, there's no more sayling by the starre.

Beat. What means the foole trow?

Mar Nothing I, but God send every one their harts desire.

Hero. These gloues the Count sent mee, they are an excellent perfume

Beat. I am stuft cosin, I cannot smell

Mar A maid and stuft! there's good cheere for o colde

Beat O God help me, God help me, how long haue you profest apprehension?

Mar Euer since you left it, doth not my wit become me rarely?

Beat It is not seene enough, you should weare it in your cap, by my troth I am sicke

Mar. Get you some of this distilled Carduus benedictus and lay it to your heart, it is the only thing for a qualm

Hero. There thou prickst her with a thistle.

Beat. Benedictus, why benedictus you haue some morall in this benedictus

Mar. Morall? no by my troth, I haue no morall meaning, I meant plaine holy thistle, you may thinke perchance that I thinke you are in loue, nay by'r lady I am not such a foole to thinke what I list, nor I list not to thinke what I can, nor indeed I cannot thinke, if I would thinke my heart out of thinking, that you are in loue, or that you will be in loue or that you can be in loue: yet Benedicke was such another, and now is he become a man, he swore hee would neuer marry, and yet now in despight of his heart he eates his meat without grudging, and how you may be conuerted I know not, but me thinkes you looke with your eies as other women doe.

Beat. What pace is this that thy tongue keepes.

Mar. Not a false gallop

Enter Vrsula.

Vrsula Madam, withdraw, the Prince, the Count, Signior Benedicke, Don Iohn, and all the gallants of the towne are come to fetch you to Church.

Hero Helpe to dresse mee good coze, good Meg good Vrsula.

Enter Leonato, and the Constable, and the Headborough

Leonato What would you with mee, honest neighbour?

Const Dog. Mary sir I would haue some confidence with you, that decernes you nearely.

Leon Briefe I pray you, for you see it is a busie time with me.

Const Dog. Mary this it is sir.

Head. Yes in truth it is sir

Leon. What is it my good friends?

Const Do Goodman Verges sir speakes a little of the matter, an old man sir, and his wits are not so blunt, as God helpe I would desire they were, but in faith honest as the skin betweene his browes

Head. Yes I thanke God, I am as honest as any man liuing, that is an old man, and no honester than I.

Const Dog Comparisons are odorous, palabras, neighbour Verges

Leon. Neighbours, you are tedious

Const Dog It pleases your worship to say so, but we are the poore Dukes officers, but truely for mine owne part, if I were as tedious as a King, I could finde in my heart to bestow it all of your worship

Leon All thy tediousnes on me ah?

Const Dog Yea, and 'twere a thousand times more than 'tis, for I heare as good exclamation on your Worship as of any man in the City, and though I be but a poore man, I am glad to heare it.

Head. And so am I.

Leon I would faine know what you haue to say.

Head Marry sir our watch to night, excepting your worships presence haue taken a couple of as arrant knaues as any in Messina.

Const Dog A good old man sir, he will be talking as they say, when the age is in the wit is out, God help vs, it is a world to see: well said yfaith neighbour Verges, well God's a good man, and two good men sit on a horse, one must ride behinde: an honest soule yfaith sir, by my troth he is, as euer broke bread: but God is to be worshipped, all men are not alike, alas good neighbour

Leon Indeed neighbour he comes too short of you.

Const Do Gifts that God gues.

Leon I must leaue you.

Const Dog. One word sir, our watch sir haue indeede comprehended two aspitious persons & we would haue them this morning examined before your worship

Leon Take their examination your selfe, and bring it me, I am now in great haste, as may appeare vnto you.

Const It shall be suffigance Exit

Leon Drinke some wine ere you goe: fare you well.

Messenger My Lord, they stay for you to giue your daughter to her husband

Leon Ile wait vpon them, I am ready

Exit Goe good partner, goe get you to Francis Seacole, bid him bring his pen and inkehorne to the Gaole: we are now to examine those men

Verges. And we must doe it wisely

Dogb We will spare for no witte I warrant you

heere's that shall driue some of them to a non-come only per the learned writer to set downe our excommunication and meet me at the Sale Exeunt.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Prince, Bastard Leonato, Frier, Claudio, Benedicke, Hero, and Beatrice.

Leonato. Come Frier Francis be briefe, only to the plaine forme of marriage, and you shall recount their particular duties afterwards.

Frier. You come hither my Lord, to marry this Lady.

Claud. No.

Leo. To be married to her Frier, you come to marry her.

Frier. Lady, you come hither to be married to this Count.

Hero. I doe.

Frier. If either of you know any inward impediment why you should not be conioyned, I charge you on your soules to vtter it.

Claud. Know you any, Hero?

Hero. None my Lord.

Frier. Know you any, Count?

Leon. I dare make his answer. None.

Claud. O what men dare do! what men may do! what men daily do!

Bene. How now! interiections? Why then some be of laughing, as ha, ha, he.

Claud. Stand thee by, Frier, father, by your leaue,
Will you with free and vnconstrained soule
Giue me this maid your daughter?

Leon. As freely, sonne, as God did giue her me.

Claud. And what haue I to giue you back, whose worth
May counterpoise this rich and precious gift?

Prince. Nothing, vnlesse you render her againe.

Claud. Sweet Prince, you learne me noble thankfulnes.
There Leonato, take her backe againe,
Giue not this rotten Orenge to your friend,
She's but the signe and semblance of her honour.
Behold how like a maid she blushes here!
O what authority and shew of truth
Can cunning sinne couer it selfe withall!
Comes not that blood, as modest euidence,
To witnesse simple Vertue? would you not sweare
All you that see her, that she were a maide,
By these exterior shewes? But she is none.
She knowes the heat of a luxurious bed
Her blush is guiltinesse, not modestie.

Leonato. What do you meane my Lord?

Claud. Not to be married,
Not to knit my soule to an approued wanton.

Leon. I dearely holde you my lord, for mine owne proofe,
Haue vanquished the resistance of her youth,
And made defeat of her virginitie.

Claud. I know what you would say: if I haue known
You will say, she did imbrace me as a husband,
And so extenuate the forehand sinne. No Leonato,
I neuer tempted her with word too large,
But as a brother to his sister shewed
Bashfull sincerity and comely loue.

Hero. And seem'd I euer otherwise to you?

Claud. Out on thee seeming, I will write against it,
You seeme to me as Dian in her Orbe,
As chaste as is the budde ere it be blowne:
But you are more intemperate in your blood,
Than Venus, or those pampred animals,
That rage in sauage sensualitie.

Hero. Is my Lord well, that he doth speake so wide?

Leon. Sweete Prince, why speake not you?

Prin. What should I speake?
I stand dishonour'd that haue gone about,
To make my deare friend to a common stale.

Leon. Are these things spoken, or doe I but dreame?

Bast. Sir, they are spoken, and these things are true

Bene. This lookes not like a nuptiall.

Hero. True, O God!

Claud. Leonato, stand I here?
Is this the Prince? is this the Princes brother?
Is this face Heroes? are our eies our owne?

Leon. All this is so, but what of this my Lord?

Claud. Let me but moue one question to your daughter,
And by that fatherly and kindly power,
That you haue in her, bid her answer truly.

Leo. I charge thee doe, as thou art my childe.

Hero. O God defend me how am I beset,
What kinde of catechizing call you this?

Claud. To make you answer truly to your name.

Hero. Is it not Hero? who can blot that name
With any iust reproach?

Claud. Marry that can Hero,
Hero it selfe can blot out Heroes vertue.
What man was he talkt with you yesternight,
Out at your window betwixt twelue and one?
Now if you are a maid, answer to this.

Hero. I talkt with no man at that howre my Lord.

Prince. Why then you are no maiden. Leonato,
I am sorry you must heare: vpon mine honor,
My selfe, my brother, and this grieued Count
Did see her, heare her, at that howre last night,
Talke with a ruffian at her chamber window,
Who hath indeed most like a liberall villaine,
Confest the vile encounters they haue had
A thousand times in secret.

John. Fie, fie, they are not to be named my Lord,
Not to be spoken of,
There is not chaft ne enough in language,
Without offence to vtter them: thus pretty Lady
I am sorry for thy much misgouernement.

Claud. O Hero! what a Hero hadst thou beene
If halfe thy outward graces had beene placed
About thy thoughts and counsailes of thy heart?
But fare thee well, most foule most faire, farewell
Thou pure impiety, and impious puritie.
For thee Ile locke vp all the gates of Loue,
And on my eie-lids shall Coniecture hang,
To turne all beauty into thoughts of harme,
And neuer shall it more be gracious.

Leon. Hath no mans dagger here a point for me?

Beat. Why how now cosin, wherefore sink you down?

Bast Come, let vs go these things come thus to light,
Smother her spirits vp.

Bene. How doth the Lady?

Beat. Dead I thinke, helpe vncle,
Hero, why Hero, Vncle, Signor Benedicke, Frier.

Leonato. O Fate! take not away thy heauy hand,
Death is the fairest couer for her shame
That may be wisht for.

Beat. How

Beatr. How now cosin Hero?
Fri. Haue comfort Ladie.
Leon. Dost thou looke vp?
Friar. Yea, wherefore should she not?
Leon. Wherefore? Why doth not euery earthly thing
Cry shame vpon her? Could she here deny
The storie that is printed in her blood?
Do not liue Hero, do not ope thine eyes:
For did I thinke thou would'st not quickly die,
Thought I thy spirits were stronger then thy shames,
My selfe would on the reward of reproaches
Strike at thy life. Grieu'd I, I had but one?
Chid I, for that at frugal Natures frame?
O one too much by thee: why had I one?
Why euer wast thou louely in my eyes?
Why had I not with charitable hand
Tooke vp a beggars issue at my gates,
Who smeered thus, and mir'd with infamie,
I might haue said, no part of it is mine:
This shame derives it selfe from vnknowne loines,
But mine, and mine I lou'd, and mine I prais'd,
And mine that I was proud on: mine so much,
That I my selfe was to my selfe not mine.
Valew her gone, why lie, O she is slaine
Into a pit of Inke, that the wide sea
Hath drops too few to wash her cleane againe,
And salt too little which may season giue
To her foule tainted flesh.
Ben. Sir, sir, be patient: for my part, I am so attired in wonder, I know not what to say.
Bea. O on my soule my cosin is belied.
Ben. Lady, were you her bedfellow last night?
Bea. No truly: not although vntill last night,
I haue this twelue moneth bin her bedfellow.
Leon. Confirm'd, confirm'd, O that is stronger made
Which was before barr'd vp with ribs of iron.
Would the Princes lie, and Claudio lie,
Who lou'd her so, that speaking of her foulnesse,
Wash'd it with teares? Hence from her, let her die.
Fri. Heare me a little, for I haue only beene silent so long, and giuen way vnto this course of fortune, by noting of the Lady: I haue mark't
A thousand blushing apparitions,
To start into her face, a thousand innocent shames,
In Angel whitenesse beare away those blushes,
And in her eye there hath appear'd a fire
To burne the errors that these Princes hold
Against her maiden truth. Call me a foole,
Trust not my reading nor my obseruations,
Which with experimentall seale doth warrant
The tenure of my booke: trust not my age,
My reuerence, calling, nor diuinitie,
If this sweet Ladie lye not guiltlesse heere,
Vnder some biting error.
Leo. Friar, it cannot be:
Thou seest that all the Grace that she hath left,
Is, that she will not adde to her damnation,
A sinne of periury, she not denies it.
Why seek'st thou then to couer with excuse,
That which appeares in proper nakednesse?
Fri. Ladie, what man is he you are accus'd of?
Hero. They know that do accuse me, I know none:
If I know more of any man aliue
Then that which maiden modestie doth warrant,
Let all my sinnes lacke mercy. O my Father,
Proue you that any man with me conuerst,
At houres vnmeete, or that I yesternight
Maintain'd the change of words with any creature,
Refuse me, hate me, torture me to death.
Fri. There is some strange misprision in the Princes.
Ben. Two of them haue the very bent of honor,
And if their wisedomes be misled in this:
The practise of it liues in Iohn the bastard,
Whose spirits toile in frame of villanies.
Leo. I know not: if they speake but truth of her,
These hands shall teare her: if they wrong her honour,
The proudest of them shall well heare of it.
Time hath not yet so dried this blood of mine,
Nor age so eate vp my inuention,
Nor fortune made such hauocke of my meanes,
Nor my bad life reft me so much of friends,
But they shall finde, awak'd in such a kinde,
Both strength of limbe and policie of minde,
Ability in meanes, and choice of friends,
To quit me of them throughly.
Fri. Pause awhile
And let my counsell sway you in this case,
Your daughter heere the Princes left for dead)
Let her awhile be secretly kept in,
And publish it, that she is dead indeed:
Maintaine a mourning ostentation,
And on your family's old monument,
Hang mournefull Epitaphes, and do all rites,
That appertaine vnto a burriall.
Leon. What shall become of this? What will this do?
Fri. Marry this well carried shall on her behalfe,
Change slander to remorse, that is some good:
But not for that dreame I on this strange course,
But on this trauaile looke for greater birth:
She dying, as it must be so maintain'd,
Vpon the instant that she was accus'd,
Shall be lamented, pitied, and excus'd
Of euery hearer: for it so falls out,
That what we haue, we prize not to the worth,
Whiles we enioy it: but being lack't and lost,
Why then we racke the value, then we finde
The vertue that possession would not shew vs
Whiles it was ours. So will it fare with Claudio:
When he shall heare she died vpon his words,
Th' idea of her life shall sweetly creepe
Into his study of imagination,
And euery louely Organ of her life,
Shall come apparel'd in more precious habite
More moouing delicate, and full of life,
Into the eye and prospect of his soule
Then when she liued indeed: then shall he mourne,
If euer Loue had interest in his liuer,
And wish he had not so accused her,
No, though he thought his accusation true.
Let this be so, and doubt not but successe
Will fashion the euent in better shape,
Than I can lay it downe in likelihood.
But if all aime but this be leuied false,
The supposition of the Ladies death,
Will quench the wonder of her infamie.
And if it sort not well you may conceale her,
As best befits her wounded reputation,
In some reclusiue and religious life,
Out of all eyes, tongues, mindes and injuries.
Bene. Signior Leonato, let the Frier aduise you,
And though you know my inwardnesse and loue
Is very much vnto the Prince and Claudio,

Yet

Yet, by mine honor, I will deale in this,
As secretly and iustly, as your soule
Should with your body
Leon. Being that I flow in greefe,
The smallest twine may lead me
Fryer. 'Tis well consented presently away,
For to strange sores strangely they strain the cure.
Come Lady, die to liue, this wedding day
Perhaps is but prolonged, haue patience & endure Exit.
Bene. Lady Beatrice, haue you wept all this while?
Beat. Yea, and I will weepe a while longer.
Bene. I will not desire that.
Beat. You haue no reason, I doe it freely.
Bene. Surely I do beleeue your faire cousin is wronged.
Beat. Ah, how much might he man deserue of mee that would right mee.
Bene. Is there any way to shew such friendship?
Beat. A very euen way, but no such friend.
Bene. May a man do it?
Beat. It is a mans office, but not yours.
Bene. I do loue nothing in the world so well as you, is not that strange?
Beat. As strange as the thing I know not, it were as possible for me to say, I loued nothing so well as you, but beleeue me not, and yet I lie not, I confesse nothing, nor I denie nothing. I am sorry for my cousin.
Bene. By my sword Beatrice thou louest me.
Beat. Do not sweare by it and eate it.
Bene. I will sweare by it that you loue mee, and I will make him eate it that sayes I loue not you.
Beat. Will you not eate your word?
Bene. With no sawce that can be deuised to it, I protest I loue thee.
Beat. Why then God forgiue me.
Bene. What offence sweet Beatrice?
Beat. You haue staied me in a happy howre, I was about to protest I loued you.
Bene. And do it with all thy heart.
Beat. I loue you with so much of my heart, that none is left to protest.
Leon. Come bid me doe any thing for thee.
Beat. Kill Claudio.
Bene. Ha, not for the wide world.
Beat. You kill me to deny, farewell.
Bene. Tarrie sweet Beatrice.
Beat. I am gone, though I am heere, there is no loue in you, nay I pray you let me goe.
Bene. Beatrice.
Beat. In faith I will goe.
Bene. Wee'll be friends first.
Beat. You dare easier be friends with mee, than fight with mine enemy.
Bene. Is Claudio thine enemie?
Beat. Is a not approued in the height a villaine, that hath slandered, scorned, dishonoured my kinswoman? O that I were a man! what, beare her in hand vntil they come to take hands, and then with publike accusation vncouered slander, vnmitigated rancour? O God that I were a man! I would eate his heart in the market-place.
Bene. Heare me Beatrice.
Beat. Talke with a man out at a window, a proper saying.
Bene. Nay but Beatrice.
Beat. Sweet Hero, she is wronged, she is slandered, she is vndone.
Bene. Beat-

Beat. Princes and Counties! surelie a Princely testimonie, a goodly Count, Comfect, a sweet Gallant surelie, O that I were a man for his sake! or that I had any friend would be a man for my sake! But manhood is melted into curtsies, valour into complement, and men are onelie turned into tongue, and trim ones too: he is now as valiant as Hercules, that only tells a lie, and sweares it: I cannot be a man with wishing, therfore I will die a woman with grieuing.
Bene. Tarry good Beatrice by this hand I loue thee.
Beat. Vse it for my loue some other way then swearing by it.
Bene. Thinke you in your soule the Count Claudio hath wrong'd Hero?
Beat. Yea, as sure as I haue a thought, or a soule.
Bene. Enough, I am engaged, I will challenge him, I will kisse your hand, and so leaue you: by this I and Claudio shall render me a deere account: as you heare of me, so thinke of me: goe comfort your cousin, I must say she is dead, and so farewell.

Enter the Constables, Borachio, and the Towne Clerke in gownes.

Keeper. Is our whole dissembly appeard?
Cowley. O a stoole and a cushion for the Sexton.
Sexton. Which be the malefactors?
Andrew. Marry that am I, and my partner.
Cowley. Nay that's certaine, wee haue the exhibition to examine.
Sexton. But which are the offenders that are to be examined, let them come before master Constable.
Kemp. Yea marry let them come before mee, what is your name, friend?
Bor. Borachio.
Kemp. Pray write downe Borachio. Yours sirra.
Con. I am a Gentleman sir, and my name is Conrade.
Kem. Write downe Master gentleman Conrade: masters, do you serue God? masters, it is proued already that you are little better than false knaues, and it will goe neere to be thought so shortly, how answer you for your selues?
Con. Marry sir, we say we are none.
Kemp. A marueilous witty fellow I assure you, but I will goe about with him: come you hither sirra, a word in your eare sir, I say to you, it is thought you are false knaues.
Bor. Sir, I say to you, we are none.
Kemp. Well, stand aside, 'fore God they are both in a tale: haue you writ downe that they are none?
Sext. Master Constable, you go not the way to examine, you must call forth the watch that are their accusers.
Kemp. Yea marry, that's the eftest way, let the watch come forth: masters, I charge you in the Princes name, accuse these men.
Watch 1. This man said sir, that Don Iohn the Princes brother was a villaine.
Kemp. Write down, Prince Iohn a villaine: why this is flat periurie, to call a Princes brother villaine.
Bora. Master Constable
Kemp. Pray thee fellow peace, I do not like thy looke I promise thee.
Sexton. What heard you him say else?
Watch 2. Mary that he had receiued a thousand Ducates of Don Iohn, for accusing the Lady Hero wrongfully.

Kem

Kemp. Flat Burglarie as ever was committed.

Conft. Yea by th'maſſe that it is.

Sexton. What else fellowes?

Watch 1. And that Count Claudio did meane vpon his words, to diſgrace Hero before the whole aſſembly, and not marry her.

Kemp. O villaine! thou wilt be condemn'd into euerlaſting redemption for this.

Sexton. What elſe?

Watch. This is all.

Sexton. And this is more maſters then you can deny. Prince Iohn is this morning ſecretly ſtolne away: Hero was in this manner accuſed, in this very manner refuſed, and vpon the griefe of this ſuddenly died. Maſter Conſtable, let them come before me (ſeruing-man, fetch more light and boyes) and I will go before, and ſhew him their examination.

Conſt. Come let them be opinion'd.

Sex. Let them be in the hand of Coxcombe.

Kem. God's my life, where's this Sexton? Let him write downe the Prince his Officer Coxcombe. Come bind them: thou naughty varlet.

Conra. Away, you are an Aſſe, you are an Aſſe.

Kemp. Do you not know me is Dogberry? nay it ſhall be the worſe for you anon. Is it a world to ſlander honeſt men thus? how ſhall we goe to anſwer it? The bad-man hath confeſſed, that is enough: but he ſhall be anſwered. Let them be well look'd to, fellowes: I ſay 'twas ſtolne away: and for a wiſe-man's word to a Maſter Conſtable, let a Reſcue be laid for the Prince his Officer

Win me and weare me, let him answere me.
Come follow me boy, come sir boy, come follow me
Sir boy, ile whip you from your foyning fence,
Nay, as I am a gentleman, I will
Leon. Brother
Bro. Content your self. God knows I lou'd my neece,
And she is dead, slander'd to death by villaines,
That dare as well answer a man indeede,
As I dare take a serpent by the tongue
Boyes, apes, braggarts, Jackes, milke-sops
Leon. Brother Anthony.
Ant. Hold you content, what man? I know them, yea
And what they weigh, euen to the vtmost scruple,
Scambling, out-facing, fashion-monging boyes,
That lye, and cog, and flout, deprave and slander,
Goe antickly, and show outward hideousnesse,
And speake off halfe a dozen dangerous words
How they might hurt their enemies, if they durst.
And this is all.
Leon. But brother Anthony.
Ant. Come 'tis no matter,
Do not you meddle, let me deale in this.
Pru. Gentlemen both, we will not wake your patience
My heart is sorry for your daughters death
But on my honour she was charg'd with nothing
But what was true and very full of proofe
Leon. My Lord, my Lord
Prin. I will not heare you
Enter Benedicke.
Leo. No come brother, away, I will be heard.
Exeunt ambo.
Bro. And shall, or some of vs will smart for it
Prin. See, see here comes the man we went to seeke
Clau. Now signior, what newes?
Ben. Good day my Lord.
Prin. Welcome signior, you are almost come to part almost a fray
Clau. We had liked to haue had our two noses snapt off with two old men without teeth.
Prin. Leonato and his brother, what think'st thou had we fought, I doubt we should haue been too yong for them
Ben. In a masked, garrison this is no true valour. I came to seeke you both
Clau. We haue been vp and downe to seeke thee, for we are high proofe melancholy, and would faine haue it beaten away, wilt thou vse thy wit?
Ben. It is in my scabbard, shall I draw it?
Prin. Dost thou weare thy wit by thy side?
Clau. Neuer any did so, though very many haue been beside their wit, I will bid thee draw, as we do the minstrels, draw to pleasure vs
Prin. As I am an honest man he looks pale, art thou sicke, or angry?
Clau. What, courage man, what though care kil'd a cat, thou hast mettle enough in thee to kill care.
Ben. Sir, I shall meete your wit in the carreere, and you charge it against me, I pray you chuse another subiect
Clau. Nay then giue him another staffe, this last was broke crosse.
Prin. By this light, he changes more and more, I thinke he be angrie indeede
Clau. If he be, he knowes how to turne his girdle
Ben. Shall I take a word in your eare?
Clau. God bleſſe me from a challenge.
Ben. You are a villaine, I ieſt not, I will make it good how you dare, with what you dare, and when you dare do me right, or I will proteſt your cowardiſe: you haue kill'd a ſweete Ladie, and her death ſhall fall heauie on you, let me heare from you.
Clau. Well, I will meete you, ſo I may haue good cheare.
Prin. What, a feaſt, a feaſt?
Clau. I faith I thanke him, he hath bid me to a calues head and a Capon, the which if I doe not carue moſt curiouſly, ſay my knife's naught, ſhall I not finde a woodcocke too?
Ben. Sir, your wit ambles well, it goes eaſily.
Prin. Ile tell thee how Beatrice prais'd thy wit the other day: I ſaid thou hadſt a fine wit: true ſaies ſhe, a fine little one: no ſaid I, a great wit: right ſaies ſhee, a great groſſe one: nay ſaid I, a good wit: iuſt ſaid ſhe, it hurts nobody: nay ſaid I, the gentleman is wiſe: certain ſaid ſhe, a wiſe gentleman: nay ſaid I, he hath the tongues that I beleeue ſaid ſhee, for hee ſwore a thing to me on munday night, which he forſwore on tuesday morning: there's a double tongue, there's two tongues: thus did ſhee an howre together tranſ-ſhape thy particular vertues, yet at laſt ſhe concluded with a ſigh, thou waſt the propereſt man in Italie
Clau. For the which ſhe wept heartily, and ſaid ſhee car'd not
Prin. Yea that ſhe did, but yet for all that, and if ſhee did not hate him deadlie, ſhee would loue him dearely, the old mans daughter told vs all
Clau. All, all, and moreouer, God ſaw him when he was hid in the garden
Prin. But when ſhall we ſet the ſauage Bulls hornes on the ſenſible Benedicks head?
Clau. Yea and text vnder-neath, heere dwells Benedicke the married man.
Ben. Fare you well, Boy, you know my minde, I will leaue you now to your goſſep-like humor, you breake ieſts as braggards do their blades, which God be thanked hurt not: my Lord, for your manie courteſies I thanke you, I muſt diſcontinue your companie, your brother the Baſtard is fled from Meſſina: you haue among you, kil'd a ſweet and innocent Ladie: for my Lord Lackebeard there, he and I ſhall meete, and till then peace be with him.
Prin. He is in earneſt
Clau. In moſt profound earneſt, and Ile warrant you, for the loue of Beatrice.
Prin. And hath challeng'd thee
Clau. Moſt ſincerely.
Prin. What a pretty thing man is, when he goes in his doublet and hoſe, and leaues off his wit

Enter Conſtable, Coūrade, and Borachio.

Clau. He is then a Giant to an Ape, but then is an Ape a Doctor to ſuch a man.
Prin. But ſoft you, let me be, pluck vp my heart, and be ſad, did he not ſay my brother was fled?
Conſt. Come you ſir, if iuſtice cannot tame you, ſhee ſhall nere weigh more reaſons in her ballance, nay, and you be a curſing hypocrite once, you muſt be look'd to.
Prin. How now, two of my brothers men bound? Borachio one.
Clau. Harken after their offence my Lord
Prin. Officers, what offence haue theſe men done?
Con. Marrie

Conft. Marrie fir, they haue committed falſe report, moreouer they haue ſpoken vntruths, ſecondarily they are ſlanders, ſixt and laſtly, they haue belyed a Ladie, thirdly, they haue verified vniuſt things, and to conclude they are lying knaues

Prin. Firſt I aske thee what they haue done, thirdlie I aske thee what's their offence, ſixt and laſtlie why they are committed, and to conclude, what you lay to their charge.

Clau. Rightlie reaſoned, and in his owne diuiſion, and by my troth there's one meaning well fitted.

Prin. Who haue you offended maſters, that you are thus bound to your anſwere? this learned Conſtable is too cunning to be vnderſtood, what's your offence?

Bor. Sweete Prince, let me go no farther to mine anſwere, do you beare me, and all this Count kild mee I haue deceiued euen your verie eies: what your wiſedomes could not diſcouer, theſe ſhallow fooles haue brought to light, who in the night ouerheard me confeſſing to this man how Don Iohn your brother incenſed me to ſlander the Ladie Hero, how you were brought into the Orchard, and ſaw me court Margaret in Heroes garments, how you diſgraced her when you ſhould marrie her: my villanies they haue vpon record, which I had rather ſeale with my death, then repeate ouer to my ſhame: the Ladies death vpon my mine and my maſters falſe accuſation and briefly, I deſire nothing but the reward of a villaine.

Prin. Runs not this ſpeech like yron through your ſoule?

Clau. I haue drunke poiſon whiles he vttered it.

Prin. But did my brother ſet thee on to this?

Bor. Yea and paid me richly for the practiſe of it.

Prin. He is compoſd and fram'd of treacherie,
And fled he is vpon this villanie.

Clau. Sweet Hero, now thy image doth appeare
In the rare ſemblance that I lou'd it firſt.

Conſt. Come bring away the plaintiffes, by this time our Sexton hath reformed Signior Leonato of the matter: and maſters do not forget to ſpecifie when time & place ſhall ſerue, that I am an Aſſe.

Cowl. Here, here comes maſter Signior Leonato, and the Sexton too.

Enter Leonato.

Leon. Which is the villaine? let me ſee his eies,
That when I note another man like him,
I may auoide him: which of theſe is he?

Bor. If you would know your wronger, looke on me.

Leon. Art thou thou the ſlaue that with thy breath haſt kild mine innocent childe?

Bor. Yea, euen I alone.

Leo. No, not ſo villaine, thou beliеſt thy ſelfe.
Here ſtand a paire of honourable men,
A third is fled that had a hand in it:
I thanke you Princes for my daughters death,
Record it with your high and worthie deedes,
'Twas bravely done, if you bethinke you of it.

Clau. I know not how to pray your patience,
Yet I muſt ſpeake, chooſe your reuenge your ſelfe,
Impoſe me to what penance your inuention
Can lay vpon my ſinne, yet ſinn'd I not,
But in miſtaking.

Prin. By my ſoule nor I,
And yet to ſatisfie this good old man,
I would bend vnder any heauie waight,
That he'ſe enioyne me to.

Leon. I cannot bid you bid my daughter liue,
That were impoſſible, but I pray you both,
Poſſeſſe the people in Meſſina here,
How innocent ſhe died, and if your loue
Can labour aught in ſad inuention,
Hang her an epitaph vpon her toombe,
And ſing it to her bones, ſing it to night:
To morrow morning come you to my houſe,
And ſince you could not be my ſonne in law,
Be yet my Nephew: my brother hath a daughter,
Almoſt the copie of my childe that's dead,
And ſhe alone is heire to both of vs:
Giue her the right you ſhould haue giuen her couſin,
And ſo dies my reuenge.

Clau. O noble ſir!
Your ouerkindneſſe doth wring teares from me,
I do embrace your offer, and diſpoſe
For hence-forth of poore Claudio.

Leon. To morrow then I looke for you: and Take my leaue of you
Shall I entreat you bide with Margaret,
Who I beleeue was packt in all this wrong,
Hired to it by your brother.

Bor. No by my ſoule ſhe was not,
Nor knew not what ſhe did when ſhe ſpoke to me,
But alwaies hath bin iuſt and vertuous,
In any thing that I do know by her.

Conſt. Moreouer ſir, which indeed is not vnder white and black this plaintiffe here, the offender did call me aſſe, I beſeech you let it be remembred in his punishment: and alſo the watch heard them talke of one Deformed: they ſay he weares a key in his eare and a lock hanging by it, and borrowes money in Gods name, the which he hath vſed ſo long and neuer payd, that now men grow hard-hearted and will lend nothing for Gods ſake: pray you examine him vpon that point.

Leon. I thanke thee for thy care and honeſt paines.

Conſt. Your worſhip ſpeakes like a moſt thankfull and reuerend youth, and I praiſe God for you.

Leon. There's for thy paines.

Conſt. God ſaue the foundation.

Leon. Go, I diſcharge thee of thy priſoner, and I thanke thee.

Conſt. I leaue an arreſt vpon you maſter, which I beſeech your worſhip to correct your ſelfe, for the example of others: God keepe your worſhip, I wiſh your worſhip well, God reſtore you health. I humbly giue you leaue to depart, and if a merry meeting may be wiſht, God prohibit it: come neighbour.

Leon. Vntill to morrow morning, Lords farewell.

Bro. Farewell my Lord, we looke for you to morrow.

Prin. We will not faile.

Clau. To night ile mourne with Hero.

Leon. Bring you theſe fellowes on, we'll talke with Margaret, how her acquaintance grew with this lewd fellow.

Exeunt

Enter Benedicke and Margaret.

Ben. Pray thee ſweete Miſtris Margaret, deſerue well at my hands, by helping mee to the ſpeech of Beatrice.

Mar. W

Mar. Will you then write me a Sonnet in praise of my beautie?

Bene. In so high a stile Margaret, that no man hiring shal come ouer it, for in most comely truth thou deseruest it.

Mar. To haue no man come ouer me, why, shall I alwaies keepe below stairs?

Bene. Thy wit is as quicke as the grey-hounds mouth, it catches.

Mar. And yours, as blunt as the Fencers foiles, which hit, but hurt not.

Bene. A most manly wit Margaret, it will not hurt a woman: and so I pray thee call Beatrice, I giue thee the bucklers.

Mar. Giue vs the swords, we haue bucklers of our owne.

Bene. If you vse them Margaret, you must put in the pikes with a vice, and they are dangerous weapons for Maides.

Mar. Well, I will call Beatrice to you, who I thinke hath legges. Exit Margarite

Bene. And therefore will come. The God of loue that sits aboue, and knowes me, and knowes me, how pitifull I deserue. I meane in singing, but in louing, Leander the good swimmer, Troylus the first employer of pandars, and a whole booke full of these quondam carpet-mongers, whose names yet run smoothly in the euen road of a blanke verse, why they were neuer so truely turned ouer and ouer as my poore selfe in loue. Marrie I cannot shew it in rime, I haue tried, I can finde out no rime to Lady but baby, an innocent rime; for scorne, horne, a hard rime: for schoole foole, a babling rime very ominous endings, no, I was not borne vnder a rhiming Planet, for I cannot woo in festiuall termes sweete Beatrice would'st thou come when I cal'd thee?

Beat. Yea Signior and depart when you bid me.

Bene. O stay but till then.

Beat. Then is spoken: I am gone now, and yet ere I goe, let me goe with that I came, which is with knowing what hath past betweene you and Claudio.

Bene. Only foule words, and thereupon I will kisse thee.

Beat. Foule words is but foule wind, and foule wind is but foule breath, and foule breath is noisome, therefore I will depart vnkist.

Bene. Thou hast diuorced the word out of his right sence, so forcible is thy wit, but I must tell thee plainely, Claudio vndergoes my challenge, and either I must shortly heare from him, or I will subscribe him a coward, and I pray thee now tell me, for which of my bad parts didst thou first fall in loue with me?

Beat. For them all together, which maintain'd so politique a state of euill, that they will not admit any good part to intermingle with them: but for which of my good parts did you first suffer loue for me?

Bene. Suffer loue! a good epithite, I do suffer loue indeede, for I loue thee against my will.

Beat. In spight of your heart I think, alas poore heart, if you spight it for my sake, I will spight it for yours, for I will neuer loue that which my friend hates.

Bene. Thou and I are too wise to woo peaceable.

Beat. It appeares not in this confession, there's not one wise man among twentie that will praise himselfe.

Bene. An old, an old instance Beatrice, that liu'd in the time of good neighbours, if a man doe not erect in this age his owne tombe ere he dies, hee shall liue no longer in monuments, then the Bels ring, & the Widdow weepes.

Beat. And how long is that thinke you?

Bene. Question, why an hower in clamour and a quarter in the rewme, therfore is it most expedient for the wise, if Don worme (his conscience) finde no impediment to the contrarie, to be the trumpet of his owne vertues, as I am to my selfe so much for praising my selfe, who I my selfe will beare witnesse is praise worthie, and now tell me, how doth your cosin?

Beat. Very ill.

Bene. And how doe you?

Beat. Very ill too.

Enter Vrsula.

Bene. Serue God, loue me, and mend, there will I leaue you too, for here comes one in haste.

Vrs. Madam, you must come to your Vncle, yonders old coile at home, it is proued my Ladie Hero hath bin falsely accusde, the Prince and Claudio mightily abusde, and Don Iohn is the author of all, who is fled and gone: will you come presently?

Beat. Will you go heare this newes Signior?

Bene. I will liue in thy heart, die in thy lap, and be buried in thy eies: and moreouer, I will go with thee to thy Vncles. Exeunt.

Enter Claudio, Prince, and three or foure with Tapers

Clau. Is this the monument of Leonato?

Lord. It is my Lord. Epitaph.

Done to death by slanderous tongues,
Was the Hero that here lies
Death in guerdon of her wrongs,
Gives her fame which never dies:
So the life that died with shame,
Lives in death with glorious fame
Hang thou there vpon the tombe,
Praising her when I am dombe

Clau. Now musick sound & sing your solemn hymne

Song.

Pardon goddesse of the night,
Those that slew thy virgin knight,
For the which with songs of woe,
Round about her tombe they goe:
Midnight assist our mone, helpe vs to sigh and grone.
Heauily, heauily.
Graues yawne and yeelde your dead,
Till death be vttered,
Heauenly, heauenly.

Le. Now vnto thy bones good night, yeerely will I do (this right.

Prin. Good morrow masters, put your Torches out,
The wolues haue preied, and looke, the gentle day
Before the wheeles of Phœbus, round about
Dapples the drowsie East with spots of grey:
Thanks to you all, and leaue vs, fare you well.

Clau. Good morrow masters, each his seuerall way.

Prin. Come let vs hence, and put on other weedes,
And then to Leonatoes we will goe.

Clau. And Hymen now with luckier issue speeds,

Then

Then this for whom we rendred vp this woe Exeunt.

Enter Leonato, Bene. Marg. Vrsula, old man, Frier, Hero.

Frier. Did I not tell you she was innocent?

Leo. So are the Prince and Claudio who accus'd her,
Vpon the error that you heard debated:
But Margaret was in some fault for this,
Although against her will as it appeares,
In the true course of all the question.

Old. Well, I am glad that all things sort so well.

Bene. And so am I, being else by faith enforc'd
To call young Claudio to a reckoning for it.

Leo. Well daughter, and you gentlewomen all,
Withdraw into a chamber by your selues,
And when I send for you, come hither mask'd.
The Prince and Claudio promis'd by this howre
To visit me. You know your office brother,
You must be father to your brothers daughter,
And giue her to young Claudio. Exeunt Ladies.

Old. Which I will doe with confirm'd countenance.

Bene. Frier, I must intreat your paines, I think.

Frier. To doe what Signior?

Bene. To binde me, or vndoe me, one of them:
Signior Leonato, truth it is good Signior,
Your neece regards me with an eye of fauour.

Leo. That eye my daughter lent her, 'tis most true.

Bene. And I doe with an eye of loue requite her.

Leo. The sight whereof I think you had from me,
From Claudio, and the Prince, but what's your will?

Bened. Your answer sir is Enigmaticall,
But for my will, my will is your good will
May stand with both, this day to be conioyned,
In the state of honourable marriage
In which good Frier I shall desire your helpe.

Leon. My heart is with your liking.

Frier. And my helpe.

Enter Prince and Claudio, with attendants.

Prin. Good morrow to this faire assembly.

Leo. Good morrow Prince, good morrow Claudio.
We here attend you, are you yet determin'd,
To day to marry with my brothers daughter?

Claud. Ile hold my mind, were she an Ethiope.

Leo. Call her forth brother, here's the Frier ready.

Prin. Good morrow Benedicke, why what's the matter?
That you haue such a February face,
So full of frost, of storme, and cloudinesse.

Claud. I think he thinkes vpon the sauage bull.
Tush, feare not man, wee'll tip thy hornes with gold,
And all Europa shall reioyce at thee,
As once Europa did at lusty Ioue,
When he would play the noble beast in loue.

Ben. Bull Ioue sir, had an amiable low,
And some such strange bull leapt your fathers Cow,
A got a Calfe in that same noble feat,
Much like to you, for you haue iust his bleat.

Enter brother, Hero, Beatrice, Margaret, Vrsula.

Cla. For this I owe you: here comes other reckonings.
Which is the Lady I must seize vpon?

Leo. This same is she, and I doe giue you her.

Cla. Why then she's mine, sweet let me see your face.

Leon. No that you shall not, till you take her hand,
Before this Frier, and sweare to marry her.

Clau. Giue me your hand before this holy Frier,
I am your husband if you like of me.

Hero. And when I liu'd I was your other wife,
And when you lou'd, you were my other husband.

Clau. Another Hero?

Hero. Nothing certainer.
One Hero died, but I doe liue,
And surely as I liue, I am a maid.

Prin. The former Hero, Hero that is dead.

Leon. Shee died my Lord, but whiles her slander liu'd.

Frier. All this amazement can I qualifie,
When after that the holy rites are ended,
I'le tell you largely of faire Heroes death:
Meane time let wonder seeme familiar,
And to the chappell let vs presently.

Ben. Soft and faire Frier, which is Beatrice?

Beat. I answer to that name, what is your will?

Ben. Do not you loue me?

Beat. Why no, no more than reason.

Ben. Why then your Vncle, and the Prince, & Claudio haue been deceiued, they swore you did.

Beat. Do not you loue me?

Ben. Troth no, no more than reason.

Beat. Why then my Cosen Margaret and Vrsula
Are much deceiued, for they did swear you did.

Ben. They swore you were almost sick for me.

Beat. They swore you were well-nye dead for me.

Ben. 'Tis no matter, then you do not loue me?

Beat. No truly but in friendly recompence.

Leon. Come Cosin, I am sure you loue the gentleman.

Clau. And I'le be sworne he loues her, for heres a paper written in his hand,
A halting sonnet of his owne pure braine,
Fashioned to Beatrice.

Hero. And heres another,
Writ in my cosins hand, stolne from her pocket,
Containing her affection vnto Benedicke.

Bene. A miracle, heere's our owne hands against our hearts: come I will haue thee, but by this light I take thee for pitie.

Beat. I would not deny you, but by this good day I yeeld vpon great perswasion, and partly to saue your life, for I was told you were in a consumption.

Leon. Peace, I will stop your mouth.

Prin. How dost thou Benedicke the married man?

Bene. Ile tell thee what Prince: a College of wit-crackers cannot flout me out of my humour: dost thou think I care for a satyre, or an epigram? No: if a man will be beaten with braines, a shall wear nothing handsome about him: in briefe, since I do purpose to marry, I will think nothing to any purpose that the world can say against it: and therefore never flout at me, for what I said against it, I will stand to it: for the truth is, I loue her: and neither with my sword, nor with my wit, nor in my habit, nor my company, nor any other way, confirm to my part I am, I tell you, I am a married man, but a true bred, and a very valiant.

Cla. I had well hoped thou wouldst haue denied Beatrice, I might haue cudgell'd thee out of thy single life, to make thee a double dealer, which out of question thou wilt be, if my Cosen do not looke exceeding narrowly to thee.

Bene. Come, come, we are friends, let's haue a dance ere we are married, that we may lighten our own hearts, and our wiues heeles.

Leon. We'll haue dancing afterward.

Bene. First, of my word, therefore play Musick. Prince thou art sad, get thee a wife, get thee a wife: there is no staff more reuerend than one tipt with horne. Enter Messenger.

Mess. My Lord, your brother Iohn is taken in flight, and brought with armed men back to Messina.

Bene. Think not on him till to morrow, I'le deuise thee braue punishments for him. Strike vp Pipers. Dance.

L FINIS.

Loues Labour's lost.

Actus primus.

Enter Ferdinand King of Nauarre, Berowne, Longauill, and Dumaine.

Ferdinand.

[illegible]

Berowne. Let me say no my Liege, and it you please,
I haue a sute to your Maiesty.
A request that lies in your bed, and the rest
Ferd. You cannot passe away from these
Berow. Why that is then no part of your oath already.
Ferd. Well, say your sute.
Berow. Let me haue audience for a hasty weeke,
Admit some gentle entertainment to my neate conceite.
Ferd. You swore to that Berowne, and to the rest
Berow. By yea and nay sir, then I swore in iest
What is the end of study, let me know?
Ferd. Why that to know which else we should not know.
Berow. Things hid & bard (you meane) from common sense
Ferd. I that is the liues glorious recompence.
Berow. Come on then, I will sweare to studie so,
To know the thing I am forbid to know.
As thus, to study where I well may dine,
When I to fast expressely am forbid
Or study where to meet some Mistresse fine,
When Mistresses from common sense are hid.
Or hauing sworne too hard a keeping oath,
Studie to breake it, and not breake my troth.
If studies gaine be thus, and this be so,
Study knowes that which yet it doth not know.
Sweare to my studie, that your selfe shall goe
Ferd. Well, sir, this gaine shall graze my studie quite,
And your owne warre shall be this cowards flight.
Berow. Well, sweet Lord, if you saue me with your pen,
Sleepe when you can, I'le compasse you with mine,
And by and by my studie is to you.
Perchance that terme is passed ere I come,
Loue findes all leasures and all places ope.
If so, our copper buds need not to be broke,
Study is like the heauens glorious Sunne,
That will not be deepe search'd with sawcy lookes.
Small haue continuall plodders euer wonne,
Saue base authority from others Bookes.
These earthly Godfathers of heauens lights,
That giue a name to euery fixed Starre,
Haue no more profit of their shining nights,
Then those that walke and wot not what they are Too much to know, is to know nought but fame
And euery Godfather can giue a name.
Ferd. How well he's read, to reason against reading.

Dum

Dum. Proceeded well, to ſtop all good proceeding
Lon. Hee weedes the corne, and ſtill lets grow the weeding.
Ber. The Spring is neare when greene geeſſe are a breeding.
Dum. How followes that?
Ber. Fit in his place and time.
Dum. In reaſon nothing.
Ber. Something then in rime
Ferd. Berowne is like an enuious ſneaping Froſt,
That bites the firſt borne infants of the Spring.
Ber. Wel, ſay I am, why ſhould proud Summer boaſt,
Before the Birds haue any cauſe to ſing?
Why ſhould I ioy in any abortiue birth?
At Chriſtmas I no more deſire a Roſe,
Then wiſh a Snow in Maies new tangled ſhowes:
But like of each thing that in ſeaſon growes.
So you to ſtudie now it is too late,
That were to clymbe ore the houſe to vnlocke the gate
Fer. Well, ſir you may go home Berowne, adue
Ber. No my good Lord, I haue ſworn to ſtay with you
And though I haue for barbariſme ſpoke more,
Then for that Angel knowledge you can ſay,
Yet confident Ile keepe what I haue ſworne,
And bide the penance of each three yeares day
Giue me the paper, let me read the ſame,
And to the ſtricteſt decrees Ile write my name.
Fer. How well this yeelding reſcues thee from ſhame.
Ber. Item. That no woman ſhall come within a mile of my Court
Hath this been proclaimed?
Lon. Fower dayes agoe.
Ber. Let's ſee the penaltie.
On paine of loſing her tongue
Who deuiſed this penaltie?
Lon. Marry that did I
Ber. Sweete Lord, and why?
Lon To fright them hence with that dread penaltie,
A dangerous law againſt gentrice.
Item, If any man be ſeene to talke with a woman within the tearme of three yeares, he ſhall indure ſuch publique ſhame as the reſt of the Court can poſſibly deuiſe.
Ber. This Article my Liedge your ſelfe muſt breake,
For well you know here comes in Embaſſie
The French Kings daughter, with your leaue to ſpeake.
A Maide of grace and compleate maieſtie,
About ſurrender vp of Aquitaine:
To her decrepit, ſicke, and bed-rid father.
Therefore this Article is made in vaine,
Or vainly comes th'admired Princeſſe hither.
Fer. What ſay you Lords?
Why, this was quite forgot.
Ber. So Studie euermore is ouer ſhot,
While it doth ſtudy to haue what it would,
It doth forget to doe the thing it ſhould:
And when it hath the thing it hunteth moſt,
'Tis won as townes with fire, ſo won, ſo loſt
Fer. We muſt of force diſpence with this Decree,
She muſt lye here on meere neceſſitie.
Ber Neceſſity will make vs all forſworne
Three thouſand times within this three yeeres ſpace:
For euery man with his affects is borne,
Not by might maſtred, but by ſpeciall grace.
If I breake faith, this word ſhall breake for me,
I am forſworne on meere neceſſitie
So to the Lawes at large I write my name,
And he that breakes them in the leaſt degree,
Stands in attaindor of eternall ſhame.
Suggeſtions are to others as to me
But I beleeue although I ſeeme to loth,
I am the laſt that will laſt keepe his oth.
But is there no quicke recreation granted?
Fer. I that there is, our Court you know is haunted
With a refined trauailer of Spaine,
A man in all the worlds new faſhion planted,
That hath a mint of phraſes in his braine
One, who the muſicke of his owne vaine tongue,
Doth ſaine like ſelfe applauſe bequeathes:
A man of compliments whom right and wrong
Haue choſe as vmpire of their mutinies:
This child of fancie that Armado hight,
For interim to our ſtudies ſhall relate,
In high-borne words the worth of many a Knight
From tawny Spaine loſt in the world's debate.
How you delight, my Lords, I know not, I,
But I protect I haue to entertaine it,
And I hope it is not for my Minſtrelſie
Ber. Armado is a moſt illuſtrious wight,
A man of fire new words faſhions owne knight.
Lon. Coſtard the ſwaine and he ſhall be our ſport,
And ſo to ſtudie, three yeeres is but ſhort.

Enter a Conſtable with Coſtard with a Letter

Conſt. Which is the Dukes owne perſon.
Ber. This ſir Adriano, What would you?
Con. I my ſelfe reſpect the owne perſon, for I am his graces Tharborough. But I would ſee his own, if you know him.
Ber. I know him ſir.
Con. I beſeech you ſir, this letter will tell you more.
Cost. Sir the Contempts thereof are as touching me.
Fer. A letter from the magnificent Armado.
Ber. How low ſoeuer the matter, I hope in God for high words.
Lon. A high hope for a low heauen, God grant vs patience
Ber. To heare, or forbeare hearing.
Lon. To heare meekely ſir, and to laugh moderately, or to forbeare both.
Ber. Well ſir, be it as the ſtile ſhall giue vs cauſe to clime in the merineſſe.
Cla. The matter is to me ſir, as concerning Iaquenetta. The manner of it is, I was taken with the manner.
Ber. In what manner?
Cla. In manner and forme following, ſir all thoſe three I was ſeene with her in the Manor houſe ſitting with her vpon the Forme, and taken following her into the Parke: which put together, is in manner and forme following. Now ſir for the manner; It is the manner of a man to ſpeake to a woman, for the forme in ſome forme.
Ber. For the following ſir.
Cla. As it ſhall follow in my correction, and God defend the right.
Fer. Will you heare this Letter with attention?
Ber. As we would heare an Oracle
Cla. Such is the ſimplicitie of man to harken after the fleſh.

Ferdinand

GReat Deputie, the Welkins Vicegerent, and sole dominator of Navar, my soules earth, God, and bodies fostring patrone

Cost Not a word of Costard yet.

Ferd Sorrow

Cost It may be so, but if he say it is so, he is in telling true but so.

Ferd. Peace,

Clow Be to me, and every man that dares not fight

Ferd. No words,

Clow Of other men sleeues I beseech you

Ferd Sorrow be [illegible] melancholie, I did commend the blacke oppressing humour to the most wholesome Physicke of thy health-giuing ayre. And as I am a Gentleman, betraide by [illegible] me neuer from the first houre I beheld her, and neuer knew braine, wit, and memorie good, till I knew this sight grosse, dull, fat, emptie Porpentine, whose grossenesse flies emulate for pitie. Yet for the place where, and the [illegible] I doe suspect this earthie, and conuersant spirit sometime doth appeare: and I doe suppose it is the [illegible] Countrie Swaine, Iaquenetta, that here hath begun to annoy me. For with the loue of the soule, the loue of earth: and as it were, a kinde of interest, or enstyling to all strange Queenes, this Costard Crue Ouse [illegible] is a most illustrious wat, and doth [illegible] to haue the prehemynence of our Dominion, and transcendence of our Crowne, and sit at the foote of our Throne. Oh, a scholler: (search your memorie) who knowes not Eupheates? And who knowes not Eupheates that reades not Lilly? Doth not Lilly read in his youth? Doth not the long tayle Cock stand on the hill? Breefe, the Dogge was bewitched, and I will proue it to his face, ere I go to bed.

Ferd. Darkenesse and the Deuill.

Dum. Exorcisemi de Armado

Ber This is not so well as I looked for, but the best that euer I heard

Ferd Is the best for the worst? But sirra, What say you to this?

Cost. Sir I confesse the Wench

Ferd. Did you heare the Proclamation?

Cost I doe confesse much of the hearing it, but little of the marking of it.

Ferd It was proclaimed a yeeres imprisonment to bee taken with a Wench

Clow I was taken with none sir, I was taken with a Damosell

Ferd Well it was proclaimed Damosell

Clo This was no Damosell neyther sir, shee was a Virgin.

Ferd It is so varied too, for it was proclaimed Virgin

Cost If it were, I deny her Virginitie: I was taken with a Maide.

Ferd. This Maid will not serue your turne sir.

Cost. This Maide will serue my turne sir

Kin. Sir I will pronounce your sentence. You shall fast a Weeke with Branne and water.

Clo. I had rather pray a Moneth with Mutton and Porridge

Kin. And Don Armado shall be your keeper.
My Lord Berowne, see him deliuer'd ore,
And goe we Lords to put in practice that,
Which each to other hath so strongly sworne.

Ber I'le lay my head to any good mans hat,
These oathes and lawes will proue an idle scorne
Sirra, come on

Clo. I suffer for the truth sir: for true it is, I was taken with Iaquenetta, and Iaquenetta is a true girle, and therefore welcome the sowre cup of prosperitie, affliction may one day smile againe, and vntill then sit downe sorrow. Exit.

Enter Armado and Mothu Page

Armā. Boy, What signe is it when a man of great spirit growes melancholy

Boy A great signe sir, that he will looke sad.

Brag Why sad stile is one and the selfe-same thing deare imp.

Boy. No no, O Lord sir no.

Brag How canst thou part sadnesse and melancholy my tender Iuuenall?

Boy. By a familiar demonstration of the working, my tough signeur.

Brag Why tough signeur? Why tough signeur?

Boy. Why tender Iuuenall? Why tender Iuuenall?

Brag. I spoke it tender Iuuenall, as a congruent apatheton appertaining to thy young dayes, which we may nominate tender.

Boy. And tough signeur, as an appertinent title to your olde time, which we may name tough.

Brag Pretty and apt

Boy. How meane you sir, I pretty, and my saying apt? or I apt, and my saying pretty?

Brag. Thou pretty because little.

Boy. Little pretty, because little: wherefore apt?

Brag And therefore apt, because quicke.

Boy Speake you this in my praise Master?

Brag In thy condigne praise.

Boy I will praise an Eele with the same praise

Brag What? that an Eele is ingenious.

Boy. That an Eele is quicke.

Brag. I doe say thou art quicke in answeres. Thou heat'st my blood.

Boy. I am answer'd sir.

Brag. I loue not to be crost. (him.

Boy. He speakes the meere contrary, crosses loue not

Br I haue promis'd to study yeres with the Duke.

Boy. You may doe it in an houre sir.

Brag Impossible

Boy How many is one thrice told?

Brag. I am in a reckoning: it fits the spirit of a Tapster

Boy. You are a gentleman and a gamester sir

Brag I confesse both, they are both the varnish of a compleat man

Boy. Then I am sure you know how much the grosse summe of deuise-ace amounts to.

Brag. It doth amount to one more then two.

Boy. Which the base vulgar call three.

Br. True. Boy. Why sir is this such a peece of study? Now here's three studied, ere you'll thrice wink, & how easie it is to put yeres to the word three, and study three yeeres in two words, the dancing horse will tell you.

Brag. A

Brag. A most fine Figure.

Boy To proue you a Cypher.

Brag. I will heereupon confesse I am in loue and as it is base for a Souldier to loue: so am I in loue with a base wench If drawing my sword against the humour of affection, would deliuer mee from the reprobate thought of it I would take Desire prisoner, and ransome him to any French Courtier for a new deuis'd curtsie. I thinke scorne to sigh, me thinkes I should out-sweare Cupid. Comfort me Boy, What great men haue beene in loue?

Boy. Hercules Master

Brag. Most sweete Hercules: more authority deare Boy, name more; and sweet my childe let them be men of good repute and carriage.

Boy Sampson Master, he was a man of good carriage, great carriage for hee carried the Towne-gates on his backe like a Porter and he was in loue

Brag O well-knit Sampson, strong-witted Sampson; I do excell thee in my rapier, as much as thou didst mee in carrying gates. I am in loue too. Who was Sampsons loue my deare Moth?

Boy A Woman, Master.

Brag Of what complexion?

Boy. Of all the foure or one of the foure

Brag Tell me precisely of what complexion?

Boy Of the sea-water Greene sir

Brag. Is that one of the foure complexions?

Boy. As I haue read sir, and the best of them too

Brag Greene indeed is the colour of Louers but to haue a Loue of that colour, methinkes Sampson had small reason for it. He surely affected her for her wit.

Boy. It was so sir, for she had a greene wit.

Brag. My Loue is most immaculate white and red

Boy. Most immaculate thoughts Master, are mask'd vnder such colours

Brag. Define, define wel-educated infant.

Boy. My fathers wit, and my mothers tongue assist mee

Brag Sweet inuocation of a childe, most pretty and pathetica

Boy. If shee be made of white and red,
Her faults will ne're be knowne
For blushing cheekes by faults are bred,
And feares by pale white showne:
Then if she feare, or be to blame,
By this you shall not know,
For still her cheekes possesse the same,
Which nature she doth owe

A dangerous rime master against the reason of white and redde

Brag. Is there not a ballet Boy, of the King and the Begger?

Boy. The world was very guilty of such a Ballet some three ages since, but I thinke now 'tis not to be found: or if it were, it would neither serue for the writing, nor the tune.

Brag. I will haue that subiect newly writ ore that I may example my digression by some mighty president. Boy, I doe loue that Country girle that I tooke in the Parke with the rationall hinde Costard. she deserues well.

Boy. To be whip'd: and yet a better loue then my Master.

Brag. Sing Boy, my spirit grows heauy in loue.

Boy And that's great marueile, louing a light wench

Brag I say sing

Boy. Forbeare till this company be past.

Enter Clowne, Constable, and Wench

Const. Sir, the Dukes pleasure, is that you keepe Costard safe: and you must let him take no delight, nor no penance but a must fast three dayes a weeke: for this Damsell I must keepe her at the Parke, shee is allowd for the Day-woman. Fare you well Exit

Brag. I do betray my selfe with blushing: Maide.

Maid. Man.

Brag I will visit thee at the Lodge.

Maid. That's here by

Brag I know where it is situate.

Maid Lord how wise you are!

Brag I will tell thee wonders.

Maid. With what face?

Brag. I loue thee

Maid So I heard you say.

Brag. And to farewell.

Maid Fare weather after you

Clo Come Iaquenetta, away Exeunt.

Brag. Villaine, thou shalt fast for thy offences ere thou be pardoned.

Clo Well sir, I hope when I do it, I shall do it on a full stomacke.

Brag. Thou shalt be heauily punished

Clo I am more bound to you then your fellowes, for they are but lightly rewarded.

Const. Take away this villaine shut him vp.

Boy. Come you transgressing slaue, away.

Clo Let mee not bee pent vp sir, I will fast being loose

Boy No sir, that were fast and loose: thou shalt to prison

Clo Well if euer I catch the merry moods of loue on the I haue cause, to curse mine owne wits.

Boy Well said Master Moth, and to it

Clo Nay neuer a whit sir, Master Moth, but what a cry of the poore? it is not for me to be in the wood a twig either: I will say nothing I must Costard, haue more patience a sainter man, and a better, or I can be quiet Exit

Brag I loue affection euery ground (which is vnfit wholesome food) where-on it is bred: guided by reason (which is the rider that must curbe it) I shall be more worthy of a great argument of fame, if I loue. And what loue can that be true loue, which is falsely attempted? Loue is a familiar, Loue is a Deuill. There is euill Angels, but Loue yet Sampson was so tempted, and he had a reasonable strength. Yet was Salomon so seduced, and he had a very good wit. Cupid, But's shaft too hard for Hercules Clubbe, and the globe too much odds for a Pantalons Rapier. The first and second cause will not serue my turne: the Passado he respects not the Duello he regards not, his disgrace is to be called Boy, but his glorie is to subdue men. Adue Valour, rust Rapier, be still Drum, for your manager is in loue, yea he loueth. Assist me some extemporall god of Rime, for I am sure I shall turne Sonnet. Deuise Wit, write Pen, for I am for whole volumes in folio. Exit

Finis Actus Primus

Actus Secunda.

Enter the Princesse of France, with three attending Ladies, and two Lords.

Boyet. Now Madam summon vp your dearest spirits,
Consider who the King your father sends,
To whom he sends, and what's his Embassie:
Your selfe, held precious in the worlds esteeme,
To parle with the sole inheritour
Of all perfections that a man may owe,
Matchlesse Navarre, the plea of no leſſe weight
Then Aquitaine, a Dowrie for a Queene.
Be now as prodigall of all deare grace,
As Nature was in making graces deare,
When she did starue the generall world beside,
And prodigally gaue them all to you.
Queen. Good L. Boyet, my beauty though but mean,
Needs not the painted flourish of your praise,
Beauty is bought by iudgement of the eye,
Not vttered by base sale of chapmens tongues:
I am less proud to heare you tell my worth,
Then you much willing to be counted wise,
In spending your wit in the praise of mine,
But now to task the tasker, good Boyet,
Prin. You are not ignorant all-telling fame
Doth noyse abroad Nauarre the cause our iourney.
Till painefull studie shall out-weare three yeares,
No woman may approach his silent Court.
Therefore to's seemeth it a needfull course,
Before we enter his forbidden gates,
To proue his promise, and thereon dispatch
Your owne wise iudgements how we shall behaue.
Now to our perfect lesson, and to know
Who are the Votaries my louing Lords, that are vowfellowes to this vertuous Melancholy.
Long. Longauill is one
Prin. Know you the man?
Mar. I know him Madam, at a marriage feast,
Betweene L. Perigort and the beautious heire
Of Iaques Falconbridge solemnized.
In Normandie saw I this Longauill,
A man of soueraigne parts he is esteem'd:
Well fitted in Arts, glorious in Armes:
Nothing becomes him ill that he would well:
The only soyle of his faire vertues glosse,
If vertues glosse will staine with any soyle,
Is a sharpe wit matcht with too blunt a Will:
Whose edge hangs on the dull edge of his wils,
That he will not shew his wit enough to deserue his wits.
Prin. So much by his owne mouth.
Long. That he is, I know

Ber. I know you did.
Rosa. How needlesse was it then to aske the question?
Ber. You must not be so quicke.
Rosa. 'Tis long of you y^t spur me with such questions.
Ber. Your wit's too hot, it speeds too fast, 'twill tire.
Rosa. Not till it leaue the Rider in the mire.
Ber. What time a day?
Rosa. The howre that fooles should aske.
Ber. Now faire befal your maske.
Rosa. Faire fall the face it couers.
Ber. And send you many louers.
Rosa. Amen to you be sure.
Ber. Nay then will I be gone.
Kin. Madame, your father here doth intimate,
The payment of a hundred thousand Crownes,
Being but the one halfe, of an intire summe,
Disbursed by my father in his warres.
But say that he, or we, as neither haue
Receiu'd that summe; yet there remaines vnpaid,
A hundred thousand more: in surety of the which,
One part of Aquitaine is bound to vs,
Although not valued to the monyes worth.
If then the King your father will restore
But that one halfe, which is vnsatisfied,
We will giue vp our right in Aquitaine,
And hold faire friendship with his Maiestie.
But that it seemes, he little purposeth,
For here he doth demand to haue repaid,
An hundred thousand more in Siluer plate,
Of this same value, to be strucke at Paris,
One part of which cannot be leuied,
Not solemnized, not a Mariage
But that it breeds, and nourisheth debate.
For suppose these Princes now are met,
An vnder-prizer of siluer and golde,
One payment of a hundred thousand Crownes,
To haue his title, and his Aquitaine,
Which we must rather haue then euer will,
And he must craue, by reason of his debt.
Deare Princesse were not his requests so farre
From reasons yeelding, your faire selfe should make
A yeelding 'gainst some reason in my brest,
And goe well satisfied to France againe.
Prin. You do the King my father too much wrong,
And wrong your reputation much in this,
To say I vow'd false vow in priuate.
Or that which hath so strangely scene past.
Lon. I do protest I neuer heard of it,
And if you prooue it, Ile repay it backe,
Or yeeld vp Aquitaine.
Prin. We arrest your word.
Boyet, you can produce acquittances
For such a summe, from speciall Officers,
Of Charles his Father.
Kin. Satisfie me so.
Boyet. So please your Grace, the packet is not come
Where that and other specialties are bound,
To morrow you shall haue a sight of them.
Kin. It shall suffice me; at which enterview,
All liberall reason, would I yeeld vnto.
Meane time receiue such welcome at my hand,
As Honour, without breach of Honour may
Make tender of to thy true worthy merite.
You may not come faire Princesse in my gates,
But here without you shall be so receiu'd,
As you shall deeme your selfe lodg'd in my heart,
Though so denied faire harbour in my house.
Your owne good thoughts excuse me, and farewell,
To morrow we shall visit you againe.
Prin. Sweet health & faire desires consort your grace.
Kin. Thy own wish wish I thee, in euery place. Exit.

Ber. Lady, I will commend you to my owne heart.
La Ro. Pray you doe my commendations,
I would be glad to see it.
Ber. I would you heard it groane.
La Ro. Is the fish dead?
Ber. Sicke at the heart.
La Ro. Alacke let it bloud.
Ber. Would that doe it good.
La Ro. My Phisicke saies I.
Ber. Will you prick't with your eye.
La Ro. No point, with my knife.
Ber. Now God saue thy life.
La Ro. And yours from long liuing.
Ber. I cannot stay thanksgiuing. Exit.

Enter Dumaine

Dum. Sir, I pray you a word: What Lady is that same?
Ros. The heire of Alanson, Rosaline her name.
Dum. A gallant Lady, Monsieur fare you well.
Exit.
Long. I beseech you a word: what is she in the white?
Ber. A woman sometimes (if you saw her in the light).
Long. Perchance light in the light: I desire her name.
Ber. She hath but one for her selfe, to desire that were a shame.
Long. Pray you sir whose daughter?
Ber. Her Mother's I haue heard.
Long. God's blessing a your beard.
Ber. Good sir be not offended,
She is an heire of Falconbridge.
Long. Nay, my choller is ended.
She is a most sweet Lady. Exit Long.
Ber. Not vnlike sir, that may be.

Enter Berowne

Ber. What's her name in the cap.
Boyet. Katherine, by good hap.
Ber. Is she wedded or no.
Boyet. To her will sir or so.
Ber. You are welcome sir adieu.
Boyet. Farewell to me sir, and welcome to you. Exit.
Ber. That last is Boyet, the waspish Frenchman, mad scraping wil
Not a word with a Frenchman all day.
Ber. An other with my hart in a dance.
Ber. Will you take mad Dog by the taile.
Ber. Is she wiser, is she worse to take: marke her well.
Ber. Is she as fond as she is faire? a foole: so wot I well.
Ber. I with her sweet company.
Ber. Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality.
Ber. Ne'r to speake word, if all the rest proue well.
Ber. Yes wit, & gentle inough to thank of a foole.
Ber. Now how to know her fooling I am past.
Ber. Nay how to get her speech.
Ber. My wife a hobby horse, neuer a true Venus.
Ber. I must speake first.
Ber. Then I shall surely fall.
Prin. Gentles attend, for yonder is the Deere
That feeds vpon the beauties of the land.
Ber. Would that the beauties were horne.
On Neighbour vnknowne, or something neere vnto it.
Ber. Now the conference, how meet you Queenes?
By the heards that hedged the prince (dissembled with cheeres)
Deceiue me not now, Nauar is wounded.
Prin. With what?
Ber. With that which we Louers most affected,
Prin. Your reason.
Ber. Why all his behauiours doe make their retire,
To the court of his eye, peeping thorough desire:
His heart like an Agot with your print impressed,

Proud

Proud with his forme, in his eye pride expressed.
His tongue all impatient to speake and not see,
Did stumble with haste in his eye-sight to be,
All senses to that sense did make their repaire,
To feele only looking on fairest of faire:
Me thought all his senses were lockt in his eye,
As Jewels in Christall for some Prince to buy. (glasse,
Who tendring their own worth from whence they were
Did point out to buy them along as you past
His face: his eye discourst, his tongue could not amazes,
That all eyes saw'st eies enchanted with gazes
Ile giue you Aparance, and all that is his,
And you giue him for my sake, but one louing kisse.

Prin. Come to our Pauilion, Boyet is disposde

Boy. But to speak that in words, which his eye hath disclosd. (close
I only haue made a mouth of his eie,
By adding a tongue which I know will not lie.

Lad.Ro. I now art all this Loue-monger, and speakest skilfully.

Lad.Ma He is Cupid Grandfather, and learnes news of him

Lad.a. Then was Venus like her mother, for her father is but grim.

Boy. Do you heare my mad wenches?

Lad.1. No.

Boy What then, do you see?

Lad.2 I, our way to be gone.

Boy. You are too hard for me. Exeunt omnes.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Braggart and Boy

Brag. Warble childe, make passionate my sense of hearing

Boy Concolinel

Brag. Sweete Aire, goe tenderly: you time of yeares take this Key, giue enlargement to the swaine, bring him festinately hither. I must employ him in a letter to my Loue.

Boy Will you win your loue with a French braule?

Brag. How meanest thou braule, a Dance?

Boy. No Sir, I meane sensible, master, but to haue done of a tune at the tongues end, canarie to it with your feete, humour it with turning vp your eye, sigh a note, and sing a note, sometime through the throate as if you swallowed loue with singing, loue sometime through nose as if you snuft up loue by smelling loue with your hat penthouse-like ore the shop of your eies: with your armes crost on your doublet like a Rabet on a spit, or your hands in your pocket, like a man after the old painting, and keepe not too long in one tune, but a snip and away: these are complements, these are humours, these betraie nice wenches, that would be betrayed without these, and make them men of note: do you note men that most are affected to these?

Brag. How hast thou purchased this experience?

Boy By my penne of obseruation

Brag But O, but O.

Boy The Hobby-horse is forgot

Brag. Call'st thou my loue Hobby horse.

Boy. No Master, the Hobby-horse is but a Colt, and and your Loue perhaps, a Hackne

But haue you forgot your Loue?

Brag. Almost I had.

Boy Negligent studene, learne her by heart

Brag. By heart, and in heart Boy.

Boy. And out of heart Master: all those three I will proue

Brag. What wilt thou proue?

Boy A man, if I liue (and this) by, in, and without, vpon the instant: by heart you loue her, because your heart cannot come by her: in heart you loue her, because your heart is in loue with her: and out of heart you loue her, being out of heart that you cannot enioy her.

Brag. I am all these three

Boy. And three times as much more, and yet nothing at all.

Brag Fetch hither the Swaine, he must carrie me a letter.

Boy. A message well simpathis'd, a Horse to be embassadour for an Asse.

Brag. Ha, ha, What sayest thou?

Boy. Marrie sir, you must send the Asse vpon the Horse for he is very slow gated: but I goe

Brag. The way is but short, away.

Boy. As swift as Lead sir.

Brag. Thy meaning prettie ingenuous, is not Lead a metall heauie, dull and slow?

Boy. Minime honest Master, or rather Master no.

Brad. I say Lead is slow.

Boy. You are too swift sir to say so
Is that Lead slow which is fir'd from a Gunne?

Brag. Sweete smoke of Rhetorike,
He reputes me a Cannon, and the Bullet that's he
I shoote thee at the Swaine.

Boy. Thump then, and I flee

Brag A most acute Iuuenall, voluble and free of grace,
By thy fauour sweet Welkin, I must eate thy face
Most dreadnought volue, Valour giues thee place
My Harald is returnd.

Pag A wonder Master, here's a Caliard broken in a shin.

Arm Some enigma, some riddle, come, thy Lenuoy begin.

Clo No enigma nor riddle, no lenuoy, no salue, in thee maiesty: Old Pantan, a sweet Pantan: no lenuoy, no lenuoy no salue sir but a Plantan

Arm. By vertue thou inforcest laughter, thy silie thought, my spleene, the heauing of my lunges prouokes me to ridiculous smyling: O pardon me my Stars, doth the inconsiderate take salue for lenuoy, and the word lenuoy for a salue?

Pag. Doe the wise thinke them other, is not lenuoy a salue? (plaine,

Arm. No Page, it is an epilogue or discourse to make Some obscure precedence that hath tofore bin faine
Now will I begin your morran, and do you follow with my lenuoy.
The Foxe, the Ape, and the Humble-Bee,
Were still at oddes, being but three
Arm. Vntill the Goose came out of doore,
Staying the oddes by adding foure.
Pag. A good Lenuoy, ending in the Goose: would you desire more?
Clo. The Boy hath sold him a bargaine, a Goose, that's

Sir, your penny-worth is good, and your Goose be fat
To sell a bargaine well is as cunning as fast and loose
Let me see a fat Lenuoy, I that's a fat Goose
Arm. Come hither, come hither:
How did this argument begin?
Boy. By saying that a Costard was broken in a shin
Then cal'd you for the Lenuoy.
Clow. True, and I for a Plantan.
Thus came your argument in
Then the Boyes fat Lenuoy, the Goose that you bought,
And he ended the market
Ar. But tell me. How was there a Costard broken in a shin?
Pag. I will tell you seuerably.
Clow. Thou hast no feeling of it Moth,
I will speake that Lenuoy.
I Costard running out, that was safely within,
Fell ouer the three hoole, and broke my shin
Arm. We will talke no more of this matter.
Clow. Till there be more matter in the shin.
Arm. Sirra Costard, I will enfranchise thee.
Clow. O, marrie me to one Frances, I smell some Lenuoy, some Goose in this.
Arm. By my sweete soule, I meane setting thee at liberty, enfreedoming thy person: thou were emured, restrained, captiuated bound.
Clow. True, true, and now you will be my purgation, and let me loose.
Arm. I giue thee thy libertie, set thee from durance, and in lieu thereof, impose on thee nothing but this:
Beare this significant to the country Maide Iaquenetta: there is remuneration, for the best ward of mine honours is rewarding my dependants. Moth, follow.
Pag. Like the sequell I.
Signeur Costard, adew. Exit.
Clow. My sweete ounce of mans flesh, my incony Iew. Now will I looke to his remuneration. Remuneration. O, that's the Latine word for three-farthings: I see three-farthings remuneration. What's the price of this yncle? 1. d. no, I'll giue you a remuneration. Why? It carries it remuneration. Why? It is a fairer name then a French-Crowne. I will neuer buy and sell out of this word.

Enter Berowne.

Ber. O my good knaue Costard, exceedingly well met.
Clow. Pray you sir. How much Carnation Ribbon may a man buy for a remuneration?
Ber. What is a remuneration?
Cost. Marrie sir, halfe pennie farthing.
Ber. O, Why then three farthings worth of Silke.
Cost. I thanke your worship, God be wy you,
Ber. O stay slaue, I must employ thee:
As thou wilt win my fauour, good my knaue,
Doe one thing for me that I shall entreate.
Clow. When would you haue it done sir?
Ber. O this after noone,
Clo. Well, I will doe it sir: Fare you well
Ber. O thou knowest not what it is
Clo. I shall know sir, when I haue done it.
Ber. Why villaine thou must know first.
Clo. I will come to your worship to morrow morning.
Ber. It must be done this after-noone,
Harke slaue, it is but this:
The Princesse comes to hunt here in the Parke,
And in her traine there is a gentle Ladie.
When tongues speak sweetly, then they name her name,
And Rosaline they call her, aske for her
And to her white hand see thou do commend
This seal'd-vp counsaile. There is thy guerdon, goe.
Clo. Guerdon, O sweete guerdon, better then remuneration, a leuenpence-farthing better: most sweete guerdon. I will doe it sir in print: guerdon, remuneration. Exit.

Ber. O, and I forsooth in loue,
I that haue beene loues whip!
A very Beadle to a humorous sigh: A Criticke,
Nay, a night-watch Constable.
A domineering pedant o're the Boy,
Then whom no mortall so magnificent.
This wimpled, whyning, purblinde wayward Boy,
This signior Iunios giant dwarfe, dan Cupid,
Regent of Loues, Kings Lord of Cupids Lames.
The annoynted soueraigne of sighes and groanes.
Liedge of all loyterers and flat delayers
Dread Prince of Placets, King of Congees
Sole Emperor and great generall
Of trotting Paritors: (now to my heart)
And I to be a Corporall of his field,
And weare his colours like a Tumblers hoope
What? I loue, I sue, I seeke a wife,
A woman that is like a Germane Cloake,
Still a repairing: euer out of frame,
And neuer going aright, being a Watch
But being watcht that it may still goe right.
Nay to be periur'de, which is worst of all:
And among three, to loue the worst of all,
A whitly wanton, with a velnet brow
With two pitch balls stucke in her face for eyes.
I, and by heauen, one that will doe the deede
Though Argus were her Eunuch and her garde
And I to sigh for her, to watch for her, to pray for her,
Well, I will loue, write, sigh, pray, sue, grone,
Some men must loue my Lady, and some one.

Actus Quartus.

Enter the Princesse, a Forrester, her Ladies, and her Lords.

Qu. Was that the King that spurd his horse so hard,
Against the steepe vprising of the hill?
Boy. I know not, but I think it was not he
Qu. Who ere a was, a shew'd a mounting minde
Well Lords, to day we shall haue our dispatch,
On Saterday we will returne to France.
Then Forrester my friend, Where is the Bush
That we must stand and play the murtherer in?
For. Hereby vpon the edge of yonder Coppice,
A stand where you may make the fairest shoote.
Qu. I thanke my beautie, I am fairest that shoote,
And therevpon thou speak'st the fairest shoote
For. Pardon me Madam, for I meant not so.
Qu. What, what? First praise me, & then again say no.
O short liu'd pride. Not fayre? alacke for woe.
For. Yes

For. Yes Madam faire

Qu. Nay,neuer paint me now,
Where faire is not,praise cannot mend the brow.
Here good my glasse) take this for telling true.
Faire payment for foule words,is more than due.

For. Nothing but faire is that which you inherit.

Qu. See,see,my beautie will be saued by merit.
O heresie in faire,fit for these dayes,
A giuing hand,though foule,shall haue faire praise.
But come,the Bow: Now Mercie goes to kill,
And shooting well,is then accounted ill.
Thus will I saue my credit in the shoote,
Not wounding,pittie would not let me do't
If wounding, then it was to shew my skill.
That more for praise,then purpose meant to kill.
And out of question,so it is sometimes
Glory growes guiltie of detested crimes,
When for Fames sake,for praise an outward part,
We bend to that,the working of the hart.
As I for praise alone now seeke to spill
The poore Deeres blood,that my heart meanes no ill.

Boyet. Do not curst wiues hold that selfe-soueraignetie
Only for praise sake,when they striue to be Lords ore their Lords?

Qu. Only for praise,and praise we may afford,
To any Lady that subdewes a Lord.

Enter Clowne

Boy. Here comes a member of the common-wealth.

Clo. God dig you-den all,pray you which is the head Lady?

Qu. Thou shalt know her fellow,by the rest that haue no heads

Clo. Which is the greatest Lady,the highest?

Qu. The thickest,and the tallest.

Clo. The thickest,& the tallest,it is so truth is truth.
And your waste Mistris, were as slender as my wit,
One a these Maides girdles for your waste should be fit.
Are not you the chiefe woman? You are the thickest here?

Qu. What's your will? What's your will?

Clo. I haue a Letter from Monsier Berowne,
To one Lady Rosaline

Qu. O thy letter,thy letter:He's a good friend of mine.
Stand aside good bearer
Boyet,you can carue,
Breake vp this Capon.

Boyet. I am bound to serue.
This Letter is mistooke. it importeth none here.
It is writ to Iaquenetta.

Qu. We will reade it,I sweare.
Breake the necke of the Waxe,and euery one giue eare.

Boyet readeth.

BY heauen,that thou art faire, is most infallible: true that thou art beauteous,truth it selfe that thou art louely: more faire then faire,beautiful then beautious, more then truth it selfe,haue commiseration on thy heroicall Vassall. The magnanimous and most illustrate King Cophetua set eye vpon the pernicious and indubitate Beggar Zenelophon: and he it was that might rightly say,Veni, vidi, vici. Which to annothanize in the vulgar, O base and obscure vulgar; videlicet, He came, See,and ouercame: he came one; see, two; conquered three: Who came? the King. Why did he come? to see. Why did he see? to ouercome. To whom came he? to the Begger. What saw he? the Begger. Who ouercame he? the Begger. The conclusion is victorie: On whose side? the King: the captiue is inricht: On whose side? the Beggers. The catastrophe is a Nuptiall: on whose side? the Kings: no,on both in one,or one in both. I am the King (for so stands the comparison) thou the Begger, for so witnesseth thy lowlinesse. Shall I command thy loue? I could. Shall I entreate thy loue? I will. What, shalt thou exchange for ragges, roabes: for titles titles, for thy selfe mee. Thus expecting thy reply, I prophane my lips on thy foote, my eyes on thy picture, and my heart on thy euerie part.

Thine in the dearest designe of vnkindnesse,

Don Adriano de Armatho.

Thus dost thou heare the Nemean Lion roare,
Gainst thee thou Lambe, that standest as his pray:
Submissiue fall his princely feete before,
And he from forrage will incline to play.
But if thou striue (poore soule) what art thou then?
Foode for his rage, repasture for his den

Qu. What plume of feathers is hee that indited this Letter? What veine? What Wethercocke? Did you euer heare better?

Boy. I am much deceiued,but I remember the stile.

Qu. Else your memorie is bad, going ore it erewhile.

Boy. This Armado is a Spaniard that keeps here in court
A Phantasime,a Monarcho,and one that makes sport
To the Prince and his Booke-mates.

Qu. Thou fellow, a word
Who gaue thee this Letter?

Clow. I told you,my Lord.

Qu. To whom should'st thou giue it?

Clo. From my Lord to my Lady

Qu. From which Lord,to which Lady?

Clo. From my Lord Berowne,a good master of mine,
To a Lady of France, that he call'd Rosaline.

Qu. Thou hast mistaken his letter. Come Lords away.
Here sweete, put vp this, 'twill be thine another day.

Exeunt.

Boy. Who is the shooter? Who is the shooter?

Rosa. Shall I teach you to know.

Boy. I my continent of beautie

Rosa. Why she that beares the Bow. Finely put off.

Boy My Lady goes to kill hornes, but if thou marrie,
Hang me by the necke,if hornes that yeare miscarrie.
Finely put on

Rosa. Well then,I am the shooter.

Boy. And who is your Deare?

Rosa. If we choose by the hornes,your selfe come not neare. Finely put on indeede.

Maria. You still wrangle with her Boyet, and she strikes at the brow

Boyet. But she her selfe is hit lower:
Haue I hit her now.

Rosa. Shall I come vpon thee with an old saying,that was a man when King Pippin of France was a little boy,as touching the hit it.

Boyet. So I may answere thee with one as old that was a woman when Queene Guinouer of Britaine was a little wench, as touching the hit it.

Rosa. Thou

Rosa. Thou canſt not hit it, hit it, hit it,
Thou canſt not hit it my good man.
Ber. I cannot, I cannot, I cannot
And I cannot, another ca Exit.
Cor. By my troth moſt pleaſant, how doth diſpoſe it.
Mar. A marke marueilous well ſhot, for they both did hit.
Boy. A marke. O rare ſhot, what marke? a marke ſpeak my Lady.
Let the marke haue a prick't in't, to meate at, if it may be
Mar. Wide a clift boy'ſ hand, y'are a proper hand at ſhoot
Cor. Indeede a muſt ſhoote nearer, or neere hit the clout
Boy. And if my hand be not, then belike your hand is ſore
Cor. Then will I ſet or get the vpſhoot by cleaning the ſtaffe
Mar. Come, come, you raile greatly, you are growne ſtoute
Cor. She's too hard for you at pricke, ſing'e her to ſonne
Ber. I craue for this time leaue of you good night my good Dade
Cor. By my troth a Swaine, a moſt ſimple Coxcombe.
Lord Lord, how the Ladies and I haue put him out.
O my troth moſt ſweete ieſts, moſt incony vulgar wit,
When it comes ſo ſmoothly off, ſo obſcene as it were, ſo fit.
Armatho ath to the ſide O a moſt dainty man.
To ſee her anſwere in her ſtoope and her Tap
And ſweare his horſe was hyde bound, and the rider but two inches
Ha, ha, I am ſick on it ſtill, as I hope to ſweare
And his Page at other time a project, I ſwore
An hower, it was ſixe months ere I heard
Sowla, o via Exeunt

Shoote within

Enter Dull, Coſtard, the Peaſant and Nathaniel.

Nath. Very reuerend ſport truely, and done in the teſtimony of a good conſcience
Ped. The Deare was (as you know) ſanguis in blood, ripe as a pomwater, who now hangeth like a iewell in the eare of Cœlum the ſkie, the welkin the heauen, and anon falleth like a Crab on the face of Terra, the ſoyle the land and earth.
Curat. Nath. Trueley M. Holofernes, the epithets are ſweetly varied, like a ſcholler at the leaſt: but ſirrah I ſee you haue had the better of the deare.
Hol. Sir Nathaniel, haud credo.
Dull. 'Twas not a haud credo, 'twas a Pricket
Hol. Moſt barbarous intimation, yet a kinde of inſinuation as it were in via, in way of explication here, as it were, ſcilicet, a ſcratching, or as it were, I will ſcratch my head: Simplicity in admiration, as it were, ſurpriſed, vttered, or concluded, as it were, I ſay my haud credo for a Deare.
Dull. I ſaw the Deare was not a haud credo, 'twas a Pricket
Hol. Twice ſod ſimplicitie, bis coctus, O thou monſter Ignorance, how deformed doſt thou looke.
Nath. Sir he hath neuer fed of the dainties that are bred in a booke.
He hath not eate paper as it were
He hath not drunke inke.
His intellect is not replenished, he is only an animall onely ſenſible in the dulleſt parts: and ſuch barren plants are ſet before vs, that we thankfull ſhould be (which we taſte and feele not) are to thoſe parts that do fructifie in vs more than he.
For as it would ill become me to be vaine, indiſcreet or a foole,
So were there a patch ſet on Learning, to ſee him in a Schoole
But omne bene ſay I, being of an old Father's minde
Many can brooke the weather, that loue not the winde
Dull. You two are booke-men. Can you tell by your wit, What was a month old at Cains birth, that is not aboue two keſtrils dayes yet?
Hol. Dictiſſima goodman Dull, dictiſſima goodman Dull.
Dull. What is a Moone
Nath. A meaſure of Praiſe to Iuno the Moone
Hol. The Moone was a month old when Adam was no more,
And wanted not to fiue-weekes when he came to three-ſcore.
The Moone hath not fiue-weekes in her Exchange.
Dull. 'Tis true indeede, the Collection of her changes in the Exchange.
Hol. God comfort thy capacity I ſay the Moone is but a month old when ſhe is at the full, and full when ſhe is at the change
Dull. And I ſay the poſſeſſion hath fellen out by the Moone for the Moone is neuer a month old, and I ſay beſides that Dictiſſima, was a Pricket that the Deare
Hol. Sir Nathaniel, will you heare an extemporall Epytaphon deuiſed on the death of the Deare? and to humour the ignorant call the Deare, the Pricket or Prickette, the Pricket
Nath. Perge, good M. Holofernes, perge, ſo it ſhall pleaſe you to abrogate ſcurrilitie.
Hol. I will ſomething affect the letter, for it argues facilitie.

The preaſeful Princeſſe pearſed and prickt a pretty pleaaſing Pricket,
Some ſay a Sore but not a ſore till now made ſore with ſhooting
The Dogges did yell put el to ſore, then Sorell iumpes from thicket
Or Pricket ſore or elſe Sorell,
The people fall a hooting
If ſorell be ſtrooke to ſore,
And Prickets ſcape the woodmans crye
O cleare the way I am vndone,
For it is Loſt for euermore I.

Nath. A rare talent
Dull. If a talent be a claw, looke how he claweth him with a talent
Nath. This is a gift that I haue ſimple, a fooliſh extemporall, that hath proceeded of fertile and pregnant inuention of formes, figures, ſhapes, obiects, ideas, apprehenſions, motions, reuolutions. Theſe are begot in the ventricle of memorie, nouriſhed in the wombe of primater, and deliuered vpon the mellowing of occaſion: but the gift is good in thoſe in whom it is acute, and I am thankfull for it.
Hol. Sir, I praiſe the Lord for you, and ſo may my pariſhioners, for their Sonnes are well tutor'd by you, and their Daughters profit very greatly vnder you: you are a good member of the common-wealth.
Nath. Mehercle, if their Sonnes be ingenuous, they ſhall shall want no instruction. If these Daughters be capable, I will put it to them. but Vir sapit qui pauca loquitur, a soule beam one is inough vs.

Enter Iaquenetta and the Clowne.

Iaq. God saue you, good morrow M. Person

Nath. Master Person, quasi Person? And if one should be pierc't, which is the one?

Clo. Marry M. Schoolemaster, hee that is likest to a hogshead.

Nath. Of peece-meale a Hogshead? a good lyke of conceit in a turph of Earth, fire enough for a flint, Pearle enough for a swine: 'tis pretty, it is well

Iaq. Good Master Parson be so good as reade mee this Letter, it was giuen mee by Costard, and sent mee from Don Armatho: I beseech you reade it

Nath. Facile precor gelida quando pecus omnes sub umbra ruminat, and so forth. Ah good old Mantuan, I may speake of thee as the traueller doth of Venice, venecie, venecie, Qui non te vidit in Antonia non tidit in Roma, and Where is a man old enough that cannot read Mantuan? you shall find him in all Schooles: but to returne to the Verses, did they please you sir Nathaniel?

Nath. Marueilous well for the penne

Pet. I do dare my life he is a Schoolemaster: would you desire more? The Boy hath sold him a bargaine, a Goose that's flat. Sir, your pennance rests one word with you. Before the sixt houre ye shall goe walke with Fancie in the Parke, where I will proue those Verses to be very vnlearned, neither sauouring of Poetrie, Wit, nor Inuention. I beseech your Societie

Nath. And thanke you to for societie (saith the text) is the happinesse of life.

Peda. And certes the text most infallibly concludes it. Sir, I do inuite you too, you shall not say me nay: pauca verba.

Away, the gentles are at their game, and we will to our recreation. Exeunt

Enter Berowne with a Paper, in his hand alone.

Ber. The King he is hunting the Deare,
I am coursing my selfe

They haue pitcht a Toyle, I am toyling in a pytch, pitcht indeede. O sweete a ciuile word! Well set thee downe sorrow, for so they say the foole said, and so say I, and I the foole. Well proued wit. By the Lord this Loues a mad as Ajax, it kills sheepe, it kills mee, I a sheepe. Well proued againe a my side. I will not loue: if I do hang me, yfaith I will not. O but her eye, by this light but for her eye, I would not loue her: yes for her two eyes. Well, I do nothing in the world but lye, and I will in my next, By heauen I doe loue, and it hath taught me to rime, and to be melancholie: and here is part of my Rime, and heere my melancholie. Well, she hath one a my Sonnets already, the Clowne bore it, the Foole sent it, and the Lady hath it: sweet Clowne, sweeter Foole, sweetest Lady. By the world, I would not care a pin, if the other three were in. Here comes one with a paper: God giue him grace to groane

He stands aside. The King entreth.

King. Ay me!

Ber. Shot by heauen. proceede sweet Cupid: thou hast thumpt him with thy Birdbolt vnder the left pap: in faith secrets.

King. So sweete a kisse the golden Sunne giues not,
To those fresh morning drops vpon the Rose,
As thy eye beames, when their fresh rayes haue smot.
The night of dew that on my cheekes downe flowes.
Nor shines the siluer Moone one halfe so bright,
Through the transparent bosome of the deepe,
As doth thy face through teares of mine giue light.
Thou shin'st in euery teare that I doe weepe,
No drop, but as a Coach doth carry thee
So ridest thou triumphing in my woe.
Do but behold the teares that swell in me,
And they thy glory through my griefe will show

But

But doe not loue thy selfe, then thou wilt keepe
My teares for glasses, and still make me weepe,
O Queene of Queenes, how farre dost thou excell,
No thought can thinke, nor tongue of mortall tell.
How shall she know my griefes? Ile drop the paper
Sweet leaues shade folly. Who is he comes heere?

Enter Longauile. The King steps aside.

What Longauill, and reading: listen eare
Ber. Now in thy likenesse, one more foole appeare.
Long. Ay me, I am forsworne
Ber. Why he comes in like a periure, wearing papers.
Long. In loue I hope, sweet fellowship in shame
Ber. One drunkard loues another of the name.
Lon. Am I the first, that haue been periur'd for? (know,
Ber. I could put thee in comfort, not by two that I
Thou makest the triumphery, the corner cap of Society,
The shape of Loues Tiburne, that hangs vp simplicitie.
Lon. I feare these stubborn lines lack power to moue.
O sweet Maria, Empresse of my Loue,
These numbers will I teare and write in prose
Ber. O Rimes are gards on wanton Cupids hose,
Disgure not his Slop.
Lon. This same shall goe. He reades the Sonnet
Did not the heauenly Rhetoricke of thine eye,
'Gainst whom the world cannot hold argument,
Perswade my heart to this false periurie?
Vowes for thee broke deserue not punishment.
A Woman I forswore, but I will prone,
Thou being a Goddesse, I forswore not thee
My Vow was earthly, thou a heauenly Loue,
Thy grace being gain'd, cures all disgrace in me
Vowes are but breath, and breath a vapour is.
Then thou fair Sun, which on my earth doest shine,
Exhalest this vapour vow, in thee it is
If broken then, it is no fault of mine
If by me broke, what foole is not so wise,
To lose an oath, to win a Paradise?
Ber. This is the liuer vene, which makes flesh a deity
A greene Goose, a Codshead pure pure idolatry.
God amend vs, God amend, we are much out o'th way.

Enter Dumaine.

Lon. By whom shall I send this (company?) Stay
Ber. All hid, all hid, an old infant play,
Like a demie God, here sit I in the skie,
And wretched fooles secrets heedfully ore-eye.
More Sacks to the mill. O heauens I haue my wish,
Dumaine transformd, foure Woodcocks in a dish
Dum. O most diuine Kate
Ber. O most prophane coxcombe.
Dum. By heauen the wonder of a mortall eye.
Ber. By earth she is not, corporall, there you lye
Dum. Her Amber haires for foule hath amber coted
Ber. An Amber coloured Rauen was well noted.
Dum. As vpright as the Cedar.
Ber. Stoope, I say her shoulder is with child.
Dum. As fayre as day
Ber. I as some dayes, but then no sunne must shine
Dum. O that I had my wish?
Lon. And I had mine.
Kin. And mine too good Lord.
Ber. Amen, so I had mine: Is not that a good word?
Dum. I would forget her, but a Feuer she Raignes in my bloud, and will remembred be.
Ber. A Feuer in your bloud, why then incision
Would let her out in Sawcers, sweet misprision.
Dum. Once more Ile read the Ode that I haue writ
Ber. Once more Ile marke how Loue can varry Wit

Dumaine reades his Sonnet

On a day, alack the day
Loue, whose Month is euery May,
Spied a blossome passing faire,
Playing in the wanton aire
Through the Veluet, leaues the winde,
All vnseene, 'gainst enuie finde,
That the Louer sicke to death,
Wish himselfe the heauens breath
Ayre (quoth he) thy cheekes may blow,
Ayre, would I might triumph so
But alacke my hand is sworne,
Neere to pluck thee from thy throne:
Vow alacke for youth vnmeete,
Youth so apt to plucke a sweet.
Do not call it sinne in me,
That I am forsworne for thee.
Thou for whom Ioue would sweare,
Iuno but an Aethiop were
And deny himselfe for Ioue
Turning mortall for thy Loue.

This will I send, and something else more plaine.
That shall expresse my true-loues fasting paine.
O would the King, Berowne and Longauill,
Were Louers too, ill to example ill,
Would from my forehead wipe a periur'd note
For none offend where all alike do dote.
Lon. Dumaine thy Loue is farre from charitie,
That in Loues griefe desirest Society:
You may looke pale, but I should blush I know,
To be o'erheard and taken napping so.
Kin. Come sir, you blush: as his your case is such,
You chide at him, offending twice as much.
You do not loue Maria? Longauile,
Did neuer Sonnet for her sake compile;
Nor neuer lay his wreathed armes athwart
His louing bosome to keepe downe his heart
I haue been closely shrowded in this bush,
And markt you both, and for you both did blush
I heard your guilty rimes, obserud your fashion.
Saw sighes reeke from you, noted well your passion.
Aye me, sayes one. O Ioue, the oathes of those Both sware that Capitall perjurie, that cost
Some Gods their Paradise, how will this grieue you
When next he proues you periur'd in this sort?
Dumaine was at my seruice, and his sword:
No part (quoth he) of her white hand must board
For he hath sworne to Comfits and to Dates.
And to his heart she bad him giue the Quarter.
Then whom a Spanish blade hath smitten sore,
So beauty blemish'd once, for euer scorne.
What will Berowne say when that he shall heare
Faith infringed, which such zeale did sweare.
How will he scorne? how will he spend his wit?
How will he triumph, leape and laugh at it?
For all the wealth that euer I did see,
I would not haue him know so much by me.
Ber. Now step I forth to whip hypocrisie.
Ah good my Liege, I pray thee pardon me
Good heart, What grace hast thou thus to reproue
These wormes for louing, that art most in loue?
Your eyes do make no couches in your teares.
There is no certaine Princesse that appeares
You'll not be periur'd, 'tis a hatefull thing.
Tush, none but Minstrels like of Sonnetting.
But are you not asham'd? nay, are you not

All three of you, to be thus much ore shot?
You found his Moth, the King your Moth did see:
But I a Beame doe finde in each of three.
O what a Scene of foolery haue I seene,
Of sighes, of grones, of sorrow, and of teene
O me, with what strict patience haue I sat,
To see a King transformed to a Gnat?
To see great Hercules whipping a Gigge,
And profound Salomon tuning a Iygge?
And Nestor play at push-pin with the boyes,
And Critticke Tymon laugh at idle toyes.
Where lies thy griefe? O tell me good Dumaine;
And gentle Longauill, where lies thy paine?
And where my Liedges? all about the breft:
A Cand choa
King. Too bitter is thy ieft.
Are wee betrayed thus to thy ouer-view?
Ber. Not you by me, but I betrayed to you.
I that am honest? I that hold it sinne
To breake the vow I am engaged in.
I am betrayed by keeping company
With men, like men of inconstancie.
When shall you see me write a thing in rime?
Or grone for Ioane? or spend a minutes time,
In pruning mee, when shall you heare that I will praise a hand, a foot, a face, an eye: a gate, a state, a brow, a breft,
a waste, a legge, a limme
King. Soft, Whither a-way so fast?
A true man, or a theefe, that gallops so.
Ber. I post from Loue, good Louer let me go

Enter Iaquenetta and Clowne.

Iaqu. God blesse the King.
King. What Present hast thou there?
Clo. Some certaine treason.
King. What makes treason heere?
Clo. Nay it makes nothing sir.
King. If it marre nothing neither,
The treason and you goe the peace away together.
Iaqu. I beseech your Grace let this Letter be read,
Our person misdoubts it was treason to read
King. Berowne read it ouer He reades the Letter
King. Where hadst thou it
Iaqu. Of Costard
King. Where hadst thou it
Cost. Of Don Adramadio, Don Adramadio.
King. How now, what is in you? why dost thou tear it?
Ber. A toy my Liedge, a toy: your grace needes not feare it.
Long. It did moue him to passion, and therefore let's heare it.
Dum. It is Berowns writing, and heere is his name.
Ber. Ah you whoreson loggerhead, you were borne to do me shame.
Guilty my Lord, guilty: I confesse, I confesse.
King. What?
Ber. That you three fooles, lackt mee foole, to make vp the messe.
He, he, and you: and you my Liedge, and I,
Are pick-purses in Loue, and we deserue to die.
O dismisse this audience, and I shall tell you more
Dum. Now the number is euen.
Berow. True true, we are fowre: will these Turtles be gone?
King. Hence sirs, away
Clo. Walk aside the true folke, & let the traytors stay.

Ber. Sweet Lords, sweet Louers, O let vs imbrace,
As true we are as flesh and bloud can be,
The Sea will ebbe and flow, heauen will shew his face:
Young bloud doth not obey an old decree.
We cannot crosse the cause why we are borne:
Therefore of all hands must we be forsworne
King. What, did these rent lines shew some loue of thine? (Rosaline,
Ber. Did they, quoth you? Who sees the heauenly
That (like a rude and sauage man of Inde.)
At the first opening of the gorgeous East,
Bowes not his vassall head, and strooken blinde,
Kisses the base ground with obedient breast?
What peremptory Eagle-sighted eye
Dares looke vpon the heauen of her brow,
That is not blinded by her maiestie?
King. What zeale, what furie, hath inspir'd thee now?
My Loue (her Mistres) is a gracious Moone,
She (an attending Starre) scarce seene a light
Ber. My eyes are then no eyes, nor I Berowne.
O, but for my Loue, day would turne to night,
Of all complexions the cul'd soueraignty,
Doe meet as at a faire in her faire cheeke,
Where seuerall Worthies make one dignity,
Where nothing wants, that want it selfe doth seeke.
Lend me the flourish of all gentle tongues,
Fie painted Rethoricke, O she needs it not,
To things of sale, a sellers praise belongs.
She passes praise, then praise too short doth blot
A withered Hermite, fiuescore winters worne,
Might shake off fifty, looking in her eye.
Beauty doth varnish Age, as if new borne,
And giues the Crutch the Cradles infancie
O 'tis the Sunne that maketh all things shine.
King. By heauen, thy Loue is blacke as Ebonie
Berow. Is Ebonie like her? O word diuine?
A wife of such wood were felicitie
O who can giue an oth? Where is a booke?
That I may sweare Beauty doth beauty lacke,
If it be learne not of her eye to looke.
No face is faire that is not full so blacke
King. O paradoxe, Blacke is the badge of hell,
The hue of dungeons, and the Schoole of night
And beauties crest becomes the heauens well.
Ber. Diuels soonest tempt resembling spirits of light.
O if in blacke my Ladies browes be deckt,
It mournes, that painting vsurping haire
Should rauish doters with a false aspect:
And therfore is she borne to make blacke, faire.
Her fauour turnes the fashion of the dayes,
For native bloud is counted painting now:
And therefore red that would auoyd dispraise,
Paints it selfe blacke, to imitate her brow.
Dum. To looke like her are Chimny-sweepers blacke.
Lon. And since her time, are Colliers counted bright.
King. And Æthiops of their sweet complexion crake.
Dum. Dark needs no Candles now, for dark is light.
Ber. Your mistresses dare neuer come in raine,
For feare their colours should be washt away.
King. 'Twere good yours did: for sir to tell you plaine,
Ile finde a fairer face not washt to day.
Ber. Ile proue her faire, or talke till doome-day here.
King. No Diuell will fright thee then so much as shee.
Dumai. I neuer knew man hold vile stuffe so deere.
Lon. Looke, heer's thy loue, my foot and her face see.
Ber. O if the streets were paued with thine eyes,

Her

Her feet were much too dainty for such tread.
Dum. O vile, then as she goes what vpward lyes?
The street should see as she walkt ouer head.
Kin. But what of this, are we not all in loue?
Ber. O nothing so sure, and thereby all forsworne.
Kin Then leaue this chat, & good Berowne now proue
Our louing lawfull, and our toyth not torne
Dum I marry there, some flattery for this euil
Long O some authority how to proceed,
Some tricks, some quirkes, how to cheat the diuel.
Dum Some salue for periurie.
Ber. O 'tis more then need
Haue at you then affections men at armes,
Consider what you first did sweare vnto:
To fast, to study, and to see no woman
Flat treason against the Kingly state of youth
Say can you fast? your stomacks are too young
And abstinence engenders maladies
And where that you haue vow'd to studie (Lords)
In that each of you haue forsworne his Booke
Can you still dreame and pore, and thereon looke.
For when would you (my Lord) or you, or you,
Haue found the ground of Loues excellence,
Without the beauty of a womans face;
From womens eyes this doctrine I deriue,
They are the ground, the Bookes the Arts, the Academes
From whence doth spring the true Promethean fire
Why, universal plodding poysons vp
The nimble spirits in the arteries,
As motion and long during action tyres
The sinewy vigour of the traueller
Now for not looking on a womans face,
You haue in that forsworne your eyes eyes
And Study too, the causer of your vow.
For where is any Author in the world,
Teaches such beauty as a woman's eye:
Learning is but an adiunct to our selfe,
And where we are our learning likewise is.
Then when our selues we see in Ladies eyes,
With our selues.
Doe we not likewise see our learning there?
O we haue made a Vow to study Lords,
And in that vow we haue forsworne our Bookes
For wise wits? fooles in shallow Ladies lookes?
Long I know not, I know not, you, nor I?
Is leaden contemplation, are to vs as dull
Sweet fancy? Nurse by vertue of our eyes,
Of beauties tutors haue enrich'd you with
Other slow Arts, more apprehended braine
And therefore finde for barraine practizers,
Scarce shew a iot to their heauy toyle.
But Loue first learned in a Ladies eyes,
Lues not alone emured in the braine
But with the motion of all elements,
Courses as swift as thought in euery power,
And gives to euery power a double power,
Aboue their functions and their offices.
It adues a precious seeing to the eye
A Louers eyes will gaze an Eagle blinde.
A Louers eare will heare the lowest sound
When the suspicious head of theft is stopt.
Loues feeling is more soft and sensible.
Then are the tender hornes of Cockled Snayles.
Loues tongue proues dainty Bacchus grosse in taste,
For Valour, is not Loue a Hercules?
Still climing trees in the Hesperides
Subtle as Sphinx, as sweet and musicall,
As bright Apollo's Lute, strung with his hayre.
And when Loue speakes, the voyce of all the Gods,
Make heauen drowse with the harmonie.
Neuer durst Poet touch a pen to write
Vntill his Inke were temperd with Loues sighes.
O then his lines would ravish sauage eares,
And plant in Tyrants milde humanitie.
From womens eyes this doctrine I deriue
They sparcle still the right promethean fire,
They are the Bookes, the Arts, the Academes,
That shew, containe, and nourish all the world.
Else none at all in ought proues excellent
Then fooles you were these women to forsweare
Or keeping what is sworne, you will proue fooles,
For Wisedomes sake, a word that all men loue
Or for Loues sake, a word that loues all men
Or for Men sake, the authors of these Women
Or Womens sake, by whom we men, are Men
Let's once loose our oathes to finde our selues,
Or else we loose our selues to keepe our oathes
It is religion to be thus forsworne,
For Charity it selfe fulfils the Law,
And who can sever loue from charity
Kin. Saint Cupid then, and Souldiers to the field
Ber. Aduance your standards, and vpon them Lords,
Pell mell, downe with them: but be first aduis'd,
In conflict that you get the Sunne of them.
Long Now to plaine dealing, lay these glozes by,
Shall we resolue to woe these Girles of France?
Kin. And win them too, therto you heare our mindes.
Ber. Some entertainment, some delight, some Feasts
Long Tut the simple Coach-fellow (I scorne not it)
And I to see a naked Morrice more
Then those tongue-tide Madrigalls will make
Light Wenches may prouide pastimes to our mindes,
Ith our Coopers daies is better treasure.

Exeunt

Actus Quartus.

Enter the Pedant, Curate and Dull.

Pedant Satis quid sufficit.
Curat I praise God for you, that you haue in these parts of your body, such capacity, such discretion, such memory, such iudgement, such vnderstanding: for you haue seene Perigenes the Lycian, who was called for his deserts the Pompey of Asia, Ptolomeus Philadelphus, a King in Egypt, as we reade in his Acts and Monuments, who came a hunting like Darius, and was as high mounted, as all the rest of the Princes in the world.
Pedant Nouit homines tanquam oculos. His humour is lofty, his discourse peremptorie, his tongue filed, his eye ambitious, his gate maiestical, and his generall behauiour vaine, ridiculous and thrasonicall. He is too picked, too spruce, too affected, too odde, as it were, too peregrinate, as I may call it

Curat. A most singular and choice Epithet,

Peda. He draweth out the thred of his verbosity, finer then the staple of his argument. I abhorre such phanatticall phantasimes, such insociable and poore conceptions, such affected phrases, as to please the eare, and the capacity of the hearer, sweet and voluble is his stile, as he is a good penman, and writes his hand as he speakes, long, and ready. Come, lets goe together.

Curat. Loue to phantasimes.

Peda. Some haue more apt, a delectable stranger kinde of phantasime, then I.

Enter Constable, Dull.

Curat. Where?

Peda. Here.

Const. Curat.

Peda. Curat, and Const.

Const. Marke.

Peda. Marke thou well.

Dull. Fees, and rewards, and so forth, and so forth, and to conclude, I am his Graces Tharborough: but I would see his owne person in flesh and blood.

Peda. This is he.

Dull. Signior Arm-a-do, I commend me to thee, I commend me, and I send me, as my Lady, and I hope as my Ladies Lady, by the same token, the rusty knight all armes, and the thrice valiant Lord, Bigths Lord Fantasticoes sonne and heire, hath seene a letter from me to you, to vnderstand the boy hath sold him his Lands, and his Lands, and his Lands, and on the caber to the Worthies, & let them dance the hey.

Ped. Most Dull, honest Dull, to our sport away. Exit.

Enter Ladies.

Qu. Sweet hearts we shall be rich ere we depart,
If fairings come thus plentifully in
A Lady wall'd about with Diamonds. Look you, what I haue from the louing King.
Rosa. Madam, came nothing else along with that?
Qu. Nothing but this: yes as much loue in Rime,
As would be cram'd vp in a sheet of paper
Writ on both sides the leafe, margent and all,
That he was faine to seale on Cupids name.
Rosa. That was the way to make his godhead wax
For he hath been fiue thousand yeares a Boy
Kath. I and a shrewd vnhappy gallowes too
Ros. You'll nere be friends with him, a kils your finger.
Kath. He made her melancholy, sad, and heauy, and so she died: had she been light like you, of such merry nimble stirring spirit she might haue been a Copy.
Ros. What's your darke meaning mouse, of this light word?
Kat. A light condition in a beauty darke.
Ros. We need more light to find your meaning out
Kat. You'll marre the light, taking it in snuffe
Therefore I'll darkely end the argument
Ros. Look what you do, you do it still i'th darke
Kat. So do not you, for you are a light Wench
Ros. Indeed I weigh not you, and therefore light
Kat. You weigh me not, O that's you care not for me
Ros. Great reason: for past care is still past care.
Qu. Well bandied both: a set: but Wit did play'd.
But Boyet, you may see about the?
Who sent it? and what is it?
Ros. I would you knew
And if my face were but as fayre as yours,
My Fauour were as great, be witnesse this
Nay, I haue Verses too, I know the stile,
The numbers true, and were the numbring too,
I were the fairest goddesse on the ground:
I am compar'd to twenty thousand fayres.
O he hath drawne my picture in his letter
Qu. Any thing like?
Ros. Much in the letters nothing in the praise
Qu. Beauteous as Ink: a good conclusion.
Kat. Fayre as a text B in a Copie booke
Ros. Ware pencils. How? Let me not die your debtor,
My red Dominicall, my golden letter.
O that your face were not so full of Oes
Qu. A Pox of that iest, and I beshrew all Shrowes
But Katherine, what was sent to you
From fayre Dumaine?
Kat. Madame, this Glooue.
Qu. Did he not send you twaine?
Kat. Yes Madame: and moreouer,
Some thousand Verses of a faithfull Louer
A huge translation of hypocrisie,
Vildly compiled, profound simplicitie
Mar. This, and these Pearls, to me sent Longauile.
The Letter is too long by halfe a mile.
Qu. I think no lesse. Dost thou wish in heart
The Chaine were longer, and the Letter short
Mar. I, for I would these hands might neuer part.
Qu. We are wise girles to mocke our Louers so
Ros. They are worse fooles to purchase mocking so.
That same Berowne I'll torture ere I go
O that I knew he were but in by th'weeke,
How I would make him fawne, and begge, and seeke,
And wait the season, and obserue the times,
And spend his prodigall wits in bootelesse rimes,
And shape his seruice wholly to my deuice,
And make him proud to make me proud at iests,
So perttunt like would I o'ersway his state,
That what he loath'd for me, and I his hate
Qu. None are so surely caught when they are catcht,
As Wit turn'd Foole, folly in Wisedome hatcht,
Hath wisedomes warrant, and the helpe of Schoole,
And Wits owne grace to grace a learned Foole?
Ros. The blood of youth burns not with such excesse,
As gracelesse age his siluer hairs doth presse.
Qu. What follies are in hot bloods, scarce hath had the worth to make the worst a fault
Ros. Loue is a too great offence to passe for lesse,
Your beauty too much beauty thereof smacks,
If wrongfully disposed, and shamefully,
Left and forsworne: 'twere twenty on one side
Were not enough to blot one of the other,
Treble reproach attends the combate is,
Beauty with beauty, truth with truth, and wit
With wit should crosse: and dexterously dispatch
To speake, and purpose not, since what it is
Is but the way to be nothing but what is.

Enter Boyet.

Qu. Heere comes Boyet, and mirth is in his face.
Boy. O I am stab'd with laughter, Where's her Grace?
Qu. Thy eyes Boyet?
Boy. Prepare Madame, prepare
Arme Wenches arme, incounters mounted are,
Against your Peace, Loue doth approach disguis'd,
Armed in arguments, you'll be surpris'd.
Muster your Wits, stand in your owne defence,
Or hide your heads like Cowards and flye hence
Qu. Saint Dennis to Saint Cupid. What are they,
That charge their breath against vs? Say scout say.
Boy. Vnder the coole shade of a Sycamore,
I thought to close mine eyes some halfe an houre:
When lo to interrupt my purpos'd rest,
Toward that shade I might behold addrest,
The King and his companions: warely I
Stole into a neighbour thicket by,
And ouer heard what you shall ouer heare:
That by and by disguis'd they will be heere
Their Herald is a pretty knauish Page
That well by heart hath con'd his embassage.
Action and accent did they teach him there.
Thus must thou speake, and thus thy body beare
And euer and anon they made a doubt,
Presence maiestical would put him out
For quoth the King, an Angell shalt thou see
Yet feare not thou but speake audatiously
The Boy replyd, An Angell is not euill
I should haue fear'd her, had she been a deuill.
With that all laugh'd, and clapt him on the shoulder,
Making the bold wagg by their praises bolder.
One rubb'd his elbow thus, and fleer'd and swore,
A better speech was neuer spoke before
Another with his finger and his thumb,
Cry'd via, we will doo't, come what will come
The third he caper'd and cried, All goes well
The fourth turn'd on the toe and downe he fell
With that they all did tumble on the ground,
With such a zealous laughter so profound,
That in this spleene ridiculous appeares,
To checke their folly passions solemne teares
Quee. But what, but what, come they to visit vs?
Boy They do, they do, and are apparel'd thus,
Like Muscouites, or Russians, as I geesse
Their purpose is to parlee, to court, and dance,

And euery one his Loue-token with a deuice,
Vnto his seuerall Mistresse: which they (I know
But I hope I know where they did get it.
Let it suffice, that I know they haue it.
For Ladies, we are come to make a night,
A night of reuels, if ladies will be there,
Hee, Queene, if I be one.
Hee, take you him.
So shall Berowne take me.
And I'll be one of Loues
We come to
Queene. I'll be
They do it

Prin. They do
That know
Boyet. What would you with the Princes?
Ber. Nothing but peace and gentle visitation.
Ros. What would they, say they?
Boyet. Nothing but peace and gentle visitation.
Ros. Why that they haue, and bid them so be gone.
Boy. She saies you haue it, and you may be gone.
Kin. Say to her we haue measur'd many miles,
To tread a Measure with you on the grasse.
Boy. They say that they haue measur'd many a mile,
To tread a Measure with you on this grasse
Ros. It is not so. Aske them how many inches
Is in one mile. If they haue measur'd many,
The measure then of one is eathe told
Boy. If to come hither, you haue measur'd miles
And many miles the Princesse bids you tell
How many inches doth fill vp one mile?
Ber. Tell her we measure them by weary steps.
Ros. She hears her selfe
Ros. How many weary steps
Of many weary miles you haue ore-gone
Are numbred in the trauell of one mile?
Ber. We number nothing that we spend for you,
Our minutes hold no rate, no count be rear'd
Loue we may do: deare is full without accompt
Vouchsafe to shew the sunshine of your face,
That we (like Sauages) may worship it.
Ros. My face is but a Moone and clouded too.
Kin. Blessed are clouds, to do as such clouds do.
Vouchsafe bright Moone and these thy stars to shine,
(Those clouds remou'd) vpon our watry eyne.
Ros. O vaine petitioner, beg a greater matter,
Thou now requests but Moone-shine in the water.
Kin. Then in our measure vouchsafe but one change
Thou bidst me beg: this begger begs but change.
Ros. Play music then: nay you must do it soone
Not yet: no dance: thus change I like the Moone.
Kin. Will you not dance? How come you thus estranged?
Ros. You tooke the Moone at full, but now she's changed?
Kin. Yet still she is the Moone, and I the Man
Ros. The Musicke plaies, vouchsafe some motion to it. Our eares vouchsafe it.
Kin. But your legges do it.
Kin. Since you are strangers & come here by chance,
We'll not be nice: take hands, we will not dance.
Kin. Why take you hands then?
Ros. Only to part friends,
Curtsie sweet hearts, and so the Measure ends.
Kin. More measure of this measure, be not nice.
Ros. We can afford no more at such a price.
Kin. Prize your selues. What buyes your companie?
Ros. Your absence only.
Kin. That can neuer be.
Ros. Then cannot we be bought: and so adue,
Twice to your Visore, and halfe once to you.
Kin. If you denie to dance, let's hold more chat.
Ros. In priuate then.
Kin. I am best pleas'd with that
Ber. White-handed Mistris, one sweet word with thee
Qu. Honey, and Milke, and Sugar: there is three.
Ber. Nay then two treyes, and if you grow so nice
Methegline, Wort, and Malmsey; well run dice:
There's halfe a dozen sweets
Qu. Seuenth sweet adue, since you can cogg,
I'll play no more with you.
Ber. One word in secret.
Qu. Let it not be sweet.
Ber. Thou grieu'st my gall.

Queen.

Qu. Gall, bitter
Ber. Therefore meete.
Dum. Will you vouchsafe with me to change a word?
Mar. Name it.
Dum. Faire Ladie
Mar. Say you so? faire Lord
Take you that for your faire Ladie.
Du. Please it you,
As much in private, and I bid adieu.
Mar. What was your vizard made without a tong?
Long. I know the reason Ladie why you aske.
Mar. O for your reason, quickly sir, I long.
Long. You haue a double tong within your mask
And would afford my speechlesse vizard halfe.
Mar. Veale quoth the Dutch-man: is not veale a Calfe?
Long. A Calfe faire Ladie
Mar. No, a faire Lords Calfe
Long. Let's part the word
Mar. No, nor the cause you haue
Take your inuention, it may proue an Oxe.
Long. Looke how you butte, your hornes do shoote so ranke
mockes.
Will you giue horns chast Ladie: Doe not so.
Mar. Then will a Calfe be cared, your hornes do grow.
Lon. One word in priuate with you ere I die
Mar. Bleat not so deepe, the butcher heares you cry
Boyet. The tongues of mocking wenches are as keene
As is the Razors edge, inuisible
Cutting a smaller haire then may be seene,
Aboue the sense of sense: so sensible
Seemeth their conference: their conceits haue wings,
Fleete not so heauily: I'le hide me from things.
Ros. Not one word more my maides, breake off
breake off.
Ber. By heauen, all dry beaten with pure scoffe.
King. Farewell mad Wenches, you haue simple
wits. Exeunt.
Qu. Two hot sheepes marie: and those Medlers,
Are these the breed of wits so wondred at?
Boyet. Tapers they are, with your sweete breaths
puft out.
Ros. Well-liking wits they haue: grosse, grosse, fat, and
Qu. O poore ballard on, Katherine prouide for,
Or else we loose you: you shall not stay
Where pleasure drawes vs, there your boote is paide
This peece Boyet is out of count more quite.
Kath. They were all in lamentable cases
The King was weeping ere a good word
Qu. Did Berowne see my face?
Mar. Dumaine was at my seruice, and his sword
No point (quoth I) my seruant straight was mute
Kat. Lord Longauill and I came ore a matt
And trow you what he call'd me?
Qu. Qualme perhaps.
Kat. Yes in good faith
Qu. Go sickenesse as hote as fire.
Ros. Well, better wits haue worne plaine statute caps,
But will you heare, the King is my loue sworne
Qu. And quicke Berowne hath plighted faith to me.
Kat. And Longauill was for my seruice borne
Mar. Dumaine is mine as sure as barke on tree.
Boyet. Madam, and prettie mistresses giue eare,
Immediately they will againe be heere
In their owne shapes: for it can neuer be,
They will digest this harsh indignitie.
Qu. Will they returne?
Boyet. They will they will, God knowes,
And leape for ioy, though they are lame with blowes:
Therefore change fauours, and when they repaire,
Blow like sweet Roses, in this summer aire
Qu. How blow? how blow? Speake to be vnderstood.
Boyet. Faire Ladies maskt, are Roses in their bud:
Dismaskt, their damaskt sweet commixture shewne,
Are Angels vailing clouds, or Roses blowne
Qu. Auaunt perplexitie. What shall we do,
If they returne in their owne shapes to woo?
Kath. Good Madam, if by me you be aduised,
Let's mocke them still as well known as disguised
Let vs complaine to them what fooles were heere,
Disguised like Muscouites in shapeless geare
And wonder what they were, and to what end
Their shallow showes and prologue vilely penn'd
And their rough carriage so ridiculous,
Should be presented at our Tent to vs.
Boyet. Ladies withdraw, the gallants are at hand
Qu. Whip to our Tents, as Roes runne ore land.
Exeunt

Enter the King and the rest

King. Faire and faire God saue you. Where is the Princesse?
Boyet. Gone to her Tent.
Please it your Maiestie command me any seruice to her?
King. That she vouchsafe me audience for one word,
Boyet. I will, and so will she, I know my Lord. Exit.
Ber. This fellow pickes vp wit as Pigeons peason,
And vtters it againe, when Ioue doth please.
He is Wits Pedler, and retailes his Wares,
At Wakes, and Wassels, Meetings, Markets Fayres.
And we are sure lightly by his looke, they haue not wit enough,
To make the wit they haue to grace their show
And I see no reason but their head-peece
Should take away their present courtesie
This Apish and this Monsterous seruice,
Is but the Embassie of the Boy
I am to stay their comming, stand aside softly,
And carelesse lye: these Ladies Courtesies
Might well haue made our sport a Comedie.
King. Come sir it shall not stand: for you must say
That you are true and heere is your word.
Ber. Item, she hath more haire then wit, and more faire then haire, more wit then either of them both. Item, she hath more cause to be proud, then either of them both. Item, she hath more hope of a husband then either of them both. Item, she is virtuous, no more then she is beautifull, no more then she is vertuous. Item, she is the onely Inheritor of her fathers wit, which is infinite, and the onely monster of wit breeding. Item, she hath more of all then any man hath of any thing, and more then any man can haue of nothing. Item, she is not to be found out by Arithmetick, and yet a Foole may finde it out by Nature. Item, she is a right Gentlewoman, and therefore I will not meddle with her.
King. Peace, peace, forbeare,
Your time is out.
Ber. I am done.
King. Then goe to the Ladies, and tell them their fault and your message.
Ber. Shall I speake my conscience?
King. Vnder your owne proportion.
Ber. Light Loues, your fault is in your youth.
King. Gentlemen, this Impertinent is come from the Ladies.
Ber. Your eyes confesse it, or else your double thinke.
King. Your Tongue is too nimble, your eyes too dull, your heart too grosse.
Ber. Well, I confesse the Ladies haue sent me, but the conceit is mine, and yet I haue put off the enuie: for I haue deliuered your Embassie with such a graue face, as if I had told you you had a dangerous sore vpon your Nose, or were falne in loue with your owne beard.
King. Well, your Ladies would speake with you presently.
Ber. I will not come neere them, to haue new plots laid in our way, like a Cold Morning.
King. Will you heare me speake?
Ber. Faith not one word, if a Horne would serue the turne.
King. Why, this is Hyperbolicall.
Ber. I loue short calling, I protest.
King. I say, I loue you.
Ber. Now I protest I loue you: one reason why I would not heare you, for feare you would loue me.
King. Suppose I doe?
Ber. Then for my part I shall hold it no longer infamie, to wish you beloued of Ladies.
King. Suppose I doe not, and haue a minde to chide?
Ber. Then I shall hold it no boldnesse in me, to bid you seeke a Reconciliation.
King. But suppose I loue you, and would obtaine your loue?
Ber. This makes your Suppose full of noyse, sweet Lord, and sweet Loue, my Lord, and sweet Peace: the Patient dies for want of breath, and this Suppose is dead with his owne weight. Finally, your Suppose is a verie Notorious Liar, and a Hypocrite to your Ladies, and the Deuill.
King. Well, you are resolute, not to heare.
Ber. Something like, and more then I know.
King. But I hope your Ladies will not be so vnmannerly.
Ber. Why will you lay them no fault vpon you?
King. Well, they shall heare both your fault, and mine.
Ber. Then I am sure you know how much the grosse summe of deserued prayse, will amount to.
King. Willingly.
Ber. Let me say no more now, gone before the Clocke.
King. Come on, come on, where is the Patience now,
That you speake of?
Ber. I left it with my Doublet.
King. Well, it is proclaimed Lent.
Ber. Then I will to my Tailor.
King. Why, shall I call you Vice?
Ber. Call me what you please, for I regard not.
King. Now Berowne, what Ladies are these?
Ber. Three the most Parfect in perfection.
King. How shall we know them?
Ber. When you haue found the Ladies.
King. Why, this is he that saw Rosaline last.
Ber. With my eyes, which I hope will not be so periured as to commend.
King. What will you sweare your eye sight is with this Instrument of praise?
Ber. No, no, but I will sweare by it as I vse it, and I'le sweare to my Horse, that I know my Hay from anothers, for all his life.
King. Here comes Monarcho, and Dumaine speaking with him.
Ber. Perfect as Clocke, and God some halfe houre, pointing on the houre.
King. Goe to, leaue your Impertinent now.
Ber. My Lord, my Lord, I protest.
King. What?
Ber. That I haue not dined, when my Lord? Perfect yet, as your Deuotions.
King. Call them forth quickly, we will do so.
Ber. Holla, Approch.

Enter the Ladies

King. Faire Ladies, you haue seene my Cabinet,
Which sparkled ouer with flowres of Loue,
Since last we saw faire Queenes.
Ber. Please it you,
As much in priuate, and I'le bid adieu.
Mar. What was your vizard made without a tong?
Long. I know the reason Ladie why you aske.
Mar. O for your reason, quickly sir, I long.
Long. You haue a double tong within your mask
And would afford my speechlesse vizard halfe.
Mar. Veale quoth the Dutch-man: is not veale a Calfe?
Long. A Calfe faire Ladie
Mar. No, a faire Lords Calfe
Long. Let's part the word
Mar. No, nor the cause you haue
Take your inuention, it may proue an Oxe.
Long. Looke how you butte, your hornes do shoote so ranke
mockes.
Will you giue hornes chast Ladie: Do not so.
Mar. Then will a Calfe be cared, your hornes do grow.
Lon. One word in priuate with you ere I die
Mar. Bleat not so deepe, the butcher heares you cry
Boyet. The tongues of mocking wenches are as keene
As is the Razors edge, inuisible
Cutting a smaller haire then may be seene,
Aboue the sense of sense: so sensible
Seemeth their conference: their conceits haue wings,
Fleete not so heauily: I'le hide me from things.
Ros. Not one word more my maides, breake off
breake off.
Ber. By heauen, all dry beaten with pure scoffe.
King. Farewell mad Wenches, you haue simple
wits. Exeunt.
Qu. Two hot sheepes marie: and those Medlers,
Are these the breed of wits so wondred at?
Boyet. Tapers they are, with your sweete breaths
puft out.
Ros. Well-liking wits they haue: grosse, grosse, fat, and
Qu. O poore ballard on, Katherine prouide for,
Or else we loose you: you shall not stay
Where pleasure drawes vs, there your boote is paide
This peece Boyet is out of count more quite.
Kath. They were all in lamentable cases
The King was weeping ere a good word
Qu. Did Berowne see my face?
Mar. Dumaine was at my seruice, and his sword
No point (quoth I) my seruant straight was mute
Kat. Lord Longauill and I came ore a matt
And trow you what he call'd me?
Qu. Qualme perhaps.
Kat. Yes in good faith
Qu. Go sickenesse as hote as fire.
Ros. Well, better wits haue worne plaine statute caps,
But will you heare, the King is my loue sworne
Qu. And quicke Berowne hath plighted faith to me.
Kat. And Longauill was for my seruice borne
Mar. Dumaine is mine as sure as barke on tree.
Boyet. Madam, and prettie mistresses giue eare,
Immediately they will againe be heere
In their owne shapes: for it can neuer be,
They will digest this harsh indignitie.
Qu. Will they returne?
Boyet. They will they will, God knowes,
And leape for ioy, though they are lame with blowes:
Therefore change fauours, and when they repaire,
Blow like sweet Roses, in this summer aire
Qu. How blow? how blow? Speake to be vnderstood.
Boyet. Faire Ladies maskt, are Roses in their bud:
Dismaskt, their damaskt sweet commixture shewne,
Are Angels vailing clouds, or Roses blowne
Qu. Auaunt perplexitie. What shall we do,
If they returne in their owne shapes to woo?
Kath. Good Madam, if by me you be aduised,
Let's mocke them still as well known as disguised
Let vs complaine to them what fooles were heere,
Disguised like Muscouites in shapeless geare
And wonder what they were, and to what end
Their shallow showes and prologue vilely penn'd
And their rough carriage so ridiculous,
Should be presented at our Tent to vs.
Boyet. Ladies withdraw, the gallants are at hand
Qu. Whip to our Tents, as Roes runne ore land.
Exeunt

Enter the King and the rest

King. Faire and faire God saue you. Where is the Princesse?
Boyet. Gone to her Tent.
Please it your Maiestie command me any seruice to her?
King. That she vouchsafe me audience for one word,
Boyet. I will, and so will she, I know my Lord. Exit.
Ber. This fellow pickes vp wit as Pigeons peason,
And vtters it againe, when Ioue doth please.
He is Wits Pedler, and retailes his Wares,
At Wakes, and Wassels, Meetings, Markets Fayres.
And we are sure lightly by his looke, they haue not wit enough,
To make the wit they haue to grace their show
And I see no reason but their head-peece
Should take away their present courtesie
This Apish and this Monsterous seruice,
Is but the Embassie of the Boy
I am to stay their comming, stand aside softly,
And carelesse lye: these Ladies Courtesies
Might well haue made our sport a Comedie.
King. Come sir it shall not stand: for you must say
That you are true and heere is your word.
Ber. Item, she hath more haire then wit, and more faire then haire, more wit then either of them both. Item, she hath more cause to be proud, then either of them both. Item, she hath more hope of a husband then either of them both. Item, she is virtuous, no more then she is beautifull, no more then she is vertuous. Item, she is the onely Inheritor of her fathers wit, which is infinite, and the onely monster of wit breeding. Item, she hath more of all then any man hath of any thing, and more then any man can haue of nothing. Item, she is not to be found out by Arithmetick, and yet a Foole may finde it out by Nature. Item, she is a right Gentlewoman, and therefore I will not meddle with her.
King. Peace, peace, forbeare,
Your time is out.
Ber. I am done.
King. Then goe to the Ladies, and tell them their fault and your message.
Ber. Shall I speake my conscience?
King. Vnder your owne proportion.
Ber. Light Loues, your fault is in your youth.
King. Gentlemen, this Impertinent is come from the Ladies.
Ber. Your eyes confesse it, or else your double thinke.
King. Your Tongue is too nimble, your eyes too dull, your heart too grosse.
Ber. Well, I confesse the Ladies haue sent me, but the conceit is mine, and yet I haue put off the enuie: for I haue deliuered your Embassie with such a graue face, as if I had told you you had a dangerous sore vpon your Nose, or were falne in loue with your owne beard.
King. Well, your Ladies would speake with you presently.
Ber. I will not come neere them, to haue new plots laid in our way, like a Cold Morning.
King. Will you heare me speake?
Ber. Faith not one word, if a Horne would serue the turne.
King. Why, this is Hyperbolicall.
Ber. I loue short calling, I protest.
King. I say, I loue you.
Ber. Now I protest I loue you: one reason why I would not heare you, for feare you would loue me.
King. Suppose I doe?
Ber. Then for my part I shall hold it no longer infamie, to wish you beloued of Ladies.
King. Suppose I doe not, and haue a minde to chide?
Ber. Then I shall hold it no boldnesse in me, to bid you seeke a Reconciliation.
King. But suppose I loue you, and would obtaine your loue?
Ber. This makes your Suppose full of noyse, sweet Lord, and sweet Loue, my Lord, and sweet Peace: the Patient dies for want of breath, and this Suppose is dead with his owne weight. Finally, your Suppose is a verie Notorious Liar, and a Hypocrite to your Ladies, and the Deuill.
King. Well, you are resolute, not to heare.
Ber. Something like, and more then I know.
King. But I hope your Ladies will not be so vnmannerly.
Ber. Why will you lay them no fault vpon you?
King. Well, they shall heare both your fault, and mine.
Ber. Then I am sure you know how much the grosse summe of deserued prayse, will amount to.
King. Willingly.
Ber. Let me say no more now, gone before the Clocke.
King. Come on, come on, where is the Patience now,
That you speake of?
Ber. I left it with my Doublet.
King. Well, it is proclaimed Lent.
Ber. Then I will to my Tailor.
King. Why, shall I call you Vice?
Ber. Call me what you please, for I regard not.
King. Now Berowne, what Ladies are these?
Ber. Three the most Parfect in perfection.
King. How shall we know them?
Ber. When you haue found the Ladies.
King. Why, this is he that saw Rosaline last.
Ber. With my eyes, which I hope will not be so periured as to commend.
King. What will you sweare your eye sight is with this Instrument of praise?
Ber. No, no, but I will sweare by it as I vse it, and I'le sweare to my Horse, that I know my Hay from anothers, for all his life.
King. Here comes Monarcho, and Dumaine speaking with him.
Ber. Perfect as Clocke, and God some halfe houre, pointing on the houre.
King. Goe to, leaue your Impertinent now.
Ber. My Lord, my Lord, I protest.
King. What?
Ber. That I haue not dined, when my Lord? Perfect yet, as your Deuotions.
King. Call them forth quickly, we will do so.
Ber. Holla, Approch.

Enter the Ladies

King. Faire Ladies, you haue seene my Cabinet,
Which sparkled ouer with flowres of Loue,
Since last we saw faire Queenes.

The

The vertue of your eie must breake my oth.
Qu. You nickname vertue, vice you should haue spoke
For vertues office neuer breakes men troth.
Now by my maiden honor, yet as pure
As the vnsullied Lilly, I protest,
A world of torments though I should endure,
I would not yeeld to be your houses guest:
So much I hate a breaking cause to see
Oh heauenly oath, vow'd with integritie.
King. O you haue liu'd in desolation heere,
Vnseene, vnvisited, much to our shame.
Qu. Not to my Lord, it is not so I sweare,
We haue had pastimes heere, and pleasant game,
A messe of Russians left vs but of late.
King. How Madam Russians?
Qu. I in truth, my Lord.
Trim gallants, full of Courtship and of state.
Ros. Madam speake true. It is not so my Lord:
My Lady (to the manner of the dayes)
In courtesie gives vndeserving praise.
We foure indeed confronted were with foure
In Russia habite. Heere they stayd an houre,
And talk'd apace, and in that houre (my Lord)
They did not bless vs with one happy word.
I dare not call them fooles, but this I thinke,
When they are thirsty, fooles would faine haue drinke.
Ber. This ieast is for me. Gentle sweete,
Your wits makes wise things foolish, when we greete
With eies best seeing, heauens fierie eie:
By light we looke by night, your capacitie
Is of that nature, that to your huge store,
Wise things seeme foolish, and rich things but poore.
Ros. This proues you wise and rich, for in my eie
Ber. I am a foole, and full of pouertie.
Ros. But that you take what doth to you belong,
It were a fault to snatch words from my tongue.
Ber. O, I am yours and all that I possesse.
Ros. All the fooles mine.
Ber. I cannot giue you leste.
Ros. Which of the Vizards was it that you wore?
Ber. Where? when? what Vizard? why demand you this?
Ros. There, then, that vizard, that superfluous case,
That hid the worse, and shewd the better face.
King. We are discouered,
They'l mocke vs now downe right.
Dum. Let vs confesse and turne it to a iest.
Qu. Amaz'd my Lord? Why lookes your Highnes sadnes?
Ros. Helpe hold his browes, he'l sweare anon: why looke you pale?
Sea-sicke I thinke, coming from Muscouie.
Ber. Thus pour the stars down plagues for periury
Can any face of brasse hold longer out?
Heere stand I, lady dart thy skill at mee,
Bruise me with scorne, confound me with a flout.
Thrust thy sharpe wit quite through my ignorance
Cut me to peeces with thy keene conceit:
And I will wish thee neuer more to dance,
Nor neuer more in Russian habite waite.
O! neuer will I trust to speeches penn'd,
Nor to the motion of a Schoole-boies tongue
Nor neuer come in vizard to my friend,
Nor woo in rime like a blind-harpers songue,
Taffata phrases, silken tearmes precise,
Three-pil'd Hyperboles, spruce affection,
Figures pedant call these summer flies,
Haue blowne me full of maggot ostentation
I do forswear them, and I heere protest,
By this white Gloue (how white the hand God knows)
Henceforth my woing minde shall be expreste
In russet yeas, and honest kersie noes.
And to begin Wench, so God helpe me law,
My loue to thee is sound, sans cracke or flaw.
Ros. Sans, sans, I pray you.
Ber. Yet I haue a tricke
Of the old rage: beare with me, I am sicke
Ile leane it by degrees: soft, let vs see,
Write Lord haue mercie on vs, on those three.
They are infected, in their hearts it lies
They haue the plague, and caught it of your eyes.
These Lords are visited, you are not free:
For the Lords tokens on you do I see.
Qu. No, they are free that gaue these tokens to vs.
Ber. Our states are forfeit, seeke not to vndo vs.
Ros. It is not so; for how can this be true,
That you stand forfeit, being those that sue
Ber. Peace, for I will not haue to do with you.
Ros. Nor shall not, if I do as I intend.
Ber. Speake for your selues, my wit is at an end.
King. Teach vs sweete Madame, for our rude transgression, some faire excuse.
Qu. The fairest is confession.
Were you not heere but euen now, disguis'd?
King. Madam, I was.
Qu. And were you well aduis'd?
King. I was faire Madam.
Qu. When you then were heere,
What did you whisper in your Ladies eare?
King. That more then all the world I did respect her
Qu. When shee shall challenge this, you will reiect her
King. Vpon mine Honor no.
Qu. Peace peace, forbeare
Your oath once broke, you force not to forsweare.
King. Despise me when I breake this oath of mine.
Qu. I will, and therefore keepe it. Rosaline,
What did the Russian whisper in your eare?
Ros. Madam he swore that he did hold me deare
As precious eye-sight, and did value me
Aboue this World: adding thereto moreouer,
That he would Wed me, or else die my Louer.
Qu. God giue thee ioy of him: the Noble Lord
Most honorably doth vphold his word
King. What meane you Madame?
By my life, my troth,
I neuer swore this Ladie such an oth.
Ros. By heauen you did; and to confirme it plaine,
You gaue me this. But take it sir againe.
King. My faith and this, the Princesse I did giue,
I knew her by this Iewell on her sleeue.
Qu. Pardon me sir, this Iewell did she weare,
And Lord Berowne (I thanke him) is my deare
What? Will you haue me, or your Pearle againe?
Ber. Neither of either, I remit both twaine.
I see the tricke on't: Heere was a consent,
Knowing aforehand of our merriment,
To dash it like a Christmas Comedie.
Some carry-tale, some please-man, some slight Zanie,
Some mumble-newes, some trencher-knight, some Dick
That smiles his cheeke in yeares, and knowes the trick
To make my Lady laugh, when she's dispos'd,

I here an't shall please you a foolish mild man, an honest man, looke you, & soon dasht. He is a marvailous promising man, beleeue me, he will proue a good Bowler (by hand or foot) as you see, how he is out of breath when he treades. But, comes Worthies a comming, will speake their mindes in some other sort. Exit Cu.

Cu. Stand aside good Pompey.

Enter Pompey for Iudas Machabeus or Hercules.

Pom. Great and puissant Monarch and eke Hercules,
Whose Club kild Cerberus that three-headed Canus,
And when he was a babe, a child, a shrimpe,
Thus did he strangle serpents in Maia
Quo niam, he men'd not his minority,
Ergo, I come with this Apology.
Keep, stand aside. Know I in Armes am call'd. Exit Pom.

Ped. Iudas I am.

Dum. A Dieu.

Ped. Without marry,

Iudas I am ycleped Machabeus.

Dum. Iudas Machabeus clapper-clawd, ha ha Iudas.

Ber. A kinsman to Iudas? were not he proud Iudas?

Ped. Iudas I am.

Dum. The more shame for you Iudas.

Ped. What meane you?

Ber. For to make Iudas hang himselfe.

Ped. Begin sir, you are my Elder.

Ber. Well followed: Iudas was hanged for being so.

Ped. I will do it in despight of the teeth of all rime.

Ber. Do it then, do it.

Ped. Well followed Iudas, was hanged on an Elder.

Ber. I will not be sworne but your legge is too bigge for Iudas.

Ped. Thy reason dull Asse, why?

Dum. Because of the bulke.

Ped. A weake prop for your credit.

Ber. Now by the hand I pledge my credit in a kinde Iudas.

Dum. It is not so much impaired, for it stands upon me to be a stale Iudas or no: Iudas I say.

Ped. By the Lord I will not be Iudas.

Dum. Not Iudas? not shew your selfe in what you vow?

Ped. Not Iudas I am.

Dum. A Dieu.

Ped. Without marry.

Iudas I am ycleped Machabeus.

Dum Iudas Machabeus clapper-clawd, ha ha Iudas.

Ber. A kinsman to Iudas? were not he proud Iudas?

Ped. Iudas I am.

Dum. The more shame for you Iudas.

Ped. What meane you?

Ber. To make Iudas hang himselfe.

Ped. Begin sir, you are my Elder.

Ber. Well followed Iudas, was hanged on an Elder.

Ped. I will do it in despight of the teeth of all rime.

Ber. Do it then, do it.

Ped. Well followed Iudas, was hanged on an Elder.

Ber. I will not be sworne but your legge is too bigge for Iudas.

Dum. It is not so much impaired, for it stands upon me to be a stale Iudas or no: Iudas I say.

Ped. By the Lord I will not be Iudas.

Dum. Not Iudas? not shew your selfe in what you vow?

Ped. Not Iudas I am.

Dum. A Dieu.

Ped. Without marry.

Iudas I am ycleped Machabeus.

Dum Iudas Machabeus clapper-clawd, ha ha Iudas.

Ber. A kinsman to Iudas? were not he proud Iudas?

Ped. Iudas I am.

Dum. The more shame for you Iudas.

Ped. What meane you?

Ber. To make Iudas hang himselfe.

Ped. Begin sir, you are my Elder.

Ber. Well followed: Iudas was hanged on an Elder.

Ped. I will do it in despight of the teeth of all rime.

Ber. Do it then, do it.

Ped. Well followed Iudas, was hanged on an Elder.

Ber. But is this Hector?

Kath. I thinke Hector was not so cleane timber'd.

Lon. His legge is too big for Hector.

Dum. More Calfe certaine.

Boy. No, he is best indued in the small.

Ber. This cannot be Hector.

Dum. He's a God or a Painter, for he makes faces.

Brag. The Armipotent Mars of Launces the almighty, gaue Hector a gift.

Dum. A gilt Nutmegge.

Ber. A Lemmon.

Lon. Stucke with Cloues.

Dum. No clouen.

Brag. The Armipotent Mars of Launces the almighty,
Gaue Hector a gift, the heire of Ilion,
A man so breathed, that certaine he would fight yea
From morne till night, out of his Pauilion
I am that flowre.

Dum. That Mint.

Lon. That Columbine.

Brag. Sweet Lord Longauill rein thy tongue.

Lon. I must rather giue it the reine, for it runnes against Hector.

Dum. I, and Hector's a Grey-hound.

Brag. The sweet War-man is dead and rotten,
Sweet chuckes, beat not the bones of the buried.
But I will forward with my deuice,
Sweet Royaltie bestow on me the sence of hearing.

Here comes Pompey the Great.

Cost. Speake braue Hector, we are much delighted.

Brag. I do adore thy sweet Graces slipper.

Boy. Loues her by the foot.

Dum. He may not by the yard.

Brag. This Hector farre surmounted Hannibal.

The posture gone.

Cost. Fellow Hector, she's gone; she is two months on her way.

Brag. What meane you?

Cost. Faith vnlesse you play the honest Troyan, the poore wench is cast away: she's quick, she's with child, she's vndone, she is.

Brag. Beleeue me thou perishest: Is shee not quicke? I do thinke her as dead as anger can make her.

Cost. I would all Hector be whipt with Spanish flies, and sprucke by him, and all dead for Pompey, that's dead by him.

Dum. Most rare Pompey.

Boy. Renowned Pompey.

Ber. Greater then great, great, great, great Pompey. Pompey the Huge.

Dum. Hector trembles.

Ber. Pompey is moued, more Atees more Atees stirre them, or stirre them on.

Dum. Hector will challenge him.

Ber. I am like no more mans blood in's belly, then will sup a Flea.

Brag. By the North-pole I do challenge thee.

Cost. I will not fight with a pole like a Northern man; Ile slash, Ile do it by the sword. I pray you let mee borrow my Armes againe.

Dum. Roome for the incensed Worthies.

Cost. Ile do it in my shirt.

Dum. Most resolute Pompey.

Page. Master, let me take you a button hole lower. Do you not see Pompey is vncasing for the combat: what meane meane you? you will loſe your reputation.

Brag. Gentlemen and Souldiers pardon me, I will not combat in my ſhirt.

Dum. You may not denie it, Pompey hath made the challenge.

Brag. Sweet bloods, I both may, and will.

Ber. What reaſon haue you for it?

Brag. The naked truth of it is, I haue no ſhirt, I go woolward for penance.

Boy. True, and it was inioyned him in Rome for want of Linnen: ſince when, Ile be ſworne he wore none, but a diſhclout of Iaquenetta's, and that hee weares next his heart for a fauour.

Enter a Meſſenger, Monſieur Marcade.

Mar. God ſaue you Madame.

Qu. Welcome Marcade, but that thou interrupteſt our merriment.

Mar. I am ſorrie Madam, for the newes I bring is heauie in my tongue. The King your father

Qu. Dead for my life.

Mar. Euen ſo: My tale is told.

Ber. Worthies away, the Scene begins to cloud.

Brag. For mine owne part, I breath free breath: I haue ſeene the day of wrong, through the little hole of diſcretion, and I will right my ſelfe like a Souldier.

Exeunt Worthies

Kin. How fare's your Maieſtie?

Qu. Boyet prepare, I will away to night.

Kin. Madame not ſo, I do beſeech you ſtay.

Qu. Prepare I ſay. I thanke you gracious Lords
For all your faire endeuours and entreats:
Out of a new ſad-ſoule, that you vouchſafe,
In your rich wiſedome to excuſe, or hide,
The liberall oppoſition of our ſpirits,
If ouer-boldly we haue borne our ſelues,
In the converſe of breath (your gentleneſſe
Was guiltie of it.) Farewell worthie Lord:
A heauie heart beares not a humble tongue.
Excuſe me ſo, comming ſo ſhort of thankes,
For my great ſuite, ſo eaſily obtain'd.

Kin. The extreme parts of time extremely formes
All cauſes to the purpoſe of his ſpeed
And often at his very looſe decides
That, which long proceſſe could not arbitrate.
And though the mourning brow of progeny
Forbid the ſmiling courteſie of Loue:
The holy ſuite which faine it would conuince,
Yet ſince loues argument was firſt on foote,
Let not the cloud of ſorrow iuſtle it
From what it purpoſ'd: ſince to waile friends loſt,
Is not by much ſo wholſome profitable
As to reioyce at friends but newly found.

Qu. I vnderſtand you not, my greefes are double.

Ber. Honeſt plain words, beſt pierce the eares of griefe
And by theſe badges vnderſtand the King,
For your faire ſakes haue we neglected time,
Plaid foule play with our oathes: your beautie Ladies
Hath much deformed vs, faſhioning our humors
Euen to the oppoſed end of our intents.
And what in vs hath ſeem'd ridiculous:
As Loue is full of vnbefitting ſtraines,
All wanton as a childe, skipping and vaine.
Form'd by the eie, and therefore like the eie.
Full of ſtraying ſhapes, of habits, and of formes
Varying in ſubiects as the eie doth roule,
To euerie varied obiect in his glance.
Which parte-coated preſence of looſe loue
Put on by vs, if in your heauenly eies,
Haue miſbecom'd our oathes and grauities,
Thoſe heauenlie eies that looke into theſe faults,
Suggeſted vs to make: therefore Ladies
Our loue being yours, the error that Loue makes
Is likewiſe yours. We to our ſelues proue falſe,
By being once falſe, for euer to be true
To thoſe that make vs both, faire Ladies you
And euen that falſhood in it ſelfe a ſinne,
Thus purifies it ſelfe, and turnes to grace.

Qu. We haue receiu'd your Letters, full of Loue
Your Fauours, the Ambaſſadors of Loue.
And in our maiden counſailes rated them,
At courtſhip, pleaſant ieſt, and courteſie,
As bumbaſt and as lining to the time:
But more deuout then theſe are our reſpects
Haue we not beene, and therefore met your loues
In their owne faſhion, like a merriment.

Dum. Our letters Madam, ſhew'd much more then ieſt

Long. So did our lookes.

Roſa. We did not coat them ſo

Kin. Now at the lateſt minute of the houre,
Grant vs your loues.

Qu. A time me thinkes too ſhort,
To make a world-without-end bargaine in.
No, no my Lord, your Grace is periur'd much,
Full of deare guiltineſſe, and therefore thus:
If for my Loue (as there is no ſuch cauſe)
You will do ought, this ſhall you do for me.
Your oth I will not truſt: but go with ſpeed
To ſome forlorne and naked Hermitage,
Remote from all the pleaſures of the world
There ſtay, vntil the twelue Celeſtiall Signes
Haue brought about their annuall reckoning.
If this auſtere inſociable life,
Change not your offer made in heate of blood:
If frolts, and faſts, hard lodging, and thin weeds
Nip not the gaudie bloſſomes of your Loue,
But that it bear this triall, and laſt loue
Then at the expiration of the yeare,
Come challenge me, challenge me by theſe deſerts,
And by this Virgin palme, now kiſſing chine,
I will be thine: and till that inſtant ſhut
My woefull ſelfe vp in a mourning houſe,
Raining the teares of lamentation,
For the remembrance of my Fathers death
If this thou do deny, let our hands part,
Neither intitled in the others hart

Kin. If this, or more then this, I would denie,
To flatter vp theſe powers of mine with reſt,
The ſodaine hand of death cloſe vp mine eie
Hence euer then, my heart is ſtrongly preſt.

Ber. And what to me my Loue? and what to me?

Roſ. You muſt be purged too, your ſins are rack'd,
You are attaint with faults and periurie:
Therefore if you my fauor meane to get,
A twelue-month ſhall you ſpend, and neuer reſt,
But ſeeke the wearie beds of people ſicke

Dum. But what to me my loue? but what to me?

Kat. A wife? a beard, faire health, and honeſtie,
With three-fold loue, I wiſh you all theſe three.

Dum. O ſhall I ſay, I thanke you gentle wife?

Kat. Not ſo my Lord, a twelue-month and a day,

Ile

He marke no words that smoothfac'd wooers say.
Come when the King commits my Ladie come:
Then if I haue much loue, I'le ope you some,
Dum. Deere Berowne write true and faithfully to them.
Kath. Yet sweare not, least ye be forsworne agen.
Lon. What saies Maria?
Mar. At the twelue months end,
Ile change my blacke Gowne, for a faithfull friend
Lon. I'le stay with patience, but the time is long.
Mar. The liker you, few taller are so yong.
Ber. Studies my Lord? I mean in the Mistresse, looke on me,
Behold the window of my heart, mine eye
What humble suit attends thy answer there,
Impose some seruice on me for my loue.
Ros. Oft haue I heard of you my Lord Berowne,
Before I saw you: and the world large fame
Proclaimes you for a man replete with mockes,
Full of comparisons and wounding flouts:
Which you on all estates will execute
That lie within the mercie of your wit.
To weede this Wormewood from your fruitfull braine,
And therewithall to win me if you please,
Without the which I am not to be won
You shall this twelue month terme from day to day,
Visite the speechlesse sicke, and still conuerse
With groaning wretches: and your taske shall be,
With all the fierce endeauour of your wit,
To enforce the pained impotent to smile.
Ber. To moue wilde laughter in the throate of death?
It cannot be, it is impossible.
Mirth cannot moue a soule in agonie
Ros. Why that expels our courtship, or plaine wit,
Whose influence is begot of that loose grace,
Which shallow laughing hearers giue to fooles:
A iest's prosperitie, lies in the eare
Of him that heares it, neuer in the tongue
Of him that makes it: then if sickly eares
Deafe with the clamours of their owne dear groanes,
Will heare your idle scornes, continue then,
And I will haue you, and that fault withall.
But if they will not, throw away that spirit,
And I shall finde you empty of that fault,
Right ioyfull of your reformation.
Ber. A twelue month? Well, befall what will befall,
Ile iest a twelue month in an Hospitall.
Qu. I sweet my Lord and so I take my leaue
Kin. No Madame, we will bring you on your way.
Ber. Our wooing doth not end like an old Play
Iacke hath not Gill: these Ladies courtesie
Might well haue made our sport a Comedie.
Kin. Come sir, it wants a twelue month and a day,
And then 'twill end.
Ber. That's too long for a play.

Enter Braggart.

Brag. Sweet Maiesty vouchsafe me
Qu. Was not that Hector?
Dum. The worthie Knight of Troy.
Brag. I will kisse thy royall finger, and take leaue.
I am a Votarie, I haue vow'd to Iaquenetta to holde the Plough for her sweet loue three yeares. But most esteemed greatnesse, will you heare the Dialogue that the two Learned men haue compiled, in praise of the Owle and the Cuckow? It should haue followed in the end of our Show.
Kin. Call them forth quickely, we will do so.
Brag. Holla, Approach.

Enter all.

This side is Hiems, Winter.
This Ver, the Spring: the one maintained by the Owle,
Th'other by the Cuckow.
Ver, begin

The Song

When Daisies pied, and Violets blew
And Cuckow-buds of yellow hew:
And Ladie-smockes all siluer white,
Do paint the Medowes with delight
The Cuckow then on euerie tree,
Mockes married men, for thus sings he.
Cuckow.
Cuckow, Cuckow: O word of feare,
Vnpleasing to a married eare.

When Shepheards pipe on Oaten strawes,
And merrie Larkes are Ploughmens clockes.
When Turtles tread, and Rookes and Dawes,
And Maidens bleach their summer smockes
The Cuckow then on euerie tree
Mockes married men; for thus sings he,
Cuckow.
Cuckow, Cuckow: O word of feare,
Vnpleasing to a married eare

Winter

When Icicles hang by the wall,
And Dicke the Shepheard blowes his nailе:
And Tom beares Logges into the hall,
And Milke comes frozen home in pailе
When blood is nipt, and waies be fowle,
Then nightly sings the staring Owle
Tu-whit to-who:
A merrie note,
While greasie Ione doth keele the pot.

When all aloud the winde doth blow,
And coffing drownes the Parsons saw:
And birds sit brooding in the snow,
And Marians nose lookes red and raw.
When roasted Crabs hisse in the bowle,
Then nightly sings the staring Owle,
Tu-whit to who:
A merrie note,
While greasie Ione doth keele the pot.

Brag. The Words of Mercurie,
Are harsh after the songs of Apollo:
You that way; we this way.

Exeunt omnes.

FINIS.

A MIDSOMMER Nights Dreame.

Actus primus.

Enter Theseus, Hippolita, with others.

The. NOw faire Hippolita, our nuptiall houre
Drawes on apace: foure happy dayes bring in Another Moone: but O me thinkes how slow
This old Moone wanes? She lingers my desires
Like to a Step-dame, or a Dowager,
Long withering out a young mans reuennew.
Hip. Foure dayes will quickly steep themselues in nights,
Foure nights will quickly dreame away the time:
And then the Moone like to a siluer bow,
Now bent in heauen, shall behold the night
Of our solemnities.
The. Go Philostrate,
Stirre vp the Athenian youth to merriments,
Awake the pert and nimble spirit of mirth,
Turne melancholy forth to Funerals:
The pale companion is not for our pompe.
Hippolita, I woo'd thee with my sword,
And won thy loue, doing thee iniuries:
But I will wed thee in another key,
With pompe, with triumph, and with reuelling.

Enter Egeus and his daughter Hermia, Lysander and Demetrius.

Ege. Happy be Theseus, our renowned Duke.
The. Thankes good Egeus: what's the newes with thee?
Ege. Full of vexation, come I, with complaint
Against my childe, my daughter Hermia.
Stand forth Demetrius.
My Noble Lord,
This man hath my consent to marry her.
Stand forth Lysander.
And my gracious Duke,
This man hath bewitch'd the bosome of my childe:
Thou, thou Lysander, thou hast giuen her rimes,
And interchang'd loue tokens with my childe:
Thou hast by Moone-light at her window sung,
With faining voyce, verses of faining loue,
And stolne the impression of her fantasie,
With bracelets of thy hayre, rings, gawdes, conceits,
Knackes, trifles, Nose-gaies, sweet meats (messengers
Of strong preuailment in vnhardned youth)
With cunning hast thou filch'd my daughters heart,
Turn'd her obedience (which is due to me)
To stubborne harshnesse. And my gracious Duke,
Be it so she will not here before your Grace
Consent to marry with Demetrius,
I beg the ancient priuiledge of Athens:
As she is mine, I may dispose of her;
Which shall be either to this Gentleman,
Or to her death, according to our Law,
Immediately prouided in that case.
The. What say you Hermia? be aduis'd faire Maide.
To you your Father should be as a God,
One that compos'd your beauties, yea and one
To whom you are but as a forme in waxe
By him imprinted, and within his power,
To leaue the figure, or disfigure it.
Demetrius is a worthy Gentleman.
Her. So is Lysander.
The. In himselfe he is:
But in this kinde, wanting your Fathers voyce,
The other must be held the worthier.
Her. I would my father look'd but with my eyes.
The. Rather your eyes must with his iudgement looke.
Her. I do entreat your Grace, to pardon me.
I know not by what power I am made bold,
Nor how much modesty it is in me
To speake before the Duke and Lord:
I am not sure I could do him right,
That I do know: and as I do not know,
That I can tame my modesty to speake.
The. Take time to pause, and by the next new Moone
(The sealing day betwixt my loue and me,
For euerlasting bond of fellowship)
Prepare to die for disobedience.
Therefore faire Hermia, question your desires,
Know of your youth, examine well your blood,
Whether (if you yeelde not to your fathers choice)
You can endure the liuerie of a Nunne,
For aye to be in shady Cloister mewed,
To liue a barren sister all your life,
Chanting faint hymnes to the cold fruitlesse Moone.
Thrice blessed they, that master so their blood,
To vndergo such maiden pilgrimage.
But earthlier happier is the rose distild,
Then that which withering on the virgin thorne
Growes, liues, and dies, in single blessednesse.

Her. So will I grow, so liue, so die my Lord,
Ere I will yeeld my virgin Patent vp
Vnto his Lordship, whose vnwished yoake,
My soule consents not to giue soueraignty.
The. Take time to pause, and by the next new Moon
The sealing day betwixt my loue and me,
For euerlasting bond of fellowship:
Vpon that day either prepare to dye,
For disobedience to your fathers will,
Or else to wed Demetrius as hee would,
Or on Diana's Altar to protest
For aie, austerity, and single life.
Dem. Relent sweet Hermia, and Lysander, yeelde
Thy crazed title to my certaine right.
Lys. You haue her fathers loue, Demetrius:
Let me haue Hermias do you marry with him.
Ege. Scornfull Lysander, true, he hath my Loue,
And what is mine, my loue shall render him.
And she is mine, and all my right of her,
I do estate vnto Demetrius.
Lys. I am my Lord as well deriued as he,
As well possest: my loue is more than his
My fortunes euery way as fairely ranked
(If not with vantage) as Demetrius
And (which is more than all these words can be)
I am beloued of beauteous Hermia:
Why should not I then prosecute my right?
Demetrius, I'le auouch it to his head,
Made loue to Nedars daughter, Helena,
And won her soule: and she (sweet Ladie) dotes,
Deuoutly dotes, dotes in Idolatry,
Vpon this spotted and inconstant man.
The. I must confesse, that I haue heard so much,
And with Demetrius thought to haue spoke thereof:
But being ouer-full of self-affaires,
My mind did lose it. But Demetrius come,
And come Egeus, you shall go with me,
I haue some priuate schooling for you both.
For you faire Hermia, looke you arme your selfe,
To fit your fancies to your Fathers will,
Or else the Law of Athens yields you vp
(Which by no meanes we may extenuate)
To death, or to a vow of single life.
Come my Hippolita, what cheare my loue?
Demetrius and Egeus go along:
I must employ you in some businesse
Against our nuptiall, and confer with you
Of something nearely that concernes your selues.
Ege. With duty and desire we follow you. Exeunt.

Manet Lysander and Hermia.

Lys. How now my loue? Why is your cheek so pale?
How chance the Roses there do fade so fast?
Her. Belike for want of raine, which I could well
Beteeme them from the tempest of mine eyes.
Lys. For ought that euer I could reade,
Could euer hear by tale or history,
The course of true loue neuer did run smooth,
But either it was different in blood.
Her. O crosse! too high to be enthral'd to loue.
Lys. Or else misgrafted, in respect of yeares.
Her. O spight! too old to be ingag'd to young.
Lys. Or else it stood vpon the choise of friends.
Her. O hell! to choose loue by another's eie.
Lys. Or if there were a simpathie in choise,
Warre, death, or sicknesse, did lay siege to it;
Making it momentarie, as a sound:
Swift as a shadow, short as any dreame,
Briefe as the lightning in the collied night,
That (in a spleene) vnfolds both heauen and earth:
And ere a man hath power to say, behold,
The iawes of darknesse do deuoure it vp:
So quicke bright things come to confusion.
Her. If then true Louers haue beene euer crost,
It stands as an edict in destinie:
Then let vs teach our triall patience,
Because it is a customarie crosse,
As due to loue, as thoughts, and dreames, and sighes,
Wishes and teares; poore Fancies followers.
Lys. A good perswasion; therefore heare me Hermia,
I haue a Widdow Aunt, a dowager,
Of great reuennew, and she hath no childe,
From Athens is her house remou'd seuen leagues,
And she respects me, as her onely sonne:
There gentle Hermia, may I marrie thee,
And to that place, the sharpe Athenian Law
Cannot pursue vs. If thou lou'st me, then
Steale forth thy fathers house to morrow night:
And in the wood, a league without the towne,
(Where I did meete thee once with Helena,
To do obseruance for a morne of May)
There will I stay for thee.
Her. My good Lysander,
I sweare to thee, by Cupids strongest bow,
By his best arrow with the golden head,
By the simplicitie of Venus Doues,
By that which knitteth soules, and prospers loue,
And by that fire which burn'd the Carthage Queene,
When the false Troyan vnder saile was seene,
By all the vowes that euer men haue broke,
(In number more than euer women spoke)
In that same place thou hast appointed me,
To morrow truly will I meete with thee.
Lys. Keepe promise loue. Looke here comes Helena.

Enter Helena.

Her. God speede faire Helena, whither away?
Hel. Call you me faire? that faire againe vnsay,
Demetrius loues you faire: O happie faire!
Your eyes are loadstarres and your tongues sweet ayre
More tuneable than Larke to shepheards eare,
When wheate is greene, when hauthorne buds appeare,
Sickenesse is catching: O were fauor so,
Your words I catch, faire Hermia ere I go,
My eare should catch your voice, my eye, your eye,
My tongue should catch your tongues sweet melodie,
Were the world mine, Demetrius being bated,
The rest Ile giue to be to you translated.
O teach me how you looke, and with what art
You sway the motion of Demetrius hart.
Her. I frowne vpon him, yet he loues me still.
Hel. O that your frownes would teach my smiles such skill.
Her. I giue him curses, yet he giues me loue.
Hel. O that my prayers could such affection moue.
Her. The more I hate, the more he followes me.
Hel. The more I loue, the more he hateth me.
Her. His folly Helena is none of mine.
Hel. None but your beauty, would that fault were mine.
Her. Take comfort: he no more shall see my face,
Lysander and my selfe will flie this place.
Before the time I did Lysander see,
Seem'd Athens like a Paradise to mee.

O then, what graces in my Loue do dwell,
That he hath turn'd a heauen into hell
Lys. Helen, to you our mindes we will vnfold,
To morrow night, when Phebe doth behold
Her siluer visage, in the watry glasse,
Decking with liquid pearle, the bladed grasse
(A time that Louers flights doth still conceale)
Through Athens gates, haue we deuis'd to steale.
Her. And in the wood, where often you and I,
Vpon faint Primrose beds, were wont to lye,
Emptying our bosomes, of their counsell sweld:
There my Lysander, and my selfe shall meete,
And thence from Athens turne away our eyes
To seeke new friends and strange companions,
Farewell sweet play-fellow, pray thou for vs,
And good luck grant thee thy Demetrius.
Keepe word Lysander we must starue our sight,
From louers food, till morrow deepe midnight
Exit Hermia.
Lys. I will my Hermia. Helena adieu,
As you on him, Demetrius dotes on you. Exit Lysander
Hele. How happy some, o're other some can be!
Through Athens I am thought as fayre as she.
But what of that? Demetrius thinkes not so,
He will not know, what all, but he doth know,
And as he erres, doting on Hermias eyes,
So I, admiring of his qualities
Things base and vilde, holding no quantity,
Loue can transpose to forme and dignity,
Loue looketh not with the eyes, but with the minde,
And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blinde.
Nor hath loues mind of any iudgement taste
Wings and no eyes, figure vnheedy haste.
And therefore is Loue said to be a childe,
Because in choise he is often beguil'd,
As waggish boyes in game themselues forsweare:
So the boy Loue is periur'd euery where.
For ere Demetrius look't on Hermias eyne,
He hail'd downe oathes that he was onely mine.
And when this Haile some heat from Hermia felt,
So he dissolu'd, and showres of oathes did melt,
I will go tell him of faire Hermias flight
Then to the wood will he, to morrow night
Pursue her; and for his intelligence,
If I haue thankes, it is a deare expence:
But herein meane I to enrich my paine,
To haue his sight thither, and backe againe. Exit.

Enter Quince the Carpenter, Snug the Ioyner, Bottome the Weauer, Flute the bellowes-mender, Snout the Tinker, and Starueling the Taylor.

Quin. Is all our company heere?
Bot. You were best to call them generally, man by man, according to the scrip
Qui. Here is the scrowle of euery mans name, which is thought fit through all Athens, to play in our Enterlude before the Duke and the Duches, on his wedding day at night.
Bot. First, good Peter Quince, say what the play treats on: then read the names of the Actors: and so grow on to a point.
Quin. Marry our play is the most lamentable Comedy, and most cruell death of Pyramus and Thisbie.
Bot. A very good peece of worke I assure you, and a merry. Now good Peter Quince, call forth your Actors by the scrowle. Maisters spread your selues.
Quince. Answere as I call you. Nick Bottome the Weauer.
Bottome. Ready, name what part I am for, and proceed.
Quince. You Nicke Bottome are set downe for Pyramus.
Bot. What is Pyramus, a louer, or a tyrant?
Quin. A louer that kills himselfe most gallantly for loue.
Bot. That will aske some teares in the true performing of it: if I do it, let the audience looke to their eyes: I will moue stormes; I will condole in some measure. To the rest yet, my chiefe humour is for a tyrant. I could play Ercles rarely, or a part to teare a Cat in, to make all split. The raging Rocks, and shiuering shocks shall break the locks of prison gates, and Phibbus carre (Ieshu, Ieshu) shall shine from farre, and make and marre the foolish Fates. This was lofty. Now name the rest of the Players. This is Ercles vaine, a tyrants vaine: a louer is more condoling.
Quin. Francis Flute the bellowes-mender.
Flu. Heere Peter Quince.
Quin. You must take Thisbie on you.
Flu. What is Thisbie, a Monster?
Quin. It is the Lady that Pyramus must loue.
Flu. Nay faith, let not me play a woman, I haue a beard coming.
Quin. That's all one, you shall play it in a Maske, and you may speake as small as you will.
Bot. And I may hide my face, let me play Thisbie too. Ile speake in a monstrous little voice, Thisne, Thisne, Ah Pyramus my louer deare, thy Thisbie deare, and Lady deare.
Quin. No no, you must play Pyramus, and Flute, you Thisbie.
Bot. Well, proceed.
Qu. Robin Starueling the Taylor.
Star. Heere Peter Quince.
Quince. Robin Starueling, you must play Thisbies mother. Tom Snout the Tinker.
Snout. Heere Peter Quince.
Quin. You, Pyramus father, must play Thisbies father. Snugge the Ioyner, you the Lyons part: and I hope there is a play fitted.
Snug. Haue you the Lions part written? pray you if it be, giue it me, for I am slow of study.
Quin. You may do it extemporie, for it is nothing but roaring.
Bot. Let me play the Lion too, I will roare that I will do any mans heart good to heare me; I will roare, that I will make the Duke say, Let him roare againe, let him roare againe.
Quin. If you should do it too terribly, you would fright the Dutchesse and the Ladies, that they would shrike, and that were enough to hang vs all.
All. That would hang vs euery mothers sonne.
Bottome. I graunt you friends, if that you should fright the Ladies out of their Wittes, they would haue no more discretion but to hang vs: but I will aggrauate my voyce so, that I will roare you as gently as any sucking Doue; I will roare and 'twere any Nightingale.
Quin. You can play no part but Pyramus, for Pyramus

…mus is a sweet-faced man, a proper man as one shall see in a summers day, a most louely Gentleman-like man, therefore you must needs play Pyramus

Bot. Well, I will vndertake it. What beard were I best to play it in?

Quin. Why what you will

Bot. I will discharge it, in either your straw-colour beard, your orange-tawny beard, your purple-in-graine beard, or your French-crowne-colour'd beard, your perfect yellow.

Quin. Some of your French Crownes haue no haire at all, and then you will play bare-faced. But masters here are your parts, and I am to intreat you, request you, and desire you, to con them by to morrow night; and meet me in the palace wood, a mile without the Towne, by Moone-light; there will we rehearse, for if we meete in the Citie, we shalbe dogg'd with company, and our deuises knowne. In the meane time, I will draw a bill of properties, such as our play wants. I pray you fayle me not.

Bottom. We will meete, and there we may rehearse more obscenely and courageously. Take pains, be perfect, adieu.

Quin. At the Duke's oake we meete.

Bot. Enough, hold or cut bow-strings. Exeunt

Actus Secundus.

Enter a Fairie at one doore, and Robin good-fellow at another.

Rob. How now spirit, whether wander you?

Fai. Ouer hill, ouer dale, thorough bush, thorough briar,
Ouer parke, ouer pale, thorough flood, thorough fire,
I do wander euery where, swifter then the Moones sphere;
And I serue the Fairy Queene, to dew her orbs vpon the green.
The Cowslips tall her pensioners be,
In their gold coats, spots you see,
Those be Rubies, Fairie fauours,
In those freckles liue their sauours,
I must go seeke some dew drops here,
And hang a pearle in euery cowslips eare.
Farewell thou lob of spirits, Ile be gone,
Our Queene and all her Elues come here anon.

Rob. The King doth keepe his Reuels here to night,
Take heed the Queene come not within his sight,
For Oberon is passing fell and wrath,
Because that she as her attendant, hath
A louely boy stolne from an Indian King,
She neuer had so sweet a changeling,
And iealous Oberon would haue the child
Knight of his traine, to trace the Forrests wilde.
But she perforce withholds the loued boy,
Crownes him with flowers, and makes him all her ioy.
And now they neuer meete in grone, or greene,
By fountaine cleere, or spangled starlight sheene,
But they do square, that all their Elues for feare
Creepe into Acorne cups, and hide them there.

Fai. Either I mistake your shape and making quite,
Or else you are that shrewd and knauish sprite
Call'd Robin Good-fellow. Are you not hee,
That frights the maidens of the Villagree,
Skim milke, and sometimes labour in the querne,
And bootlesse make the breathlesse housewife cherne,
And sometime make the drinke to beare no barme,
Mislead night-wanderers, laughing at their harme,
Those that Hobgoblin call you, and sweet Pucke,
You do their worke, and they shall haue good lucke.
Are not you he?

Rob. Thou speak'st aright;
I am that merrie wanderer of the night:
I left to Oberon, and make him smile,
When I a fat and beane-fed horse beguile,
Neighing in likenesse of a filly foale,
And sometime lurke I in a Gossips bole,
In very likenesse of a roasted crab:
And when she drinkes, against her lips I bob,
And on her withered dewlop poure the Ale.
The wisest Aunt telling the saddest tale,
Sometime for three-foot stoole, mistaketh me,
Then slip I from her bum, downe topples she,
And tailour cries, and falls into a cough.
And then the whole quire hold their hips, and loffe,
And waxen in their mirth, and neeze, and swearc,
A merrier houre was neuer wasted there.
But roome Fairy, heere comes Oberon

Fai. And heere my Mistris
Would that he were gone

Enter the King of Fairies at one doore with his traine, and the Queene at another with hers.

Ob. Ill met by Moone-light,
Proud Titania.

Qu. What, iealous Oberon? Fairy skip hence.
I haue forsworne his bed and companie

Ob. Tarrie rash Wanton; am not I thy Lord?

Qu. Then I must be thy Lady: but I know
When thou hast stolne away from Fairy Land,
And in the shape of Corin, sate all day,
Playing on pipes of Corne, and versing loue
To amorous Phillida. Why art thou heere
Come from the farthest steepe of India?
But that forsooth the bouncing Amazon
Your buskin'd Mistresse, and your Warrior loue,
To Theseus must be Wedded; and you come,
To giue their bed ioy and prosperitie

Ob. How canst thou thus for shame Titania,
Glance at my credite, with Hippolita?
Knowing I know thy loue to Theseus?
Didst thou not lead him through the glimmering night
From Peregenia, whom he rauished?
And make him with fayre Aegles breake his faith
With Ariadne, and Antiopa?

Qu. These are the forgeries of iealousie,
And neuer since the middle Summers spring
Met we on hil, in dale, forrest, or mead,
By paued fountaine, or by rushie brooke,
Or in the beached margent of the sea,
To dance our ringlets to the whistling Winde,
But with thy braules thou hast disturb'd our sport,
Therefore the Windes, piping to vs in vaine,
As in reuenge, haue suck'd vp from the sea
Contagious fogges: Which falling in the Land,
Hath euery petty Riuer made so proud,
That they haue ouer-borne their Continents
The Ox hath therefore stretch'd his yoake in vaine,
The Ploughman lost his sweat, and the greene Corne
Hath rotted, ere his youth attain'd a beard:
The fold stands empty in the drowned field,
And Crowes are fatted with the murrion flocke,

The

The nine mens Morris is fild vp with mud,
And the quaint Mazes in the wanton greene,
For lacke of tread are vndistinguishable.
The humane mortals want their winter here,
No night is now with hymne or carol blest.
Therefore the Moone (the gouernesse of floods)
Pale in her anger, washes all the aire,
That Rheumaticke diseases doe abound.
And through this distemperature, we see
The seasons alter, hoared-headed frosts
Fall in the fresh lap of the crimson rose,
And on old Hyems chinne and Icie crowne
An odorous Chaplet of sweet Summer buds
Is as in mockery set. The Spring, the Summer,
The childing Autumne, angry Winter change
Their wonted Liueries, and the mazed world,
By their increase, now knowes not which is which.
And this same progeny of euils
Comes from our iarre, as from their cause and ground.
Ob. Do you amend it then, it lyes in you,
Why should Titania crosse her Oberon?
I do but beg a little changeling boy,
To be my Henchman.
Qu. Set your heart at rest,
The fairy land buyes not the child of me.
His mother was a Votresse of my Order,
And in the spiced Indian ayre, by night
Full often hath she gossipt by my side,
And sat with me on Neptunes yellow sands,
Marking the embarked traders on the flood,
When we haue laught to see the sailes conceiue
And grow big bellied with the wanton winde:
Which she with pretty and with swimming gate,
Following (her wombe then rich with my young squire)
Would imitate, and saile vpon the land,
To fetch me trifles, and returne againe,
As from a voyage, rich with merchandize.
But she being mortall, of that boy did die,
And for her sake I do reare vp her boy,
And for her sake I will not part with him.
Ob. How long within this wood intend you stay?
Qu. Perchance till after Theseus wedding day.
If you will patiently dance in our Round,
And see our Moone-light reuels, go with vs,
If not, shun me, and I will spare your haunts.
Ob. Giue me that boy, and I will go with thee.
Qu. Not for thy fairy kingdome. Fairies away,
We shall chide downe right, if I longer stay. Exeunt
Ob. Well, go thy way: thou shalt not from this groue,
Till I torment thee for this injury.
My gentle Puck come hither; thou remembrest
Since once I sat vpon a promontory,
And heard a Mermaid on a Dolphins backe,
Vttering such dulcet and harmonious breath,
That the rude sea grew ciuill at her song,
And certain stars shot madly from their Spheares,
To heare the Sea-maids musicke.
Puck. I remember
Ob. That very time I saw (but thou couldst not)
Flying betweene the cold Moone and the earth,
Cupid all armd; a certaine aime he tooke
At a faire Vestal, throned by the West,
And loosd his loue-shaft smartly from his bow,
As it should pierce a hundred thousand hearts,
But I might see young Cupids fiery shaft
Quenchd in the chaste beames of the watry Moone;
And the imperiall Votresse passed on,
In maiden meditation, fancy free.
Yet markt I where the bolt of Cupid fell.
It fell vpon a little western flower;
Before, milke-white, now purple with loues wound,
And maidens call it, Loue-in-idlenesse.
Fetch me this flower; the herb I shew'd thee once,
The iuice of it, on sleeping eye-lids laid,
Will make or man or woman madly dote
Vpon the next liue creature that it sees.
Fetch me this herbe, and be thou heere againe,
Ere the Leuiathan can swim a league.
Puck. I'le put a girdle about the earth in forty minutes.
Exit.
Ob. Hauing once this iuice,
I will watch Titania when she is asleepe,
And drop the liquor of it in her eyes.
The next thing then she waking looks vpon,
(Be it on Lyon, Beare, or Wolfe, or Bull,
On meddling Monkie, or on busie Ape,
She shall pursue it with the soule of loue.
And ere I take this charme off from her sight,
(As I can take it with another herbe)
I'le make her render vp her Page to me.
But who comes here? I am inuisible,
And I will ouerhear their conference.
Enter Demetrius, Helena and Egeus.
Ege. Happy to Theseus, our renowned Duke.
Dem. Thanks good Egeus: what's the newes with thee?
Ege. Full of vexation come I, with complaint
Against my child, my daughter Hermia.
Stand forth Demetrius. My noble Lord,
This man hath my consent to marry her.
Stand forth Lysander: and my gracious Duke,
This hath bewitcht the bosome of my child.
Thou thou Lysander thou hast giuen her rimes,
And interchanged louetokens with my child:
Thou hast by Moone-light at her window sung,
With feigning voice verses of feigning loue,
And stolne the impression of her fantasie,
With bracelets of thy hayre, rings, gawdes, conceits,
Knackes, trifles, nosegayes, sweetmeats (messengers
Of strong preuailment in vnharded youth)
With cunning hast thou filcht my daughters heart,
Turnd her obedience (which is due to me)
To stubborne harshnesse. And my gracious Duke,
Be it so she will not here before your Grace
Consent to marry with Demetrius,
I beg the ancient priuiledge of Athens,
As she is mine, I may dispose of her:
Which shall be either to this gentleman,
Or to her death, according to our Law
Immediately prouided in that case.
The. What say you Hermia? be aduisd fair maid.
To you your father should be as a God,
One that compos'd your beauties, yea and one
To whom you are but as a forme in wax
By him imprinted, and within his power
To leaue the figure, or disfigure it.
Demetrius is a worthy gentleman.
Her. So is Lysander.
The. In himselfe he is:
But in this kinde, wanting your fathers voice,
The other must be held the worthier.
Her. I would my father look'd but with my eyes.
The. Rather your eyes must with his iudgement looke.
Her. I do entreat your Grace to pardon me.
I know not by what power I am made bold,
Nor how it may concerne my modesty,
In such a presence here to plead my thoughts:
But I beseech your Grace that I may know
The worst that may befall me in this case,
If I refuse to wed Demetrius.
The. Either to die the death, or to abiure
For euer the society of men.
Therefore faire Hermia, question your desires,
Know of your youth, examine well your blood,
Whether (if you yeelde not to your fathers choice)
You can endure the liuery of a Nunne,
For aye to be in shady Cloyster mewed,
To liue a barren sister all your life,
Chanting faint Hymnes to the cold fruitlesse Moone.
Thrice blessed they, that master so their blood,
To vndergo such maiden pilgrimage,
But earthlier happy is the Rose distild,
Than that which withering on the virgin thorne,
Growes, liues, and dies in single blessednesse.
Her. So will I grow, so liue, so die my Lord,
Ere vnto my virginity I will graunt
Posession of that right, which I haue vowed
In fresher youth, to him, or else forsworne.
The. Take time to pause, and by the next new Moone
(The sealing day betwixt my loue and me,
For euerlasting bond of fellowship)
Vpon that day either prepare to die,
For disobedience to your fathers will,
Or else to wed Demetrius as he would,
Or on Dianaes Altar to protest
For aye, austerity and single life.
Dem. Relent sweet Hermia, and Lysander yeelde
Thy crazed title to my certaine right.
Lys. You haue her fathers loue Demetrius,
Let me haue Hermias: do you marry him.
Ege. Scornful Lysander! true he hath my loue,
And what is mine my loue shall render him.
And she is mine, and all my right of her
I do estate vnto Demetrius.
Lys. I am my Lord as well deriued as he,
As well possest, my loue is more than his,
My fortunes euery way as fairely ranked
(If not with vantage) as Demetrius,
And (which is more than all these boasts can be)
I am beloued of beauteous Hermia.
Why should not I then prosecute my right?
Demetrius (I'le auouch it to his head)
Made loue to Nedars daughter, Helena,
And won her soule: and she (sweet Lady) dotes,
Deuoutly dotes, dotes in idolatry,
Vpon this spotted and inconstant man.
The. I must confesse that I haue heard so much,
And with Demetrius thought to haue spoke thereof:
But being ouerfull of self affaires,
My mind did lose it. But Demetrius come,
And come Egeus, you shall go with me,
I haue some priuate schooling for you both.
For you fair Hermia, look you arme your selfe
To fit your fancies to your fathers will,
Or else the Law of Athens yeelds you vp
(Which by no meanes we may extenuate)
To death, or to a vow of single life.
Come my Hippolita, what cheere my loue?
Demetrius and Egeus go along:
I must employ you in some businesse
Against our nuptiall, and confer with you
Of something nearely that concernes your selues.
Ege. With duety and desire we follow you.
Exeunt.
Manet Lysander and Hermia.
Lys. How now my loue? why is your cheeke so pale?
How chance the Roses there do fade so fast?
Her. Belike for want of rayne, which I could well
Beteeme them from the tempest of mine eyes.
Lys. Ah me! for aught that ere I could read,
Could euer heare by tale or history,
The course of true loue neuer did run smooth,
But either it was different in blood,
Her. O crosse! too high to be enthralled to low.
Lys. Or else misgraffed in respect of yeares,
Her. O spight! too old to be engaged to young.
Lys. Or else it stood vpon the choice of friends,
Her. O hell! to choose loue by another's eyes.
Lys. Or if there were a sympathy in choice,
Warre, death, or sickenesse did lay siege to it,
Making it momentany as a sound,
Swift as a shadow, short as any dreame,
Briefe as the lightning in the collied night,
That (in a spleene) vnfolds both heauen and earth,
And ere a man hath power to say, behold,
The iawes of darkenesse do deuoure it vp:
So quick bright things come to confusion.
Her. If then true Louers haue been euer crost,
It stands as an edict in destiny:
Then let vs teach our patience our owne wrongs,
Make vertue of our faults, since by our faults
To loue is destinie. Then my Lysander,
A good perswasion: therefore heare me Hermia,
I haue a widdow Aunt, a dowager
Of great reuenue, and she hath no child,
From Athens is her house remou'd seuen leagues,
And she respects me as her only sonne.
There gentle Hermia may I marry thee,
And to that place the sharpe Athenian Law
Cannot pursue vs. If thou lou'st me then,
Steale forth thy fathers house to morrow night,
And in the wood a league without the towne,
Where I did meet thee once with Helena,
To do obseruance to a morne of May,
There will I stay for thee.
Her. My good Lysander,
I sweare to thee by Cupids strongest bow,
By his best arrow with the golden head,
By the simplicity of Venus doues,
By that which knitteth soules and prospers loue,
And by that fire which burnd the Carthage Queene,
When the false Troyan vnder saile was seene,
By all the vowes that euer men haue broke,
In number more than euer women spoke,
In that same place thou hast appointed me,
To morrow truely will I meet with thee.
Lys. Keepe promise loue: look here comes Helena.
Enter Helena.
Her. God speed faire Helena: whither away?
Hel. Call you me faire? that faire againe vnsay.
Demetrius loues your faire: O happy faire!
Your eyes are loadstarres, and your tongues sweet ayre
More tuneable than Larke to shepheards eare,
When wheate is greene, when hauthorne buds appeare.
Sickenesse is catching: O were faire not so,
Our ills, our tricks, our troubles would not know
Our mindes the shrines of our demeanors would be,
Why then the world, and all that I loue, is thee.
Demetrius loues your faire: O happy faire!
Your eyes are loadstarres, and your tongues sweet ayre
More tuneable than Larke to shepheards eare,
When wheate is greene, when hauthorne buds appeare.
Sickenesse is catching: O were faire not so,
Our ills, our tricks, our troubles would not know
Our mindes the shrines of our demeanors would be,
Why then the world, and all that I loue, is thee.
Dem. I will my father tell of this stolne iourney,
And in the wood where often you and I
Vpon faint Primrose beds were wont to lye,
Emptying our bosomes of their counsell sweld,
There my Lysander and my selfe shall meet,
And thence from Athens turne away our eyes,
To seeke new friends and stranger companies.
Farewell sweet playfellow, thou troblest me,
And by me wrongd I will your torments be.
Hel. Poore I am more than euer I did know,
I do beleeue the best to be confest,
And yet what priuiledge hath beauty then?
Vnto whose vertue we confesse all soule,
Is not enuied, as wit is, and blessing,
And riches, and the gifts dame Nature deales,
But mockt, and mowed at, and abhorred,
As I am now for Demetrius loue.
I will goe tell him of faire Hermias flight,
Then to the wood will he to morrow night
Pursue her: and for this intelligence
If I haue thankes, it is a deere expence:
But herein meane I to enrich my paine,
To haue his sight thither and back againe.
Exit.

For you in my reſpect are all the world
Then how can it be ſaid I am alone,
When all the world is heere to looke on me?
Dem. I'le runne from thee and hide me in the brakes,
And leaue thee to the mercy of wilde beaſts.
Hel. The wolfe vnder hath not ſuch a heart as you;
Runne when you will, the ſtory ſhall be chang'd
Apollo flies, and Daphne holds the chaſe,
The Doue purſues the Griffin, the milde Hinde
Makes ſpeed to catch the Tiger. Bootleſſe ſpeede,
When cowarde purſues and valour flies.
Dem. I will not ſtay thy queſtions, let me go,
Or if thou follow me, doe not beleeue,
But I ſhall doe thee miſchiefe in the wood.
Hel. Ide the Temple, the Towne, and Field
You doe me miſchiefe. Fye Demetrius,
Your wrongs doe ſet a ſcandall on my ſexe
We cannot fight for loue, as men may doe,
We ſhould be woo'd, and were not made to woo.
I follow thee, and make a heauen of hell,
To die vpon the hand I loue ſo well. Exit
Ob. Faire thee well Nymph, ere he do leaue this groue,
Thou ſhalt fly him, and he ſhall ſeeke thy loue.
Haſt thee good Puck, haſt thee Welcome wanderer.

Enter Puck.

Puck. I, there it is
Ob. I pray thee giue it me
I know a banke where the wilde time blowes
Where Oxlips and the nodding Violet growes,
Quite ouer-cannoped with luſcious woodbine,
With ſweet muske roſes, and with Eglantine;
There ſleepes Titania ſometime of the night
Lull'd in theſe flowers, with dances and delight,
And there the ſnake throwes her enamell'd ſkinne,
Weed wide enough to wrap a Fairy in.
And with the iuice of this Ile make her eyes,
And make her full of hateful fantaſies.
Take thou ſome of it, and ſeeke through this groue
A ſweet Athenian Lady is in loue
With a diſdainefull youth, anoint his eyes,
But doe it when the next thing he eſpies,
May be the Lady. Thou ſhalt know the man
By the Athenian garments he hath on,
Effect it with ſome care, that he may proue
More fond on her, then ſhe vpon her loue,
And looke thou meet me ere the firſt Cocke crow
Puck. Feare not my Lord, your ſeruant ſhall do ſo. Exit.

Enter Queene of Fairies, with her traine.

Quee. Come, now a Roundell, and a Fairy ſong;
Then for the third part of a minute hence,
Some to kill Cankers in the muske roſe buds,
Some warre with Reremice, for their leathern wings,
To make my ſmall Elues coates, and ſome keepe backe
The clamorous Owle that nightly hoots and wonders
At our queint ſpirits. Sing me now aſleepe,
Then to your offices, and let me reſt.

Faines Sing.

You ſpotted Snakes with double tongue,
Thorny Hedgehogges be not ſeene,
Newts and blinde wormes do no wrong,
Come not neere our Fairy Queene
Philomele with melodie,
Sing in our ſweet Lullaby.
Lulla, lulla, lullaby, lulla, lulla, lullaby,
Neuer harme, nor ſpell, nor charme,
Come our louely Lady nye,
So good night with Lullaby.
2. Fairy. Weauing Spiders come not heere,
Hence you long leg'd Spinners, hence
Beetles blacke approach not neere;
Worme nor Snayle doe no offence.
Philomele with melody, &c.
1. Fairy. Hence away, now all is well;
One aloofe, ſtand Centinell. Shee ſleepes

Enter Oberon.

Ober. What thou ſeeſt when thou doſt wake,
Doe it for thy true Loue take:
Loue and languiſh for his take.
Be it Ounce, or Catte, or Beare,
Pard, or Boare with briſtled haire,
In thy eye that ſhall appeare,
When thou wak'ſt, it is thy deare,
Wake when ſome vile thing is neere.

Enter Lyſander and Hermia.

Lyſ. Faire loue you faint with wandring in ſ woods,
And to ſpeake troth I haue forgot our way:
Weel reſt vs Hermia, if you thinke it good,
And tarry for the comfort of the day.
Her. Be it ſo Lyſander; finde you out a bed,
For I vpon this banke will reſt my head.
Lyſ. One turfe ſhall ſerue as pillow for vs both,
One heart, one bed, two boſomes, and one troth.
Her. Nay good Lyſander, for my ſake my deare
Lie further off yet, doe not lie ſo neere
Lyſ. O take the ſence ſweet, of my innocence,
Loue takes the meaning, in loues conference,
I meane that my heart vnto yours is knit,
So that but one heart can you make of it,
Two boſomes interchanged with an oath,
So then two boſomes, and a ſingle troth.
Then by your ſide, no bed-roome me deny,
For lying ſo, Hermia, I doe not lye.
Her. Lyſander riddles very prettily;
Now much beſhrew my manners and my pride,
If Hermia meant to ſay, Lyſander lied.
But gentle friend, for loue and courteſie
Lie further off, in humane modeſty,
Such ſeparation, as may well be ſaid,
Becomes a vertuous batchelour, and a maide,
So farre be diſtant, and good night ſweet friend;
Thy loue ne're alter, till thy ſweet life end.
Lyſ. Amen, amen, to that faire prayer, ſay I,
And then end life, when I end loyalty
Heere is my bed, ſleepe giue thee all his reſt.
Her. With halfe that wiſh, the wiſhers eyes be preſt
Enter Pucke. They ſleepe.
Puck. Through the Forreſt haue I gone,
But Athenian finde I none,
One whoſe eyes I might approue
This flowers force in ſtirring loue.
Night and ſilence: who is heere?
Weedes of Athens he doth weare:
This is he (my maſter ſaid)
Deſpiſed the Athenian maides
And heere the maiden ſleeping found,

On the danke and durty ground
Pretty soule, she durst not lye
Neere this lacke-loue, this kill-courtesie.
Churle vpon thy eyes I throw
All the power this charme doth owe.
When thou wak'st, let loue forbid
Sleepe his seate on thy eye-lid
So awake when I am gone:
For I must now to Oberon. Exit.

Enter Demetrius and Helena running

Hel. Stay, though thou kill me, sweete Demetrius.
De. I charge thee hence, and do not haunt me thus.
Hel. O wilt thou darkling, leaue me? do not so.
De. Stay on thy perill, I alone will go. Exit Demetrius

Hel. O I am out of breath, in this fond chace,
The more my prayer, the lesser is my grace,
Happy is Hermia, wheresoeere she lies;
For she hath blessed and attractiue eyes.
How came her eyes so bright? Not with salt teares
If so, my eyes are oftner washt than hers
No, no, I am as vgly as a Beare;
For beasts that meete me runne away for feare,
Therefore no marueile, though Demetrius
Do as a monster flie my presence thus.
What wicked and dissembling glasse of mine,
Made me compare with Hermias sphery eyne?
But who is here? Lysander on the ground,
Dead or asleepe? I see no blood, no wound,
Lysander, if you liue good sir awake.
Lys. And run through fire I will for thy sweet sake.
Transparent Helena nature her two arts,
That through thy bosome makes me see thy heart
Where is Demetrius? oh how fit a word
Is that vile name, to perish on my sword!
Hel. Do not say so Lysander, say not so
What though he loue your Hermia? Lord, what though?
Yet Hermia still loues you, then be content.
Lys. Content with Hermia? No, I do repent
The tedious minutes I with her haue spent
Not Hermia but Helena now I loue,
Who will not change a Rauen for a Doue?
The will of man is by his reason sway'd
And reason saies you are the worthier Maide
Things growing are not ripe vntill their season;
So I being young, till now ripe not to reason,
And touching now the point of humane skill,
Reason becomes the Marshall to my will,
And leades me to your eyes, where I o'relooke
Loues stories, written in Loues richest booke.
Hel. Wherefore was I to this keene mockery borne?
When at your hands did I deserue this scorne?
Is't not enough, is't not enough young man,
That I did neuer, no nor neuer can,
Deserue a sweete looke from Demetrius eye,
But you must flout my insufficiency?
Good troth you do me wrong (good sooth you do)
In such disdainful manner, me to woo.
But fare you well; perforce I must confesse,
I thought you Lord of more true gentlenesse.
Oh that a Lady of one man refus'd,
Should of another therefore be abus'd Exit.
Lys. She sees not Hermia: Hermia sleepe thou there,
And neuer maist thou come Lysander neere;
For as a surfeit of the sweetest things
The deepest loathing to the stomacke brings
Or as the heresies that men do leaue,
Are hated most of those that did deceiue
So thou, my surfeit and my heresie,
Of all be hated, but the most of me;
And all my powers addresse your loue and might,
To honour Helen, and to be her Knight. Exit
Her. Helpe me Lysander, helpe me; do thy best
To plucke this crawling serpent from my breast.
Ay me, for pitty, what a dreame was here?
Lysander looke, how I do quake with feare.
Me thought a serpent eate my heart away,
And yet sat smiling at his cruell prey.
Lysander, what remoou'd? Lysander, Lord,
What, out of hearing gone? No sound, no word?
Alacke where are you? speake and if you heare
Speake of all woes; I stand almost with feare
No, then I well perceiue you are not nye,
Either death or you Ile finde immediately. Exit.

Actus Tertius.

Enter the Clowns.

Bot. Are we all met?
Quin. Pat, pat, and here's a marueilous conuenient place for our rehearsall. This greene plot shall be our stage, this hawthorne brake our tyring house, and we will do it in action as we will do it before the Duke.
Bot. Peter quince?
Peter. What saist thou bully Bottome?
Bot. There are things in this Comedy of Pyramus and Thisby that will neuer please. First Pyramus must draw a sword to kill himselfe, which the Ladies cannot abide. How answer you that?
Snout. By'lakin, a parlous feare.
Starue. I believe we must leaue the killing out, when all is done.
Bot. Not a whit, I haue a deuice to make all well. Write me a Prologue, and let the Prologue seeme to say, we will do no harme with our swords, and that Pyramus is not killed indeed: and for the more better assurance, tell them that I Pyramus am not Pyramus but Bottome the Weauer: this will put them out of feare.
Quin. Well, we will haue such a Prologue and it shall be written in eight and six.
Bot. No, make it two more, let it be written in eight and eight.
Snout. Will not the Ladies be afeard of the Lyon?
Starue. I feare it, I promise you.
Bot. Masters, you ought to consider with your selues, to bring in (God shield vs) a Lyon among Ladies, is a most dreadfull thing. For there is not a more fearefull wilde fowle, then your Lyon liuing; and we ought to looke to it.
Snout. Therefore another Prologue must tell he is not a Lyon.
Bot. Nay, you must name his name, and halfe his face must be seene through the Lyons neck, and he himselfe must speake through, saying thus, or to the same defect: Ladies, or faire Ladies, I would wish you, or I would request request you,or I would entreat you not to feare, not to tremble my life for yours. If you think I come hither as a Lyon, it were pitty of my life No, I am no such thing, I am a man as other men are, and there indeed let him name his name, and tell him plainly hee is Snug the ioyner

Quin. Well, it shall be so: but there is two hard things, that is, to bring the Moone light into a chamber: for you know Pyramus and Thisbie meete by Moonelight.

Sn. Doth the Moone shine that night we play our play?

Bot. A Calender, a Calender, looke in the Almanack, finde out Moone-shine, finde out Moone-shine.

Enter Pucke

Quin. Yes, it doth shine that night.

Bot. Why then may you leaue a casement of the great chamber window, where we play, open, and the Moone may shine in at the casement.

Quin. I, or else one must come in with a bush of thorne and a lanthorne, and say he comes to disfigure, or to present the person of Moone-shine. Then there is another thing: we must haue a wall in the great Chamber: for Pyramus and Thisbie (as they say) did talke through the chinke of a wall.

Sn. You can neuer bring in a wall. What say you Bottome?

Bot. Some man or other must present wall, and let him haue some Plaister, or some Lome, or some rough cast about him, to signifie wall: or let him hold his fingers thus, and through that cranny, shall Pyramus and Thisbie whisper.

Quin. If that may be, then all is well. Come, sit downe euery mother sonne, and rehearse your parts. Pyramus you begin: when you haue spoken your speech, enter into that Brake, and so euery one according to his cue.

Enter Robin.

Rob. What hempen home-spuns haue we swaggering here,
So neere the Cradle of the Fairie Queene?
What a Iest is this? sweet Bottome! thou art changed: what do I see on thee?

Bot. What do you see? you see an Asse-head of your owne, do you?

Enter Peter Quince.

Pet. Blesse thee Bottome, blesse thee; thou art translated. Exit.

Bot. I see their knauery: this is to make an asse of me, to fright me if they could: but I will not stirre from this place, do what they can. I will walke vp and downe here, and I will sing, that they shall heare I am not afraid.

The Woosel cocke, so blacke of hew,
With Orenge-tawny bill,
The Throstle, with his note so true,
The Wren and little quill.

Tita. What Angell wakes me from my flowry bed?

Bot. The Finch, the Sparrow, and the Larke,
The plaine-song Cuckow gray,
Whose note full many a man doth marke,
And dares not answere, nay:
for indeed, who would set his wit to so foolish a bird? Who would giue a bird the lye, but the Cuckow, that cannot tell what he saies himselfe?

Tita. I pray thee, gentle mortall, sing againe,
Mine eare is much enamored of thy note,
So is mine eye enthralled to thy shape,
And thy fayre vertues force perforce doth moue me
On the first view to say, to sweare I loue thee.

Bot. Me-thinkes mistresse, you should haue little reason for that: and yet to say the truth, reason and loue keepe little company together, nowadayes. The more the pitty, that some honest neighbours will not make them friends. Nay, I can gleeke vpon occasion.

Tyta. Thou art as wise, as thou art beautifull.

Bot. Not so neither: but if I had wit enough to get out of this wood, I haue enough to serue mine owne turne.

Tyta. Out of this wood, do not desire to goe,
Thou shalt remaine here, whether thou wilt or no
I am a spirit of no common rate:
The Summer still doth tend vpon my state,
And I do loue thee; therefore goe with me,
Ile giue thee Fairies to attend on thee:
And they shall fetch thee Iewels from the deepe,
And sing, while thou on prest flowers dost sleepe:
And I will purge thy mortall grossenesse so,
That thou shalt like an airie spirit go.

Enter Peaze-blossome, Cobweb, Moth, Mustard-seede, and foure Fairies.

Fai. Ready; and I, and I, and I, Where shall we go?

Tita. Be

Tita. Be kinde and courteous to this Gentleman,
Hop in his walkes, and gambole in his eies,
Feede him with Apricocks, and Dewberries,
With purple Grapes, greene Figs and Mulberries,
The honie-bags ſteale from the humble Bees,
And for night-tapers crop their waxen thighes,
And light them at the fiery-Glow-wormes eyes,
To haue my loue to bed, and to arise
And plucke the wings from painted Butterflies.
To fanne the Moone-beames from his ſleeping eies
Nod to him Elues, and doe him curteſies.

1 Fai. Haile mortall, haile.

2 Fai. Haile.

3 Fai. Haile

Bot. I cry your worſhips mercy hartily; I beſeech your worſhips name.

Cob. Cobweb

Bot. I ſhall deſire you of more acquaintance, good Maſter Cobweb: if I cut my finger, I ſhall make bold with you
Your name honeſt Gentleman?

Peaſ. Peaſe-bloſſome.

Bot. I pray you commend mee to miſtreſſe Squaſh, your mother, and to maſter Peaſcod your father. Good maſter Peaſe-bloſſome I ſhall deſire of you more acquaintance too. Your name I beſeech you ſir?

Muſ. Muſtard ſeede.

Peaſ. Peaſe-bloſſome.

Bot. Good maſter Muſtard ſeede, I know your patience well: that ſame cowardly gyant-like Oxe beefe hath deuoured many a gentleman of your houſe. I promiſe you, your kindred hath made my eyes water ere now. I deſire you more acquaintance, good Maſter Muſtard ſeede.

Tita. Come waite vpon him, lead him to my bower
The Moone me-thinks, lookes with a watrie eie,
And when ſhe weepes, weepe euerie little flower,
Lamenting ſome enforced chaſtitie
Tye vp my louers tongue, bring him ſilently. Exit.

Enter King of Fairies ſolus

Ob. I wonder if Titania be awak't
Then what it was that next came in her eye,
Which ſhe muſt doate on, in extremitie

Enter Puck

Here comes my meſſenger: how now mad ſpirit,
What night-rule now about this haunted groue?

Puck. My Miſtreſſe with a monſter is in loue,
Neere to her cloſe and conſecrated bower,
While ſhe was in her dull and ſleeping houer,
A crew of patches, rude Mechanicals
That worke for bread vpon Athenian ſtalls,
Were met together to rehearſe a Play,
Intended for great Theſeus nuptiall day.
The ſhalloweſt thick-ſkin of that barren ſort,
Who Pyramus preſented in their ſport,
Forſooke his Scene, and entred in a brake,
When I did him at this aduantage take,
An Aſſes noule I fixed on his head.
Anon his Thiſbie muſt be anſwered,
And forth my Mimmick comes: when they him eſpie,
As Wilde-geeſe, that the creeping Fowler eſpy,
Or ruſſed-pated choughes, many in ſort
(Riſing and cawing at the guns report)
Seuer themſelues, and madly ſweepe the skyes

So at his ſight, away his fellowes flye,
And at our ſtampe here ore and ore one falls
He murther cries, and helpe from Athens calls.
Their ſenſe thus weake, loſt with their feares thus ſtrong,
Made ſenſeleſſe things begin to do them wrong.
For briars and thornes at their apparell ſnatch,
Some ſleeues, ſome hats, from yeelders all things catch,
I led them on in this diſtracted feare,
And left ſweete Pyramus tranſlated there
When in that moment (ſo it came to paſſe)
Titania waked, and ſtraightway lou'd an Aſſe

Ob. This falls out better then I could deuiſe
But haſt thou yet latcht the Athenians eies
With the loue iuice, as I did bid thee doe?

Puck. I tooke him ſleeping (that is finiſht too)
And the Athenian woman by his ſide,
That when he wak'd of force ſhe muſt be eyde

Enter Demetrius and Hermia

Ob. Stand cloſe, this is the ſame Athenian

Puck. This is the woman, but not this the man

Dem. O why rebuke you him that loues you ſo?
Lay breath ſo bitter on your bitter foe.

Her. Now I but chide, but I ſhall driue thee worſe
For thou, I feare, haſt giuen me cauſe to curſe,
If thou haſt ſlaine Lyſander in his ſleepe,
Being ore ſhoes in bloud, plunge in the deepe, and kill me too.
The Sunne was not ſo true vnto the day,
As he to me. Would he haue ſtolne away
From ſleeping Hermia? I'le beleeue as ſoone
This whole earth may be bord, and that the Moone
May through the Center creepe, and ſo diſpleaſe
Her brothers noone-tide, with th'Antipodes.
It cannot be but thou haſt murdred him,
So ſhould a murderer looke, ſo dead, ſo grim.

Dem. So ſhould the murdered looke, and ſo ſhould I,
Pierſt through the heart with your ſtearne cruelty:
Yet you the murderer looks as bright, as cleare,
As yonder Venus in her glimmering ſpheare

Her. What's this to my Lyſander? where is he?
Ah good Demetrius wilt thou giue him me?

Dem. I'de rather giue his carcaſſe to my hounds.

Her. Out dog, out cur, thou driu'ſt me paſt the bounds
Of maidens patience. Haſt thou ſlaine him then?
Henceforth be neuer numbred among men.
O, once tell true, euen for my ſake,
Durſt thou a looke vpon him being awake?
And haſt thou killd him ſleeping? O braue touch,
Could not a worme, an Adder do ſo much?
An Adder did it: for with doubler tongue
Then thine (thou ſerpent) neuer Adder ſtung

Dem. You ſpend your paſſion on a miſpriſd mood,
I am not guiltie of Lyſanders bloud:
Nor is he dead for ought that I can tell.

Her. I pray thee tell me then that he is well

Dem. And if I could, what ſhould I get therefore?

Her. A priuiledge, neuer to ſee me more;
And from thine hated preſence part I ſee me no more
Whether he be dead or no. Exit

Dem. There is no following her in this fierce vaine,
Here therefore for a while I will remaine.
So ſorrow's heauineſſe doth heauier grow
For debt that bankrout ſlip doth ſorrow owe,
Which now in ſome ſlight meaſure it will pay,

If

If for his tender here I make ſome ſtay. Lie downe.
Ob. What thou haſt done? thou haſt miſtaken quite
And laid the loue-iuyce on ſome true loues ſight:
Of thy miſprision muſt perforce enſue
Some true loue turn'd, and not a falſe turn'd true
Rob. Then fate o're-rules, that one man holding troth,
A million faile confounding oath on oath
Ob. About the wood, goe ſwifter then the winde,
And Helena of Athens looke thou finde
All fancy ſicke ſhe is, and pale of cheere,
With ſighes of loue, that coſts the freſh bloud deare.
By ſome illuſion ſee thou bring her heere,
Ile charme his eyes againſt ſhe doth appeare.
Rob. I go, I go, looke how I goe,
Swifter then arrow from the Tartars bowe. Exit.
Ob. Flower of this purple die,
Hit with Cupids archery,
Sinke in apple of his eye.
When his loue he doth eſpie,
Let her ſhine as gloriouſly
As the Venus of the ſky.
When thou wak'ſt if ſhe be by
Beg of her for remedy.

Enter Puck.

Puck. Captaine of our fairy traine,
Obe. Here art thou,
Now the night is in her wane,
I feare my Queene and all her traine
Puck. Feare not my Lord your Seruant here
Then what hath this thy errand bee
Go backe to the Pallace Cedar tree,
Where ſleepes my Miſtreſſe and her Knight,
Where ſleepes deere Demetrius ſo awight,
Puck. Then will two worke of one
The moſt forſeeds of our diſmay
Are not worth a pin of baſe alay
Faſt aſleepe, I will vntwine

Enter Lyſander and Helena.

Lyſ. Why ſhould you thinke I ſhould woo in ſcorne?
Scorne and derſion neuer come in teares;
Looke when I vow I weepe; and vowes ſo borne,
In their nativity all truth appeares.
How can theſe things in me, ſeeme ſcorne to you?
Bearing the badge of faith to proue them true.
Hel. You doe aduance your cunning more & more,
When truth kils truth. O deuiſh holy fray!
Theſe vowes are Hermias. Will you giue her o're?
Weigh oath with oath, and you will nothing weigh,
Your vowes to her, and me (put in two ſcales)
Will euen weigh, and both as light as tales.
Lyſ. I had no iudgement, when to her I ſwore.
Hel. Nor none in my minde, now you giue her o're.
Lyſ. Demetrius loues her, and he loues not you. Aſide.
Dem. O Helen, goddeſſe, nimph, perfect, diuine,
To what my loue, ſhall I compare thine eyne?
Cryſtall is muddy. O how ripe in ſhow,
Thy lips, thoſe kiſſing cherries, tempting grow!
That pure congealed white, high Taurus ſnow,
Fan'd with the eaſterne winde, turnes to a crow,
When thou holdſt vp thy hand. O let me kiſſe
This Princeſſe of pure white, this ſeale of bliſſe,
Hel. O ſpight! O hell! I ſee you are all bent,
To ſetle gainſt me, for your merriment:
If you were ciuill, and knew curteſie,
You would not doe me thus much iniury.
Can you not hate me, as I know you doe,
But you muſt ioyne in ſoules to mocke me too?
If you are men, as men you are in ſhow,
You would not vſe a gentle Lady ſo;
To vow, and ſweare, and ſuperpraiſe my parts,
When I am ſure you hate me with your hearts
You both are Riuals, and loue Hermia;
And now both Riuals to mocke Helena
A trim exploit, a manly enterprize,
To conſume teares vp in a poore maids eyes,
With your derſion; none of noble ſort,
Would ſo offend a Virgin, and extort
A poore ſoules patience, all to make you ſport.
Lyſa. You are vnkind Demetrius; be not ſo,
For you loue Hermia; this you know I know,
And here with all good will, with all my heart,
In Hermias loue I yeeld you vp my part,
And yours of Helena, to me bequeath,
Whom I do loue and will do to my death.
Hel. Neare d d mockers waſt more idle breth.
Lyſ. I am Lyſander, keep thy Hermia, I will none.
If e'r I loued her, all that loue is gone.
My heart to her, but as gueſt-wiſe ſojourn'd,
And now to Helen it is home return'd,
There to remaine.
Lyſ. It is not ſo.
De Diſparage not the faith thou doſt not know,
Leſt to thy perill thou abide it deare.
Looke where thy Loue comes, yonder is thy deare.

Enter Hermia.

Her. Dark night, that from the eye his function taket
The eare more quicke of apprehenſion makes,
Wherein it doth impaire the ſeeing ſenſe,
It paies the hearing double recompence.
Thou art not by mine eye, Lyſander found,
Mine eare (I thanke it) brought me to that ſound.
But why vnkindly didſt thou leaue me ſo? (to go?
Lyſan. Why ſhould hee ſtay whom Loue doth preſſe
Her. What loue could preſſe Lyſander from my ſide?
Lyſ. Lyſanders loue (that would not let him bide)
Faire Helena; who more engilds the night,
Then all yon fierie oes, and eies of light.
Why ſeek'ſt thou me? Could not this make thee know,
The hate I bare thee, made me leaue thee ſo?
Her. You ſpeake not as you thinke; it cannot be.
Hel. Loe, ſhe is one of this confederacy,
Now I perceiue they have conioyn'd all three,
To faſhion this falſe ſport in ſpight of me
Iniurious Hermia, moſt vngratefull maid,
Haue you conſpir'd, haue you with theſe contriu'd
To baite me, with this foule derſion?
Is all the counſell that we two haue ſhar'd,
The ſiſters vowes, the houres that we haue ſpent,
When we haue chid the haſty footed time,
For parting vs O, is all forgot?
All ſchoole-dayes friendſhip, child-hood innocence?
We Hermia, like two Artificiall gods,
Haue with our needles, created both one flower,
Both on one ſampler, ſitting on one cuſhion,
Both warbling of one ſong, both in one key;
As if our hands, our ſides, voices, and minds
Had beene incorporate. So we grew together,
Like to a double cherry, ſeeming parted,
But yet a union in partition,

Two

Two louely berries molded on one ſtem,
So with two ſeeming bodies, but one heart,
Two of the firſt life coats in Heraldry,
Due but to one and crowned with one creſt.
And will you rent our ancient loue aſunder,
To ioyne with men in ſcorning your poore friend?
It is not friendly, 'tis not maidenly.
Our ſexe as well as I, may chide you for it,
Though I alone doe feele the iniurie.
Her. I am amazed at your paſſionate words,
I ſcorne you not; It ſeemes that you ſcorne me.
Hel. Haue you not ſet Lyſander, as in ſcorne
To follow me, and praiſe my eies and face?
And made your other loue, Demetrius
(Who euen but now did ſpurne me with his foote)
To call me goddeſſe, nymph, diuine, and rare,
Precious, celeſtiall? Wherefore ſpeakes he this
To her he hates? And wherefore doth Lyſander
Denie your loue (ſo rich within his ſoule)
And tender me (forſooth) affection,
But by your ſetting on, by your conſent?
What though I be not ſo in grace as you,
So hung vpon with loue, ſo fortunate
(But miſerable moſt, to loue vnlou'd),
This you ſhould pitie, rather then deſpiſe.
Her. I vnderſtand not what you meane by this.
Hel. Ioe, preſent, counterfeit, frad lookes,
Make mouthes vpon me when I turne my backe,
Winke each at other, hold the ſweete ieſt vp
This ſport well carried, ſhall be chronicled.
If you haue any pittie, grace, or manners,
You would not make me ſuch an argument.
But fare ye well, 'tis partly mine owne fault,
Which death or abſence ſoone ſhall remedie.
Lyſ. Stay gentle Helena, heare my excuſe,
My loue, my life, my ſoule, faire Helena
Hel. O excellent!
Her. Sweete, do not ſcorne her ſo.
Dem. If ſhe cannot entreate, I can compell
Lyſ. Thou canſt compell, no more then ſhe entreate.
Thy threats haue no more ſtrength then her weak praiſe
Helen, I loue thee, by my life I doe,
I ſweare by that which I will loſe for thee,
To proue him falſe, that ſaies I loue thee not.
Dem. I ſay, I loue thee more then he can do.
Lyſ. If thou ſay ſo, with-draw and proueſt too.
Dem. Quick, come.
Her. Lyſander, whereto tends all this?
Lyſ. Away, you Ethiope.
Dem. No, no, Sir, ſeeme to breake looſe,
Take on as you would follow,
But yet come not: you are a tame man, go.
Lyſ Hang off thou cat, thou burr: vile thing let looſe,
Or I will ſhake thee from me like a ſerpent.
Her. Why are you growne ſo rude
What change is this ſweete Loue?
Lyſ. Thy loue? out tawny Tartar, out;
Out loathed medicine; O hated poiſon hence
Her. Do you not ieſt?
Hel. Yes ſooth, and ſo do you.
Lyſ. Demetrius, I will keepe my word with thee
Dem. I would I had your bond: for I perceiue
A weake bond holds you; Ile not truſt your word.
Lyſ. What, ſhould I hurt her, ſtrike her, kill her dead?
Although I hate her, Ile not harme her ſo.
Her. What, can you do me greater harme then hate?
Hate me, wherefore? O me, what newes my Loue?
Am not I Hermia? Are not you Lyſander?
I am as faire now, as I was ere while.
Since night you lou'd me; yet ſince night you left me.
Why then you left me (O the gods forbid
In earneſt, ſhall I ſay?
Lyſ. I, by my life,
And neuer did deſire to ſee thee more.
Therefore be out of hope, of queſtion, of doubt;
Be certaine, nothing truer: 'tis no ieſt,
That I doe hate thee, and loue Helena.
Her. O me, you iugler, you canker bloſſome,
You theefe of loue; What, haue you come by night,
And ſtolne my loues heart from him?
Hel. Fine yfaith
Haue you no modeſty, no maiden ſhame,
No touch of baſhfull feare? What, will you teare
Impatient anſwers from my gentle tongue?
Fie, fie, you counterfeit, you puppet you
Her. Puppet? why ſo? I, that way goes the game.
Now I perceiue that ſhe hath made compare
Betweene our ſtatures, ſhe hath vrg'd her height,
And with her perſonage her tall perſonage,
Her height, forſooth ſhe hath preuayled with him.
And are you growne ſo high in his eſteeme,
Becauſe I am ſo dwarfiſh, and ſo low?
How low am I, thou painted May-pole? Speake,
How low am I? I am not yet ſo low,
But that my nailes can reach vnto thine eyes.
Hel. I pray you though you mock me, gentlemen,
Let her not hurt me; I was neuer curſt
I haue no gift at all in ſhrewiſhneſſe,
I am a right maide for my cowardice;
Let her not ſtrike me. you perhaps may thinke,
Becauſe ſhe is ſomething lower then my ſelfe,
That I can match her
Her. Lower? harke againe
Hel. Good Hermia, do not be ſo bitter with me,
I euermore did loue you Hermia,
Did euer keepe your counſels, neuer wronged you,
Saue that in loue vnto Demetrius,
I told him of your ſtealth vnto this wood.
He followes you, for loue I followed him,
But he hath chid me hence, and threatned me
To ſtrike me, ſpurne me, nay to kill me too,
And now, ſo you will let me quiet go,
To Athens will I beare my folly backe,
And follow you no further. Let me go.
You ſee how simple, and how fond I am.
Her. Why get you gone: who is't that hinders you?
Hel. A fooliſh heart that I leaue here behinde.
Her. What, with Lyſander?
Her. With Demetrius.
Lyſ. Be not afraid, ſhe ſhall not harme thee Helena.
Dem. No ſir, ſhe ſhall not, though you take her part
Hel. O when ſhe's angry, ſhe is keene and ſhrewd,
She was a vixen when ſhe went to ſchoole,
And though ſhe be but little, ſhe is fierce.
Her. Little againe? Nothing but low and little?
Why will you ſuffer her to flout me thus?
Let me come to her.
Lyſ. Get you gone you dwarfe,
You minimus, of hindring knot-graſſe made,
You bead, you acorne.
Dem. You are too officious,
In her behalfe that ſcornes your ſeruices

Let

Let her alone, speake not of Helena,
Take not her part. For if thou dost intend
Neuer so little shew of loue to her,
Thou shalt abide it
Lys. Now she holds me not,
Now follow it thou dar'st to try whose right,
Or thine or mine is most in Helena.
Dem. Follow? Nay, I'le go with thee cheeke by iowle.
Exit Lysander and Demetrius.
Her. You Mistris, all this coyle is long of you.
Nay, goe not backe.
He. I will not trust you I,
Nor longer stay in your curst company.
Your hands than mine are quicker for a fray,
My legs are longer though, to runne away.
Exit.

Enter Oberon and Puck.

Ob. This is thy negligence thou wilt mistake,
Or else committ'st thy knaueries wilfully.
Puck. Believe me King of shadowes I mistooke.
Did not you tell me, I should know the man,
By the Athenian garments he hath on?
And so farre blamelesse proues my enterprize,
That I haue nointed an Athenian's eyes,
And so farre am I glad, it so did sort,
As this their iangling I esteeme a sport.
Ob. Thou seest these Louers seeke a place to fight,
Hie therefore Robin ouercast the night,
The starre Wexen court thou anon,
With drooping fogges as blacke as Acheron,
And lead these testie Riuals so astray,
As one come not within another's way.
Like to Lysander, sometime frame thy tongue,
Then stirre Demetrius vp with bitter wrong,
And sometime raile thou like Demetrius,
And from each other looke thou lead them thus,
Till ore their browes death-counterfeiting sleepe
With leaden legs and batty wings doth creepe:
Then crush this herbe into Lysander eye
Whose liquor hath this vertuous property
To take from thence all error with his might,
And make his eyeballs roll with wonted sight.
When they next wake, all this derision
Shall seeme a dreame and fruitles vision,
And back to Athens shall the Louers wend,
With league, whose date till death shall neuer end.
Whiles I in this affaire do thee employ,
I'le to my Queene and beg her Indian Boy;
And then I will her charmed eye release
From monsters view, and all things shall be peace.
Puck. My Fairie Lord, this must be done with haste,
For night-swift Dragons cut the Clouds full fast,
And yonder shines Aurora's harbinger:
At whose approach Ghosts wandring here and there,
Troope home to Church-yards; damned spirits all,
That in crosse-waies & flouds haue burial,
Already to their wormie beds are gone,
For feare least day should looke their shames vpon,
They wilfully themselues exile from light,
And must for aye consort with blacke browd night.
Ob. But we are spirits of another sort
I, with the morning loue haue oft made sport,
And like a Forrester, the groues may tread,
Euen till the Eastern gate all fiery red,
Opening on Neptune, with faire blessed beames,
Turnes into yellow gold, his salt greene streames.
But notwithstanding haste, make no delay
We may effect this businesse, yet ere day.
Puck. Vp and downe, vp and downe, I will lead them vp and downe: I am fear'd in field and towne.
Goblin, lead them vp and downe: here comes one.

Enter Lysander.

Lys. Where art thou, proud Demetrius?
Speake thou now.
Rob. Here villaine, drawne & readie. Where art thou?
Lys. I will be with thee straight
Rob. Follow me then to plainer ground.

Enter Demetrius.

Dem. Lysander, speake againe;
Thou runaway, thou coward, art thou fled?
Speake in some bush. Where dost thou hide thy head?
Rob. Thou coward, art thou bragging to the stars,
Telling the bushes that thou look'st for wars,
And wilt not come? Come recreant, come thou childe,
Ile whip thee with a rod. He is defil'd
That draweth a sword on thee
Dem. Yea, art thou there?
Rob. Follow my voice, we'l try no manhood here. Exit.
Lys. He goes before me, and still dares me on,
When I come where he cals, then he's gone.
The villaine is much lighter heel'd than I:
I followed fast, but faster he did flye, stumbling place.
That fallen am I in darke vneuen way,
And here will rest me. Come thou gentle day: lyes down
For if but once thou shew me thy grey light,
I'le find Demetrius, and reuenge this spight.

Enter Robin and Demetrius.

Rob. Ho, ho, ho, coward, why com'st thou not?
Dem. Abide me, if thou dar'st: For well I wot,
Thou runst before me, shifting euery place,
And dar'st not stand nor looke me in the face
Where art thou?
Rob. Come hither, I am here.
Dem. Nay then thou mock'st me, thou shalt buy this dere,
If euer I thy face by day-light see.
Now go thy way. Faintnesse constraineth me,
To measure out my length on this cold bed.
By day-light approach I looke to be visited.

Enter Helena.

Hel. O weary night, O long and tedious night,
Abate thy houres, shine comforts from the East,
That I may backe to Athens by day-light,
From these that my poore companie detest;
And sleepe that sometime shuts vp sorrowes eie,
Steale me a while from mine owne companie. Sleepe
Rob. Yet but three? Come one more,
Two of both kindes makes vp foure.
Here she comes, curst and sad,
Cupid is a knauish lad,

Enter Hermia.

Thus to make poore females mad.
Her. Neuer so weary, neuer so in woe,
Bedabbled with the dew and torne with briars,
I can no further crawle, no further goe;
My legs can keepe no pace with my desires.
Here will I rest me till the breake of day,
Heauens shield Lysander, if they meane a fray
Rob. On the ground sleepe sound,
Ile apply your eie gentle louer, remedy.
When thou wak'st, thou tak'st
True delight in the sight of thy former Ladies eye,

And

And the Country Prouerb knowne,
That euery man should take his owne,
In your waking shall be shewne
Iacke shall haue Iill, nought shall goe ill,
The man shall haue his Mare againe, and all shall bee well

They sleepe all the Act.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Queene of Fairies, and Clowne, and Fairies, and the King behinde them.

Tita. Come, sit thee downe vpon this flowry bed,
While I thy amiable cheekes do coy,
And stick muske roses in thy sleeke smooth head,
And kisse thy fayre large eares, my gentle ioy.
Clow. Where's Peaseblossome?
Peas. Ready.
Clow. Scratch my head Peaseblossome. Mounsier Cobweb.
Cob. Ready.
Clow. Mounsier Cobweb good Mounsier get your weapons in your hand, & kill me a red hipt humble-bee, on the top of a thistle: and good Mounsier bring me the honey bag. Do not fret your selfe too much in the action, Mounsier: and good Mounsier haue a care the honny bag break not: I should be loth to see you flowne with a honny bag. Where's Mounsier Mustardseed?
Must. Ready.
Clo. Giue me your neafe Mounsier Mustardseed. Pray you leaue your courtesie good Mounsier.
Must. What's your will?
Clo. Nothing good Mounsier, but to helpe Caualery Cobweb to scratch. I must to the Barbers Mounsier: for me thinkes I am maruell hairy about the face: and I am such a tender asse, if my haire do but tickle me, I must scratch.
Tita. What, wilt thou heare some musicke, my sweet loue.
Clow. I haue a reasonable good eare in musicke. Let vs haue the tongs and the bones.

Musicke Tongs, Rurall Musicke.

Tita. Or say sweete Loue what thou desirest to eate.
Clowne. Truly a peck of prouender: I could munch your good dry Oates. Me thinkes I haue a great desire to a bottle of hay: good hay, sweet hay hath no fellow.
Tita. I haue a venturous Fairy,
That shall seeke the Squirrels hoard,
And fetch thee new Nuts.
Clown. I had rather haue a handfull or two of dried peaze. But I pray you let none of your people stirre me, I haue an exposition of sleepe come vpon me.
Tita. Sleepe thou, and I will wind thee in my arms,
Fairies be gone, and be alwaies away.
So doth the woodbine, the sweet Honysuckle,
Gently entwist; the female Ivy so
Enrings the barky fingers of the Elme.
O how I loue thee! how I doate on thee!

Enter Robin goodfellow and Oberon.

Ob. Welcome good Robin.
Seest thou this sweet sight?
Her dotage now I doe begin to pity.
For meeting her of late behinde the wood,
Seeking sweet fauors for this hateful foole,
I did despise her, and fall out with her.
For she his hairy temples then had rounded,
With coronet of fresh and fragrant flowers.
And that same dew which sometime on the buds
Was wont to swell like round and orient pearles,
Stood now within the pretty flouriets eyes,
Like teares that did their owne disgrace bewaile.
When I had at my pleasure taunted her,
And she in mild termes begg'd my patience,
I then did aske of her her changeling child,
Which straight she gaue me, and her Fairy sent
To bear him to my bower in Fairy land.
And now I haue the boy, I will vndoe
This hateful imperfection of her eyes.
And gentle Puck take this transformed scalpe,
From off the head of this Athenian swaine,
That he awaking when the other doe,
May all to Athens back againe repaire,
And think no more of this nights accidents
But as the fierce vexation of a dreame.
But first I will release the Fairy Queene.

Be as thou wast wont to be,
See as thou wast wont to see:
Dians bud o'er Cupids flower,
Hath such force and blessed power.

Now my Titania wake you my sweet Queene.
Tita. My Oberon, what visions haue I seene!
Me thought I was enamored of an Asse.
Ob. There lies your loue.
Tita. How came these things to passe?
O, how mine eyes do loath his visage now!
Ob. Silence awhile. Robin take off this head.
Titania musicke call, and strike more dead
Then common sleepe of all these fiue the sense.
Tita. Music, ho, music, such as charmeth sleepe.

Musicke, still.

Rob. When thou wak'st with thine owne fooles eyes peepe.
Ob. Sound musicke. Come my Queene, take hands with me,
And rocket we about the couered ground
Now thou art mine, I am new vowed,
And all my powre, my seruice, and my troth
Dance in Duke Theseus house triumphantly,
And bless it to all faire posterity:
There shall the pairs of faithfull louers be
Wedded, with Theseus all in iollity.
Rob. Fairy King attend, and marke,
I do heare the morning Larke.
Ob. Then my Queene in silence sad,
Trip we after the nights shade;
We the Globe can compasse soone,
Swifter then the wandring Moone.
Tita. Come my Lord, and in our flight,
Tell me how it came this night,
That I sleeping heere was found,

Sleepers Lye still.

With these mortals on the ground. Exeunt.
Winde Hornes.

Enter Theseus, Egeus, Hippolita and all his traine

Thes. Goe one of you, finde out the Forrester,
For now our obseruation is perform'd;
And since we haue the vaward of the day,
My Loue shall heare the musicke of my hounds.
Vncouple in the Westerne valley, let them goe;
Dispatch I say, and finde the Forrester.
We will faire Queene, vp to the Mountaines top.
And marke the musicall confusion
Of hounds and eccho in conuersation.
Hip. I was with Hercules and Cadmus once,
When in a wood of Creete they bayed the Beare
With hounds of Sparta, neuer did I heare
Such gallant chiding. For besides the groues,
The skies, the fountaines, euery region neere,
Seeme all one mutuall cry. I neuer heard
So musicall a discord, such sweet thunder.
Thes. My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kinde,
So flew'd, so sanded, and their heads are hung
With eares that sweep away the morning dew,
Crooke kneed, and dewlapt, like Thessalian Bulls,
Slow in pursuit, but matcht in mouth like bels,
Each vnder each. A cry more tunable
Was neuer hallowed to, nor cheer'd with horne,
In Creete, in Sparta, nor in Thessaly;
Iudge when you heare. But soft, what nimphs are these?
Egeus. My Lord, this is my daughter heere asleepe,
And this Lysander, this Demetrius is,
This Helena, olde Nedars Helena,
I wonder of this being heere together,
Thes. No doubt they rose vp early, to obserue
The rite of May; and hearing our intent,
Came heere in grace of our solemnity.
But speake, cause Egeus, is not this the day
That Hermia should giue answer of her choice?
Egeus. It is my Lord.
Thes. Go bid the huntsmen wake them with their hornes.
Horne winde, they wake.
Shout within: they all start vp.
Thes. Good morrow friends. Saint Valentine is past,
Begin these wood birds but to couple now?
Lys. Pardon my Lord.
Thes. I pray you all stand vp.
I know you two are riuall enemies.
How comes this gentle concord in the world,
That hatred is so farre from iealousie,
To sleepe by hate, and feare no enmity.
Lys. My Lord, I shall reply amazedly,
Halfe sleepe, halfe waking. But as yet, I sweare,
I cannot truly say how I came heere.
But as I thinke (for truely would I speake,
And now I doe bethinke me, so it is;)
I came with Hermia hither. Our intent
Was to be gone from Athens, where we might be Without the peril of the Athenian Law.
Ege. Enough, enough, my Lord you haue enough;
I beg the Law, the Law, vpon his head.
They would haue stolne away, they would Demetrius,
Thereby to haue defeated you and me.
You of your wife, and me of my consent;
Of my consent, that she should be your wife.
Dem. My Lord, faire Helen told me of their stealth,
Of this their purpose hither, to this wood,
And I in furie hither followed them;
Faire Helena, in fancy followed me.
But my good Lord, I wot not by what power,
(But by some power it is) my loue
To Hermia (melted as the snow)
Seems to me now as the remembrance of an idle gaude,
Which in my childehood I did dote vpon:
And all the faith, the vertue of my heart,
The obiect and the pleasure of mine eye,
Is only Helena. To her, my Lord,
Was I betroth'd, ere I see Hermia,
But like a sickenesse did I loath this food,
But as in health, come to my naturall taste,
Now doe I wish it, loue it, long for it,
And will for euermore be true to it.
Thes. Faire Louers, you are fortunately met,
Of this discourse we shall heare more anon.
Egeus, I will ouer-beare your will;
For in the Temple, by and by with vs,
These couples shall eternally be knit.
And for the morning now is something worne,
Our purpos'd hunting shall be set aside.
Away, with vs to Athens, three and three,
We'll hold a feast in great solemnitie.
Come Hippolita. Exit Duke and Lords.
Dem. These things seeme small & vndistinguishable,
Like farre off mountaines turned into Clouds
Her. Me-thinks I see these things with parted eye,
When euery things seemes double.
Hel. So me-thinkes:
And I haue found Demetrius, like a iewell,
Mine owne, and not mine owne.
Dem. It seemes to mee,
That yet we sleepe, we dreame. Do not you thinke,
The Duke was heere, and bid vs follow him?
Her. Yea, and my Father.
Hel. And Hippolita.
Lys. And he bid vs follow to the Temple.
Dem. Why then we are awake; lets follow him, and by the way let vs recount our dreames.
Bottome wakes. Exit Louers.
Clo. When my cue comes, call me, and I will answer,
My next is, most faire Pyramus. Hey ho. Peter Quince?
Flute the bellowes-mender? Snout the tinker? Starueling? Gods my life! Stolne hence, and left me asleepe: I haue had a most rare vision. I had a dreame, past the wit of man, to say, what dreame it was. Man is but an Asse, if he goe about to expound this dreame. Me-thought I was, there is no man can tell what. Me-thought I was,
and me-thought I had. But man is but a patcht foole, if he will offer to say, what me-thought I had. The eye of man hath not heard, the eare of man hath not seen, mans hand is not able to taste, his tongue to conceiue, nor his heart to report, what my dreame was. I will get Peter Quince to write a ballet of this dreame, it shall be called Bottomes Dreame, because it hath no bottome; and I will sing it in the latter end of a play, before the Duke. Peraduenture, to make it the more gracious, I shall sing it at her death. Exit.

Enter Quince, Flute, Thisbie, Snout, and Starueling

Quin. Haue you sent to Bottomes house? Is he come home yet?
Starue. He cannot be heard of. Out of doubt he is transported.

Tarf If

Thiſ. If he come not, then the play is mar'd. It goes not forward, doth it?

Quin. It is not poſſible: you haue not a man in all Athens, able to diſcharge Piramus but he.

Thiſ. No, he hath ſimply the beſt wit of any handy-craft man in Athens.

Quin. Yea, and the beſt perſon too, and he is a very Paramour, for a ſweet voyce.

Thiſ. You muſt ſay, Paragon. A Paramour is (God bleſſe vs) a thing of nought.

Enter Snug the Ioyner.

Snug. Maſters, the Duke is comming from the Temple, and there is two or three Lords & Ladies more married. If our ſport had gone forward, we had all bin made men.

Thiſ. O ſweet bully Bottome: thus hath he loſt ſixepence a day, during his life; he could not haue ſcaped ſixpence a day. And the Duke had not giuen him ſixpence a day for playing Piramus, Ile be hang'd. He would haue deſerued it. Sixpence a day in Piramus, or nothing.

Enter Bottome.

Bot. Where are theſe Lads? Where are theſe hearts?

Quin. Bottome, O moſt courageous day! O moſt happie houre!

Bot. Maſters, I am to diſcourſe wonders: but aſk me not what. For if I tell you, I am no true Athenian. I will tell you euery thing as it fell out.

Qu. Let vs heare, ſweet Bottome.

Bot. Not a word of me. All that I will tell you, is, that the Duke hath dined. Get your apparell together, good ſtrings to your beards, new ribbands to your pumps, meete preſently at the Palace, euery man looke o're his part: for the ſhort and the long is, our play is preferred. In any caſe let Thiſby haue cleane linnen: and let not him that playes the Lion, paire his nailes, for they ſhall hang out for the Lions clawes. And moſt deare Actors, eate no Onions, nor Garlicke; for wee are to vtter ſweete breath, and I doe not doubt but to heare them ſay, it is a ſweet Comedy. No more words: away, go away.

Exeunt

Actus Quintus.

Enter Theſeus, Hippolita, Egeus and his Lords.

Hip. 'Tis ſtrange my Theſeus, that theſe louers ſpeake of.

The. More ſtrange then true. I neuer may beleeue
Theſe antricke fables, nor theſe Fairy toyes.
Louers and mad men haue ſuch ſeething braines,
Such ſhaping phantaſies, that apprehend more
Then coole reaſon euer comprehends.
The Lunaticke, the Louer, and the Poet,
Are of imagination all compact.
One ſees more diuels then vaſte hell can hold;
That is the mad man. The Louer, all as frantick,
Sees Helens beauty in a brow of Egipt.
The Poets eye in a fine frenzy rolling, doth glance
From heauen to earth, from earth to heauen.
And as imagination bodies forth the forms of things
Vnknowne; the Poets pen turnes them to ſhapes,
And giues to aire nothing, a locall habitation.
And a name. Such tricks hath ſtrong imagination,
That if it would but apprehend ſome ioy,
It comprehends ſome bringer of that ioy.
Or in the night, imagining ſome feare,
How eaſie is a buſh ſuppos'd a Beare?

Hip. But all the ſtorie of the night told ouer,
And all their minds tranſfigur'd ſo together,
More witneſſeth than fancies images,
And growes to ſomething of great conſtancie;
But howſoeuer, ſtrange, and admirable.

Enter louers, Lyſander, Demetrius, Hermia, and Helena.

The. Heere come the louers, full of ioy and mirth:
Ioy, gentle friends, ioy and freſh dayes
Of loue accompany your hearts.

Lyſ. More then to vs, waite in your royall walkes, your boord, your bed.

The. Come now, what maskes, what dances ſhall we haue,
To weare away this long age of three houres,
Betweene our after ſupper, and bed time?
Where is our vſuall manager of mirth?
What Reuels are in hand? Is there no play,
To eaſe the anguiſh of a torturing houre?
Call Egeus.

Ege. Heere mighty Theſeus.

The. Say, what abridgement haue you for this euening?
What maske? What muſicke? How ſhall we beguile
The lazie time, if not with ſome delight?

Ege. There is a breefe how many ſports are ripe.
Make choiſe of which your Highneſſe will ſee firſt.

Lyſ. The battell with the Centaures to be ſung
By an Athenian Eunuch, to the Harpe.

The. We'l none of that. That haue I told my Loue
In glory of my kinſman Hercules.

Lyſ. The riot of the tipſie Bacchanals,
Tearing the Thracian ſinger, in their rage?

The. That is an old deuice, and it was plaid
When I from Thebes came laſt a Conqueror.

Lyſ. The thrice three Muſes, mourning for the death of learning, late deceaſt in beggerie.

The. That is ſome Satire keene and critical,
Not ſorting with a nuptiall ceremonie.

Lyſ. A tedious breefe Scene of yong Piramus,
And his loue Thiſby; very tragicall mirth.

The. Merry and tragicall? Tedious, and briefe? That is, hot ice, and wondrous ſtrange ſnow. How ſhall wee finde the concord of this diſcord?

Ege. A play there is, my Lord, ſome ten words long,
Which is as breefe, as I haue knowne a play;
But by ten words, my Lord, it is too long;
Which makes it tedious. For in all the play,
There is not one word apt, one Player fitted.
And tragicall my noble Lord it is: for Piramus
Therein doth kill himſelfe. Which when I ſaw
Rehearſt, I muſt confeſſe, made mine eyes water:
But more merrie teares, the paſſion of loud laughter
Neuer ſhed.

Thiſ. What are they that do play it?

Ege. Hard handed men, that worke in Athens heere,
Which neuer labour'd in their mindes till now;
And now haue toyled their vnbreathed memories
With this ſame play, againſt your nuptiall.

The. And we will heare it.

Phi. No, my noble Lord, it is not for you. I haue heard
It ouer, and it is nothing, nothing in the world;
Vnleſſe you can finde ſport in their intents,
Extreamely ſtretcht, and cond with cruell paine,
To doe you ſeruice.
Theſ. I will heare that play. For neuer any thing
Can be amiſſe, when ſimpleneſſe and duty tender it
Goe bring them in, and take your places, Ladies.
Hip. I loue not to ſee wretchednesſe o'recharged;
And duty in his ſeruice periſhing
Theſ. Why gentle ſweet, you ſhall ſee no ſuch thing.
Hip. He ſaies, they can doe nothing in this kinde.
Theſ. The kinder we, to giue them thanks for nothing
Our ſport ſhall be, to take what they miſtake;
And what poore duty cannot doe, noble reſpect
Takes it in might, not merit.
Where I haue come, great Clearkes haue purpoſed
To greete me with premeditated welcomes;
Where I haue ſeene them ſhiuer and looke pale,
Make periods in the midſt of ſentences,
Throttle their practiz'd accent in their feares,
And in conclusion, dumbly haue broke off.
Not paying me a welcome. Truſt me ſweete,
Out of this ſilence yet, I pickt a welcome.
And in the modeſty of fearefull duty,
I read as much, as from the rattling tongue
Of ſaucy and audacious eloquence
Loue therefore, and tongue-tide ſimplicity,
In leaſt, ſpeake moſt, to my capacity.
Egeus. So pleaſe your Grace, the Prologue is addreſt
Duke Let him approach. Flor. Trum.

Enter the Prologue. Quince.

Pro If we offend, it is with our good will.
That you ſhould think, we come not to offend,
But with good will. To ſhew our ſimple ſkill,
That is the true beginning of our end.
Conſider then, we come but in your ſleepe.
We do not come, as minding to content you,
Our true intent is. All for your delight,
We are not heere. That you ſhould here repent you,
The Actors are at hand, and by their ſhow,
You ſhall know all, that you are like to know.
Theſ. This fellow doth not ſtand vpon points.
Lyſ. He hath rid his Prologue, like a rough Colt: he knowes not the ſtop. A good morall my Lord. It is not enough to ſpeake, but to ſpeake true.
Hip. Indeed he hath plaid on his Prologue, like a childe on a Recorder, a ſound, but not in gouernment.
Theſ. His ſpeech was like a tangled chaine: nothing impaired, but all diſordered. Who is next?

Enter with a Trumpet before them.

Enter Pyramus and Thisby, Wall, Moone-ſhine, and Lyon.

Prol. Gentles, perchance you wonder at this ſhow,
But wonder on, till truth make all things plaine.
This man is Pyramus, if you would know;
This beauteous Lady, Thisby is certaine.
This man, with lime and rough-caſt, doth preſent
Wall, that vile wall, which did theſe louers ſunder:
And through walls chink (poor ſoules) they are content
To whiſper. At the which, let no man wonder.
This man, with Lanthorne, dog, and buſh of thorne,
Preſenteth moone-ſhine. For if you will know,
By moone-ſhine did theſe Louers thinke no ſcorne
To meet at Ninus toombe, there, there to woo:
This grizy beaſt (which Lyon hight by name)
The truſty Thisby, comming firſt by night,
Did ſcarre away, or rather did affright:
And as ſhe fled, her mantle ſhe did fall;
Which Lyon vile with bloody mouth did ſtaine.
Anon comes Pyramus, ſweet youth and tall,
And findes his Thisbies Mantle ſlaine;
Whereat, with blade, with bloody blamefull blade,
He brauely broacht his boiling bloudy breaſt.
And Thisby, tarrying in Mulberry ſhade,
His dagger drew, and died. For all the reſt,
Let Lyon, Moone-ſhine, Wall, and Louers twaine,
At large diſcourſe, while here they doe remaine

Exit all but Wall.

Theſ. I wonder if the Lion be to ſpeake
Deme. No wonder, my Lord: one Lion may, when many Aſſes doe.

Exit Lyon, Thisbie, and Moone-ſhine

Wall. In this ſame Interlude, it doth befall,
That I, one Snout (by name) preſent a wall:
And ſuch a wall, as I would haue you thinke,
That had in it a crannied hole or chinke:
Through which the Louers, Pyramus and Thisbie
Did whiſper often, very ſecretly.
This loame, this rough-caſt, and this ſtone doth ſhew,
That I am that ſame Wall; the truth is ſo.
And this the cranny is, right and ſiniſter,
Through which the fearefull Louers are to whiſper.
Theſ. Would you deſire Lime and Haire to ſpeake better?
Deme. It is the wittieſt partition, that euer I heard diſcourſe, my Lord
Theſ. Pyramus drawes neere the Wall, ſilence

Enter Pyramus

Pir. O grim looked night, O night with hue ſo blacke,
O night, when euer art, when day is not:
O night, O night, alacke, alacke, alacke,
I feare my Thisbies promiſe is forgot
And thou O wall, thou ſweet and louely wall,
That ſtandſt betweene her fathers ground and mine,
Thou wall, O wall, O ſweet and louely wall,
Shew me thy chinke, to blinke through with mine eine.
Thankes courteous wall. Ioue ſhield thee well for this.
But what ſee I? No Thisbie doe I ſee.
O wicked wall, through whom I ſee no bliſſe,
Curſt be thy ſtones for thus deceiuing mee.
Theſ. The wall me-thinkes being ſenſible, ſhould curſe againe.
Pir. No in truth ſir, he ſhould not. Deceiuing me,
Is Thisbies cue; ſhe is to enter, and I am to ſpy
Her through the wall. You ſhall ſee it will fall.

Enter Thisbie.

Pat as I told you; yonder ſhe comes.
Thiſ. O wall, full often haſt thou heard my moanes,
For parting my faire Pyramus, and me.
My cherry lips haue often kiſt thy ſtones;
Thy ſtones with Lime and Haire knit vp in thee.
Pyra. I ſee a voyce; now will I to the chinke,
To ſpy and I can heare my Thisbies face. Thisbe?
Thiſ. My Loue thou art, my Loue I thinke.
Pir. Thinke what thou wilt, I am thy Louers grace,
And like Limander am I truſty ſtill.
Thiſ. And like Helen till the Fates me kill.
Pir. Not Shafalus to Procrus, was ſo true.
Thiſ. As Shafalus to Procrus, I to you.

Pir. O

Pir. O kiſſe me through the hole of this vile wall.
Thiſ. I kiſſe the wals hole,not your lips at all.
Pir. Wilt thou at Ninnies tombe meete me ſtraight way?
Thiſ. Tide life, tide death,I come without delay.
Wall. Thus haue I Wall,my part diſcharged ſo;
And being done, thus Wall away doth go. Exit Clow.
Du. Now is the morall downe betweene the two Neighbors.
Dem. No remedie my Lord, when Wals are ſo wilfull, to heare without warning
Duk. This is the moſt ſtuffe that ere I heard
Du. The beſt in this kind are but ſhadowes, and the worſt are no worſe, if imagination amend them.
Duk. It muſt be your imagination then,& not theirs
Duk. If we imagine no worſe of themſelues then they of themſelues, they may paſſe for excellent men.Here com two noble beaſts,in a man and a Lion.

Enter Lyon and Moone-ſhine.

Lyon. You Ladies, you (whoſe gentle harts do feare
The ſmalleſt monſtrous mouſe that creepes on floore)
May now perchance, both quake and tremble heere,
When Lion rough in wildeſt rage doth roare.
Then know that I, one Snug the ioyner am
A Lion fell, nor elſe no Lions dam:
For if I ſhould as Lion come in ſtriſe
Into this place,'twere pitie of my life.
Du. A verie gentle beaſt, and of a good conſcience.
Dem. The verie beſt at a beaſt, my Lord, y ere I ſaw.
Lyſ. This Lion is a verie Fox for his valor.
Du. True,and a Gooſe for his diſcretion.
Dem. Not ſo my Lord: for his valor cannot carrie his diſcretion, and the Fox carries the Gooſe
Du. His diſcretion I am ſure cannot carrie his valor: for the Gooſe carries not the Fox. It is well; leaue it to his diſcretion, and let vs hearken to the Moone.
Moon. This Lanthorne doth the horned Moone preſent.
Dem. He ſhould haue worne the hornes on his head.
Du. Hee is no creſcent, and his hornes are inuiſible, within the circumference
Moon. This lanthorne doth the horned Moone preſent My ſelfe, the man i'th Moone doth ſeeme to be.
Du. This is the greateſt errot of all the reſt; the man ſhould be put into the Lanthorne How is it els the man i'th Moone?
Dem. He dares not come there for the candle.
For you ſee, it is already in ſnuffe.
Du. I am vvearie of this Moone; vvould he would change.
Du. It appeares by his ſmal light of diſcretion, that he is in the wane: but yet in courteſie, in all reaſon, vve muſt ſtay the time.
Lyſ. Proceed Moone.
Moon. All that I haue to ſay, is to tell you, that the Lanthorne is the Moone; I, the man in the Moone; this thorne buſh,my thorne buſh; and this dog,my dog
Dem. Why all theſe ſhould be in the Lanthorne.for they are in the Moone.But ſilence, heere comes Thisby.

Enter Thisby

Thiſ. This is old Ninnies tombe. where is my loue?
Lyon. Oh.

The Lion roares, Thisby runs off.

Dem. Well roard Lion.
Du. Well run Thisby.
Du. Well ſhone Moone
Truly the Moone ſhines with a good grace.
Du. Well mouz'd Lion.
Dem. And then came Piramus.
Lyſ And ſo the Lion vaniſht

Enter Piramus.

Pyr. Sweet Moone,I thank thee for thy ſunny beames,
I thanke thee Moone, for ſhining now ſo bright:
For by thy gracious, golden, glitt'ring beames,
I truſt to take of true Thisbies ſight
But ſtay: O ſpight! but marke,poore Knight,
What dreadful dole is heere?
Eyes,do you ſee? how can it be?
O dainty Ducke, O Deere!
Thy mantle good; what ſtaind with blood?
Approch you Furies fell.
O Fates come, come Cut thred and thrum,
Quaile, cruſh, conclude, and quell.
Du. This paſſion,and the death of a deare friend,
Would go neere to make a man looke ſad.
Dut. Beſhrew my heart,but I pitie the man.
Pir. O wherefore Nature, did'ſt thou Lions frame?
Since Lion vilde hath heere deflour'd my Deere:
Which is: no, no,which was the fairſt Dame
That liu'd, that lou'd, that lik'd,that look'd with cheere.
Come teares, confound: Out ſword,and wound
The pap of Piramus.
I, that left pap, where heart doth hop;
Thus dye I, thus, thus,thus
Now am I dead, now am I fled, my ſoule is in the ſky,
Tongue loſe thy light, Moone take thy flight,
Now dye,dye,dye,dye,dye
Dem. No Die, but an ace for him; for he is but one.
Lyſ. Leſſe then an ace man. For he is dead, he is nothing
Du. With the helpe of a Surgeon,he might yet recouer, and proue an Aſſe
Dut. How chance Moone-ſhine is gone before?
Thisby comes backe, and findes her Louer

Enter Thisby.

Duke She will finde him by ſtarre light.
Heere ſhe comes, and her paſſion ends the play.
Dut. Me thinkes ſhee ſhould not vſe a long one for ſuch a Piramus I hope ſhe will be breefe.
Dem. A Moth will turne the ballance, which Piramus which Thisby is the better. (eyes.
Lyſ. She hath ſpyed him already, with thoſe ſweete
Dem. And thus ſhe meanes,videlicet.
This. Aſleepe my Loue? What,dead my Doue?
O Piramus ariſe:
Speake,Speake. Quite dumbe? Dead,dead? A tombe
Muſt couer thy ſweet eyes.
Theſe Lilly Lips, this cherry noſe,
Theſe yellow Cowſlip cheekes
Are gone, are gone: Louers make mone:
His eyes were greene as Leekes.
O ſiſters three, come, come to mee,
With hands as pale as Milke,
Lay them in gore, ſince you haue ſhore
With ſheeres, his thred of ſilke.
Tongue not a word: Come truſty ſword:
Come blade, my breſt imbrue:

And farwell friends, thus Thisbie ends;
Adieu, adieu, adieu.

Duke. Moone-ſhine & Lion are left to burie the dead

Dem. I, and Wall too.

Bot. No, I aſſure you, the wall is downe, that parted their Fathers. Will it pleaſe you to ſee the Epilogue, or to heare a Bergomaſk dance, betweene two of our company?

Duke. No Epilogue, I pray you; for your play needs no excuſe. Never excuſe: for when the players are all dead, there need none to be blamed. Marry, if he that writ it had played Pyramus, and hung himſelfe in Thisbies garter, it would haue been a fine Tragedy: and ſo it is truely, and very notably diſcharged. But come, your Bergomaſke, let your Epilogue alone.

The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelue.
Louers to bed, 'tis almoſt Fairy time.
I feare we ſhall out-ſleepe the comming morne,
As much as we this night haue ouer-watcht.
This palpable grosſe play hath well beguild
The heauy gate of night. Sweet friends to bed.
A fortnight hold we this ſolemnity,
In nightly Reuels, and new iollitie. Exeunt.

Enter Puck.

Puck. Now the hungry Lyons roares,
And the Wolfe beholds the Moone,
Whilſt the heauy ploughman ſnores,
All with weary taſke fordone.
Now the waſted brands do glow,
Whil'ſt the ſcritch-owle, ſcritching loud,
Puts the wretch that lies in woe,
In remembrance of a ſhrowd.
Now it is the time of night,
That the graues, all gaping wide,
Euery one lets forth his ſpright,
In the Church-way paths to glide:
And we Fairies, that do runne,
By the triple Hecates teame,
From the preſence of the Sunne,
Following darkeneſſe like a dreame,
Now are frolicke; not a Mouſe
Shall diſturbe this hallowed houſe.
I am ſent with broome before,
To ſweepe the duſt behinde the doore.

Enter King and Queene of Fairies, with their traine.

Ob. Through this houſe giue glimmering light,
By the dead and drowſie fier,
Euerie Elſe and Fairie ſpright,
Hop as light as bird from brier,
And this Ditty after me, ſing and dance it trippingly.

Tita. Firſt rehearſe this ſong by roate,
To each word a warbling note.
Hand in hand, with Fairie grace,
Will we ſing and bleſſe this place.

The Song

Now vntill the breake of day,
Through this houſe each Fairy ſtray.
To the beſt Bride-bed will we,
Which by vs ſhall bleſſed be:
And the iſſue there create,
Euer ſhall be fortunate.
So ſhall all the couples three,
Euer true in louing be:
And the blots of Natures hand,
Shall not in their iſſue ſtand.
Neuer mole, hare lip, nor ſcarre,
Nor marke prodigious, ſuch as are
Deſpiſed in Nature's title,
Shall vpon their children be.
With this field-dew conſecrate,
Euery Fairy take his gate,
And each, ſeuerall chamber bleſſe,
Through this Palace with ſweet peace,
Euer ſhall in ſafety reſt,
And the owner of it bleſt.
Trip away, make no ſtay,
Meet me all by breake of day.

Robin. If we ſhadowes haue offended,
Thinke but this (and all is mended)
That you haue but ſlumbred heere,
While theſe viſions did appeare.
And this weake and idle theame,
No more yeelding but a dreame,
Gentles, doe not reprehend.
If you pardon, we will mend.
And as I am an honeſt Puck,
If we haue vnearned luck,
Now to ſcape the Serpents tongue,
We will make amends ere long:
Elſe the Puck a lyar call.
So good night vnto you all.
Giue me your hands, if we be friends,
And Robin ſhall reſtore amends.

FINIS.

The Merchant of Venice.

Actus primus.

Enter Anthonio, Salarino, and Salanio.

Anthonio.

In sooth I know not why I am so sad,
It wearies me, you say it wearies you;
Nor how I came by it, found it, or came by it,
What stuffe 'tis made of, whereof it is borne,
I am to learne: and such a Want-wit sadnesse makes of me,
That I have much ado to know my selfe.
Sal. Your mind is tossing on the Ocean,
There where your Argosies with portly sayle
Like Signiors and rich Burgers on the flood,
Or as it were the Pageants of the sea,
Do over-peere the petty Traffiquers
That curtsie to them, do them reverence
As they fly by them with their woven wings.
Salar. Believe me sir, had I such venture forth,
The better part of my affections would
Be with my hopes abroad. I should be still
Plucking the grasse to know where sits the wind,
Peering in Maps for ports, and peers, and roades:
And every object that might make me feare
Misfortune to my ventures, out of doubt
Would make me sad.
Sal. My wind cooling my broth,
Would blow me to an Ague, when I thought
What harme a winde too great might do at sea.
I should not see the sandie hour-glasse runne,
But I should think of shallowes, and of flats,
And see my wealthy Andrew docks in sand,
Vailing her high top lower then her ribs
To kisse her buriall: should I goe to Church
And see the holy edifice of stone,
And not bethinke me straight of dangerous rocks,
Which touching but my gentle Vessels side
Would scatter all her spices on the streame,
Enrobe the roaring waters with my silkes,
And in a word, but even now worth this,
And now worth nothing. Shall I have the thought
To thinke on this, and shall I lacke the thought
That such a thing bechanced would make me sad?
But tell not me, I know Anthonio
Is sad to thinke upon his merchandize.
Anth. Believe me no, I thanke my fortune for it,
My ventures are not in one bottome trusted,
Nor to one place, nor is my whole estate
Upon the fortune of this present yeere:
Therefore my merchandize makes me not sad.
Sal. Why then you are in love.
Anth. Fie, fie.
Sal. Not in love neither? then let us say you are sad
Because you are not merry, and 'twere as easie
For you to laugh, and leape, and say you are merry
Because you are not sad. Now, by two-headed Janus
Nature hath framed strange fellowes in her time:
Some that will evermore peepe through their eyes,
And laugh like Parrats at a bag-piper:
And other of such vinegar aspect,
That they will not shew their teeth in way of smile,
Though Nestor swear the jest be laughable.

Enter Bassanio, Lorenzo, and Gratiano.

Sala. Heere comes Bassanio,
Your most noble Kinsman,
Gratiano, and Lorenzo. Fare ye well,
We leave you now with better company.
Sala. I would have staid till I had made you merry,
If worthier friends had not prevented me.
Anth. Your worth is very dear in my regard.
I take it your own businesse calls on you,
And you embrace the occasion to depart.
Sala. Good morrow my good Lords. (when?
Bass. Good Signiors both, when shall we laugh? say,
You grow exceeding strange: must it be so?
Sal. We'll make our leysures to attend on yours.
Exeunt Salarino and Salanio.
Lor. My Lord Bassanio since you have found Anthonio
We two will leave you, but at dinner time
I pray you have in mind where we must meete.
Bass. I will not faile you.
Gra. You looke not well Signior Anthonio,
You have too much respect upon the world:
They loose it that doe buy it with much care,
Believe me you are marvellously chang'd.
Ant. I hold the world but as the world Gratiano,
A stage, where every man must play a part,
And mine a sad one.
Gra. Let me play the foole,
With mirth and laughter let old wrinckles come,
And let my liver rather heate with wine,
Then my heart coole with mortifying grones.
Why should a man whose blood is warme within,
Sit like his Grandsire, cut in Alabaster?
Sleepe when he wakes? and creep into the Iaundice

By

By being peeuish? I tell thee what Anthonio,
I loue thee, and it is my loue that speakes:
There are a sort of men, whose visages
Do cream and mantle like a standing pond,
And do a wilfull stillnesse entertaine,
With purpose to be dressed in an opinion
Of wisedome, grauity, profound conceit,
As who should say, I am sir an Oracle,
And when I ope my lips, let no dogge barke.
O my Anthonio, I do know of these
That therefore only are reputed wise,
For saying nothing, when I am very sure
If they should speake, would almost dam those eares
Which hearing them would call their brothers fooles.
Ile tell thee more of this another time.
But fish not with this melancholy baite
For this foole Gudgin, this opinion
Come good Lorenzo, farre well a while.
Ile end my exhortation after dinner.

Lor. Well, we will leave you then till dinner time.
I must be one of these same dumbe wise men,
For Gratiano neuer lets me speake.

Gra. Well, keepe me company but two yeares moe,
Thou shalt not know the sound of thine owne tongue.

Ant. Fare you well, Ile grow a talker for this gear.

Gra. Thanks yfaith, for silence is only commendable
In a neats tongue dri'd, and a maid not vendible. Exeunt.

Ant. Is that any thing now?

Bass. Gratiano speakes an infinite deale of nothing, more then any man in all Venice, his reasons are two grames of wheate hid in two bushels of chaffe: you shall seeke all day ere you finde them, & when you haue them they are not worth the search.

Ant. Well: tell me now, what Lady is the same
To whom you swore a secret Pilgrimage
That you to day promis'd to tell me of?

Bass. 'Tis not vnknowne to you Anthonio
How much I haue disabled mine estate,
By something showing a more swelling port
Then my faint meanes would grant continuance:
Nor do I now make mone to be abridg'd
From such a noble rate, but my cheefe care
Is to come fairely off from the great debts
Wherein my time something too prodigall
Hath left me gag'd: to you Anthonio
I owe the most in money, and in loue,
And from your loue I haue a warrantie
To vnburthen all my plots and purposes,
How to get cleere of all the debts I owe.

Ant. I pray you good Bassanio let me know it,
And if it stand as you your selfe still do,
Within the eye of honour, be assur'd
My purse, my person, my extremest meanes
Lye all vnlock'd to your occasions.

Bass. In my schoole dayes, when I had lost one shaft
I shot his fellow of the selfe same flight
The selfe same way, with more aduised watch
To finde the other forth, and by aduenturing both,
I oft found both: I vrge this childhood proofe,
Because what followes is pure innocence
I owe you much, and like a wilfull youth,
That which I owe is lost: but if you please
To shoote another arrow that selfe way
Which you did shoot the first, I do not doubt,
As I will watch the aime: Or to finde both,
Or bring your latter hazard backe againe,
And thankfully rest debter for the first.

Ant. You know me well, and herein spend but time
To winde about my loue with circumstance,
And out of doubt you doe more wrong
In making question of my vttermost
Then if you had made waste of all I haue:
Then doe but say to me what I should doe
That in your knowledge may by me be done,
And I am prest vnto it: therefore speake.

Bass. In Belmont is a Lady richly left,
And she is faire, and fairer then that word,
Of wondrous vertues, sometimes from her eyes
I did receiue faire speechlesse messages.
Her name is Portia, nothing vndervalewd
To Cato's daughter, Brutus Portia,
Nor is the wide world ignorant of her worth.
For the foure windes blow in from every coast
Renowned suitors, and her sunny locks
Hang on her temples like a golden fleece,
Which makes her seat of Belmont Colchos strond,
And many Iasons come in quest of her.
O my Anthonio, had I but the meanes
To hold a riuall place with one of them,
I haue a minde presages me such thrift,
That I should questionlesse be fortunate.

Anth. Thou knowst that all my fortunes are at sea,
Neither haue I money, nor commodity
To raise a present sum, therefore goe forth
Try what my credit can in Venice doe,
That shall be rackt euen to the vttermost,
To furnish thee to Belmont to faire Portia
Goe presently enquire, and so will I
Where money is, and I no question make
To haue it of my trust, or for my sake Exeunt.

Enter Portia with her waiting woman Nerissa

Portia. By my troth Nerissa, my little body is a weary of this great world.

Ner. You would be sweet Madam, if your miseries were in the same abundance as your good fortunes are: and yet for ought I see, they are as sicke that surfet with too much, as they that starue with nothing; it is no small happinesse therefore to bee seated in the meane, superfluitie comes sooner by white haires, but competencie liues longer.

Portia. Good sentences, and well pronounc'd.

Ner. They would be better if well followed.

Portia. If to doe were as easie as to know what were good to doe, Chappels had beene Churches, and poore mens cottages Princes Palaces: it is a good Diuine that followes his owne instructions; I can easier teach twentie what were good to be done, then be one of the twentie to follow mine owne teaching: the braine may deuise lawes for the blood, but a hot temper leapes ore a colde decree, such a hare is madnesse the youth, to skip ore the meshes of good counsaile the cripple; but this reason is not in fashion to choose me a husband: O me the word choose, I may neither choose whom I would nor refuse whom I dislike, so is the will of a liuing daughter curb'd by the will of a dead father: is it not hard Nerissa, that I cannot choose one, nor refuse none.

Ner. Your father was ever vertuous, and holy men at their death haue good inspirations, therefore the lottery that hee hath deuised in these three chests of gold, siluer, and leade, whereof who chooses his meaning, chooses

chooses you, will no doubt neuer be chosen by any right-ly, but one who you shall rightly loue: but what warrath is there in your affection towards any of these Princely suters that are already come?

Por. I pray thee ouer-name them, and as thou namest them, I will describe them, and according to my description leuell at my affection.

Ner. First there is the Neopolitane Prince.

Por. I that's a colt indeede, fot he doth nothing but talke of his horse, and he makes it a great appropriation to his owne good parts that he can shoo him himselfe: I am much afraid my Lady his mother plaid false with a Smyth.

Ner. Than is there the Countie Palentine.

Por. He doth nothing but frowne (as who should say, and you will not haue me, choose: he heares merie tales and smiles not, I feare hee will proue the weeping Philosopher when he growes old, being so full of vnmannerly sadnesse in his youth. I had rather to be married to a deaths head with a bone in his mouth, then to either of these: God defend me from these two.

Ner. How say you by the French Lord, Mounsier Le Bonne?

Por. God made him, and therefore let him passe for a man, in truth I know it is a sinne to be a mocker, but he, why he hath a horse better then the Neopolitane, a better bad habite of frowning then the Count Palentine, he is euery man in no man, if a Trassell sing, he fals straight a capring, he will fence with his own shadow. If I should marry him, I should marry twentie husbands: if hee would despise me, I would forgiue him, for if he loue me to madnesse, I should neuer requite him.

Ner. What say you then to Faulconbridge, the yong Baron of England?

Por. You know I say nothing to him, for hee vnderstands not me, nor I him: he hath neither Latine, French, nor Italian, and you will come into the Court & sweare that I haue a poore pennie-worth in the English: hee is a proper mans picture, but alas who can converse with a dumbe show? how odly he is suited, I thinke he bought his doublet in Italie, his round hose in France, his bonnet in Germanie, and his behauiour euery where.

Ner. What thinke you of the other Lord his neighbour?

Por. That he hath a neighbourly charitie in him, for he borrowed a boxe of the eare of the Englishman, and swore he would pay him againe when hee was able: I thinke the Frenchman became his suretie, and seald vnder for another.

Ner. How like you the yong Germaine, the Duke of Saxonies Nephew?

Por. Very vildely in the morning when hee is sober, and most vildely in the afternoone when hee is drunke: when he is best, he is a little worse then a man, and when he is worst, he is little better then a beast: and the worst fall that euer fell, I hope I shall make shift to goe without him.

Ner. If he should offer to choose, and choose the right Casket, you should refuse to performe your Fathers will, if you should refuse to accept him.

Por. Therefore for feare of the worst, I pray thee set a deepe glasse of Reinish-wine on the contrary Casket, for if the diuell be within, and that temptation without, I know he will choose it. I will doe any thing Nerissa ere I will be married to a spunge.

Ner. You neede not feare Lady the hauing any of these Lords, they haue acquainted me with their determinations, which is indeede to returne to their home, and to trouble you with no more suite, vnlesse you may be won by some other sort then your Fathers imposition, depending on the Caskets.

Por. If I liue to be as olde as Sibilla, I will dye as chaste as Diana vnlesse I be obtained by the manner of my Fathers will: I am glad this parcell of wooers are so reasonable, for there is not one among them but I doate on his verie absence; and I wish them a faire departure.

Ner. Doe you not remember Ladie in your Fathers time, a Venetian, a Scholler and a Souldior that came hither in compasse of the Marquesse of Mont-ferrat?

Por. Yes yes, it was Bassanio, as I thinke, so was hee call'd.

Ner. True Madam, hee of all the men that ever my foolish eyes look'd vpon, was the best deseruing a faire Lady.

Por. I remember him well, and I remember him worthy of thy praise.

Enter a Seruingman.

Ser. The foure Strangers seeke you Madam to take their leaue: and there is a fore-runner come from a fift the Prince of Morocco, who brings word the Prince his Master will be here to night.

Por. If I could bid the fift welcome with so good heart as I can bid the other foure farewell, I should be glad of his approach: if he haue the condition of a Saint, and the complexion of a diuell, I had rather hee should shriue me then wiue me. Come Nerrissa, sirra go before; whiles wee shut the gate vpon one wooer, another knocks at the doore. Exeunt.

Enter Bassanio with Shylocke the Iew.

Shy. Three thousand ducates, well.

Bass. I sir, for three months.

Shy. For three months, well.

Bass. For the which, as I told you, Anthonio shall be bound.

Shy. Anthonio shall become bound, well.

Bass. May you stead me? Will you pleasure me? Shall I know your answere?

Shy. Three thousand ducats for three months, and Anthonio bound.

Bass. Your answere to that.

Shy. Anthonio is a good man.

Bass. Haue you heard any imputation to the contrary.

Shy. Ho no, no, no, no: my meaning in saying he is a good man, is to haue you vnderstand me that he is sufficient, yet his meanes are in supposition: he hath an Argosie bound to Tripolis, another to the Indies, I vnderstand moreouer vpon the Ryalto, he hath a third at Mexico, a fourth for England, and other ventures he hath squandred abroad, but ships are but boords, Saylers but men, there be land rats, and water rats, water theeues, and land theeues, I meane Pyrats, and then there is the perrill of waters, windes, and rocks: the man is notwithstanding sufficient, three thousand ducats, I thinke I may take his bond.

Bass. Be assured you may.

Iew. I

Iew. I will be assured I may: and that I may be assured, I will bethinke me, may I speake with Anthonio?

Bass. If it please you to dine with vs.

Iew. Yes, to smell porke, to eate of the habitation which your Prophet the Nazarite conjured the diuell into: I will buy with you, sell with your, talke with you, walke with you, and so following: but I will not eate with you, drinke with you, nor pray with you. What newes on the Rialto, who is he comes here?

Enter Anthonio.

Bass. This is signior Anthonio.

Iew. How like a fawning publican he lookes
I hate him for he is a Christian:
But more, for that in low simplicitie
He lends out money gratis, and brings downe
The rate of vsance here with vs in Venice.
If I can catch him once vpon the hip,
I will feede fat the ancient grudge I beare him.
He hates our sacred Nation, and he railes
Euen there where Merchants most doe congregate
On me, my bargaines, and my well-worne thrift,
Which he cals interest: Curst be my Tribe
If I forgiue him.

Bass. Shylock, doe you heare.

Shy. I am debating of my present store,
And by the neere geesse of my memorie
I cannot instantly raise vp the grosse
Of full three thousand ducats: what of that?
Tubal a wealthy Hebrew of my Tribe
Will furnish me: but soft, how many months
Doe you desire? Rest you faire good signior,
Your worship was the last man in our mouthes.

Ant. Shylocke, albeit I neither lend nor borrow
By taking, nor by giuing of exceſſe,
Yet to supply the ripe wants of my friend,
Ile breake a custome. Is he yet possest
How much he would?

Shy. I, three thousand ducats.

Ant. And for three months.

Shy. I had forgot, three months, you told me so
Well then, your bond: and let me see, but heare you,
Me thoughts you said, you neither lend nor borrow
Vpon aduantage.

Ant. I doe neuer vse it.

Shy. When Iacob grat'd his Vncle Labans sheepe,
This Iacob from our holy Abram was
(As his wise mother wrought in his behalfe)
The third possessor; I, he was the third.

Ant. And what of him, did he take interest?

Shy. No, not take interest, not as you would say
Directly interest, marke what Iacob did.
When Laban and himselfe were compremyz'd
That all the eanelings which were streakt and pied
Should fall as Iacobs hire, the Ewes being rancke,
In end of Autumne turned to the Rammes,
And when the worke of generation was
Betweene these woolly breeders in the act,
The skilfull shepheard pil'd me certaine wands,
And in the doeing of the deede of kinde,
He stucke them vp before the fulsome Ewes,
Who then conceauing, did in eaning time
Fall party-colour'd lambs, and those were Iacobs.
This was a way to thriue, and he was blest:
And thrift is blessing if men steale it not.

Ant. This was a venture sir that Iacob serv'd for,
A thing not in his power to bring to passe,
But sway'd and fashion'd by the hand of heauen.
Was this inserted to make interest good?
Or is your gold and siluer Ewes and Rams?

Shy. I cannot tell, I make it breede as fast,
But note me signior.

Ant. Marke you this Bassanio,
The diuell can cite Scripture for his purpose,
An euill soule producing holy witnesse,
Is like a villaine with a smiling cheeke,
A goodly apple rotten at the heart.
O what a goodly outside falsehood hath.

Shy. Three thousand ducats, 'tis a good round sum.
Three months from twelue, then let me see the rate.

Ant. Well Shylocke, shall we be beholding to you?

Shy. Signior Anthonio, many a time and oft
In the Rialto you haue rated me
About my monies and my vsances:
Still haue I borne it with a patient shrug,
(For sufferance is the badge of all our Tribe.)
You call me misbeleeuer, cut-throate dog,
And spet vpon my Iewish gaberdine,
And all for vse of that which is mine owne.
Well then, it now appeares you neede my helpe:
Goe to then, you come to me, and you say,
Shylocke, we would haue monyes, you say so:
You that did voide your rume vpon my beard,
And foote me as you spurne a stranger curre
Ouer your threshold, monyes is your suite.
What should I say to you? Should I not say,
Hath a dog money? Is it possible
A curre should lend three thousand ducats? or Shall I bend low, and in a bond-mans key
With bated breath, and whispring humblenesse,
Say this: Faire sir, you spet on me on Wednesday last;
You spurn'd me such a day; another time
You call'd me dog: and for these curtesies
Ile lend you thus much monyes.

Ant. I am as like to call thee so againe,
To spet on thee againe, to spurne thee too.
If thou wilt lend this money, lend it not
As to thy friends, for when did friendship take
A breede of barraine metall of his friend?
But lend it rather to thine enemie,
Who if he breake, thou maist with better face
Exact the penalties.

Shy. Why looke you how you storme,
I would be friends with you, and haue your loue,
Forget the shames that you haue staind me with,
Supplie your present wants, and take no doite
Of vsance for my monyes, and you'le not heare me,
This is kinde I offer.

Bass. This were kindnesse.

Shy. This kindnesse will I showe,
Goe with me to a Notarie, seale me there
Your single bond, and in a merrie sport
If you repaie me not on such a day,
In such a place, such sum or sums as are
Expreſt in the condition, let the forfeite
Be nominated for an equall pound
Of your faire flesh, to be cut off and taken
In what part of your bodie it pleaseth me.

Ant. Content in faith, Ile seale to such a bond,
And say there is much kindnesse in the Iew.

Bass. You

Bass. You shall not seale to such a bond for me,
Ile rather dwell in my necessitie.
Ant. Why feare not man, I will not forfaite it,
Within these two months, that's a month before
This bond expires, I doe expect returne
Of thrice three times the valew of this bond
Shy. O father Abram, what these Christians are,
Whose owne hard dealings teaches them to suspect
The thoughts of others. Pray you tell me this,
If he should breake his day, what should I gaine
By the exaction of the forfeiture?
A pound of mans flesh taken from a man,
Is not so estimable profitable neither
As flesh of Muttons beefes, or Goates. I say
To buy his favour, I extend this friendship,
If he will take it, so: if not adiew,
And for my love I pray you wrong me not.
Ant. Yes Shylocke, we will seale vnto this bond.
Shy. Then meete me forthwith at the Notaries,
Giue him direction for this merrie bond,
And I will goe and purse the ducats straite
See to my house (left in the fearefull guard
Of an vnthrifte knaue) and presently
I le be with you. Exit
Ant. Hie thee gentle Iew. This Hebrew will turne
Christian, he growes kinde.
Bass. I like not faire termes, and a villaines minde.
Ant. Come on, in this there can be no dismay,
My Shippes come home a month before the day. Exeunt

Actus Secundus.

Enter Morocho a tawnie Moore all in white, and three or foure followers accordingly, with Porsha, Nerissa, and their traine. Flo. Cornets.

Mor. Mislike me not for my complexion,
The shadowed liuerie of the burnished sunne,
To whom I am a neighbour, and neere bred.
Bring me the fairest creature Northward borne,
Where Phoebus fire-scarce thawes the ycicles,
And let vs make incision for your loue,
To proue whose blood is reddest, his or mine.
I tell thee Lady this aspect of mine
Hath feard the valiant, (by my loue I sweare)
The best regarded Virgins of our Clyme
Haue lou'd it too. I would not change it (faire)
Except to steale your thoughts my gentle Queene.
Por. In termes of choise I am not solemnized
By nice direction of a maidens eyes.
Besides, the lottrie of my destenie
Bars me the right of voluntarie choosing.
But if my Father had not scanted me,
And hedg'd me by his wit to yeelde my selfe
His wife, who wins me by that meanes I told you,
Your selfe (renowned Prince) then stood as faire
As any comer I haue look'd on yet
For my affection.
Mor. Euen for that I thanke you,
Therefore I pray you leade me to the Caskets
To try my fortune. By this Symitare
That slew the Sophie, and a Persian Prince
That won three fields of Sultan Solyman,
I would out-stare the sternest eies that look:
Out-brane the heart most daring on the earth:
Plucke the yong sucking Cubs from the she Beare,
Yea, mocke the Lion when he roares for pray
To win the Ladie. But alas, the while
If Hercules and Lychas play at dice
Which is the better man, the greater throw
May turne by fortune from the weaker hand:
So is Alcides beaten by his page,
And so may I, blinde fortune leading me
Misse that which one vnworthier may attaine,
And die with grieuing.
Por. You must take your chance,
And either not attempt to choose at all,
Or sweare before you choose, if you choose wrong
Never to speake to Ladie afterward
In way of marriage, therefore be aduis'd.
Mor. Nor will not, come bring me vnto my chance.
Por. First forward to the temple, after dinner
Your hazard shall be made.
Mor. Good fortune then, Cornets
To make me blest or cursed'st among men. Exeunt

Enter the Clowne alone.

Clo. Certainely, my conscience will serue me to run from this Iew my Master. The fiend is at mine elbow, and tempts me saying to me Iobbe, Launcelet Iobbe, good Launcelet, or good Iobbe, or good Launcelet Iobbe, vse your legs, take the right, or take the left: Launcelet, my conscience saies no, take heed honest Iobbe, saies the wise and discreet. Launcelet Iobbe, doe not runne, scorne running with thy heeles, well, the most courageous fiend bids me packe, fia saies the fiend, away saies the fiend, for the heauens rouse vp a braue minde saies the fiend, a run or die, well, my conscience hanging about the necke of my heart saies very wisely to me, my honest friend Launcelet, being an honest mans sonne, or rather an honest womans sonne, for indeede my Father did something smacke, something grow too, he had a kinde of taste well, my conscience saies Launcelet budge not, budge saies the fiend, budge not saies my conscience, conscience saies you counsaile well, fiend saies you counsaile well, to be ruld by my conscience I should stay with the Iew my Master, who (God bleste the marke) is a kinde of deuel, and to run away from the Iew I should be ruled by the fiend, who sauing your reuerence is the deuel himselfe. certainely the Iew is the very deuel incarnation, and in my conscience, my conscience is a kinde of hard conscience, to offer to counsaile me to stay with the Iew, the fiend giues the more friendly counsaile. I will runne fiend, my heeles are at your commandement, I will runne.

Enter old Gobbo with a Basket

Gob. Master yong-man, you I pray you, which is the waie to Maister Iewes?
Laun. O heauens, this is my true begotten Father, who being more then sand-blinde, high graue blinde, knowes me not. I will trie confusions with him.
Gob. Master yong Gentleman, I pray you which is the waie to Maister Iewes.
Laun. Turne vpon your right hand at the next turning

ning, but at the next turning of all, on your left marke at the verie next turning turne of no scrape but turne down indirectly to the Iewes house.

Gob. By Gods sonties 'twill be a hard way to hit, can you tell me whether one Lancelet that dwells with him, dwell with him or no.

Laun. Talke you of young Master Lancelet, marke me now, now will he not know one, marke me now, now.

Gob. No Master sir, he dwells with him that hath neither thought nor grace, a very poore man, and God bless the mark for his wit.

Laun. Well, well, but to the purpose, what a wise, see talke of young Master Lancelet.

Gob. Your worship I beseech you, may I speake with young Master Lancelet.

Laun. In very faire phrase, you may speake with Lancelet, for he hath gone about the backe side of the house, even now.

Gob. O heavens this is my true begotten sonne Lancelet, he hath a dish of his father, for his owne children are exactly his fathers, even blinde deffones, and about the same time, they have no more haire on their faces then I have on my hand, even as you would say at most, very bare hairs.

Gob. Marke God sake, I have the very verie haire of my sonne my verie boy.

Laun. Do you not know me father, alack the while, I am a poore man and my father.

Gob. Alacke the day I know you not young Gentleman but I pray you tell me is my sonne God rest his soule alive or dead.

Laun. Do you not know me father.

Gob. Alacke the day I know you not.

Laun. Nay, indeed if you had your eyes you might fayle of knowing me, it is a wise father that knowes his owne child, well old man, I will tell you newes of your sonne, give me your blessing, truth will come to light, murder cannot be hid long, a man's son may, but in the end truth will out.

Gob. Pray you sir stand up, I am sure you are not Lancelet my boy.

Laun. Pray you let's have no more fooling about it, but give me your blessing, I am Lancelet your boy that was, your sonne that shall be.

Gob. I cannot think you are my sonne.

Laun. I know not what I think you are, I am sure I am Lancelet the Iewes man, and I am sure Margery your wife is my mother.

Gob. Her name is Margery indeed, I'le be sworne if thou be Lancelet thou art mine owne flesh and blood: Lord worshipped might he be, what a beard hast thou got, thou hast got more haire on thy chin, then Dobbin my fill horse has on his tayle.

Laun. It should seeme then that Dobbins tayle grewes backward, I am sure he hath more haire of his tayle then I have of my face when I last saw him.

Gob. Lord how art thou changed, how dost thou and thy Master agree, I have brought him a present, how agree you now?

Laun. Well, well but for mine owne part as I have set up my rest to runaway, so I will not rest till I have run some ground, my Master's a very Iew, give him a present, give him a rope, I am famished in his service, you may tell every finger I have with my ribs: father I am glad you are come, give me your present to one Master Bassanio, who indeed gives rare new Liveries, if I serue not him, I will run as far as God has any ground. O rare fortune, here comes the man, to him Father, for I am a Iew if I serue the Iew any longer.

Enter Bassanio with a follower or two.

Bass. You may do so, but let it be so hasted that supper be ready at the farthest by five of the clocke, see these Letters delivered, put the Liveries to making, and desire Gratiano to come anon to my lodging.

Laun. To him Father.

Gob. God blesse your worship.

Bass. Gramercie, would st thou aught with me.

Gob. Here's my sonne, a poore boy.

Laun. Not a poore boy sir, but the rich Iewes man that would sir as my Father shall specifie.

Gob. He hath a great infection sir, as one would say to serve.

Laun. Indeed the short and the long is, I serue the Iew, and have a desire as my Father shall specifie.

Gob. His Master and he (saving your worships reverence) are scarce cater cousins.

Laun. To be plaine, the verie truth is, that the Iew having done me wrong, doth cause me as my father being (I hope) an old man shall frutify unto you.

Gob. I have here a dish of Doves that I would bestow upon your worship, and my suit is.

Laun. In very briefe, the suit is impertinent to myself, as your worship shall know by this honest old man, and though I say it, though old man, yet poore man my father.

Bass. One speake for them, what would they?

Laun. Serve you.

Gob. I beseech you heartily some service, to any rich Jew in this Citie, that will take two portions of this poore boy, for sooth he hath some qualities, he hath a kinde of taste, for my Master as you see, I will not say he is wise, but reasonable, he hath the best grace of grace, God grace, good enough, high-gracious, marry for the gifts they have, they are sparing enough, there I am not partial to bring my sonne to you, you are the gift of God, and he is your servant, I have said my prayers, serve you, serve you, I will go Father with my Son, To have a quick Master and enjoy Many a pound out of my fool my Lord To make me rich, this making is well, go to sir, see it done.

Gio. I am in a way of getting sir, I have not much ado but to look up my head, we have all an old man in the house a tanner table which is to be given to the ware upon able, I shall have good fortune yet, for here is a simple line of life, here's a small trifle of wives, alas fifteene wives is nothing, a leven widdowes and nine maides is a simple coming in for one man, and then to scape drowning thrice, and to be in peril of my life with the edge of a featherbed, here are simple scapes, well if fortune be a woman, she is good wench for this gere. Father come, I'le take my leave of the Iew in the twinkling.

Exeunt Clowne.

Bass. I pray thee good Leonardo thinke on this,
These things being bought and orderly bestowed
Returne in haste, for I do feast to night
My best esteemed acquaintance hie thee go.

Leon. My best endeavors shall be done herein. Exit Leon.

Enter Gratiano.

Gra. Where's your Master.

Leon. Yonder

Lorn. Yonder (if he walkes.
Gra. Signior Bassanio.
Bas. Gratiano.
Gra. I have a suite to you.
Bas. You haue obtain'd it.
Gra. You must not deny me, I must goe with you to Belmont.
Bas. Why then you must: but heare thee Gratiano,
Thou art too wilde, too rude, and bold of voyce,
Parts that become thee happily enough,
And in such eyes as ours appeare not faults;
But where they are not knowne, why there they show
Something too liberall, pray thee take pain
To allay with some cold drops of modestie
Thy skipping spirit, least through thy wilde behauiour
I be misconstred in the place I goe to,
And loose my hopes.
Gra. Signior Bassanio heare me,
If I doe not put on a sober habite,
Talke with respect, and swear but now and then,
Weare prayer Bookes in my pocket, looke demurely,
Nay more, while grace is saying hood mine eyes
Thus with my hat, and sigh and say Amen:
Vse all the obseruance of ciuility
Like one well studied in a sad ostent
To please his Grandam, never trust me more.
Bas. Well, we shall see your bearing.
Gra. Nay but I bar to night, you shall not gage me
By what we doe to night.
Bas. No that were pitty,
I would intreate you rather to put on
Your boldest suite of mirth, for we haue friends
That purpose merriment: but fare you well,
I haue some businesse.
Gra. And I must to Lorenzo and the rest,
But we will visite you at supper time. Exeunt

Enter Iessica and the Clowne

Ies. I am sorry thou wilt leaue my father so,
Our house is hell and thou a merry deuil
Did'st rob it of some taste of tediousnesse,
But fare thee well, there is a ducat for thee,
And Lancelet, soone at supper shalt thou see
Lorenzo, who is thy new Masters guest,
Giue him this Letter, doe it secretly,
And so farewell: I would not haue my Father
See me talke with thee.
Clo. Adue, teares exhibit my tongue, most beautifull Pagan, most sweete Iew, if a Christian doe not play the knaue and get thee, I am much deceiued: but adieu, these foolish drops doe somewhat drowne my manly spirit: adue. Exit
Ies. Farewell good Lancelet
Alacke, what heinous sinne is it in me
To be ashamed to be my Fathers child,
But though I am a daughter to his blood,
I am not to his manners. O Lorenzo,
If thou keepe promise I shall end this strife,
Become a Christian, and thy louing wife. Exit

Enter Gratiano, Lorenzo, Salarino, and Salanio

Lor. Nay we will slinke away in supper time,
Disguise vs at my lodging, and returne all in an houre
Gra. We haue not made good preparation.
Sal. We haue not spoke vs yet of Torch-bearers.
Sal. 'Tis vile, vnlesse it may be quaintly ordered
And better in my mind not vndertooke.
Lor. 'Tis now but foure of clock, we haue two houres
To furnish vs, friend Lancelet what's the newes.

Enter Lancelet with a letter

Lan. And it shall please you to breake vp this shall seeme to signifie
Lor. I know the hand, in faith 'tis a faire hand,
And whiter then the paper it is writ on,
The fairer hand that ever
Gra. Loue newes in faith.
Lan. By your leaue sir.
Lor. Whither goest thou.
Lan. Marry sir to bid my old Master the Iew to sup to night with my new Master the Christian.
Lor. Hold here, take this: tell gentle Iessica
I will not fayle her, speake it priuately.
Go Gentlemen, will you prepare you for this Masque to night,
I am prouided of a Torch-bearer. Exit Clowne.
Sal. I marry, ile be gone about it straight.
Sol. And so will I.
Lor. Meete me and Gratiano at Gratianos lodging
Some houre hence.
Sal. 'Tis good we do so. Exit.
Gra. Was not that Letter from faire Iessica?
Lor. I must needs tell thee all: she hath directed
How I shall take her from her Father's house,
What gold and iewels she is furnish'd with,
What page's suite she hath in readinesse.
If ere the Iew her father come to heauen,
It will be for his gentle daughters sake,
And neuer dare misfortune crosse her foote,
Vnlesse she do it vnder this excuse,
That she is issue to a faithlesse Iew.
Come goe with me, peruse this as thou goest,
Faire Iessica shall be my Torch-bearer. Exeunt

Enter Shylocke the Iew and Iessica his daughter.

Iew. Well I heare well what will become of this,
I am not bid for loue, they feele not priuiledge,
Daughter, what noise was this in the street?
What are masquers, thou know'st not their habite?
Are they come?
Iew. Why Iessica I say.
Iew. Who is there call'd thee?
Iew. Your father bid me shut the doores,
I could not go vnto the maske;

Enter Iessica

Iew. Call you? what is your will?
Iew. I am bid forth to supper Iessica,
There are my keyes: but wherefore should I go?
I am not wont to feast but now and then,
But yet I'll goe: this ducat pay for me,
Looke to my house, I am not fond to pride,
There are my keyes: but wherefore should I go?
For I did dreame of money bags to night.
Iew. I beseech you sir goe, my young Master
Doth expect your reproach.
Iew. So do I his.
Iew. And they haue conspired together, I will not say you shall see a Maske, but if you do, then it was not for nothing that my nose fell a bleeding on blacke monday laft, a fix a clocke ith morning, ta my out that yeere on aſhweer ſay was foure yeeres th after noone

Ser. What are theſe maskes theare vnto me Ieſſica,
Lock vp my doores, and when you heare the drum
And the vile ſqualing of the wry-necke Fife,
Clamber not you vp to the caſements then,
Nor thruſt your heads into the publique ſtreete
To gaze on Chriſtian fooles with varniſht faces
But ſtop my houſes eares, I meane my caſements,
Let not the ſound of ſhallow foppery enter
My ſober houſe. By Iacob ſtaffe I vow
I ſtand in good matter for the weather
But I will go, ſay you are ſtore vnto this,
Say I will come.
Ie. I will be one before ſir.
Ser. Mine ſhall not out at windo for a thouſand
There will come a Chriſtian by,
Will be worth a Ieweſſe eye.
Ser. What ſaies that Iubal of Hagars offſpring? ha
Ieſſ. His words were farewell maſter.
Ser. The paſſion painted on your mothers face
Is like ſome ſtrumpets, ſo by many ſeruice
Much ſtaine the wiſer ſort, I charge you by Therefore I pray you, and part
I know that I will
His borrowed purſe. Well Ieſſica go in,
Perhaps I will return immediately
Doe as I bid you, ſhut doore after you, faſt binde
A proper ſaying. Exit.
Ieſſ. Farewell, and if my fortune be not croſt,
I haue a Father, you a daughter loſt. Exit.

Enter the Maſker, Gratiano and Saleria.

Gra. This is the penthouſe vnder which Lorenzo
Deſired vs to make ſtand.
Sal. His houre is almoſt paſt.
Gra. And it is marueile he out-dwells his houre,
For louers euer runne before the clocke.
Sal. O ten times faſter Venus pidgeons flie
To ſeale loues bonds new made, then they are wont
To keepe obliged faith vnforfeited.
Gra. That euer holds: who riſes from a feaſt
With that keene appetite that he ſits downe?
Where is the horſe that doth vntread againe
His tedious meaſures with the vnbated fire,
That he did pace them firſt? all things that are,
Are with more ſpirit chaſed then enioyed.
How like a yonger or a prodigall
The ſkarfed barke puts from her natiue bay,
Hugg'd and imbraced by the ſtrumpet winde?
How like a prodigall doth ſhe returne
With ouerweathered ribs, and ragged ſailes,
Leane, rent, and beggerd by the ſtrumpet winde?

Enter Lorenzo.

Sal. Here comes Lorenzo, more of this hereafter.
Lor. Sweete friends, your patience for my long abſence
Not I, but my affaires haue made you wait
When you ſhall pleaſe to play the theeues for wiues
I'le watch as long for you then. Approach

Here dwels my father Iew. Hoa, who's within?

Ieſſica aboue.

Ieſſ. Who are you? tell me for more certainty,
Albeit I'le ſweare that I do know your tongue.
Lor. Lorenzo, and thy loue.
Ieſſ. Lorenzo certaine, and my loue indeed,
For who loue I ſo much? and now who knowes
But you Lorenzo, whether I am yours?
Lor. Heauen and thy thoughts are witneſs that thou art
Ieſſ. Heere, catch this caſket, it is worth the paines,
I am glad 'tis night, you do not looke on me,
For I am much aſham'd of my exchange
But loue is blinde, and louers cannot ſee
The pretty follies that themſelues commit,
For if they could, Cupid himſelfe would blush
To ſee me thus transformed to a boy
Lor. Deſcend, for you muſt be my torch-bearer
Ieſſ. What, muſt I hold a candle to my ſhames?
They in themſelues good ſooth are too too light.
Why, 'tis an office of diſcouery Loue,
And I ſhould be obſcur'd
Lor. So you are ſweet,
Euen in the louely garniſh of a boy: but come at once,
For the cloſer night doth play the run-away,
And we are ſtaid for at Bellamies feaſt
Ieſ. I will make faſt the doores and guild my ſelfe
With ſome more ducats, and be with you ſtraight
Gra. Now by my hood a gentile and no Iew.
Lor. Beſhrew me but I loue her heartily.
For ſhe is wiſe, if I can iudge of her,
And faire ſhe is, if that mine eyes be true,
And true ſhe is, as ſhe hath prou'd her ſelfe:
And therefore, like her ſelfe, wiſe, faire, and true,
Shall ſhe be placed in my conſtant ſoule

Enter Ieſſica.

What art thou come? on gentlemen, away,
Our maſking mates by this time for vs ſtay. Exit

Enter Antonio.

Ant. Who's there?
Gra. Signior Antonio?
Ant. Fie, fie, Gratiano, where are all the reſt?
'Tis nine a clocke, our friends all ſtay for you,
No maſke to night, the winde is come about,
Baſſanio preſently will goe aboord,
I haue ſent twenty out to ſeeke for you.
Gra. I am glad on't, I deſire no more delight
Then to be vnder ſaile, and gone to night Exeunt.

Enter Portia with Morocho, and both their traines

Por. Goe draw aſide the curtaines, and diſcouer
The ſeuerall Caskets to this noble Prince:
Now make your choyce
Mor. The firſt of gold, who this inſcription beares,
Who chooſeth me, ſhall gaine what men deſire.
The ſecond ſiluer, which this promiſe carries,
Who chooſeth me, ſhall get as much as he deſerues.
This third, dull lead, with warning all as blunt,
Who chooſeth me, muſt giue and hazard all he hath.
How ſhall I know if I do chooſe the right?

Por. The

How shall I know if I doe choose the right.
Por. The one of them containes my picture Prince,
If you choose that, then I am yours withall
Mor. Some God direct my iudgement, let me see,
I will survay the inscriptions, backe againe.
What saies this leaden casket?
Who chooseth me, must giue and hazard all he hath.
Must giue, for what? for lead, hazard for lead?
This casket threatens men that hazard all
Doe it in hope of faire aduantages.
A golden minde stoopes not to shewes of dresse,
Ile then nor giue nor hazard ought for lead
What saies the Siluer with her virgin hue?
Who chooseth me, shall get as much as he deserues
As much as he deserues; pause there Morocho,
And weigh thy value with an euen hand,
If thou beest rated by thy estimation
Thou doost deserue enough, and yet enough
May not extend so farre as to the Ladie.
And yet to be afeard of my deseruing
Were but a weake disabling of my selfe.
As much as I deserue, why that's the Lady.
I doe in birth deserue her, and in fortunes,
In graces, and in qualities of breeding:
But more then these, in loue I doe deserue.
What if I stray'd no farther, but chose here?
Let's see once more this saying grau'd in gold.
Who chooseth me shall gaine what many men desire
Why that's the Lady, all the world desires her:
From the foure corners of the earth they come
To kisse this shrine, this mortall breathing Saint.
The Hircanian deserts, and the vaste wildes
Of wide Arabia are as through fares now
For Princes to come view fair Portia.
The watrie Kingdome, whose ambitious head
Spets in the face of heauen, is no barre
To stop the forraine spirits but they come
As ore a brooke to see fair Portia.
One of these three containes her heauenly picture.
Is't like that Lead containes her? 'twere damnation
To thinke to base a thought: it were too grosse
To rib her cerecloath in the obscure graue
Or shall I thinke in Siluer she's immur'd
Being ten times vndervalued to tride gold;
O sinfull thought, neuer so rich a gem
Was set in worse then gold! They haue in England
A coyne that beares the figure of an Angell
Stampt in gold, but that's insculpt vpon.
But here an Angell in a golden bed
Lies all within. Deliuer me the key:
Here doe I choose, and thriue I as I may
Por. There take it Prince, and if my forme lye there
Then I am yours
Mor. O hell! what haue we here, a carrion death,
Within whose emptie eye there is a written scroule;
Ile reade the writing

All that glisters is not gold,
Often haue you heard that told;
Many a man his life hath sold
But my outside to behold,
Guilded timber doe wormes infold:
Had you beene as wise as bold,
Young in limbs, in iudgement old,
Your answere had not beene inscroll'd,
Fare you well, your suite is cold.

Mor. Cold indeede, and labour lost,
Then farewell heate, and welcome frost.
Portia adew, I haue too griev'd a heart
To take a tedious leaue: thus losers part Exit.
Por. A gentle riddance. draw the curtaines go
Let all of his complexion choose me so. Exeunt.

Enter Salarino and Solanio.

Sal. Why man I saw Bassanio vnder sayle,
With him is Gratiano gone along;
And in their ship I am sure Lorenzo is not.
Sol. The villaine Iew with outcries raised the Duke
Who went with him to search Bassanios ship.
Sal. He comes too late, the ship was vndersaile,
But there the Duke was given to vnderstand
That in a Gondelo were seene together
Lorenzo and his amorous Iessica.
Besides Anthonio certified the Duke
They were not with Bassanio in his ship.
Sal. I neuer heard a passion so confus'd,
So strange, outragious, and so variable
As the dogge Iew did vtter in the streets,
My daughter! O my ducats! O my daughter!
Fled with a Christian! O my Christian ducats!
Iustice, the law, my ducats, and my daughter;
A sealed bag, two sealed bags of ducats,
Of double ducats, stolne from me by my daughter,
And iewels, two stones, two rich and precious stones,
Stolne by my daughter! Iustice, finde the girle,
She hath the stones vpon her, and the ducats.
Sal. Why all the boyes in Venice follow him,
Crying his stones, his daughter, and his ducats.
Sol. Let good Anthonio looke he keepe his day
Or he shall pay for this
Sal. Marry well remembred,
I reason'd with a Frenchman yesterday,
Who told me, in the narrow seas that part
The French and English, there miscarried
A vessell of our country richly fraught.
I thought vpon Anthonio when he told me,
And wish'd in silence that it were not his.
Sol. You were best to tell Anthonio what you heare.
Yet doe not suddainely, for it may grieue him
Sal. A kinder Gentleman treads not the earth,
I saw Bassanio and Anthonio part,
Bassanio told him he would make some speede
Of his returne: he answered, doe not so,
Slubber not businesse for my sake Bassanio,
But stay the very riping of the time,
And for the Iewes bond which he hath of me,
Let it not enter in your mindes of loue.
Be merry, and employ your chiefest thoughts
To courtship, and such faire ostents of loue
As shall conueniently become you there;
And euen there his eye being big with teares,
Turning his face, he put his hand behinde him,
And with affection wondrous sensible
He wrung Bassanios hand, and so they parted.
Sal. I thinke he only loues the world for him,
I pray thee let vs goe and finde him out
And quicken his embraced heauinesse
With some delight or other.
Sal. Doe we so. Exeunt.

Enter Nerissa and a Seruiture

Ner. Quick, quick I pray thee, draw the curtaine strait,

The Prince of Arragon hath tane his oath,
And comes to his election presently

Enter Arragon, his traine, and Portia.
Flo. Cornets

Por. Behold, there stand the caskets noble Prince,
If you choose that wherein I am contain'd,
Straight shall our nuptiall rites be solemniz'd
But if you faile, without more speech my Lord,
You must be gone from hence immediately
Ar. I am enioyn'd by oath to obserue three things;
First never to vnfold to any one
Which casket 'twas I chose; next, if I faile
Of the right casket, neuer in my life
To woo a maide in way of marriage:
Lastly, if I doe faile in fortune of my choyse,
Immediately to leaue you, and be gone.
Por. To these iniunctions euery one doth sweare
That comes to hazard for my worthy selfe.
Ar. And so haue I addrest me, fortune now
To my hearts hope, gold, siluer, and base lead.
Who chooseth me must giue and hazard all he hath.
You shall looke fairer ere I giue or hazard.
What saies the golden chest, ha? let me see
Who chooseth me, shall gaine what many men desire
What many men desire, that many may be meant
By the fond multitude that choose by show,
Not learning more than the fond eye doth teach,
Which pries not to th'interior, but like the Martlet
Builds in the weather on the outward wall,
Euen in the force and road of casualty.
I will not choose what many men desire,
Because I will not iumpe with common spirits,
And rancke me with the barbarous multitudes
Why then to thee thou siluer treasure house,
Tell me once more, what title thou dost beare:
Who chooseth me, shall get as much as he deserues
And well said too: for who shall goe about
To cozen fortune, and be honorable
Without the stampe of merit. Let none presume
To weare an vndeserued dignity.
O that estates, degrees, and offices,
Were not deriu'd corruptly, and that cleare honour
Were purchas'd by the merrit of the wearer.
How many then should couer that stand bare?
How many be commanded that command?
How much low peasantry would then be gleaned
From the true seed of honor? And how much honor
Pickt from the chaffe and ruine of the times,
To be new varnish'd. Well, but to my choice.
Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserues.
I will assume desert. Giue me a key for this,
And instruct me how to vnlocke my dimme eyes here
Por. Too long a pause for that which you finde there
Ar. What's here, the portrait of a blinking idiot
Presenting me a scedule, I will read it:
How much vnlike art thou to Portia?
How much vnlike my hopes and my deseruings?
Who chooseth me, shall haue as much as he deserues.
Did I deserue no more than a fooles head?
Is that my prize, are my deserts no better?
Por. To offend and iudge are distinct offices,
And of opposed natures.
Ar. What is here?

The fier seauen times tried this,
Seauen times tried that iudgement is,
That did neuer choose amisse,
Some there be that shadowes kisse,
Such haue but a shadowes blisse:
There be fooles alive I wis
Siluer'd o're, and so was this:
Take what wife you will to bed,
I will euer be your head.
So be gone, you are sped.

Ar. Still more foole I shall appeare
By the time I linger here,
With one fooles head I came to woo,
But I goe away with two
Sweet adue, Ile keepe my oath,
Patiently to beare my wroath.
Por. Thus hath the candle sing'd the moath:
O these deliberate fooles when they doe choose,
They haue the wisdome by their wit to loose.
Ner. The ancient saying is no heresie,
Hanging and wiuing goes by destinie
Por. Come draw the curtaine Nerissa.

Enter Messenger.

Mes. Where is my Lady?
Por. Here, what would my Lord?
Mes. Madam, there is alighted at your gate
A young Venetian, one that comes before
To signifie the approaching of his Lord,
From whom he bringer sensible regreets;
To wit (besides commends and courteous breath)
Gifts of rich value; yet I haue not seene
So likely an Embassador of loue
A day in April neuer came so sweete
To show how costly Summer was at hand,
As this fore-spurrer comes before his Lord
Por. No more, I pray thee, I am halfe afeard
Thou wilt say anon he is some kin to thee,
Thou spend'st such high-day wit in praising him:
Come, come Nerissa, for I long to see
Quicke Cupids Post, that comes so mannerly
Ner. Bassanio Lord, loue if thy will it be. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Solanio and Salarino.

Sol. Now, what newes on the Rialto?
Sal. Why yet it lies there vncheckt, that Anthonio hath a ship of rich lading wrackt on the narrow seas the Goodwins I thinke they call the place, a very dangerous flat, and fatall, where the carcasses of many a tall ship lye buried, as they say, if my gossips report be an honest woman of her word.
Sol. I would she were as lying a gossip in that, as euer knapt Ginger, or made her neighbours beleeue she wept for the death of a third husband: but it is true, without any slips of prolixity, or crossing the plaine high-way of talke, that the good Anthonio, the honest Anthonio, O that I had a title good enough to keepe his name company!
Sal. Come the full stop
Sol. Ha, what sayest thou, why the end is, he hath lost a ship

Sal. I

Sal. I would it might proue the end of his losses

Sal. Let me say Amen betimes, least the diuell crosse my prier, for here he comes in the likenes of a Iew. How now Shylocke, what newes among the Merchants?

Enter Shylocke.

Shy. You knew none so well, none so well as you, of my daughters flight.

Sal. That's certaine, I for my part knew the Tailor that made the wings she flew withall.

Sol. And Shylocke for his own part knew the bird was fledg'd, and then it is the complexion of them all to leaue the dam.

Shy. She is damn'd for it.

Sal. That's certaine, if the diuell may be her Iudge

Shy. My owne flesh and blood to rebell.

Sal. Out vpon it old carrion, rebels it at these yeeres.

Shy. I say my daughter is my flesh and bloud

Sal. There is more difference betweene thy flesh and hers, then betweene Iet and Iuorie, more betweene your bloods, then there is betweene red wine and rennish: but tell vs, doe you heare whether Anthonio haue had any losse at sea or no?

Shy. There I haue another bad match, a bankrout, a prodigall, who dare scarce shew his head on the Ryalto, a begger that was vs'd to come so smug vpon the Mart: let him look to his bond, he was wont to call me Vsurer, let him looke to his bond, he was wont to lend money for a Christian curtsie, let him looke to his bond

Sal. Why I am sure if he forfaite, thou wilt not take his flesh, what's that good for?

Shy. To baite fish withall, if it will feede nothing else, it will feede my reuenge; he hath disgrac'd me, and hindred me halfe a million, laught at my losses, mockt at my gaines, scorned my Nation, thwarted my bargaines, cooled my friends, heated mine enemies, and what's the reason? I am a Iewe: Hath not a Iew eyes? hath not a Iew hands, organs, dementions, sences, affections, passions, fed with the same foode, hurt with the same weapons, subiect to the same diseases, healed by the same meanes, warmed and cooled by the same Winter and Sommer as a Christian is? if you prick vs doe we not bleede? if you tickle vs, doe we not laugh? if you poison vs doe we not die? and if you wrong vs shall we not reuenge? if we are like you in the rest, we will resemble you in that. If a Iew wrong a Christian, what is his humility, reuenge? If a Christian wrong a Iew, what should his sufferance be by Christian example, why reuenge? The villanie you teach me I will execute, and it shall goe hard but I will better the instruction.

Enter a man from Anthonio

Gentlemen, my maister Anthonio is at his house, and desires to speake with you both.

Sal. We haue beene vp and downe to seeke him.

Enter Tubal.

Sol. Here comes another of the Tribe, a third cannot be match't, vnlesse the diuell himselfe turne Iew.

Exeunt Gentlemen.

Shy. How now Tubal, what newes from Genoua? hast thou found my daughter?

Tub. I often came where I did heare of her, but cannot finde her.

Shy. Why there, there, there, there, a diamond gone cost me two thousand ducats in Franckford, the curse neuer fell vpon our Nation till now, I neuer felt it till now, two thousand ducats in that, and other precious, precious iewels: I would my daughter were dead at my foot, and the iewels in her eare: would she were hearst at my foote, and the duckets in her coffin: no newes of them, why so? and I know not how much is spent in the search. why thou losse vpon losse, the theefe gone with so much, and so much to finde the theefe, and no satisfaction, no reuenge, nor no ill luck stirring but what lights a my shoulders, no sighes but a my breathing, no teares but a my shedding.

Tub. Yes, other men haue ill lucke too, Anthonio as I heard in Genowa?

Shy. What, what, what, ill lucke, ill lucke

Tub. Hath an Argosie cast away comming from Tripolis.

Shy. I thanke God, I thanke God, is it true, is it true?

Tub. I spoke with some of the Saylers that escaped the wracke.

Shy. I thanke thee good Tubal, good newes, good newes: ha, ha, here in Genowa.

Tub. Your daughter spent in Genowa, as I heard, one night fourtscore ducats.

Shy Thou stick'st a dagger in me, I shall neuer see my gold againe, fourtscore ducats at a sitting, fourtscore ducats

Tub. There came diuers of Anthonios creditors in my company to Venice, that sweare he cannot choose but breake

Shy. I am very glad of it, ile plague him, ile torture him, I am glad of it.

Tub. One of them shewed me a ring that he had of your daughter for a Monkie

Shy. Out vpon her, thou torturest me Tubal, it was my Turkies, I had it of Leah when I was a Batcheler: I would not haue giuen it for a wildernesse of Monkies

Tub But Anthonio is certainely vndone

Shy. Nay, that's true, that's very true, goe Tubal, fee me an Officer, bespeake him a fortnight before, I will haue the heart of him if he forfeit, for were he out of Venice, I can make what merchandize I will: goe Tubal, and meete me at our Synagogue, goe good Tubal, at our Synagogue Tubal. Exeunt.

Enter Bassanio, Portia, Gratiano, and all their traine.

Por. I pray you tarrie, pause a day or two
Before you hazard, for in choosing wrong
I loose your company; therefore forbeare a while,
There's something tels me (but it is not loue)
I would not loose you, and you know your selfe,
Hate counsailes not in such a quallitie,
But least you should not vnderstand me well,
And yet a maiden hath no tongue, but thought,
I would detaine you here some month or two
Before you venture for me. I could teach you
How to choose right, but then I am forsworne,
So will I neuer be, so may you misse me,
But if you doe, you'le make me wish a sinne,
That I had beene so sworne. Beshrow your eyes,
They haue ore-looke me and deuided me,
One halfe of me is yours, the other halfe yours,
Mine owne I would say: but of mine then yours,
And so all yours: O these naughtie times
Puts bars betweene the owners and their rights,
And so though yours, not yours (proue it so)
Let Fortune goe to hell for it, not I.
I speake too long, but 'tis to peize the time,
To ich it, and to draw it out in length,
To stay you from election.

Baſſ Let me choose,
For as I am, I liue vpon the racke
Por Vpon the racke Baſſanio, then confeſſe
What treaſon there is mingled with your loue.
Baſſ None but that vgly treaſon of mistrust,
Which makes me feare the enioying of my loue.
There may as well be amity and league,
Twixt hungry Tygers and the hunted Roe.
Por I, but I pray thee put vpon the racke,
Whereon I may confeſſe apparant any thing
Baſſ Promiſe me life and Ile confeſſe the truth
Por. Well then confeſſe and liue
Baſſ Confeſſion then
Hath bene the ſcience of my confeſſion
O happie torment, when my torturer
Doth teach me answers for deliuerance
But let me to my fortune and the caskets
Por, Away then, I am lockt in one of them,
If you doe loue me you will finde me out.
Vertu and exercise draw neare,
Let musicke ſound while he doth make his choice,
Then if he loſe he makes a ſwanne-like end,
Fading in muſique: That the compariſon
May ſtand more proper, my eye ſhall be the ſtreame
And watry death-bed for him: He may win,
And what is muſique then? Then muſique is
Euen as the flourish when true ſubiects bow
To a new crowned Monarch: Such it is
As are thoſe dulcet ſounds in break of day
That creepe into the dreaming bridegroomes eare,
And ſummon him to marriage. Now he goes
With no leſſe preſence, but with much more loue
Then young Alcides, when he did redeeme
The virgin tribute, paid by howling Troy
To the Sea-monſter: I ſtand for ſacrifice,
The reſt aloofe are the Dardanian wiues
With bleared viſages come forth to view
The iſſue of the exploit: Go Hercules
Liue thou, I liue: With much much more dismay
I view the fight then thoſe that make the warre
Here Muſicke

A Song the whilſt Baſſanio comments on the Caskets to himſelfe.

Tell me where is fancie bred
Or in the heart, or in the head,
How begot, how nourished, Reply, reply.
It is engendred in the eyes,
With gazing fed, and fancie dies
In the cradle where it lies:
Let vs all ring fancies knell,
Ile begin it
Ding, dong, bell.
All Ding, dong, bell.

So may the outward ſhowes be leaſt themſelues
The world is ſtill deceiued with ornament
In Law, what plea ſo tainted and corrupt,
But being ſeaſon'd with a gracious voice,
Obſcures the ſhow of euill? In Religion,
What damned error, but ſome ſober brow
Will bleſſe it, and approue it with a text,
Hiding the groſſenes with faire ornament.
There is no vice ſo ſimple but aſſumes
Some marke of vertue on his outward parts;
How many cowards, whoſe hearts are all as falſe
As ſtayers of ſand, weare yet vpon their chins
The beards of Hercules and frowning Mars,
Who inward ſearcht, haue liuers white as milke,
And theſe aſſume but valors excrement,
To render them redoubted. Looke on beautie,
And you ſhall ſee 'tis purchaſt by the weight,
Which therein workes a miracle in nature,
Making them lighteſt that weare moſt of it:
So are thoſe criſped ſnake-golden locks
Which makes ſuch wanton gambols with the winde
Vpon ſuppoſed fairenesſe often knowne
To be the dowrie of a ſecond head,
The ſkull that bred them in the Sepulcher.
Thus ornament is but the guiled ſhore
To a moſt dangerous ſea: the beauteous ſcarfe
Vailing an Indian beauty: In a word,
The ſeeming truth which cunning times put on
To intrap the wiſeſt. Therefore thou gaudie gold,
Hard food for Midas, I will none of thee,
Nor none of thee thou pale and common drudge
'Tweene man and man: but thou, thou meager lead
Which rather threatneſt then doſt promiſe ought,
Thy paleneſſe moues me more then eloquence,
And here chooſe I, ioy be the conſequence
Por How all the other paſſions fleet to ayre,
As doubtful thoughts, and rath imbraced deſpaire,
And ſhudd'ring feare, and greene-eyed iealouſie.
O loue be moderate, allay thy extaſie,
In meaſure raine thy ioy, ſcant this exceſſe,
I feele too much thy bleſſing, make it leſſe,
For feare I ſurfeit
Baſſ What finde I here?
Fair Portia's counterfeit. What demi-God
Hath come ſo neere creation? Moue theſe eies?
Or whether riding on the balls of mine
Seeme they in motion? Here are ſeuered lips
Parted with ſugred breath: ſo ſweet a barre
Should ſunder ſuch ſweet friends: here in her haires
The painter plays the ſpider, and hath woouen
A golden meſh t'intrap the hearts of men
Faſter then gnats in cobwebs: but her eies,
How could he ſee to do them? having made one,
Me thinkes it ſhould haue power to ſteale both his
And leaue it ſelfe vnfurniſht: Yet looke how farre
The ſubſtance of my praiſe doth wrong this ſhadow
In vnderprizing it, ſo farre this ſhadow
Doth limpe behinde the ſubſtance. Here's the ſcroule,
The continent, and ſummarie of my fortune.

You that chooſe not by the view
Chance as faire, and chooſe as true.
Since this fortune falls to you,
Be content, and ſeeke no new
If you be well pleaſed with this,
And hold your fortune for your bliſſe,
Turne you where your Lady is,
And claime her with a louing kiſſe.

Baſſ. A gentle ſcroule. Faire Lady, by your leaue,
I come by note to giue, and to receiue,
Like one of two contending in a prize
That thinkes he hath done well in peoples eies
Hearing applauſe and vniuerſall ſhout,
Giddie in ſpirit, ſtill gazing in a doubt
Whether thoſe peales of praiſe be his or no,

So thrise faire Lady stand I euen so,
As doubtfull whether what I see be true,
Vntill confirm'd, sign'd, ratified by you.
Por. You see my Lord Bassiano where I stand,
Such as I am; though for my selfe alone
I would not be ambitious in my wish,
To wish my selfe much better, yet for you,
I would be trebled twenty times my selfe,
A thousand times more faire, ten thousand times
More rich, that only to stand high in your account,
I might in vertues, beauties, liuings, friends,
Exceed account: but the full sume of me
Is sum of something, which to terme in grosse,
Is an vnlesson'd girle, vnschool'd, vnpractis'd,
Happy in this, she is not yet so old
But she may learne: happier then this,
She is not bred so dull, but she can learne;
Happiest of all, is that her gentle spirit
Commits it selfe to yours to be directed,
As from her Lord, her Gouernour, her King.
My selfe, and what is mine, to you and yours
Is now conuerted. But now I was the Lord
Of this faire mansion, maister of my seruants,
Queene o're my selfe: and euen these two deere
Are yours my Lord, I giue them with this ring,
Which when you part from, lose, or giue away,
Let it presage the ruine of your loue,
And be my vantage to exclaime on you.
Bass. Madam, you haue bereft me of all words,
Only my blood speakes to you in my veines,
And there is such confusion in my powers,
As after some oration fearefully
Pronounced by a best beloued Prince, there doth appeare
Among the buzzing pleased multitude,
Where every something, being blent together,
Turnes to a wilde of nothing, saue of ioy
Expressed and not expressed: but when this ring
Parts from this finger, then parts life from hence,
O then be bold to say Bassanio's dead.
Ner. My Lord and Lady, it is now our time
That haue stood by and seene our wishes prosper,
To cry good ioy, good ioy my Lord and Lady.
Gra. My Lord Bassanio, and my gentle Lady,
I wish you all the ioy that you can wish:
For I am sure you can wish none from me:
And when your Honours meane to solemnize
The bargaine of your faith, I doe beseech you
Euen at that time I may be married too.
Bass. With all my heart so thou can'st get a wife.
Gra. I thanke your Lordship, you haue got me one.
My eyes my Lord can looke as swift as yours:
You saw the mistresse, I beheld the maid:
You lou'd, I lou'd for intermission,
No more pertaines to me my Lord than yours
Your fortune stood vpon the caskets there,
And so did mine too, as the matter falls:
For wooing heere vntill I swet againe,
And swearing till my very tough was dry
With oathes of loue, at last, if promise last,
I got a promise of this faire one heere
To haue her loue: prouided that your fortune
Atchiu'd her mistresse.
Por. Is this true Nerrissa?
Ner. Madam it is so, so you stand pleas'd withall.
Bass. And do you Gratiano meane good faith?
Gra. Yes faith my Lord.
Bass. Our feast shall be much honored in your marriage.
Gra. We'le play with them the first boy for a thousand ducats.
Ner. What and stake downe?
Gra. No, we shal nere win at that sport, and stake downe
But who comes heere? Lorenzo and his Infidel?
What and my old Venetian friend Salerio?

Enter Lorenzo, Iessica, and Salerio.

Bass. Lorenzo and Salerio, welcome hether,
If that the youth of my new interest heere
Haue power to bid you welcome: by your leaue
I bid my very friends and Countrymen
Sweet Portia welcome.
Por. So do I my Lord, they are intirely welcome
Lor. I thanke your honor; for my part my Lord,
My purpose was not to haue seene you heere,
But meeting with Salerio by the way,
He did intreate me past away my way
To come with him along.
Sal. I did my Lord,
And I haue reason for it, Signior Antonio
Commends him to you.
Bass. Ere I ope his Letter
I pray you tell me how my good friend doth.
Sal. Not sicke my Lord, vnlesse it be in minde,
Nor well, vnlesse in mind: his Letter there
Will shew you his estate.
Opens the Letter.
Gra. Nerrissa cheere yond stranger, bid her welcom.
Your hand Salerio: what's the newes from Venice?
How doth that royall Merchant good Antonio?
I know he will be glad of our successe,
We are the Iasons, we haue won the fleece.
Sal. I would you had won the fleece that he hath lost.
Por. There are some shrewd contents in yond same Paper,
That steales the colour from Bassanios cheeke:
Some deere friend dead, else nothing in the world
Could turne so much the constitution
Of any constant man. What worse and worse?
With leaue Bassanio, I am halfe your selfe,
And I must freely haue the halfe of anything
That this same paper brings you.
Bass. O sweet Portia,
Here are a few of the vnpleasant'st words
That euer blotted paper. Gentle Ladie
When I did first impart my loue to you,
I freely told you all the wealth I had
Ran in my veines, I was a Gentleman,
And then I told you true: and yet deere Ladie,
Rating my selfe at nothing, you shall see
How much I was a Braggart, when I told you
My state was nothing. I should then haue told you
That I was worse then nothing: for indeede
I haue ingag'd my selfe to a deere friend,
Ingag'd my friend to his meere enemie
To feede my meanes. Heere is a Letter Ladie,
The paper as the bodie of my friend,
And euerie word in it a gaping wound
Issuing life blood. But is it true Salerio,

Hath

Hath all his ventures faild, what not one hit,
From Tripolis, from Mexico and England,
From Lisbon, Barbary, and India,
And not one vessell scape the dreadfull touch
Of Merchant-marring rocks?
Sal. Not one my Lord,
Besides, it should appeare, that if he had
The present money to discharge the Iew,
He would not take it: neuer did I know
A creature that did beare the shape of man
So keene and greedy to confound a man
He plyes the Duke at morning and at night,
And doth impeach the freedome of the state
If they deny him iustice. Twenty Merchants,
The Duke himselfe, and the Magnificoes
Of greatest port haue all perswaded with him,
But none can driue him from the enuious plea
Of forfeiture, of iustice, and his bond.
Iessi. When I was with him, I haue heard him sweare
To Tubal and to Chus, his Countri-men,
That he would rather haue Antonio's flesh,
Then twenty times the value of the summe
That he did owe him: and I know my Lord,
If law, authoritie, and power deny not,
It will go hard with poore Antonio.
Por. Is it your deere friend that is thus in trouble?
Bass. The deerest friend to me, the kindest man,
The best conditiond, and vnwearied spirit
In doing curtesies: and one in whom
The ancient Romane honour more appeares
Then any that drawes breath in Italie.
Por. What summe owes he the Iew?
Bass. For me three thousand ducats.
Por. What, no more?
Pay him six thousand, and deface the bond.
Double six thousand, and then treble that,
Before a friend of this description
Shall lose a haire through Bassanio's fault.
First go with me to Church, and call me wife,
And then away to Venice to your friend.
For neuer shall you lie by Portias side
With an vnquiet soule. You shall haue gold
To pay the petty debt twenty times ouer
When it is payd, bring your true friend along,
My maid Nerrissa, and my selfe meane time
Will liue as maids and widdowes; come away,
For you shall hence vpon your wedding day.
Bid your friends welcome, show a merry cheere,
Since you are deere bought, I will loue you deere
But let me heare the letter of your friend.

Sweet Bassanio, my ships haue all miscarried, my Creditors grow cruell, my estate is very low, my bond to the Iew is forfeit, and since in paying it, it is impossible I should liue, all debts are cleered betweene you and I, if I might see you at my death. notwithstanding, vse your pleasure, if your loue doe not perswade you to come, let not my letter.

Por. O loue! dispatch all businesse and be gone.
Bass. Since I haue your good leaue to goe away,
I will make haste; but till I come againe,
No bed shall ere be guilty of my stay,
Nor rest be interpose twixt vs twaine. Exeunt.

Enter the Iew, and Salanio, and Anthonio, and the Iaylor.

Iew. Iaylor, looke to him, tell not me of mercy,
This is the foole that lends out money gratis.
Iaylor, looke to him.
Ant. Heare me yet good Shylok.
Iew. Ile haue my bond, speake not against my bond,
I haue sworne an oath that I will haue my bond:
Thou call'dst me dog before thou hadst a cause,
But since I am a dog, beware my phangs,
The Duke shall grant me iustice, I do wonder
Thou naughty Iaylor, that thou art so fond
To come abroad with him at his request
Ant. I pray thee heare me speake.
Iew. Ile haue my bond, I will not heare thee speake,
Ile haue my bond, and therefore speake no more.
Ile not be made a soft and dull ey'd foole,
To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yeeld
To Christian intercessors: follow not,
Ile haue no speaking, I will haue my bond. Exit Iew
Sol. It is the most impenetrable curre
That euer kept with men.
Ant. Let him alone,
Ile follow him no more with bootlesse prayers:
He seekes my life, his reason well I know;
I oft deliuer'd from his forfeitures
Many that haue at times made moane to me,
Therefore he hates me
Sal. I am sure the Duke will neuer grant this forfeiture to hold
An. The Duke cannot deny the course of law:
For the commoditie that strangers haue
With vs in Venice, if it be denied,
Will much impeach the iustice of the State,
Since that the trade and profit of the city
Consisteth of all Nations. Therefore goe,
These griefes and losses haue so bated mee,
That I shall hardly spare a pound of flesh
To morrow, to my bloudy Creditor.
Well Iaylor on, pray God Bassanio come
To see me pay his debt, and then I care not. Exeunt

Enter Portia, Nerrissa, Lorenzo, Iessica, and a man of Portias.

Lor. Madam, although I speake it in your presence,
You haue a noble and a true conceit
Of god-like amity, which appeares most strongly
In bearing thus the absence of your Lord.
But if you knew to whom you shew this honour,
How true a Gentleman you send relecfe,
How deere a louer of my Lord your husband,
I know you would be prouder of the worke
Then customary bounty can enforce you.
Por. I neuer did repent for doing good,
Nor shall not now: for in companions
That do conuerse and waste the time together,
Whose soules doe beare an egal yoke of loue,
There must be needs a like proportion
Of lyniaments, of manners, and of spirit;
Which makes me thinke that this Anthonio
Being the bosome louer of my Lord,
Must needs be like my Lord. If it be so,
How little is the cost I haue bestowed
In purchasing the semblance of my soule;
From out the state of hellish cruelty,
This comes too neere the praising of my selfe;
Therefore no more of it: heere other things
Lorenzo I commit into your hands,

The

The husbandry and mannage of my house,
Vntill my Lords returne; for mine owne part
I haue toward heauen breath'd a secret vow,
To liue in prayer and contemplation,
Onely attended by Nerrissa heere,
Vntill her husband and my Lords returne:
There is a monastery too miles off,
And there we will abide. I doe desire you
Not to denie this imposition,
The which my loue and some necessity
Now layes vpon you.

Lorens. Madame, with all my heart,
I shall obey you in all faire commands.

Por. My people doe already know my minde,
And will acknowledge you and Iessica
In place of Lord Bassanio and my selfe.
So far you well till we shall meete againe.

Lor. Faire thoughts & happy houres attend on you.

Iess. I wish your Ladiship all heart content.

Por. I thanke you for your wish, and am well pleas'd
To wish it backe on you: fare you well Iessica. Exeunt
Now Balthazar as I haue euer found thee honest true,
So let me find thee still. Take this same letter,
And vse thou all the endeuor of a man,
In speed to Mantua, see thou render this
Into my cousins hand, Doctor Bellario,
And looke what notes and garments he will giue thee,
Bring them I pray thee with imagin'd speed
Vnto the Tranect, to the common Ferry
Which trades to Venice: waste no words,
But get thee gone, I shall be there before thee.

Balth. Madam, I go with all conuenient speed.

Por. Come on Nerrissa, I haue worke in hand
That you yet know not of: we'll see our husbands
Before they think of vs.

Ner. Shall they see vs?

Portia. They shall Nerrissa, but in such a habit,
That they shall think we are accomplished
With that we lacke, Ile hold thee any wager
When we are both accoutred like young men,
Ile proue the prettier fellow of the two,
And wear my dagger with the brauer grace,
And speake betweene the change of man and boy,
With a reede voyce, and turne two mincing steps
Into a manly stride, and speake of frayes
Like a fine bragging youth, and tell quaint lyes
How honourable Ladies sought my loue,
Which I denying, they fell sicke and dide.
I could not doe withall: then Ile repent,
And wish for all that, that I had not kil'd them;
And twenty of these puny lies Ile tell,
That men shall sweare I haue discontinued schoole
Aboue a twelue moneth. I haue within my minde
A thousand raw tricks of these bragging Iacks,
Which I will practise.

Ner. Why, shall we turne to men?

Portia. Fie, what question's that?
If thou wert neere a lewd interpreter.
But come, Ile tell thee all my whole deuice
When I am in my coach, which stayes for vs
At the Parke gate, and therefore haste away,
For we must measure twenty miles to day. Exeunt.

Enter Clowne and Iessica.

Clown. Yes truly; for looke you, the sinnes of the Father are to be laid vpon the children, therefore I promise you, I feare you. I was alwaies plaine with you, and so now I speake my agitation of the matter: therefore be of good cheere, for truly I thinke you are damn'd, there's but one hope in it that can doe you any good, and that is but a kinde of bastard hope neither.

Iessi. And what hope is that I pray thee?

Clow. Marrie you may part'e hope that your father got you not, that you are not the Iewes daughter.

Iessi. That were a kinde of bastard hope indeed, so the sinnes of my mother should be visited vpon me.

Clow. Truly then I feare you are damned both by father and mother: thus when I shun Scylla your father, I fall into Charibdis your mother: well, you are gone both waies.

Iessi. I shall be saued by my husband, he hath made me a Christian.

Clow. Truly the more to blame he, we were Christians enow before, e'en as many as could well liue one by another. This making Christians will raise the price of Hogs, if we grow all to be porke eaters, we shall not shortly haue a rasher on the coales for money.

Enter Lorenzo.

Iessi. Ile tell my husband Lancelet what you say, heere
he comes.

Loren. I shall grow iealous of you shortly Lancelet,
if you thus get my wife into corners.

Iessi. Nay you need not feare vs Lorenzo, Lancelet and I are out, he tells me flatly there's no mercy for me in heauen, because I am a Iewes daughter: and he saies you are no good member of the common-wealth, for in conuerting Iewes to Christians, you raise the price of Porke.

Loren. I shall answere that better to the Commonwealth than you can the getting vp of the Negroes belly: the Moore is with child by you Lancelet.

Clow. It is much that the Moore should be more than reason: but if she be less than an honest woman, she is indeed more than I tooke her for.

Loren. How euery foole can play vpon the word, I thinke the best grace of wit will shortly turne into silence, and discourse grow commendable in none only but parrats. Go in sirra, bid them prepare for dinner.

Clow. That is done sir, they haue all stomachs.

Loren. Goodly Lord, what a witty Asse art thou, then bid them prepare dinner.

Clow. That is done too sir, only couer is the word.

Loren. Will you couer then sir?

Clow. Not so sir neither, I know my duetie.

Loren. Yet more quarrelling with occasion, wilt thou shew the whole wealth of thy wit in an instant? I pray thee vnderstand a plaine man in his plaine meaning: go to thy fellowes, bid them couer the table, serue in the meat and we will come in to dinner.

Clow. For the table sir, it shall be seru'd in, for the meat sir, it shall be couered, for your comming in to dinner sir, why let it be as humors and conceits shall gouerne. Exit Clowne.

Lor. O deare discretion, how his words are suited,
The foole hath planted in his memory
An Armie of good words, and I doe know
A many fooles that stand in better place,
Garnish'd like him, that for a tricksie word
Defie the matter. How cheer'st thou Iessica,
And now good sweet say thy opinion,

How

How doſt thou like the Lord Baſſanio's wife?
Ieſſ. Paſt all expreſſing, it is very meete
The Lord Baſſanio liue an vpright life
For hauing ſuch a bleſſing in his Lady,
He findes the ioyes of heauen heere on earth,
And if on earth he do not meane it it
Is reaſon he ſhould neuer come to heauen?
Why, if two gods ſhould play ſome heauenly match,
And on the wager lay two earthly women,
And Portia one: there muſt be ſomething elſe
Paund with the other, for the poore rude world
Hath not her fellow
Loren. Euen ſuch a husband
Hath thou of me, as ſhe is for a wife.
Ieſſ. Nay, but aske my opinion too of that?
Lor. I will anone, firſt let vs goe to dinner?
Ieſſ. Nay, let me praiſe you while I haue a ſtomacke?
Lor. No pray thee let it ſerue for table talke,
Then how ſoeere thou ſpeakſt mong other things,
I ſhall digeſt it?
Ieſſ. Well, Ile ſet you forth. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus.

Enter the Duke, the Magnifices, Anthonio, Baſſanio, and Gratiano

Duke. What, is Anthonio heere?
Ant. Ready, ſo pleaſe your grace?
Duke. I am ſorry for thee: thou art come to anſwere
A ſtony aduerſary, an inhumane wretch,
Vncapable of pitty, voyd and empty
From any dram of mercie.
Ant. I haue heard
Your Grace hath tane great paines to qualifie
His rigorous courſe: but ſince he ſtands obdurate,
And that no lawful meanes can carrie me
Out of his enuies Cleare, I do oppoſe
My patience to his fury, and am armed
To ſuffer with a quietneſſe of ſpirit,
The very tyranny and rage of his.
Du. Goe one and call the Iew into the Court.
Sal. He is ready at the doore, he comes my Lord.

Enter Shylocke.

Du. Make roome and let him ſtand before our face.
Shylocke the world thinkes, and I thinke ſo too
That thou but leadeſt this faſhion of thy malice
To the laſt houre of act, and then 'tis thought
Thou'lt ſhew thy mercy and remorſe more ſtrange,
Than is thy ſtrange apparant cruelty;
And where thou now exacſt the penalty,
Which is a pound of this poore Merchants fleſh,
Thou wilt not onely looſe the forfeiture,
But touch'd with humane gentleneſſe and loue:
Forgiue a moyty of the principall,
Glancing an eye of pitty on his lоſſes
That haue of late ſo huddled on his backe,
Enow to preſſe a royall Merchant downe;
And pluckе commiſeration of his ſtate
From braſſie boſomes, and rough hearts of flints,
From ſtubborne Turkes and Tartars neuer traind
To offices of tender curteſie,
We all expect a gentle anſwer Iew?
Iew. I haue poſſeſt your grace of what I purpoſe,
And by our holy Sabbath haue I ſworne
To haue the due and forfeit of my bond.
If you denie it, let the danger light
Vpon your Charter, and your Cities freedome,
You'l aske me why I rather chooſe to haue
A weight of carrion fleſh, than to receiue
Three thouſand Ducats? Ile not anſwer that:
But ſay it is my humor; Is it anſwered?
What if my houſe be troubled with a Rat,
And I be pleas'd to giue ten thouſand Ducates
To haue it bain'd? What, are you anſwer'd yet?
Some men there are loue not a gaping Pigge:
Some that are mad, if they behold a Cat
And others, when the bag-pipe ſings i'th noſe,
Cannot containe their Vrine for affection.
Maſters of paſſion ſwayes it to the moode
Of what it likes or loaths, now for your anſwer
As there is no firme reaſon to be rendred
Why he cannot abide a gaping Pigge?
Why he a harmleſſe neceſſarie Cat?
Why he a woollen bag-pipe: but of force
Muſt yeeld to ſuch inueitable ſhame,
As to offend himſelfe being offended.
So can I giue no reaſon, nor I will not,
More then a lodg'd hate, and a certaine loathing
I beare Anthonio, that I follow thus
A loſing ſuite againſt him? Are you anſwered?
Baſſ. This is no anſwer thou vnfeeling man,
To excuſe the current of thy cruelty
Iew. I am not bound to pleaſe thee with my anſwer.
Baſſ. Do all men kill the things they do not loue?
Iew. Hates any man the thing he would not kill?
Baſſ. Euerie offence is not a hate at firſt.
Iew. What wouldſt thou haue a Serpent ſting thee twice?
Ant. I pray you thinke you queſtion with the Iew:
You may as well go ſtand vpon the beach,
And bid the maine flood bate his vſuall height,
Or euen as well vſe queſtion with the Wolfe,
The Ewe bleate for the Lambe
You may as well forbid the Mountaine Pines
To wagge their high tops, and to make no noiſe
When they are fretted with the guſts of heauen.
You may as well do any thing moſt hard,
As ſeeke to ſoften that, than which what harder?
His Iewiſh heart. Therefore I do beſeech you
Make no more offers, vſe no farther meanes,
But with all briefe and plaine conueniencie
Let me haue iudgement, and the Iew his will.
Baſſ. For thy three thouſand Ducates heere is ſix
Iew. If euerie Ducat in ſixe thouſand Ducates
Were in ſixe parts, and euery part a Ducate,
I would not draw them, I would haue my bond?
Du. How ſhalt thou hope for mercie, rendring none?
Iew. What iudgement ſhall I dread doing no wrong?
You haue among you many a purchaſt ſlaue,
Which like your Aſſes, and your Dogs and Mules,
You vſe in abiect and in ſlauiſh parts,
Becauſe you bought them. Shall I ſay to you,
Let them be free, marrie them to your heires?
Why ſweate they vnder burthens? Let their beds
Be made as ſoft as yours, and let their pallats
Be ſeaſon'd with ſuch Viands: you will anſwer

The

The slaues are ours. So do I answer you,
The pound of flesh which I demand of him
Is dearely bought, 'tis mine, and I will have it.
If you deny me, fie vpon your Law,
There is no force in the decrees of Venice,
I stand for iudgement, answer, shall I haue it?
Du. Vpon my power I may dismisse this Court,
Vnlesse Bellario a learned Doctor,
Whom I haue sent for to determine this
Come here to day.
Sal. My Lord, here stayes without
A Messenger with Letters from the Doctor,
New come from Padua.
Du. Bring vs the Letters: Call the Messengers.
Bass. Good cheere Antonio! What man, courage yet:
The Iew shall haue my flesh, blood, bones, and all,
Ere thou shalt lose for me one drop of blood.
Ant. I am a tainted Weather of the flocke,
Meetest for death: the weakest kind of fruit
Drops earliest to the ground, and so let me:
You cannot better be employ'd Bassanio
Then to liue still, and write mine Epitaph.

Enter Nerissa.

Du. Came you from Padua, from Bellario?
Ner. From both, my Lord Bellario greets your Grace.
Bass. Why dost thou whet thy knife so earnestly?
Iew. To cut the obligation in the bond.
Gra. Not on thy sole, but on thy soule, harsh Iew
Thou mak'st thy knife keene: but no metall can,
No, not the hangman's Axe beare halfe the keennesse
Of thy sharpe enuy. Can no prayers pierce thee?
Iew. No, none that thou hast wit enough to make.
Gra. O be thou damn'd, inexecrable dogge,
And for thy life let iustice be accused.
Thou almost mak'st me wauer in my faith,
To hold opinion with Pythagoras,
That soules of Animals infuse themselues
Into the trunkes of men. Thy currish spirit
Gouern'd a Wolfe, who hang'd for humane slaughter,
Euen from the gallowes did his fell soule fleet,
And whil'st thou layest in thy vnhallowed dam,
Infus'd itselfe in thee: For thy desires
Are Wolfish, bloody, starued, and rauenous.
Iew. Till thou canst raile the seale from off my bond
Thou but offend'st thy lungs to speake so loud.
Repaire thy wit good youth, or it will fall
To cureless ruine. I stand here for Law.
Du. This Letter from Bellario doth commend
A young and learned Doctor to our Court.
Where is he?
Ner. He attendeth here hard by
To know your answer, whether you'l admit him.
Du. With all my heart. Some three or four of you
Go giue him curteous conduct to this place.
Meane time the Court shall heare Bellarios Letter.

YOur Grace shall vnderstand that at the receipt of your Letter I am very sicke: but in the instant that your Messenger came, in louing visitation was with me a young Doctor of Rome, his name is Balthasar. I acquainted him with the cause in controuersie, betweene the Iew and Antonio the Merchant. We turn'd ouer many Bookes together: he is furnished with my opinion, which better'd with his owne learning, the greatnesse whereof I cannot enough commend, comes with him at my importunity, to fill vp your Graces request in my stead. I beseech you, let his lacke of years be no impediment to let him lacke a reuerend estimation, for I neuer knew so young a body, with so old a head. I leaue him to your gracious acceptance, whose trial shall better publish his commendation.

Enter Portia for Balthasar.

Du. You heare the learn'd Bellario what he writes,
And heere I take it is the Doctor come.
Giue me your hand. Came you from old Bellario?
Por. I did my Lord.
Du. You are welcome: take your place.
Are you acquainted with the difference
That holds this present question in the Court?
Por. I am informed throughly of the cause.
Which is the Merchant heere, and which the Iew?
Du. Antonio and old Shylock, both stand forth.
Por. Is your name Shylock?
Iew. Shylock is my name.
Por. Of a strange nature is the suit you follow,
Yet in such rule, that the Venetian Law
Cannot impugne you as you do proceed.
You stand within his danger, do you not?
Ant. I, so he sayes.
Por. Do you confesse the bond?
Ant. I do.
Por. Then must the Iew be mercifull.
Iew. On what compulsion must I? Tell me that.
Por. The quality of mercy is not strain'd,
It droppeth as the gentle raine from heauen
Vpon the place beneath. It is twice blest,
It blesseth him that giues, and him that takes,
'Tis mightiest in the mightiest: it becomes
The throned Monarch better then his Crowne,
His Scepter shewes the force of temporall power,
The attribute to awe and Maiestie,
Wherein doth sit the dread and feare of Kings:
But mercy is aboue this sceptred sway,
It is enthroned in the hearts of Kings,
It is an attribute to God himselfe,
And earthly power doth then shew likest Gods
When mercy seasons iustice. Therefore Iew,
Though iustice be thy plea, consider this,
That in the course of iustice, none of vs
Should see saluation: we do pray for mercy,
And that same prayer, doth teach vs all to render
The deeds of mercy. I haue spoke thus much
To mitigate the iustice of thy plea,
Which if thou follow, this strict course of Venice
Must needes giue sentence gainst the Merchant there.
Iew. My deeds vpon my head! I craue the Law,
The penalty and forfeit of my bond.
Por. Is he not able to discharge the money?
Bass. Yes, here I tender it for him in the Court,
Yea, twice the summe, if that will not suffice,
I will be bound to pay it ten times o're,
On forfeit of my hands, my head, my heart.
If this will not suffice, it must appeare
That malice beares downe truth. And I beseech you
Wrest once the Law to your authority.
To do a great right, do a little wrong,
And curbe this cruell diuell of his will.
Por. It must not be, there is no power in Venice
Can alter a decree established.
'Twill be recorded for a President,

And

And many an error by the same example,
Will rush into the state. It cannot be
Ner. A Daniel come to judgement; yea a Daniel.
O wise young Judge, how do I honour thee.
Por. I pray you let me look vpon the bond
Ner. Heere 'tis most reuerend Doctor, heere it is.
Por. Shylocke, there's thrice thy money offered thee.
Shy. An oath, an oath, I haue an oath in heauen
Shall I lay periure vpon my soule?
No not for Venice.
Por. Why this bond is forfeit
And lawfully by this the Iew may clayme
A pound of flesh, to be by him cut off
Neere the Merchants heart: be merciful,
Take thrice thy money, bid me teare the bond.
Ner. When it is couched in so meere a iust,
It cannot please you to do more then spare him,
Vpon what compulsion must I? tell me that.
Por. The Law doth giue you forfeiture by the Law,
Whereof you cannot build exemption,
Proceede to iudgement: by my soule I sweare,
There is no power in the tongue of man
To alter me, I stay heere on my bond.
Ant. Most heartily I do beseech the Court
To giue the iudgement.
Por. Why then thus it is:
You must prepare your bosome for his knife.
Ant. O noble Iudge, O excellent young man.
Por. For the intent and purpose of the Law
Hath full relation to the penalty
Which here appeareth due vpon the bond.
Ner. 'Tis very true: O wise and vpright Iudge,
How much more elder art thou then thy lookes?
Por. Therefore lay bare your bosome.
Ner. I, his breast
So says the bond, doth it not noble Iudge?
Nearest his heart, those are the very words.
Por. It is so. Are there balance heere to weigh the flesh?
Ner. I haue them ready.
Por. Haue by some Surgeon Shylock on your charge
To stop his wounds, least he should bleede to death.
Ner. It is not so expressed in the bond.
Por. It is not so expressed, but what of that?
'Twere good you do so much for charity.
Ner. I cannot finde it, 'tis not in the bond.
Por. Come Merchant, haue you anything to say?
Ant. But little: I am armed and well prepared.
Giue me your hand Bassanio, fare you well,
Grieue not that I am fallen to this for you,
For heere in fortune shewes her selfe more kinde
Then is her custome, it is still her vse
To let the wretched man outliue his wealth,
To view with hollow eye and wrinkled brow
An age of pouerty, from which lingring penance
Of such misery doth she cut me off.
Commend me to your honourable Wife,
Tell her the processe of Antonio's end
Say how I loued you, speake me fayre in death,
And when the tale is told, bid her be iudge,
Whether Bassanio had not once a Loue.
Repent but you that you shall lose your friend,
And he repents not that he payes your debt
For if the Iew do cut but deepe enough,
Ile pay it instantly, with all my heart.
Bas. Antonio, I am married to a wife,
Which is as deere to me as life it selfe,
But life it selfe, my wife, and all the world,
Are not with me esteem'd aboue thy life
I would lose all, I sacrifice them all
Heere to this deuill, to deliuer you
Por. Your wife would giue you little thanks for that
If she were by to heare you make the offer.
Gra. I haue a wife whom I protest I loue,
I would she were in heauen, so she could
Intreat some power to change this currish Iew
Ner. 'Tis well you offer it behinde her backe,
The wish would make else an vnquiet house. (ter
Iew. These be the Christian husbands; I haue a daugh-
Would any of the stocke of Barrabas
Had been her husband, rather then a Christian.
We trifle time, I pray thee pursue sentence
Por. A pound of that same marchants flesh is thine,
The Court awards it, and the law doth giue it.
Iew. Most rightful Iudge
Por. And you must cut this flesh from off his breast,
The Law allowes it, and the Court awardes it.
Iew. Most learned Iudge, a sentence come prepare
Por. Tarry a little, there is something else,
This bond doth giue thee here no iot of blood,
The words expressly are a pound of flesh
Take then thy bond, take thou thy pound of flesh
But in the cutting it, if thou dost shed
One drop of Christian blood, thy lands and goods
Are by the Lawes of Venice confiscate
Vnto the state of Venice
Gra. O vpright Iudge,
Mark Iew, o learned Iudge.
Shy. Is that the law?
Por. Thy selfe shalt see the Act.
For as thou vrgest iustice, be assured
Thou shalt haue iustice more then thou desirest.
Gra. O learned Iudge, mark Iew, a learned Iudge.
Iew. I take this offer then, pay the bond thrice
And let the Christian go.
Bas. Heere is the money.
Por. Soft Iew, hast thou haue a publique post, & a haste,
He shall haue nothing but the penalty
Gra. O Iew, an vpright Iudge, a learned Iudge.
Por. Therefore prepare thee to cut off the flesh,
Shed thou no blood, nor cut thou lesse nor more
But iust a pound to fall, if thou take more
Or lesse then just a pound, be it but so much
As makes it light or heauy in the substance,
Or the deuision of the twentieth part
Of one poore scruple, nay if the scale doe turne
But in the estimation of a haire,
Thou diest, and all thy goods are confiscate.
Gra. A second Daniel, a Daniel Iew,
Now infidel I haue thee on the hip.
Por. Why doth the Iew pause, take thy forfeiture.
Shy. Giue me my principall, and let me go.
Bass. I haue it ready for thee heere it is.
Por. He hath refused it in the open Court,
He shall haue meerely iustice and his bond.
Gra. A Daniel still say I, a second Daniel,
I thanke thee Iew for teaching me that word.
Shy. Shall I not haue barely my principall?
Por. Thou shalt haue nothing but the forfeiture,
To be taken so at thy perill Iew.
Shy. Why then the Deuill giue him good of it:
Ile stay no longer question.

Por. Tarry

Por. Tarry Iew,
The Law hath yet another hold on you
It is enacted in the Lawes of Venice,
If it be proued against an Alien,
That by direct, or indirect attempts
He seeke the life of any Citizen,
The party gainst the which he doth contriue,
Shall seaze one halfe his goods, the other halfe
Comes to the priuie coffer of the State,
And the offenders life lies in the mercy
Of the Duke only, gainst all other voice.
In which predicament I say thou stand'st:
For it appeares by manifest proceeding,
That indirectly, and directly too,
Thou hast contriued against the very life
Of the defendant: and thou hast incurd
The danger formerly by me rehearsed.
Downe therefore, and beg mercy of the Duke.
Gra. Beg that thou may'st haue leaue to hang thy selfe,
And yet thy wealth being forfeit to the State,
Thou hast not left the value of a cord,
Therefore thou must be hang'd at the States charge.
Duk. That you may see the difference of our state,
I pardon thee thy life before thou aske it:
For halfe thy wealth, it is Antonio's,
The other halfe comes to the generall state,
Which may dimish thy fine to fifty Duckets.
Por. I for the State not for Antonio
Shy. Nay, take my life and all, pardon not that,
You take my house, when you do take the prop
That doth sustaine my house: you take my life
When you do take the meanes whereby I liue.
Por. What mercy can you render him Antonio?
Gra. A halter gratis, nothing else for Gods sake
Ant. So please my Lord the Duke, and all the Court
To quit the fine for one halfe of his goods,
I am content: so he will let me haue
The other halfe in vse, to render it
Vpon his death, vnto the Gentleman
That lately stole his daughter.
Two things prouided more, that for this fauour
He presently become a Christian
The other, that he doe record a gift
Heere in the Court of all he dies possest
Vnto his sonne Lorenzo and his daughter.
Duk. He shall doe this, or else I do recant
The pardon that I late pronounced heere.
Por Art thou contented Iew? what dost thou say?
Shy. I am content
Por Clarke, draw a deed of gift.
Shy. I pray you giue me leaue to go from hence,
I am not well, send the deed after me,
And I will signe it.
Duke Get thee gone, but doe it.
Gra. In christning thou shalt haue two godfathers,
Had I been iudge, thou should'st haue had ten more,
To bring thee to the gallowes, not to the font. Exit.
Duk Sir I intreat you with me home to dinner.
Por I humbly doe desire your Grace of pardon,
I must away this night toward Padua,
And it is meete I presently set forth.
Duk. I am sorry that your leysure serues you not:
Antonio, gratifie this gentleman,
For in my minde you are much bound to him.
Exit Duke and his traine.
Bass. Most worthy gentleman, I and my friend
Haue by your wisedome beene this day acquitted
Of grieuous penalties, in lieu whereof,
Three thousand Ducats due vnto the Iew
We freely cope your courteous pains withall.
An. And stand indebted ouer and aboue
In loue and seruice to you euermore
Por He is well paid that is well satisfied,
And I delyuering you, am satisfied,
And therein do account my selfe well paid,
My minde was neuer yet more mercenarie
I pray you know me when we meete againe,
I wish you well, and so I take my leaue.
Bass. Deare sir, of force I must attempt you further,
Take some remembrance of vs as a tribute,
Not as fee: grant me two things, I pray you
Not to denie me, and to pardon me.
Por You presse me farre, and therefore I will yeeld,
Giue me your gloues, Ile weare them for your sake,
And for your loue Ile take a ring from you
Do not draw back your hand, Ile take no more,
And you in loue shall not deny me this
Bass. This ring good sir, alas it is a trifle,
I will not shame my selfe to giue you this
Por I will haue nothing else but only this,
And now methinkes I haue a mind to it
Bass. There is more depends on this then on the value.
The dearest ring in Venice will I giue you,
And find it out by proclamation,
Onely for this I pray you pardon me
Por. I see sir you are liberall in offers,
You taught me first to beg, and now me thinkes
You teach me how a beggar should be answered.
Bass. Good sir, this ring was giuen me by my wife,
And when she put it on she made me vow
That I should neither sell nor giue nor lose it
Por. That excuse serues many men to saue their gifts,
And if your wife be not a mad woman
And know how well I haue deserued this ring,
She will not hold out enemy for euer
For giuing it to me: well, peace be with you. Exeunt
Ant. My Lord Bassanio, let him haue the ring,
Let his deseruings and my loue withall
Be valued 'gainst your wiues commandement.
Bass. Go Gratiano run and ouertake him,
Giue him the ring and bring him if thou canst
Vnto Antonio's house: away make haste. Exit Gra.
Come, you and I will thither presently,
And in the morning early will we both
Fly toward Belmont: come Antonio. Exeunt.

Enter Portia and Nerrissa.

Por Enquire the Iewes house out, giue him this deed,
And let him sign it, we will flourish it
And be a day before our husbands home:
This deed will be well welcome to her husband.
Enter Gratiano.
Gra Faire sir, you are well ore-taken:
My Lord Bassanio vpon more aduice,
Hath sent you heere this night, that you would
Your company at supper.
Por. I am vnable to
His minde was I should doe accept your fayre offer,
And so I pray you tell him: furthermore
I pray you shew my youth old Shylocks house
Gra That will I doe.
Ner. Sir, I would speake with you.

he ſee it I can get my husbands ring
Which I did make him sweare to keepe for euer
Por. Thou maist I warrant, we shall haue old swearing
That they did giue the rings away to men.
But weele out face them and out sweare them too
Away, make haste thou know'st where I will tarry.
Ner. Come good sir, will you shew me to this house
Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Lorenzo and Iessica

Lor. The moone shines bright: in such a night as this
When the sweet wind did gently kisse the trees,
And they did make no noise: in such a night
Troylus methinks mounted the Troian walls,
And sigh'd his soule toward the Grecian tents
Where Cressid lay that night.
Ies. In such a night
Did Thisbe fearefully ore-trip the dewe
And saw the Lyons shadow ere himselfe
And ranne dismayed away
Loren. In such a night
Stood Dido with a Willow in her hand
Vpon the wilde sea bankes, and waft her Loue
To come againe to Carthage
Ies. In such a night
Medea gathered the enchanted herbs
That did renew old Aeson
Loren. In such a night
Did Iessica steale from the wealthy Iewe,
And with an vnthrift Loue did runne from Venice,
As far as Belmont
Ies. In such a night
Did young Lorenzo swear he lou'd her well,
Stealing her soule with many vowes of faith
And nere a true one.
Loren. In such a night
Did pretty Iessica (like a little shrow)
Slander her Loue, and he forgiue it her.
Ies. I would out night you did no body come
But hee, I am sure hee comes talking of him.

Enter a Messenger.

Lor. Who comes so fast in silence of the night?
Mes. A friend.
Lor. A friend, what friend? your name I pray you friend?
Mes. My Master sweet Lord, you bring him home.
He were at hand, I pray you tell me this?
Or he not come before?
Mes. Not he but a few of the clocke.
Lor. Who calls?
Clo. Sola, did you see M. Lorenzo, & M. Lorenzo, sola, sola.
Lor. Leaue hollowing man heere. (sola.
Clo. Sola, where, where?
Lor. Heere?
Clo. Tell him there's a Post come from my Master, with his horne full of good newes, my Master will be here ere morning, sweet Soule
Lor. Let's in and there expect their comming.
And yet no matter: why should we goe in?
My friend Stephen signifie pray you
Within the house, your Mistresse is at hand,
And bring your musique forth into the ayre.
How sweet the moone-light sleepes vpon this banke,
Heere will we sit, and let the sounds of musicke
Creepe in our eares, soft stilnes and the night
Become the touches of sweet harmonie.
Sit Iessica, looke how the floore of heauen
Is thicke inlayed with patines of bright gold,
There's not the smallest orbe which thou behold'st
But in his motion like an Angell sings,
Still quiring to the young eyed Cherubins;
Such harmonie is in immortall soules,
But whilst this muddy vesture of decay
Doth grossely close it in, we cannot heare it
Come ho, and wake Diana with a hymne,
With sweetest touches pierce your Mistresse eare,
And draw her home with musicke
Ies. I am neuer merry when I heare sweet musique
Play musicke.
Lor. The reason is, your spirits are attentiue:
For doe but note a wilde and wanton heard
Or race of youthfull and vnhandled colts,
Fetching mad bounds, bellowing and neighing loud,
Which is the hot condition of their blood,
If they but heare perchance a trumpet sound,
Or any ayre of musicke touch their eares,
You shall perceiue them make a mutuall stand,
Their sauage eyes turn'd to a modest gaze,
By the sweet power of musicke: therefore the Poet
Did feigne that Orpheus drew trees, stones and floods
Since nought so stockish, hard and full of rage,
But musicke for the time doth change his nature,
The man that hath no musicke in himselfe,
Nor is not moued with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoyles,
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affections dark as Erebus,
Let no such man be trusted: marke the musicke

Enter Portia and Nerrissa

Por. That light we see is burning in my hall
How farre that little candell throwes his beames,
So shines a good deed in a naughty world. (deed
Ner. When the moone shone we did not see the can
Por. So doth the greater glory dim the lesse,
A substitute shines brightly as a King
Vntill a King be by, and then his state
Empties it selfe, as doth an inland brooke
Into the maine of waters: musique, harke. Musicke.
Ner. It is your musicke Madame of the house
Por. Nothing is good I see without respect,
Methinks it sounds much sweeter then by day?
Ner. Silence be, tower that vertue on it Madam
Por. The Crow doth sing as sweetly as the Larke
When

When neither is attended, and I think
The Nightingale if she should sing by day
When every Goose is cackling, would be thought
No better a Musitian then the Wren?
How many things by season, season'd are
To their right praise, and true perfection:
Peace, how the Moone sleepes with Endimion,
And would not be awak'd.
Musicke ceases.
Lor. That is the voice,
Or I am much deceiu'd of Portia.
Por. He knowes me as the blinde man knowes the Cuckow by the bad voice?
Lor. Deere Lady welcome home?
Por. We have been praying for our husbands welfare
Which speed we hope the better for our words,
Are they return'd?
Lor. Madam they are not yet
But there is come a Messenger before
To signifie their comming.
Por. Go in Nerissa,
Giue order to my seruants, that they take
No note at all of our being absent hence,
Nor you Lorenzo, Iessica nor you
A tucket sounded.
Lor. Your husband is at hand, I heare his trumpet,
We are no tell-tales Madam feare you not
Por. This night me thinkes is but the day-light sicke,
It lookes a little paler, 'tis a day,
Such as the day is, when the Sun is hid

Enter Bassanio, Antonio, Gratiano and their Followers.

Bas. We should hold day with the Antipodes,
If you would walke in absence of the sunne.
Por. Let me giue light, but let me not be light,
For a light wife doth make a heauy husband,
And never be Bassanio so for me,
But God sort all: you are welcome home my Lord.
Bas. I thanke you Madam, giue welcome to my friend
This is the man, this is Antonio,
To whom I am so infinitely bound.
Por. You should in all sense be much bound to him,
For as I heare he was much bound for you.
Ant. No more then I am well acquitted of.
Por. Sir, you are very welcome to our house:
It must appeare in other waies then words,
Therefore I scant this breathing courtesie.
Gra. By yonder Moone I sweare you do me wrong,
In faith, I gaue it to the Iudges Clearke:
Would he were gelt that had it for my part,
Since you do take it Loue so much at hart.
Por. A quarrel ho already, what's the matter?
Gra. About a hoope of Gold, a paltry Ring,
That she did giue me, whose Poesie was
For all the world like Cutlers Poetry
Vpon a knife, Loue me, and leaue me not.
Ner. What talke you of the Poesie or the valew?
You swore to me when I did giue it you,
That you would weare it till the houre of death,
And that it should lye with you in your graue:
Though not for me, yet for your vehement oathes,
You should haue beene respectiue and haue kept it.
Gaue it a Iudges Clearke? but well I know
The Clearke will nere weare haire on's face that had it.
Gra. He will, and if he liue to be a man.
Ner. I, if a Woman liue to be a man.
Gra. Now by this hand, I gaue it to a youth,
A kinde of boy, a little scrubbed boy,
No higher then thy selfe, the Iudges Clearke,
A prating boy that begg'd it as a fee,
I could not for my heart deny it him.
Por. You were to blame, I must be plaine with you,
To part so slightly with your wiues first gift,
A thing stuck on with oathes vpon your finger,
And so riueted with faith vnto your flesh.
I gaue my Loue a Ring, and made him sweare
Neuer to part with it, and here he stands:
I dare be sworne for him, he would not leaue it,
Nor plucke it from his finger, for the wealth
That the world masters. Now in faith Gratiano,
You giue your wife too vnkinde a cause of griefe,
And 'twere to me, I should be mad at it.
Bas. Why I were best cut my left hand off,
And sweare I lost the Ring defending it.
Gra. My Lord Bassanio gaue his Ring away
Vnto the Iudge that begg'd it, and indeede
Deseru'd it too: and then the boy his Clearke
That tooke some paines in writing, he begg'd mine,
And neither man nor master would take ought
But the two Rings.
Por. What Ring gaue you my Lord?
Not that I hope which you receiu'd of me.
Bas. If I could adde a lye vnto a fault,
I would deny it: but you see my finger
Hath not the Ring vpon it, it is gone.
Por. Euen so voide is your false heart of truth.
By heauen I will nere come in your bed
Vntil I see the Ring.
Ner. Nor I in yours
Till I againe see mine.
Bas. Sweet Portia,
If you did know to whom I gaue the Ring,
If you did know for whom I gaue the Ring,
And would conceiue for what I gaue the Ring,
And how vnwillingly I left the Ring,
When nought would be accepted but the Ring,
You would abate the strength of your displeasure.
Por. If you had knowne the vertue of the Ring,
Or halfe her worthines that gaue the Ring,
Or your owne honour to containe the Ring,
You would not then haue parted with the Ring.
What man is there so much vnreasonable,
If you had pleas'd to haue defended it
With any termes of Zeale: wanted the modesty
To vrge the thing held as a ceremony:
Nerissa teaches me what to beleeue:
I'le die for't but some Woman had the Ring.
Bas. No by mine honor Madam, by my soule
No Woman had it, but a Ciuill Doctor,
Which did refuse three thousand Ducates of me
And begg'd the Ring, the which I did deny him,
And suffer'd him to go displeas'd away:
Euen he that had held vp the very life
Of my deere friend. What should I say sweet Lady?
I was enforc'd to send it after him:
I was beset with shame and courtesie,
My honor would not let ingratitude
So much besmeare it. Pardon me good Lady,
And by these blessed Candles of the night,
Had you been there, I think you would haue begd
The Ring of me, to giue the worthie Doctor?

Ner. Let [illegible] Doctor [illegible] come neere my house,
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

As you Like it.

Actus primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Orlando and Adam

Orlando

AS I remember Adam, it was vpon this fashion bequeathed me by will but poore a thousand Crownes, and as thou saydst charged my brother on his blessing to breed me well: and there begins my sadnesse. My brother Iaques he keepes at schoole, and report speakes goldenly of his profit: for my part, he keepes me rustically at home, or (to speake more properly) stayes me here at home vnkept: for call you that keeping for a gentleman of my birth, that differs not from the stalling of an Oxe? his horses are bred better, for besides that they are fayre with their feeding, they are taught their manage, and to that end Riders dearely hir'd: but I (his brother) gaine nothing vnder him but growth, for the which his Animals on his dunghils are as much bound to him as I. Besides this nothing that he so plentifully gives me, the something that nature gaue me, his countenance seemes to take from me: he lets me feede with his Hinds, barres me the place of a brother, and as much as in him lies, mines my gentry with my education. This is it Adam that grieues me, and the spirit of my Father, which I thinke is within me, begins to mutine against this seruitude: I will no longer endure it, though yet I know no wise remedy how to auoid it.

Enter Oliuer

Adam. Yonder comes my Master, your brother.

Orlan. Go apart Adam, and thou shalt hear how he will shake me vp.

Oli. Now Sir, what make you heere?

Orl. Nothing: I am not taught to make any thing.

Oli. What mar you then sir?

Orl. Marry sir, I am helping you to mar that which God made, a poore vnworthy brother of yours with idlenesse.

Oliuer Marry sir be better employed, and be naught a while.

Orlan. Shall I keepe your Hogs, and eat husks with them? what prodigall portion haue I spent, that I should come to such penury?

Oli Know you where you are sir?

Orl O sir, very well: here in your Orchard.

Oli. Know you before whom sir?

Orl. I better then him I am before knowes me. I know you are my eldest brother, and in the gentle condition of blood you should so know me: the courtesie of nations allowes you my better, in that you are the first borne, but the same tradition takes not away my blood, were there twenty brothers betwixt vs: I haue as much of my father in me, as you, albeit I confesse your coming before me is nearer to his reuerence.

Oli. What boy.

Orl. Come, come elder brother, you are too young in this.

Oli. Wilt thou lay hands on me villaine?

Orl. I am no villaine: I am the youngest sonne of Sir Rowland de Boys: he was my father, and he is thrice a villaine that says such a father begot villaines. Wert thou not my brother, I would not take this hand from thy throat, till this other had pull'd out thy tongue for saying so: thou hast rayled on thy selfe.

Adam. Sweet Masters be patient, for your fathers remembrance, be at accord.

Oli. Let me go I say.

Orl. I will not till I please: you shall heare me. My father charg'd you in his will to giue me good education: you haue trained me like a peasant, obscuring and hiding from me all gentleman like qualities: the spirit of my father growes strong in me, and I will no longer endure it: therefore allow me such exercises as may become a gentleman, or giue me the poore allottery my father left me by testament, with that I will go buy my fortunes.

Oli. And what will you do? I meane to trouble you, you shall haue some part of your will: I pray you leaue me.

Orl. I no further offend you, than becomes me for my good.

Oli. Get you with him, you old dogge.

Adam. Is old dogge my reward? Most true, I haue lost my teeth in your seruice. God be with my old master, he would not haue spoke such a word. Exeunt Orl. Adam.

Oli. Is it euen so, begin you to grow vpon me? I will physicke your rankenesse, and yet giue no thousand crownes neyther. Hollo Dennis.

Enter Dennis.

Den. Calls your worship?

Oli. Was not Charles the Duke's Wrastler heere to speake with me?

Den. So please you, he is heere at the doore, and importunes access to you.

Oli. Call him in: 'twill be a good way; and to morrow the wrastling is.

Enter Charles.

Cha. Good morrow to your worship.

Oli. Good Monsieur Charles: what's the new newes at the new Court?

Charles. There's no newes at the Court Sir, but the olde newes: that is, the old Duke is banished by his younger brother the new Duke, and three or foure louing

Lords haue put themselues into voluntary exile with him, whose lands and reuenues enrich the new Duke, therefore he giues them good cause to wander.

Ol. Can you tell if Rosalind the Dukes daughter bee banished with her father.

Cel. O my, for the Dukes daughter her Cosen so deere, that shee would haue followed her exile, or haue died to stay behind her. She is at the Court, and no lesse beloued of her Vncle, then his owne daughter, and neuer two Ladies loued as they doe.

Ol. Where will the Duke lie?

Cel. There is no question, for he hath banished him in the heart of Arden, where he hath abundance of his people about him, and where they haue lined and feasted at the Forrest, liue and thriue as merrily as they would heere at the Court, in the quiet of their consciences.

Ol. Well, you would then to morrow be with the new Duke.

Cel. Marry do I: and I came to acquaint you with a matter. I am in councell with my selfe, and but for the loue I haue to you, I would not haue reuealed it: but mine owne safety and you dearenesse inforceth me to tell you, that I am heire apparant to my Vncles Crowne, and that I shall vsurpe vpon him by force, vnlesse I get the loue of his people. Now my deere Cosen, I protest vnto thee, that I am cleere from any such purpose in my selfe, and my very priuate affections do leade me to seeke my fortune any where, rather then heere, where I looke to be lopped and hewed downe by my Father, if I can take his people in the meane time, and breede strength vnder his nose, as soone as I would thinke my selfe ready inough, which I doubt not, if I can by priuie practise vnderstand how affected the people are. And in that kinde of conflict, in which I hope to ouercome, they shall rather pittie then enuie me. For your sake, deere Cosen, there is more adoe, I would haue thought shame to haue entred with a minde so vnprouided: I pray you leade me your good minde, and my hand shall worke your right: or else count my purpose hereupon as forlorne.

Ol. Cosen, I feele your kindnesse, my Nature is euen setled as your owne, so that I could finde in my heart to disgrace my man and apparell, and to giue it vp to my Vncle, and the better enable my selfe for your sake, to goe seeke liuing in the Forrest, as to liue still in the Court, there is no true taste yeelded me. But these matters are farre vnfit for the time to come: I reioyce in your determinations, which indeede are verie maiestically imagined, and if effected as you expresse them, will bring you the heire of your owne feares, the enioying of your owne loue, and a liuely season, wherein you may recount what hard aduentures you vndertooke in the time of your youth: and I hope indeede, because I doe, that I take part with you. But to the manner of your watch to winne this Dukedome, wherein consisteth the tediousness and difficulty thereof, and what assistance I may lend you to the furtherance of the same, I doe hope to know before I consent to practise any thing against him: therefore haue patience sweet Cosen, let me see further into the matter with my iudgement, and when time shall serue to whet our wits, doe cut the heads of all that shall withstand vs: meane time, deere Cosen, let vs giue our selues such maidenly cheere, as the ignorance of our estate will affoord vs, and take on with a braue scorne the iniurie of Fortune. Are not these woods more free from perill, then the enuious Court? heere we are but in the feare of Lions, and heere we feele no more then necessitie makes vs suffer, which I thinke is a braue mate for proud Fortune. I will turne Orator to my complaint, if you will suffer me.

Cel. I would thou couldst out of my person moue delight in that kinde of exercise, but I pray thee tune thy wit to better matter, vse thy eloquence how to attaine gentle Siluius loue, and not how to driue away time by barren rehearsall: goe to, turne ouer the leaues of thy booke.

Ol. Nay, I drowne my selfe too deepe in the matter, I pray you what is the matter we are in doe you chuse to heare it?

Cel. Agreed, and I pray you tune your wit as well as you can in hearing it.

Ol. Marry this is from his Mistresse Siluius.

Cel. Alas the deere Foole, how coldly he complaines.

Ol. How know you that you neuer saw her?

Cel. Her loue is not the hare that I follow.

Ol. No, I answere you for that: for now shee is the ground for which the hare is hunted.

Cel. Then assure thy selfe, it is not a hare for me: me thinkes the Poet is very plaine.

Ol. Come, come, you are a foole and turne behauiour with obscuritie and keepe not the meane way.

Cel. Indeede I would not forced out of my curtesie, good Corin haue patience.

Ol. I pray you.

Cel. Proceed.

Ol. Sweet Siluius.

Cel. That's I: I pray you marke it well.

Ol. Sweet Siluius.

Cel. That will scarce make me weepe.

Ol. Peace I say.

Cel. No I will not cease.

Ol. Which of you two did Siluius first loue?

Cel. Who first asked him whether blacke or browne became him best.

Ol. Peace, peace.

Cel. Now I am mute, as the Question sits demurely on the Bench, till the Iudge determine.

Ol. Will you heare the Letter?

Cel. I am a iudge sworne to it, I pray you read it.

Ol. Sweet Siluius, &c.

Cel. Oh excellent phrase, by your faire sweet and your faire sweet, your faire vertue, I would haue her tell me her minde.

Ol. Cease your iesting, I pray you.

Cel. Thus Goddesses make me attentiue to our sports: stay.

Ol. Sweet Siluius.

Cel. Still I say.

Ol. Sweet Siluius.

Cel. Still I say.

Ol. Sweet Siluius.

Cel. Still I say

Ros. Where learne you that oath fooler?

Clo. Of a certaine Knight, that swore by his Honour they were good Pan-cakes, and swore by his Honour the Mustard was naught: Now I'le stand to it, the Pancakes were naught, and the Mustard was good, and yet was not the Knight forsworne.

Cel. How prooue you that in the great heape of your knowledge?

Ros. I marry, now vnmuzzle your wisedome.

Clo. Stand you both forth now: stroke your chinnes, and sweare by your beards that I am a knaue.

Cel. By our beards (if we had them) thou art.

Clo. By my knauerie (if I had it) then I were: but if you sweare by that that is not you: you are not forsworne: no more was this Knight (swearing by his Honour) for he neuer had any: or if he had, he had sworne it away, before euer he saw those Pancakes or that Mustard.

Cel. Prethee who is't that thou mean'st?

Clo. One that old Frederick your Father loues.

Ros. My Father loues him gentlie.

Cel. Enough: speake no more of him, you'le be whipt for taxation one of these dayes.

Clo. The more pittie that fooles may not speake wisely, what Wise men do foolishly.

Cel. By my troth thou saist true: for since the little wit that fooles haue was silenced, the little foolerie that wise men haue makes a great shew. Heere comes Monsieur Le Beau.

Enter Le Beau.

Ros. With his mouth full of newes.

Cel. Which he will put on vs as Pidgeons feed their young.

Ros. Then shall we be newes-cram'd.

Cel. All the better: we shall be the more Marketable. Bonjour Monsieur Le Beau, what's the newes?

Le Beau. Fayre Princesse,

[illegible]

Cel. Sport? of what colour?

Le Beau. What colour, Madame? How shall I answer you?

Ros. As wit, and fortune will.

Clo. Or as the Destinies decree.

Cel. Well said: that was laid on with a trowel.

Clo. Nay, if I keepe not my rankes.

Ros. Thou loosest thy old smell.

Le Beau. You amaze me Ladies: I would haue told you of good wrastling, which you haue lost the sight of.

Ros. Yet tell vs the manner of the Wrastling.

Le Beau. I will tell you the beginning: and if it please your Ladiships, you may see the end, for the best is yet to doe: and heere where you are, they are comming to perform it.

Cel. Well the beginning that is dead and buried.

Le Beau. There comes an old man and three sonnes.

Cel. I could match this beginning with an old tale.

Le Beau. Three proper young men, of excellent growth and presence.

Ros. With bils on their neckes: Be it known vnto all men by these presents.

Le Beau. The eldest of the three wrestled with Charles the Dukes Wrastler, which Charles in a moment threw him, and broke three of his ribbes, that there is little hope of life in him: So he seru'd the second, and so the third: Yonder they lie, the poore old man their Father, making such pittifull dole ouer them, that all the beholders take his part with weeping.

Ros. Alas.

Clo. But what is the sport Monsieur that the Ladies haue lost?

Le Beau. Why this that I speake of.

Clo. Thus men may grow wiser euery day. It is the first time that euer I heard breaking of ribbes was sport for Ladies.

Cel. Or I, I promise thee.

Ros. But is there any else longs to see this broken Musicke in his sides? Is there yet another dotes vpon ribbe-breaking? Shall we see this wrastling (Cosen)?

Le Beau. You must if you stay heere, for heere is the place appointed for the wrastling, and they are ready to performe it.

Cel. Yonder sure they are comming. Let vs now stay and see it.

Flourish. Enter Duke Frederick, Lord, Orlando, Charles, and Attendants.

Duke Fred. Come on, since the youth will not be entreated, his owne peril on his forwardnesse.

Ros. Is yonder the man?

Le Beau. Euen he, Madam.

Cel. Alas he is too young: yet he looks successfully.

Duke Fred. How now daughter and Cosen? Are you crept hither to see the wrastling?

Ros. Ay (so please your Grace).

Duke Fred. If you saw ought in the wrastler that may moue your fauour, or pittie, call him to you: for he hath my good will, and were he better knowne to vs, it may be I would giue you aduice to call off your louers, from this vnequall tryall: Poore youth, he end this aduenture, hath well deseru'd better at my hands.

Orl. I attend them with all respect and duetie.

Duke Fred. Why this is spoken like a stripling, happily he thinkes me the King he comes but to wrastle.

Ros. Speake to him Ladies, see if you can mooue him.

Cel. Call him hither good Monsieur Le Beau.

Duke Fred. Do so: I'le not be by.

Le Beau. Monsieur the challenger, the Princesses call for you.

Orl. I attend them with all respect and duetie.

Ros. Young man, haue you challenged Charles the Wrastler?

Orl. No faire Princesse: he is the stayner of my purpose, he comes but in as others do, to try with him the strength of his youth.

Cel. Young Gentleman, your spirits are too bold for your yeares: you haue seene cruell proofe of this mans strength: if you saw your selfe with your eyes, or knew your selfe with your iudgement, the feare of your aduenture would counsell you to a more equall enterprise. We pray you for your owne sake to embrace your owne safetie, and giue ouer this attempt.

Ros. Do, young Sir, your reputation shall not therefore be misprised: we will make it our suit to the Duke, that the wrastling might not go forward.

Orl. I beseech you, punish me not with your hard thoughts, wherein I confesse me much guiltie to deny so faire and excellent Ladies any thing. But let your faire eyes, and gentle wishes go with me to my triall: wherein if I be foyled, there is but one sham'd that was neuer gracious: if killed, but one dead that is willing to be so. I shall do my friends no wrong, for I haue none to lament me: the world no iniury, for in it I haue nothing: only in the world I fill vp a place, which may be better supplied, when I haue made it empty.

Ros. The little strength that I haue, I would it were with you.

Cel.

Cel A de mine to eeke out hers.
Ros. Fare you well praie heauen I be deceiu'd in you
Cel Your hearts desires be with you.
Cham Come, where is this yong gallant, that is so desirous to lie with his mother earth?
Orl Readie Sir, but his will hath in it a more modest working
Duke You shall try but one fall
Cha No, I warrant your Grace you shall not entreat him to a second, that haue so mightilie perswaded him from a first
Orl You meane to mocke me after: you should not haue mockt me before: but come your waies.
Ros Now Hercules, be thy speede yong man.
Cel. I would I were inuisible, to catch the strong fellow by the legge Wrastler.
Ros Oh excellent yong man
Cel If I had a thunderbolt in mine eie, I can tell who should downe Shout
Duke No more, no more.
Orl Yes I beseech your Grace, I am not yet well breathd
Duke. How do you (Cosen)?
Le Beu He cannot, cake my Lord
Duke Beare him away.
What is thy name yong man?
Orl Orlando my Liege, the yongest sonne of Sir Rowland de Boys.
Duke I would thou had'st been sonne to some man else,
The world esteem'd thy father honourable,
But I did finde him still mine enemie:
Thou should'st haue better pleas'd me with this deede,
Had'st thou descended from another house.
But fare thee well, thou art a gallant youth,
I would thou had'st told me of another Father
Exit Duke
Cel Were I my Father (Coze) would my deede
Orl I am more proud to be Sir Rowlands sonne,
His yongest sonne, and would not change that calling
To be adopted heire to Frederick
Ros My Father loued Sir Rowland as his soule
And all the world was of my Fathers mind
Had I before knowne this yong man his sonne,
I should haue giuen him teares vnto entreaties,
Ere he should thus haue ventured.
Cel. Gentle Cosen,
Let vs goe thanke him, and encourage him
My Fathers rough and enuious disposition
Sticks me at heart: Sir, you haue well deseru'd,
If you doe keepe your promises in loue,
But iustly as you haue exceeded all promise,
Your Mistris shall be happie
Ros. Gentleman,
Wearing this for me: one out of suites with fortune
That could giue more, but that her hand lacks meanes.
Shall we goe Coze?
Cel I pray you we shall take your leaue.
Orl With no lesse reuerence, than a blushing Cousin
Going to his mistris, greater than my wishes
Can lodge in thankes, I doe accept my better parts
Are all throwne downe, and that which here stands vp
Is but a quintine, a meere liuelesse blocke
Ros. He calls vs back: my pride fell with my fortunes,
Ile aske him what he would. Did you call Sir?
Sir, you haue wrastled well, and ouerthrowne
More than your enemies.
Cel Will you goe Coze?
Ros. Haue with you: fare you well Exit.

Orl What passion hangs these weights vpon my tooge?
I cannot speake to her, yet she vrg'd conference.

Enter Le Beu.

O poore Orlando! thou art ouerthrowne
Or Charles, or something weaker masters thee.
Le Beu. Good Sir, I do in friendship counsaile you
To leaue this place; Albeit you haue deseru'd
High commendation, true applause, and loue;
Yet such a now the Dukes condition,
That he misconsters all that you haue done.
The Duke is humorous, what he is indeede
More suites you to conceiue, than I to speake of
Orl. I thanke you Sir; and pray you tell me this,
Which of the two was daughter of the Duke,
That here was at the Wrastling?
Le Beu. Neither his daughter, if we iudge by manners,
But yet indeede the taller is his daughter,
The other is daughter to the banish'd Duke,
And here detain'd by her vsurping Vncle
To keepe his daughter company, whose loues
Are deerer than the natural bond of Sisters.
But I can tell you, that of late this Duke
Hath ta'ne displeasure gainst his gentle Neece,
Grounded vpon no other argument,
But that the people prayse her for her vertues,
And pittie her, for her good Fathers sake,
And on my life his malice gainst the Lady
Will sodainly breake forth. Sir, fare you well,
Hereafter in a better world than this,
I shall desire more loue and knowledge of you.
Orl I rest much bounden to you: fare you well
Thus must I from the smoake into the smother,
From tyrant Duke, vnto a tyrant Brother.
But heauenly Rosaline Exit

Scena Tertius.

Enter Celia and Rosaline

Cel Why Cosen, why Rosaline: Cupid haue mercie,
Not a word?
Ros. Not one to throw at a dog
Cel. No, thy words are too precious to be cast away vpon curs, throw some of them at me; come lame me with reasons.
Ros Then there were two Cosens laide vp, when the one should be lam'd with reasons, and the other mad without any.
Cel But is all this for your Father?
Ros. No, some of it is for my childes Father: Oh how full of briers is this working day world
Cel. They are but burs, Cosen, throwne vpon thee in holiday foolerie, if we walke not in the trodden paths our very petty coates will catch them
Ros I could shake them off my coate, these burs are in my heart
Cel Hem them away.
Ros. I would try if I could cry hem, and haue him.
Cel. Come, come, wrastle with thy affections
Ros. O they take the part of a better wrastler than my selfe.
Cel. O a good wish vpon you: you will trie in time

...adipig'd of a fall but turning these off's out of fetuice,
...ets talke in good earneſt. Is it poſſible on ſuch a ſo-
...daine, you ſhould fall into ſo ſtrong a liking with old Sr
Rowland's yongeſt ſonne?

Ros. The Duke my Father lou'd his Father dearely.

Cel. Doth it therefore enſue that you ſhould loue his Sonne dearely? By this kinde of chace I ſhould hate him, for my father hated his father dearely; yet I hate not Orlando.

Ros. No faith, hate him not for my ſake.

Cel. Why ſhould I doe ſo, I pray you, will you then

And in the greateſſe of my word you ſhe.

Exit Duke &c.

Cel. O my poore Roſaline, whether wilt thou goe

I charge thee be not thou more griev'd than I am.

Ros. I have more cauſe.

Ros. ...

Cel. ...

Ros. ...

Cel.

Then that of painted pompe? Are not these woods
More free from peril, then the enuious Court?
Heere feele we not the penaltie of Adam,
The seasons difference, as the Icie phange
And churlish chiding of the winters winde,
Which when it bites and blowes vpon my body
Euen till I shrinke with cold, I smile, and say
This is no flatterie: these are counsellors
That feelingly perswade me what I am.
Sweet are the vses of aduersitie
Which like the toad, ougly and venemous,
Weares yet a precious iewell in his head:
And this our life, exempt from publike haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, bookes in the running brookes,
Sermons in stones, and good in euery thing.
Amien. I would not change it. Happy is your Grace
That can translate the stubbornnesse of fortune
Into so quiet and so sweet a stile.
Duke Sen. Come, shall we go and kill vs venison?
And yet it irkes me the poore dapled fooles
Being natiue Burgers of this desert City,
Should in their owne confines with forked heads
Haue their round haunches gor'd.
1. Lord. Indeed my Lord
The melancholy Iaques grieues at that,
And in that kinde swears you do more vsurpe
Then doth your brother that hath banish'd you.
To day my Lord of Amiens and my selfe,
Did steale behinde him as he lay along
Vnder an oake whose antique roote peepes out
Vpon the brooke that brawles along this wood,
To the which place a poore sequestred Stag
That from the Hunters aime had tane a hurt,
Did come to languish: and indeed my Lord
The wretched animall heau'd forth such groanes
That their discharge did stretch his leatherne coat
Almost to bursting, and the big round teares
Coursed one another downe his innocent nose
In pitteous chase: and thus the hairy foole,
Much marked of the melancholy Iaques,
Stood on the extremest verge of the swift brooke,
Augmenting it with teares.
Duke Sen. But what said Iaques
Did he not moralize this spectacle?
1. Lord. O yes into a thousand similes.
First, for his weeping into the needlesse streame,
Poore Deere, quoth he, thou mak'st a testament
As worldlings do, giuing thy sum of more
To that which had too much: then being there alone,
Left and abandon'd of his veluet friends,
'Tis right, quoth he, thus misery doth part
The flux of company: anon a carelesse Heard
Full of the pasture, iumps along by him,
And neuer stayes to greet him: I quoth Iaques,
Sweep on you fat and greazie Citizens,
'Tis iust the fashion: wherefore do you looke
Vpon that poore and broken bankrupt there?
Thus most inuectiuely he pierceth through
The body of Country, Citie, Court,
Yea, and of this our life, swearing that we
Are meere vsurpers, tyrants, and what's worse
To fright the Animals and to kill them vp
In their assigned and natiue dwelling place.
Duke Sen. And did you leaue him in this contemplation?
2. Lord. We did my Lord, weeping and commenting Vpon the sobbing Deere.

Duke Sen. Show me the place,
I loue to cope him in these sullen fits,
For then he's full of matter.
1. Lord. Ile bring you to him straight. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Duke, with Lords.

Duke. Can it be possible that no man saw them?
It cannot be, some villaines of my Court
Are of consent and sufferance in this.
1. Lord. I cannot heare of any that did see her,
The Ladies her attendants of her chamber
Saw her abed, and in the morning early,
They found the bed vntreasur'd of their Mistris.
2. Lord. My Lord, the roynish Clowne, at whom so oft
Your Grace was wont to laugh is also missing.
Hisperia the Princesse Gentlewoman,
Confesses that she secretly ore-heard
Your daughter and her Cousin much commend
The parts and graces of the Wrastler
That did but lately foile the sinewy Charles,
And she believes wheresoe're they are gone
That youth is surely in their company.
Duke. Send out a present after them, I say,
And bring the stubborn Ladie and her fool,
For they are very well assembled
And presently repaire to me
(Do it instantly.) Come, light lights, man, come,
For it is monstrous night. Come, shall we go?
Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Orlando and Adam.

Orl. Who's there?
Ad. What my yong Master? O my gentle master,
O my sweet Master, O you memorie
Of old Sir Rowland! why what make you here?
Why are you virtuous? Why do people loue you?
And wherefore are you gentle, strong, and valiant?
Why would you be so fond to ouercome
The bonny Priser of the humorous Duke?
Your praise is come too swiftly home before you.
Know you not Master, to some kinde of men,
Their graces serue them but as enemies,
No more do yours: your virtues gentle Master
Are sanctified and holy traitors to you.
O what a world is this, when what is comely
Enuenoms him that bears it?
Why, what's the matter?
Ad. O vnhappy youth,
Come not within these doores: within this roofe
The enemie of all your graces liues
Your brother (no no brother, yet the sonne
(Yet not the sonne, I will not call him so)
Of him I was about to call his Father,
Hath heard your praises, and this night he meanes,
To burne the lodging where you vse to lye,
And you within it: if he faile of that

He

He will haue other meanes to cut you off,
I ouerheard him and his practises.
This is no place, this house is but a butcherie,
Abhorred it, leaue it, doe not enter it
Ad. Why what would'st thou haue me go?
Ad. No matter whether, so you come not here.
Oli. What, would'st thou haue me go & beg my food,
Or with a base and boistrous Sword enforce
A thecuish liuing on the common rode?
This I must do or know not what to do:
Yet this I will not do, do how I can,
I rather will subiect me to the malice
Of a diuelish brother as dishonest brother.
Ad. But do not you haue fine hundred Crownes,
That your deere father left you when he died?
Why then I doe forbid you be my brother Nurse.
Why then I doe forbid you be my brother Nurse.
When seruice should in my old limbs lie lame,
And vnregarded age in corners throwne,
Take that, and he that doth the Rauens feede,
Yea prouidently caters for the Sparrow,
Be comfort to my age, heere is the gold,
All this I giue you, let me be your seruant,
Though I looke old, yet I am strong and lustie,
For in my youth I neuer did apply
Hot, and rebellious liquors in my blood,
Nor did not with vnbashful forehead woe,
The meanes of weakenesse and debilitie,
Therefore my age is as a lusty winter,
Frost, but kindly: let me go with you,
I'le do the seruice of a younger man
In all your businesse and necessities
Oli. O good old man, how well in thee appeares
The constant seruice of the antique world,
When seruice sweate for duetie not for meede
Thou art not for the fashion of these times,
Where none will sweate but for promotion,
And hauing that do choake their seruice vp,
Euen with the hauing, it is not so with thee
But poore old man thou prun'st a rotten tree,
That cannot so much as a blossome yeelde,
In lieu of all thy paines and husbandrie,
But come thy ways, wee'le go along together,
And ere we haue thy youthfull wages spent,
Wee'le light vpon some setled low content.
Ad. Master go on and I will follow thee
To the last gaspe with truth and loyaltie,
From seuen the yeeres, till now almost fourescore
Here liued I, but now liue here no more
At seuenteene yeeres many their fortunes seeke
But at fourescore, it is too late a weeke.
Yet fortune cannot recompence me better
Then to die well, and not my Masters debter Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Enter Rosaline for Ganimed, Celia for Aliena, and Clowne, alias Touchstone.

Ros. O Iupiter, how merry are my spirits?
Clo I care not for my spirits, if my legges were not wearie.
Ros I could finde in my heart to disgrace my mans apparell, and to cry like a woman: but I must comfort the weaker vessell, as doublet and hose ought to show itselfe coragious to petty-coate; therefore courage, good Aliena.
Cel. I pray you beare with me, I cannot go no further
Clo. For my part, I had rather beare with you, then beare you: yet I should beare no crosse if I did beare you, for I thinke you haue no money in your purse.
Ros. Well, this is the Forrest of Arden.
Clo I, now am I in Arden: the more foole I, when I was at home I was in a better place, but trauellers must be content.

Enter Corin and Siluius

Ros Ay, be so good Touchstone: Looke you, who comes here, a yong man and an old in solemne talke
Cor That is the way to make her scorne you still.
Sil O Corin, that thou knew'st how I do loue her.
Cor I partly guesse, for I haue lou'd ere now
Sil No Corin, being old, thou canst not guesse,
Though in thy youth thou was't as true a louer
As ever sighed vpon a midnight pillow
But if thy loue were euer like to mine,
As sure I thinke did neuer man so loue,
How many actions most ridiculous
Hast thou been drawne to by thy fantasie?
Cor. Into a thousand that I haue forgotten
Sil. O thou didst then neuer loue so heartily,
If thou remember not the slightest folly
That euer loue did make thee run into,
Thou hast not loued
Or if thou hast not broke from company,
Abruptly as my passion now makes me,
Thou hast not loued
O Phebe, Phebe, Phebe Exit
Ros. Alas poore Shepheard, searching of thy wound,
I haue by hard aduenture found mine owne.
Clo. And I mine. I remember when I was in loue, I broke my sword vpon a stone, and bid him take that for comming a night to Iane Smile: and I remember the kissing of her batlet, and the cow's dugs that her pretty chopt hands had milked: and I remember the wooing of a peascod instead of her, from whom I took two cods, and giuing her them again, said with weeping teares, weare these for my sake. We that are true Louers, runne into strange capers: but as all is mortall in nature, so is all nature in loue mortall in folly.
Ros. Thou speak'st wiser than thou art ware of
Clo. Nay I shall nere be ware of mine owne wit, till I breake my shins against it.
Ros. Iesu Iane, this Shepherds passion,
Is much vpon my fashion
Clo And mine, but it growes something stale with me.
Cel. I pray you, one of you question yond man,
If he for gold will giue vs any foode,
I faint almost to death.
Clo Holla, you Clowne.
Ros. Peace foole, he's not thy kinsman
Cor Who calls?
Clo. Your betters Sir.
Cor Else are they very wretched.

Ros Peace

Ros. Peace I say. good euen to your friend.
Cor. And to you gentle Sir, and to you all.
Ros. I prethee Shepheard, if that loue or gold
Can in this deserst place buy entertainment,
Bring vs where we may rest our selues, and feed
Here's a young maid with trauaile much oppressed,
And faints for lacke of food.
Cor. Faire Sir, I pitie her.
And wish for her sake more than for mine owne,
My fortunes were more able to relieue her.
But I am shepheard to another man
And do not shere the fleeces that I graze
My master is of churlish disposition,
And little recks to find the way to heauen
By doing deeds of hospitality.
Besides his Coate, his flockes, and bounds of feede
Are now on sale, and at our sheep-coate now
By reason of his absence there is nothing
That you will feed on: but what is, come see,
And in my voice most welcome shall you be.
Ros. What is he that shall buy his flocke and pasture?
Cor. That young Swaine that you saw heere but ere-while,
That little cares for buying any thing.
Ros. I pray thee gentle friend, how do you call him,
Buy you the Cottage pasture and the flocke,
And thou shalt haue to pay for it of vs.
Cel. And we will mend thy wages.
Take pitty of our sighes and wearie steps,
Wake my mistresse.
Cor. Assuredly the thing is to be sold:
Go with me, if you like vpon report
The soile, the profit, and this kinde of life,
I will your very faithfull Feeder be,
And buy it with your Gold right soberly. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Amyens, Iaques, & others.

Song.
Who doth ambition shunne,
And loues to liue i'the Sunne
Seeking the food he eates,
And pleas'd with what he gets.
Come hither, come hither, come hither,
Heere shall he see,
No enemie,
But winter and rough weather.

Iaq. More, more, I prethee more.
Amy. It will make you melancholly Monsieur Iaques
Iaq. I thanke it: More, I prethee more.
I can suck melancholly out of a song,
As a Weazel sucks egges. More, I prethee more.
Amy. My voice is ragged, I know I cannot please you.
Iaq. I do not desire you to please me,
I do desire you to sing:
Come, more, another stanzo: Cal you 'em stanzo's?
Amy. What you will Monsieur Iaques
Iaq. Nay, I care not for their names, they owe mee nothing. Wil you sing?
Amy. More at your request, then to please my selfe.
Iaq. Well then, if euer I thanke any man, Ile thanke you: but that they call complement is like th'encounter of two dog-Apes. And when a man thankes me heartily, me thinkes I haue giuen him a penie and he renders me the beggerly thankes. Come sing and you that will not hold your tongues.
Amy. Wel, Ile end the song. Sirs, couer the while, the Duke will drinke vnder this tree; he hath bin all this day to looke you.
Iaq. And I haue bin all this day to auoid him:
He is too disputeable for my companie:
I thinke of as many matters as he, but I giue
Heauen thankes, and make no boast of them.
Come, warble, come

Song. All together heere.
Who doth ambition shunne,
And loues to liue i'the Sunne
Seeking the food he eates,
And pleas'd with what he gets.
Come hither, come hither, come hither,
Heere shall he see,
No enemie,
But winter and rough weather.

Iaq. Ile giue you a verse to this note,
That I made yesterday in despight of my Inuention.
Amy. And I pray you.
Amy. Thus it goes.
If it do come to passe, that any man turne Asse
Leauing his wealth and ease,
A stubborne will to please,
Ducdame, ducdame, ducdame
Heere shall he see, gross fooles as he,
And if he will come to me.
Amy. What's that Ducdame
Iaq. 'Tis a Greeke inuocation, to call fooles into a circle. Ile go sleepe if I can: if I cannot, Ile raile against all the first borne of Egypt.
Amy. And I'le go seeke the Duke,
His banket is prepar'd. Exeunt

Scena Sexta.

Enter Orlando, & Adam.

Adam. Deere Master, I can go no further:
O I die for food. Heere lie I downe,
And measure out my graue. Farwell kinde master.
Orl. Why how now Adam? No greater heart in thee
Liue a little, comfort a little, cheere thy selfe a little.
If this vncouth Forrest yeeld any thing sauage,
I will either be food for it, or bring it for food to thee
Thy conceite is nearer death, then thy powers.
For my sake be comfortable, hold death a while
At the armes end. I will heere be with thee presently,
And if I bring thee not something to eate,
I will giue thee leaue to die: but if thou dieſt
Before I come, thou art a mocker of my labor.
Well said, thou look'st cheerely,
And Ile be with thee quickly: yet thou lieſt
In the bleake aire. Come, I will beare thee
To some shelter, and thou shalt not die
For lacke of a dinner,
If there liue any thing in this Desert.
Cheerely good Adam. Exeunt

Scena

Scena Septima.

Enter Duke Sen. & Lord, like Out-lawes

Du.Sen. I thinke he be transform'd into a beast,
For I can no where finde him, like a man.

1.Lord. My Lord, he is but even now gone hence,
Heere was he merry, hearing of a Song

Du.Sen. If the compact of jarres grow Musicall,
We shall haue shortly discord in the Spheares
Go seeke him, tell him I would speake with him.

Enter Iaques.

1.Lord. He saues my labor by his owne approach.

Du.Sen. Why how now Monsieur, what a life is this
That your poore friends must woe your company,
What, you looke merrily

Iaq. A Foole, a foole: I met a foole i'th Forrest,
A motley Foole (a miserable world!)
As I do liue by foode, I met a foole,
Who laid him downe, and basked him in the Sun,
And rail'd on Lady Fortune in good termes,
In good set termes, and yet a motley foole.
Good morrow foole (quoth I.) no Sir, quoth he,
Call me not foole, till heauen hath sent me fortune,
And then he drew a dial from his poake,
And looking on it, with lacke-lustre eye,
Sayes, very wisely, it is ten a clocke.
Thus we may see (quoth he) how the world wagges:
'Tis but an houre agoe, since it was nine,
And after one houre more, 'twill be eleuen,
And so from houre to houre, we ripe, and ripe,
And then from houre to houre, we rot, and rot,
And thereby hangs a tale. When I did heare
The motley Foole, thus morall on the time,
My Lungs began to crow like Chanticleere,
That Fooles should be so deepe contemplatiue:
And I did laugh, sans intermission
An houre by his diall. Oh noble foole,
A worthy foole: Motley's the onely weare.

Du.Sen. What foole is this?

Iaq. O worthie Foole: One that hath bin a Courtier
And sayes, if Ladies be but yong, and faire,
They haue the gift to know it: and in his braine,
Which is as dric as the remainder bisket
After a voyage. He hath strange places cram'd
With obseruation, the which he vents
In mangled formes. O that I were a foole,
I am ambitious for a motley coat.

Du.Sen. Thou shalt haue one.

Iaq. It is my onely suite,
Prouided that you weed your better iudgements
Of a opinion that growes rankein them,
That I am wise. I must haue liberty
Withall, as large a Charter as the winde,
To blow on whom I please, for so fooles haue.
And they that are most gauled with my folly,
They most must laugh: And why sir must they so?
The why is plaine, as way to Parish Church.
He, that a Foole doth very wisely hit,
Doth very foolishly, although he smart
Seeme senselesse of the bob. If not,
The Wise-mans folly is anathomiz'd
Euen by the squandring glances of the foole.
Inuest me in my motley. Giue me leaue
To speake my minde, and I will through and through
Cleanse the foule bodie of th'infected world,
If they will patiently receiue my medicine.

Du.Sen. Fie on thee. I can tell what thou wouldst do

Iaq. What, for a Counter, would I do, but good?

Du.Sen. Most mischeeuous foule sin, in chiding sin.
For thou thy selfe hast bene a Libertine,
As sensuall as the brutish sting it selfe,
And all th'imbossed sores, and headed euils,
That thou with license of free foot hast caught,
Would'st thou disgorge into the generall world.

Iaq. Why who cries out on pride,
That can therein taxe any priuate party.
Doth it not flow as hugely as the Sea,
Till that the weary very meanes do ebbe.
What woman in the City do I name,
When that I say the City woman bears
The cost of Princes on vnworthy shoulders?
Who can come in, and say that I meane her,
When such a one as she, such is her neighbor?
Or what is he of basest function,
That sayes his brauerie is not on my cost,
Thinking that I meane him, but therein suites
His folly to the mettle of my speech,
There then, how then, what then, let me see wherein
My tongue hath wrong'd him: if it do him right,
Then he hath wrong'd himselfe: if he be free,
Why then my taxing like a wild-goose flies
Vnclaim'd of any man. But who come here?

Enter Orlando.

Orl. Forbeare, and eate no more.

Iaq. Why I haue eate none yet.

Orl. Nor shalt not, till necessity be serued.

Iaq. Of what kinde should this Cocke come of?

Du.Sen. Art thou thus bolden'd man by thy distresse?
Or else a rude despiser of good manners,
That in ciuility thou seem'st so empty?

Orl. You touch'd my vaine of late, the thorny point
Of bare distresse, hath ta'ne from me the shew
Of smooth ciuility: yet am I inland bred,
And know some nurture. But forbeare, I say,
He dies that touches any of this fruite,
Till I, and my affaires are answered.

Iaq. And you will not be answer'd with reason,
I must dye.

Du.Sen. What would you haue?
Your gentlenesse shall force, more then your force
Moue vs to gentlenesse.

Orl. I almost die for food, and let me haue it

Du.Sen. Sit downe and feed, & welcom to our table

Orl. Speake you so gently? Pardon me I pray you,
I thought that all things had bin sauage heere,
And therefore put I on the countenance
Of sterne commandment. But what ere you are
That in this desert inaccessible,
Vnder the shade of melancholy boughes,
Loose, and neglect the creeping houres of time:
If euer you haue look'd on better dayes
If euer bene where bels haue knoll'd to Church:
If euer sate at any good mans feast:
If euer from your eye-lids wip'd a teare,
And know what 'tis to pitie, and be pitied:
Let gentlenesse my strong enforcement be,
In the which hope, I blush, and hide my Sword

Du. Sen. True is it, that we haue seene better dayes,
And haue with holy bell bin knowld to Church,
And sat at good mens feasts, and wip'd our eies
Of drops, that sacred pity hath engendred:
And therefore bit you downe in gentlenesse,
And take vpon command, what helpe we haue
That to your wanting may be ministred.
Orl. Then but forbeare your food a little while.
Whiles (like a Doe) I go to finde my Fawne,
And giue it food. There is an old poore man,
Who after me, hath many a weary steppe
Limpt in pure loue: till he be first suffic'd,
Oppresst with two weake euils, age, and hunger,
I will not touch a bit.
Duke Sen. Go finde him out,
And we will nothing waste till you returne.
Orl. I thanke ye, and be blest for your good comfort.
Du Sen. Thou seest, we are not all alone vnhappie:
This wide and vniuersall Theater
Presents more woefull Pageants then the Sceane
Wherein we play in.
Ia. All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women, merely Players,
They haue their Exits and their Entrances,
And one man in his time playes many parts,
His Acts being seuen ages. At first the Infant,
Mewling, and puking in the Nurses armes.
Then, the whining Schoole-boy with his Satchell
And shining morning face, creeping like snaile
Vnwillingly to schoole. And then the Louer,
Sighing like Furnace, with a woefull ballad
Made to his Mistresse eye-brow. Then, a Soldier,
Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the Pard,
Iealous in honor, sodaine, and quicke in quarrell,
Seeking the bubble Reputation
Euen in the Cannons mouth. And then, the Iustice
In faire round belly, with good Capon lin'd,
With eyes seuere, and beard of formall cut,
Full of wise sawes and modern instances,
And so he playes his part. The sixt age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd Pantalone,
With spectacles on nose, and pouch on side,
His youthfull hose well sau'd, a world too wide,
For his shrunke shanke, and his big manly voice,
Turning againe toward childish treble, pipes,
And whistles in his sound. Last Scene of all,
That ends this strange euentfull History,
Is second childishnesse, and meere oblivion,
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans every thing.

Enter Orlando with Adam.

Du Sen. We come: set downe your venerable burthen, and refresh vs.
Orl. I thanke you most for him.
Ad. So had you need,
I scarce can speake to thanke you for my selfe.
Du Sen. We come, all too. I will not trouble you,
As yet to question you about your fortunes:
Giue vs some Musicke, and good Cozen, sing.

Song

Blow, blow, thou winter winde,
Thou art not so vnkinde, as mans ingratitude
Thy tooth is not so keene, because thou art not seene,
although thy breath be rude.
Heigh ho, sing heigh ho, vnto the greene holly,
Most friendship, is feyning; most louing, meere folly
Then heigh ho, the holly,
This Life is most iolly.

Freize, freize, thou bitter skie that dost not bight so nigh
as benefits forgot.
Though thou the waters warpe, thy sting is not so sharpe,
as friend remembred not
Heigh ho, sing, &c.

Duke Sen. If that you were the good Sir Rowlands son,
As you haue whisper'd faithfully you were,
And as mine eye doth his effigies witnesse,
Most truly limn'd, and liuing in your face,
Be truly welcome hither: I am the Duke
That lou'd your Father, the residue of your fortune,
Go to my Cane, and tell me. Good old man,
Thou art right welcome, as thy master is:
Support him by the arme: giue me your hand,
And let me all your fortunes vnderstand. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Duke, Lords, & Oliuer.

Du. Not see him since? Sir, sir, that cannot be
But were I not the better part made mercie,
I should not seeke an absent argument
Of my reuenge, thou present: but looke to it,
Finde out thy brother wheresoere he is,
Seeke him with Candle: bring him dead, or liuing
Within this twelue-month, or turne thou no more
To seeke a liuing in our Territorie.
Thy Lands, and all things that thou dost call thine,
Worth seizure, do we seize into our hands,
Till thou can'st quit thee by thy brothers mouth,
Of what we think against thee.
Oli. O that your Highnesse knew my heart in this:
I neuer lou'd my brother in my life.
Duke. More villaine thou. Well pusht him out of dores
And all his officers, and kept his meanes
Make an extent vpon his house and Lands:
Do this expedient y, and turne him going. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Orlando.

Orl. Hang there my verse, in witnesse of my loue,
And thou three crowned Queene of night suruey,
With thy chaste eye, from thy pale sphere aboue
Thy Huntresse name, that my full life doth sway.
O Rosalind, these Trees shall be my Bookes,
And in their barkes my thoughts Ile charracter,
That euerie eye, which in this Forrest lookes,
Shall see thy vertue witnest euery where.
Run, run Orlando, carue on euery Tree,
The faire, the chaste, and vnexpressiue shee. Exit.

Enter Corin & Clowne.

Co. And how like you this shepherds life Mr Touchstone?
Clo.

Clow. Truely Shepheard, in respect of it selfe, it is a good life; but in respect that it is a Shepheards life, it is naught. In respect that it is solitary, I like it verie well: but in respect that it is private, it is a very vild life. Now in respect it is in the fields, it pleaseth mee well: but in respect it is not in the Court, it is tedious. As it is a spare life (looke you) it fits my humor well: but as there is no more plenty in it, it goes much against my stomacke. Has't any Philosophie in thee shepheard?

Cor. No more, but that I know the more one sickens, the worse at ease he is: and that hee that wants money, meanes, and content, is without three good friends: That the property of raine is to wet, and fire to burne: That good pasture makes fat sheepe: and that a great cause of the night, is lacke of the Sunne: That hee that hath learned no wit by Nature, nor Art, may complaine of good breeding, or comes of a very dull kindred.

Clo. Such a one is a natural Philosopher. Was euer in Court, Shepheard?

Cor. No truely.

Clo. Then thou art damn'd.

Cor. Nay, I hope.

Clo. Truly thou art damn'd, like an ill roasted Egge, all on one side.

Cor. For not being at Court? your reason.

Clo. Why, if thou never was't at Court, thou never saw'st good manners: if thou never saw'st good manners, then thy manners must be wicked, and wickednes is sin, and sinne is damnation. Thou art in a parlous state shepheard.

Cor. Not a whit Touchstone, those that are good manners at the Court, are as ridiculous in the Country, as the behauiour of the Countrie is most mockeable at the Court. You told me you salute not at the Court, but kisse your hands: that courtesie would be vncleanly, if Courtiers were shepheards.

Clo. Instance, briefly, come, instance.

Cor. Why we are still handling our Ewes, and their Fels you know are greasie.

Clo. Why do not your Courtiers hands sweate? and is not the greasie fat of a Mutton, as wholesome as the sweat of a man? Shallow, shallow. A better instance I say. Come.

Cor. Besides, our hands are hard.

Clo. Your lips will feele them the sooner. Shallow again. A more sounder instance, come.

Cor. And they are often tarred ouer with the surgery of our sheepe: and would you haue vs kisse Tarre? The Courtiers hands are perfumed with Civet.

Clo. Most shallow man! Thou wormes meate in respect of a good peece of flesh indeed! learne of the wise and perpend. Ciuet is of a baser birth than Tarre, the very vncleanly fluxe of a Cat. Mend the instance Shepheard.

Cor. You haue too Courtly a wit for me, Ile rest.

Clo. Wilt thou rest damn'd? God helpe thee shallow man: God make incision in thee, thou art raw.

Cor. Sir, I am a true Labourer, I earne that I eate: get that I weare; owe no man hate, enuie no mans happinesse: glad of other mens good, content with my harme: and the greatest of my pride, is to see my Ewes graze, & my Lambes sucke.

Clo. That is another simple sinne in you, to bring the Ewes and the Rammes together, and to offer to get your liuing by the copulation of Cattle; to be bawd to a Bell-wether, and to betray a shee-Lambe of a twelue-month to a crooked-pated olde Cuckoldly Ramme, out of all reasonable match. If thou be'st not damn'd for this, the diuel himselfe will haue no shepherds, I cannot see else how thou should'st scape.

Cor. Here comes yong Mr Ganimed, my new Mistresses Brother.

Enter Rosalind.

Ros. From the east to western Inde,
no iewel is like Rosalinde,
Her worth being mounted on the winde,
through all the world beares Rosalinde.
All the pictures fairest Lines,
are but blacke to Rosalinde
Let no face be kept in mind
but the fayre of Rosalinde.

Clo. I remember, the last time I eate my dinner, and supper, and sleept my selfe: it is the right Ganimed, or Rosalinde that hath worne his yesterday face out in the Sunne.

Ros. Out Foole.

Cor. For a taste.
If a Hart doe lacke a Hinde,
Let him seeke out Rosalinde.
If the Cat will after kinde,
so be sure will Rosalinde.
Wintred garments must be linde
so must slender Rosalinde.
They that reap must sheafe and binde,
then to cart with Rosalinde.
Sweetest nut hath sowrest rinde,
such a nut is Rosalinde.
He that sweetest rose will finde,
must finde loue prickes, and Rosalinde.

This is the verie false gallop of Verses, why do you infect your selfe with them?

Ros. Peace you dull Asse, I haue found them on a tree.

Cor. Truely the tree yeelds bad fruite.

Ros. I'le graffe it with you, and then I shall graffe it with a Medler: then it will be the earliest fruite i'th'Countrey: for you'le be rotten ere you be halfe ripe, and that's the right vertue of the Medler.

Clo. You haue said: but whether wisely or no, let the Forrest iudge.

Enter Celia with a writing.

Ros. Peace here comes my sister reading, stand aside.

Cel. Why should this Desert be,
for it is vnpeopled? No:
Tongues I'le hang on euery tree,
that shall ciuill sayings show:
Some how braue shall be this man
that I shall write this my good mind,
That the treasoning Loue can,
in kinder harts truths store shall find.
Some of modest smiles,
are all the fashion of these times,
And vttered but by faire virginals,
that their loues rime be found:
But vpon the fayre Lines,
of my Rosalindes white browes,
Will I Rosalinde write,
teaching all that reade, to know
The quintessence of euery sprite, heauen would in little show.
Therefore heauen Nature charg'd,
that one body should be fill'd
With all Graces wide enlarg'd, nature presently distill'd

Helens cheeke, but not her heart,
Cleopatras Maiestie
Atalanta's better part,
sad Lucrecia's Modestie
Thus Rosalinde of many parts,
by Heauen's synode was deuis'd,
Of many faces, eyes, and hearts,
to haue the touches deerest pris'd
Heauen would that she these gifts should haue, and I to liue and die her Slaue

Ros. O most gentle Iupiter, what tedious homilie of Loue haue you wearied your parishioners withall, and neuer cride, haue patience good people

Cel. How now? Backe friends? Shepheard go off a little. Go with him sirrah.

Clo. Come Shepheard, let vs make an honourable retreat, though not with bagge and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage. Exit.

Cel. Didst thou heare these verses?

Ros. O yes, I heard them all, and more too, for some of them had in them more feete then the Verses would beare.

Cel. That's no matter, the feet might beare Verses.

Ros. I, but the feet were lame, and could not beare themselues without the verse, and therefore stood lamely in the verse.

Cel. But didst thou heare without wondring, how thy name should be hanged and carued vpon these trees?

Ros. I was seuen of the nine dayes out of the wonder, before you came: for look here what I found on a Palme tree: I was neuer so be-rimed since Pythagoras time that I was an Irish Rat, which I can hardly remember.

Cel. Trow you who hath done this?

Ros. Is it a man?

Cel. And a chaine that you once wore about his neck. Change you colour?

Ros. I prethee who?

Cel. O Lord, Lord, it is a hard matter for friends to meete, but Mountaines may be remoued with Earthquakes and so encounter.

Ros. Nay, but who is it?

Cel. Is it possible?

Ros. Nay, I prethee now, with most petticoate verie-ce, tell me who it is.

Cel. O wonderfull, wonderfull, and most wonderfull wonderfull, and after that, out of all hooping.

Ros. Good my complexion! dost thou thinke, though I am caparisond like a man, I haue a doublet and hose in my disposition? One inch of delay more is a South-sea of discouery. I prethee tell me who it is quickly, and speake apace. I would thou could stammer, that thou might powre this concealed matter out of thy mouth, as Wine comes out of a narrow-mouthed bottle: either too much at once, or none at all. I prethee take the Corke out of thy mouth, that I may drinke thy tydings.

Cel. So you may put a man in your belly.

Ros. Is he of Gods making? What manner of man? Is his head worth a hat? Or his chin worth a beard?

Cel. Nay he hath but a little beard.

Ros. Why, God will send more, if the man will be thankfull: let me stay the growth of his beard, if thou delay me the knowledge of his chin.

Cel. It is young Orlando, that tript vp the Wrastlers heeles, and your heart, both in an instant

Ros. Nay, but the diuell take mocking: speake sadde brow, and true maid.

Cel. I'faith (Coz) 'tis he.

Ros. Orlando?

Cel. Orlando.

Ros. Alas the day, what shall I do with my doublet & hose? What did he when thou saw'st him? What sayde he? How look'd he? Wherein went he? What makes he heere? Did he aske for me? Where remaines he? How parted he with thee? And when shalt thou see him againe? Answer me in one word.

Cel. You must borrow me Gargantuas mouth first: 'tis a Word too great for any mouth of this Ages size, to say I and no, to these particulars, is more then to answer in a Catechisme.

Ros. But doth he know that I am in this Forrest, and in mans apparell? Looks he as freshly, as he did the day he Wrastled?

Cel. It is as easie to count Atomies as to resolue the propositions of a Louer: but take a taste of my finding him, and relish it with good obseruance. I found him vnder a tree like a drop'd Acorne.

Ros. It may well be cal'd Loues tree, when it droppes forth fruite.

Cel. Giue me audience, good Madam.

Ros. Proceed.

Cel. There lay he stretch'd along like a wounded knight.

Ros. Though it be pittie to see such a sight, it well becomes the ground.

Cel. Cry holla, to the tongue, I prethee: it curuetters vnseasonably. He was furnish'd like a Hunter.

Ros. O ominous, he comes to kill my Hart.

Cel. I would sing my song without a burthen, thou bring'st me out of tune.

Ros. Do you not know I am a woman, when I thinke, I must speake: sweet, say on.

Enter Orlando & Iaques.

Cel. You bring me out. Soft, comes he not heere?

Ros. 'Tis he, slinke by, and note him.

Iaq. I thanke you for your company, but good faith I had as liefe haue beene my selfe alone.

Orl. And so had I: but yet for fashion sake I thanke you too, for your societie.

Iaq. God buy you, let's meet as little as we can.

Orl. I do desire we may be better strangers.

Iaq. I pray you marre no more trees with Writing Loue-Rimes in their barkes.

Orl. I pray you marre no more of my verses with reading them ill-fauouredly.

Iaq. Rosalinde is your loues name? Orl. Yes, just.

Iaq. I do not like her name.

Orl. There was no thought of pleasing you when she was christened.

Iaq. What stature is she of?

Orl. Just as high as my heart.

Iaq. You are full of pretty answers: haue you not been acquainted with goldsmiths wiues, & coned them out of rings?

Orl. Not so: but I answer you right painted cloth, from whence you haue studied your questions.

Iaq. You haue a nimble wit: I thinke 'twas made of Atalanta's heeles. Will you sit downe with me, and we two, will rayle against our Mistris the world, and all our misery.

Orl. I will chide no breather in the world but my selfe, against against whom I know most faults

Iaq. The worst fault you haue, is to be in loue.

Orl. 'Tis a fault I will not change, for your best vertue: I am wearie of you.

Iaq. By my troth, I was seeking for a Foole, when I found you.

Orl. He is drown'd in the brooke, looke but in, and you shall see him.

Iaq. There I shal see mine owne figure.

Orl. Which I take to be either a foole, or a Cipher.

Iaq. Ile tarrie no longer with you, farewell good Signior Loue.

Orl. I am glad of your departure: Adieu good Monsieur Melancholly.

Ros. I will speake to him like a saucie Lacky, and vnder that habit play the knaue with him, do you heare Forester.

Orl. Verie wel, what would you? (ster.

Ros. I pray you, what is't a clocke?

Orl. You should aske me what time o'day: there's no clocke in the Forrest.

Ros. Then there is no true Louer in the Forrest, else sighing euerie minute, and groaning euerie houre would detect the slow feet of time as wel as a clocke.

Orl. And why not the swift foote of time? Had not that bin as proper?

Ros. By no meanes sir; Time trauels in diuers paces, with diuers persons: Ile tel you who Time ambles withall, who Time trots withal, who Time gallops withal, and who he stands still withall.

Orl. I prethee, who doth he trot withal?

Ros. Marry he trots hard with a yong maid, betweene the contract of her marriage, and the day it is solemnized: if the interim be but a seuennight, Time pases as hard, that it seemes the length of seuen yeare.

Orl. Who ambles Time withal?

Ros. With a Priest that lacks Latine, and a rich man that hath not the Gowt: for the one sleepes easily because he cannot study, and the other lines merrily, because he feeles no paine: the one lacking the burthen of leane and wasteful Learning; the other knowing no burthen of heauie tedious penurie. These Time ambles withal.

Orl. Who doth he gallop withal?

Ros. With a theefe to the gallowes: for though hee go as softly as foot can fall, he thinkes himselfe too soone there.

Orl. Who staies it still withal?

Ros. With Lawiers in the vacation: for they sleepe betweene Terme and Terme, and then they perceiue not how time moues.

Orl. Where dwel you pretty youth?

Ros. With this Shepheardesse my sister: here in the skirts of the Forrest, like fringe vpon a petticoat.

Orl. Are you native of this place?

Ros. As the Conie that you see dwel where shee is kindled.

Orl. Your accent is something finer, then you could purchase in so removed a dwelling.

Ros. I have bin told so of many: but indeed, an olde religious Vncle of mine taught me to speake, who was in his youth an inland man, one that knew Courtship too well: for there he fell in loue. I have heard him read many Lectors against it, and I thanke God, I am not a Woman, to be touch'd with so many giddie offences as hee hath generally tax'd their whole sex withal.

Orl. Can you remember any of the principall euils, that he laid to the charge of women?

Ros. There were none principal, they were all like one another, as halfe pence are, euerie one faulte seeming monstrous, till his fellow-faulte came to match it.

Orl. I prethee recount some of them.

Ros. No: I will not cast away my physick, but on those that are sicke. There is a man haunts the Forrest, that abuses our yong plants with carying Rosalinde on their barkes, hangs Odes vpon Hauthornes, and Elegies on brambles; all (forsooth) deifying the name of Rosalinde. If I could meet that Fancie-monger, I would giue him some good counsel, for he seemes to haue the Quotidian of Loue vpon him.

Orl. I am he that is so Loue-shak'd, I pray you tel me your remedie.

Ros. There is none of my Vncles markes vpon you: he taught me how to know a man in loue: in which cage of rushes, I am sure you are not prisoner.

Orl. What were his markes?

Ros. A leane cheeke: which you haue not: a blew eye and sunken: which you haue not: an vnquestionable spirit: which you haue not: a beard neglected: which you haue not: (but I pardon you for that, for simply your hauing in beard is a yonger brothers reuenew.) Then your hose should be ungartered, your bonnet vnbanded, your sleeue vnbuttoned, your shoe vntide, and euerie thing about you, demonstrating a carelesse desolation: but you are no such man, you are rather point deuice in your accoustrements, as louing your selfe, than seeming the Louer of any other. (I Loue.

Orl. Fayre youth, I would I could make thee beleeue

Ros. Me beleeue it? You may as soone make her that you Loue beleeue it, which I warrant she is apter to doe, than to confesse she does: that is one of the points in the which women still giue the lie to their consciences. But in good sooth, are you he that hangs the verses on the Trees, wherein Rosalinde is so admired?

Orl. I sweare to thee youth, by the white hand of Rosalinde, I am that he, that vnfortunate he.

Ros. But are you so much in loue as your rimes speake?

Orl. Neither rime nor reason can expresse how much.

Ros. Loue is meere madnesse, I tell you, deserues as well a darke house, and a whip, as madmen do: and the reason why they are not so punished and cured, is that the Lunacie is so ordinarie, that the whippers are in loue too. Yet I profest curing it by counsel.

Orl. Did you euer cure any so?

Ros. Yes one, and in this manner. He was to imagine me his Loue, his Mistresse: and I set him euerie day to woe me. At which time would I, being but a moonish youth, grieue, be effeminate, changeable, longing, and liking, proud, fantastical, apish, shallow, inconstant, full of teares, full of smiles; for euery passion something, and for no passion truly any thing, as boyes and women are for the most part cattle of this colour: would now like him, now loath him: then entertaine him, then forswear him: now weepe for him, then spurne him: that I drawe my Suitor from his mad humor of loue, to a liuely humor of madnesse: which was to forsweare the full stream of the world, and to liue in a nooke merely Monastick. And thus I cured him, and this way will I take vpon me to wash your Liuer as cleane as a sound sheepes heart, that there shall not be one spot of Loue in't.

Orl. I would not be cured youth.

Ros. I would cure you, if you would but call me Rosalind, and come euerie day to my Cote, and woe me.

Orlan. Now by the faith of my loue, I will ; Tel me where it is

Ref. Go with me to it, and Ile shew it you: and by the way, you shal tel me, where in the Forrest you liue: Wil you go?

Orl. With all my heart, good youth

Ref Nay, you must call me Rosaind Come sister, will you go? Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Clowne, Audrey, & Iaques.

Clo Come apace good Audrey, I wil fetch vp your Goates, Audrey. and how Audrey am I the man yet? Doth my simple feature content you?

Aud. Your features, Lord warrant vs what features?

Clo. I am here come with thee, and thy Goats, as the most capricious Poet, honest Ouid was among the Gothes.

Iaq. O knowledge ill-inhabited, worse than Iouue in a thatch'd house!

Clo. When a mans verses cannot be vnderstood, nor a mans good wit seconded with the forward child, vnderstanding, it strikes a man more dead then a great reckoning in a little roome. Truly, I would the Gods had made thee poeticall.

Aud. I do not know what Poet cal's, is it honest in deed and word: is it a true thing?

Clo No truely: for the truest poetrie is the most faining, and Louers are giuen to Poetrie: and what they sweare in Poetrie, may be said as Louers, they do feigne.

Aud. Do you wish then that the Gods had made me Poeticall?

Clow I do truly: for thou swear'st to me thou art honest: Now if thou wert a Poet, I might haue some hope thou didst feigne

Aud. Would you not haue me honest?

Clo. No truly, vnlesse thou were hard-fauour'd: for honestie coupled to beautie, is to haue honie a sawce to Sugar

Iaq. A materiall foole

Aud. Well, I am not faire, and therefore I pray the Gods make me honest

Clo. Truly, and to cast away honestie vppon a foule slut, were to put good meate into an vncleane dish.

Aud. I am not a slut, though I thanke the Goddes I am foule.

Clo. Well, prayed be the Gods, for thy foulnesse, sluttishnesse may come hereafter. But be it, as it may bee, I wil marrie thee: and to that end, I haue bin with Sir Oliuer Mar-text, the Vicar of the next village, who hath promis'd to meete me in this place of the Forrest, and to couple vs

Iaq I would faine see this meeting.

Aud Well, the Gods giue vs ioy

Clo. Amen. A man may if he were of a fearfull heart, stagger in this attempt: for here we haue no Temple but the wood, no assembly but horne-beasts. But what though? Courage. As hornes are odious, they are necessarie. It is said, many a man knowes no end of his goods: right. Many a man has good Hornes, and knows no end of them. Well, that is the dowrie of his wife, 'tis none of his owne getting; hornes, euen to poore men alone: No, no, the noblest Deere hath them as huge as the Rascall: Is the single man therefore blessed? No, as a wall'd Towne is more worthier then a village, so is the forehead of a married man, more honourable then the bare brow of a Batchellor: and by how much defence is better then no skill, by so much is a horne more precious then, to want.

Enter Sir Oliuer Mar-text.

Heere comes Sir Oliuer: Sir Oliuer Mar-text you are wel met. Will you dispatch vs heere vnder this tree, or shal we go with you to your Chappell?

Ol. Is there none heere to giue the woman?

Clo. I wil not take her on guift of any man.

Ol. Truly she must be giuen, or the marriage is not lawfull.

Iaq. Proceed, proceede: Ile giue her.

Clo. Good euen good M^r^ what ye cal't: how do you Sir, you are verie well met: goddild you for your last companie, I am verie glad to see you, euen a toy in hand heere Sir: Nay, pray be couer'd

Iaq. Wil you be married, Motley?

Clo. As the Oxe hath his bow sir, the horse his curb, and the Falcon her bels, so man hath his desires, and as Pigeons bill, so wedlocke would be nibling

Iaq And wil you (being a man of your breeding) be married vnder a bush like a begger? Get you to church, and haue a good Priest that can tel you what marriage is, this fellow wil but ioyne you together, as they ioyne Wainscot, then one of you wil proue a shrunke pannell and like greene timber, warpe, warpe

Clo. I am not in the minde, but I were better to be married of him then of another, for he is not like to marrie me wel: and not being wel married, it wil be a good excuse for me hereafter, to leaue my wife

Iaq Go thou with mee,
And let me counsel thee

O. Come sweete Audrey,
We must be married, or we must liue in bawdrey:
Farewel good M^r^ Oliuer: Not O sweet Oliuer, O braue Oliuer leaue me not behind thee. But wind away, begone I say I will not to wedding with thee.

Ol. 'Tis no matter; Ne're a fantasticall knaue of them all shal flout me out of my calling. Exeunt

Scæna Quarta.

Enter Rosalind & Celia.

Ros Neuer talke to me, I wil weepe.

Cel. Do I prethee, but yet haue the grace to consider, that teares do not become a man.

Ros. But haue I not cause to weepe?

Cel. As good cause as one would desire,
Therefore weepe.

Ros. His very haire
Is of the dissembling colour

Cel. Something browner then Iudasses:
Marrie his kisses are Iudasses owne children

Ros. I'faith his haire is of a good colour.

Cel. An excellent colour.
Your Chessenut was euer the onely colour:

Ros. And his kissing is as ful of sanctitie,
As the touch of holy bread.

Cel.

Cel. Hee hath bought a paire of caſt lips of Diana; a Nun of winters ſiſterhood kiſſes not more religiouſlie, the very yce of chaſtity is in them.

Roſa. But why did hee ſweare hee would come this morning, and comes not?

Cel. Nay certainly there is no truth in him.

Roſ. Doe you thinke ſo?

Cel. Yes, I thinke he is not a picke purſe, nor a horſe-ſtealer, but for his verity in loue, I doe thinke him as concaue as a couered goblet, or a Worme-eaten nut.

Roſ. Not true in loue?

Cel. Yes, when he is in, but I thinke he is not in

Roſ. You haue heard him ſweare downright he was.

Cel. Was, is not is. beſides, the oath of Louer is no ſtronger then the word of a Lapiter, they are both the confirmer of falſe reckonings, he attends here in the foreſt on the Duke your father.

Roſ. I met the Duke yeſterday, and had much queſtion with him: he aſkt me of what parentage I was; I told him of as good as he, ſo he laugh'd and let me goe. But what talke wee of Fathers, when there is ſuch a man as Orlando?

Cel. O that's a braue man, hee writes braue verſes, ſpeakes braue words, ſweares braue oathes, and breakes them bravely, quite trauers athwart the heart of his louer, as a puiſny Tilter, that ſpurs his horſe but on one ſide, breakes his ſtaffe like a noble gooſe; but all's braue that youth mounts, and folly guides. who comes here?

Enter Corin.

Corin. Miſtreſſe and Maſter, you haue oft enquired After the Shepheard that complain'd of loue, Who you ſaw ſitting by me on the Turph, Praiſing the proud diſdainfull Shepherdeſſe That was his Miſtreſſe.

Cel. Well: and what of him?

Cor. If you will ſee a pageant truely plaid Betweene the pale complexion of true Loue, And the red glowe of ſcorne and prowd diſdaine, Goe hence a little, and I ſhall conduct you If you will marke it.

Roſ. O come, let vs remoue, The ſight of Louers feedeth thoſe in loue: Bring vs to this ſight, and you ſhall ſay Ile proue a buſie actor in their play. Exeunt

Scena Quinta.

Enter Siluius and Phebe.

Sil. Sweet Phebe doe not ſcorne me, do not Phebe Say that you loue me not, but ſay not ſo In bitternеſſe; the common executioner Whoſe heart th'accuſtom'd ſight of death makes hard Falls not the axe vpon the humbled neck, But firſt begs pardon: will you ſterner be Then he that dies and liues by bloody drops?

Enter Roſalind, Celia, and Corin.

Phe. I would not be thy executioner, I flye thee, for I would not injure thee: Thou tell'ſt me there is murder in mine eye, 'Tis pretty ſure, and very probable,
That eyes that are the frailſt, and ſoftеſt things, Who ſhut their coward gates on atomyes, Should be cal'd tyrants, butchers, murtherers. Now I doe frowne on thee with all my heart, And if mine eyes can wound, now let them kill thee: Now counterfeit to ſwound, why now fall downe, Or if thou can't not, oh for ſhame, for ſhame, Lye not, to ſay mine eyes are murtherers Now ſhew the wound mine eye hath made in thee, Scratch thee but with a pin, and there remaines Some ſcarre of it. Leane vpon a raſh The Cicatrice and capable impreſſure Thy palme ſome moment keepes: but now mine eyes Which I haue darted at thee, hurt thee not, Nor I am ſure there is no force in eyes That can doe hurt.

Sil. O deere Phebe, If euer (as that euer may be neere) You meet in ſome freſh cheeke the power of fancie, Then ſhall you know the wounds inuiſible That Loues keene arrowes make.

Phe. But till that time Come not thou neere me: and when that time comes, Afflict me with thy mockes, pity me not, As till that time I ſhall not pity thee.

Roſ. And why I pray you? who might be your mother That you inſult, exult, and all at once Ouer the wretched? what though you haue no beauty As by my faith I ſee no more in you Then without Candle may goe darke to bed: Muſt you be therefore proud and pitileſſe? Why what meanes this? why do you looke on me? I ſee no more in you then in the ordinary Of Natures ſale-worke: 'odds my little life, I thinke ſhe meanes to tangle my eyes too: No faith proud Miſtreſſe, hope not after it, 'Tis not your inkie browes, your blacke ſilke haire Your bugle eye-balls, nor your cheeke of creame That can entame my ſpirits to your worſhip. You foolish Shepheard, wherefore do you follow her Like foggy South, puffing with wind and rayne, You are a thouſand times a properer man Then the a woman. 'Tis ſuch fooles as you That makes the world full of ill-fauour'd children: 'Tis not her glaſſe, but you that flatters her, And out of you ſhe ſees her ſelfe more proper Then any of her lineaments can ſhow her. But Miſtreſſe, know your ſelfe: downe on your knees And thanke heauen, faſting, for a good mans loue, For I muſt tell you friendly in your eare, Sell when you can, you are not for all markets Cry the man mercy, loue him, take his offer, Foule is moſt foule being foule to be a ſcoffer. So take her to thee Shepheard, fare you well.

Phe. Sweet youth, I pray you chide a yere together, I had rather wooe you to take her, then man woode.

Roſ. Hee's falne in loue with your foulneſſe, & ſhee'l Fall in loue with my anger. If it be ſo, as faſt As ſhe anſweres thee with frowning lookes, Ile ſauce Her with bitter words: why looke you ſo vpon me?

Phe. For no ill will I beare you.

Roſ. I pray you do not fall in loue with mee, For I am falſer then vowes made in wine: Beſides, I like you not: if you will know my houſe, 'Tis at the tuft of Oliues, here hard by: Will you goe Siſter? Shepheard ply her hard.

Come

Come Sister: Shepheardesse, looke on him better,
And be not proud, though all the world could see,
None could be so abus'd in sight as hee.
Come, to our flocke. Exit

Phe. Dead Shepheard, now I find thy saw of might,
Who ever lov'd that lov'd not at first sight?

Sil. Sweet Phebe

Phe. Ha? what saist thou Siluius?

Sil. Sweet Phebe pitty me

Phe. Why I am sorry for thee gentle Siluius

Sil. Why? ever toward vs, reuele what be it.
If you do sorrow at my griefe in loue,
By giuing loue your sorrow, and my griefe
Were both extermin'd.

Phe. Thou hast my loue, is not that neighbourly?

Sil. I would haue you.

Phe. Why that were couetousnesse:
Siluius the time was that I hated thee;
And yet it is not, that I beare thee loue,
But since that thou can'st talke of loue so well,
Thy company, which erst was irkesome to me
I will endure; and Ile employ thee too:
But doe not looke for further recompence
Then thine owne gladnesse, that thou art employd.

Sil. So holy, and so perfect is my loue,
And I in such a pouerty of grace,
That I shall thinke it a most plenteous crop
To gleane the broken eares after the man
That the maine haruest reapes: loose now and then
A scattered smile, and that Ile liue vpon.

Phe. Know'st thou the youth that spoke to me ere-
Sil. Not very well, but I haue met him oft,
And he hath bought the Cottage and the bounds
That the old Carlot once was Master of.

Phe. Thinke not I loue him, though I aske for him,
'Tis but a peeuish boy, yet he talkes well,
But what care I for words? yet words do well
When he that speakes them pleases those that heare.
It is a pretty youth, not very pretty,
But sure hee's proud, and yet his pride becomes him;
Hee'll make a proper man: the best thing in him
Is his complexion: and faster then his tongue
Did make offence, his eye did heale it vp.
He is not very tall, yet for his yeares hee's tall,
His leg is but so, so, and yet 'tis well:
There was a pretty redenesse in his lip,
A little riper, and more lusty red
Then that mixt in his cheeke: 'twas iust the difference
Betwixt the constant red, and mingled Damaske.
There be some women Siluius, had they markt him
In parcels as I did, would haue gone neere
To fall in loue with him: but for my part
I loue him not, nor hate him not: and yet
Haue more cause to hate him then to loue him.
For what had he to doe to chide at me?
He said mine eyes were black, and my haire blacke,
And now I am remembred, scorn'd at me:
I marueile why I answer'd not againe:
But that's all one: omittance is no quittance.
I'le write to him a very taunting Letter,
And thou shalt beare it: wilt thou Siluius?

Sil. Phebe, with all my heart.

Phe. Ile write it straight:
The matter's in my head, and in my heart,
I will be bitter with him, and passing short,
Go with me Siluius. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Rosalind, and Celia, and Iaques

Iaq. I prethee, pretty youth, let me better acquainted with thee.

Ros. They say you are a melancholly fellow.

Iaq. I am so: I doe loue it better then laughing.

Ros. Those that are in extremity of either, are abhominable fellowes, and betray themselues to euery moderne censure, worse then drunkards.

Iaq. Why, 'tis good to be sad and say nothing.

Ros. Why then 'tis good to be a post.

Iaq. I haue neither the Schollers melancholy, which is emulation: nor the Musitians, which is fantasticall; nor the Courtiers, which is proud: nor the Souldiers, which is ambitious: nor the Lawyers, which is politick; nor the Ladies, which is nice: nor the Louers, which is all these: but it is a melancholy of mine owne, compounded of many simples, extracted from many obiects, and indeed the sundrie contemplation of my trauels, in which by often rumination, wraps me in a most humorous sadnesse.

Ros. A Traueller! by my faith you haue great reason to be sad: I feare you haue sold your owne Lands, to see other mens; then to haue seene much, and to haue nothing, is to haue rich eyes and poore hands.

Iaq. Yes, I haue gained my experience.

Enter Orlando

Ros. And your experience makes you sad: I had rather haue a foole to make me merry, then experience to make me sad, and to trauaile for it too.

Orl. Good day, and happinesse, deere Rosalind

Iaq. Nay then God buy you, and you talke in blanke verse.

Ros. Farewell Monsieur Traueller: looke you lispe, and weare strange suites; disable all the benefits of your owne Country: be out of loue with your natiuity, and almost chide God for making you that countenance you are; or I will scarce thinke you haue swam in a Gondola. Why how now Orlando, where haue you beene all this while? you a louer? and you serue me such another trick, neuer come in my sight more.

Orl. My faire Rosalind, I come within an houre of my promise.

Ros. Breake an houres promise in loue? hee that will diuide a minute into a thousand parts, and breake but a part of the thousand part of a minute in the affaire of loue, it may be said of him that Cupid hath clapt him o'th' shoulder, but Ile warrant him heart hole.

Orl. Pardon me deere Rosalind

Ros. Nay, and you be so tardie, come no more in my sight, I had as liefe be woo'd of a Snaile.

Orl. Of a Snaile?

Ros. I, of a Snaile: for though he comes slowly, hee carries his house on his head; a better iointure I thinke then you make a woman: besides, he brings his destinie with him.

Orl. What's that?

Ros. Why hornes: which such as you are faine to be beholding to your wiues for: but he comes armed in his fortune, and preuents the slander of his wife.

Orl. Vertue

Orl. Vertue is no horne-maker: and my Rosalind is vertuous.

Ros. And I am your Rosalind.

Cel. It pleases him to call you so: but he hath a Rosalind of a better leere then you.

Ros. Come, woo me, woo mee: for now I am in a holy-day humor, and like enough to consent: What would you say to me now, and I were your verie, verie Rosalind?

Orl. I would kisse before I spoke.

Ros. Nay, you were better speake first, and when you were gravel'd, for lacke of matter, you might take occasion to kisse: verie good Orators when they are out, they will spit, and for lovers, lacking (God warne us) matter, the cleanliest shift is to kisse.

Orl. How if the kisse be denide?

Ros. Then she puts you to entreatie, and there begins new matter.

Orl. Who could be out, being before his beloued Mistris?

Ros. Marrie that should you if I were your Mistris, or I should thinke my honestie ranker then my wit.

Orl. What, of my suite?

Ros. Not out of your apparell, and yet out of your suite.
Am not I your Rosalind?

Orl. I take some joy to say you are, because I would be talking of her.

Ros. Well, in her person, I say I will not have you.

Orl. Then in mine owne person, I die.

Ros. No faith, die by Attorney. The poore world is almost six thousand yeeres old, and in all this time there was not any man died in his owne person (videlicet) in a loue cause: Troilus had his braines dasht out with a Grecian club, yet he did what he could to die before, and he is one of the patternes of loue. Leander, he would have liu'd manie a faire yeere though Hero had turn'd Nun, if it had not bin for a hot Midsomer-night, for (good youth) he went but forth to wash him in the Hellespont, and being taken with the cramp, was drown'd, and the foolish Chronoclers of that age, found it was Hero of Cettos. But these are all lies, men have died from time to time, and worme have eaten them, but not for loue.

Orl. I would not have my right Rosalind of this mind, for I protest her frowne might kill me.

Ros. By this hand, it will not kill a flie. But come, now I will be your Rosalind in a more comming-on disposition: and aske me what you will, I will grant it.

Orl. Then loue me Rosalind.

Ros. Yes faith will I, fridaies and saterdaies, and all.

Orl. And wilt thou have me?

Ros. I, and twentie such.

Orl. What sayest thou?

Ros. Are you not good?

Orl. I hope so.

Rosalind. Why then, can one desire too much of a good thing? Come sister, you shall be the Priest, and marrie vs. Give me your hand Orlando: What doe you say sister?

Orl. Pray thee marrie vs.

Cel. I cannot say the words.

Ros. You must begin, will you Orlando.

Cel. Goe too: will you Orlando, have to wife this Rosalind?

Orl. I will.

Ros. I, but when?

Orl. Why now, as fast as she can marrie vs.

Ros. Then you must say, I take thee Rosalind for wife.

Orl. I take thee Rosalind for wife.

Ros. I might aske you for your Commission, But I doe take thee Orlando for my husband: there a girle goes before the Priest, and certainely a Womans thought runs before her actions.

Orl. So do all thoughts, they are wing'd.

Ros. Now tell me how long you would have her, after you have possest her?

Orl. For ever, and a day.

Ros. Say a day, without the ever. no, no Orlando, men are April when they woe, December when they wed: Maides are May when they are maides, but the sky changes when they are wives. I will be more jealous of thee, then a Barbary cocke-pidgeon over his hen, more clamorous then a Parrat against raine, more new-fangled then an ape, more giddy in my desires, then a monkey: I will weepe for nothing, like Diana in the fountaine, & I will do that when you are disposed to be merry: I will laugh like a Hyen, and that when thou art inclined to sleepe.

Orl. But will my Rosalind doe so?

Ros. By my life, she will do as I doe.

Orl. O but she is wise.

Ros. Or else she could not have the wit to doe this: the wiser, the waywarder: make the doores upon a womans wit, and it will out at the casement: shut that, and twill out at the key-hole: stop that, 'twill flie with the smoke out at the chimney.

Orl. A man that had a wife with such a wit, he might say, wit whether wilt?

Ros. Nay, you might keepe that check for it, till you met your wives wit going to your neighbours bed.

Orl. And what wit could wit have, to excuse that?

Ros. Marrie to say, she came to seeke you there. You shall never take her without her answer, unlesse you take her without her tongue. O that woman that cannot make her fault her husbands occasion, let her never nurse her childe herselfe, for she will breed it like a foole.

Orl. For these two houres Rosalinde, I will leave thee.

Ros. Alas, deere loue, I cannot lacke thee two houres.

Orl. I must attend the Duke at dinner, by two a clock I will be with thee againe.

Ros. I, go your waies, go your waies. I knew what you would prove, my friends told me as much, and I thought no lesse: that flattering tongue of yours won me: 'tis but one cast away, and so come death. two o' clocke is your howre.

Orl. I sweet Rosalind.

Ros. By my troth, and in good earnest, and so God mend me, and by all pretty oathes that are not dangerous, if you breake one iot of your promise or come one minute behinde your howre, I will thinke you the most patheticall breake-promise, and the most hollow lover, and the most vnworthy of her you call Rosalinde, that may be chosen out of the grosse band of the vnfaithfull: therefore beware my censure, and keep your promise.

Orl. With no lesse religion, then if thou were indeed my Rosalind: so adieu.

Ros. Well, Time is the olde Iustice that examines all such offenders, and let time try. Adieu. Exit

Cel. You have simply misus'd our sexe in your loue-prate:

grace: we must haue your doublet and hose pluckt ouer your head, and shew the world what the bird hath done to her owne neast.

Ros. O coz, coz, coz: my pretty little coz, that thou didst know how many fathome deepe I am in loue: but it cannot bee sounded: my affection hath an vnknowne bottome, like the Bay of Portugall.

Cel. Or rather bottomlesse, that as fast as you poure affection in, it runs out.

Ros. No, that same wicked Bastard of Venus, that was begot of thought, conceiu'd of spleene, and borne of madnesse, that blinde rascally boy, that abuses every ones eyes, because his owne are out, let him bee iudge, how deepe I am in loue: ile tell thee Aliena I cannot be out of sight of Orlando: Ile goe finde a shadow, and sigh till he come.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Iaques and Lords, Forresters.

Iaq. Which is he that killed the Deare?

Lord. Sir, it was I.

Iaq. Let's present him to the Duke like a Romane Conqueror, and it would doe well to set the Deares hornes vpon his head, for a branch of victory; haue you no song Forrester for this purpose?

Lord. Yes Sir.

Iaq. Sing it: 'tis no matter how it bee in tune, so it make noyse enough.

Musicke, Song.

What shall he haue that kild the Deare?
His Leather skin, and hornes to weare:
Then sing him home, the rest shall beare this burthen;
Take thou no scorne to weare the horne,
It was a crest ere thou was't borne,
Thy father's father wore it,
And thy father bore it,
The horne, the horne, the lusty horne,
Is not a thing to laugh to scorne. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Ros. How say you now, is it not past two a clock? And here much Orlando.

Cel. I warrant you, with pure loue, & troubled brain,

Enter Siluius.

He hath ta'ne his bow and arrowes, and is gone forth To sleepe: look who comes heere.

Sil. My errand is to you, faire youth,
My gentle Phebe, did bid me giue you this:
I know not the contents, but as I guesse
By the sterne brow, and waspish action
Which she did vse, as she was writing of it,
It beares an angry tenure; pardon me,
I am but as a guiltlesse messenger.

Ros. Patience her selfe would startle at this letter,
And play the swaggerer, beare this, beare all.
Shee saies I am not faire, that I lacke manners,
She calls me proud, and that she could not loue me
Were man as rare as Phenix: 'od's my will,
Her loue is not the Hare that I doe hunt,
Why writes she so to me? well Shepheard, well,
This is a Letter of your owne deuice.

Sil. No, I protest, I know not the contents,
Phebe did write it.

Ros. Come, come, you are a foole,
And turn'd into the extremity of loue
I saw her hand, she has a leatherne hand,
A freestone coloured hand: I verily did thinke
That her old gloues were on, but twas her hands.
She has a huswifes hand, but that's no matter.
I say she neuer did inuent this letter,
This is a mans inuention, and his hand.

Sil. Sure it is hers.

Ros. Why, tis a boysterous and a cruell stile,
A stile for challengers: why, she defies me,
Like Turke to Christian: womens gentle braine
Could not drop forth such giant rude inuention,
Such Ethiop words, blacker in their effect
Then in their countenance: will you heare the letter?

Sil. So please you, for I neuer heard it yet;
Yet heard too much of Phebes cruelty.

Ros. She Phebes me: marke how the tyrant writes.
Read. Art thou god, to Shepherd turn'd?
That a maidens heart hath burn'd
Can a woman raile thus?

Sil. Call you this railing?

Ros. Read. Why, thy godhead laid apart,
Warr'st thou with a womans heart?
Did you euer heare such railing?
Whiles the eye of man did woo me,
That could do no vengeance to me
Meaning me a beast.
If the scorne of your bright eine
Haue power to raise such loue in mine,
Alacke, in me, what strange effect
Would they worke in milder aspect?
Whiles you chid me, I did loue,
How then might your prayers moue?
He that brings this loue to thee
Little knowes this Loue in me:
And by him seale vp thy mind,
Whether that thy youth and kinde
Will the faithfull offer take
Of me, and all that I can make,
Or else by him my loue deny,
And then Ile studie how to die.

Sil. Call you this railing?

Cel. Alas poore Shepheard.

Ros. Doe you pitty him? No, he deserues no pitty: wilt thou loue such a woman? what to make, and an instrument, and play false straines vpon thee? not to be endur'd. Well, goe your way to her; (for I see Loue hath made thee a tame snake) and say this to her; That if she loue me, I charge her to loue thee: if she will not, I will neuer haue her, vnlesse thou intreat for her: if you bee a true louer hence, and not a word; for here comes more company. Exit Sil.

Enter Oliuer.

Oli. Good morrow, faire ones: pray you, (if you know) Where in the Purlews of this Forrest, stands

A sheep-cote, fenc'd about with Olive-trees.
Cel. West of this place, down in the neighbor bottom
The ranke of Oziers, by the murmuring streame
Left on your right hand, brings you to the place:
But at this howre, the house doth keepe it selfe,
There's none within.
Oli. If that an eye may profit by a tongue,
Then should I know you by description,
Such garments, and such yeeres: the boy is fayre,
Of semall fauour, and bestowes himselfe
Like a ripe sister: the woman low
And browner then her brother: are not you
The owner of the house I did enquire for?
Cel. It is no boast, being ask'd, to say we are.
Oli. Orlando doth commend him to you both,
And to that youth he calls his Rosalind,
He sends this bloudy napkin, are you he?
Ros. I am: what must we understand by this?
Oli. Some of my shame, if you will know of me
What man I am, and how, and why, and where
This handkercher was stain'd.
Cel. I pray you tell it.
Oli. When last the yong Orlando parted from you,
He left a promise to returne againe
Within an houre, and pacing through the Forrest,
Chewing the food of sweet and bitter fancie,
Lo what befell: he threw his eye aside,
And marke what obiect did present it selfe
Vnder an old Oake, whose bows were moss'd with age
And high top, bald with drie antiquitie
A wretched ragged man, ore-growne with haire
Lay sleeping on his back, about his necke
A greene and guilded snake had wreath'd it selfe,
Who with her head nimble in threats approach'd
The opening of his mouth: but suddenly
Seeing Orlando, it vnlink'd it selfe,
And with indented glides, did slip away
Into a bush, vnder which bushes shade
A Lyonesse, with vdders all drawne dry,
Lay couching head on ground, with catlike watch
When that the sleeping man should stirre, for 'tis
The royall disposition of that beast
To prey on nothing, that doth seeme as dead
This seene, Orlando did approach the man,
And found it was his brother his eldest brother.
Cel. O I have heard him speake of that same brother,
And he did render him the most vnnaturall
That liu'd amongst men.
Oli. And well he might so doe,
For well I know he was vnnaturall.
Ros. But to Orlando: did he leaue him there
Food to the suck'd and hungry Lyonesse?
Oli. Twice did he turne his backe, and purpos'd so:
But kindnesse, nobler euer then reuenge,
And Nature stronger then his iust occasion,
Made him giue battell to the Lyonesse
Who quickly fell before him, in which hurtling
From miserable slumber I awaked.
Cel. Are you his brother?
Ros. Was't you he resc'u'd?
Cel. Was't you that did so oft contriue to kill him?
Oli. 'Twas I: but 'tis not I: I doe not shame
To tell you what I was, since my conuersion
So sweetely tastes, being the thing I am.
Ros. But for the bloody napkin?
Oli. By and by:
When from the first to last betwixt vs two,
Teares our recountments had most kindely bath'd,
As how I came into that Desert place
I briefe, he led me to the gentle Duke,
Who gaue me fresh aray, and entertainment,
Committing me vnto my brothers loue,
Who led me instantly vnto his Caue,
There strip't himselfe, and heere vpon his arme
The Lyonesse had torne some flesh away,
Which all this while had bled, and now he fainted,
And cried in fainting vpon Rosalinde.
Briefe, I recouer'd him, bound vp his wound,
And after some small space, being strong at heart,
He sent me hither, stranger as I am
To tell this story, that you might excuse
His broken promise, and to giue this napkin
Died in this bloud, vnto the Shepheard youth,
That he in sport doth call his Rosalind.
Cel. Why how now Ganimed, sweet Ganimed.
Oli. Many will swoon when they do look on bloud.
Cel. There is more in it: Cosen Ganimed.
Oli. Looke, he recouers.
Ros. I would I were at home
Cel. We'll lead you thither:
I pray you will you take him by the arme.
Oli. Be of good cheere youth: you a man?
You lacke a mans heart.
Ros. I doe to, I confesse it.
Ah, sirra, a body would thinke this was well counterfeited. I pray you tell your brother how well I counterfeited: heigh ho.
Oli. This was not counterfeit, there is too great testimony in your complexion, that it was a passion of earnest.
Ros. Counterfeit I assure you.
Oli. Well then, take a good heart, and counterfeit to be a man.
Ros. So I doe: but yfaith, I should haue beene a woman by right.
Cel. Come you looke paler and paler: pray you draw homewards: good sir goe with vs.
Oli. That will I, for I must beare answere backe
How you excuse my brother, Rosalind.
Ros. I shall deuise something: but I pray you commend my counterfeiting to him. Will you goe?
Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Clowne and Audrie.

Clow. We shall finde a time Audrie, patience gentle Audrie.
Aud. Faith the Priest was good enough, for all the olde gentlemans saying.
Clow. A most wicked Sir Oliuer, Audrie, a most vile Mar-text. But Audrie, there is a youth heere in the Forrest layes claime to you.
Aud. I, I know who 'tis: he hath no interest in me in the world: here comes the man you meane.

Enter William.

Clo. It is meat and drinke to me to see a Clowne, by my my troth, we that haue good wits, haue much to answer for: we shall be flouting: we cannot hold.

Will. Good eu'n Audrey.

Aud. God ye good eu'n William.

Will. And good eu'n to you Sir.

Clo. Good eu'n gentle friend. Couer thy head, couer thy head: Nay prethee bee couer'd. How olde are you Friend?

Will. Fiue and twentie Sir.

Clo. A ripe age: Is thy name William?

Will. William, sir.

Clo. A faire name. Was't borne i'th Forrest heere?

Will. I sir, I thanke God.

Clo. Thanke God: A good answer: Art rich?

Will. Faith sir, so, so.

Clo. So, so, is good, very good, very excellent good and yet it is not, it is but so, so: Art thou wise?

Will. I sir, I haue a prettie wit.

Clo. Why, thou saist well. I do now remember a saying: The Foole doth thinke he is wise, but the wise man knowes himselfe to be a Foole. The Heathen Philosopher, when he had a desire to eate a Grape, would open his lips when he put it into his mouth, meaning thereby, that Grapes were made to eate, and lippes to open. You do loue this maid?

Will. I do sir.

Clo. Giue me your hand: Art thou Learned?

Will. No sir.

Clo. Then learne this of me, To haue, is to haue. For it is a figure in Rhetoricke, that drink being powr'd out of a cup into a glasse, by filling the one, doth empty the other. For all your Writers do consent, that ipse is hee: now you are not ipse, for I am he.

Will. Which he sir?

Clo. He sir, that must marrie this woman. Therefore you Clowne, abandon: which in the vulgar, leaue the societie: which in the boorish, is companie, of this female: which in the common, is woman: which together, is, abandon the society of this female, or Clowne thou perishest; or to thy better vnderstanding, dyest; or (to wit) I kill thee, make thee away, translate thy life into death, thy liberty into bondage: I will deale in poyson with thee, or in bastinado, or in steele. I will bandy with thee in faction, I will ore-run thee with policie, I will kill thee a hundred and fifty wayes, therefore tremble and depart.

Will. God rest you merry sir. Exit

Enter Corin.

Cor. Our Master and Mistresse seekes you: come away, away.

Clo. Trip Audry, trip Audry, I attend, I attend. Exeunt

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Orlando & Oliuer.

Orl. Is't possible, that on so little acquaintance you should like her? that, but seeing, you should loue her? And louing woo? and wooing, she should grant? And will you perseuer to enioy her?

Oli. Neither call the giddinesse of it in question; the pouertie of her, the small acquaintance, my sodaine woing, nor sodaine consenting: but say with mee, I loue Aliena: say with her, that she loues mee; consent with both, that we may enioy each other: it shall be to your good: for my fathers house, and all the reuennew, that was old Sir Rowlands will I estate vpon you, and heere liue and die a Shepherd.

Enter Rosalind.

Orl. You haue my consent. Let your Wedding be to morrow: thither will I inuite the Duke, and all's contented followers: Go you, and prepare Aliena; for looke you, Heere comes my Rosalinde.

Ros. God saue you brother.

Oli. And you faire sister.

Ros. Oh my deere Orlando, how it greeues me to see thee weare thy heart in a scarfe.

Orl. It is my arme.

Ros. I thought thy heart had beene wounded with the clawes of a Lion.

Orl. Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a Lady.

Ros. Did your brother tell you how I counterfeyted to sound, when he shew'd me your handkercher?

Orl. I, and greater wonders then that.

Ros. O, I know where you are: nay, 'tis true: there was neuer any thing so sodaine, but the fight of two Rammes, and Cæsars Threasonicall bragge of I came, saw, and ouercome. For your brother, and my sister, no sooner met, but they look'd: no sooner look'd, but they lou'd; no sooner lou'd, but they sigh'd: no sooner sigh'd but they ask'd one another the reason: no sooner knew the reason, but they sought the remedie: and in these degrees, haue they made a paire of staires to marriage, which they will climbe incontinent, or else be incontinent before marriage; they are in the verie wrath of loue, and they will together. Clubbes cannot part them.

Orl. They shall be married to morrow: and I will bid the Duke to the Nuptiall. But O, how bitter a thing it is, to looke into happines through another mans eies: by so much the more shall I to morrow be at the height of heart heauinesse, by how much I shall thinke my brother happie, in hauing what he wishes for.

Ros. Why then to morrow, I cannot serue your turne for Rosalind?

Orl. I can liue no longer by thinking.

Ros. I will weare you then no longer with idle talking. Know of me then (for now I speake to some purpose) that I know you are a Gentleman of good conceit: I speake not this, that you should beare a good opinion of my knowledge: insomuch (I say) I know you are: neither do I labor for a greater esteeme then may in some little measure draw a beleefe from you, to do your selfe good, and not to grace me. Beleeue then, if you please, that I can do strange things: I haue since I was three yeare old conuerst with a Magitian, most profound in his Art, and yet not damnable. If you do loue Rosalinde so neere the hart, as your gesture cries it out: when your brother marries Aliena, shall you marrie her. I know into what straights of Fortune she is driuen, and it is not impossible to me, if it appeare not inconuenient to you, to set her before your eyes to morrow, humane as she is, and without any danger.

to

Orl. Speak'st thou in sober meanings?

Ros. By my life I do, which I tender deerly, though I say I am a Magitian: Therefore put you in your best array bid your friends: for if you will be married to morrow, you shall and to Rosalind if you will.

Enter Silvius & Phebe.

Looke, here comes a Louer of mine, and a louer of hers

Phe. Youth, you haue done me much vngentlenesse, To shew the letter that I writ to you

Ros. I care not if I haue: it is my studie To seeme despightfull and vngentle to you: you are there followed by a faithfull shepheard, Looke vpon him, loue him: he worships you.

Phe. Good shepheard, tell him what it is to loue

Sil. It is to be all made of sighes and teares, And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And I for Ganimed.

Orl. And I for Rosalind

Ros. And I for no woman

Sil. It is to be all made of faith and seruice, And so am I for Phebe

Phe. And I for Ganimed

Orl. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of fantasie, All made of passion, and all made of wishes, All adoration, duetie, and obseruance, All humblenesse, all patience, and impatience, All purity, all triall, all obseruance. And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And so am I for Ganimed

Orl. And so am I for Rosalind.

Ros. And so am I for no woman.

Phe. If this be so, why blame you me to loue you?

Sil. If this be so, why blame you me to loue you?

Orl. If this be so, why blame you me to loue you?

Ros. Why do you speake too, Why blame you mee to loue you

Orl. To her, that is not heere, nor doth not heare

Ros. Pray you no more of this, 'tis like the howling of Irish Wolues against the Moone: I will helpe you if I can. I would loue you if I could. To morrow meet me altogether. I will marry you, if euer I marry Woman, and Ile be married to morrow: I will satisfie you, if euer I satisfi'd man, and you shall bee married to morrow. I will content you, if what pleases you contents you, and you shall be married to morrow. As you loue Rosalind meet, as you loue Phebe meet, and as I loue no woman, Ile meet: so fare you well: I haue left you commands.

Sil. Ile not faile, if I liue.

Phe. Nor I.

Orl. Nor I. Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Clowne and Audrey.

Clo. To morrow is the ioyfull day Audrey, to morow will we be married.

Aud. I do desire it with all my heart: and I hope it is no dishonest desire, to desire to be a woman of ỹ world?

Heere come two of the banish'd Dukes Pages.

Enter two Pages.

1. Pa. Well met honest Gentleman.

Clo. By my troth well met: come, sit, sit, and a song.

2. Pa. We are for you, sit ỹ'th middle.

1. Pa. Shall we clap into't roundly, without hauking, or spitting, or saying we are hoarse, which are the only prologues to a bad voice.

2. Pa. I'faith, yi faith, and both in a tune like two gipsies on a horse

Song.

It was a Louer, and his lasse,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
That o're the greene corne-fields did pasle,
In the prime time, the only pretty ring time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding.
Sweet Louers loue the spring,
And therefore sings the birds of me,
With a hey &c. and a hey nonino,
For loue is crowned with the prime.
In spring time, &c.

Betweene the acres of the Rye,
With a hey and a ho & a hey nonino
These pretty Country folks would lie,
In spring time &c.

This Carroll they began that howre,
With a hey and a ho & a hey nonino
How that a life was but a Flower,
In spring time, &c.

Clo. Truly yoog Gentlemen, though there was no great matter in the ditte, yet ỹ note was very vntunable

1. Pa. you are deceiu'd Sir, we kept time, we lost not our time

Clo. By my troth yes I count it but time lost to heare such a foolish song. God buy you, and God mend your voices. Come Audrey. Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Enter Duke Senior, Amyens, Iaques, Orlando, Oliuer, Celia.

Du. Sen. Dost thou beleeue Orlando, that the boy Can do all this that he hath promised?

Orl. I sometimes do beleeue, and sometimes do not, As those that feare they hope, and know they feare

Enter Rosalinde, Siluius, & Phebe.

Ros. Patience once more, whiles our compact is vrg'd You say, if I bring in your Rosalinde, You will bestow her on Orlando heere?

Du. Se. That would I, had I kingdoms to giue with her

Ros. And you say you will haue her when I bring her?

Orl. That would I, were I of all kingdoms king.

Ros. You say, you'l marry me, if I be willing

Phe. That will I, should I die the houre after.

Ros. But if you do refuse to marry me, You'l giue your selfe to this most faithfull Shepheard

Phe. So is the bargaine

Ros. You say that you'l haue Phebe if she will

Sil. Though to haue her and death, were both one thing.

Ros. I haue promis'd to make all this matter euen:
Keepe you your word, O Duke, to giue your daughter,
You yours Orlando, to receiue his daughter
Keepe you your word Phebe, that you'll marrie me,
Or else refusing me to wed this shepheard
Keepe your word Siluius, that you'll marrie her
If she refuse me: and from hence I go
To make these doubts all euen. Exeunt Ros. and Celia.

Du.Sen. I do remember in this shepherd boy,
Some liuely touches of my daughters father.

Orl. My Lord, the first time that I euer saw him,
Me thought he was a brother to your daughter.
But my good Lord, this Boy is Forrest borne,
And hath been tutor'd in the rudiments
Of many desperate studies, by his vncle,
Whom he reports to be a great Magician.

Enter Clowne and Audrey.

Obscured in the circle of this Forrest.

Iaq. There is fure another flood toward, and these couples are coming to the Arke. Here comes a payre of very strange beasts, which in all tongues, are call'd Fooles.

Clo. Salutation and greeting to you all.

Iaq. Good my Lord, bid him welcome. This is the Motley-minded Gentleman, that I haue so often met in the Forrest: he hath been a Courtier he sweares.

Clo. If any man doubt that, let him put me to my purgation. I haue trod a measure, I haue flattered a Lady, I haue been politicke with my friend, smooth with mine enemie, I haue vndone three Tailors, I haue had foure quarrels, and like to haue fought one.

Iaq. And how was this grauell?

Clo. Truly he was the quarrell was vpon the seuenth cause.

Iaq. How seuenth cause? Good my Lord, like this fellow.

Duke. I like him very well.

Clo. God'ild you sir, I desire you of the like. I presse in heere (sir) amongst the rest of the Country copulatiues, to sweare, and to forsweare, according as marriage binds and blood breakes: a poore virgin sir, an ill-fauored thing sir, but mine owne: a poore humour of mine sir, to take that that no man else will. Rich honesty dwells like a miser sir, in a poore house, as your pearle in your foule oyster.

Du.Se. By my faith, he is very swift and sententious.

Clo. According to the fooles bolt sir, and such dulcet diseases.

Iaq. But for the seuenth cause: How did you finde the quarrell on the seuenth cause?

Clo. Vpon a lye seuen times remoued: (beare your body more seeming Audrey) as thus sir. I did dislike the cut of a certaine Courtiers beard: he sent me word, if I said his beard was not cut well, he was in the mind it was: this is call'd the retort courteous. If I sent him word againe, it was not well cut, he would send me word he cut it to please himselfe: this is call'd the quip modest. If again it was not well cut, he disabled my judgement: this is call'd the reply churlish. If again it was not well cut, he would answer, I spake not true: this is call'd the reproofe valiant. If again it was not well cut, he told me I lied: and then came the Counter-checke quarrelsome: and so to the Lye circumstantial, and the lye direct.

Iaq. And how oft did you say his beard was not well cut?

Clo. I durst go no further than the lye circumstantial: nor he durst not giue me the lye direct: and so we measur'd swords, and parted.

Iaq. Can you nominate in order now, the degrees of the lye.

Clo. O sir, we quarrel in print, by the booke: as you haue bookes for good manners: I will name you the degrees. The first, the Retort courteous: the second, the Quip-modest: the third, the reply Churlish: the fourth, the Reproofe valiant: the fift, the Counterchecke quarrelsome: the sixt, the Lye with circumstance: the seauenth, the Lye direct: all these you may auoyd, but the Lye direct: and you may auoide that too, with an If. I knew when seuen Iustices could not take vp a Quarrell, but when the parties were met themselues, one of them thought but of an If; as if you said so, then I said so: and they shooke hands, and swore brothers. Your If, is the only peace-maker: much vertue in if.

Iaq. Is not this a rare fellow my Lord? He's as good at any thing, and yet a foole.

Du.Se. He vses his folly like a stalking-horse, and vnder the presentation of that he shoots his wit.

Enter Hymen, Rosalind, and Celia.
Still Musicke.

Hymen. Then is there mirth in heauen,
When earthly things made euen
Atone together.
Good Duke receiue thy daughter,
Hymen from Heauen brought her,
Yea brought her hether
That thou might'st ioyne her hand with his,
Whose heart within his bosome is.

Ros. To you I giue my selfe, for I am yours.
To you I giue my selfe, for I am yours.

Du.Se. If there be truth in sight, you are my daughter.

Orl. If there be truth in sight, you are my Rosalind.

Phe. If sight & shape be true, why then my loue adieu.

Ros. I'le haue no Father, if you be not he:
I'le haue no Husband, if you be not he:
Nor ne're wed woman, if you be not shee.

Hy. Peace hoa: I barre confusion,
'Tis I must make conclusion
Of these most strange euents:
Here's eight that must take hands,
To ioyne in Hymens bands,
If truth holds true contents.
You and you, no crosse shall part;
You and you, are hart in hart:
You, to his loue must accord,
Or haue a Woman to your Lord.
You and you, are sure together,
As the Winter to foule Weather:
Whiles a Wedlocke Hymne we sing,
Feede your selues with questioning:
That reason, wonder may diminish
How thus we met, and these things finish.

Song.

Wedding is great Iunos crowne,
O blessed bond of board and bed:
'Tis Hymen peoples euery towne,
High wedlock then be honored:
Honor, high honor and renowne
To Hymen, God of euerie Towne.

Du.Se. O my deere Neece, welcome thou art to me,
Euen daughter welcome, in no lesse degree.

Phe.

Phe. I will not eate my word, now thou art mine,
Thy faith, my fancie to thee doth combine.

Enter Second Brother.

2.Bro. Let me haue audience for a word or two
I am the second sonne of old Sir Rowland,
That bring these tidings to this faire assembly
Duke Frederick, hearing how that euerie day
Men of great worth resorted to this forrest,
Addrest a mightie power, which were on foote
In his owne conduct, purposely to take
His brother heere, and put him to the sword
And to the skirts of this wilde Wood he came
Where, meeting with an old Religious man,
After some question with him, was conuerted
Both from his enterprize, and from the world
His crowne bequeathing to his banished Brother,
And all their Lands restor'd to him againe
That were with him exild. This to be true,
I do engage my life.

Duke Se. Welcome young man:
Thou offer'st fairely to thy brothers wedding:
To one his lands with-held, and to the other
A land it self at large, a potent Dukedome.
Firſt, in this Forrest, let vs do those ends
That heere were well begun, and well begot:
And after, euery of this happie number
That haue endur'd shrewd daies, and nights with vs,
Shal share the good of our returned fortune,
According to the measure of their states.
Meane time, forget this new-falne dignitie,
And fall into our Rusticke Reuerie.
Play Musicke, and you Brides and Bride-groomes all,
With measure heap'd in ioy, to'th Measures fall.

Iaq. Sir, by your patience. If I heard you rightly,
The Duke hath put on a Religious life,
And throwne into neglect the pompous Court.

2.Bro. He hath.

Iaq. To him will I: out of these conuertites
There is much matter to be heard, and learned.
You to your former honour, I bequeath
Your patience, and your vertue, well deserues it:
You to a loue, that your true faith doth merit:
You to your land, and loue, and great allies.
You to a long and well deserued bed.
And you to wrastling, for your louing voyage
Is but for two months victualled. So to your pleasures
I am for other, than for dancing measures.

Duke Se. Stay, Iaques, stay.

Iaq. To see no pastime, I: what you would haue,
Ile stay to know, at your abandoned cate. Exit

Duke Se. Proceed, proceed: wee'll begin these rights
As we do trust, they'll end in true delights. Exit

A Song. It is not the fashion to see the Lady the Epilogue: nor they no more reuhand vme, then to see the Lord the Prologue. If the drinke that good wine needs no bush, 'tis true that a good play needes no Epilogue. Yet to good wine they do vse good bushes, and good playes prouide the better by the help of good Epilogues. What a case am I in then, that am neither a good Epilogue nor cannot insinuate with you in the behalfe of a good play? I am not furnisht like a Begger, therefore to beggre will not become me. My way is to coniure you, and I'le begin with the Women. I charge you (O women) for the loue you beare to men, to like as much of this Play, as please you. And I charge you (O men) for the loue you beare to women (as I perceiue by your simpring, none of you hates them) that betweene you, and the women, the play may please. If I were a Woman I would kisse as many of you as had beards that pleas'd me, complexions that lik'd me, and breaths that I defide not. And I am sure, as many as haue good beards, or good faces, or sweet breaths, will for my kinde offer, when I make curt'sie, bid me farewell. Exit

FINIS.

THE
Taming of the Shrew.

Actus primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Beggers and Hostes Christophero sly.

Beg.

I'le pheese you, in faith.

Host. A paire of stockes you sowe-gelder you.

Sly. Y'are a baggage, the Slies are no rogues: Looke in the Chronicles, we came in with Richard Conqueror. Therefore Paucas pallabris, let the world slide: Sessa.

Host. You will not pay for the glasses you have burst?

Sly. No, not a denier: go by S. Jeronimy, go to thy cold bed and warme thee.

Host. I know my remedie, I must go fetch the Headborough.

Sly. [illegible] I am not bound to answer.

Host. [illegible]

Sly. [illegible]

Host. [illegible]

Sly. [illegible]

Host. [illegible]

Sly. [illegible]

Was aptly fitted, and naturally perform'd
Sincklo. I thinke 'twas Soto that your honor meanes
Lord. 'Tis verie true, thou didst it excellent.
Well you are come to me in happie time,
The rather for I haue some sport in hand,
Wherein your cunning can assist me much
There is a Lord will heare you play to night;
But I am doubtfull of your modesties,
Least (ouer-eying of his odde behauiour,
For yet his honor neuer heard a play)
You breake into some merrie passion,
And so offend him; for I tell you sirs,
If you should smile, he growes impatient.
Plai. Feare not my Lord, we can contain our selues,
Were he the veriest antick in the world
Lord. Go sirra, take them to the buttrie,
And giue them friendly welcome euerie one,
Let them want nothing that my house affoords
Exit one with the Players.
Sirra go you to Bartholmew my Page,
And see him dresst in all suites like a Ladie
That done, conduct him to the drunkards chamber,
And call him Madam, do him obeisance.
Tell him from me (as he will win my loue)
He beare himselfe with honourable action,
Such as he hath obserued in noble Ladies
Vnto their Lords, by them accomplished,
Such duetie to the drunkard let him do
With soft low tongue, and lowly curtesie,
And say: What is't your Honor will command,
Wherein your Ladie, and your humble wife,
May shew her dutie, and make knowne her loue.
And then with kinde embracements, tempting kisses,
And with declining head into his bosome
Bid him shed teares, as being ouer-ioyed
To see her noble Lord restor'd to health,
Who for this seuen yeares hath esteemed him
No better then a poore and loathsome begger:
And if the boy haue not a womans gift
To raine a shower of commanded teares,
An Onion will do well for such a shift,
Which in a Napkin (being close conuei'd)
Shall in despight enforce a watrie eie
See this dispatcht with all the haste thou canst,
Anon Ile giue thee more instructions
Exit a seruingman.
I know the boy will well vsurpe the grace,
Voice, gate, and action of a Gentlewoman:
I long to heare him call the drunkard husband,
And how my men will stay themselues from laughter,
When they do homage to this simple peasant,
Ile in to counsell them: haply my presence
May well abate the ouer-merrie spleene,
Which otherwise would grow into extremes.

Enter aloft the drunkard with attendants, some with apparel, Basen and Ewer, & other appurtenances for Lord.
Beg. For Gods sake a pot of small Ale.
1 Ser. Wilt please your Lord drink a cup of sacke?
2 Ser. Wilt please your Honor taste of these Conserues?
3 Ser. What raiment wil your honor weare to day.
Beg. I am Christophero Sly, call not mee Honour nor Lordship. I ne're drank sacke in my life: and if you giue me any Conserues giue me conserues of Beefe: ne're ask me what raiment Ile weare, for I haue no more doublets then backes, no more stockings then legges, nor no more shoes then feet, nay sometime more feete then shoes, or they are shoes as my toes looke through the ouer-leather.
Lord. Heauen cease this idle humor in your Honor
Oh that a mightie man of such descent,
Of such possessions and so high esteeme
Should be infused with so foule a spirit
Beg. What would you make me mad? Am not I Christopher Sly, old Sies sonne of Burton heath, by byrth a Pedler, by education a Cardmaker, by transmutation a beare-heard, and now by present profession a Tinker? Aske Marian Hacket the fat Alewife of Wincot, if shee know me not: if she say I am not fourteene pence on the score for sheere Ale, score me vp for the lyingst knaue in Christendome. What I am not bestraught: here's——
3 Man. O this it is that makes your Ladie mourne
2 Man. O this is it that makes your seruants droope
Lord. Hence comes it that your kindred shunnes your house,
As beate, hence by your strange Lunacie.
O Noble Lord, bethinke thee of thy birth,
Call home thy ancient thoughts from banishment,
And banish hence these abiect lowe desires
Looke how thy seruants do attend on thee,
Each in his office ready at thy becke.
Wilt thou haue Musicke? Harke Apollo plaies, Musick.
And twentie caged Nightingales do sing.
Or wilt thou sleepe? We'l haue thee to a Couch,
Softer and sweeter then the lustfull bed
On purpose trim'd vp for Semiramis
Say thou wilt walke: we will bestrow the ground.
Or wilt thou ride? Thy horses shall be trapt,
Their harnesse studded all with Gold and Pearle
Dost thou loue hawking? Thou hast hawkes will soare
Aboue the morning Larke. Or wilt thou hunt,
Thy hounds shall make the Welkin answere them
And fetch shrill ecchoes from the hollow earth.
1 Man. Say thou wilt course, thy grey-hounds are as swift
As breathed stags: I fleeter then the Roe.
2 Man. Dost thou loue pictures? we will fetch thee straight
Adonis painted by a running brooke,
And Cytherea all in sedges hid,
Which seeme to moue and wanton with her breath,
Euen as the wauing sedges play with winde.
Lord. We'l shew thee Io as she was a Maid,
And how she was beguiled and surprized,
As liuely painted as the deede was done
3 Man. Or Daphne roaming through a thornie wood,
Scratching her legges that one shall swear she bleeds,
And at that sight shall sad Apollo weepe,
So workmanly the blood and teares are drawne.
Lord. Thou art a Lord, and nothing but a Lord:
Thou hast a Ladie farre more beautifull,
Then any woman in this waining age.
1 Man. And till the teares that she hath shed for thee,
Like enuious flouds ore-run her louely face,
She was the fairest creature in the world,
And yet she is inferior to none.
Beg. Am I a Lord, and haue I such a Ladie?
Or do I dreame? O haue I dream'd till now?
I do not sleepe: I see, I heare, I speake:
I smell sweet sauours, and I feele soft things:
Vpon my life I am a Lord indeede,
And not a Tinker, nor Christopher Sly.
Well, bring our Ladie hither to our sight,
And once againe a pot o'th smallest Ale.

2. Man. Wilt please your mightinesse to wash your hands:
Oh how we ioy to see your wit restor'd,
O that once more you knew but what you are
These fifteene yeeres you haue bin in a dreame,
Or when you wak'd, so wak'd as if you slept.
Beg. These fifteene yeeres by my fay, a goodly nap,
But did I neuer speake of all that time
1 Man. Oh yes my Lord, but very idle words,
For though you lay heere a while in this good chamber,
Yet would you say ye were beaten out of doore,
And rail vpon the Hostesse of the house,
And say you would present her at the Leete,
Because she brought stone Iugges and no seal'd quarts
Sometimes you would call out for Cicely Hacket
Beg. I the woman's maide of the house
3. Man. Why Sir you know no house nor no such maid
Nor no such men as you haue reckon'd vp,
As Stephen Sly, and old Iohn Naps of Greece,
And Peter Turph, and Henry Pimpernell,
And twenty more such names and men as these,
Which neuer were, nor no man euer saw.
Beg. Now Lord be thanked for my good amends.
All. Amen.

Enter Lady with Attendants.

Beg. I thanke thee: thou shalt not lose by it.
Lady. How fares my noble Lord?
Beg. Marrie fare well for heere is cheere enough
Where is my wife?
La. Heere noble Lord, what is thy will with her?
Beg. Are you my wife and will not call me husband?
My men should call me Lord, I am your goodman.
La. My husband and my Lord, my Lord and husband
I am your wife in all obedience.
Beg. I know it well: what must I call her?
Lord. Madam.
Beg. Alce Madam, or Ione Madam?
Lord. Madam, and nothing else: so Lords call Ladies.
Beg. Madame wife, they say that I haue dreamd,
And slept aboue some fifteene yeare or more.
La. I, and the time seems thirty vnto me,
Being all this time abandoned from your bed.
Beg. 'Tis much: seruants leaue me and her alone.
Madam vndresse you and come now to bed.
La. Thrice noble Lord, let me intreat of you
To pardon me yet for a night or two,
Or if not so, vntill the Sun be set.
For your Physitians haue expressly charg'd,
In perill to incurre your former malady,
That I should yet absent me from your bed:
I hope this reason stands for my excuse.
Beg. I, it stands so that I may hardly tarry so long
But I would be loth to fall into my dreames againe. I will therefore tarry in despight of the flesh & the blood.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Your Honors Players hearing your amendment,
Are come to play a pleasant Comedie,
For so your doctors hold it very meete,
Seeing too much sadnesse hath congeal'd your blood,
And melancholy is the Nurse of frenzie,
Therefore they thought it good you heare a play,
And frame your mind to mirth and merriment,
2. Hun. Which bars a thousand harmes, and lengthens life.
Beg. Marrie I will let them play, it is not a Comonty,
a Christmas gambold, or a tumbling trick?
Lady. No my good Lord, it is more pleasing stuffe.
Beg. What, household stuffe.
Lady. It is a kinde of history.
Beg. Well, we'l see't:
Come Madam wife sit by my side,
And let the world slip, we shall neere be younger.

Flourish. Enter Lucentio, and his man Tranio.

Luc. Tranio, since for the great desire I had
To see faire Padua, nursery of Arts,
I am arriu'd for fruitfull Lombardie,
The pleasant garden of great Italy,
And by my fathers loue and leaue am arm'd
With his good will, and thy good company
My trustie seruant well approu'd in all,
Heere let vs breath, and haply institute
A course of Learning, and ingenious studies.
Pisa renowned for grae Citizens
Gaue me my being, and my father first
A Merchant of great Traffick through the world:
Vincentio come of the Bentiuolij,
Vincentio, sonne brought vp in Florence,
It shall become to serue all hopes conceiu'd
To deck his fortune with his vertuous deedes
And therefore Tranio, for the time I studie,
Vertue and that part of Philosophie
Will I apply that treats of happinesse,
By vertue specially to be atchieu'd.
Tell me thy minde, for I haue Pisa left,
And am to Padua come, as he that leaues
A shallow plash, to plunge him in the deepe,
And with satietie seekes to quench his thirst.
Tra. Mi Pardonate, gentle master mine
I am in all affected as your selfe,
Glad that you thus continue your resolue,
To suck the sweets of sweet Philosophie.
Only good master, while we do admire
This vertue and this moral discipline,
Let's be no Stoickes, nor no stockes I pray,
Or so deuote to Aristotles checkes
As Ouid, be a out-cast quite abiur'd
But be a kinde to the wherequaintance that you haue,
And practise rhetorike in your common talke,
Musicke and poesie, to quicken you
The Mathematickes, and the Metaphysickes
Fit to the nas you like you may you will,
No profit growes, where is no pleasure tane
In briefe sir, studie what you most affect.
Luc. Gramercies Tranio, well dost thou aduise,
If Biondello thou wert come ashore,
We could at once put vs in readinesse,
And take a Lodging fit to entertaine
Such friends (as time) in Padua shall beget.
But stay a while, what companie is this?
Tra. Master some shew to welcome vs to Towne.

Enter Baptista with his two daughters, Katerina & Bianca, Gremio a Pantelowne, Hortensio suter to Bianca. Lucen Tranio stand by.

Bap. Gentlemen, importune me no farther,
For how I firmly am resolu'd you know
That is, not to bestow my youngest daughter,
Before I haue a husband for the elder.
If either of you both loue Katherina,

Because

Because I know you well, and love you well,
Leave shall you have to court her at your pleasure.
Gre. To cart her rather: She's too rough for me.
There, there Hortensio, will you any Wife?
Kate. I pray you Sir, is it your will
To make a stale of me amongst these mates?
Hor. Mates maid, how mean you that?
No mates for you,
Unless you were of gentler milder mould.
Kate. I faith Sir, you shall never need to fear,
I-wis it is not halfe way to her gate.
But if it were doubt not, her care should be,
To comb your noddle with a three legg'd stoole,
And paint your face, and use you like a doll.
Hor. From all such devils, good Lord deliver vs.
Gre. And me too, good Lord.
Tra. Husht master, here's some good pastime toward;
That wench is stark mad, or wonderful froward.
Luc. But in the others silence do I see,
Maid's mild behauiour and sobriety.
Peace Tranio.
Tra. Well said Master, mum, and gaze your fill.
Bap. Gentlemen that I may soone make good
What I haue said, Bianca get you in:
And let it not displease thee good Bianca,
For I will loue thee ne'ere the lesse my girle.
Kate. A pretty peate, it is best put finger in the eye, and shee knowes why.
Bian. Sister content you, in my content.
Sir, to your pleasure humbly I subscribe:
My bookes and instruments shall be my company,
On them to looke, and practise by my selfe.
Luc. Hark Tranio thou maist heare Minerua speak.
Hor. Signior Baptista, will you be so strange,
Sorry am I that our good will effects
Bianca's grieue.
Gre. Why will you mew her vp
(Signior Baptista) for this fiend of hell,
And make her fearefull gentle and timorous,
Bap. Gentlemen content ye I am resolued.
Goe in Bianca.
And for I know she taketh most delight
In Musicke, Instruments and Poetry,
Schoolemasters will I keepe within my house,
Fit to instruct her youth. If you Hortensio,
Or signior Gremio you know any such,
Prefer the same, for her they shall find,
I will be very kinde and liberall,
To mine owne children, in good bringing vp:
And so farewell. Katherina you may stay,
For I haue more to commune with Bianca. Exit.
Kate. Why, and I trust I may go too, may I not?
What shall I be appointed houres, as though
Belike I knew not what to take,
And what to leaue? Ha. Exit
Gre. You may go to the diuels dam: your gifts are so good, heere's none will holde you. Their loue is not so great Hortensio, but we may blow our nailes together, and fast it fairely out. Our cakes dough on both sides. Farewell: yet for the loue I beare my sweet Bianca, if I can by any meanes light on a fit man to teach her that wherein she delights, I will wish him to her father.
Hor. So will I signior Gremio: but a word I pray. Though the nature of our quarrell yet neuer brooke parle, know now vpon aduice, it toucheth vs both, that we may yet againe haue accesse to our faire Mistris, and be happie rivals in Bianca's loue, to about and effect one thing specially.
Gre. What's that I pray?
Hor. Marrie sir to get a husband for her Sister.
Gre. A husband a deuil.
Hor. I say a husband.
Gre. I say a diuell. Think'st thou Hortensio, though her father be verie rich, any man is so very a foole to be married to hell?
Hor. Tush Gremio, though it passe your patience & mine to endure her loud alarums, why man there be good fellowes in the world, and a man could light on them, would take her with all faults, and money enough.
Gre. I cannot tell: but I had as lief take her dowrie with this condition. To be whipt at the high crosse euerie morning.
Hor. Faith as you say there's small choise in rotten apples. But come, since this bar in law makes vs friends, it shall be so far forth friendly maintained, till by helping Baptista's eldest daughter to a husband, we set his youngest free for a husband, and then haue to't afresh. Sweet Bianca! Happy man be his dole! He that runnes fastest gets the Ring. How say you signior Gremio?
Gre. I am agreed, and would I had giuen him the best horse in Padua to begin his wooing that would thoroughly woo her, wed her, and bed her, and rid the house of her. Come on.
Exeunt manet Tranio and Lucentio.
Tra. I pray sir tell me, is it possible
That loue should of a sodaine take such hold?
Luc. O Tranio, till I found it to be true,
Neuer thought it possible or likely.
But see while idely I stood looking on,
I found the effect of Loue in idlenesse,
And now in plainnesse do confesse to thee
That art to me as secret and as deere
As Anna to the Queene of Carthage was.
Tranio I burne, I burne, I perish Tranio,
If I atchieue not this young modest girle.
Counsell me Tranio for I know thou canst.
Assist me Tranio, for I know thou wilt.
Tra. Master, it is no time to chide you now,
Affection is not rated from the heart.
If loue haue touch'd you, nought remaines but so,
Redime te captum quam queas minimo.
Luc. Gramercies Lad. Go forward, this contents,
The rest will comfort, for thy counsels sound.
Tra. Master you look'd so longly on the maide,
Perhaps you marke not what's the pith of all.
Luc. O yes, I saw sweet beauty in her face,
Such as the daughter of Agenor had,
That made great Ioue to humble him to her hand,
When with his knees he kist the Cretan strond.
Tra. Saw you no more? Mark'd you not how her sister
Began to scold and raise vp such a storme,
That mortall eares may hardly endure the din.
Luc. Tranio I saw her coral lips to move,
And with her breath she did perfume the aire,
Sacred and sweet was all I saw in her.
Tra. Nay, then 'tis time to stirre him from his trance.
I pray awake sir: if you loue the Maide,
Bend thoughts and wits to atchieue her. Thus it stands:
Her elder sister is so curst and shrewd,
That till the Father rid his hands of her,
Master, your Loue must liue a maide at home,
And therefore has he closely mew'd her vp,

Because

Because she will not be annoy'd with suters.
Luc. Ah Tranio, what a cruell Father he:
But art thou not aduis'd, he tooke some care
To get her cunning Schoolemasters to instruct her.
Tra. I marry am I sir, and now 'tis plotted.
Luc. I haue it Tranio.
Tra. Master, for my hand,
Both our inuentions meet and iumpe [illegible]
Luc. Tell me thine first.
Tra. You will be schoole-master,
And vndertake the teaching of [illegible]
That's your deuice.
Luc. It is: May it be done?
Tra. Not possible: for who shall beare your part,
And be in Padua heere Vincentio's sonne,
Keepe house, and ply his booke, welcome his friends,
Visit his Countrimen, and banquet them?
Luc. Basta, content thee: for I haue it full.
We haue not yet bin seene in any house,
Nor can we be distinguish'd by our faces,
For man or master: then it followes thus,
Thou shalt be master, Tranio in my stead:
Keepe house, and port, and seruants, as I should,
I will some other be, some Florentine,
Some Neapolitan, or meaner man of Pisa.
'Tis hatch'd, and shall be so: Tranio at once
Vncase thee: take my Colored hat and cloake,
When Biondello comes he waites on thee,
But I will charme him first to keepe his tongue.
Tra. So had you need.
In breefe Sir, sith it your pleasure is,
And I am tyed to be obedient,
For so your father charg'd me at our parting:
Be seruiceable to my sonne (quoth he)
Although I thinke 'twas in another sense,
I am content to bee Lucentio,
Because so well I loue Lucentio.
Luc. Tranio be so, because Lucentio loues,
And let me be a slaue, t'atchieue that maide,
Whose sodaine sight hath thral'd my wounded eye.

Enter Biondello.

Heere comes the rogue. Sirra, where haue you bin?
Bion. Where haue I beene? Nay how now, where are you? Master, ha's my fellow Tranio stolne your cloathes, or you stolne his, or both? Pray what's the newes?
Luc. Sirra come hither, 'tis no time to iest,
And therefore frame your manners to the time
Your fellow Tranio heere to saue my life,
Puts my apparrell, and my countenance on,
And I for my escape haue put on his
For in a quarrell since I came a shore,
I kil'd a man, and feare I was descried
Waite you on him, I charge you, as becomes
While I make way from hence to saue my life:
You vnderstand me?
Bion. I sir, ne're a whit.
Luc. And not a iot of Tranio in your mouth,
Tranio is chang'd into Lucentio.
Bion. The better for him, would I were so too.
Tra. So could I faith boy, to haue the next wish after, that Lucentio indeede had Baptistas yongest daughter. But sirra, not for my sake, but your masters, I aduise you vse your manners discreetly in all kind of companies: When I am alone, why then I am Tranio, but in all places else, your master Lucentio.
Luc. Tranio let's go:
One thing more rests, that thy selfe execute,
To make one among these wooers: if thou ask me why,
Sufficeth my reasons are both good and waighty.
Exeunt. The Presenters aboue speakes.
1. Man. My Lord you nod, you do not minde the play.
Beg. Yes by Saint Anne do I, a good matter surely: Comes there any more of it?
Lady. My Lord, 'tis but begun.
Beg. 'Tis a verie excellent peece of worke, Madame Ladie: would 'twere done. They sit and marke.

Enter Petruchio, and his man Grumio.

Petr. Verona, for a while I take my leaue,
To see my friends in Padua; but of all
My best beloued and approued friend
Hortensio: & I trow this is his house:
Heere sirra Grumio, knocke I say.
Gru. Knocke sir? whom should I knocke? Is there any man ha's rebus'd your worship?
Petr. Villaine I say, knocke me heere soundly.
Gru. Knocke you heere sir? Why sir, what am I sir, that I should knocke you heere sir.
Petr. Villaine I say, knocke me at this gate,
And rap me well, or Ile knocke your knaues pate.
Gru. My Master is growne quarrelsome:
I should knocke you first,
And then I know after who comes by the worst.
Petr. Will it not be?
'Faith sirrah, and you'l not knocke, Ile ring it,
Ile trie how you can Sol, Fa, and sing it.
He wrings him by the eares.
Gru. Helpe mistris helpe, my master is mad.
Petr. Now knocke when I bid you: sirrah villaine!

Enter Hortensio.

Hor. How now, what's the matter? My olde friend Grumio, and my good friend Petruchio? How do you all at Verona?
Petr. Signior Hortensio, come you to part the fray? Con tutto le core ben trobato, may I say.
Hor. Alla nostra casa ben venuto molto honorata signior mio Petruchio.
Rise Grumio rise, we will compound this quarrell.
Gru. Nay 'tis no matter sir, what he leges in Latine. If this be not a lawfull cause for me to leaue his seruice, looke you sir. He bid me knocke him, & rap him soundly sir. Well, was it fit for a seruant to vse his master so, being perhaps (for ought I see) two and thirty, a peepe out? Whom would to God I had well knockt at first, then had not Grumio come by the worst.
Petr. A senceles villaine: good Hortensio,
I bad the raskall knocke vpon your gate,
And could not get him for my heart to do it.
Gru. Knocke at the gate? O heauens: spake you not these words plaine? Sirra, Knocke me heere: rappe me heere: knocke me well, and knocke me soundly? And come you now with knocking at the gate?
Petr. Sirra be gone, or talke not I aduise you.
Hor. Petruchio patience, I am Grumio's pledge:
Why this a heauie chance 'twixt him and you,
Your ancient trustie pleasant seruant Grumio:
And tell me now (sweet friend) what happie gale
Blowes you to Padua heere, from old Verona?
Petr. Such wind as scatters yongmen through the world,

To

To seeke their fortunes farther then at home,
Where small experience growes but in a few.
Signior Hortensio, twixt hands with me,
Antonio my father is deceast
And I haue thrust my selfe into this maze,
Happily to wiue and thriue, as best I may
Crownes in my purse I haue, and goods at home,
And so am come abroad to see the world
Hor. Petruchio shall I then come roundly to thee,
And wish thee to a fine mad-brain wife?
Thou'dst thanke me but a little for my counsell
And yet Ile promise thee she shall be rich,
And very rich: but th'art too much my friend,
And Ile not wish thee to her
Pet. Signior Hortensio twixt such friends as we,
Few words suffice: and therefore if thou know
One rich enough to be Petruchio's wife
As wealth is burthen of my wooing dance
Be she as foule as was Florentius Loue,
As old as Sibill, and as curst and shrewd
As Socrates Xantippe, or a worse
She moues me not, or not removes at least
Affection in me that I cannot get
A sixpence worth of: for I come to wiue
I come to wiue it wealthily in Padua
If wealthily then happily in Padua.
Gre. Nay looke you sir, he meets you well: for though some of us neuer see him sober in our liues, yet we haue met him now and then drunke: but you know he is the wiser man for that, for his word is his word.
Hor. Petruchio since we are stept thus farre
I will continue that I broacht in iest,
I can Petruchio helpe thee to a wife
With wealth enough, and young and beauteous,
Brought vp as best becomes a Gentlewoman.
Her only fault, and that is faults enough,
Is that she is intolerable curst,
And shrow'd to, exceeding, to beyond measure,
That were my state farre worser then it is,
I would not wed her for a mine of Gold.
Pet. Hortensio peace: thou know'st not gold's effect.
Tell me her wealth, and wherein she is rich,
For that is all the woman I regard,
And so I looke to haue her.
Hor. Her father is Baptista Minola,
An affable and courteous Gentleman,
Her name is Katherina Minola,
Renown'd in Padua for her scolding tongue.
Pet. I know her father though I know not her,
And he knew my deceased father well:
I will not sleepe Hortensio till I see her,
And therein shall not want my cousin Gremio,
To get her once my wife as I meane,
Vale let vs, accompanie me to her
Gre. I pray sir Petruchio I am vnwilling to thwart you, for I know you think to dine with me to day, and may perhaps call in when you come a wooing, but first for my daughter, and then for the rest, for then I looke for you.
Pet. Know sir that I am to dine with my father, and so
may chance you do with me, if you look not the better
to it.
Gre. Yet by your leaue I will, for I know you of old.
Hor. Petruchio since we are stept thus farre
I will continue that I broacht in iest,
I can Petruchio helpe thee to a wife
With wealth enough, and young and beauteous,

Pet. Know sir that I am to dine with my father, and so
may chance you do with me, if you look not the better
to it.
Gre. Yet by your leaue I will, for I know you of old.

For in Baptista keepe my treasure is
He hath the Iewel of my life in hold
His yongest daughter, beautiful Bianca,
And her with-holds from me. Other more
Suters to her, and rivals in my Loue
Supposing it a thing impossible
For those defects I haue before rehearst,
That euer Katherina will be wood
Her sister Katherina welbeloued
I meane to counterfeit with gorgeous Cassocks,
Proud Italian Pedants, and affords
Gre. Hortensio, peace, thou know'st not gold's effect:
Tell me her wealth, and wherein she is rich,
For that is all the woman I regard,
And so I looke to haue her.
Hor. Her father is Baptista Minola,
An affable and courteous Gentleman,
Her name is Katherina Minola,
Renown'd in Padua for her scolding tongue.
Pet. I know her father though I know not her,
And he knew my deceased father well:
I will not sleepe Hortensio till I see her,
And therein shall not want my cousin Gremio,
To get her once my wife as I meane,
Vale let vs, accompanie me to her
Gre. I pray sir Petruchio I am vnwilling to thwart you,
for I know you think to dine with me to day, and may
perhaps call in when you come a wooing, but first for my daughter, and then for the rest, for then I looke for you.
Pet. Know sir that I am to dine with my father, and so
may chance you do with me, if you look not the better
to it.
Gre. Yet by your leaue I will, for I know you of old.

Exeunt Gremio and Baptista's two daughters.

Hor. See how they part: See to your old-
lers, how they eye one another: Master, master, look about you:
Who goes there, ha? Peace Grumio, it is the rich Babtista's Loue.
Petruchio stand by vs.
Grumio A prosperous phisnomy.
Grumio Very well I warrant you.
Hearke you sir, he meant not her to vs.
A bodykin I like her, see that at any hand
And see you reade no other Lectures to her
You vnderstand me. Ouer and beside
Signior Baptista bounty
I meane she shall haue a large dowre else you are like to
And now you know my meaning what are you,
Grumio Whatsoeuer, I am
Grumio Ancient Gentleman, Scala Ancient
Hor. Why then
Her comes Grumio the very gentle Gremio
Gre. And now you are welcome Signior Hortensio.
Tranio you are welcome sir,
Gre. Signior Baptista Minola,
Gre. Signior Baptista Bianca,
Gre. Or rather I should say my daughter Bianca,
Gre. Or rather I should say my daughter,
Gre. Master, master, old Signior Gremio is come
Hor. Peace Grumio, it is the rich Babtista's Loue.
Petruchio stand by vs.
Grumio A prosperous phisnomy.
Grumio Very well I warrant you.
Hearke you sir, he meant not her to vs.
A bodykin I like her, see that at any hand
And see you reade no other Lectures to her
You vnderstand me. Ouer and beside
Signior Baptista bounty
I meane she shall haue a large dowre else you are like to
Tra. Sir to know some cause why I am thus bold
Tra. Sir to know some cause why I am thus bold
Tra. Sir to know some cause why I am thus bold
Hor. I will tell you sir Lucentio,
Hor. I will tell you sir Lucentio,
Hor. I will tell you sir Lucentio,
Tra. Sir to know some cause why I am thus bold
Tra. Sir to know some cause why I am thus bold
Tra. Sir to know some cause why I am thus bold
Hor. I will tell you sir Lucentio,
Hor. I will tell you sir Lucentio,
Hor. I will tell you sir Lucentio,

Vpon agreement from vs to his liking,
Will vndertake to woo curſt Katherine,
Yea, and to marrie her, if her dowre pleaſe.
Gre. So ſaid, ſo done, is well.
Hortenſio, haue you told him her faults?
Petr. I know ſhe is an irkeſome brawling ſcold
If that be all Maiſters, I heare no harme.
Gre. No, ſaiſt me ſo, friend? What Countreyman?
Petr. Borne in Verona, old Baptiſta ſonne
My father dead, my fortune lies for me,
And I do hope, good dayes and long, to ſee
Gre. Oh ſir, ſuch a life with ſuch a wife, were ſtrange:
But if you haue a ſtomacke, to't a Gods name,
You ſhal haue me aſſiſting you in all.
But will you woo this Wilde cat?
Petr. Will I liue?
Gru. Will he woo her? I: or Ile hang her.
Petr. Why came I hether, but to that intent?
Thinke you, a little dinne can daunt mine eares?
Haue I not in my time heard Lions rore?
Haue I not heard the ſea, puft vp with windes,
Rage like an angry Boare, chafed with ſweat?
Haue I not heard great Ordnance in the field?
And heauen and Art look'd on all the warre?
Haue I not in a pitcht battell heard
Loud larums, neighing Steeds, & trumpets clangue?
And do you tell me of a womans tongue?
That giues not halfe ſo great a blow to heare,
As will a Cheſtnut in a Farmers fire.
Tuſh, tuſh, feare boyes with bugs.
Gre. For he feares none.
Gremio. Hortenſio couches:
This Gentleman is happily arriued,
My minde preſumes for his owne good and ours.
Hor. I promiſd we would be Contributors,
And beare his charge of woing whatſoeuer.
Gremio. And ſo we will, prouided that he win her.
Gru. I would I were as ſure of a good dinner.

Enter Tranio brauing, and Biondello.

Tra. Gentlemen God ſaue you. If I may be bold
Tell me I beſeech you, which is the readieſt way
To the houſe of Signio. Baptiſta Minola?
Bion. He that has the two faire daughters: ſ't he you meane?
Tra. Euen he. Biondello.
Gre. Hearke you ſir, you meane not her to ——
Tra. Perhaps him and her ſir, what haue you to do?
Petr. Not her that chides ſir, at any hand I pray.
Tranio. I loue no chiders ſir: Biondello, let's away.
Luc. Well begun Tranio.
Hor. Sir a word ere you go.
Are you a ſutor to the Maid you talke of, yea or no?
Tra. And if I be ſir, is it any offence?
Gremio. No: but without more words you will get you hence.
Tra. Why ſir, I pray are not the ſtreets as free
For me as for you?
Gre. But ſo is not ſhe.
Tra. For what reaſon I beſeech you.
Gre. For this reaſon if you'l know,
That ſhe's the choſe loue of Signior Gremio.
Hor. That ſhe's the choſen of Signior Hortenſio.
Tra. Softly my Maſters: If you be Gentlemen
Do me this right, hear me with patience.
Baptiſta is a noble Gentleman,
To whom my Father is not all vnknowne,
And were his daughter fairer then ſhe is,
She may more ſutors haue, and me for one.
Faire Ledaes daughter had a thouſand wooers,
Then well one more may faire Bianca haue;
And ſo ſhe ſhall: Lucentio ſhal make one,
Though Paris came, in hope to ſpeed alone.
Gre. What, this Gentleman will out-talke vs all.
Luc. Sir giue him head, I know hee'l proue a Iade.
Petr. Hortenſio, to what end are all theſe words?
Hor. Sir, let me be ſo bold as aske you,
Did you yet euer ſee Baptiſtas daughter?
Tra. No ſir, but heare I do that he hath two:
The one, as famous for a ſcolding tongue,
As is the other, for beauteous modeſtie.
Petr. Sir, ſir, the firſt's for me, let her go by
Gre. Yea, leaue that labour to great Hercules,
And let it be more then Alcides twelue.
Petr. Sir vnderſtand you this of me (inſooth)
The yongeſt daughter whom you hearken for,
Her father keepes from all acceſſe of ſutors,
And will not promiſe her to any man,
Vntill the elder ſiſter firſt be wed
The yonger then is free, and not before.
Tranio. If it be ſo ſir, that you are the man
Muſt ſtead vs all, and me amongſt the reſt:
And if you break the ice, and do this ſeeke,
Atchieue the elder: ſet the yonger free,
For our acceſſe, whoſe hap ſhall be to haue her,
Will not ſo graceleſſe be, to be ingrate.
Hor. Sir you ſay wel, and wel you do conceiue,
And ſince you do profeſſe to be a tutor,
You muſt as we do, gratifie this Gentleman,
To whom we all reſt generally beholding.
Tranio. Sir, I ſhal not be ſlacke, in ſigne whereof,
Pleaſe ye we may contriue this afternoone,
And quaffe carowſes to our Miſtreſſe health,
And do as aduerſaries do in law,
Striue mightily, but eate and drinke as friends.
Gru, Bion. Oh excellent motion: fellowes let's be gon
Hor. The motions good indeed, and be it ſo,
Petruchio, I ſhal be your Ben venuto. Exeunt.

Enter Katherina and Bianca.

Bian. Good ſiſter wrong me not, nor wrong your ſelf,
To make a bondmaide and a ſlaue of mee,
That I diſdaine: but for theſe other goods,
Vnbinde my hands, Ile pull them off my ſelfe,
Yea all my raiment, to my pett coate,
Or what you will command me, will I do,
So well I know my dutie to my elders.
Kate. Of all thy ſutors heere I charge tel
Whom thou lou'ſt beſt: ſee thou diſſemble not.
Bianca. Beleeue me ſiſter, of all the men aliue,
I neuer yet beheld that ſpeciall face,
Which I could fancie, more then any other
Kate. Minion thou lyeſt. Is't not Hortenſio?
Bian. If you affect him ſiſter, heere I ſweare
Ile pleade for you my ſelfe, but you ſhal haue him.
Kate. Oh then belike you fancie riches more,
You will haue Gremio to keepe you faire.
Bian. Is it for him you do enuie me ſo?
Nay then you ieſt, and now I wel perceiue
You haue but ieſted with me all this while:
I prethee ſiſter Kate, vntie my hands.
Ka. If that be ieſt, then all the reſt was ſo. Strikes her

Enter

Enter Baptista

Bap. Why how now Dame, whence growes this insolence?
Bianca stand aside, poore gyrle she weepes:
Go ply thy Needle, meddle not with her
For shame thou hilding of a diuelish spirit,
Why dost thou wrong her, that did ne're wrong thee?
When did she crosse thee with a bitter word?
Kate. Her silence flouts me, and Ile be reuenged
Flies after Bianca
Bap. What in my sight? Bianca get thee in. Exit.
Kate. What will you not suffer me? Nay now I see
She is your treasure, she must haue a husband,
I must dance barefoot on her wedding day,
And for your loue to her, leape Apes in hand.
Talke not to me I will go sit and weepe,
Till I can finde occasion of reuenge.
Bap Was euer Gentleman thus grieued as I?
But who comes heere.

Enter Gremio, Lucentio, in the habit of a meane man, Petruchio with Tranio, with his boy bearing a Lute and bookes

Gre. Good morrow neighbour Baptista
Bap Good morrow neighbour Gremio God saue you Gentlemen
Pet. And you good sir: pray haue you not a daughter call'd Katerina, faire and vertuous
Bap. I haue a daughter sir, call'd Katerina
Gre. You are too blunt go to it orderly
Pet You wrong me Signior Gremio, giue me leaue
I am a Gentleman of Verona sir,
That hearing of her beauty, and her wit,
Her affability and bashfull modestie
Her wondrous qualities, and mild behauiour,
Am bold to shew my selfe a forward guest
Within your house, to make mine eye the witnesse
Of that report, which I so oft haue heard,
And for an entrance to my entertainment,
I do present you with a man of mine
Cunning in Musicke, and the Mathematickes,
To instruct her fully in those sciences,
Whereof I know she is not ignorant,
Accept of him, or else you do me wrong,
His name is Licio borne in Mantua.
Bap You are welcome sir, and he for your good sake.
But for my daughter Katerine, this I know,
She is not for your turne, the more my greefe
Pet I see you do not meane to part with her,
Or else you like not of my companie
Bap Mistake me not, I speake but as I finde,
Whence are you sir? What may I call your name.
Pet. Petruchio is my name, Antonio's sonne,
A man well knowne throughout all Italy
Bap. I know him well: you are welcome for his sake.
Gre. Saying your tale Petruchio I pray let vs that are poore petitioners speake too? Baccare, you are marueilous forward
Pet. O Pardon me Signior Gremio, I would faine be doing.
Gre. I doubt it not sir. But you will curse
Your wooing neighbors: this is a gift
Very grateful, I am sure of it, to expresse
The like kindnesse my selfe, that haue beene
More kindely beholding to you then any,
Freely giue vnto this young Scholler, that hath
Beene long studying at Rhemes, as cunning
In Greeke, Latine, and other Languages,
As the other in Musicke and Mathematickes:
His name is Cambio: pray accept his seruice
Bap. A thousand thankes Signior Gremio.
Welcome good Cambio. But gentle sir,
Me thinkes you walke like a stranger,
May be so bold, to know the cause of your comming?
Tra. Pardon me sir, the boldnesse is mine owne,
That being a stranger in this Citty heere,
Do make my selfe a suitor to your daughter,
Vnto Bianca, faire and vertuous
Nor is your firme resolue vnknowne to me,
In the preferment of the eldest sister.
This loue of mine, I craue your fauour,
That shee's the chosen of mine owne consent,
And her consent is ground vpon my Parentage,
Longer with such discourse, lest that worke,
And there it rests, till further reasons
I'le rehearse, why and wherefore I am come
And am vnfurnished of such things,
As I shall craue of you, first Greeke and Latine bookes:
If you accept them, then their worth is great
Bap. Lucentio is your name, of whence I pray
Tra. Of Pisa sir, sonne to Vincentio
Bap A mighty man of Pisa, by report
I know him well: you are very welcome sir
Take you the Lute, and you the set of bookes,
You shall go see your Pupils presently.
Holla, within.

Enter a Seruant.

Sirrah, leade these Gentlemen
To my daughters, and tell them both
These are their Tutors, bid them vse them well,
We haue good workemen in our Orchard,
And to dinner: you are passing welcome,
And so I pray you all to thinke your selues.
Pet. Signior Baptista, my businesse asketh haste,
And euery day I cannot come to woo,
You knew my father well, and in him me,
Left solely heire to all his Lands and goods,
Which I haue bettered rather then decreased,
Then tell me, if I get your daughters loue,
What dowry shall I haue with her to wife.
Bap After my death the one halfe of my Lands,
And in possession twenty thousand Crownes.
Pet And for that dowry, Ile assure her of
Her widdow-hood, be it that she suruiue me
In all my Lands and Leases whatsoeuer,
Let specialties be therefore drawne betweene vs,
That couenants may be kept on either hand.
Bap. I, when the speciall thing is well obtain'd,
That is her loue: for that is all in all.
Pet Why that is nothing: for I tell you father,
I am as peremptorie as she proud minded
And where two raging fires meete together,
They do consume the thing that feedes their furie,
Though little fire growes great with little winde,
yet extreme gusts will blow out fire and all:
So I to her, and so she yeelds to me,
For I am rough, and woo not like a babe
Bap. Well mayst thou woo, and happy be thy speed
But be thou arm'd for some vnhappie words
Pet I to the proofe as Mountaines are for windes,
That shakes not, though they blow perpetually
Enter Hortensio with his head broke.

Bap. How now my friend, why doſt thou looke ſo pale?

Hor. For feare I promiſe you, if I looke pale.

Bap. What, will my daughter proue a good Muſitian?

Hor. I thinke ſhe'l ſooner proue a ſouldier,
Iron may hold with her, but neuer Lutes.

Bap. Why then thou canſt not break her to the Lute?

Hor. Why no, for ſhe hath broke the Lute to me.
I did but tell her ſhe miſtooke her frets,
And bow'd her hand to ſeeme like labouring,
When (with a moſt impatient diuelliſh ſpirit)
Frets call you theſe? quoth ſhe, Ile fume with them:
And with that word ſhe ſtrooke me on the head,
And through the inſtrument my pate made way,
And there I ſtood amazed for a while,
As on a Pillorie, looking through the Lute,
While ſhe did call me Raſcall fiddler,
And twangling Iacke; with twenty ſuch vile termes,
As had ſhe ſtudied to miſuſe me ſo.

Pet. Now by the world, it is a luſtie Wench,
I loue her tenfold better then before.
Oh how I long to haue ſome chat with her.

Bap. Well go with me and be not diſcouraged:
Proceed in practiſe with my younger daughter,
She's apt to learne, and thankefull for good turnes:
Signior Petruchio, will you go with vs,
Or ſhall I ſend my daughter Kate to you.

Exit. Manet Petruchio

Pet. I pray you do. Ile attend her heere,
And woo her with ſome ſpirit when ſhe comes.
Say that ſhe raile, why then Ile tell her plaine,
She ſings as ſweetly as a Nightingale:
Say that ſhe frowne, Ile ſay ſhe lookes as cleere
As morning Roſes newly waſh'd with dew:
Say ſhe be mute, and will not ſpeake a word,
Then Ile commend her volubility,
And ſay ſhe vttereth piercing eloquence:
If ſhe do bid me packe, Ile giue her thankes,
As though ſhe bid me ſtay by her a weeke.
If ſhe deny to wed, Ile craue the day
When I ſhall aske the banes, and when be married.
But heere ſhe comes, and now Petruchio ſpeake.

Enter Katerina.

Good morrow Kate, for that's your name I heare.

Kate. Well haue you heard, but ſomething hard of hearing:
They call me Katerine, that do talke of me.

Pet. You lye in faith, for you are call'd plaine Kate,
And bony Kate, and ſometimes Kate the curſt:
But Kate, the prettieſt Kate in Chriſtendome,
Kate of Kate-hall, my ſuper-dainty Kate,
For dainties are all Kates, and therefore Kate
Take this of me Kate of my conſolation,
Hearing thy mildnes prais'd in euery Towne,
Thy vertues ſpoke of, and thy beautie ſounded,
Yet not ſo deeply as to thee belongs,
My ſelfe am moou'd to woo thee for my wife.

Kate. Moou'd, in good time, let him that moou'd you hether
Remoue you hence: I knew you at the firſt
You were a moouable.

Pet. Why, what's a moouable?

Kate A ioyn'd ſtoole.

Pet Thou haſt it: come ſit on me.

Kate. Aſſes are made to beare, and ſo are you.

Pet. Women are made to beare, and ſo are you.

Kate. No ſuch Iade as you, if me you meane.

Pet. Alas good Kate, I will not burthen thee,
For knowing thee to be but yong and light.

Kate. Too light for ſuch a ſwaine as you to catch,
And yet as heauie as my waight ſhould be.

Pet. Should be, ſhould: buzze.

Kate. Well tane, and like a buzzard.

Pet. Oh ſlow-wing'd Turtle, ſhal a buzzard take thee?

Kat. I for a Turtle, as he takes a buzzard.

Pet. Come, come you Waſpe, y faith you are too angrie.

Kate. If I be waſpiſh, beſt beware my ſting.

Pet. My remedy is then to plucke it out.

Kate. I, if the foole could finde it where it lies.

Pet. Who knowes not where a Waſpe does weare his ſting? In his taile.

Kate. In his tongue?

Pet. Whoſe tongue.

Kate. Yours if you talke of tales, and ſo farewell.

Pet What with my tongue in your taile,
Nay, come againe, good Kate, I am a Gentleman,

Kate. That Ile trie. She ſtrikes him

Pet. I ſweare Ile cuffe you, if you ſtrike againe.

Kate So may you looſe your armes,
If you ſtrike me, you are no Gentleman,
And if no Gentleman, why then no armes.

Pet A Herald Kate? Oh put me in thy bookes.

Kate. What is your Creſt, a Coxcombe?

Pet. A combleſſe Cocke, ſo Kate will be my Hen.

Kate. No Cocke of mine, you crow too like a crauen.

Pet Nay come Kate, come: you muſt not looke ſo ſowre.

Kate It is my faſhion when I ſee a Crab.

Pet. Why here's no crab, and therefore looke not ſowre.

Kate. There's, there is.

Pet. Then ſhew it me.

Kate. Had I a glaſſe, I would.

Pet What, you meane my face.

Kate Well aym'd of ſuch a yong one.

Pet Now by S. George I am too yong for you.

Kate. Yet you are wither'd.

Pet. 'Tis with cares.

Kate I care not.

Pet. Nay I care you Kate. Infooth you ſcape not ſo.

Kate. I chafe you if I tarrie. Let me go.

Pet No, not a whit. I finde you paſſing gentle:
'Twas told me you were rough, and coy, and ſullen,
And now I finde report a very liar.
For thou art pleaſant, gameſome, paſſing courteous,
But ſlow in ſpeech: yet ſweet as ſpring-time flowers.
Thou canſt not frowne, thou canſt not looke a ſconce,
Nor bite the lip, as angry wenches will,
Nor haſt thou pleaſure to be croſſe in talke:
But thou with mildneſſe entertain'ſt thy wooers,
With gentle conference, ſoft, and affable.
Why does the world report that Kate doth limpe?
Oh ſland'rous world: Kate like the hazle twig
Is ſtraight, and ſlender, and as browne in hue
As hazle nuts, and ſweeter then the kernels.
Oh let me ſee thee walke: thou doſt not halt.

Kate. Go foole, and whom thou keep'ſt command.

Pet. Did euer Dian ſo become a Groue
As Kate this chamber with her princely gate?
O be thou Dian, and let her be Kate,

And then let Kate be chaste, and Diana sportfull.
Kate. Where did you study all this goodly speech?
Petr. It is extempore, from my mother wit
Kate. A witty mother, witlesse else her son.
Pet. Am I not wise?
Kat. Yes, keepe you warme
Pet. Marry so I meane sweet Katherine in thy bed
And therefore setting all this chat aside,
Thus in plaine termes: your father hath consented
That you shall be my wife, your dowry agreed on,
And will you, nill you, I will marry you
Now Kate, I am a husband for your turne,
For by this light, whereby I see thy beauty,
Thy beauty that doth make me like thee well,
Thou must be married to no man but me,

Enter Baptista, Gremio, Tranio.

For I am he am borne to tame you Kate,
And bring you from a wilde Kate to a Kate
Conformable as other household Kate.
Heere comes your father, neuer make denyall,
I must and will haue Katherine to my wife.
Bap. Now Signior Petruchio how speed you with my Pet. How but well?
It were impossible I should speed amisse.
Bap. Why how now daughter Katherine, in your
Kat. Call you me daughter? Now I promise you
You haue shew'd a tender fatherly regard,
To wish me wed to one halfe Lunatike,
A mad-cap ruffian, and a swearing Jacke,
That thinkes with oathes to face the matter out.
Pet. Father, 'tis thus: yourselfe and all the world
That talk'd of her, haue talk'd amisse of her:
If she be curst, it is for policie,
For she's not froward, but modest as the Doue,
She is not hot, but temperate as the morne,
For patience she will proue a second Grissell,
And Romane Lucrece for her chastitie:
And to conclude, we haue greed so well together,
That vpon sunday is the wedding day.
Kate. I'le see thee hang'd on sunday first.
Gre. Hark Petruchio, she sayes she'l see thee hang'd first.
Tra. Is this your speeding? nay then good night our part.
Pet. Be patient gentlemen, I choose her for myself,
If she and I be pleas'd, what's that to you?
'Tis bargain'd twixt vs twain being alone,
That she shall still be curst in company.
I tell you 'tis incredible to beleeue
How much she loues me: oh the kindest Kate,
She hung about my necke, and kisse on kisse
She vied so fast, protesting oath on oath,
That in a twinke she won me to her loue
Oh you are nouices, 'tis a world to see
How tame when men and women are alone,
A meacocke wretch can make the curstest shrew.
Giue me thy hand Kate, I will vnto Venice
To buy apparell 'gainst the wedding day.
Prouide the feast father, and bid the guests,
I will be sure my Katherine shall be fine
Bap. I know not what to say, but giue me your hands,
God send you ioy, Petruchio, 'tis a match.
Gre. Tra. Amen say we, we will be witnesses.
Pet. Father, and wife, and gentlemen adieu,
I will to Venice, sunday comes apace,
We will haue rings, and things, and fine array,
And kisse me Kate, we will be married a sunday.
Exit Petruchio and Katherine.
Gre. Was euer match clapt vp so suddainly?
Bap. Faith Gentlemen now I play a marchants part,
And venture madly on a desperate Mart.
Tra. 'Twas a commodity lay fretting by you,
'Twill bring you gaine, or perish on the seas
Bap. The gaine I seeke, is quiet me the match.
Gre. No doubt but he hath got a quiet catche.
But now Baptista, to your yonger daughter,
Now is the day we long haue looked for,
I am your neighbour, and was suter first.
Tra. And I am one that loue Bianca more
Then words can witnesse, or your thoughts can guesse.
Gre. Youngling thou canst not loue so deare as I
Tra. Grey-beard thy loue doth freeze.
Gre. But thine doth fry,
Skipper stand backe, 'tis age that nourisheth.
Tra. But youth in Ladies eyes that flourisheth
Bap. Content you gentlemen I will compound this strife
'Tis deeds must win the prize, and he of both
That can assure my daughter greatest dower,
Shall haue my Biancas loue.
Say Signior Gremio, what can you assure her?
Gre. First, as you know, my house within the City
Is richly furnished with plate and gold,
Basons and ewers to laue her dainty hands
My hangings all of tyrian tapestry:
In Ivory coffers I haue stuft my crownes
In Cypres chests my arras counterpoints,
Costly apparell, tents, and Canopies,
Fine Linnen, Turky cushions boste with pearle,
Valens of Venice gold, in needle worke:
Pewter and brasse, and all things that belongs
To house or house-keeping: then at my farme
I haue a hundred milch-kine to the pale,
Sixe-score fat Oxen standing in my stalls,
And all things answerable to this portion.
My selfe am strooken in yeeres I must confesse,
And if I die to morrow this is hers,
If whilst I liue she will be only mine.
Tra. That only came well in. Sir list to me,
I am my fathers heire and only sonne,
If I may haue your daughter to my wife
Ile leaue her houses three or foure as good
Within rich Pisa walls, as any one
Old Signior Gremio has in Padua,
Besides, two thousand Duckets by the yeere
Of reuenue land, and which shall be her ioynter.
What, haue I pincht you Signior Gremio?
Gre. Two thousand Duckets by the yeere of land,
My land amounts not to so much in all:
That she shall haue, besides an Argosie
That now is lying in Marcellus roade:
What, haue I choakt you with an Argosie?
Tra. Gremio, 'tis known my father hath no lesse
Then three great Argosies, besides two Galliasses
And twelue tite Galleys, these I will assure her,
And twice as much whate're thou offerst next
Gre. Nay, I haue offered all, I haue no more,
And she can haue no more then all I haue,
If you like me, she shall haue me and mine.
Tra. Why then the maid is mine from all the world
By your firme promise: Gremio is out vied
Bap. I must confesse your offer is the best,
And let your father make her the assurance,

Shee is your owne, else you must pardon me:
If you should die before him, where's her dower?
Tra. That's but a cauill: he is olde, I young.
Gre. And may not yong men die as well as old?
Bap. Well gentlemen, I am thus resolu'd,
On sonday next, you know
My daughter Katherine is to be married:
Now on the sonday following, shall Bianca
Be Bride to you, if you make this assurance
If not, to Signior Gremio.
And so I take my leaue, and thanke you both Exit.
Gre. Adieu good neighbour: now I feare thee not Sirra, yong gamester, your father were a foole
To giue thee all, and in his waining age
Set foot vnder thy table: tut, a toy,
An olde Italian foxe is not so kinde my boy Exit
Tra. A vengeance on your crafty withered hide,
Yet I haue fac'd it with a card of ten.
'Tis in my head to doe my master good:
I see no reason but supposd Lucentio
Must get a father, call'd supposd Vincentio,
And that's a wonder: fathers commonly
Doe get their children; but in this case of woing,
A childe shall get a sire, if I faile not of my cunning. Exit

Actus Tertia.

Enter Lucentio, Hortensio, and Bianca.

Luc. Fiddler forbeare you grow too forward Sir,
Haue you so soone forgot the entertainment
Her sister Katherine welcom'd you withall
Hort. But wrangling pedant, this is
The patroness of heauenly harmony
Then giue me leaue to haue preheminence,
And when in Musicke we haue spent an houre,
Your Lecture shall haue leisure for as much.
Luc. Preposterous Ass that neuer read so farre,
To know the cause why musicke was ordain'd:
Was it not to refresh the minde of man
After his studies, or his vsuall paine?
Then giue me leaue to read Philosophy,
And while I paule, serue in your harmony
Hort. Sirra, I will not beare these braues of thine
Bianc. Why gentlemen you doe me double wrong,
To striue for that which resteth in my choice.
I am no breeching scholler in the schooles,
Ile not be tied to howres, nor pointed times,
But learne my Lessons as I please my selfe,
And to cut off all strife: heere sit we downe,
Take you your instrument, play you the whiles,
His Lecture will be done ere you haue tun'd.
Hort. You'll leaue his Lecture when I am in tune?
Luc. That will be neuer, tune your instrument.
Bian. Where left we last?
Luc. Heere Madam Hic Ibat Simois, hic est Sigeria tellus, hic steterat Priami regia Celsa senis.
Bian. Conster them.
Luc. Hic Ibat, as I told you before, Simois, I am Lucentio, hic est, sonne vnto Vincentio of Pisa, Sigeria tellus disguised thus to get your loue, hic steterat, and that Lucentio that comes a wooing, Priami, is my man Tranio, regia, bearing my port, celsa senis that we might beguile the old Pantaloune.
Hort. Madam, my Instrument's in tune.
Bian. Let's heare, oh fie, the treble iarres.
Luc. Spit in the hole man, and tune againe.
Bian. Now let mee see if I can conster it. Hic ibat simois, I know you not, hic est Sigeria tellus, I trust you not hic steterat Priamus, take heede he heare vs not, regia presume not, Celsa senis, despaire not.
Hort. Madam, 'tis now in tune.
Luc. All but the base.
Hort. The base is right, 'tis the base knaue that iars.
Luc. How fiery and forward our Pedant is,
Now for my life the knaue doth court my loue,
Pedascule, Ile watch you better yet.
In time I may beleeue, yet I mistrust.
Bian. Mistrust it not, for sure Aeacide
Was Ajax cald so from his grandfather
Hort. I must beleeue my master, else I promise you,
I should be arguing still vpon that doubt,
But let it rest, now Litio to you.
Good master take it not vnkindly pray
That I haue beene thus pleasant with you both.
Hort. You may go walk, and giue me leaue a while,
My Lessons make no musicke in three parts.
Luc. Are you so formall sir, well I must waite
And watch withall, for but I be deceiu'd,
Our fine Musician groweth amorous.
Hor. Madam, before you touch the instrument,
To learne the order of my fingering,
I must begin with rudiments of Art,
To teach you gamouth in a briefer sort,
More pleasant, pithy, and effectuall,
Then hath beene taught by any of my trade,
And there it is in writing fairely drawne
Bian. Why, I am past my gamouth long agoe.
Hor. Yet read the gamouth of Hortensio.
Bian. Gamouth I am, the ground of all accord:
Are, to plead Hortensio's passion
Beeme, Bianca take him for thy Lord
Cfaut, that loues with all affection:
Dsolre, one Cliffe, two notes haue I,
Elami, show pitty or I die.
Call you this gamouth? tut I like it not,
Old fashions please me best, I am not so nice
To charge true rules for old inuentions.

Enter a Messenger.

Nicke. Mistresse, your father prayes you leaue your books,
And helpe to dresse your sisters chamber vp,
You know to morrow is the wedding day
Bian. Farewell sweet masters both, I must be gone.
Luc. Faith Mistresse then I haue no cause to stay.
Hor. But I haue cause to pry into this pedant,
Methinkes he lookes as though he were in loue
Yet if thy thoughts Bianca be so humble
To cast thy wandring eyes on euery stale:
Seize thee that list, if once I finde thee ranging,
Hortensio will be quit with thee by changing Exit

Enter Baptista, Gremio, Tranio, Katherine, Bianca, and others, attendants.

Bap. Signior Lucentio, this is the pointed day
That Katherine and Petruchio should be married,
And yet we heare not of our sonne in Law:
What will be said, what mockery will it be?
To want the Bride-groome when the Priest attends
To speake the ceremoniall rites of marriage?
What saies Lucentio to this shame of ours?

No

Kate. No shame but mine, I must forsooth be forst
To giue my hand oppos'd against my heart
Vnto a mad-brain rudesby, full of spleene,
Who woo'd in haste, and means to wed at leysure
I told you I he was a frantick foole,
Hiding his bitter iests in blunt behauiour,
And to be noted for a merry man,
Hee's woo'd a thousand, poynt the day of marriage,
Make friends inuite, and proclaime the banes,
Yet neuer meanes to wed where he hath woo'd
Now must the world poynt at poore Katherine,
And say, lo, there is mad Petruchio's wife
If it would please him come and marry her.
Tra. Patience good Katherine and Baptista too,
Vpon my life Petruchio meanes but well,
Whatsoeuer fortune staies him from his word,
Though he be blunt, I know him passing wise,
Though he be merry, yet withall he's honest.
Kate. Would Katherine had neuer seen him though. Exit weeping
Bap. Goe girle, I cannot blame thee now to weepe
For such an injurie would vexe a very saint,
Much more a shrew of impatient humour.

Enter Biondello.

Bion. Master, master, newes, and such newes as you neuer heard of,
Bap. Is it new and olde too? how may that be?
Bion. Why, is it not newes to heard of Petruchio's (comming?
Bap. Is he come?
Bion. Why no sir.
Bap. What then?
Bion. He's coming
Bap. When will he be heere?
Bion. When he stands where I am, and sees you there
Tra. But say, what to thine olde newes?
Bion. Why Petruchio is coming, in a new hat and an old Ierkin, a paire of olde breeches thrice turn'd, a paire of bootes that haue been candle-cases, one buckled, another laced, an olde rusty sword ta'ne out of the Towne Armory, with a broken hilt, and chapelesse with two broken points, his horse hip'd with an old mothy saddle, and stirrops of no kindred besides possest with glanders, and like to mose in the chine, troubled with the Lampasse, infected with the fashions, full of Windgalls, sped with Spauins, raied with the Yellowes, past cure of the Fiues, stark spoyl'd with the Staggers, begnawne with the Bots, waid in the backe, and shoulder shotten, neere legg'd before, and with a halfe-checkt Bitte & a head as big of the sides as a Spanish Iennet, when being restrain'd to keepe him from stumbling, hath been often burst and now repaired with knots: one girth six times peec'd, and a womans Crupper of velure, which hath two letters for her name, fairely set down in studs, and here and there peec'd with packthred.
Bap. Who comes with him?
Bion. O sir, his Lackey, for all the world Caparison'd like the horse, with a linnen stock on one leg, and a kersey boot-hose on the other, garted with red and blew list, an old hat, & the humor of forty fancies pricked in't for a feather: a monster, a very monster in apparell, & not like a Christian foot-boy, or a gentleman's Lackey
Tra. 'Tis some odd humor pricks him to this fashion,
Yet oftentimes he goes but meane apparel'd.
Bap. I am glad he's come, howsoere he comes.
Bion. Why sir, he comes not.
Bap. Didst thou not say he comes?
Bion. Who, that Petruchio came?
Bap. I, that Petruchio came. (backe
Bion. No sir, I say his horse comes with him on his
Bap. Why that's all one
Bion. Nay by S. Iamy, I hold you a penny, a horse and a man is more then one, and yet not many

Enter Petruchio and Grumio

Pet. Come, where be these gallants? who's at home?
Bap. You are welcome sir.
Pet. And yet I come not well.
Bap. And yet you nam'd not.
Tra. Not so well apparel'd as I wish you were.
Pet. Were it better I should rush in thus.
But where is Kate? where is my louely Bride?
How does my father-in-law, and the rest of you?
And where are those gazers as good as company,
As I feare they are some wondrous monument
Some Comet, or vnusual prodigie?
Bap. Why sir, you know this is your wedding day:
First were we sad, fearing you would not come,
Now sadder that you come so vnprouided.
Fie, doffe this habit, shame to your estate,
An eye-sore to our solemne festiuall.
Tra. And tell vs what occasion of import
Hath all so long detain'd you from your wife,
And sent you hither so vnlike your selfe?
Pet. Tedious it were to tell, and harsh to heare,
Sufficeth I am come to keepe my word,
Though in some part inforced to digresse,
Which at more leysure I will so excuse,
As you shall well be satisfied with all
But where is Kate? I stay too long from her,
The morning wears, 'tis time we were at Church
Tra. See not your Bride in these vnreuerent robes,
Goe to my chamber, put on clothes of mine
Pet. Not I, beleeue me thus I will visit her
Bap. But thus I trust you will not marry her (words,
Pet. Good sooth euen thus, therefore ha done with
To me she's married not to my cloathes.
Could I repair what she will weare in me,
As I can change these poore accoutrements,
'Twere well for her and better for my selfe.
But what a foole am I to chat with you,
When I should bid good morrow to my Bride?
And seale the title with a louely kisse. Exit.
Tra. He hath some meaning in his mad attire,
We will perswade him, be it possible
To put better ere he go to Church.
Bap. I'le after him, and see the euent of this. Exit.
Tra. But sir, Loue concerneth vs to adde
Her fathers liking, which to bring to passe
As before I haue prepar'd to your worship,
I am to get a man, whate'ere he be,
It skills not much we'le fit him to our turne,
And he shall be Vincentio of Pisa,
And make assurance heere in Padua
Of greater summes then I haue promised,
So shall you quietly enioy your hope,
And marry sweet Bianca with consent.
Luc. Were it not that my fellow schoolmaster
Doth watch Bianca's steps so narrowly
'Twere good me-thinkes to steale our marriage,
Which once perform'd let all the world say no
I'le keepe mine owne despite of all the world.
Tra. That by degrees we meane to looke into,

And watch our vantage in this businesse,
Wee'll ouer-reach the grey-beard Gremio,
The narrow prying father Minola,
The quaint Musician, amorous Litio,
All for my Masters sake Lucentio

Enter Gremio

Signior Gremio came you from the Church?
Gre. As willingly as ere I came from schoole
Tra. And is the bride & Bridegroom coming home?
Gre A bridegroome say you? 'tis a groome indeed,
A grumbling groome, and that the girle shall finde
Tra Curster than she, why 'tis impossible.
Gre. Why he's a deuill a deuill, a very fiend
Tra. Why she's a deuill a deuil, the deuil's damme.
Gre Tut, she's a Lambe, a Doue, a foole to him
Ile tell you sir Lucentio, when the Priest
Should aske if Katherine should be his wife,
I, by gogs-wounes quoth he, and swore so loud,
That all amaz'd the Priest let fall the booke,
And as he stoop'd againe to take it vp,
This mad-brain'd bridegroome tooke him such a cuffe
That downe went Priest and booke, and booke and Priest,
Now take them vp quoth he that will or no.
Tra Why this is hellish, whom would not feare such a husband?
Gre Tut, after the Priest & I had left the booke,
I saw as if the Vicar meant to speake, and so he did,
But what he said I know not, for the Sexton
Be, as he was, bare sponge to vs, and so
Fell to his prayers: then for the third time he asked,
Will Kate haue Petruchio to her wedded husband?
And she cries yea, so full and shrill withall,
That all the Church did eccho at her speech,
And I seeing this came thence for very shame:
And after me I know the rout is coming,
Such a mad marriage neuer was before: harke, harke, I heare the minstrels play. Musicke playes.

Enter Petruchio, Kate, Bianca, Hortensio, Baptista

Pet. Gentlemen & friends, I thank you for your paines.
I know you thinke to dine with me to day,
And haue prepar'd great store of wedding cheere,
But so it is, my haste doth call me hence,
And therefore here I meane to take my leaue.
Bap. Is't possible you will away to night?
Pet. I must away to day before night come,
Make it no wonder: if you knew my businesse,
You would entreat me rather goe then stay.
And honest company, I thanke you all,
That haue beheld me giue away my wife
To this most patient, sweet, and vertuous wife,
Dine with my father, drinke a health to me,
For I must hence, and farewell to you all.
Tra Let vs intreat you stay till after dinner
Pet. It may not be
Gre Let me intreat you.
Pet It cannot be.
Kat Let me intreat you
Pet. I am content.
Kat Are you content to stay?
Pet I am content you shall entreat me stay,
But yet not stay, entreat me how you can
Kat. Now if you loue me stay.
Pet. Grumio, my horse.
Gru. I sir, they be ready, the Oates haue eaten the horses
Kate Nay then,
Doe what thou canst, I will not goe to day,
No, nor to morrow, not till I please my selfe,
The doore is open sir, there lies your way,
You may be iogging whiles your boots are greene:
For me, Ile not be gone till I please my selfe,
'Tis like you'll proue a iolly surly groome,
That take it on you at the first so roundly
Pet O Kate content thee, prethee be not angry
Kat I will be angry, what hast thou to doe?
Father, be quiet, he shall stay my leisure.
Gre I marry sir, now it begins to worke
Kat Gentlemen, forward to the bridall dinner,
I see a woman may be made a foole
If she had not a spirit to resist.
Pet They shall goe forward Kate at thy command,
Obey the bride you that attend on her
Goe to the feast, reuell and domineere,
Carouse full measure to her maidenhead,
Be mad and merry, or goe hang your selues:
But for my bonny Kate, she must with me
Nay, looke not big, nor stampe, nor stare, nor fret,
I will be master of what is mine owne,
She is my goods, my chattels, she is my house,
My household-stuffe, my field, my barne,
My horse, my oxe, my asse, my any thing,
And here she stands, touch her whoe'er dare,
I'll bring mine action on the proudest he
That stops my way in Padua. Grumio
Draw forth thy weapon, we are beset with theeues,
Rescue thy Mistresse if thou be a man.
Feare not sweet wench, they shall not touch thee Kate,
Ile buckler thee against a Million. Exeunt. Pet. Kat.
Bap. Nay, let them goe, a couple of quiet ones. Bap
Gre. Went they not quickly, I should die with laughing.
Tra Of all mad matches neuer was the like.
Luc Mistris, what's your opinion of your sister?
Bian That being mad herselfe she's madly mated
Gre I warrant him Petruchio is Kated
Bap Neighbours & friends, though Bride & Bridegroome wants
For to supply the places at the table,
You know there wants no iunkets at the feast
Lucentio you shall supply the Bridegroomes place,
And let Bianca take her sisters roome
Tra Shall sweet Bianca practise how to bride it?
Bap She shall Lucentio come gentlemen let's goe.
Enter Grumio Exeunt.
Gru Fie, fie on all tired iades, on all mad Masters, & all foule waies: was euer man so beaten? was euer man so reade? was euer man so weary? I am sent before to make a fire, and they are coming after to warme them: now were not I a little pot, & soone hot; my very lippes might freeze to my teeth, my tongue to the roofe of my mouth, my heart in my belly, ere a should come by a fire to thaw me, but I with blowing the fire shall warme my selfe, for considering the weather, a colder man than I am takes cold. Holla, hoa Curtis.

Enter Curtis

Curt Who is that calls so coldly?
Gru. A piece of Ice: if thou doubt it, thou maist slide from my shoulder to my heele, with no greater greater a run but my head and my necke. A fine good Curtis

Cur. Is my master and his wife comming Grumio?

Gru. Oh I Curtis I, and therefore fire, fire, cast on no water.

Cur. Is she so hot a shrew as she reported

Gru. She was good Curtis before this frost: but thou knowst winter tames man, woman, and beast: for it hath tam'd my old master, and my new mistris, and my selfe fellow Curtis.

Gru. Away you three inch foole, I am no beast

Gru. Am I but three inches? why thy horne is a foot, and so long am I at the least. But wilt thou make a fire, or shall I complaine on thee to our mistris, whose hand (she being now at hand) thou shalt soone feele, to thy cold comfort, for being slow in thy hot office.

Cur. I prethee good Grumio, tell me, how goes the world?

Gru. A cold world Curtis in every office but thine: & therefore fire: do thy duty, and have thy duty, for my Master and mistris are almost frozen to death.

Cur. There's fire readie, and therefore good Grumio the newes.

Gru. Why Jacke boy, ho boy, and as much newes as wilt thou.

Cur. Come, you are so full of conceiting.

Gru. Why therefore fire, for I have caught extreme cold. Where's the Cooke, is supper ready, the house trim'd, rushes strew'd, cobwebs swept, the servingmen in their new fustian, the white stockings, and every officer his wedding garment on? Be the Jackes fair within, the Gils fair without, the Carpets laide, and everie thing in order?

Cur. All readie: and therefore I pray thee newes.

Gru. First know my Horse is tired, my master & mistris falne out.

Cur. How?

Gru. Out of their saddles into the durt, and thereby hangs a tale.

Cur. Let's hast, good Grumio.

Gru. Lend thine eare.

Cur. Heere.

Gru. There.

Cur. This 'tis to feele a tale not to heare a tale

Gru. And therefore 'tis cal'd a tale nobile tale: and this Cuffe was but to knocke at your eare, and beseech listning: now I begin, Imprimis we came downe a fowle mire, and my Master riding behinde my Mistris.

Cur. Both of one horse?

Gru. What's that to thee?

Cur. Why a Horse

Gru. Tell thou the tale: but hadst thou not crost me, thou shouldst have heard how her horse fell, and she vnder her horse: thou shouldst have heard in, how miery a place, how she was bemoyld, how he left her with the horse vpon her, how he beat me because her horse stumbled, how she waded through the durt to pluche him off me: how he swore, how she prai'd, that never prai'd before: how I cried, how the horses ran away, how her bridle was burst: how I lost my crupper, with many things of worthy memorie, which now shall die in obliuion, and thou returne vnexperienced to thy grave.

Cur. By this reckning he is more shrew than she.

Gru. I, and that thou and the proudest of you all shall finde when he comes home. But what talke I of this? Call forth Nathaniel, Joseph, Nicholas, Philip, Walter, Sugersop and the rest: let their heads be slickely comb'd, their blew coats brush'd, and their garters of an indifferent knit: let them curtsie with their left legges, and not presume to touch a haire of my Masters horse-tale, till they kisse their hands. Are they all readie?

Cur. They are.

Gru. Call them forth.

Cur. Do you heare ho? you must meete my master to countenance my mistris.

Gru. Why she hath a face of her owne

Cur. Who knowes not that?

Gru. Thou it seemes, that cals for company to countenance her

Cur. I call them forth to credit her.

Enter foure or five Serving-men.

Gru. Why she comes to borrow nothing of them

Nat. Welcome home Grumio.

Phil. How now Grumio.

Jos. What Grumio

Nick. How now Grumio

Nat. How now old lad.

Gru. Welcome you: how now you: what you fellow you: and thus much for greeting. Now my spruce companions, is all readie, and all things neate?

Nat. All things is readie: how neere is our master?

Gru. E'ne at hand, alighted by this: and therefore be not——Cockes passion silence, I heare my master.

Enter Petruchio and Kate

Pet. Where be these knaues? What no man at doore To hold my stirrop, nor to take my horse? Where is Nathaniel, Gregory, Philip.

Omn. Heere heere sir, heere sir.

Pet. Heere sir? heere sir, heere sir, heere sir You logger-headed and vnpolisht grooms: What? no attendance, no regard, no dutie? Where is the foolish knaue I sent before?

Gru. Heere sir, as foolish as I was before.

Pet. You peasant swaine, you horson malt-horse drudge Did not I call for heere neere my house? And bring along these rascall knaues with thee?

Gru. Nathaniels coate sir was not fully made, And Gabrels pumpes were all vnpink'd i'th heele There was no Linke to colour Peters hat, And Walters dagger was not come from sheathing: There were none fine, but Adam, Rafe, and Gregory, The rest were ragged, old, and beggerly Yea, as they are, heere are they come to meete you.

Pet. Go rascals go, and fetch my supper in. Exit Ser. Where is the life that late I led? Where are those? Sit downe Kate, And welcome. Soud, soud, soud, soud.

Enter servants with supper.

Why when I say? Nay good sweete Kate be merrie Off with my boots you rogues: you villaines, when? It was the Friar of Orders grey, As he forth walked on his way Out you rogue, you plucke my foote awrie, Take that, and mend the plucke: look to't: Be merrie Kate: some water heere: what ho.

Enter one with water

Where's my Spaniel Troylus? Sirra, get you hence, And bid my cozen Ferdinand come hither: One Kate that you must kisse, and be acquainted with. Where are my Slippers? shall I have some water? Come Kate and wash, & welcome heartily: you horson villaine, will you let it fall?

Kate. Patience I pray you, 'twas a fault vnwilling.
Pet. A horson beetle-headed flap-ear'd knaue:
Come Kate sit downe, I know you haue a stomacke,
Will you giue thankes, sweete Kate, or else shall I?
What's this, Mutton?
1 Ser. I.
Pet. Who brought it?
Peter. I.
Pet. 'Tis burnt, and so is all the meate:
What dogges are these? Where is the rascall Cooke?
How durst you villaines bring it from the dresser
And serue it thus to me that loue it not?
There, take it to you, trencher, cups, and all:
You heedlesse iolt-heads, and vnmannered slaues.
What, do you grumble? Ile be with you straight.
Kate. I pray you husband be not so disquiet,
The meate was well, if you were so contented.
Pet. I tell thee Kate, 'twas burnt and dried away,
And I expressely am forbid to touch it:
For it engenders choller, planteth anger,
And better 'twere that both of vs did fast,
Since of our selues, our selues are choller-ficke,
Then feede it with such ouer-roasted flesh:
Be patient, to morrow't shalbe mended,
And for this night we'l fast for companie.
Come I will bring thee to thy Bridall chamber. Exeunt

Enter Seruants seuerally.

Nath. Peter didst euer see the like.
Peter. He kils her in her owne humor.
Grumio. Where is he?

Enter Curtis a Seruant.

Cur. In her chamber, making a sermon of continencie to her, and railes, and sweares, and rates, that shee (poore soule) knowes not which way to stand, to looke, to speake, and sits as one new risen from a dreame. Away, away, for he is coming hither.

Enter Petruchio.

Pet. Thus haue I politickely begun my reigne,
And 'tis my hope to end successefully.
My Falcon now is sharpe and passing emptie,
And till she stoope, she must not be full gorg'd,
For then she neuer lookes vpon her lure.
Another way I haue to man my Haggard,
To make her come, and know her Keepers call:
That is, to watch her, as we watch these Kites,
That bate, and beate, and will not be obedient.
She eate no meate to day, nor none shall eate.
Last night she slept not, nor to night she shall not:
As with the meate, some vndeserued fault
Ile finde about the making of the bed,
And here I'le fling the pillow, there the bolster,
This way the Couerlet, another way the sheets:
I, and amid this hurlie I intend,
That all is done in reuenge of her,
And in conclusion, she shall watch all night,
And if she chance to nod, I'le raile and brawle,
And with the clamor keepe her still awake.
This is a way to kill a Wife with kindnesse,
And thus Ile curbe her mad and head-strong humor:
He that knowes better how to tame a shrew,
Now let him speake, 'tis charity to shew. Exit

Enter Tranio and Hortensio.

Tra. Is't possible friend Licio, that mistris Bianca
Doth fancie any other but Lucentio,
I tell you sir, she beares me faire in hand.
Luc. Sir, to satisfie you in what I haue said,
Stand by, and marke the manner of his teaching

Enter Bianca.

Hor. Now Mistris, profit you in what you reade?
Bian. What Master reade you first, resolue me that?
Hor. I reade, that I professe the Art to loue.
Bian. And may you proue sir Master of your Art.
Luc. While you sweet deere proue Mistresse of my heart.
Hor. Quicke proceeders marry, now tel me I pray, you that durst sweare that your mistris Bianca
Lou'd me in the World so wel as Lucentio.
Tra. Oh despightfull Loue, vnconstant womankind,
I tel thee Licio this is wonderfull
Hor. Mistake no more, I am not Licio,
Nor a Musitian as I seeme to bee,
But one that scorne to liue in this disguise,
For such a one as leaues a Gentleman,
And makes a God of such a Cullion,
Know sir, that I am cal'd Hortensio.
Tra. Signior Hortensio, I haue often heard
Of your entire affection to Bianca,
And since mine eyes are witnesse of her lightnesse,
I will with you, if you be so contented,
Forsweare Bianca, and her loue for euer.
Hor. See how they kisse and court. Signior Lucentio,
Heere is my hand, and heere I firmly vow
Neuer to woo her more, but do forsweare her
As one vnworthie all the former fauours
That I haue fondly flatter'd them withall.
Tra. And heere I take the like vnfained oath,
Neuer to marrie with her, though she would intreate,
Fie on her, see how beastly she doth court him!
Hor. Would all the world but he had quite forsworn
For me, that I may surely keepe mine oath.
I will be married to a wealthy Widdow,
Ere three dayes passe, which hath as long lou'd me,
As I haue lou'd this proud disdainful Haggard,
And so farewel signior Lucentio,
Kindnesse in women, not their beauteous lookes
Shal win my loue, and so I take my leaue,
In resolution, as I swore before.
Tra. Mistris Bianca, blesse you with such grace,
As longeth to a Louers blessed case.
Nay, I haue tane you napping gentle Loue,
And haue forsworne you with Hortensio.
Bian. Tranio you iest, but haue you both forsworne mee?
Tra. Mistris we haue.
Luc. Then we are rid of Licio.
Tra. I'faith hee'l haue a lustie Widdow now,
That shalbe woo'd and wedded in a day.
Bian. God giue him ioy.
Tra. I and hee'l tame her
Bianca. He sayes so Tranio.
Tra. Faith he is gone vnto the taming schoole.
Bian. The taming schoole? what is there such a place?
Tra. I mistris, and Petruchio is the master,
That teacheth trickes eleuen and twentie long,
To tame a shrew, and charme her chattering tongue.

Enter Biondello.

Bion. Oh Master, master I haue watcht so long,
That I am dogge-weary, but at last I spied
An ancient Angel coming downe the hill,
Will serue the turne.
Tra. What is he Biondello?
Bio. Master, a Marcantant, or a pedant,

I know not what, but formall apparell,
In gate and countenance surely like a Father.
Luc. And what of him my friend?
Tra. If he be credulous, and trust my tale,
Ile make him glad to seeme Vincentio,
And giue assurance to Baptista Minola,
As if he were the right Vincentio
Par. Take me your loue, and then let me alone.
Enter a Pedant
Ped. God saue you sir
Tra. And you sir, you are welcome,
Trauaile you farre on, or are you at the farthest?
Ped. Sir at the farthest for a weeke or two,
But then vp farther, and as farre as Rome,
And so to Tripolis [illegible] me.
Tra What Countryman, I pray?
Ped. Of Mantua
Tra. Of Mantua sir, marrie God forbid,
And come to Padua carelesse of your life.
Ped. My life sir? how I pray? for that goes hard.
Tra. 'Tis death for any one in Mantua
To come to Padua, know you not the cause?
Your ships are staid at Venice, and the Duke
For priuate quarrel 'twixt your Duke and him,
Hath publish'd and proclaim'd it openly
'Tis merualle, but that you are but newly come,
you might haue heard it else proclaimed about.
Ped. Alas sir, it is worse for me then so,
For I haue bils for monie by exchange
From Florence, and must heere deliuer them
Tra. Well sir, to do you courtesie,
This will I do, and this I will aduise you,
First tell me, haue you euer beene at Pisa?
Ped. I sir, in Pisa haue I often bin,
Pisa renowned for graue Citizens
Tra. Among them know you one Vincentio?
Ped. I know him not, but I haue heard of him:
A Merchant of incomparable wealth.
Tra. He is my father sir, and sooth to say,
In count'nance somewhat doth resemble you.
Bion. As much as an apple doth an oyster, & all one
Tra. To saue your life in this extremitie,
This fauor will I do you for his sake,
And thinke it not the worst of all your fortunes,
That you are like to Sir Vincentio
His name and credite shal you vndertake,
And in my house you shal be friendly lodg'd,
Looke that you take vpon you as you should,
you vnderstand me sir: so shal you stay
Til you haue done your businesse in the Citie:
If this be courtesie sir, accept of it
Ped. Oh sir I do, and will repute you euer
The patron of my life and libertie
Tra. Then go with me, to make the matter good,
This by the way I let you vnderstand,
My father is heere look'd for euerie day,
To passe assurance of a dowre in marriage
Twixt me, and one Baptistas daughter heere:
In all these circumstances Ile instruct you,
Go with me to cloath you as becomes you. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Katherina and Grumio.

Gru. No, no forsooth I dare not for my life.
Kat. The more my wrong, the more his spite appears.
What, did he marrie me to famish me?
Beggers that come vnto my fathers doore,
Vpon intreatie haue a present almes,
If not, elsewhere they meete with charitie.
But I, who neuer knew how to intreat,
Nor neuer needed that I should intreate,
Am staru'd for meate, giddie for lacke of sleepe.
With oathes kept waking, and with brawling fed,
And that which spights me more then all these wants,
He does it vnder name of perfect loue:
As who should say, if I should sleepe or eate
'Twere deadly sicknesse, or else present death.
I prethee go, and get me some repast,
I care not what, but it be holsome foode.
Gru. What say you to a Neats foote?
Kate 'Tis passing good I prethee let me haue it.
Gru. I feare it is too cholerick a meate
How say you to a fat Tripe finely broyled?
Kate I like it well, good Grumio fetch it me.
Gru. I cannot tell, I feare 'tis cholerick.
What say you to a peece of Beefe and Mustard?
Kate A dish that I do loue to feede vpon
Gru. I, but the Mustard is too hot a little
Kate. Why then the Beefe, and let the Mustard rest
Gru. Nay then I will not, you shal haue the Mustard
Or else you get no Beefe of Grumio.
Kate. Then both or one, or any thing thou wilt.
Gru. Why then the Mustard without the beefe.
Kate. Go get thee gone, thou false deluding slaue,
Beats him.
That feed'st me with the verie name of meate.
Sorrow on thee, and all the packe of you
That triumph thus vpon my misery:
Go get thee gone, I say.

Enter Petruchio, and Hortensio with meate
Petr. How fares my Kate, what sweeting all amost?
Hor. Mistris, what cheere?
Kate. Faith as cold as can be.
Pet. Plucke vp thy spirits, looke cheerefully vpon me.
Heere Loue, thou seest how diligent I am,
To dresse thy meate my selfe, and bring it thee.
I am sure sweet Kate, this kindnesse merites thankes.
What, not a word? Nay then, thou lou'st it not:
And all my paines is sorted to no proofe.
Here take away this dish.
Kate. I pray you let it stand.
Pet. The poorest seruice is repaide with thankes,
And so shall mine before you touch the meate.
Kate. I thanke you sir.
Hor. Signior Petruchio, fie you are too blame:
Come Mistris Kate, Ile beare you company
Petr. Eate it vp all Hortensio, if thou louest mee
Much good do it vnto thy gentle heart:
Kate eate apace; and now my honie Loue,
Will we returne vnto thy Fathers house,
And reuell it as bravely as the best.
With silken coats and caps, and golden Rings,
With Ruffes and Cuffes, and Farthingales, and things,
With Scarfes, and Fannes, & double change of brauery,
With Amber Bracelets, Beades, and all this knauery
What hast thou din'd? The Tailor staies thy leasure,
To decke thy bodie with his ruffling treasure.
Enter Tailor.

Come

Come Tailor, let vs see these ornaments.

Enter Haberdasher.

Lay forth the gowne. What newes with you sir?

Fel. Heere's the cap your Worship did bespeake.

Pet. Why this was moulded on a porringer,
A Velure dish: Fie, fie, 'tis lewd and filthy,
Why 'tis a cockle or a walnut-shell,
A knacke, a toy, a tricke, a babies cap.
Away with it, come let me haue a bigger.

Kate. I'le haue no bigger: this doth fit the time,
And Gentlewomen weare such caps as these.

Pet. When you are gentle, you shall haue one too,
And not till then.

Hor. That will not be in hast.

Kate. Why sir, I trust I may haue leaue to speake,
And speake I will: I am no childe, no babe,
Your betters haue indur'd me say my minde,
And if you cannot, best you stop your eares.
My tongue will tell the anger of my heart,
Or else my heart concealing it will breake,
And rather then it shall, I will be free,
Euen to the vttermost as I please in words.

Pet. Why thou saist true, it is a paltrie cap,
A custard coffin, a bauble, a silken pie,
I loue thee well in that thou lik'st it not.

Kate. Loue me or loue me not, I like the cap,
And it I will haue, or I will haue none.

Pet. Thy gowne, why I: come Tailor let vs see't.
Oh mercie God, what masking stuffe is here?
What's this a sleeue? 'tis like a demi-cannon:
What, vp and downe carued like an apple Tart?
Here's snip, and nip, and cut, and slish and slash,
Like to a Censer in a barbers shop.
Why what a deuils name Tailor call'st thou this?

Hor. I see shees like to haue neither cap nor gowne.

Tai. You bid me make it orderly and well,
According to the fashion, and the time.

Pet. Marrie and did: but if you be remembred,
I did not bid you marre it to the time.
Go hop me ouer euery kennell home,
For you shall hop without my custome sir:
Ile none of it; hence, make your best of it.

Kate. I neuer saw a better fashion'd gowne,
More queint, more pleasing, nor more commendable:
Belike you meane to make a puppet of me.

Pet. Why true, he meanes to make a puppet of thee.

Tai. She saies your Worship meanes to make a puppet of her.

Pet. Oh monstrous arrogance:
Thou lyest, thou thred, thou thimble,
Thou yard three quarters, halfe yard, quarter, nale,
Thou Flea, thou Nit, thou winter cricket thou:
Brau'd in mine owne house with a skeine of thred?
Away thou Ragge, thou quantitie, thou remnant,
Or I shall so bemete thee with thy yard,
As thou shalt think on prating whilst thou liu'st.
I tell thee I, that thou hast marr'd her gowne.

Tai. Your worship is deceiued, the gowne is made
Just as my master had direction:
Grumio gaue order how it should be done.

Gru. I gaue him no order, I gaue him the stuffe.

Tai. But how did you desire it should be made?

Gru. Marrie sir with needle and thred.

Tai. But did you not request to haue it cut?

Gru. Thou hast fac'd many things.

Tai. I haue.

Gru. Face not me: thou hast brau'd many men, brau not me; I will neither be fac'd nor brau'd. I say vnto thee, I bid thy Master cut out the gowne, but I did not bid him cut it to peeces. Ergo thou lyest.

Tai. Why here is the note of the fashion to testifie.

Pet. Read it.

Gru. The note lies in's throate if he say I said so.

Tai. Imprimis, a loose bodied gowne.

Gru. Master, if euer I said loose-bodied gowne, sow me in the skirts of it, and beat me to death with a bottome of browne thred: I said a gowne.

Pet. Proceede.

Tai. With a small compast cape.

Gru. I confesse the cape.

Tai. With a trunke sleeue.

Gru. I confesse two sleeues.

Tai. The sleeues curiously cut.

Pet. I there's the villanie.

Gru. Error i'th bill sir, error i'th bill? I commanded the sleeues should be cut out, and sow'd vp againe, and that I'le proue vpon thee, though thy little finger be armato in a thombe.

Tai. This is true that I say, and I had thee in place where thou shouldst know it.

Gru. I am for thee straight, take thou the bill, giue me thy mete yard, and spare not me.

Hor. God-a-mercie Grumio, then hee shall haue no oddes.

Pet. Well sir, in breefe the gowne is not for me.

Gru. You are i'th right sir, 'tis for my mistris.

Pet. Go take it vp vnto thy masters vse.

Gru. Villaine not for thy life: Take vp my Mistresse gowne for thy masters vse.

Pet. Why sir, what's your conceit in that?

Gru. Oh sir, the conceit is deeper then you think for. Take vp my Mistris gowne to his masters vse.
Oh fie, fie, fie.

Pet. Hortensio, say thou wilt see the Tailor paide.
Go take it hence, be gone, and say no more.

Hor. Tailor, Ile pay thee for thy gowne to morrow,
Take no vnkindnesse of his hastie words:
Away I say, commend me to thy master. Exit Tai.

Pet. Well, come my Kate, we will vnto your fathers,
Euen in these honest meane habiliments:
Our purses shall be proud, our garments poore.
For 'tis the minde that makes the bodie rich.
And as the Sunne breakes through the darkest clouds,
So honor peereth in the meanest habit.
What is the Iay more precious then the Larke?
Because his feathers are more beautiful?
Or is the Adder better then the Eele,
Because his painted skin contents the eye.
Oh no good Kate: neither art thou the worse
For this poore furniture, and meane array.
If thou accountedst it shame, lay it on me,
And therefore frolicke, we will hence forthwith,
To feast and sport vs at thy fathers house.
Go call my men, and let vs straight to him,
And bring our horses vnto long-tane end,
There will we mount, and thither walke on foote,
Let's see, I thinke 'tis now some seuen a clocke,
And well we may come there by dinner time.

Kate. I dare assure you sir, 'tis almost two,
And 'twill be supper time ere you come there.

Pet. It shall be seuen ere I go to horse
Looke what I speake, or do, or thinke to doe,

You are still crossing it, sirs let's alone,
I will not goe to day, and ere I doe,
It shall be what a clock I say it is.
Hor. Why so this gallant will command the sunne.

Enter Tranio, and the Pedant drest like Vincentio.

Tra. Sir, this is the house, please it you that I call
Ped. I what else, and but I be deceiued,
Signior Baptista may remember me
Neere twentie yeares a goe in Genoa
Tra. Where we were lodgers, at the Pegasus,
Tis well, and hold your owne in any case
With such austeritie as longeth to a father

Enter Biondello.

Ped. I warrant you but here comes your boy,
Twere good he were schoold
Tra. Feare you not him now Biondello,
Now doe your duetie throughout, imagine
Imagine twere the right Vincentio.
Bion. Tut, feare not me.
Tra. But hast thou done thy errand to Baptista.
Bion. I told him that your father was at Venice,
And that you look't for him all this day in Padua.
Tra. Thou'rt a tall fellow, hold thee that to drinke,
Here comes Baptista: set your countenance sir.

Enter Baptista and Lucentio. Pedant booted and bareheaded.

Tra. Signior Baptista you are happily met:
Sir, this is the gentleman I told you of,
I pray you stand good father to me now,
Giue me Bianca for my patrimony
Ped. Soft son: sir by your leaue: hauing come to Padua
To gather in some debts, my son Lucentio
Made me acquainted with a weighty cause
Of loue betweene your daughter and himselfe:
And for the good report I heare of you,
And for the loue he beares to your daughter,
And she to him: to stay him not too long,
I am content in a good fathers care
To haue him matcht, and if you please to like
No worse than I, vpon some agreement
Me shall you finde readie and willing
With one consent to haue her shall be wed
For curious I cannot be with you
Signior Baptista, of whom I heare so well.
Bap. Sir, pardon me in what I haue to say,
Your plainnesse and your shortnesse please me well.
Right true it is your son Lucentio here
Doth loue my daughter and she loueth him,
Or both dissemble deeply their affections:
And therefore if you say no more than this,
That like a father you will deale with him,
And passe my daughter a sufficient dower,
The match is made, and all is done,
Your sonne shall haue my daughter with consent.
Tra. I thanke you sir, where then doe you know best
We be affied and such assurance tane,
As shall with either parts agreement stand
Bap. Not in my house Lucentio, for you know
Pitchers haue eares, and I haue many seruants,
Besides old Gremio is harkning still,
And happily we might be interrupted.
Tra. Then at my lodging, and it like you,
There doth my father lie and there this night
We'le passe the businesse priuately and well
Send for your daughter by your seruant here,
My boy shall fetch the Scriuener presently,
The worst is this that at so slender warning,
You are like to haue a thin and slender pittance.
Bap. It likes me well:
Cambio hie you home, and bid Bianca make her readie straight,
And if you will tell what hath happned,
Lucentios father is arriued in Padua,
And how she's like to be Lucentios wife.
Bion. I pray the gods she may with all my heart
Exit
Tran. Dally not with the gods, but get thee gone.
Enter Peter
Signior Baptista, shall I leade the way,
Welcome, one messe is like to be your cheere,
Come sir we will better it in Pisa.
Bap. I follow you. Exeunt.

Enter Lucentio and Biondello

Bion. Cambio.
Luc. What saist thou Biondello
Biond. You saw my Master winke and laugh vpon you?
Luc. Biondello what of that?
Biond. Faith nothing: but has left me here behinde to expound the meaning or morrall of his signes and tokens.
Luc. I pray thee moralize them.
Biond. Then thus: Baptista is safe talking with the deceiuing Father of a deceitfull sonne.
Luc. And what of all this.
Biond. I cannot tell, expect they are busied about a counterfeit assurance: take you assurance of her, Cum priuilegio ad imprimendum solum, to th' Church: take the Priest, Clarke, and some sufficient testimonies: I mistrust not you: but still I say, I haue no more to say, but bid Bianca farewell for euer and a day.
Luc. Hearst thou Biondello.
Biond. I cannot tarry: I knew a wench married in an instant as she went to the Garden for Parsley to stuffe a Rabbit, and so may you sir: and so adew sir, my Master hath appointed me to goe to Saint Lukes to bid the Priest be readie to come against you come with your appendix. Exit
Luc. I may and will, if she be so contented
She will be pleased, then wherefore should I doubt:
Hap what hap may, I'le roundly goe about her
It shall goe hard if Cambio goe without her. Exit

Enter Petruchio, Kate, Hortensio

Petr. Come on a Gods name, once more toward our fathers
Good Lord how bright and goodly shines the Moone
Kate. The Moone: the Sunne it is not Moonelight now
Petr. I say it is the Moone that shines so bright.
Kate. I know it is the Sunne that shines so bright.
Petr. Now by my mothers sonne, and that's my selfe
It

It shall be moones, or starre, or what I list,
Or ere I journey to your Fathers house:
Goe on, and fetch our horses backe againe,
Euermore crost and crost, nor nay but crost
Hort. Say as he saies, or we shall neuer goe.
Kate. Forsooth I pray, since we haue come so farre,
And be it moone or sunne, or what you please.
And if you please to call it a fayre Candle,
Henceforth I vow it shall be so for me.
Petr. I say it is the Moone
Kate. I know it is the Moone.
Petr. Nay then you lye: it is the blessed Sunne.
Kate. Then God be blest, it is the blessed Sunne,
But sunne it is not, when you say it is not
And the Moone changes euen as your mind:
What you will haue it named, euen that it is,
And so it shall be so for Katherine.
Hort. Petruchio goe thy wayes, the field is won
Petr. Well forward, forward, thus the bowle should run,
And not vnluckily against the Bias. (run,
But soft, Company is coming here

Enter Vincentio

Good morrow gentle Mistris: where away?
Tell me sweet Kate, and tell me truly too,
Hast neuer beheld a fresher gentlewoman?
Such warre of white and red within her cheekes.
What starres do spangle heauen with such beauty,
As those two eyes become that heauenly face?
Faire louely Maide, once more good day to thee,
Sweete Katherine embrace her for her beauties sake.
Hort. A will make the man mad to make the woman of him.
Kate. Young budding Virgin, faire, and fresh, & sweet,
Whether away, or where is thy abode?
Happy the Parents of so faire a childe;
Happier the man whom fauorable stars
Allots thee for his louely bedfellow.
Petr. Why how now Kate, I hope thou art not mad,
This is a man old, wrinckled, faded, withered,
And not a Maiden, as thou saist he is.
Kate. Pardon old father, my mistaking eies,
That haue been so bedazled with the sunne,
That euery thing I looke on seemeth greene:
Now I perceiue thou art a reuerend Father,
Pardon I pray thee for my mad mistaking.
Petr. Do good old grandsire, and withall make known
Which way thou trauellest, if along with vs,
We shall be ioyfull of thy companie.
Vin. Faire Sir, and you my merry Mistris,
That with your strange encounter much amazde me
My name is call'd Vincentio, my dwelling Pisa,
And bound I am to Padua, there to visite
A sonne of mine, which long I haue not seene.
Petr. What is his name?
Vinc. Lucentio gentle Sir.
Petr. Happy in name, the happier for thy sonne
And now by Law, as well as reuerent age,
I may intitle thee my louing Father,
The sweet condoling to my wife and me,
Thy Sonne by this hath married: wonder not,
Nor be not grieued, she is of good esteeme,
Her dowrie wealthie, and of worthie birth,
Beside so qualified, as may beseeme
The Spouse of any noble Gentleman
Let me imbrace with old Vincentio,
And wander we to see thy honest sonne
Who wants of thy arriuall be full ioyous.
Vinc. But is this true, or is it else your pleasure,
Like pleasant trauailors to breake a iest
Vpon the companie you ouertake?
Hort. I doe assure thee father so it is
Petr. Come goe along and see the truth hereof,
For our first merriments hath made thee iealous. Exeunt.
Hor. Well Petruchio, this has put me in heart;
Haue to my Widdow, and if she froward,
Then hast thou taught Hortensio to be vntoward. Exit.

Enter Biondello, Lucentio and Bianca, Gremio is out before.

Biond. Softly and swiftly sir for the Priest is ready.
Luc. I fly Biondello, but they may chance to needs thee at home, therefore leaue vs. Exit
Biond. Nay faith, I le see the Church a your backe, and then come backe to my mistris as soone as I can
Gre. I marualle Cambio comes not all this while.

Enter Petruchio, Kate, Vincentio, Grumio with Attendants.

Petr. Sir here's the doore, this is Lucentio's house,
My Fathers beares more toward the Market-place,
Thither must I, and here I leaue you sir
Vin. You shall not choose but drinke before you go,
I thinke I shall command your welcome here;
And by all likelihood some cheere is toward Knock
Gre. They're busie within, you were best knocke lowder.

Pedant lookes out of the window.

Ped. What's he that knockes as he would beat downe the gate?
Vin. Is Signior Lucentio within sir?
Ped. He's within sir, but not to be spoken withall.
Vinc. What if a man bring him a hundred pound or two to make merrie withall
Ped. Keepe your hundred pounds to your selfe, he shall need none so long as I liue
Petr. Nay, I told you your sonne was well beloued in Padua. doe you heare sir, to auoid any iealous circumstances, I pray you tell signior Lucentio that his Father is come from Padua, and is here at the doore to speake with him
Ped. Thou liest his Father is come from Padua, and here looking out at the window.
Vin. Art his Father?
Ped. I sir, so he saies if I may beleeue her.
Petr. Why how now gentleman why this is flat knauery to take vpon you another mans name.
Ped. Lay hands on the villaine, I beleeue a meanes to coozen somebody in this City vnder my countenance.

Enter Biondello.

Bio. I haue seene them in the Church together, God send 'em good shipping: but who shall tell Master Vincentio now we are vndone and brought to nothing.
Vin. Come hither crackhempe
Bion. I hope I may choose sir.
Vin. Come hither you rogue, what haue you forgot me?
Biond. Forgot you, no sir: I could not forget you, for I neuer saw you before in all my life.
Vin. What, you notorious villaine, didst thou neuer see thy Mistris father, Vincentio?

Bion. What

Bion. What my old worſhipfull old maſter? yes marie ſir ſee where he lookes out of the window.

Vin. Is ſo indeede. He beates Biondello.

Bion. Helpe,helpe,helpe,here's a mad man will murder me.

Pedan. Helpe,ſonne, helpe ſignior Baptiſta

Petr. Pree the Kate let's ſtand aſide and ſee the end of this controuerſie.

Enter Pedant with ſeruants,Baptiſta,Tranio.

Tra. Sir, what are you that offer to beate my ſeruant?

Vin. What am I ſir,nay what are you ſir: oh immortall Goddes: oh fine villaine, a ſilken doublet, a veluet hoſe,a ſcarlet cloake, and a copataine hat: oh I am vndone, I am vndone: while I plaie the good husband at home, my ſonne and my ſeruant ſpend all at the vniuerſitie.

Tra. How now, what's the matter?

Bapt. What is the man lunaticke?

Tra. Sir, you ſeeme a ſober ancient Gentleman by your habit: but your words ſhew you a mad man. why ſir,what cernes it you,if I weare Pearle and gold.I thank my good Father, I am able to maintaine it

Vin. Thy father: oh villaine, he is a Saile-maker in Bergamo.

Bap You miſtake ſir, you miſtake ſir, praie what do you thinke is his name?

Vin. His name, as if I knew not his name: I haue brought him vp euer ſince he was three yeeres old, and his name is Tronio.

Ped. Awaie,awaie mad aſſe, his name is Lucentio,and he is mine oncle ſonne and heire to the Lands of me ſignior Vincentio.

Ven. Lucentio: oh he hath murdred his Maſter: laie hold on him I charge you in the Dukes name: oh my ſonne,my ſonne: tell me thou villaine, where is my ſon Lucentio?

Tra. Call forth an officer: Carrie this mad knaue to the Iaile: father Baptiſta, I charge you ſee that hee be forth comming.

Vin. Carrie me to the Iaile?

Gre. Staie officer,he ſhall not go to priſon

Bap. Talke not signior Gremio: I ſaie he ſhall goe to priſon.

Gre. Take heede ſignior Baptiſta, leaſt you be conicatcht in this buſineſſe: I dare ſweare this is the right Vincentio.

Ped. Sweare if thou dar'ſt

Gre. Naie, I dare not ſweare it.

Tran. Then thou were beſt ſaie that I am not Lucentio

Gre. Yes, I know thee to be ſignior Lucentio.

Bap. Awaie with the dotard, to the Iaile with him.

Enter Biondello, Lucentio and Bianca.

Vin. Thus ſtrangers may be haild and abuſd: oh monſtrous villaine.

Bion. Oh we are ſpoil'd,and yonder he is,denie him, forſweare him, or elſe we are all vndone.

Exit Biondello,Tranio and Pedant as faſt as may be

Luc. Pardon ſweete father. Kneele.

Vin. Liues my ſweete ſonne?

Bion. Pardon deere father.

Bap. How haſt thou offended, where is Lucentio?

Luc. Here's Lucentio, right ſonne to the right Vincentio,
That haue by marriage made thy daughter mine,
While counterfeit ſuppoſes bleer'd thine eine.

Gre. Here's packing with a witneſſe to deceiue vs all.

Vin. Where is that damned villaine Tranio,
That fac'd and braued me in this matter ſo?

Bap. Why,tell me is not this my Cambio?

Bian. Cambio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Luc. Loue wrought theſe miracles Bianca loue
Made me exchange my ſtate with Tranio,
While he did beare my countenance in the towne,
And happily I haue arriued at the laſt
Vnto the wiſhed hauen of my bliſſe
What Tranio did my ſelfe enforſt him to;
Then pardon him ſweete Father for my ſake.

Vin. Ile ſlit the villaines noſe that would haue ſent me to the Iaile.

Bap But doe you heare ſir, haue you married my daughter without asking my good will?

Vin Feare not Baptiſta,we will content you,goe to but I will in to be reuenged for this villaine. Exit.

Bap. And I to ſound the depth of this knauerie Exit

Luc Looke not pale Bianca,thy father will not frown. Exeunt.

Gre. My cake is dough,but Ile in among the reſt,
Out of hope of all, but my ſhare of the feaſt.

Kate Husband let's follow,to ſee the end of this adoe.

Petr Firſt kiſſe me Kate,and we will.

Kate. What in the midſt of the ſtreete?

Petr What art thou aſham'd of me?

Kate. No ſir,God forbid,but aſham'd to kiſſe.

Petr. Why then let's home againe Come Sirra let's awaie.

Kate. Nay,I will giue thee a kiſſe, now praie thee Loue ſtaie.

Petr. Is not this well? come my ſweete Kate
Better once then neuer, for neuer too late. Exeunt

Actus Quintus.

Enter Baptiſta,Vincentio Gremio,the Pedant Lucentio, and Bianca Tranio, Biondello Grumio, and Widow The Seruingmen with Tranio bringing in a Banquet

Luc At laſt, though long, our iarring notes agree,
And time it is when raging warre is come,
To ſmile at ſcapes and perils ouerblowne:
My faire Bianca bid my father welcome
While I with ſelfeſame kindneſſe welcome thine
Brother Petruchio,ſiſter Katerina,
And thou Hortenſio with thy louing Widow:
Feaſt with the beſt,and welcome to my houſe,
My Banket is to cloſe our ſtomakes vp
After our great good cheere: praie you ſit downe,
For now we ſit to chat as well as eate.

Petr. Nothing but ſit and ſit,and eate and eate.

Bap. Padua affords this kindneſſe, ſonne Petruchio

Petr. Padua affords nothing but what is kinde

Hor. For both our ſakes I would that word were true.

Pet. Now for my life Hortenſio feares his Widow.

Wid. Then neuer truſt me if I be afeard

Petr. You are verie ſenſible, and yet you miſſe my ſence:
I meane Hortenſio is afeard of you.

Wid. He

Wid. He that is giddie thinks the world turns round
Petr Roundly replied
Kat. Mistris, how meane you that?
Wid. Thus I conceive by him.
Petr. Conceives by me how likes Hortensio that?
Hor. My Widdow sayes, thus she conceives her tale
Petr. Verie well mended: kisse him for that good Widdow.
Kat. He that is giddie thinkes the world turnes round, I praise you tell me what you meant by that.
Wid. Your husband being troubled with a shrew, Measures my husbands sorrow by his woe:
And now you know my meaning.
Kate. A verie meane meaning.
Wid Right, I meane you.
Kat. And I am meane indeede, respecting you
Petr. To her Kate
Hor To her Widdow.
Petr. A hundred markes, my Kate does put her down
Hor That's my office
Petr Spoke like an Officer: ha to the lad.
Drinkes to Hortensio.
Bap. How likes Gremio these quicke witted folkes?
Gre. Believe me sir, they But together well
Bian. Head, and but an hasty witted bodie,
Would say your Head and Master were neede and horne
Vin I Mistris sir, hath she not a horne on you?
Bian. I but not for gazing me, therefore let sleepe again
Petr. Nay that you shall not since you have begun:
Have at you for a better bord or too.
Bian. Am I your Bird, I meane to shift my bush,
And then pursue me as you drew your Bow.
You are welcome all. Exit Bianca.
Petr She hath prevented me, here Signior Tranio,
This bird you aim'd at, though you hit her not,
Therefore a health to all that shot and miss'd.
Tra. Oh sir, Lucentio slipt me like his Grey-hound,
Which runs himselfe, and catches for his Master
Petr. A good swift simile, but something currish
Tra 'Tis well sir that you hunted for your selfe:
'Tis thought your Deere does hold you at a bay.
Bap Oh, oh Petruchio, Tranio hits you now.
Luc. I thanke thee for that gird good Tranio
Hor. Confesse, confesse, hath he not hit you here?
Petr. A has a little gall'd me I confesse
And as the Jest did glance away from me,
'Tis ten to one it maim'd you two outright.
Bap Now in good sadnesse sonne Petruchio,
I thinke thou hast the veriest Shrew of all
Petr. Well, I say no: and therefore for assurance,
Let's each one send unto his wife,
And he whose wife is most obedient,
To come at first when he doth send for her,
Shall win the wager which we will propose
Hort. Content, what's the wager?
Luc. Twentie crowns.
Petr. Twentie crowns,
Ile venture so much of my Hawke or Hound,
But twentie times so much upon my Wife.
Luc. A hundred then.
Hor. Content.
Petr A match, 'tis done.
Hor. Who shall begin?
Luc That will I.
Go Biondello, bid your Mistris come to me.
Bio. I go. Exit.
Bap. Sonne, Ile be your halfe, Bianca comes.
Luc. Ile have no halves: Ile beare it all my selfe.
Enter Biondello.
How now, what newes?
Bio. Sir, my Mistris sends you word
That she is busie, and she cannot come.
Petr. How? she's busie, and she cannot come: is that an answere?
Gre I, and a kinde one too
Pray God sir your wife send you not a worse.
Petr. I hope better.
Hor. Sirra Biondello, goe and intreate my wife to come to me forthwith. Exit Bion.
Petr. Oh ho, intreate her, nay then shee must needes come
Hor. I am afraid sir, doe what you can
Enter Biondello
Yours will not be entreated: Now, where's my wife?
Bion. She sayes you have some goodly Jest in hand,
She will not come: she bids you come to her.
Petr. Worse and worse, she will not come:
O vile, intolerable, not to be indur'd
Sirra Grumio, goe to your Mistris,
Say I command her come to me. Exit.
Hor. I know her answere.
Pet What?
Hor. She will not.
Petr. The fouler fortune mine, and there an end.

Enter Katerina.

Bap. Now by my holidam here comes Katerina
Kat. What is your will sir, that you send for me?
Petr. Where is your sister, and Hortensios wife?
Kate. They sit conferring by the Parler fire
Petr. Goe fetch them hither, if they denie to come,
Swinge me them soundly forth vnto their husbands
Away I say, and bring them hither straight.
Luc. Here is a wonder, if you talke of a wonder.
Hor. And so it is: I wonder what it boads
Petr. Marrie peace it boads, and love, and quiet life,
An awfull rule, and right supremacie:
And to be short, what not, that's sweete and happie.
Bap. Now fare befall thee good Petruchio;
The wager thou hast won, and I will adde
Vnto their losses twentie thousand crownes,
Another dowrie to another daughter,
For she is chang'd as she had never bin.
Petr. Nay, I will win my wager better yet,
And show more signe of her obedience,
Her new built vertue and obedience
Enter Kate, Bianca, and Widdow.
See where she comes, and brings your froward Wives
As prisoners to her womanlie perswasion
Katerine, that Cap of yours becomes you not,
Off with that babble, throw it vnderfoote.
Wid. Lord let me never have a cause to sigh,
Till I be brought to such a silly passe
Bian. Fie what a foolish duetie call you this?
Luc. I would your duetie were as foolish too:
The wisdome of your duetie faire Bianca,
Hath cost me five hundred crownes since supper time.
Bian. The more foole you for laying on my duetie
Petr. Katherine I charge thee tell these head-strong women, what duetie they doe owe their Lords and husbands.

Wid. Come,

Wid. Come, come, your mocking: we will haue no telling.

Pet. Come on I say, and first begin with her.

Wid. She shall not.

Pet. I say she shall, and first begin with her.

Kate. Fie, fie, vnknit that threatning vnkinde brow,
And dart not scornefull glances from those eies,
To wound thy Lord, thy King, thy Gouernour.
It blots thy beautie, as frosts doe bite the Meads,
Confounds thy fame, as whirlewinds shake faire budds,
And in no sence is meete or amiable.
A woman mou'd, is like a fountaine troubled,
Muddie, ill seeming, thicke, bereft of beautie;
And while it is so, none so dry or thirstie
Will daigne to sip, or touch one drop of it.
Thy husband is thy Lord, thy life, thy keeper,
Thy head, thy soueraigne: One that cares for thee,
And for thy maintenance. Commits his body
To painfull labour, both by sea and land
To watch the night in stormes, the day in cold,
Whil'st thou ly'st warme at home, secure and safe,
And craues no other tribute at thy hands,
But loue, faire looker, and true obedience;
Too little payment for so great a debt.
Such duetie as the subiect owes the Prince,
Euen such a woman oweth to her husband:
And when she is froward, peeuish, sullen, sowre,
And not obedient to his honest will,
What is she but a foule contending Rebell,
And graceless Traitor to her louing Lord?
I am asham'd that women are so simple,
To offer warre, where they should kneele for peace
Or seeke for rule, supremacie, and sway,
When they are bound to serue, loue, and obay.
Why are our bodies soft, and weake, and smooth,
Vnapt to toyle and trouble in the world,
But that our soft conditions, and our harts,
Should well agree with our external parts?
Come, come, you froward and vnable wormes,
My minde hath bin as bigge as one of yours,
My heart as great, my reason haplesse more,
To bandie word for word, and frowne for frowne;
But now I see our Launces are but strawes
Our strength as weake, our weakenesse past compare,
That seeming to be most, which we indeed least are.
Then vale your stomackes, for it is no boote,
And place your hands below your husbands foote
In token of which duetie, if he please,
My hand is readie, may it do him ease

Pet. Why there's a wench: Come on, and kisse mee Kate

Luc. Well go thy wayes olde Lad for thou shalt ha'r.

Vin. 'Tis a good hearing, when children are toward

Luc But a harsh hearing, when women are froward,

Pet Come Kate, weele to bed,
We three are married, but you two are sped
'Twas I wonne the wager, though you hit the white,
And being a winner, God giue you good night.

Exit Petruchio

Hortens. Now go thy wayes, thou hast tam'd a curst Shrow

Luc. 'Tis a wonder, by your leaue, she will be tam'd so

FINIS.

ALL'S
Well, that Ends Well.

Actus primus. Scœna Prima.

Enter yong Bertram Count of Rossillion, his Mother, and Helena, Lord Lafew, all in blacke.

Mother.

IN delyuering my sonne from me, I burie a second husband.

Ber. And I in going Madam, weep ore my fathers death a new, but I must attend his Maiesties command, to whom I am now in Ward, euer more in subiection.

Laf. You shall find of the King a husband Madame, you sir a father. He that so generally is at all times good, must of necessitie hold his vertue to you, whose worthinesse would stirre it vp where it wanted rather then lack it where there is such abundance.

Mo. What hope is there of his Maiesties amendment?

Laf. He hath abandond his Physitions Madam, vnder whose practises he hath perseuered to me with hope, and finds no other aduantage in the processe, but only the losing of hope by time.

Mo. This young Gentlewoman had a father, O that had how sad a passage 'tis, whose skill was almost as great as his honestie, had it stretch'd so far, would haue made nature immortall, and death should haue play for lacke of worke. Would for the King's sake he were liuing I think it would be the death of the Kings disease.

Laf. How call'd you the man you speake of Madam?

Mo. He was famous for his gentle profession, and it was a great griefe to me the rather I proue Virginem Matrem.

Laf. He was excellent indeed Madam, the King very lately spoke of him admiringly, and mourningly: he was skilfull enough to haue liu'd still, if knowledge could haue set vp the mortall date.

Ros. What is it my good Lord the King languishes of?

Laf. A Fistula my Lord.

Ber. I heard not of it before.

Laf. I would it were not notorious. Was this Gentlewoman the Daughter of Gerard de Narbon?

Mo. His sole child my Lord, and bequeathed to my ouerlooking. I haue those hopes of her good, that her education promises her dispositions she inherits, which makes faire gifts fairer: for where an vncleane mind carries vertuous qualities, there commendations go with pitty, they are vertues and traitors too: in her they are the better for their simplenesse; she derives her honestie and atcheeues her goodnesse.

Laf. Your commendations Madam get from her teares.

Mo. 'Tis the best brine a Maiden can season her praise in. The remembrance of her father neuer approches her heart but the tirrany of her sorrowes takes all liuelihood from her cheeke. No more of this Helena, go to, no more least it be rather thought you affect a sorrow, then to haue.

Hel. I do affect a sorrow indeed, but I haue it too.

Laf. Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead, excessiue griefe the enemie to the liuing.

Mo. If the liuing be enemie to the griefe, the excesse makes it soone mortall.

Ros. Madam I desire your holy wishes.

Laf. How vnderstand we that?

Mo. Be thou blest Bertram, and succeed thy father In manners as in shape, thy blood and vertue Contend for Empire in thee, and thy goodnesse Share with thy birthright. Loue all, trust a few, Do wrong to none. Be able for thine enemie Rather in power then vse, and keepe thy friend Vnder thy owne life's key: be checkt for silence, But neuer taxt for speech. What heauen more will, That thee may furnish, and my prayers plucke downe, Fall on thy head. Farewell my Lord,
'Tis an vnseason'd Courtier, good my Lord
Aduise him.

Laf. He cannot want the best
That shall attend his loue.

Mo. Heauen bless him. Farewell Bertram.

Ros. The best wishes that can be forg'd in your thoughts be seruants to you. be comfortable to my mother, your Mistris, and make much of her.

Laf. Farewell pretty Lady, you must hold the credit of your father.

Hell. O were that all, I thinke not on my father,
And these great teares grace his remembrance more
Then those I shed for him. What was he like?
I haue forgot him. My imagination
Carries no fauour in't but Bertrams,
I am vndone, there is no living, none,
If Bertram be away. 'Twere all one,
That I should loue a bright particuler starre,
And think to wed it, he is so aboue me
In his bright radience and collateral light,

Must

Must I be comforted, not in his sphere;
Th'ambition in my loue thus plagues it selfe:
The hind that would be mated by the Lion
Must die for loue. 'Twas prettie, though a plague
To see him euerie houre to sit and draw
His arched browes, his hawking eie, his curles
In our hearts table: heart too capeable
Of euerie line and trieke of his sweet fauour.
But now he's gone, and my idolatrous fancie
Must sanctifie his Reliques. Who comes here?

Enter Parrolles.

One that goes with him: I loue him for his sake,
And yet I know him a notorious Liar,
Thinke him a great way foole, solie a coward,
Yet these fixt euils sit so fit in him,
That they take place, when Vertues steely bones
Lookes bleake i'th cold wind: withall full oft we see
Cold wisedome waighing downe superfluous soule.

Par. Saue you faire Queene.

Hel. And you Monarch.

Par. No.

Hel. And no.

Par. Are you meditating on virginitie?

Hel. Is you haue some stame of souldier in you: Let mee aske you a question. Man is enemie to virginitie, how may we barracado it against him?

Par. Keepe him out.

Hel. But he assailes, and our virginitie though valiant, in the defence yet is weak: vnfold to vs some warlike resistance.

Par. There is none: Man setting downe before you, will vndermine you, an I blow you vp.

Hel. Bleſſe our poore Virginity from vnderminers and blowers vp. Is there no Military policy how Virgins might blow vp men?

Par. Virginity being blowne downe, Man will quickliest be blowne vp: marry in blowing him downe againe, with the breach your selues made, you lose your Citty. It is not politique, in the Common-wealth of Nature, to preserue virginity. Losse of Virginitie, is rationall increase, and there to liue a Virgin, is prodigall contempt: and so, ever according to reason, is punisht. I cannot tell if your selfe were made, were it ordain'd to make Virgins. Virginitie, by being once lost, may be ten times found: by being ever kept, it is ever lost: 'tis too cold a companion. Away with't.

Hel. I will stand for't a little, though therefore I die a Virgin.

Par. There's little can bee saide in't, 'tis against the rule of Nature. To speake on the part of virginitie, is to accuse your Mothers; which is most infallible disobedience. He that hangs himselfe is a Virgin: Virginitie murthers it selfe, and should be buried in highwayes out of all sanctified limit, as a desperate Offendresse against Nature. Virginitie breedes mites, much like a Cheese, consumes it selfe to the very paring, and so dies with feeding his owne stomacke. Besides, Virginitie is peeuish, proud, ydle, made of selfe-loue, which is the most inhibited sinne in the Canon. Keepe it not, you cannot choose but loose by't. Out with't: within ten yeare it will make it selfe two, which is a goodly increase, and the principall it selfe not much the worse. Away with't.

Hel. How might one do sir, to loose it to her owne liking?

Par. Let mee see. Marry ill, to like him that ne're it likes. 'Tis a commoditie will lose the glosse with lying: The longer kept, the lesse worth. Off with't while 'tis vendible. Answer the time of request. Virginitie like an olde Courtier, weares her cap out of fashion, richly suited, but vnsuteable, iust like the brooch & the tooth-pick, which were not now. your Date is better in your Pye and your Porredge, then in your cheeke: and your virginity, your old virginity, is like one of our French wither'd peares, it lookes ill, it eates drily, marry 'tis a wither'd peare: it was formerly better, marry yet 'tis a wither'd peare. Will you any thing with it?

Hel. Not my virginity yet.
There shall you Master haue a thousand loues,
A Mother, and a Mistresse, and a friend,
A Phœnix, Captaine, and an enemy,
A guide, a Goddesse, and a Soueraigne,
A Counsellor, a Traitresse, and a Deare,
His humble ambition, proud humility,
His iarring, concord, and his discord, dulcet,
His faith, his sweet disaster: with a world
Of pretty fond adoptious christendomes
That blinking Cupid gossips. Now shall he—
I know not what he shall. God send him well,
The Courts a learning place, and he is one.

Par. What one, i'faith?

Hel. That I wish well. 'Tis pitty.

Par. What's pitty?

Hel. That wishing well had not a body in't,
Which might be felt, that we the poorer borne,
Whose baser starres do shut vs vp in wishes,
Might with effects of them follow our friends,
And shew what we alone must thinke, which neuer
Returne vs thankes.

Enter Page.

Pag. Monsieur Parrolles,
My Lord cals for you.

Par. Little Helen farewell, if I can remember thee, I will thinke of thee at Court.

Hel. Monsieur Parrolles, you were borne vnder a charitable starre.

Par. Vnder Mars.

Hel. I especially thinke vnder Mars.

Par. Why vnder Mars?

Hel. The warres hath so kept you vnder, that you must needes be borne vnder Mars.

Par. When he was predominant.

Hel. When he was retrograde I thinke rather.

Par. Why thinke you so?

Hel. You go so much backward when you fight.

Par. That's for aduantage.

Hel. So is running away,
When feare proposes the safetie:
But the composition that your valour and feare makes in you, is a vertue of a good wing, and I like the weare well.

Parol. I am so full of busines, I cannot answere thee acutely. I will returne perfect Courtier, in the which my instruction shall serue to naturalize thee, so thou wilt be capable of a Courtiers counsell, and vnderstand what aduice shall thrust vppon thee, else thou dieſt in thine vnthankfulnes, and thine ignorance makes thee away: farewell. When thou hast leysure, say thy prayers. when thou hast none, remember thy Friends.

Get thee a good husband, and vse him as he vses thee:
So farewell.

Hel. Our remedies oft in our selues do lye,
Which we ascribe to heauen: the fated skye
Giues vs free scope, only doth backward pull
Our slow designes, when we our selues are dull.
What power is it, which mounts my loue so hye,
That makes me see, and cannot feede mine eye?
The mightiest space in fortune, Nature brings
To ioyne like, likes, and kisses like the natiue things.
Impossible be strange attempts to those
That weigh their paines in sense, and do suppose
What hath been, cannot be. Who euer strou'e
To shew her merit, that did miss her loue?
(The kings disease my project may deceiue me,
But my intents are fixt, and will not leaue me. Exit

Florish Cornets.

Enter the King of France with Letters, and diuers Attendants.

King. The Florentines and Senoys are by th'eares,
Haue fought with equall fortune, and continue
A brauing warre.

1.Lo.G. So 'tis reported sir.

King. Nay 'tis most credible, we heere receiue it,
A certaintie vouch'd from our Cosin Austria,
With caution, that the Florentine will moue vs
For speedie aydes: wherein our dearest friend
Prejudicates the businesse, and would seeme
To haue vs make denall.

1.Lo.G. His loue and wisedome
Approu'd so to your Maiesty, may pleade
For amplest credence.

King. He hath arm'd our answer,
And Florence is denie'de before he comes:
Yet for our Gentlemen that meane to see
The Tuscan seruice, freely haue they leaue
To stand on either part.

2.Lo.E. It well may serue
A nurserie to our Gentrie, who are sicke
For breathing, and exploit.

King. What's he comes heere.

Enter Bertram, Lafew, and Parolles.

1.Lo.G. It is the Count Rosignoll my good Lord, Yong Bertram.

King. Youth thou bear'st thy Fathers face,
Franke Nature rather curious than in haste
Hath well compos'd thee. Thy Fathers morall parts
Maist thou inherit too: Welcome to Paris.

Ber. My thanks and duty are your Maiesties.

King. I would I had that corporall soundnesse now,
As when thy father, and my selfe, in friendship
First tride our soldiershp: he did looke farre
Into the seruice of the time, and was
Discipled of the braue. He lasted long,
But on vs both did haggish Age steale on,
And wore vs out of act. It much repaires me
To talke of your good father, in his youth
He had the wit which I can well obserue
To day in our yong Lords: but they may iest
Till their wits be worne away. Welcome Count,
Ere they can hide their leuity in honour:
So like a Courtier, contempt nor bitternesse

Were in his pride, or sharpnesse; if they were,
His equall had awak'd them, and his honour
Clocke to it selfe, knew the true minute when
Exception bid him speake: and at this time
His tongue obey'd his hand. Who were below him,
He vs'd as creatures of another place,
And bow'd his eminent top to their low rankes,
Making them proud of his humilitie,
In their poore praise he humbled: Such a man
Might be a copie to these yonger times;
Which followed well, would demonstrate them now
But goers backward.

Ber. His good remembrance sir
Lies richer in your thoughts, then on his tombe:
So in approoфe liues not his Epitaph,
As in your royall speech.

King. Would I were with him he would alwaies say,
(Me thinkes I heare him now) his plausiue words
He scatter'd not in eares, but grafted them
To grow there and to beare: Let me not liue,
This his good melancholly oft began
On the Catastrophe and heele of pastime
When it was out. Let me not liue (quoth he)
After my flame lackes oyle, to be the snuffe
Of yonger spirits, whose apprehensiue senses
All but new things disdaine; whose iudgements are
Meere fathers of their garments: whose constancies
Expire before their fashions: this he wish'd
I after him, do after him wish too.
Since I not wax nor honie can bring home,
I quickly were dissolued from my hiue
To giue some Labourers roome.

2.Lo.E. You're loued Sir,
They that least lend it you, shall lacke you first.

King. I fill a place I know't: how long ist Count
Since the Physitian at your fathers died?
He was much fam'd.

Ber. Some six moneths last'e way my Lord.

King. If he were liuing, I would try him yet.
Lend me an arme: the rest haue worne me out
With seuerall applications: Nature and sicknesse
Debate it at their leisure. Welcome Count,
My sonne's no deerer.

Ber. Thanke your Maiesty. Exit

Florish.

Enter Countesse, Steward, and Clowne.

Count. I will now heare, what say you of this gentlewoman.

Ste. Madam the care I haue had to euen your content, I wish might be found in the Kalender of my past endeuours, for then we wound our Modestie, and make foule the clearenesse of our deseruings, when of our selues we publish them.

Count. What does this knaue heere? Get you gone sirra: the complaints I haue heard of you I do not all beleeue, 'tis my slownesse that I doe not: For I know you lacke not folly to commit them, & haue abilitie enough to make such knaueries yours.

Clo. 'Tis not vnknown to you Madam, I am a poore fellow.

Count. Well sir.

Clo. No maddam,
'Tis not so well that I am poore, though many of

of the rich are damn'd, but if I may haue your Ladiſhips good will to goe to the world, Isbell the woman and I will doe as we may

Count. Wilt thou needes be a beggar?

Clo. I doe beg your good will in that caſe.

Count. In what caſe?

Clo. In Isbels caſe and mine owne. Seruice is no heritage, and I thinke I ſhall neuer haue the bleſſing of God, till I haue iſſue a my bodie: for they ſay barnes are bleſſings.

Count. Tell me thy reaſon why thou wilt marrie?

Clo. My poore bodie Madam requires it, I am driuen on by the fleſh, and hee muſt needes goe that the diuell driues.

Count. Is this all your worſhips reaſon?

Clo. Faith Madam I haue other holie reaſons, ſuch as they are.

Count. May the world know them?

Clo. I haue beene Madam a wicked creature, as you and all fleſh and blood are, and indeede I doe marrie that I may repent.

Count. Thy marriage ſooner then thy wickedneſſe

Clo. I am out a friends Madam, and I hope to haue friends for my wiues ſake

Count. Such friends are thine enemies knaue

Clo. Y'are ſhallow Madam in great friends, for the knaues couer the worſe part of my faults, as when I am drunke I ſleepe: he that cures my Land, pares my nailes, and gets me leaue to Inne the crop: if I be his cuckold hee's my drudge; he that comforts my wife, is the cheriſher of my fleſh and blood; hee that cheriſhes my fleſh and blood, loues my fleſh and blood; he that loues my fleſh and blood is my friend: ergo, he that kiſſes my wife is my friend: if men could be contented to be what they are, there were no feare in marriage, for yong Charbon the Puritan, and old Poyſam the Papiſt, how ſomere their hearts are ſeuer'd in Religion, their heads are both one, they may ioule horne together like any Deare i'th Herd.

Count. Wilt thou euer be a foule mouth'd and calumnious knaue?

Clo. A Prophet I Madam, and I ſpeake the truth the next waie, for I the Ballad will repeate, which men full true ſhall finde, your marriage comes by deſtinie, your Cuckow ſings by kinde.

Count. Get you gone ſir, Ile talke with you more anon.

Stew. May it pleaſe you Madam, that hee bid Helen come to you, of her I am to ſpeake.

Count. Sirra tell my gentlewoman I would ſpeake with her, Helen I meane.

Clo. Was this faire face the cauſe, quoth ſhe,
Why the Grecians ſacked Troy.
Fond done, done fond was this King Priams ioy,
With that ſhe ſighed as ſhe ſtood,
And gaue this ſentence then, among nine bad if one be good, among nine bad if one be good, there's yet one good in ten.

Count. What, one good in tenne? you corrupt the ſong ſirra.

Clo. One good woman in ten Madam, which is a purifying o'th' ſong: would God would ſerue the world ſo all the yeere, we'd finde no fault with the tithe woman if I were the Parſon, one in ten quoth a? and we might haue a good woman borne but or euerie blazing ſtarre, or at an earthquake, 'twould mend the Lotterie well, a man may draw his heart out ere a plucke one.

Count. Youle begone ſir knaue, and doe as I command you?

Clo. That man ſhould be at woman's command, and yet no hurt done, though honeſtie be no Puritan, yet it will doe no hurt, it will weare the Surplis of humilitie ouer the blacke-Gowne of a bigge heart: I am going forſooth, the buſineſſe is for Helen to come hither.

Exit

Count. Well now

Stew. I know Madam you loue your Gentlewoman intirely.

Count. Faith I doe: her Father bequeath'd her to mee, and ſhe her ſelfe without other aduantage, may lawfully make title to as much loue as ſhee findes, there is more owing her then is paid, and more ſhall be paid her then ſhee'l demand

Stew. Madam, I was verie late more neere her then I thinke ſhee wiſht me', alone ſhee was, and did communicate to her ſelfe her owne words to her owne eares, ſhee thought, I dare vowe for her, they touche not any ſtranger ſence, her matter was, ſhee loued your Sonne; Fortune ſhee ſaid was no goddeſſe, that had put ſuch difference betwixt their two eſtates: Loue no god, that would not extend his might onely, where qualities were euen, Queene of Virgins, that would ſuffer her poore Knight ſurpriſ'd without reſcue in the firſt aſſault or ranſome afterward: This ſhee deliuer'd in the moſt bitter touch of ſorrow that ere I heard Virgin exclaime in, which I held my dutie fitteſt to obey and ſpeake vnto you what, ſithence in the loſſe that may happen, it concernes you ſomething to know it

Count. You haue diſcharg'd this honeſtlie, keepe it to your ſelfe, many likelihoods informd mee of this before, which hung ſo tottring in the ballance, that I could neither beleeue nor miſdoubt: praie you leaue mee, ſtall this in your boſome, and I thanke you for your honeſt care: I will ſpeake with you further anon. Exit Steward.

Enter Helen.

Old Count. Even ſo it was with me when I was yong:
If euer we are nature's, theſe are ours, this thorne
Doth to our Roſe of youth rightly belong
Our blood to vs, this to our blood is borne,
It is the ſhow and ſeale of natures truth,
Where loue's ſtrong paſſion is impreſt in youth,
By our remembrances of dates forgon,
Such were our faults, or then we thought them none,
Her eie is ſicke on't, I obſerue her now.

Hell. What is your pleaſure Madam?

Ol. Cou. You know Helen I am a mother to you.

Hell. Mine honorable Miſtreſs

Ol. Cou. Nay a mother, why not a mother? when I ſaid a mother
Me thought you ſaw a ſerpent: what's in mother,
That you ſtart at it? I ſay I am your mother,
And put you in the Catalogue of thoſe
That were enwombed mine, 'tis often ſeene
Adoption ſtriues with nature, and choice breedes
A natiue ſlip to vs from forraine ſeedes:
You nere oppreſt me with a mothers groane,
Yet I expreſſe to you a mothers care,
(Gods mercie maiden) does it curd thy blood
To ſay I am thy mother? what's the matter,
That this diſtempered meſſenger of wet?

The manie colour'd Iris rounds thine eye?
——— Why, that you are my daughter?
Hell. That I am not.
Old.Cou. I say I am your Mother.
Hell. Pardon Madam,
The Count Rossillion cannot be my brother:
I am from humble, he from honored name:
No note vpon my Parents, his all noble:
My Master, my deere Lord he is: and I
His seruant liue, and will his Vassall die:
He must not be my brother.
Old.Cou. Nor I your Mother?
Hell. You are my Mother Madam: would you were (So that my Lord your son were not my brother)
Indeede my Mother, or were you both our mothers,
I care no more for then I doe for heauen,
So I were not his sister: can't no other,
But I your daughter, he must be my brother.
Old.Cou. Yes Hellen, you might be my daughter in law,
God shend you, your loue should do me harme.
So farre vpon your honour's owne assurance
My feare hath cast, and answer'd such a wife
The mistris of your seruant, and mine:
Your salt teares head now to all sexes figges
You loue my Sonne, inuention is asham'd
Against the proclamation of thy passion
To say thou do'st not: therefore tell me true,
But tell me then 'tis so: for looke thy cheeke
Confesse it, tho the heart be sworne too, and the eyes
See it so grosely shew'd in thy behauiours,
That in their kinde they speake it, only sin
And hellish obstinacie tye thy tongue
That truth should be suspected, speake, is't so?
If it be so, you haue wound a goodly clyme
If it be not, forswear't: how ere I charge thee,
As heauen shall worke in me for thine auaile
To tell me truely.
Hell. Good Madam pardon me.
Cou. Do you loue my Sonne?
Hell. Your pardon noble Mistris
Cou. Loue you my Sonne?
Hell. Doe not you loue him Madam?
Cou. Goe not about: my loue hath in't a bond
Whereof the world takes note: Come, come, disclose
The state of your affection, for your passions
Haue to the full appeached.
Hell. Then I confesse
Here on my knee before high heauen and you,
That before you, and next vnto high heauen, I loue your Sonne.
My friends were poore but honest, so's my loue:
Be not offended: for it hurts not him
That he is loued of me: I follow him not
By any token of presumptuous suite,
Nor would I haue him, till I doe deserue him,
Yet never know how that desert should be:
I know I loue in vaine, striue against hope:
Yet in this captious and intenible Sieue.
I still powre in the waters of my loue
And lacke not to loose still, thus Indian like
Religious in mine error, I adore
The Sunne that lookes vpon his worshipper,
But knowes of him no more. My deerest Madam,
Let not your hate incounter with my loue,
For loue is where you doe: but if your selfe,
Whose aged honour cites a vertuous youth,
Did euer, in so true a flame of liking,
Wish chastly, and loue dearely, that your Dian
Was both her selfe and loue, O then giue pittie
To her whose state is such, that cannot choose
But lend and giue where she is sure to loose,
That seekes not to finde that her search implies,
But riddle like, liues sweetely where she dies.
Cou. Had you not lately an intent, speake truely,
To goe to Paris?
Hell. Madam I had.
Cou. Wherefore? tell true.
Hell. I will tell truth, by grace it selfe I sweare.
You know my Father left me some prescriptions
Of rare and prou'd effects, such as his reading
And manifest experience, had collected
For generall soueraignty: and that he will'd me
In heedefull'st reseruation to bestow them,
As notes, whose faculties inclusiue were,
More then they were in note: Amongst the rest,
There is a remedie, approu'd, set downe,
To cure the desperate languishings whereof
The King is rendred lost.
Cou. This was your motiue for Paris, was it, speake?
Hell. My Lord, your sonne, made me to think of this,
Else Paris, and the medicine, and the King,
Had from the conuersation of my thoughts,
Happily beene absent then.
Cou. But think you Hellen,
If you should tender your supposed aide,
He would receiue it? He and his Physitions
Are of a minde, he, that they cannot helpe him:
They, that they cannot helpe, how shall they credit
A poore vnlearned Virgin, when the Schooles
Embowed of their doctrine, haue left off
The danger to itself.
Hell. There's something in't
More then my Fathers skill, which was the great'st
Of his profession, that his good receipt,
Shall for my legacie be sanctified
Byth' luckie stars that raign'd, and would your honor
But giue me leaue to trie succesfe, I'de venture
The well lost life of mine, on his Graces cure,
By such a day, an houre.
Cou. Dost thou beleeue't?
Hell. I Madam knowingly.
Cou. Why Hellen thou shalt haue my leaue and loue,
Meanes and attendants, and my louing greetings
To those of mine in Court, Ile stile at large.
And praise Gods blessing into thy attempt.
Begon to morrow, and be sure of this,
What I can helpe thee to, thou shalt not misse. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter the King with diuers young Lords, taking leaue for the Florentine warre: Count, Rosse, and Parolles. Florish Cornets.

King. Farewell yong Lords, these warlike principles
Doe not throw from you, and you my Lords farewell.
Share the aduice betwixt you, if both gaine, all
The gift doth stretch it selfe as 'tis receiu'd,
And is enough for both.
Lord.G. 'Tis our hope sir,

After

After well entred Souldiers, to returne
And finde your grace in health.
King. No,no, it cannot be; and yet my heart
Will not confesse he owes the malady
That doth my life beliege: farwell young Lords,
Whether I liue or die, be you the tonnes
O worthy Frenchmen: let higher Italy
(Those bated that inherit but the fall
Of the last Monarchy) see that you come
Not to woo honour, but to wed it, when
The braue'st questant shrinkes, finde what you seeke,
That fame may cry you loud: I say farewell.
L.G. Health at your bidding serue your Maiesty.
King. Those girles of Italy take heed of them,
They say our French lacke language to deny
If they demand: beware of being Captiues
Before you serue.
Bo. Our hearts receiue your warnings
King. Farewell, come know her to me
1.Lo.G. On my sweet Lord we would not knowe the reason
Parr. 'Tis not his fault the spark
2.Lo.E. O 'tis braue warres.
Parr. Most admirable, I haue seene those warres
Rossill. I am commanded here, and kept a coyle with,
Too young, and the next yeere, and 'tis too early.
Parr. An thy mind stand to't boy,
Steale away bravely
Rossill. I shall stay here the for-horse to a coache,
Creeking my shooes on the plaine Masonry,
Till honour be bought vp, and no sword worne
But one to dance with: by heauen, I'le steale away.
1 Lo.G. There's honour in the theft
Parr. Commit it Count.
2.Lo.E. I am your accessary, and so farewell
Ros. I grow to you: & our parting is a torture as bitter.
1.Lo.G. Farewell Captaine
2.Lo.E. Sweet Monsieur Parolles
Parr. Noble Heroes, my sword and yours are kinne. good sparkes and lettrons, a word good metals: You shall finde in the Regiment of the Spinii, one Captaine
Spurio his sheatrice, with an Embleme of warre here on his sinister cheeke; it was this very sword entrenched it:
say to him I liue, and obserue his reports for me.
Lo.G. We shall noble Captaine.
Parr. Mars dote on you for his nouices, what will ye doe?
Ross. Stay the King
Parr. Vse a more spacious ceremonie to the Noble Lords: you haue restrain'd your selfe within the List of too cold an adieu: be more expressiue to them, for they weare themselues in the cap of the time, there to muster true gate; eat, speake, and moue vnder the influence of the most receiued starre, and though the deuill lead the measure, such are to be followed: after them, and take a more dilated farewell.
Ross. And I will doe so
Parr. Worthy fellowes, and like to proue most sinewie sword-men Exeunt

Enter Lafew.

L.Laf. Pardon my Lord for mee and for my tidings
King. Ile see thee to stand vp (pardon,
L.Laf. Then here's a man stands that has brought his
I would you had kneel'd my Lord to aske me mercy,
And that at my bidding you could so stand vp.
King. I would I had, so I had broke thy pate
And aske thee mercy for't.
Laf. Goodfaith a-crosse, but my good Lord 'tis thus,
Will you be cur'd of your infirmitie?
King. No.
Laf. O will you eat no grapes my royall foxe?
Yes but you will, my noble grapes, and if
My royall foxe could reach them: I haue seene a medicine
That's able to breath life into a stone,
Quicken a rocke, and make you dance Canari
With sprightly fire and motion, whose simple touch
Is powerfull to araise King Pippen, nay
To giue great Charlemaine a pen in's hand
And write to her a loue-line.
King. What her is that?
Laf. Why doctor she: my Lord, there's one arriu'd,
If you will see her: now by my faith and honour,
If seriously I may conuay my thoughts
In this my light deliuerance, I haue spoke
With one, that in her sex, her yeeres profession,
Wisedome and constancie, hath amaz'd me more
Than I dare blame my weakenesse: will you see her?
For that is her demand, and know her businesse?
That done, laugh well at me.
King. Now good Lafew,
Bring in the admiration, that we with thee
May spend our wonder too, or take off thine
By wondring how thou took'st it.
Laf. Nay I'le fit you,
And not be all day neither.
King. Thus he his speciall nothing euer prologues.
Laf. Nay, come your wayes
Enter Helen.
King. This haste hath wings indeed.
Laf. Nay, come your wayes,
This is his Maiestie, say your mind to him,
A Traitor you doe looke like, but such traitors
His Maiesty seldome fearers, I am Cressids Vncle,
That dare leauer two to get one, but your daughter. Exit
King. Now fayre one, do's your busines follow vs?
Hel. I my good Lord.
Gerard de Narbon was my father
In what he did profesle, well found.
King. I knew him.
Hel. The rather will I spare my praises towards him
Knowne I am of many to my bed of grace,
Many receits he gaue me, chiefly one,
Which as the dearest issue of his practice
And of his old experience, th'only darling,
He bad me store vp, as a triple eye,
Safer than mine owne two, more deare I haue so,
And hearing your high Maiesty is touch
With that malignant cause, wherein the honour
Of my deare fathers gift, stands cheefe in power,
I come to tender it, and my appliance,
With all bound humblenesse.
King. We thanke you maiden,
But may not be so credulous of cure,
When our most learned Doctors leaue vs, and
The congregated Colledge haue concluded,
That labouring Art can neuer ransome nature
From her inaydible estate: I say we must not
So staine our iudgement, or corrupt our hope,
To prostitute our past-cure malladie
To empericks, or to disseuer so
Our great selfe and our credit, to esteeme
A senceliesse helpe, when helpe past sence we deeme

He My

Hel. My dutie then shall pay me for my paines:
I will no more enforce mine office on you,
Humbly intreating from your royall thoughts,
A modest one to bearc me backe againe.
King. I cannot giue thee leſſe to be cal'd grateful:
Thou thoughtſt to helpe me: and ſuch thankes I giue,
As one neere death to thoſe that wiſh him liue.
But what at full I know, thou know'ſt no part,
I knowing all my perill: thou no Art.
Hel. What I can doe, can doe no hurt to try,
Since you let vp your reſt gainſt remedie:
He that of greateſt workes is thruſter,
Oft does them by the weakeſt minſters:
So holy Writ, in babes hath iudgement ſhowne,
When Iudges haue bin babes, great flouds haue flowne
From ſimple ſources: and great Seas haue dried
When Miracles haue by the greateſt beene denied.
Oft expectation failes, and moſt oft there
Where moſt it promiſes: and oft it hits,
Where hope is coldeſt, and miſtruſt moſt ſtrives.
King. I muſt not heare thee, fare-thee well kind maide,
Thy paines not vſd, muſt by thy ſelfe be paid,
Proffers not tooke, reape thankes for their reward.
Hel. Inſpired Merit ſo by breath is barr'd,
It is not ſo with him that all things knowes
As 'tis with vs that ſquare our gueſſe by ſhowes.
But moſt it is preſumption in vs, when
The helpe of heauen we count the act of men.
Deare ſir, to my endeauours giue conſent,
Of heauen, not me, make an experiment.
I am not an Impoſture, that proclaime
My ſelfe againſt the leuell of mine aime,
But know I thinke, and thinke I know moſt ſure,
My Art is not paſt power, nor you paſt cure.
King. Art thou ſo confident? Within what ſpace
Hop'ſt thou my cure?
Hel. The greateſt grace lending grace,
Ere twice the Horſes of the Sunne ſhall bring
Their fiery torcher his diurnall ring,
Ere twice in murke and occidentall damp
Moiſt Hesperus hath quench'd her ſweaty Lampe
Or foure and twenty times the Pylots glaſſe
Hath told the thiefe Sunne meetes, how they paſſe
What (but thirſe) my Art hath done, within a while,
Health ſhall liue free, and ſickneſſe freelier die.
King. Vpon thy certainty and confidence,
What dar'ſt thou venter?
Hel. Taxe of impudence,
A ſtrumpets boldneſſe, a characterd ſhame
Traduc'd by odious Ballads: my maidens name
Seard otherwiſe: ne worſe of worſt extended
With vildeſt torture, let my life be ended.
King. Methinkes thou art more then the bleſſed ſpirit doth ſpeak
His powerfull ſound, within an organ weake:
And what impoſſibility would ſlay
In common ſence, ſence ſaues another way:
Thy life is deere, for all that life can rate
Worth name of life, in thee hath eſtimate:
Youth, beauty, wiſedome, courage, all
That happineſſe and prime, can happy call:
Thou this to hazard, needs muſt intimate
Skill infinite, or monſtrous deſperate.
Sweet practiſer, thy Phyſicke I will try,
That miniſters thine owne death if I die.
Hel. If I breake time, or flinch in property
Of what I ſpoke, vnpittied let me die,
And well deſeru'd: not helping, death's my fee,
But if I helpe, what doe you promiſe me.
King. Make thy demand.
Hel. But will you make it euen?
King. I by my Scepter, and my hopes of helpe.
Hel. Then ſhalt thou giue me with thy kingly hand
What husband in thy power I will command.
Exempted be from me the arrogance
To chooſe from forth the royall blood of France,
My low and humble name to propagate
With any branch or image of thy ſtate:
But ſuch a one thy vaſſall, whom I know
Is free for me to aske, thee to beſtow.
King. Heere is my hand, the premiſes obſerv'd,
Thy will by my performance ſhall be ſerv'd:
So make the choice of thy owne time, for I
Thy reſolv'd Patient, on thee ſtill relye:
More ſhould I queſtion thee, and more I muſt,
Though more to know, could not be more to truſt:
From whence thou cam'ſt, how tended on, but reſt
Vnqueſtion'd welcome, and vndoubted bleſt.
Giue me ſome helpe here ho, if thou proceed,
As high as word, my deed ſhall match thy deed.
Flouriſh. Exit

Enter Counteſſe and Clowne.

Lady. Come on ſir, I ſhall now put you to the height of your breeding.
Clown. I will ſhew my ſelfe highly fed, and lowly taught, I know my buſineſſe is but to the Court.
Lady. To the Court, why what place make you ſpeciall, when you put off that with ſuch contempt, but to the Court?
Clo. Truly Madam, if God haue lent a man any manners, hee may eaſily put it off at Court: hee that cannot make a legge, put off's cap, kiſſe his hand, and ſay nothing, has neither legge, hands, lippe, nor cap; and indeed ſuch a fellow, to ſay preciſely, were not for the Court, But for me, I haue an anſwere will ſerue all men.
Lady. Marry that's a bountifull anſwere that fits all queſtions.
Clo. It is like a Barbers chaire that fits all buttockes, the pin buttocke, the quatch-buttocke, the brawn buttocke, or any buttocke.
Lady. Will your anſwere ſerue fit to all queſtions?
Clo. As fit as ten groats is for the hand of an Attorney, as your French Crowne for your taffery punke, as Tibs ruth for Toms fore-finger, as a pancake for Shroue-tueſday, a Morris for May-day, as the naile to his hole, the Cuckold to his horne, as a ſcolding queane to a wrangling knaue, as the Nuns lip to the Friers mouth, nay as the pudding to his ſkin.
Lady. Haue you, I ſay, an anſwere of ſuch fitneſſe for all queſtions?
Clo. From below your Duke, to beneath your Conſtable, it will fit any queſtion.
Lady. It muſt be an anſwere of moſt monſtrous ſize, that muſt fit all demands.
Clo. But a trifle neither in good faith, if the learned ſhould ſpeake truth of it: heere it is, and all that belongs to't. Aske mee if I am a Courtier, it ſhall doe you no harme to learne.
Lady. To be young againe if we could: I will be a foole in queſtion, hoping to be the wiſer by your anſwer.

Lady.

La. I pray you sir, are you a Courtier?

Clo. O Lord sir there's a simple putting off: more, more, a hundred of them.

La. Sir I am a poore friend of yours, that loues you.

Clo. O Lord sir, thicke, thicke, spare not me.

La. I thinke sir, you can eate none of this homely meate.

Clo. O Lord sir; nay put me too't, I warrant you.

La. You were lately whipt sir as I thinke

Clo. O Lord sir, spare not me

La. Doe you cry O Lord sir at your whipping, and spare not me? Indeed your O Lord sir, is very sequent to your whipping: you would answere very well to a whipping if you were but bound too't.

Clo. I neere had worse lucke in my life in my O Lord sir: I see things may serue long, but not serue ever

La. I play the noble huswife with the time, to entertaine it so merrily with a foole.

Clo. O Lord sir, why there't serues well again

La. And end sir to your businesse: giue Helen this, And vrge her to a present answer backe, Commend me to my kinsmen, and my sonne, This is not much.

Clo. Not much commendation to them.

La. Not much imployment for you, you vnderstand me.

Clo. Most fruitfully, I am there, before my legges

La. Haste you again Exeunt

Enter Count, Lafew, and Parolles.

Ol.Laf. They say miracles are past, and we haue our Philosophicall persons, to make moderne and familiar things supernaturall and causeleſſe. Hence is it that we make trifles of terrours, enſconcing our selues into seeming knowledge, when we should submit our selues to an vnknowne feare

Par. Why 'tis the rarest argument of wonder, that hath shot out in our latter times.

Ros. And so 'tis.

Ol.Laf. To be relapſe in the offence of Ambition

Par. So I say both of Galen and Paracelſus.

Ol.Laf. Of all the learned and authenticke fellowes.

Par. Right so I say.

Ol.Laf. That gaue him out incureable.

Par. Why there in so say I too

Ol.Laf. Not to be holpe.

Par. Right, as twere a man assur'd of a——

Ol.Laf. Vncertaine life, and sure death

Par. Iuſt, you say well: so would I haue ſaid.

Ol.Laf. I may truly say it is a sickenesse to my worde

Par. It is indeede: if you will haue it in showing, you shall reade it in what do ye call there.

Ol.Laf. A ſhewing of a heauenly effect in an earthly Actor.

Par. That's it, I would haue ſaid, the verie ſame.

Ol.Laf. Why your Dolphin is not luſtier: 'fore me I speake in respect——

Par. Nay 'tis ſtrange, 'tis very ſtraunge, that is the breefe and the tedious of it, and he's of a moſt facinerous ſpirit, that will not acknowledge it to be the——

Ol.Laf. Very hand of heauen

Par. I, ſo I ſay.

Ol.Laf. In a moſt weake——

Par. And debile miniſter great power, great tranſcendence, which ſhould indeede giue vs a further vſe to be made, then alone the recouery of the king, as to be

Old Laf. Generally thankfull.

Enter King, Helen, and attendants.

Par. I would haue ſaid it, you ſay well. Heere comes the king.

Ol.Laf. Luſtique, as the Dutchman ſayes: He like a maide too: Better wench if I haue a tooth in my head: why he is able to leade her a Carranto.

Par. Mor du vinager, is not this Helen?

Ol.Laf. Fore God I thinke ſo.

King. Go call before me all the Lords in Court,
Sit my preſeruer by thy patients ſide,
And with this healthfull hand whoſe baniſhd ſence
Thou haſt repeal'd, a ſecond time receiue
The confirmation of my promis'd guift,
Which but attends thy naming.

Enter 3 or 4 Lords.

Faire Maid ſend forth thine eye, this youthfull parcell
Of Noble Bachelors, ſtand at my bestowing,
O're whom both Soueraigne power, and fathers voice
I haue to vſe: thy frank election make,
Thou haſt power to choose, and they none to forſake.

Hel. To each of you, one faire and vertuous Mistris,
Fall when loue please, marry to each but one

Old Laf. I'ld giue bay Curtal, and his furniture
My mouth no more were broken then these boyes,
And writ as little beard.

King. Peruse them well:
Not one of those, but had a Noble father

She addreſſes her to a Lord

Hel. Gentlemen, heauen hath through me, reſtor'd the king to health.

All. We vnderſtand it, and thanke heauen for you.

Hel. I am a ſimple Maide: and therein wealthieſt
That I proteſt, I ſimply am a Maide:
Please it your Maieſtie, I haue done already
The blushes in my cheekes thus whiſper me,
We blush that thou ſhouldſt choose, but be refuſed;
Let the white death ſit on thy cheeke for euer,
We catch'd there where we were
King. Make choice and ſee,
Who ſhuns thy loue, ſhuns all his loue in me.
Hel. Now Dian from thy Altar do I fly,
And to imperiall Loue, that God moſt high
Do my high ſuites addreſſe. Sir, will you heare my ſuite?

1 Lo And grant it.

Hel Thanks sir, all the reſt is mute.

Ol.Laf I had rather be at this choake, then throw
An ache for my ſelfe

Hel I read it in the flames in your faire eyes,
Before I speake too threatningly replies
Loue make your fortunes twenty times aboue
Her that ſo wiſhes, and her humble loue.

2 Lo No better if you please.

Hel. My wish receiue,
Which great loue grant: and so I take my leaue

Ol.Laf Do all they deny her? And they were ſons of mine I'd haue them whipt, or I would ſend them to'th Turke to make Eunuches of.

Hel Be not afraid that I your hand ſhould take,
Ile neuer do you wrong for your owne ſake
Bleſſing vpon your vowes, and in your bed
Finde fairer fortune, if you euer wed

Old Laf. These boyes are boyes of Ice, they'le none have

haue heere: sure they are bastards to the English, the Frenchnere got em

La. You are too young, too happie, and too good To make your selfe a sonne out of my blood.

4.Lord. Faire one, I thinke not so.

Ol.Lord There's one grape yet, I am sure thy father drunke wine. But if thou be'st not an Asse, I am a youth of fourteene: I haue knowne thee already

Hel. I dare not say I take you, but I giue Me and my seruice, ever whil'st I liue Into your guiding power. This is the man.

King. Why then young Bertram take her, she's thy wife.

Ber. My wife my Liege? I shall beseech your highnes In such a businesse, giue me leaue to vse The helpe of mine owne eies

King. Know'st thou not Bertram what shee has done for mee?

Ber. Yes my good Lord, but euer hope to know why I should marry her

King. Thou know'st shee has raisd me from my sickly bed

Ber. But followes it my Lord, to bring me downe Must answer for your raising? I know her well: Shee had her breeding at my fathers charge A poore Physitians daughter my wife? Disdaine Rather corrupt me euer.

King. 'Tis onely title thou disdainst in her, the which I can build vp: strange is it that our bloods Of colour, waight, and heat, pour'd all together, Would quite confound distinction: yet stands off In differences so mightie. If she bee All that is vertuous (saue what thou dislik'st), A poore Physitians daughter, thou dislik'st Of vertue for the name. But doe not so: From lowest place, whence vertuous things proceed, The place is dignified by th'doers deede: Where great additions swell's and vertue none, It is a dropsied honour. Good alone, Is good without a name? Vilenesse is so: The propertie by what it is should go, Not by the title. Shee is young, wise, faire, In these, to Nature shee's immediate heire And these breed honour: that is honour's scorne, Which challenges it selfe as honours borne, And is not like the sire. Honours thriue, When rather from our acts we them deriue Then our fore-goers: the meere words, a slaue Debosh'd on euery tombe, on euery graue: A lying Trophee: and as oft is dumbe, Where dust, and damn'd oblivion is the Tombe Of honour'd bones indeed, what should be said? If thou can'st like this creature, as a maide, I can create the rest: Vertue, and shee Is her owne dower: Honour and wealth, from mee.

Ber. I cannot loue her, nor will striue to doo't

King. Thou wrong'st thy selfe if thou should'st striue to choose.

Hel. That you are well restor'd my Lord, I am glad Let the rest go

King. My Honor's at the stake, which to defeate I must produce my power. Heere, take her hand, Proud scornfull boy, vnworthie this good gift, That dost in vile misprision shackle vp My loue, and her desert: that canst not dreame, We poizing vs in her defectiue scale,

Shall weigh thee to the beame: That wilt not know, It is in Vs to plant thine Honour, where We please to haue it grow. Check thy contempt: Obey Our will, which trauailes in thy good: Beleeue not thy disdaine, but presently Do thine owne fortunes that obedient right Which both thy dutie owes, and Our power claimes, Or I will throw thee from my care for euer Into the staggers, and the careleſse lapse Of youth and ignorance: both my reuenge and hate Loosing vpon thee, in the name of iustice, Without all termes of pitie. Speake, thine answer.

Ber. Pardon my gracious Lord: for I submit My fancie to your eies, when I consider What great creation, and what dole of honour Flies where you bid it: I finde that she which late Was in my Nobler thoughts, most base: is now The praised of the King, who so ennobled, Is as 'twere borne so

King. Take her by the hand, And tell her she is thine: to whom I promise A counterpoize: if not to thy estate, A ballance more replete.

Ber. I take her hand.

King. Good fortune, and the fauour of the King Smile vpon this Contract: whose Ceremonie Shall seeme expedient on the now borne briefe, And be performed to night: the solemne Feast Shall more attend vpon the coming space, Expecting absent friends. As thou lou'st her, Thy loue's to me Religious: else, do'st erre. Exeunt

Parolles and Lafew stay behind, commenting of this wedding.

Laf. Do you heare Monsieur? A word with you.

Par. Your pleasure sir.

Laf. Your Lord and Master did well to make his recantation

Par. Recantation? My Lord? my Master?

Laf. I: Is it not a Language I speake?

Par. A most harsh one, and not to be vnderstood without bloody succeeding. My Master?

Laf. Are you Companion to the Count Rossillion?

Par. To any Count, to all Counts: to what is man.

Laf. To what is Counts man. Counts master is of another stile

Par. You are too old sir: Let it satisfie you, you are too old.

Laf. I must tell thee sirrah, I write Man: to which title age cannot bring thee.

Par. What I dare too well do, I dare not do.

Laf. I did thinke thee for two ordinaries: to bee a pretty wise fellow, thou didst make tollerable vent of thy trauell, it might passe: yet the scarfes and the bannerets about thee, did manifoldly dissuade me from beleeuing thee a vessell of too great a burthen. I haue now found thee, when I lose thee againe, I care not: yet art thou good for nothing but taking vp, and that thou art scarce worth.

Par. Hadst thou not the priuiledge of Antiquity vpon thee.

Laf. Do not plunge thy selfe too farre in anger, least thou hasten thy triall: which if, Lord haue mercie on thee for a hen, so my good window of Lettice fare thee well, thy casement I needs not open, for I look through thee. Giue me thy hand.

Par. My Lord, you giue me most egregious indignity

Laf.

Laf. I with all my heart, and thou are worthy of it.

Par. I haue not my Lord deseru'd it.

Laf. Yes good faith, euery dramme of it, and I will not bate thee a scruple.

Par. Well, I shall be wiser.

Laf. Eu'n as soone as thou can'st, for thou hast to pull at a smacke a'th contrarie. If euer thou bee'st bound in thy scarfe and beaten, thou shalt finde what it is to be proud of thy bondage. I haue a desire to holde my acquaintance with thee, or rather my knowledge, that I may say in the default, he is a man I know.

Par. My Lord you do me most insupportable vexation.

Laf. I would it were hell paines for thy sake, and my poore doing eternall: for doing I am past, as I will by thee, in what motion age will giue me leaue. Exit

Par. Well, thou hast a time I shall take this disgrace off me; scuruy, old, filthy, scuruy Lord: Well, I must be patient, there is no fettering of authority. Ile beate him (by my life) if I can meete him with any conuenience, and he were double and double a Lord. Ile haue no more pitie of his age then I would haue of——Ile beate him, and if I could but meet him agen.

Enter Lafew.

Laf. Sirra, your Lord and masters married, there's newes for you: you haue a new Mistris.

Par. I most vnfainedly beseech your Lordshippe to make some reseruation of your wrongs. He is my good Lord, whom I serue aboue is my master.

Laf. Who? God.

Par. I sir.

Laf. The deuill it is, that's thy master. Why dooest thou garter vp thy armes a this fashion. Dost make hose of thy sleeues? Do other seruants so? Thou wert best set thy lower part where thy nose stands. By mine Honor, if I were but two houres yonger, I'de beate thee: methink'st thou art a generall offence, and euery man should beate thee: I thinke thou wast created for men to breath themselues vpon thee.

Par. This is hard and vndeserued measure my Lord.

Laf. Go too sir, you were beaten in Italy for picking a kernell out of a Pomgranat, you are a vagabond, and no true traueller: you are more sawcie with Lordes and honourable personages, then the Commission of your birth and vertue giues you Heraldry. You are not worth another word, else I'de call you knaue. I leaue you. Exit

Enter Count Rossillion.

Par. Good, very good, it is so then: good, very good, let it be conceal'd awhile.

Ros. Vndone, and forfeited to cares for euer.

Par. What's the matter sweet-heart?

Ros. Although before the solemne Priest I haue sworne, I will not bed her.

Par. What? what sweet heart?

Ros. O my Parrolles, they haue married me: I'le to the Tuscan warres, and neuer bed her.

Par. France is a dog-hole, and it no more merits, The tred of a mans foot: too'th warres.

Ros. There's letters from my mother. What the importe is, I know not yet.

Par. I that would be knowne: too'th warrs my boy, too'th warres:

He weares his honor in a boxe vnseene,
That hugges his kicksie wicksie here at home,
Spending his manlie marrow in her armes
Which should sustaine the bound and high curuet
Of Marses fierie steed: to other Regions,
France is a stable, wee that dwell in't stables,
Therefore too'th warre.

Ros. It shall be so, Ile send her to my house,
Acquaint my mother with my hate to her,
And wherefore I am fled. Write to the King
That which I durst not speake. His present gift
Shall furnish me to those Italian fields
Where noble fellowes strike: Warres is no strife
To the darke house, and the detected wife.

Par. Will this Capricho hold in thee, art sure?

Ros. Go with me to my chamber, and aduise me.
Ile send her straight away: To morrow,
Ile to the warres, she to her single sorrow.

Par. Why these ba's sound, ther's noise in it. 'Tis hard
A yong man maried, is a man that's mard.
Therefore away, and leaue her bravely go,
The King has done you wrong: but hush 'tis so. Exit

Enter Helena and Clowne.

Hel. My mother greets me kindly, is she well?

Clo. She is not well, but yet she has her health, she's very merrie, but yet she is not well. but thankes be giuen she's very well, and wants nothing i'th world but yet she is not well.

Hel. If she be verie wel, what do's she ayle, that she's not verie well?

Clo. Truly she's very well indeed, but for two things.

Hel. What two things?

Clo. One, that she's not in heauen, whether God send her quickly, the other, that she's in earth, from whence God send her quickly.

Enter Parolles.

Par. Blesse you my fortunate Ladie.

Hel. I hope so. I haue your good will to haue mine owne good fortune.

Par. You had my prayers to leade them on, and to keepe them on, haue them still. O my knaue, how do's my old Ladie?

Clo. So that you had her wrinkles, and I her money, I would she did as you say.

Par. Why I say nothing.

Clo. Marry you are the wiser man: for many a mans tongue shakes out his masters vndoing: to say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to haue nothing, is to be a great part of your title, which is within a verie little of nothing.

Par. Away, th'art a knaue.

Clo. You should haue said sir before a knaue, th'art a knaue, that's before me th'art a knaue: this had beene truth sir.

Par. Go too, thou art a wittie foole, I haue found thee.

Clo. Did you finde me in your selfe sir, or were you taught to finde me?

Clo. The search sir was profitable, and much Foole may you finde in you, euen to the worlds pleasure, and the encrease of laughter.

Par. A good knaue i'faith, and well fed.
Madam, my Lord will go awaie to night,

A verie serrious businesse call's on him:
The great prerogatiue and rite of loue,
Which as your due time claimes, he do's acknowledge,
But puts it off to a compell'd restraint:
Whose want, and whose delay, is strew'd with sweets
Which they distill now in the curbed time,
To make the comming houre oreflow with ioy,
And pleasure drowne the brim.
Hel. What's his will else?
Par. That you will take your instant leaue a'th king,
And make this hast as your owne good proceeding,
Strengthned with what Apologie you thinke
May make it probable neede.
Hel. What more commands hee?
Par. That hauing this obtain'd, you presentlie
Attend his further pleasure.
Hel. In euery thing I waite vpon his will.
Par. I shall report it so. Exit Par
Hell. I pray you come sirrah. Exit

Enter Lafew and Bertram.

Laf. But I hope your Lordshippe thinkes not him a souldier.
Ber. Yes my Lord and of verie valiant approofe.
Laf. You haue it from his owne deliuerance
Ber. And by other warranted testimonie.
Laf. Then my Diall goes not true, I tooke this Lacke for a bunting.
Ber. I do assure you my Lord he is very great in knowledge, and accordinglie valiant.
Laf. I haue then sinn'd against his experience, and transgrest against his valour, and my state that way is dangerous, since I cannot yet find in my heart to repent. Heere he comes, I pray you make vs freinds, I will pursue the amitie.

Enter Parolles

Par. These things shall be done sir
Laf. Pray you sir whose his Tailor?
Par Sir?
Laf. O I know him well, I sir, hee sirs a good workeman, a verie good Tailor.
Ber. Is shee gone to the king?
Par. Shee is
Ber. Will shee away to night?
Par. As you'le haue her.
Ber. I haue writ my letters, casketted my treasure,
Giuen order for our horses, and to night,
When I should take possession of the Bride,
And ere I doe begin.
Laf. A good Trauailer is something at the latter end of a dinner, but one that lies three thirds, and vses a known truth to passe a thousand nothings with, should bee once hard, and thrice beaten: God saue you Captaine.
Ber. Is there any vnkindnes betweene my Lord and you Monsieur?
Par. I know not how I haue deserued to run into my Lord displeasure.
Laf. You haue made shift to run into't, boores and spurres and all: like him that leapt into the Custard, and out of it you'le runne againe, rather then suffer question for your residence.
Ber. It may bee you haue mistaken him my Lord.
Laf. And shall doe so euer, though I tooke him at's prayers. Fare you well my Lord, and beleeue this of me, there can be no kernell in this light Nut: the soule of this man is his cloathes: Trust him not in matter of heauie consequence: I haue kept of them tame, & know their natures. Farewell Monsieur, I haue spoken better of you, then you haue or will to deserue at my hand, but we must do good against euill.
Par. An idle Lord, I sweare.
Ber. I thinke so.
Par. Why do you not know him?
Ber. Yes, I do know him well, and common speech Giues him a worthy passe. Heere comes my clog.

Enter Helena.

Hel. I haue sir as I was commanded from you
Spoke with the King, and haue procur'd his leaue
For present parting, onely he desires
Some priuate speech with you.
Ber. I shall obey his will.
You must not maruaile Helen at my course,
Which holds not colour with the time, nor does
The ministration, and required office
On my particular. Prepar'd I was not
For such a businesse, therefore am I found
So much vnsetled: This drues me to intreate you,
That presently you take your way for home,
And rather muse then aske why I intreate you,
For my respects are better then they seeme,
And my appointments haue in them a needs
Greater then shewes it selfe at the first view,
To you that know them not. This to my mother,
'Twill be two daies ere I shall see you, so
I leaue you to your wisedome.
Hel. Sir, I can nothing say,
But that I am your most obedient seruant.
Ber Come, come, no more of that.
Hel. And euer shall
With true obseruance seeke to eeke out that
Wherein toward me my homely starres haue fail'd
To equall my great fortune.
Ber. Let that goe: my hast is verie great. Farwell H e home.
Hel. Pray sir your pardon.
Ber. Well, what would you say?
Hel. I am not worthie of the wealth I owe,
Nor dare I say 'tis mine: and yet it is,
But like a timorous theefe, most faine would steale
What law does vouch mine owne.
Ber. What would you haue?
Hel. Something, and scarse so much: nothing indeed,
I would not tell you what I would my Lord: Faith yes,
Strangers and foes do sunder, and not kisse
Ber. I pray you stay not, but in hast to horse.
Hel. I shall not breake your bidding, good my Lord:
Where are my other men? Monsieur, farwell. Exit
Ber. Go thou toward home, where I will neuer come,
Whilst I can shake my sword, or heare the drumme:
Away, and for our flight.
Par. Bravely, Coragio.

Actus Tertius.

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, the two Frenchmen, with a troope of Souldiers.

Duke. So that from point to point, now haue you heard

The

The fundamentall reasons of this warre,
Whose great decision hath much blood let forth
And more thirsts after.
1. Lord. Holy seemes the quarrell
Vpon your Graces part: blacke and fearefull
On the opposer.
Duke. Therefore we meruaile much our Cosin France
Would in so just a busines, shut his bosome
Against our borrowing prayers.
French E. Good my Lord,
The reasons of our state I cannot yeelde,
But like a common and an outward man,
That the great figure of a Counsaile frames,
By self-vnable motion, therefore dare not
Say what I thinke of it, since I haue found
My selfe in my incertaine grounds to fayle
As often as I guest.
Duke. Be it his pleasure.
Fren G But I am sure the younger of our nature,
That surfet on their ease, will day by day
Come heere for Physicke.
Duke. Welcome shall they bee:
And all the honors that can flye from vs,
Shall on them settle: you know your places well,
When better fall, for your auailes they tell,
To morrow to th'field.
Flourish.

Enter Countesse and Clowne.

Count. It hath happen'd all, as I would haue had it, saue that he comes not along with her.
Clo. By my troth I take my young Lord to be a very melancholly man
Count. By what obseruance I pray you.
Clo. Why, he will looke vpon his boote, and sing: mend the Ruffe and sing, aske questions and sing, picke his teeth, and sing: I know a man that had this tricke of melancholy hold a goodly Manner for a song.
Lad. Let me see what he writes, and when he meanes
Clow. I haue no minde to Isbell since I was at Court. Our old Lings, and our Isbels a'th Country are nothing like your old Ling and your Isbels a'th Court: the braines of my Cupid's knock'd out, and I begin to loue, as an old man loues money, with no stomacke.
Lad. What haue we heere?
Clo. In that you haue there. exit

A Letter.

I haue sent you a daughter-in-Law, she hath recouered the King, and vndone me: I haue wedded her, not bedded her, and sworne to make the not eternall. You shall heare I am runne away, know it before the report come. If there be breadth enough in the world, I will hold a long distance. My duty to you. Your vnfortunate sonne,
Bertram.

This is not well rash and vnbridled boy,
To flye the fauours of so good a King,
To plucke his indignation on thy head,
By the misprising of a Maide too vertuous
For the contempt of Empire.

Enter Clowne.

Clow. O Madam, yonder is heauie newes within betweene two soulders, and my yong Ladie.
La. What is the matter.
Clo. Nay there is some comfort in the newes, some comfort, your sonne will not be kild so soone as I thought he would.
La. Why should he be kild?
Clo. So say I Madame, if he runne away, as I heare he does, the danger is in standing too't, that's the losse of men, though it be the getting of children. Heere they come will tell you more. For my part I only heare your sonne was run away.

Enter Helen and two Gentlemen.

French E. Saue you good Madam.
Hel. Madam, my Lord is gone, for euer gone.
French G Do not say so.
La. Thinke vpon patience, pray you Gentlemen,
I haue felt so many quirkes of ioy and greefe,
That the first face of neither on the start
Can woman me vnto't. Where is my sonne I pray you?
Fren. G. Madam he's gone to serue the Duke of Florence,
We met him thitherward, for thence we came:
And after some dispatch in hand at Court,
Thither we bend againe.
Hel. Looke on his Letter Madam, here is my Passport

When thou canst get the Ring vpon my finger, which neuer shall come off, and shew me a childe begotten of thy bodie, that I am father to, then call me husband: but in such a (then) I write a Neuer.

This is a dreadfull sentence
La. Brought you this Letter Gentlemen?
1. G. I Madam, and for the Contents take ate sorrie for our paines.
Old La. I prethee Ladie haue a better cheere,
If thou engrossest all the greefes are thine,
Thou robst me of a moity: He was my sonne,
But I do wash his name out of my blood,
And thou art all my childe. Towards Florence is he?
Fren G I Madam.
La. And to be a souldier.
Fren G Such is his noble purpose, and beleeu't
The Duke will lay vpon him all the honor
That good conuenience claimes.
La Returne you thither.
Fren E I Madam, with the swiftest wing of speed.
Hel. Till I haue no wife, I haue nothing in France,
'Tis bitter.
La. Find you that there?
Hel. I Madame
Fren.E. 'Tis but the boldnesse of his hand haply, which his heart was not consenting too.
Lad. Nothing in France, vntill he haue no wife:
There's nothing heere that is too good for him
But only she, and she deserues a Lord
That twenty such rude boyes might tend vpon,
And call her hourely Mistris. Who was with him?
Fren.E. A seruant onely, and a Gentleman, which I haue sometime knowne.
La. Parolles was it not?
Fren.E. I my good Ladie, hee
La. A very tainted fellow, and full of wickednesse,
My sonne corrupts a well deriued nature
With his inducement.
Fren.E. Indeed good Ladie the fellow has a deale of that, too much, which holds him much to haue.
La. Y'are welcome Gentlemen, I will intreate you when you see my sonne, to tell him that his sword can neuer winne the honor that he loses: more I will intreate you written to beare along.

Fren.A. We serue you Madam in that and all your worthiest affaires.

La. Not so, but as we change our courtesies,
Will you draw neere? Exit.

Hel. Till I haue no wife I haue nothing in France.

Nothing in France vntill he has no wife:
Thou shalt haue none Rossillion, none in France,
Then hast thou all againe: poore Lord, is't I
That chase thee from thy Country, and expose
Those tender limbes of thine, to the event
Of the none-sparing warre? And is it I,
That driue thee from the sportiue Court, where thou
Was't shot at with faire eyes, to be the marke
Of smoakie Muskets? O you leaden messengers,
That ride vpon the violent speede of fire,
Fly with false aymo, moueche still-peering aire
That sings with piercing, do not touch my Lord:
Who euer shoots at him, I set him there.
Who euer charges on his forward brest
I am the Caitiffe that do hold him to't,
And though I kill him not, I am the cause
His death was so effected: Better 'twere
I met the ramme Lyon when he roar'd
With sharpe constraint of hunger: better 'twere,
That all the miseries which nature owes
Were mine at once. No come thou home Rossillion,
Whence honor but of danger winnes a scarre,
As oft it looses all. I will be gone:
My being heere it is, that holds thee hence,
Shall I stay heere to doo't? No, no, although
The eyre of Paradise did fan the house,
And Angles offic'd all: I will be gone,
That pitifull rumour may report my flight
To consolate thine eare. Come night, end day,
For with the darke (poore theefe) Ile steale away. Exit

Hautboys. Enter the Duke of Florence, Rossillion, drum and trumpets, soldiers, Parolles.

Duke. The Generall of our horse thou art, and we Great in our hope, lay our best loue and credence
Vpon thy promising fortune.

Ber. Sweet
A charge too heauy for my strength, but yet
We'l striue to beare it for your worthy sake,
To th'extreme edge of hazard

Duke. Then go thou forth,
And fortune play vpon thy prosperous helme
As thy auspicious mistris

Ber. This very day
Great Mars I put my selfe into thy file,
Make me but like my thoughts, and I shall prooue
A louer of thy drumme, hater of loue. Exeunt omnes

Enter Countesse & Steward.

La. Alas! and would you take the letter of her:
Might you not know she would do, as she has done,
By sending me a Letter. Read it agen.

Letter.

I am S. Iaques Pilgrim, thither gone.
Ambitious loue hath so in me offended,
That barefoot plod I the cold ground vpon
With sainted vow my faults to haue amended
Write, write, that from the bloodie course of warre,
My dearest Master your deare sonne, may hie,
Blesse him at home in peace. Whilst I from farre,
His name with zealous fervour sanctifie:
His taken labours bid him me forgiue:
I his despightfull Iuno sent him forth,
From Courtly friends, with Camping foes to liue,
Where death and danger dogges the heeles of worth.
He is too good and faire for death, and me,
Whom I my selfe embrace, to set him free.

Ah what sharpe stings are in her mildest words?
Rynaldo, you did neuer lacke aduice so much,
As letting her passe so: had I spoke with her,
I could haue well diuerted her intents,
Which thus she hath preuented.

Ste. Pardon me Madam,
If I had giuen you this at ouer-night,
She might haue beene ore-tane: and yet she writes
Pursuite would be but vaine.

La. What Angell shall
Blesse this vnworthy husband, he cannot thriue,
Vnlesse her prayers, whom heauen delights to heare
And loues to grant, repreeue him from the wrath
Of greatest Iustice. Write, write Rynaldo,
To this vnworthy husband of his wife,
Let euerie word weigh heauie of her worth,
That he does weigh too light: my greatest greefe,
Though little he do feele it, set downe sharpely.
Dispatch the most conuenient messenger,
When haply he shall heare that she is gone,
He will returne, and hope I may that shee
Hearing so much, will speede her foote againe,
Led hither by pure loue: which of them both
Is dearest to me, I haue no skill in sence
To make distinction: prouide this Messenger:
My heart is heauie, and mine age is weake,
Greefe would haue teares, and sorrow bids me speake.
Exeunt

A Tucket afarre off

Enter old Widdow of Florence, her daughter, Violenta and Mariana, with other Citizens.

Wid. Nay come,
For if they do approach the Citty,
We shall loose all the sight.

Dian. They say, the French Count has done
Most honourable seruice.

Wid. It is reported,
That he has taken their great'st Commander,
And that with his owne hand he slew
The Dukes brother. we haue lost our labour,
They are gone a contrarie way: harke,
you may know by their Trumpets.

Mari. Come lets returne againe,
And suffice our selues with the report of it.
Well Diana, take heed of this French Earle,
The honor of a Maide is her name,
And no Legacie is so rich
As honestie.

Wid. I haue told my neighbour
How you haue been solicited by a Gentleman
His Companion.

Mari.

Maria. I know that knaue, hang him, one Parolles, a filthy Officer he is in those suggestions for the young Earle, beware of them Diana; their promises, enticements, oathes, tokens, and all these engines of lust, are not the things they go vnder: many a maide hath beene seduced by them, and the miserie is example, that so terrible shewes in the wracke of maiden-hood, cannot for all that dissuade succession, but that they are limed with the twigges that threatens them. I hope I needs not to aduise you further, but I hope your owne grace will keepe you where you are, though there were no further danger known, but the modestie which is so lost.

Dia. You shall not needs to feare me.

Enter Helen.

Wid. I hope so: I looke here comes a pilgrim. I know she will lye at my house, thither they send one another, Ile question her. God saue you pilgrim, whether are bound?

Hel. To S. Iaques le grand.
Where do the Palmers lodge, I do beseech you?

Wid. At the S. Frances here beside the Port.

Hel. Is this the way? A march afarre.

Wid. I marrie ift. Harke you, they come this way:
If you will tarrie holy Pilgrime
But till the troopes come by,
I will conduct you where you shall be lodg'd,
The rather for I thinke I know your hostesse
As ample as my selfe.

Hel. Is it your selfe?

Wid. If you shall please so Pilgrime.

Hel. I thanke you, and will stay vpon your leisure.

Wid. you came I thinke from France?

Hel. I did so.

Wid. Heere you shall see a Countryman of yours
That has done worthy seruice.

Hel. His name I pray you?

Dia. The Count Rossillion: know you such a one?

Hel. But by the eare, that heares most nobly of him
His face I know not.

Dia. What somere he is
He's bravely taken heere. He stole from France
As 'tis reported: for the King had married him
Against his liking. Thinke you it is so?

Hel. I surely meane the truth, I know his Lady.

Dia. There is a Gentleman that serues the Count,
Reports but courtsely of her.

Hel. What's his name?

Dia. Monsieur Parolles.

Hel. Oh I beleeue with him,
In argument of praise, or to the worth
Of the great Count himselfe, she is too meane.
To haue her name repeated, all her deseruing
Is a reserued honestie, and that
I haue not heard examin'd.

Dian Alas poore Ladie,
'Tis a hard bondage to become the wife
Of a detesting Lord,
Wid. I warrant good creature, wheresoere she is,
Her hart weighes sadly: this yong maid might do her
A shrewd turne if she pleas'd.
Hel. How do you meane?
May be the amorous Count solicites her
In the vnlawfull purposes?
Wid. He does indeede,
And brokes with all that can in such a suite
Corrupt the tender honour of a Maide
But she is arm'd for him, and keepes her guard
In honestest defence.

Drumme and Colours.
Enter Count Rossillion, Parolles, and the whole Armie

Mar. The goddes forbid else
Wid. So, now they come
That is Antiphonus the Dukes eldest sonne,
That Ffeanse
Hel. Which is the Frenchman?
Dia. Hee,
That with the plume, 'tis a most gallant fellow,
I would he lou'd his wife if she were honester
He were much goodlier: Is't not a handsom Gentleman
Hel I like him well.
Dia 'Tis pitty he is not honest: yon is that same knaue
That leades him to these places were I his Ladie,
I would poison that vile rascall.
Hel. Which is he?
Dia That lacke-an-apes with scarfes. Why is hee melancholy?
Hel. Perchance he is hurt i'th battaile
Par. Loose our drumme? Well.
Mar. He's shrewdly vext at something. Looke he has spyed vs.
Wid. Marrie hang you.
Mar. And your curtesie, for a ring-carrier. Exit
Wid. The troope is past. Come pilgrim, I will bring you, Where you shall host: Of enioyn'd penitents
There foure or fiue, to great S. Iaques bound,
Already at my house.
Hel. I humbly thanke you.
Please it this Matron, and this gentle Maide
To eate with vs to night, the charge and thanking
Shall be for me, and to requite you further,
I will bestow some precepts of this Virgin,
Worthy the note.
Both. We'll take your offer kindly. Exeunt.

Enter Count Rossillion and the Frenchmen, as at first.

Cap.E. Nay good my Lord put him too't: let him haue his way.

Cap.G. If your Lordshippe finde him not a Hilding, hold me no more in your respect

Cap.E. On my life my Lord a bubble.

Ber. Do you thinke I am so farre
Deceiued in him?

Cap.E. Beleeue it my Lord, in mine owne direct knowledge, without any malice, but to speake of him as my kinsman, hee's a most notable Coward, an infinite and endlesse Lyar, an hourely promise-breaker, the owner of no one good qualitie, worthy your Lordships entertainment.

Cap.G. It were fit you knew him, least reposing too farre in his vertue which he hath not, he might at some great and trustie businesse, in a maine danger, fayle you.

Ber I would I knew in what particular action to try him.

Cap. G. None better then to let him fetch off his drumme, which you heare him so confidently vndertake to do.

Cap.E. I with a troop of Florentines will sodainly surprize prize him, such I will haue whom I am sure he knowes not from the enemie: we will binde and hoodwinke him so, that he shall suppose no other but that he is carried into the Leager of the aduersaries, when we bring him to our owne tents. be but your Lordship present at his examination: if he do not for the promise of his life, and in the highest compulsion of base feare, offer to betray you, and deliuer all the intelligence in his power against you, and that with the diuine forfeite of his soule vpon oath, neuer trust my iudgement in any thing.

Cap.G. O for the loue of laughter, let him fetch his drumme, he sayes he has a stratagem for't. when your Lordship sees the bottome of this successe in't, and to what mettle this counterfeyt lump of ours will be melted if you giue him not Iohn drummes entertainement, your inclining cannot be removed. Heere he comes.

Enter Parrolles.

Cap.E. O for the loue of laughter hinder not the honour of his design, let him fetch off his drumme in any hand.

Ber. How now Monsieur? This drumme sticks sorely in your disposition.

Cap.G. A pox on't, let it go, 'tis but a drumme.

Par. But a drumme. Is't but a drumme? A drum so lost. There was excellent command, to charge in with our horse vpon our owne wings, and to rend our owne soldiers.

Cap.G. That was not to be blam'd in the command of the seruice: it was a disaster of warre that Cæsar him selfe could not haue preuented, if he had beene there to command.

Ber. Well, we cannot greatly condemne our successe: some dishonor we had in the losse of that drum, but it is not to be recouered.

Par. It might haue beene recouered.

Ber. It might, but it is not now.

Par. It is to be recouered, but that the merit of seruice is seldome attributed to the true and exact performer, I would haue that drumme or another, or hic iacet.

Ber. Why if you haue a stomacke, 'soot Monsieur: if you think your mystery in stratagem, can bring this instrument of honour againe into his native quarter, be magnanimous in the enterprize and go on, I will grace the attempt for a worthy exploit. if you speede well in it, the Duke shall both speake of it, and extend to you what further becomes his greatnesse, euen to the vtmost syllable of your worthinesse.

Par. By the hand of a souldier I will vndertake it.

Ber. But you must not now slumber in it.

Par. Ile about it this euening, and I will presently pen downe my dilemmas, encourage my selfe in my certainty, put my selfe into my mortall preparation: and by midnight look to heare further from me.

Ber. May I be bold to acquaint his grace you are gone about it.

Par. I know not what the successe will be my Lord, but the attempt I vow.

Ber. I know thou'rt valiant,
And to the possibility of thy soldiership,
Will subscribe for thee: Farewell.

Par. I loue not many words. Exit

Cap.E. No more than a fish loues water. Is not this a strange fellow my Lord, that so confidently seemes to vndertake this businesse, which he knowes is not to be done, damnes himselfe to do, & dares better be damned than to do't.

Cap.G. You do not know him my Lord as we doe, certaine it is that he will steale himselfe into a mans fauour, and for a weeke escape a great deale of discoueries, but when you finde him out, you haue him euer after.

Ber. Why do you thinke he will make no deede at all of this that so seriously he doers addresse himselfe vnto?

Cap.E. None in the world, but returne with an inuention, and clap vpon you two or three probable lies: but we haue almost embost him, you shall see his fall to night; for indeede he is not for your Lordshippes respect.

Cap.G. Weele make you some sport with the Fox ere we case him. He was first smoak'd by the old Lord Lafew, when his disguise and he is parted, tell me what a sprat you shall finde him, which you shall see this very night.

Cap.E. I must go looke my twigges,
He shall be caught.

Ber. Your brother he shall go along with me.

Cap.G. As't please your Lordship, Ile leaue you.

Ber. Now will I lead you to the house, and shew you
The Lasse I spoke of.

Cap.E. But you say she's honest.

Ber. That's all the fault: I spoke with her but once,
And found her wondrous cold, but I sent to her
by this same Coxcombe that we haue i'th winde
Tokens and Letters, which she did resend,
And this is all I haue done. She's a faire creature,
Will you go see her?

Cap.E. With all my heart my Lord. Exeunt

Enter Hellen, and Widdow.

Hel. If you misdoubt me that I am not shee,
I know not how I shall assure you further,
But I shall loose the grounds I worke vpon.

Wid. Though my estate be falne, I was well borne,
Nothing acquainted with these businesses,
And would not put my reputation now
In any staining act.

Hel. Nor would I wish you.
First giue me trust, the Count he is my husband,
And what to your sworne counsaile I haue spoken,
Is so from word to word: and then you cannot
By the good aydes that I of you shall borrow,
Erre in bestowing it.

Wid. I should beleeue you,
For you haue shew'd me that which well approues
Y'are great in fortune.

Hel. Take this purse of Gold,
And let me buy your friendly helpe thus farre,
Which I will ouer-pay, and pay againe
When I haue found it. The Count he woes your daughter,
Layes downe his wanton siedge before her beautie,
Resolues to carrie her: let her in fine consent
As we'l direct her how 'tis best to beare it.
Now his important blood will naught denie,
That she'l demand: a ring the Countie weares,
That downward hath succeeded in his house

From

From loane to loane, to me foure or fiue diſcents,
Since the firſt father wore it. This Ring he holds
In moſt rich choice: yet in his idle fire,
To buy his will, it would not ſeeme too deere,
How ere repented after
Wid. Now I ſee the bottome of your purpoſe.
Hel. You ſee it lawfull then, it is no more,
But that your daughter ere ſhe ſeemes as wonne,
Deſires this Ring, appoints him an encounter;
In fine, delivers me to fill the time,
Her ſelfe moſt chaſtly abſent after
To marry her, Ile adde three thouſand Crownes
To what is paſt already.
Wid. I have yeelded
Inſtruct my daughter how ſhe ſhall perſeuer,
That time and place with this deceite ſo lawfull
May proue coherent. Euery night he comes
With Muſicke of all ſorts, and ſongs compoſd
To her vnworthineſſe: It nothing ſteeds vs
To chide him from our eeues, for he perſiſts
As if his life lay on it.
Hel. Why then to night
Let vs aſſay our plot, which if it ſpeed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawfull deede;
And lawfull meaning in a lawfull act,
Where both not ſinne, and yet a finefull fact.
But let's about it.

Actus Quartus.

Enter one of the Frenchmen, with five or ſixe other ſouldiers in ambuſh.

1. Lord E. He can come no other way but by this hedge corner: when you ſallie vpon him, ſpeake what terrible Language you will, though you vnderſtand it not your ſelues, no matter: for we muſt not ſeeme to vnderſtand him, vnleſſe ſome one among vs, whom wee muſt produce for an Interpreter.
1. Sol. Good Captaine, let me be th'Interpreter.
Lor E. Art not acquainted with him? knowes he not thy voyce?
1. Sol No ſir I warrant you.
Lo E. But what linſie-woolſie hath thou to ſpeake to vs againe
1. Sol. E'en ſuch as you ſpeake to me.
Lo E. He muſt thinke vs ſome band of ſtrangers, i'th aduerſaries entertainment. Now he hath a ſmacke of all neighbouring Languages: therefore we muſt every one be a man of his owne fancie, not to know what we ſpeak one to another: ſo we ſeeme to know, is to know ſtraight our purpoſe. Choughs language, gabble enough, and good enough. As for you interpreter, you muſt ſeeme very politicke. But couch hoa, heere hee comes, to beguile two houres in a ſleepe, and then to returne & ſweare the lies he forges

Enter Parrolles

Par. Ten a clocke. Within theſe three houres 'twill be time enough to goe home. What ſhall I ſay I haue done? It muſt bee a very plauſiue inuention that carries it. They begine to ſmoake mee, and diſgraces haue of late, knock'd too often at my doore. I finde my tongue is too foole-hardie, but my pate is full of the feare of Mars before it, and of his creatures, not daring the reports of my tongue.
Lo E. This is the firſt truth that ere thine own tongue was guiltie of.
Par. What the diuell ſhould moue mee to vndertake the recouery of this drumme, being not ignorant of the impoſſibility, and knowing I had no ſuch purpoſe? I muſt giue my ſelfe ſome hurts, and ſay I got them in exploit: yet ſlight ones will not carrie it. They will ſay, came you off with ſo little? And great ones I dare not giue, wherefore what's the inſtance. Tongue, I muſt put you into a Butter-womans mouth, and buy my ſelfe another of Bajazeths Mule, if you prattle mee into theſe perilles.
Lo E. Is it poſſible he ſhould know what hee is, and be that he is
Par. I would the cutting of my garments would ſerue the turne, or the breaking of my Spaniſh ſword.
Lo E. We cannot afford you ſo.
Par. Or the baring of my beard, and to ſay it was in ſtratagem.
Lo E. 'Twould not do
Par. Or to drowne my cloathes, and ſay I was ſtript.
Lo E. Hardly ſerue.
Par. Though I ſwore I leapt from the window of the Citadell.
Lo E. How deepe?
Par Thirty fadome
Lo E. Three great oathes would ſcarſe make that be beleeued.
Par. I would I had any drumme of the enemies, I would ſweare I recouer'd it.
Lo E. You ſhall heare one anon.
Par. A drumme now of the enemies.

Alarum within.

Lo F. Throca movouſus, cargo, cargo, cargo.
All. Cargo, cargo, cargo, villiando par corbo, cargo.
Par. O ranſome, ranſome,
Do not hide mine eyes.
Inter. Boſkos thromuldo boſkos.
Par I know you are the Muſkos Regiment,
And I ſhall loſe my life for want of language
If there be heere German or Dane, Low Dutch,
Italian, or French, let him ſpeake to me,
Ile diſcouer that, which ſhall vndo the Florentine.
Int. Boſkos vauvado, I vnderſtand thee, & can ſpeake thy tongue: Kerelybonto ſir, betake thee to thy faith, for ſeuenteene poniards are at thy boſome.
Par. Oh.
Inter. Oh pray, pray, pray.
Manka reuania dulche.
Lo E. Oſcorbidulchos volunteo.
Int. The Generall is content to ſpare thee yet,
And hoodwinkt as thou art, will leade thee on
To gather from thee. Haply thou may'ſt informe
Something to ſaue thy life.
Par. O let me liue,
And all the ſecrets of our campe Ile ſhew,
Their force, their purpoſes: Nay, Ile ſpeake that,
Which you will wonder at.
Inter. But wilt thou faithfully?
Par If I do not, damne me.
Inter. Acordo linta.
Come on, thou are granted ſpace. Exit

A short Alarum within.

L.E Go tell the Count Rossillion and my brother,
We haue caught the woodcocke, and will keepe him
Till we do heare from them. (muffled
Sol Captaine I will.
L.E A will betray vs all vnto our selues,
Informe on that.
Sol. So I will Sir.
L.E. Till then Ile keepe him darke and safely lockt. Exit

Enter Bertram, and the Maide called Diana.

Ber They told me that your name was Fontybell.
Dia. No my good Lord, Diana.
Ber. Titled Goddesse,
And worth it with addition: but fate soule,
Is your fine frame haunted to this cold sleepe?
If the quicke fire of youth light not your mould,
You are no Maiden, but a monument:
When you are dead you should be such a one
As you are now: for you are cold and sterne,
And now you should be as your mother was
When your sweet selfe was got.
Dia. She then was honest,
Ber So should you be.
Dia. No:
My mother did but duty, such (my Lord)
As you owe to your wife.
Ber. No more of that
I prethee do not striue against my vowes:
I was compell'd to her, but I loue thee
By loue's own sweet constraint, and will for euer
Do thee all rights of seruice.
Dia Ay so you serue vs
Till we serue you: but when you haue our Roses,
You barely leaue our thornes to prick our selues,
And mock vs with our barrennesse.
Ber How haue I sworne
Dia 'Tis not the many oathes that makes the truth,
But the plaine single vow, that is vow'd true.
What is not holy, that we sweare not by,
But take the High'st to witnesse: then pray you tell me,
If I should sweare by Ioues great attributes,
I lou'd you deerely, would you beleeue my oathes,
When I did loose you ill? This has no holding
To sweare by him whom I protest to loue
That I will worke against him: Therefore your oathes
Are words and poore conditions, but vnseal'd
At least in my opinion.
Ber Change it, change it.
Be not so holy-cruell: Loue is holie,
And my integrity ne're knew the crafts
That you do charge men with. Stand no more off,
But giue thy selfe vnto my sicke desires,
Who then recouers: Say thou art mine, and euer
My loue as it begins shall so persever.
Dia. I see that men make ropes in such a scarre,
That we'll forsake our selues. Giue me that Ring
Ber. I'le lend it thee my deere, but haue no power
To giue it from me.
Dia. Will you not my Lord?
Ber It is an honour 'longing to our house,
Bequeathed downe from many Ancestors,
Which were the greatest obliquie'th world,
In me to loose. Thus your owne proper wisedome
Brings in the Champion honor on my part,
Against your vaine assault
Ber. Heere, take my Ring,
My house, mine honor, yea my life be thine,
And Ile be bid by thee
Dia, When midnight comes, knocke at my chamber window:
Ile order take, my mother shall not heare.
Now will I charge you in the band of truth,
When you haue conquer'd my yet maiden-bed,
Remaine there but an houre, nor speake to mee.
My reasons are most strong, and you shall know them,
When backe again this Ring shall be deliuer'd:
And on your finger in the night, Ile put
Another Ring, that what in time proceeds,
May token to the future, our past deeds.
Adieu till then, then faile not: you haue wonne
A wife of me, though there my hope be done.
Ber A heauen on earth I haue won by wooing thee.
Dia For which, liue long to thank both heauen & me,
You may (I'm the end.
My mother told me iust how he would woo,
As if she sate in's heart. She sayes, all men
Haue the like oathes: He had sworne to marrie me
When his wife's dead, therefore Ile lye with him
When I am buried. Since Frenchmen are so braide,
Marry that will, I liue and die a Maid:
Onely in this disguise, I think't no sinne,
To cosen him that would vniustly winne. Exit

Enter the two French Captaines, and some two or three Souldiours

Cap G. You haue not giuen him his mothers letter.
Cap I haue deliuered it an houre since, there is something in't that stings his nature: for on the reading it, he changed almost into another man.
Cap G. He has much worthy blame laid vpon him, for shaking off so good a wife, and so sweet a Lady
Cap E. Especially, he hath incurred the euerlasting displeasure of the King, who had euen tun'd his bounty to sing, approoue to him. I will tell you a thing, but you shall let it dwell darkly with you.
Cap G When you haue spoken it, 'tis dead, and I am the grauer of it
Cap E He hath peruerted a young Gentlewoman here in Florence, of a most chaste renown, & this night he fleshes his will, in the spoyle of her honour: he hath giuen her his monumentall Ring, and thinkes himselfe made in the vnchaste composition
Cap G Now God delay our rebellion as we are our selues, what things are we
Cap E Meerely our owne traitours. And as in the common course of all treasons, we still see them reueale themselues, till they attaine to their abhorr'd ends, so he that in this action contriues against his owne Nobility in his proper stream, ore-flowes himselfe
Cap G Is it not meant damnable in vs, to be Trumpeters of our vnlawfull intents? We shall not then haue his company to night?
Cap E Not till after midnight: for he is dieted to his houre
Cap G That approaches apace: I would gladly haue him see his company anathomiz'd, that he might take a measure of his owne iudgements, wherein so curiously he had set this counterfeit.

Cap. E. We will not meddle with him till he come; for his presence must be the whip of the other.

Cap. G. In the meane time, what heare you of these Warres?

Cap. E. I heare there is an overture of peace

Cap. G. Nay, I assure you a peace concluded.

Cap. E. What will Count Rossillion do then? Will he trauaile higher, or returne againe into France?

Cap. G. I perceiue by this demand, you are not altogether of his councell

Cap. E. Let it be forbid sir, so should I bee a great deale of his act.

Cap. G. Sir, his wife some two moneths since fledde from his house, her pretence is a pilgrimage to Saint Iaques le grand; which holy vndertaking, with most austere sanctimonie she accomplisht: and there residing, the tendernesse of her Nature, became as a prey to her greefe: in fine, made a groane of her last breath, & now she sings in heauen.

Cap. E. How is this iustified?

Cap. G. The stronger part of it by her owne Letters, which makes her story true, euen to the point of her death: her death it selfe, which could not be her office to say, is come: was faithfully confirmed by the Rector of the place.

Cap. E. Hath the Count all this intelligence?

Cap. G. I, and the particular confirmations, point from point, to the full arming of the verity.

Cap. E. I am heartily sorrie that he'l bee gladde of this.

Cap. G. How mightily sometimes, we make vs comforts of our losses.

Cap. E. And how mightily some other times, we drowne our gaine in teares, the great'st grace lending grace vses it selfe before it come, so I forget to thanke the counterfeit with a thankes example.

Cap. G. Therefore is our vertues of a mingled vaine, good and ill together: our vertues would bee proud, if our faults whipt them not, and our crimes would dispaire if they were not cherish'd by our vertues.

Enter a Messenger.

How now? Where's your master?

Ser. He met the Duke in the street sir, of whom hee hath taken a solemne leaue: his Lordship will next morning for France. The Duke hath offered him Letters of commendations to the King.

Cap. E. They shall bee no more than needfull there, if they were more than they can commend.

Enter Count Rossillion.

Ber. They cannot be too sweete for the Kings tartnesse, heere's his Lordship now. How now my Lord is't not after midnight?

Ber. I haue to night dispatch'd sixteene businesses, a moneths length a peece, by an abstract of successe: I haue congied with the Duke, done my adieu with his nearest; buried a wife, mourn'd for her, writ to my La de mother, I am returning, entertain'd my Conuoy, & betweene these maine parcels of dispatch, effected many nicer needs: the last was the greatest, but that I haue not ended yet.

Cap. E. If the businesse bee of any difficulty, and this morning your departure hence, it requires haste of your Lordship.

Ber. I meane the businesse is not ended, as fearing to heare of it hereafter but shall we haue this dialogue betweene the Foole and the Soldiour. Come, bring forth this counterfet module, has deceiu'd me, like a double-meaning Prophesier.

Cap. E. Bring him forth, has'sate i'th stockes all night poore gallant knaue.

Ber. No matter, his heeles haue deseru'd it, in vsurping his spurres so long. How does he carry himselfe?

Cap. E. I haue told your Lordship already. The stockes carry him. But to answer you as you would be vnderstood, he weepes like a wench that had shed her milke, he hath confest himselfe to Morgan, whom he supposes to be a Friar, from the time of his remembrance to this very instant disaster of his setting i'th stockes and what think you he hath confest?

Ber. Nothing of me, has'a?

Cap. E. His confession is taken, and it shall bee read to his face, if your Lordship be in't, as I beleeue you are, you must haue the patience to heare it

Enter Parolles with his Interpreter

Ber. A plague vpon him, muffled, can say nothing of me: hush, hush!

Cap. G. Hoodman comes. Portotartarossa.

Inter. He calles for the tortures, What will you say without 'em?

Par. I will confesse what I know without constraint, If ye pinch me like a Pasty, I can say no more.

Int. Bosko Chimmo

Cap. Boskos thromuldo boskos.

Int. You are a mercifull Generall: Our Generall bids you answer to what I shall aske you out of a Note.

Par. And truly, as I hope to liue.

Int. First demand of him, how many horse the Duke is strong. What say you to that?

Par. Fiue or six thousand, but very weake and vnserviceable: the troopes are all scattered, and the Commanders verie poore rogues, vpon my reputation and credit, and as I hope to liue.

Int. Shall I set downe your answer so?

Par. Do, Ile take the Sacrament on't, how & which way you will: all's one to me.

Ber. What a past-saving slaue is this?

Cap. G. Y'are deceiu'd my Lord, this is Monsieur Parrolles the gallant militarist, that was his owne phrase that had the whole theorike of warre in the knot of his scarfe, and the practise in the chape of his dagger.

Cap. E. I will neuer trust a man againe, for keeping his sword cleane, nor beleeue he can haue euerie thing in man, by wearing his apparell neatly.

Int. Well, that's set downe.

Par. Fiue or six thousand horse I said I will say true, or thereabouts set downe, for Ile speake truth.

Cap. G. He's very neere the truth in this.

Ber. But I con him no thankes for't in the nature he deliuers it.

Par. Poore rogues, I pray you say.

Int. Well, that's set downe.

Par. I humbly thanke you sir, a truth's a truth, the Rogues are marueilous poore.

Interp. Demand of him of what strength they are a foot. What say you to that?

Par. By my troth sir, if I were to liue this present houre, I will tell true. Let me see, Spurio a hundred & fifte, fifttie, Sebastian so many, Corambus so many, Jaques so many Guiltian Cassio, Lodowicke, and Gratij, two hundred fifte each. Mine owne Company, Chrisopher, Vaumond, Tenij, two hundred fifte each: so that the muster file, to reade and ound, vpon my life amounts not to fifteene thousand pole, halfe of the which, dare not shake the snow from off their Cadoxes, least they shake themselues to peeces.

Ber. What shall be done to him?

Cap. G. Nothing, but let him haue thankes. Demand of him my condition, and what credite I haue with the Duke.

Int. Well, that's set downe: you shall demaund of him, whether one Captaine Dumaine be i' Campe, a Frenchman, what his reputation is with the Duke, what his valour, honestie, and expertnesse in warres: or whether he thinkes it were not possible with well-weighing summes of gold to corrupt him to a reuolt. What say you to this? What do you know of it?

Par. I beseech you let me answer to the particular of the interrogatories. Demand them singly.

Int. Do you know this Captaine Dumaine?

Par. I know him: a was a Botchers 'prentize in Paris, from whence a was whipt for getting the Shrieue's fool with child, a dumbe innocent that could not say him nay.

Ber. Nay, by your leaue hold your hands, though I know his braines are forfeite to the next tile that falls.

Int. Well, is this Captaine in the Duke of Florences campe?

Par. Vpon my knowledge he is, and lowsie.

Cap. G. Nay looke not so vpon me, we shall heare of your Lord anon.

Int. What sort of reputation with the Duke?

Par. The Duke knowes him for no other, but a poore Officer of mine, and writ to me this other day, to turne him out a th' band. I think, I haue his Letter in my pocket.

Int. Marry we'll search.

Par. In good sadnesse I do not know, either it is there, or it is vpon a file with the Duke's other Letters, in my Tent.

Int. Heere 'tis, heere's a paper, shall I reade it to you?

Par. I do not know if it be it or no.

Ber. Our Interpreter do's it well.

Cap. G. Excellently.

Int. Dian, the Counts a foole, and full of gold.

Par. That is the Dukes letter: fox that is an aduertisement to a proper maide in Florence, one Diana, to take heede of the allurement of one Count Rossillion, a foolish idle boy, but for all that very ruttish. I pray you to proceed.

Int. Nay, I'll read it first, by your fauour.

Par. My meaning in't, I protest was very honest in the behalfe of the maide, for I know the young Count to be a dangerous and lasciuious boy, who is a whale to Virginity, and deuoures vp all the fry it finds.

Ber. Damnable both-sides rogue.

Int Let. When he swears oathes, bid him drop gold, and take it.
After he scores, he neuer pares the score.
Draw no aduantage from his blood-shed,
But make sport to driue it from his head,
And at the minute of his sorrow pay him:
For count of this, the Counts a Foole I know it,
Who pays before, but not when he does owe it.
Thine as he vow'd to thee in thine ear,
Parolles.

Ber. He shall be whipt through the Armie with this rime in's forehead.

Cap. E. This is your deuoted friend sir, the manifold Linguist, and the army-potent souldier.

Ber. I could endure any thing before but a Cat, and now he's a Cat to me.

Int. I perceiue sir by your Generals lookes, we shall be fayne to hang you.

Par. My life sir in any case. Not that I am afraide to dye, but that my offences being many, I would repent out the remainder of Nature. Let me liue sir in a dungeon, i' th stockes, or any where, so I may liue.

Int. Well see what may be done, so you confesse freely: therefore once more to this Captaine Dumaine: you haue answer'd to his reputation with the Duke, and to his valour. What is his honestie?

Par. He will steale sir an Egge out of a Cloyster: for rapes and raui'shments he parallels Nessus. He professes not keeping of oathes, in breaking 'em he is stronger then Hercules. He will lye sir, with such volubility, that you would think truth were a foole: drunkennesse is his best vertue, for he will be swine-drunke, and in his sleepe he does little harme, saue to his bed-clothes about him; but they know his conditions, and lay him in straw. I haue but little more to say sir of his honesty, he has euery thing that an honest man should not haue; what an honest man should haue, he has nothing.

Cap. G. I begin to loue him for this.

Ber. For this description of thine honestie? A pox vpon him for me, he's more and more a Cat.

Int. What say you to his expertnesse in warre?

Par. Faith sir, has led the drumme before the English Tragedians: to belye him I will not, and more of his soldiership I know not, except in that Country, he had the honour to be the Officer at a place there called Mile-end, to instruct for the doubling of files. I would do the man what honour I can, but of this I am not certaine.

Cap. G. He hath out-villain'd villanie so farre, that the rarity redeems him.

Ber. A pox on him, he's a Cat still.

Int. His qualities being at this poore price, I need not to aske you if Gold will corrupt him to reuolt.

Par. Sir, for a Cardecue he will sell the fee-simple of his saluation, the inheritance of it, and cut th' intaile from all remainders, and a perpetuall succession for it perpetually.

Int. What's his Brother, the other Captaine Dumaine?

Cap. E. Why do's he aske him of me?

Int. What's he?

Par. E'en a Crow a th' same nest: not altogether so great as the first in goodnesse, but greater a great deale in euill. He excells his brother for a coward, yet his brother is reputed one of the best that is. In a retreate he outruns any Lackey; marrie in comming on, he has the Crampe.

Int. If your life be saued, will you vndertake to betray the Florentine.

Par. I, and the Captaine of his horse, Count Rossillion.

Int. I'le whisper with the Generall, and know his pleasure.

Par. I'le no more drumming, a plague of all drummes, only to seeme to deserue well, and to beguile the supposition sition of that lasciuious yong boy the Count, haue I run into this danger: yet who would haue suspected an ambush where I was taken?

Int. There is no remedy Sir, but you must dye: the General sayes, you that haue so traitorously discouerd the secrets of your army, and made such pestiferous reports of men very nobly held, can serue the world for no honest vse: therefore you must dye. Come Headman, off with his head.

Par. O Lord Sir, let me liue, or let me see my death.

Int. That shall you, and take your leaue of all your friends.

So, looke about: Confesse if you haue any friends.

Count. Good morrow noble Captaine.

Lo. E. God bleſſe you Captaine Parolles.

Cap. G. God saue you noble Captaine.

Lo. F. Captaine what greeting will you to my Lord Lafew? I am for France.

Cap. G. Good Captaine will you giue me a Copy of the ſonnet you writ to Diana in behalfe of the Count Rossillion, and I were not a very Coward, I'de compell it of you, but fare you well. Exeunt.

Int. You are now a Captaine no, but you ſcarfe, that has a knot on yet.

Par. Who cannot be crusht with a plot?

Inter. If you could finde out a Countrie where but women were that had receiued so much shame, you might begin an impudent Nation. Fare ye well Sir, I am for France too, we shall speake of you there. Exit.

Par. Yet am I thankfull: if my heart were great
'Twould burſt at this. Captaine I'le be no more,
But I will eate and drinke, and ſleepe as ſoft
As Captaine ſhall: Simply the thing I am
Shall make me liue. Who knowes himſelfe a braggart
Let him feare this, for it will come to paſſe,
That euery braggart ſhall be found an Aſſe.
Ruſt ſword, coole blushes, and Parolles liue
Safeſt in ſhame: being fooliſh, foolifh gooderude,
There's place and meanes for euery man aliue.
Ile after them. Exit.

Enter Helen, Widdow, and Diana.

Hel. That you may well perceiue I haue not wrong'd you,
One of the greateſt in the Chriſtian world
Shall be my ſurety: 'fore whoſe throne 'tis needfull,
Ere I can perfect mine intents, to kneele.
Time was, I did him a deſired office
Deere almoſt as his life: which gratitude
Through flinty Tartars boſome would peepe forth,
And answer thankes. I duly am informed,
His grace is at Marſeilles, to which place
We haue conuenient conuoy. You muſt know
I am ſuppoſed dead: the Army breaking,
My husband hies him home, where heauen aiding,
And by the leaue of my good Lord the King,
We'le be before our welcome.

Wid. Gentle Madam,
You neuer had a ſeruant to whoſe truſt
Your boſines was more welcome.

Hel. Nor your Miſtris
Euer a friend, whoſe thoughts more truly labour
To recompence your loue. Doubt not but heauen
Hath brought me vp to be your daughters dower,
As it hath fated her to be my motiue
And helper to a husband. But O ſtrange men,
That can ſuch ſweet vſe make of what they hate,
When ſawcie trailing of the coſin'd thoughts
Defiles the pitchy night, ſo luſt doth play
With what it loathes, for that which is away.
But more of this hereafter: you Diana,
Vnder my poore inſtructions yet muſt ſuffer
Something in my behalfe.

Dia. Let death and honeſtie
Go with your impoſitions, I am yours
Vpon your will to ſuffer.

Hel. Yet I pray you:
But with the word the time will bring on ſummer,
When Briars ſhall haue leaues as well as thornes,
And be as ſweet as ſharpe. We muſt away,
Our Wagon is prepar'd, and time reuiues vs,
All's well that ends well: ſtill the fine's the Crowne;
Whate're the courſe, the end is the renowne. Exeunt.

Enter Clowne, old Lady, and Leſſie.

Laf. No, no, no, your ſonne was miſled with a ſnipt taffata fellow there, whoſe villanous ſaffron would haue made all the vnbak'd and dowy youth of a nation in his colour: your daughter-in-law had beene aliue at this houre, and your ſonne here at home, more aduanced by the King, then by that red-tayl'd humble Bee I ſpeak of.

La. I would I had not known him: it was the death of the moſt vertuous gentlewoman, that euer Nature had praiſe for creating. If ſhe had partaken of my fleſh and coſt me the deareſt groanes of a mother, I could not haue owed her a more rooted loue.

Laf. 'Twas a good Lady, 'twas a good Lady. Wee may picke a thouſand ſalletts ere wee light on ſuch another herbe.

Clo. Indeed ſir ſhe was the ſweete Marierom of the ſalet, or rather: the herbe of grace.

Laf. They are not ſalet herbes you knaue, they are noſe-herbes.

Clowne. I am no great Nebuchadnezzar, ſir: I haue not much skill in grace.

Laf. Whether doeſt thou profeſſe thy ſelfe, a knaue or a foole?

Clo. A foole ſir at a womans ſeruice, and a knaue at a mans.

Laf. Your diſtinction.

Clo. I would cozen the man of his wife, and do his ſeruice.

Laf. So you were a knaue at his ſeruice indeed.

Clo. And I would giue his wife my bauble ſir to do her ſeruice.

Laf. I will ſubſcribe for thee, thou art both knaue and foole.

Clo. At your ſeruice.

Laf. No, no, no.

Clo. Why ſir, if I cannot ſerue you, I can ſerue as great a prince as you are.

Laf. Who's that, a Frenchman?

Clo. Faith ſir a has an Engliſh name: but his fiſnomie is more hotter in France then there.

Laf. What prince is that?

Clo. The blacke prince ſir, alias the prince of darkeneſſe, alias the diuell.

Laf. Hold thee there's my purſe, I giue thee not this to ſuggeſt thee from thy maſter thou talk'ſt of, ſerue him ſtill.

Clow

Clo. I am a woodland fellow sir, that always loued a great fire, and the master I speak of euer keeps a good fire, but sure he is the Prince of the world, let his Nobilitie remaine in's Court. I am for the house with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for pompe to enter: some that humble themselues may, but the many will be too chill and tender, and they'le be for the flowrie way that leads to the broad gate, and the great fire.

Laf. Go thy waies, I begin to be a weary of thee, and I tell thee so before, because I would not fall out with thee. Go thy waies, let my horses be well look'd too, without any tricks.

Clo. If I put any tricks vpon 'em sir, they shall be Iades tricks, which are their owne right by the law of Nature. exit

Laf. A shrewd knaue and an vnhappie

Lady. So a is. My Lord that's gone made himselfe much sport out of him, by his authoritie he remaines heere, which he thinkes is a patterne for his sawcinesse, and indeede he has no pace, but runnes where he will.

Laf. I like him well, 'tis not amisse: and I was about to tell you, since I heard of the good Ladies death, and that my Lord your sonne was vpon his returne home, I moued the King my master to speake in the behalfe of my daughter, which in the minoritie of them both, his Maiestie out of a late gracious remembrance did first propose, his Highnesse hath promis'd me to do it, and to stoppe vp the displeasure he hath conceiued against your sonne, there is no fitter matter. How do's your Ladyship like it?

La. With verie much content my Lord, and I wish it happily effected.

Laf. His Highnesse comes post from Marcellus, of as able bodie as when he number'd thirty, a will be heere to morrow, or I am deceiu'd by him that in such intelligence hath seldome fail'd.

La. It reioyces me, that I hope I shall see him ere I die. I haue letters that my sonne will be heere to night: I shall beseech your Lordship to remaine with mee, till they meete together.

Laf. Madam, I was thinking with what manners I might safely be admitted

Lad. You needs but plead your honourable priuiledge.

Laf. Ladie, of that I haue made a bold charter, but I thanke my God, it holds yet

Enter Clowne

Clo. O Madam, yonders my Lord your sonne with a patch of velure on's face, whether there bee a scar vnder't or no, the Velure knowes, but 'tis a goodly patch of Velure, his left cheeke is a cheeke of two pile and a halfe, but his right cheeke is worne bare.

Laf. A scarre nobly got,
Or a noble scarre, is a good liuerie of honor,
So belike is that

Clo. But it is your carbinado'd face

Laf. Let vs go see your sonne I pray you, I long to talke
With the yong noble soulders.

Clowne. Faith there's a dozen of 'em, with delicate fine hats, and most courteous feathers, which bow the head, and nod at euerie man. Exeunt

Actus Quintus.

Enter Helen, Widdow, and Diana, with two Attendants.

Hel. But this exceeding posting day and night,
Must wear your spirits low, we cannot helpe it
But since you haue made the dayes and nights as one,
To weare your gentle limbes in my affayres,
Be bold you do so grow in my requitall,
As nothing can vnroote you. In happie time,

Enter a gentle Astringer.

This man may helpe me to his Maiesties eare,
If he would spend his power. God saue you sir.

Gent. And you

Hel. Sir, I haue seene you in the Court of France

Gent. I haue beene sometimes there.

Hel. I do presume sir, that you are not falne
From the report that goes vpon your goodnesse,
And therefore goaded with most sharpe occasions,
Which lay nice manners by, I put you to
The vse of your owne vertues, for the which
I shall continue thankefull.

Gent. What's your will?

Hel. That it will please you
To giue this poore petition to the King,
And ayde me with that store of power you haue
To come into his presence.

Gen. The Kings not heere.

Hel. Not heere sir?

Gen. Not indeed,
He hence remou'd last night, and with more haste
Then is his vse

Wid. Lord how we loose our paines.

Hel. All's well that ends well yet,
Though time seeme so aduerse, and meanes vnfit.
I do beseech you, whither is he gone?

Gent. Marry as I take it to Rossillion,
Whither I am going.

Hel. I do beseech you sir,
Since you are like to see the King before me,
Commend the paper to his gracious hand,
Which I presume shall render you no blame,
But rather make you thanke your paines for it,
I will come after you with what good speede
Our meanes will make vs meanes.

Gent. This ile do for you.

Hel. And you shall finde your selfe to be well thanked Whate're falles more. We must to horse againe, Go, go, prouide

Enter Clowne and Parrolles

Par. Good Mr Lauatch giue my Lord Lafew this letter, I haue ere now sir beene better knowne to you, when I haue held familiaritie with fresher cloathes: but I am now sir muddied in fortunes mood, and smell somewhat strong of her strong displeasure.

Clo. Truely, Fortunes displeasure is but sluttish if it smell so strongly as thou speak'st of: I will hencefoorth eate no Fish of Fortunes buttering, Prethee allow the winde.

Par. Nay you needs not to stop your nose sir I spake but by a Metaphor

Clo. Indeed sir, if your Metaphor stinke, I will stop my nose, or against any mans Metaphor Prethee get thee further. Par

Par. Pray you sir deliuer me this paper.

Clo Foh, precheeland away, a paper from fortunes close stoole to giue to a Nobleman. Looke neere he comes himselfe.

Enter Lafew.

Clo. Heere is a purre of Fortunes sir, or of Fortunes Cat, but not a Muscat, that has falne into the vncleane fish-pond of her displeasure, and as he sayes is muddied withall. Pray you sir, vse the Carpe as you may, for he looks like a poore decayed, ingenious, foolish, rascally knaue. I doe pittie his distresse in my smiles of comfort, and leaue him to your Lordship.

Par. My Lord I am a man whom fortune hath cruelly scratcht.

Laf. And what would you haue me to doe? 'Tis too late to pare her nailes now. Wherein haue you playes with her fortune that she should scratch you, who of her selfe is a good Lady, and would not haue knaues thriue long vnder her? There's a Cardecue for you. Let vs take the fittes we haue, and not weare out a well dreste Lye for her sake. You and fortune hencefoorth; Exit for other businesse.

Par. I beseech your honour to heare me one single word.

Laf. You beg a single penny more. Come you shall haue it, saue your word.

Par. My name my good Lord is Parrolles.

Laf. You beg more then word then. Cox my passion giue me your hand. How does your drummer?

Par. O my good Lord, you were the first that found me.

Laf. Was I in sooth? And I was the first that lost thee.

Par. It lyes in you my Lord to bring me in some grace for you did bring me out.

Laf. Out vpon thee knaue, dost thou put vpon me at once both the office of God and the deuil, one brings thee in grace, and the other poops thee out. The King comming, I know by his Trumpets. Sirrah, inquire further after me, I had talke of you last night, though you are a foole and a knaue, you shall eate, go to, follow.

Par. I praise God for you.

Flourish. Enter King, and Lords Lafew, the two French Lords, with attendants.

King. We lost a iewell of her, and our esteeme
Was made much poorer by it: but your sonne,
As mad in folly, lackt the sence to know
Her estimation home.

Old Lad. 'Tis past my Liege,
And I beseech your Maiestie to make it
Naturall rebellion, done i'th blade of youth,
When oyle and fire too strong for reasons force,
Oreboares it, and burnes on.

King. My honour'd Lady,
I haue forgiuen and forgotten all,
Though my reuenges were high bent vpon him,
And watch'd the time to shoote.

Laf. This I must say,
But first I begge my pardon. the yong Lord
Did to his Maiestie, his Mother, and his Ladie,
Offence of mighty note, but to himselfe
The greatest wrong of all. He lost a wife,
Whose beauty did astonish the suruey
Of richest eyes, whose words all eares tooke captiue,
Whose deere perfection, hearts that scorn'd to serue,
Humbly call'd Mistris.

King. Praising what is lost,
Makes the remembrance deere. Well, call him hither,
We are reconcil'd, and the first view shall kill
All repetition. Let him not aske our pardon,
The nature of his great offence is dead,
And deeper then oblyuion, we do burie
Th'incensing relques of it. Let him approach
A stranger, no offender; and informe him
So 'tis our will he should.

Gent. I shall my Liege.

King. What sayes he to your daughter,
Haue you spoke?

Laf. All that he is hath reference to your Highnes.

King. Then shall we haue a match. I haue letters sent me, that sets him high in our fauour.

Enter Count Rossillion.

Laf. He looks well on't.

King. I am not a day of season,
For thou may'st see a sunne-shine and a haile
In me at once. But to the brightest beames
Distracted clouds giue way, so stand thou forth,
The time is fayre againe.

Ber. My high repented blames
Deere Soueraigne pardon to me.

King. All is whole,
Not one word more of the consumed time.
Let's take the instant by the forward top:
For we are old, and on our quickest decrees
Th'inaudible and noyselesse foot of time
Steales, ere we can effect them. You remember
The daughter of this Lord?

Ber. Admiringly, my Liege, at first
I stucke my choice vpon her, ere my heart
Durst make too bold a herauld of my tongue:
Where the impression of mine eye enfixing,
Contempt his scornefull Perspective did lend me,
Which warpt the line, of euery other fauour,
Scorn'd a faire colour, or exprest it stolne,
Extended or contracted all proportions
To a most hideous obiect. Thence it came,
That she whom all men prais'd, and whom my selfe,
Since I haue lost, haue lou'd; was in mine eye
The dust that did offend it.

King. Well excus'd.
That thou didst loue her strikes some scores away
From the great compt: but loue that comes too late,
Like a remorseful pardon slowly carried
To the great sender, turnes a sowre offence,
Crying, that's good that's gone. Our rash faults,
Make trifles of despight of serious things we haue,
Not knowing them, vntill we know their grauе.
O'er our displeasures to our selues vniust,
Destroy our friends, and after weepe their dust.
Our owne loue waking, cries to see what's don,e
While shamefull hate sleepes out the afternoone.
Be this sweet Helen knell, and now forget her.
Send forth your amorous token for faire Maudlin,
The maine contents are had, and heere wee'l stay
To see our widdowers second marriage day:
Which better then the first O deere heauen bleſſe,
Or, ere they meete in me, O Nature ceſſe.

Laf. Come on my sonne, in whom my houses name
Must be digested, giue a fauour from you
To sparkle in the spirits of my daughter,

That

That she may quickly come. By my old beard,
And euery hayre that's on't, Helen that's dead
Was a sweet creature: such a ring as this,
The last that ere I tooke her leaue at Court,
I saw vpon her finger.
Ber. Hers it was not.
King. Now pray you let me see it. For mine eye,
While I was speaking, oft was fastened to't:
This Ring was mine, and when I gaue it Helen,
I bad her if her fortunes euer stoode
Necessitied to helpe, that by this token
I would releeue her. Had you that craft to reaue her
Of what should stead her most?
Ber. My gracious Soueraigne,
How ere it pleases you to take it so,
The ring was neuer hers.
Old La. Sonne, on my life
I haue seene her weare it, and she reckon'd it
At her liues rate.
Laf. I am sure I saw her weare it
Ber. You are deceiu'd my Lord, she neuer saw it:
In Florence was it from a casement throwne mee,
Wrap'd in a paper, which contein'd the name
Of her that threw it: Noble she was, and thought
I stood ingag'd: but when I had subscribd
To mine owne fortune, and informd her fully,
I could not answer in that course of Honour
As she had made the ouerture, she ceast
In heauie satisfaction, and would neuer
Receiue the Ring againe.
King. Plutus himselfe,
That knowes the tinct and multiplying medicine,
Hath not in natures mysterie more science,
Then I haue in this Ring: 'Twas mine, 'twas Helens,
Whoe euer gaue it you: then if you know
That you are well acquainted with your selfe,
Confesse 'twas hers, and by what rough enforcement
You got it from her. She call'd the Saints to surety,
That she would neuer put it from her finger,
Vnlesse she gaue it to your selfe in bed,
Where you haue neuer come: or sent it vs
Vpon her great disaster.
Ber. She neuer saw it.
King. Thou speak'st it falsely, as I loue mine Honor,
And mak'st coniectural feares to come into me,
Which I would fain shut out, if it should prooue
That thou art so inhumane, 'twill not prooue so:
And yet I know not: thou didst hate her deadly,
And she is dead, which nothing but to close
Her eyes my selfe, could win me to beleeue,
More then to see this Ring. Take him away,
My fore-past proofes howe're the matter fall
Shall taze my teares of ready vanish,
Hanging vaily teard to mine ire. Away with him,
We'll sift this matter further.
Ber. If you shall prooue
This Ring was euer hers, you shall as easie
Prooue that I husbanded her bed in Florence,
Where yet she neuer was
Enter a Gentleman.
King. I am wrap'd in dismall thinkings.
Gen. Gracious Soueraigne,
Whether I haue beene to blame or no, I know not,
Here's a petition from a Florentine,
Who hath for foure or fiue removes come short,
To tender it her selfe. I vndertooke it,
Vanquish'd thereto by the faire grace and speech
Of the poore suppliant, who by this I know
Is heere attending: her businesse lookes in her
With an importing visage, and she told me
In a sweet verball breefe, it did concerne
Your Highnesse with her selfe.

A Letter.

Upon his many protestations to marrie me when his wife was dead, I blush to say it, he wonne me. Now is the Count Rossillion a Widdower, his vowes are forfeited to me, and my honors payed to him. He stole from Florence, taking no leaue, and I follow him to his Country for Iustice: Grant it me, O King, in you it best lies, otherwise a seducer flourishes, and a poore Maid is vndone

Diana Capilet.

Laf. I will buy me a sonne in Law in a faire, and toule for this. Ile none of him
King. The heauens haue thought well on thee Lafew,
To bring forth this discouery: seeke these suters.
Go speedily, and bring againe the Count.
Enter Bertram.
I am afeard the life of Helen (Ladie)
Was foully snatcht.
Old La. Now iustice on the doers
King. I wonder sir, sir, wiues are monsters to you,
And that you flye them as you sweare them Lordship,
Yet you desire to marry. What woman's that?

Enter Widdow, Diana, and Parroller.

Dia. I am my Lord a wretched Florentine,
Deriued from the ancient Capilet,
My suite as I do vnderstand you know,
And therefore know how farre I may be pitied.
Wid. I am her Mother sir, whose age and honour
Both suffer vnder this complaint we bring,
And both shall cease, without your remedie.
King. Come hether Count, do you know these Women?
Ber. My Lord, I neither can nor will denie,
But that I know them, do they charge me further?
Dia. Why do you looke so strange vpon your wife?
Ber. She's none of mine my Lord
Dia. If you shall marrie
You giue away this hand, and that is mine,
You giue away heauens vowes, and those are mine:
You giue away my selfe, which is knowne mine:
For I by vow am so embodied yours,
That she which marries you, must marrie me,
Either both or none.
Laf. your reputation comes too short for my daughter, you are no husband for her
Ber. My Lord, this is a fond and desperate creature,
Whom sometime I haue laugh'd with. Let your highnes
Lay a more noble thought vpon mine honour,
Then for to thinke that I would sinke it heere.
King. Sir for my thoughts, you haue them ill to friend,
Till your deeds gaine them fairer: prooue your honor,
Then in my thought it lies.
Dia. Good my Lord,
Aske him vpon his oath, if hee do's thinke
He had not my virginity.
King. What saist thou to her?
Ber. She's impudent my Lord,
And was a common gamester to the Campe.
Dia. He do's me wrong my Lord: If I were so,
He might haue bought me at a common price.

Do

Do not beleeue him. O behold this Ring,
Whose high respect and rich validitie
Did lacke a Parallell: yet for all that
He gaue it to a Commoner a'th Campe
if I be one.
Coun. He blushes, and 'tis hit:
Of six preceding Ancestors, that Iemme
Confer'd by testament to'th sequent issue
Hath it beene owed and worne. This is his wife,
That Ring's a thousand proofes
King. Me thought you saide
You saw one heere in Court could witnesse it.
Dia. I did my Lord, but loath am to produce
So bad an instrument, his names Parrolles.
Laf. I saw the man to day, if man he bee,
Kin. Finde him, and bring him hether
Ref. What of him?
He's quoted for a most perfidious slaue
With all the spots a'th world, taxt and deboshd,
Whose nature sickens but to speake a truth,
Am I, or that or this for what he'l vtter,
That will speake any thing.
Kin. She hath that Ring of yours
Ref. I think she has, certaine it is I lik'd her,
And boorded her i'th wanton way of youth
She knew her distance, and did angle for me,
Madding my eagernesse with her restraint,
As all impediments in fancies course
Are motiues of more fancie: and in fine,
Her insuite comming with her modeme grace,
Subdu'd me to her rate, she got the Ring,
And I had that which any inferiour might
At Market price haue bought.
Dia. I must be patient
You that haue turn'd off a first so noble wife,
May iustly diet me. I pray you yet,
(Sith you lacke vertue, I will lose a husband)
Send for your Ring, I will returne it home,
And I giue me mine again.
Ref. I haue it not.
Kin. What Ring was yours I pray you?
Dian. Sir much like the same vpon your finger.
Kin. Know you this Ring, this Ring was his of late.
Dia. And this was it I gaue him being a bed.
Kin. The story then goes false, you threw it him
Out of a Casement.
Dia. I haue spoke the truth. Enter Parolles.
Ref. My Lord, I do confesse the ring was hers.
Kin. You boggle shrewdly, euery feather starts you.
Is this the man you speake of?
Dia. I, my Lord.
Kin. Tell me sirrah, but tell me true I charge you,
Not fearing the displeasure of your master.
Which on your iust proceeding, Ile keepe off,
By him and by this woman heere, what know you?
Par. So please your Maiesty, my master hath been an honourable Gentleman. Tricks he hath had in him, which Gentlemen haue.
Kin. Come, come, to'th'purpose. Did he loue this woman?
Par. Faith sir he did loue her, but how.
Kin. How I pray you?
Par. He did loue her sir, as a Gent. loues a Woman.
Kin. How is that?
Par. He lou'd her sir, and lou'd her not.
Kin. As thou art a knaue and no knaue, what an equinocall Companion is this?
Par. I am a poore man, and at your Maiesties command
Laf. Hee's a good drumme my Lord, but a naughtie
Orator
Dian. Do you know he promis'd me marriage?
Par. Faith I know more then Ile speake.
Kin. But wilt thou not speake all thou know'st?
Par. Yes so please your Maiesty. I did goe betweene them as I said, but more then that he lou'd her, for in-deede he was madde for her, and talkt of Satan, and of Limbo, and of Furies, and I know not what: yet I was in that credit with them at that time, that I knew of their going to bed, and of other motions, as promising her marriage, and things which would derriue me I will not speake of, therefore I will not speake what I know.
Kin. Thou hast spoken all already, vnlesse thou canst say they are married, but thou art too fine in thy euidence, therefore stand aside. This Ring you say was yours.
Dia. I my good Lord.
Kin. Where did you buy it? Or who gaue it you?
Dia. It was not giuen me, nor I did not buy it.
Kin. Who lent it you?
Dia. It was not lent me neither
Kin. Where did you find it then?
Dia. I found it not
Kin. If it were yours by none of all these wayes,
How could you giue it him?
Dia. I neuer gaue it him.
Laf. This womans an easie gloue my Lord, she goes off and on at pleasure
Kin. This Ring was mine, I gaue it his first wife.
Dia. It might be yours or hers for ought I know.
Kin. Take her away, I do not like her now,
To prison with her: and away with him,
Vnlesse thou tell'st me where thou hadst this Ring,
Thou dy'st within this houre
Dia. I'le neuer tell you
Kin. Take her away
Dia. Ile put in bayle my liedge.
Kin. I thinke thee now some common Customer.
Dia. By Iouefe euer I knew man 'twas you.
King. Wherefore hast thou accused him all this while.
Dia. Because he's guiltie, and he is not guiltie.
He knowes I am no Maid, and I'le sweare too't.
He sweare I am a Maid and he knowes not.
Great King I am no strumpet, by my life,
I am either Maid, or else this old mans wife.
Kin. She does abuse our eares, to prison with her.
Dia. Good mother fetch my bayle. Stay Royall sir,
The Iewell that owes the Ring is sent for,
And he shall surety me. But for this Lord,
Who hath abus'd me as he knowes himselfe,
Though yet he neuer harm'd me, heere I quit him.
He knowes himselfe my bed he hath defil'd,
And at that time he got his wife with childe:
Dead though she be, she feeles her yong one kicke.
So there's my riddle, one that's dead is quicke,
And now behold the meaning

Enter Helen and Widdow

Kin. Is there no exorcist
Begnines the truer Office of mine eyes?
Is't real that I see?
Hel. No my good Lord,

'Tis but the shadow of a wife you see,
The name, and not the thing.
Ber. Both, both, O pardon.
Hel. O my good Lord, when I was like this Maid,
I found you wondrous kinde, there is your Ring,
And look you, heeres your letter: this it sayes,
When from my finger you can get this Ring,
And is by me with child, &c. This is done,
Will you be mine now you are doubly wonne?
Ber. If she my Liege can make me know this clearly,
Ile love her dearely ever, ever dearly.
Hel. If it appeare not plaine, and prove it true,
Deadly divorce step betweene me and you.
O my deare mother do I see you living?
Laf. Mine eyes smell Onions, I shall weepe anon:
Good Tom Drum lend me a handkercher.
So I thanke thee, wait on me home, Ile make sport with thee: Let thy curtsies alone, they are scurvy ones.

King. Let us from point to point this story know,
To make the even truth in pleasure flow.
If thou beest yet a fresh uncropped flower,
Choose thou thy husband, and Ile pay thy dower.
For I can guesse, that by thy honest ayde,
Thou keptst a wife her selfe, thy selfe a Maide
Of that and all the progresse more and lesse,
Resolvedly more leasure shall expresse:
All yet seemes well, and if it end so meete,
The bitter past, more welcome is the sweete.

Flourish.

THe Kings a Beggar, now the Play is done,
All is well ended, if this suite be wonne,
That you expresse Content: which we will pay,
With strifes to please you, day exceeding day:
Ours be your patience then, and yours our parts,
Your gentle hands lend us, and take our hearts. Exeunt omn

FINIS.

[illegible]

T h I had made mine owne occasion for
What my estate is.
Cap. That were hard to compasse,
Because she wold not know estate,
Nor mine.
Vio. I pray thee tell me true.
And though 'tis wonder that enwraps me thus,
Yet 'gainst my will, as my delight in earnest
Will believe thee, and I (self) minde no harme
Whatsoever you are made to warde character
I prethee (and blame me not to love)
Conceale me what I am, and be my aide,
For such disguise as haply shall become
The forme of my intent. Be secret as Dukes,
Thou shalt present me as a eunuch to him,
It may be worth thy paines, for I can sing,
And speake to him in many sorts of Musicke,
That will allow me very worth his service.
What else may hap to time I will commit,
Onely shape thou thy silence to my wit.
Cap. Be you his Eunuch and your Mistris chuse,
I know my conscience, though my cheeke and cheeke should
Vio. I thank thee: Lead me on. Exeunt

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sir Toby, and Maria.

Sir To. What a plague meanes my Neece to take the death of her brother thus? I am sure care's an enemy to life.

Mar. By my troth Sir Toby, you must come in earlier a nights: your Cousin, my Lady, takes great exceptions to your ill houres.

To. Why let her except, before excepted.

Mar. Ay, but you must confine your selfe within the modest limits of order.

To. Confine? I'le confine my selfe no finer than I am: these clothes are good enough to drinke in, and so be these boots too: an they be not, let them hang themselves in their owne straps.

Mar. That quaffing and drinking will undoe you. I heard my Lady talke of it yesterday: and of a foolish knight that you brought in one night here, to be her wooer.

To. Who, Sir Andrew Ague-cheeke?

Mar. I sir.

To. He's as tall a man as any's in Illyria.

Mar. What's that to the purpose?

To. Why he has three thousand ducates a yeare.

Mar. I but he'le have but a yeare in all these ducates. He's a very foole, and a prodigall.

To. Fie, that you'll say so! he plaies o'th Viol-de-gamboys, and speakes three or foure languages word for word without booke, & hath all the good gifts of nature.

Mar. He hath indeed, all most natural: for besides that he's a foole, he's a great quarreller: and but that he hath the gift of a Coward, to allay the gust he hath in quarrelling, 'tis thought among the prudent, he would quickly have the gift of a grave.

To. By this hand they are scabbes and shallow wits in the consideration of his enemy. Where are they?

Mar. And besides, he's a fellow crammed with ale, as he is with knowledge, that I have heard him capable of. Or to speake more properly, stuffed with ale: for he hath eaten the Marshall's dogge, and what knowledge he puts forth to guard withall, dogges, unboltings of Beefe, and such kickshawses, no Christian wit can dive into.

To. No question.

Mar. An he were not, I'de be sworne he were a foole. I am sorry to our Cousin.

To. Fie on him Ginkes face!

Mar. Why he has three thousand ducates a yeare.

To. O the more shame for him! I would I had but halfe his wealth, that he were to sixes, and seven, I had rather than forty shillings I had such a leg, and so sweet a breath to sing, as he has. Out upon't, by this hand, 'tis pitty thou shouldst be his drie nurse. Who have we here?

Enter Servant.

Ser. Sir Andrew Ague-cheeke is here, and craves sparing of your kindred.

To. Sparing of your kindred? I would I had but two more of that kinde to cudgell, that I had a dozen to beating. Odsbones but to see what a face he will make when he has lost his third dram of brayning. Odsbones but to see his face, and his hand driving at his head, and the quarrell with the Anatomy of it in's bosome! Dispatch, where is he?

Ser. Not yet old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy: as a squash is before 'tis a peascod, or a Codling when 'tis almost an Apple: 'tis with him in standing water, between boy and man. He is very well scene, and will be in his forward yeares, a man of himselfe. Thousand unsolicited Ladies bid him welcome: Unlesse all Obscurity be in one of them, he is wonderfull to be gazed at.

To. Is't even so?

Ser. But to heare his speech you will sweare 'tis.

To. Not I, sweare it, and I could scarce understand it.

Ser. Yfaith, some what you must.

To. I, so I thought I should, but they shall have no more adoe than needes must, for the Gentlewoman will have it: as for the yong Gentleman, give him good report, he shall not be tongue-tide for my sake, and sweare for no more than he has reason for.

Ser. Here he comes.

To. Now sir, how dost thou? how dost thou my good fellow?

Sir And. Good Sir Toby.

To. Cousin, Cousin, how have you come so early by this lethargie?

Sir And. Lethargie? call'st thou me so?

To. I, or mistake you, which is worse than to call you so: how you like it I am sorry for thee: but come, you shall ha't for all that.

Sir And. Ha't? I, 'mary what's that?

To. Wit.

Sir And. Would I had any.

To. So do I too, else I'de be mad: but I'le stand to't for all that.

Sir And. Ha't for all that, I am sure I am not such an asse, but I understand a fox, when I see one.

To. Yet you will be hard to be understood.

Sir And. Why, thou hast put him in as good a phrase as ever I heard: come, how do you like it?

To. Excellently, excellently.

Sir And. Faith I like it better than my bloud.

To. Why, indeed, methinks it better becomes you than to be pale: what's that I hear you sing, the last night you were merry, and brought cut-hollands?

Sir And. Was't eloquent, and full of invention? taunting, and bawdy, and full of wit and humour?

To. Most certain, such as would have done good upon Saint Bennet, had he been there to heare it.

Sir And. Why, I can sing it you, and 'tis any man's else that will.

To. Can you remember any of the principles?

Sir And. Not now, you shall see I can remember when we are more drie: and now I remember me, I'le not be afraid to sing any man a stave of my length, that will take exception to my ability.

To. Come, come, what is it? for drowning the melancholy of the Earle, and expelling sadnesse out of the house, will you sing, or no?

Sir And. Ay, ay, I care not for singing, since the Clowne of the house, Master Feste, is gone about to convert his Lady.

To. Well, sir, begin: and when I drinke, do you sing.

Sir And. I had rather than forty shillings I had such a legge, and so sweet a breath to sing, as the fool has. In sooth thou wast in very gracious fooling last night, when thou spokest of Pigrogromitus, of the Vapians passing the Equinoctiall of Queubus: 'twas very good, i'faith. I sent thee sixpence for thy leman: hadst it?

Clo. I did impeticos thy gratillity, for Malvolio's nose is no whipstocke. My Lady has a white hand, and the Myrmidons are no bottle-ale houses.

Sir And. Excellent! why this is the best fooling, when all is done. Now a song.

To. Come on, there is sixpence for you: let's have a song.

Sir And. There's a testrill of me too: if one knight give a——

Clo. Would you have a love-song, or a song of good life?

To. A love-song, a love-song.

Sir And. I, I: I care not for good life.

Clo. O mistris mine, where are you roaming?
O stay and hearken, your true love coming,
That can sing both high and low:
Trip no further pretty sweeting,
Journeys end in lovers meeting,
Every wise mans sonne doth know.

Sir And. Excellent good, i'faith.

To. Good, good.

Clo. What is love? 'tis not hereafter,
Present mirth hath present laughter,
What's to come is still unsure:
In delay there lies no plenty,
Then come kisse me sweet and twenty,
Youths a stuff will not endure.

Sir And. A mellifluous voice, as I am true knight.

To. A contagious breath.

Sir And. Very sweet and contagious, i'faith.

To. To heare by the nose, it is dulcet in contagion. But shall we make the welkin dance indeed? shall we rouze the night-Owle in a catch, that will draw three soules out of one Weaver? shall we do that?

Sir And. An you love me, let's do't: I am dog at a catch.

Clo. By'r lady sir, and some dogs will catch well.

Sir And. Most certain. Let our catch be, Thou knave.

Clo. Hold thy peace, hold thy peace, thou knave knight? I shall be constrain'd in't to call thee knave, knight.

Sir And. 'Tis not the first time I have constrained one to call me knave. Begin, Foole: it begins, Hold thy peace.

Clo. I shall never begin if I hold my peace.

Sir And. Good, i'faith. Come, begin.

Catch sung.

Enter Maria.

Mar. What a caterwauling do you keepe here? If my Lady have not call'd up her Steward Malvolio, and bid him turne you out of doores, never trust me.

To. My Lady's a Cataian, we are politicians, Malvolio's a Peg-a-Ramsey, and Three merry men be we. Am not I consanguineous? am I not of her blood? Tilly vally. Lady. There dwelt a man in Babylon, Lady, Lady.

Clo. Beshrew me, the knight's in admirable fooling.

Sir And. I, he does well enough if he be disposed, and so do I too: he does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.

To. O the twelfe day of Decembring, with the youths in flame! Would they were hang'd, that were the cause of this losse!

Sir And. Do, do, thou hast it: for it is found by Natural reason.

To. Who, Mistris Mall?

Sir And. I, Sir Toby.

To. Thou hast it indeed, I do confesse.

Sir And. Thou hast it more than I can tell how to name it: but I had it, as the Trojan Horse had Troy in it.

To. Wilt thou set thy foot o'thy finger, and quench the watch-light of thy wit, and yet will'd fire-brand of Jove stand to't?

Sir And. Now, sir, thought is free: I pray you bring your hand to the buttery barre, and let it drinke.

To. Wherefore, my true Caterpillar?

Sir And. Why, I am drie: besides, you know it draws some blood presently.

To. Draw, cheeke by jowle, and part.

Clo. Let our Catch be, Thou knave.

Sir And. Agreed, agreed: I'le stand some while.

To. We'll draw cuts for the Singer: he that speakes last, shall sing.

Sir And. Content, 'tis agreed.

Clo. Here's my cut.

Sir And. No, no, the last word is mine.

To. Draw cuts for all, or I'le throw't at your faces.

Sir And. Well, I'le draw, though I had rather not be so fantastical: come, which wise soever.

Clo. No more words, the Catch I made, shall ride on the longest cut, or the worst man's in't.

To. Content, I am the man: I will treble him, as he is valiant, and this dog at a catch.

Clo. By'r Lady sir, and some dogs will catch well.

Sir And. Well, I'le be the third man.

To. Begin, Hold thy peace.

Sir And. I dare not say I take you, that fellow will be the death of me.

Clo. Thou knave.

Sir And. Knave, I, I am he.

Clo. Hold thy peace, thou knave knight.

Sir And. I shall be constrain'd in't to call thee knave, knight.

Clo. 'Tis not the first time I have constrained one to call me knave. Begin, Foole.

Sir And. Foole, I, I am he.

Clo. Hold thy peace, thou knave knight.

Sir And. I shall never begin if I hold my peace.

*Clo

And. He ſtay a moneth longer. I am a fellow o th ſtrangeſt minde i th world I delight in Maskes and Reuelles ſo pettie ſa altogether

To Art thou good at theſe kicke-chawſes Knight?

And As any man in Illyria, whatſoeuer he be, vnder the degree of my betters, & yet I will not compare with a ſtout man

To. What is thy excellence in a galliard, knight?

And Faith, I can cut a caper.

To And I can cut the Mutton to't.

And. And I think I haue the backe-tricke, ſimply as ſtrong as any man in Illyria.

To. Wherefore are theſe gifts a Curtaine before em? Are they like to take duſt, like Miſtreſſe Mall's Picture? Why doſt thou not go to Church in a Galliard, and come home in a Coranto? My very walke ſhould be a Iigge. I would not ſo much as make water but in a ſinke-a-pace. What doſt thou meane? Is it a world to hide vertues in? I did think by the exact conſtruction of thy legge, it was formed vnder the ſtarre of a Galliard.

And I, ſir, I am ſtrong, and it does indifferent well in a dam'd colour'd ſtocke. Shall we ſet about ſome Reuells?

To. What ſhall we do elſe? were we not borne vnder Taurus?

And Taurus? That ſides and heart

To No ſir, it is legges and thighes. Let me ſee thee caper. Ha, higher: ha, ha, excellent. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Maria and Clowne.

Ma. Nay, either tell me where thou haſt bin, or I will not open my lippes ſo wide as a bristle may enter, in way of excuſe. My Lady will hang thee for thy abſence.

Clo. Let her hang me: he that is well hang'd in this world, needs to feare no colours.

Ma. Make that good.

Clo. He ſhall ſee none to feare.

Ma. A good Lenten anſwer. I can tell thee where y ſaying was borne, of I feare no colours.

Clo. Where good miſtreſſe Mary?

Ma. In the wards, & that may ſometimes be bolde to ſay in your boſome.

Clo. Well, God giue them wiſedome that haue it & thoſe that are fooles, let them vſe their talents.

Ma. Yet you will be hang'd for being ſo long abſent: or to be turn'd away, is not beſt a hanging thing to me.

Clo. Many a good hanging prouides ill rancage & many a man goes before his nightcap.

Ma. Y watere

Clo. Not a nay-word, not a word, or two paires of theſe gloues. I did not giue mine hands for Boots but I gaue them for two gloues, will you haue them?

Ma. Are you and faire ſir well? for my way, it may be you expect no more then will ſerue plaine with a piece of Virginall.

Clo. Peace you rogue, no more o that. Here comes my Lady, make your excuſe wiſely, you were beſt.

Enter Lady Olivia, with Malvolio.

Cla. Wit an't be thy will, put me into good fooling those wits that dote timely with wiſedome ſuch as know they are fooles, ſit wiſe men that paſſe for fooles in their owne conceits, let me be one of thoſe, becauſe I am not ſaid is not to be a wiſe man for my part, as ſaies Quinapalus, better a witty foole then a foolish wiſe man. Giue me leaue I ſay.

Ol. Well, and ſo I doe euer: and take his part before me.

Cla. Do you not hate it, that your Lord ſhould take part with a foole?

Ol. Fie vpon him, I know he is a dry foole. He no more of you beſides you grow dishoneſt.

Cla. Two faults Madona that drinke & good counſell will amend: for giue the dry foole drinke, he is the ſooner lightned of his wit: leaue him to his vices, no counſell will mend him: and for the third, he is no longer diſhoneſt, if he cannot, let the Botcher mend him: any thing that mends, is but patch'd vertue: that tranſgreſſes, is but patch'd with ſinne, and ſin that amends, is but patcht with vertue. If that this ſimple Syllogiſme will ſerue, ſo: if it will not, what remedy?

Enter Sir Andrew and Maria in mans attire.

Sir And [illegible] Come you are ſtolne away, ſtolne away, and you are no leſſe.

Vio. You haue ſtolne no loue, or I am more then common craftie, that you ſay ſo. Did I ſteale any loue? If you can conſtrue it ſo, you ſtand me much vpon. Do, my loue reſtore.

Enter Clowne, and after him Malvolio.

Vio I [illegible] keepe you where it ſeemes the Court

Duke Why ſaw Ceſario no?

Vio Of your aſpect I ſaw enough, Lord I beſeech.

Du Stand you a-while aloofe. Ceſario

Thou knowſt no leſſe, but all I haue vtter'd

To thee the booke even of my ſecret loue

Therefore good youth, addreſſe thy gate vnto her,

Be not denide acceſſe, ſtand at her doores

And tell them, there thy fixed foot ſhall grow

Till thou haue audience

Vio Sure my Noble Lord

If ſhe be ſo abhor'd to her lookes

As ſhe ſpake the meſſenger with me

Du Her ſmiles are ſuns and leapes are ſeaſons,

Rather then make vnprofited returne,

Vio. Say I doe ſpeake with her (my Lord) what then?

Du. O then vnfold the paſſion of my loue,

Surprize her with diſcourſe of my deare faith,

It ſhall become thee well to act my woes.

She will attend it better in thy youth,

Then in a Nuntio's of more graue aſpect.

Vio. I thinke not ſo, my Lord

Du Deare Lad, beleeue it;

For they ſhall yet belye thy happy yeeres,

That ſay thou art a man. Diana's lip

Is not more ſmooth, and rubious: thy ſmall pipe

Is as the maidens organ, ſhrill, and ſound,

And all is ſemblative a womans part.

I know thy conſtellation is right apt

For this affayre: ſome foure or fiue attend him,

All if you will: for I my ſelfe am beſt

When leaſt in company: proſper well in this,

And thou ſhalt liue as freely, as thy Lord,

To woe my Lady yet this boone I aſke,

To woe your Lady yet (a barre betweene)

Where eare compact plants out-growe: put not forth

My goodly Lord to this ambaſſage:

Your Lady ſhall not be abode this ſute

And limit not the dole of your diſdaine

Vnleſſe it be to report hot proceedings

Vpon the iuſtneſſe of my cauſe and wiſh.

Vio. I might haue also hope to be a Wife

As I haue much affection to her grace,

But competitors to admittance

I ſee laid inuiſible, and I feare no leſſe

Your wiſh, then with my hope to win her.

Du. Are you the man then?

Vio. I feare it is I.

Du. I ſhould your Lord and maſter loue you then,

As well deſerue her. Be aduiſed man,

Goe to her doore, knocke there, and importune

Vntill ſhe take the doore, and as for me,

I'le ſtay a while vnknowne, and heare what you ſpeake,

To woe your Lady: yet a barre betweene,

Where eare compact. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Maria and Clowne.

Ma. Nay, either tell me where thou haſt bin, or I will not open my lippes ſo wide as a bristle may enter, in way of excuſe. My Lady will hang thee for thy abſence.

Clo. Let her hang me: he that is well hang'd in this world, needs to feare no colours.

Ma. Make that good.

Clo. He ſhall ſee none to feare.

Ma. A good Lenten anſwer. I can tell thee where y ſaying was borne, of I feare no colours.

Clo. Where good miſtreſſe Mary?

Ma. In the wards, & that may ſometimes be bolde to ſay in your boſome.

Clo. Well, God giue them wiſedome that haue it & thoſe that are fooles, let them vſe their talents.

Ma. Yet you will be hang'd for being ſo long abſent: or to be turn'd away, is not beſt a hanging thing to me.

Clo. Many a good hanging prouides ill rancage & many a man goes before his nightcap.

Ma. Y watere

Clo. Not a nay-word, not a word, or two paires of theſe gloues. I did not giue mine hands for Boots but I gaue them for two gloues, will you haue them?

Ma. Are you and faire ſir well? for my way, it may be you expect no more then will ſerue plaine with a piece of Virginall.

Clo. Peace you rogue, no more o that. Here comes my Lady, make your excuſe wiſely, you were beſt.

Enter Lady Olivia, with Malvolio.

Cla. Wit an't be thy will, put me into good fooling those wits that dote timely with wiſedome ſuch as know they are fooles, ſit wiſe men that paſſe for fooles in their owne conceits, let me be one of thoſe, becauſe I am not ſaid is not to be a wiſe man for my part, as ſaies Quinapalus, better a witty foole then a foolish wiſe man. Giue me leaue I ſay.

Ol. Well, and ſo I doe euer: and take his part before me.

Cla. Do you not hate it, that your Lord ſhould take part with a foole?

Ol. Fie vpon him, I know he is a dry foole. He no more of you beſides you grow dishoneſt.

Cla. Two faults Madona that drinke & good counſell will amend: for giue the dry foole drinke, he is the ſooner lightned of his wit: leaue him to his vices, no counſell will mend him: and for the third, he is no longer diſhoneſt, if he cannot, let the Botcher mend him: any thing that mends, is but patch'd vertue: that tranſgreſſes, is but patcht with ſinne, and ſin that amends, is but patcht with vertue. If that this ſimple Syllogiſme will ſerue, ſo: if it will not, what remedy?

As there is no true Cuckold but calamity, so beauties a flower; The Lady bad take away the foole, therefore I say againe, take her away.

Ol. Sir, I bad them take away you.

Clo. Misprision in the highest degree. Lady, Cucullus non facit monachum: that's as much to say, as I weare not motley in my braine. good Madona, giue mee leaue to proue you a foole.

Ol. Can you do it?

Clo. Dexteriously, good Madona.

Ol. Make your proofe.

Clo. I must catechize you for it Madona, Good my Mouse of vertue answer mee.

Ol. Well sir, for want of other idlenesse, Ile bide your proofe.

Clo. Good Madona, why mournst thou?

Ol. Good foole, for my brothers death.

Clo. I thinke his soule is in hell, Madona.

Ol. I know his soule is in heauen, foole.

Clo. The more foole (Madona) to mourne for your Brothers soule, being in heauen. Take away the Foole, Gentlemen.

Ol. What thinke you of this foole Maluolio, doth he not mend?

Mal. Yes, and shall do, till the pangs of death shake him: Infirmity that decaies the wise, doth euer make the better foole.

Clow. God send you sir, a speedie Infirmity, for the better increasing your folly: Sir Toby will be sworn that I am no Fox, but he will not passe his word for two pence that you are no Foole.

Ol. How say you to that Maluolio?

Mal. I marueil your Ladyship takes delight in such a barren rascal: I saw him put down the other day, with an ordinary foole, that has no more braine then a stone. Looke you now, he's out of his gard already: vnles you laugh and minister occasion to him, he is gag'd. I protest I take these Wisemen, that crow so at these set kinde of fooles, no better then the fooles Zanies.

Ol. O you are sicke of selfe loue Maluolio, and taste with a distempered appetite. To be generous, guiltlesse, and of free disposition, is to take those things for Birdbolts, that you deeme Cannon bullets: There is no slander in an allow'd foole, though he do nothing but rayle; nor no railing, in a knowne discreet man, though he do nothing but reproue.

Clo. Now Mercury indue thee with leasing, for thou speak'st well of fooles.

Enter Maria.

Mar. Madam, there is at the gate, a young Gentleman, much desires to speake with you.

Ol. From the Count Orsino, is it?

Ma. I know not (Madam) 'tis a faire young man, and well attended.

Ol. Who of my people hold him in delay?

Ma. Sir Toby Madam, your kinsman.

Ol. Fetch him off I pray you, he speakes nothing but madman: Fie on him. Go you Maluolio; If it be a suit from the Count, I am sicke, or not at home. What you will, to dismisse it. Exit Malno.

Now you see sir, how your fooling growes old, & people dislike it.

Clo. Thou hast spoke for vs (Madona) as if thy eldest sonne should be a foole: whose scull, Ioue cramme with braines, for heere he comes. Enter Sir Toby.

One of thy kin has a most weake Pia-mater.

Ol. By mine honor halfe drunke. What is he at the gate Cosin?

To. A Gentleman.

Ol. A Gentleman? What Gentleman?

To. 'Tis a Gentleman heere. A plague o'these pickle herring: How now Sot.

Clo. Good Sir Toby.

Ol. Cosin, Cosin, how haue you come so earely by this Lethargie?

To. Letcherie, I defie Letchery: there's one at the gate.

Ol. I marry, what is he?

To. Let him be the diuell and he will, I care not: giue me faith say I. Well, it is all one. Exit

Ol. What's a drunken man like, foole?

Clo. Like a drown'd man, a foole, and a madde man. One draught aboue heate, makes him a foole, the second maddes him, and a third drownes him

Ol. Go thou and seeke the Crowner, and let him sit o'my Coz: for he's in the third degree of drinke, he's drown'd: go looke after him.

Clo. He is but mad yet Madona, and the foole shall looke to the madman.

Enter Malnolio.

Mal. Madam, yond young fellow sweares hee will speake with you. I told him you were sicke, he takes on him to vnderstand so much, and therefore comes to speak with you. I told him you were asleepe, he seems to haue a fore knowledge of that too, and therefore comes to speake with you. What is to be said to him Ladie, hee's fortified against any denial.

Ol. Tell him, he shall not speake with me.

Mal. Has's beene told so: and hee sayes hee'l stand at your doore like a Sheriffes post, and be the supporter to a bench, but hee'l speake with you.

Ol. What kinde o'man is he?

Mal. Why of mankinde.

Ol. What manner of man?

Mal. Of verie ill manner: hee'l speake with you, will you, or no

Ol. Of what personage, and yeeres is he?

Mal. Not yet old enough for a man, nor yong enough for a boy: as a squash is before 'tis a peason, or a Codling when 'tis almost an Apple: 'Tis with him in standing water, betweene boy and man. He is verie well-fauoured, and he speakes verie shrewishly; One would thinke his mothers milke were scarse out of him.

Ol. Let him approach: Call in my Gentlewoman.

Mal. Gentlewoman, my Lady cals. Exit

Enter Maria.

Ol. Giue me my vaile: come throw it ore my face, We'l once more heare Orsinos Embassie.

Enter Violenta.

Vio. The honorable Ladie of the house, which is she?

Ol. Speake to me, I shall answer for her: your will.

Vio. Most radiant, exquisite, and vnmatchable beautie. I pray you tell me if this bee the Lady of the house, for I neuer saw her. I would bee loath to cast away my speech: for besides that it is excellently well pend, I haue taken great paines to con it. Good Beauties, let mee sustaine no scorne; I am very comptible, euen to the least sinister vsage.

Ol. Whence came you sir?

Vio. I can say little more then I haue studied, & that question's out of my part. Good gentle one, giue mee modest assurance, if you be the Ladie of the house, that may proceede in my speech.

I

Ol. Are you a Comedian?

Vio. No my profound heart: and yet (by the verie pangs of mal'ce, I sweare) I am not that I play. Are you the Ladie of the house?

Ol. If I do not vsurpe my selfe, I am.

Vio. Most certaine, if you are she, you do vsurpe your selfe: for what is yours to bestowe, is, not yours to reserue. But this is from my Commission: I will on with my speech in your praise, and then shew you the heart of my message.

Ol. Come to what is important in't: I forgiue you the praise.

Vio. Alas, I tooke great paines to studie it, and 'tis Poeticall.

Ol. It is the more like to be feigned, I pray you keep it. I heard you were sawcy at my gates, & allowed your approach rather to wonder at you, then to heare you. If you be not mad, be gone; if you haue reason, be briefe: 'tis not that time of Moone with me, to make one in so skipping a dialect.

Ol. Will you hoyst sayle, heere lies your way.

Vio. No good swabber, I am to hull here a little longer. Some mollification for your Giant, sweete Ladie; tell me your mind, I am a messenger.

Ol. Sure you haue some hideous matter to deliuer, when the curtesie of it is so fearefull. Speake your office.

Vio. It alone concernes your eare: I bring no ouerture of warre, no taxation of homage; I hold the Olyffe in my hand: my words are as full of peace, as matter.

Ol. Yet you began rudely. What are you? What would you?

Vio. The rudenesse that hath appear'd in mee, haue I learn'd from my entertainment. What I am, and what I would, are as secret as maiden-head: to your eares, Diuinity; to any others, prophanation.

Ol. Giue vs the place alone.

We will heare this diuinity. Now, sir, what is your text?

Vio. Most sweet Ladie.

Ol. A comfortable doctrine, and much may be said of it. Where lies your text?

Vio. In Orsinos bosome.

Ol. In his bosome? In what chapter of his bosome?

Vio. To answer by the method of the booke were the part of a clowne.

Ol. O, I haue read it: is there ought else you would say?

Vio. Good Madam, let me see your face.

Ol. Haue you any Commission from your Lord, to negotiate with my face? you are now out of your Text: but we will draw the Curtain, and shew you the picture. Looke you sir, such a one I was this present: Is't not well done?

Vio. Excellently done, if God did all.

Ol. 'Tis in graine sir, 'twill endure winde and weather.

Vio. 'Tis beauty truly blent, whose red and white,
Natures owne sweet, and cunning hand laid on:
Lady, you are the cruell'st shee aliue,
If you will leade these graces to the grane,
And leaue the world no copie.

Ol. O sir, I will not be so hard-hearted: I will giue out diuers schedules of my beautie. It shalbe Inuentoried and euery particle and vtensile labell'd to my will: As, Item two lippes indifferent redde, Item two grey eyes, with lids to them, Item, one necke, one chin, &c. to forth. Were you sent hither to praise me?

Vio. I see you what you are, you are too proud:
But if you were the diuell, you are faire:
My Lord, and master loues you: O such loue
Could be but recompenc'd, though you were crown'd
The non-pareil of beautie.

Ol. How does he loue me?

Vio. With adorations, fertill teares,
With groanes that thunder loue, with sighes of fire.

Ol. Your Lord does know my mind, I cannot loue him
Yet I suppose him vertuous, know him noble,
Of great estate, of fresh and stainelesse youth;
In voyces well diuulg'd, free, learn'd, and valiant,
And in dimension, and the shape of nature,
A gracious person; But yet I cannot loue him:
He might haue tooke his answer long ago.

Vio. If I did loue you in my masters flame
With such a suffering, such a deadly life,
In your denyall, I would finde no sence,
I would not vnderstand it.

Ol. Why, what would you?

Vio. Make me a willow Cabine at your gate,
And call vpon my soule within the house,
Write loyall Cantons of contemned loue,
And sing them lowd euen in the dead of night:
Hallow your name to the reuerberate hilles,
And make the babling Gossip of the aire,
Cry out Olivia: O you should not rest
Betweene the elements of ayre, and earth,
But you should pitie me.

Ol. You might do much.
What is your Parentage?

Vio. Aboue my fortunes, yet my state is well:
I am a Gentleman.

Ol. Get you to your Lord:
I cannot loue him: let him send no more,
Vnlesse (perchance) you come to me againe,
To tell me how he takes it: fare you well.
I thanke you for your paines: spend this for me.

Vio. I am no feede poast, Lady, keepe your purse,
My Master, not my state, lackes recompence.
Loue make his heart of flint, that you shall loue,
And let your fernour like my masters be,
Plac'd in contempt: Farewell fayre cruelty. Exit

Ol. What is your Parentage?
Aboue my fortunes, yet my state is well,
I am a Gentleman. Ile be sworne thou art,
Thy tongue, thy face, thy limbes, actions, and spirit,
Do giue thee fiue-fold blazon: not too fast: soft, soft,
Vnlesse the Master were the man. How now?
Euen so quickly may one catch the plague?
Me thinkes I feele this youths perfections
With an inuisible, and subtle stealth
To creepe in at mine eyes. Well, let it be.
What hoa, Maluolio.

Enter Maluolio.

Mal. Heere Madam, at your seruice.

Ol. Run after that same peeuish Messenger
The Counts man: he left this Ring behinde him
Would I, or not: tell him, Ile none of it.
Desire him not to flatter with his Lord,
Nor hold him vp with hopes, I am not for him:
If that the youth will come this way to morrow,
Ile giue him reasons for't: hie thee Maluolio.

Mal. Madam, I will. Exit.

Ol. I do I know not what, and feare to finde
Mine eye too great a flatterer for my minde:

Fare

Fate, shew thy force, our selues we do not owe,
What is decreed, must be: and be this so.

Finis, Actus primus.

Actus Secundus, Scæna prima.

Enter Antonio & Sebastian.

Ant. Will you stay no longer? nor will you not that I go with you.

Seb. By your patience, no: my stars shine darkely ouer me; the malignancie of my fate, might perhaps distemper yours; therefore I shall craue of you your leaue, that I may beare my euils alone. It were a bad recompence for your loue, to lay any of them on you.

Ant. Let me yet know of you, whither you are bound

Seb. No sooth sir: my determinate voyage is meere extrauagancie. But I perceiue in you so excellent a touch of modestie, that you will not extort from me, what I am willing to keepe in: therefore it charges me in manners, the rather to expresse my selfe. You must know of mee then Antonio, my name is Sebastian (which I call'd Rodorigo) my father was that Sebastian of Messaline, whom I know you haue heard of. He left behinde him, my selfe, and a sister, both borne in an houre: if the Heauens had pleas'd, we had been so like, as we were: I saw't thought we were one person. But you, hauing a little hinder'd that, for some houre before you tooke me from the breach of the sea, was my sister drown'd.

Ant. Alas the day

Seb. A Lady sir, though it was said she much resembled me, was yet of many accounted beautiful: but though I could not with such estimable wonder ouer-farre beleeue that, yet thus farre I will boldly publish her, she bore a mind that enuy could not but call faire. She is drowned already sir with salt water, though I seeme to drowne her remembrance again with more.

Ant. Pardon me sir, your bad entertainment.

Seb. O good Antonio, forgiue me your trouble.

Ant. If you will not murther me for my loue, let me be your seruant.

Seb. If you will not vndo what you haue done, that is kill him, whom you haue recouer'd, desire it not. Fare ye well at once, my bosome is full of kindnesse, and I am yet so neere the manners of my mother, that vpon the least occasion more, mine eyes will tell tales of me: I am bound to the Count Orsino's Court, farewell. Exit

Ant. The gentlenesse of all the gods go with thee:
I haue many enemies in Orsino's Court,
Else would I very shortly see thee there:
But come what may, I do adore thee so,
That danger shall seeme sport, and I will go Exit.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Viola and Malvolio, at seuerall doores.

Mal. Were not you eu'n now, with the Countesse Olivia?

Vio. Euen now sir, on a moderate pace, I haue since arriu'd but hither.

Mal. She returnes this Ring to you (sir) you might haue saued me my paines, to haue taken it away your selfe. She adds moreouer, that you should put your Lord into a desperate assurance, she will none of him. And one thing more, that you be neuer so hardie to come againe in his affaires, vnlesse it bee to report your Lords taking of this: receiue it so.

Vio. She tooke the Ring of me, Ile none of it.

Mal. Come sir, you peeuishly threw it to her: and her will is, it should be so return'd: If it bee worth stooping for, there it lies, in your eye: if not, bee it his that findes it. Exit

Vio. I left no Ring with her: what meanes this Lady? Fortune forbid my out-side haue not charm'd her.
She made good view of me, indeed so much,
That me thought her eyes had lost her tongue,
For she did speake in starts distractedly.
She loues me sure: the cunning of her passion
Inuites me in this churlish messenger.
None of my Lords Ring? Why he sent her none;
I am the man, if it be so (as 'tis)
Poore Lady, she were better loue a dreame:
Disguise, I see thou art a wickednesse,
Wherein the pregnant enemie does much.
How easie is it, for the proper false
In womens waxen hearts to set their formes!
Alas, O frailtie is the cause, not wee,
For such as we are made, if such we bee:
How will this fadge? My master loues her deerely,
And I (poore monster) fond as much on him.
And she (mistaken) seemes to dote on me:
What will become of this? As I am man,
My state is desperate for my masters loue:
As I am woman (now alas the day)
What thriftlesse sighes shall poore Olivia breath?
O time, thou must vntangle this, not I,
It is too hard a knot for me t'vnty.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Sir Toby, and Sir Andrew.

To. Approach Sir Andrew: not to be a bed after midnight, is to crow, betimes, and Diluculo surgere, thou knowst?

And. Nay by my troth I know not: but I know, to be vp late, is to be vp late.

To. A false conclusion: I hate it as an vnfill'd Canne. To be vp after midnight, and to go to bed then is early: so that to go to bed after midnight, is to goe to bed betimes. Does not our liues consist of the foure Elements?

And. Faith so they say, but I think it rather consists of eating and drinking.

To. Th'art a scholler; let vs therefore eate and drinke, Marian I say, a stoope of wine.

Enter Clowne.

And. Heere comes the foole yfaith.

Clo. How now my harts? Did you neuer see the Picture of we three?

To. Welcome asse, now let's haue a catch.

And. By my troth the foole has an excellent breast. I had rather then forty shillings I had such a legge, and so sweet a breath to sing, as the foole has. In sooth thou wast in very gracious fooling last night, when thou spok'st of Pigrogromitus, of the Vapians passing the Equinoctial of Queubus: 'twas very good yfaith. I sent thee sixe pence for forth my Lemon, haue it?

Clo. I did impeticos thy gratillity: for Malvolio's nose is no Whip-stocke. My Lady has a white hand, and the Myrmidons are no bottle-ale houses.

An. Excellent! Why this is the best fooling, when all is done. Now a song.

To. Come on, there is sixe pence for you. Let's haue a song.

An. There's a testrill of me too. If one knaue haue no

Clo. Would you haue a loue-song, or a song of good life?

To. A loue-song, a loue-song.

An. I, I. I care not for good life.

Clo. O Mistris mine, where are you roaming?
O stay and hearke, your true loue is coming,
That can sing both high and low.
Trip no further pretty sweeting.
Iourneys end in louers meeting,
Euery wise mans sonne doth know.

An. Excellent good, i'faith.

To. Good, good.

Clo. What is loue, 'tis not hereafter,
Present mirth hath present laughter,
What's to come is still vnsure.
In delay there lies no plenty,
Then come kisse me sweet and twenty,
Youth's a stuff will not endure.

An. A contagious breath.

To. Very sweet and contagious, i'faith.

An. To heare by the nose, it is dulcet in contagion. But shall we make the welkin dance indeed? Shall we rouze the night-Owle in a Catch, that will draw three soules out of one Weauer? Shall we do that?

An. If you loue me, let's do't. I am dogge at a Catch.

Clo. By'r Lady, sir, and some dogs will catch well.

An. Most certaine. Let our Catch be, Thou knaue.

Clo. Hold thy peace, thou knaue knight. I shall be constrain'd in't to call thee knaue, knight.

An. 'Tis not the first time I haue constrain'd one to call me knaue. Begin, Foole: it begins, Hold thy peace.

Clo. I shall neuer begin if I hold my peace.

An. Good, i'faith. Come, begin.

Catch sung.

Enter Maria.

Mar. What a caterwauling do you keepe here? If my Lady haue not call'd vp her Steward Malvolio, and bid him turne you out of doores, neuer trust me.

To. My Lady's a Cataian, we are politicians, Malvolio's a Peg-a-Ramsey, and Three merry men be we. Am not I consanguineous? Am I not of her blood? Tilly-vally. Lady. There dwelt a man in Babylon, Lady, Lady.

Clo. Beshrew me, the knight's in admirable fooling.

An. I, he does well enough if he be disposed, and so do I too: he does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.

To. O the twelfe day of Christmas.

Mar. For the loue o' God peace.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. My masters, are you mad? Or what are you? Haue you no wit, manners, nor honesty, but to gabble like Tinkers at this time of night? Do ye make an Ale-house of my Ladies house, that ye squeak out your Cozens Catches without any mitigation or remorse of voice? Is there no respect of place, persons, nor time in you?

To. We did keepe time sir in our Catches. Sneck vp.

Mal. Sir Toby, I must be round with you. My Lady bad me tell you, that though she harbours you as her kinsman, she's not bound to your reproofe. If you can separate your selfe and your misdemeanors, you are welcome to the house; if not, and it would please you to take leaue of her, she is very willing to bid you farewell.

To. Farewell deere heart, since I must needs be gone.

Mar. Nay good Sir Toby.

Clo. His eyes do shew his dayes are almost done.

Mal.

To.

Mal.

To.

Mal.

Clo.

To.

Mal. Sir Toby, there you lye.

To. What for being a Puritane? Thy exquisite reason, deere knight?

Mal. I speake to you.

To. I, sir, we know to what effect you speake, and your Lady bad me tell you of it, sir.

Mal. Marry hang thee brock.

To. Vnskilfull Asse, vnable to skoule it cheere vpon him.

Mal. I will not stay a iot longer.

To. Thou'rt i'the right. Go sir, rub your Chaine with crums. A stoope of Wine

Mar. Sir Toby, I must be round with you. My Lady bad me tell you, that though she harbours you as her kinsman, she's not bound to your reproofe. Mal. I will not stay a iot longer.

To. Thou'rt i'the right. Go sir, rub your Chaine with crums. A stoope of Wine

An. I was adored once too.

To. Let's to bed knight. Thou hadst need send for more money.

An. If I cannot recouer your Neece, I am a foule way out.

To. Send for money knight: if thou hast her not i'the end, call me Cut.

An. If I do not, neuer trust me, take it how you will.

Clo. Come, come, I'le go burne some Sack, 'tis too late to go to bed now: Come knight; come knight.

Exeunt.

Duke. Giue me some Musicke. Now good morrow friends. Now good Cesario, but that peece of Song, That old and Antique Song we heard last night: Me thought it did releeue my passion much, More than light ayres and recollected termes Of these most briske and giddy-paced times: Come, but one verse.

Cur. He is not here, so please your Lordship, that should sing it.

Duke. Who was it?

Cur. Feste the Iester, that did vse to come abroad with your Brother.

Duke. Go seeke him: I am not well, and I would haue him heard. Be you gone sir.

Exit Curio.

Duke. Come hither Boy. If ever thou shalt loue
In the sweet pangs of it remember me,
For such as I am all true Louers are,
Vnstaid and skittish in all motions else,
Saue in the constant image of the creature
That is beloued. How dost thou like this tune?

Vio. It giues a very eccho to the seate
Where Loue is throned.

Duke. Thou dost speake masterly.
My life vpon't, young though thou art, thine eye
Hath staid vpon some fauour that it loues:
Hath it not boy?

Vio. A little, by your fauour.

Duke. What kinde of woman is't?

Vio. Of your complexion.

Duke. She is not worth thee then. What yeares i'faith?

Vio. About your yeares my Lord.

Duke. Too old by heauen: let still the woman take
An elder than herselfe, so wears she to him,
So sways she leuell in her husbands heart:
For boy, however we do praise our selues,
Our fancies are more giddy and vnfirme,
More longing, wauering, sooner lost and worne,
Than women's are.

Vio. I think it well my Lord.

Duke. Then let thy loue be younger than thy selfe,
Or thy affection cannot hold the bent:
For women are as Roses, whose faire flowre
Being once displayed, doth fall that very hour.

Vio. And so they are: alas that they are so,
To die, euen when they to perfection grow.

Enter Curio and Clowne.

Duke. O fellow, come, the song we had last night.
Marke it Cesario, it is old and plaine:
The Spinsters and the Knitters in the Sunne,
And the free Maides that weaue their thred with bones,
Do vse to chaunt it: it is silly sooth,
And dallies with the innocence of loue,
Like the old Age.

Clo. Are you ready sir?

Duke. I pray thee sing.

Clo. Come away, come away death,
And in sad Cypresse let me be laide.
Fly away, fly away breath,
I am slaine by a faire cruell maide.
My shrowd of white, stuck all with Ewe,
O prepare it.
My part of death no one so true
Did share it.
Not a flower, not a flower sweete,
On my blacke coffin let there be strewne.
Not a friend, not a friend greete
My poore corpes, where my bones shall be throwne.
A thousand thousand sighes to saue,
Lay me, O where
Sad true Louer neuer find my graue,
To weepe there.

Duke. There's for thy pains.

Clo. No pains sir, I take pleasure in singing sir.

Duke. I'le pay thy pleasure then.

Clo. Truely sir, and pleasure will be paide one time or another.

Duke. Giue me now leaue to leaue thee.

Clo. Now the melancholy God protect thee, and the Tailor make thy doublet of changeable Taffata, for thy mind is a very Opall. I would haue men of such constancy put to sea, that their businesse might be euery thing, and their intent euery where, for that's it that alwayes makes a good voyage of nothing. Farewell.

Exit Clowne.

Duke. Let all the rest giue place.
Once more Cesario,
Get thee to yond same sommers cheeke, and tell her,
Tell her my loue more noble than the world,
Prizes not quantity of dirtie lands:
The parts that fortune hath bestow'd vpon her,
Tell her I hold as giddily as Fortune:
But 'tis that miracle and Queene of gems
That Nature pranks her in attracts my soule.

Vio. But if she cannot loue you sir.

Duke. I cannot be so answer'd.

Vio. Sooth but you must.
Say that some Lady as perhaps there is,
Hath for your loue as great a pang of heart
As you haue for Olivia: you cannot
Loue her: you tell her so: must she not then be answer'd?

Duke. There is no woman's sides
Can bide the beating of so strong a passion
As loue doth giue my heart: no woman's heart
So big to hold so much: they lacke retention.
Alas, their loue may be call'd appetite,
No motion of the liuer, but the palate,
That suffer surfet, cloyment and reuolt,
But mine is all as hungry as the Sea,
And can digest as much: make no compare
Between that loue a woman can beare me,
And that I owe Olivia.

Vio. I but I know.

Duke. What dost thou know?

Vio. Too well what loue women to men may owe:
In faith they are as true of heart as we.
My father had a daughter loued a man,
As it might be perhaps were I a woman
I should your Lordship.

Duke. And what's her history?

Vio. A blanke my Lord. She neuer told her loue,
But let concealment like a worme i'the bud
Feed on her damaske cheeke: she pin'd in thought,
And with a greene and yellow melancholy
She sate like Patience on a Monument,
Smiling at griefe. Was not this loue indeed?
We men may say more, swear more: but indeed
Our shewes are more than will: for still we proue
Much in our vowes, but little in our loue.

Duke. But died thy sister of her loue my Boy?

Vio. I am all the daughters of my father's house,
And all the brothers too: and yet I know not.
Sir, shall I to this Lady?

Duke. I, that's the theame.
To her in haste: giue her this Iewell: say
My loue can giue no place, bide no denay.

Exeunt.

Enter Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.

To. Come thy way Fabian.

Fab. Would you'd chanc'd of that Letter.

To. What a plague meanes my Neece, to take the death of her brother thus? I am sure care's an enemy to life.

Fab. By my troth I maruell how you can be so fond as to doate on obstinate cruelty.

To. Why, how now my bacheler of three score, againe?

Fab. Sir Toby, you must come in earlier a nights: your Cozen, my Lady, takes great exceptions to your ill houres.

To. Why let her except before excepted.

Fab. I, but you must confine your selfe within the modest limits of order.

To. Confine? I'le confine my selfe no finer than I am: these clothes are good enough to drinke in, and so be these boots too: an they be not, let them hang themselues in their owne straps.

Fab. That quaffing and drinking will vndoe you: I heard my Lady talke of it yesterday: and of a foolish Knight that you brought in one night here to be her woer.

To. Who, Sir Andrew Aguecheeke?

Fab. I, he.

To. He's as tall a man as any's in Illyria.

Fab. What's that to the purpose?

To. Why he has three thousand Ducates a yeare.

An. I, but he'll haue but a yeare in all these Ducates: he's a very Foole, and a prodigall.

Fab. Fie that you'll say so: he plaies o' the Viol-de-gambo, and speakes three or foure languages word for word without Booke, and hath all the good gifts of nature.

To. He hath indeed all most naturall: for besides that he's a foole, he's a great quarreller, and but that he hath the gift of a Coward to allay the gust he hath in quarrelling, 'tis thought among the prudent he would quickly haue the gift of a graue.

Fab. By this hand they are scoundrels and substractors that say so of him. Who are they?

To. They that adde moreouer he's drunke nightly in your company.

An. With drinking healths to my Neece: I'le drinke to her as long as there is a passage in my throat, and drinke in Illyria. He's a coward and a coystrill that will not drinke to my Neece, till his braines turne o'the toe like a Parish-top. What wench, Castiliano vulgo: for here comes Sir Andrew Agueface.

Enter Sir Andrew.

An. Sir Toby Belch: how now Sir Toby Belch?

To. Sweet Sir Andrew.

An. Bleſſing on your beard, you are welcome.

To. Sir Andrew, not death at once, but I am sorry for thy hurts: this is a hard world.

Fab. Sir Toby, you must come in earlier a nights: your Cozen, my Lady, takes great exceptions to your ill houres.

To. Why let her except before excepted.

Fab. I, but you must confine your selfe within the modest limits of order.

To. Confine? I'le confine my selfe no finer than I am: these clothes are good enough to drinke in, and so be these boots too: an they be not, let them hang themselues in their owne straps.

Enter Sir Andrew.

An. Sir Toby Belch: how now Sir Toby Belch?

To. Sweet Sir Andrew.

An. Bleſſing on your beard, you are welcome.

To. Sir Andrew, not death at once, but I am sorry for thy hurts: this is a hard world.

Fab. You mistake, Knight: accost, is front her, boord her, woo her, assayle her.

An. By my troth I would not vndertake her in this company. Is that the meaning of accost?

Fab. Fare you well gentlemen.

To. And you part so mad, me thinkes, after the melancholy god-dild vs, 'tis a sullen time in deed come hither Knight, come hither Fabian: we'll whisper o're a couplet or two of most sage saws.

Fab. He mistakes my purpose.

To. Why, I warrant thee my deere Knight.

Fab. I am no fellow with a sharpe sword in a new Sattin scabberd, or any thing, and I thought to haue drawne my rapier and reuenged my selfe vpon him.

To. Why, do so then: come to me to morrow betimes, and bring me word how thou findest him: I would we might entertaine him with some idle motion of the Letters that thou wrotest from Olivia.

An. If you mean some iest to vexe him withall, I am dogge at it.

To. Fie on him Iezebel: for he'll write to her I loue her more than euer wit could speake, more than euer eye could see, more than euer hand could write, more than euer heart could loue. And as many more as the Stile of Vocabularies can afford him, that he may indite himselfe a foole.

Fab. Why, this will be a iest worth the obseruation.

To. Let there be gall enough in thy Inke, though thou write with a Goose pen, no matter: about it.

An. Where shall I finde you?

To. We'll call thee at the Cubiculo: go.

Exit Sir Andrew.

Fab. This is a dear Manakin to you Sir Toby.

To. I haue been deere to him, lad, some two thousand strong, or so.

Fab. We shall haue a rare Letter from him: but you'll not deliuer't?

To. Neuer trust me then: and by all meanes stirre on the youth to an answer. I think oxen and wainropes cannot hale them together. For Andrew if he were opened, and you find so much blood in his Liuer as will clogge the foot of a flea, I'le eate the rest of the Anatomy.

Fab. And his opposite the youth beares in his visage no great presage of cruelty.

To. Looke where the youngest wren of mine comes.

Enter Maria.

Mar. If you desire the spleene, and will laugh your selues into stitches, follow me. Yond gull Malvolio is turned Heathen, a verie Renegatho, for there is no Christian that meanes to be saued by beleeuing rightly, can euer beleeue such impossible passages of grossenesse. He's in yellow stockings.

To. And crosse gartered?

Mar. Most villanously, like a Pedant that keepes a Schoole i'the Church. I haue dogg'd him like his Murderer. He does obey euery point of the Letter that I dropt to betray him: he does smile his face into more lines than is in the new Map with the Augmentation of the Indies: you haue not seene such a thing as 'tis. I can hardly forbeare hurling things at him. I know my Lady will strike him: if she do, he'll smile and take't for a great fauour.

To. Come bring vs, bring vs where he is.

Exeunt.

Enter Sebastian and Antonio.

Seb. I would not by my will haue troubled you,
But since you make your pleasure of your paines,
I will no further chide you.

Ant. I could not stay behind you: my desire
(More sharper than filed steele) did spur me forth,
And not all Loue to see you (though so much
As might haue drawne one to a longer voyage)
But iealousie what might befall your trauell,
Being skilesse in these parts, which to a stranger
Vnguided and vnfriended, often prooues
Rough and vnhospitable. My willing loue,
The rather by these arguments of feare,
Set forth in your pursuit.

Seb. My kinde Antonio,
I can no other answer make but thanks,
And thanks, and euer thanks: often good turnes
Are shuffled off with such vnmuch pay, you take
That repaid: what tell me of a sea-Mans chiding,
Or what is worse, of the wracke of the deepe
Can be to him, whose more than all is gone?
Some adde to the hazard, need flowes in him selfe,
Where such abound.

Ant. But come what may, I do adore thee so,
That danger shall seeme sport, and I will go.

Seb. A determinate voyage meere extremity,
Both of the rode and me, we will not walke
The ribbes of the dead Sea-Monsters, I am well.
But if you please to shake off all my taking,
I thinke it well done, and as you shall finde
Your selfe in peace and humane kindnesse welcome.

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio, and Attendants.

Duke. Will you make me beleeue that I am not sent for you?

Vio. Goe too, your Ilands, 'tis too much proued so.

Duke. Still so cruell?

Vio. Still so constant.

Duke. Still so vnkinde?

Vio. Still so true.

Duke. What shall I thinke on this Cesario?
Too well what loue women to men may owe:
In faith they are as true of heart as we.
My father had a daughter loued a man,
As it might be perhaps were I a woman

An. Sir Toby Belch: how now Sir Toby Belch?

To. Sweet Sir Andrew.

An. Bleſſing on your beard, you are welcome.

To. Sir Andrew, not death at once, but I am sorry for thy hurts: this is a hard world.

Fab. You mistake, Knight: accost, is front her, boord her, woo her, assayle her.

An. By my troth I would not vndertake her in this company. Is that the meaning of accost?

Fab. Fare you well gentlemen.

To. And you part so mad, me thinkes, after the melancholy god-dild vs, 'tis a sullen time in deed come hither Knight, come hither Fabian: we'll whisper o're a couplet or two of most sage saws.

Fab. He mistakes my purpose.

To. Why, I warrant thee my deere Knight.

Fab. I am no fellow with a sharpe sword in a new Sattin scabberd, or any thing, and I thought to haue drawne my rapier and reuenged my selfe vpon him.

To. Why, do so then: come to me to morrow betimes, and bring me word how thou findest him: I would we might entertaine him with some idle motion of the Letters that thou wrotest from Olivia.

An. If you mean some iest to vexe him withall, I am dogge at it.

To. Fie on him Iezebel: for he'll write to her I loue her more than euer wit could speake, more than euer eye could see, more than euer hand could write, more than euer heart could loue. And as many more as the Stile of Vocabularies can afford him, that he may indite himselfe a foole.

Fab. Why, this will be a iest worth the obseruation.

To. Let there be gall enough in thy Inke, though thou write with a Goose pen, no matter: about it.

An. Where shall I finde you?

To. We'll call thee at the Cubiculo: go.

Exit Sir Andrew.

Fab. This is a dear Manakin to you Sir Toby.

To. I haue been deere to him, lad, some two thousand strong, or so.

Fab. We shall haue a rare Letter from him: but you'll not deliuer't?

To. Neuer trust me then: and by all meanes stirre on the youth to an answer. I think oxen and wainropes cannot hale them together. For Andrew if he were opened, and you find so much blood in his Liuer as will clogge the foot of a flea, I'le eate the rest of the Anatomy.

Fab. And his opposite the youth beares in his visage no great presage of cruelty.

To. Looke where the youngest wren of mine comes.

Enter Maria.

Mar. If you desire the spleene, and will laugh your selues into stitches, follow me. Yond gull Malvolio is turned Heathen, a verie Renegatho, for there is no Christian that meanes to be saued by beleeuing rightly, can euer beleeue such impossible passages of grossenesse. He's in yellow stockings.

To. And crosse gartered?

Mar. Most villanously, like a Pedant that keepes a Schoole i'the Church. I haue dogg'd him like his Murderer. He does obey euery point of the Letter that I dropt to betray him: he does smile his face into more lines than is in the new Map with the Augmentation of the Indies: you haue not seene such a thing as 'tis. I can hardly forbeare hurling things at him. I know my Lady will strike him: if she do, he'll smile and take't for a great fauour.

To. Come bring vs, bring vs where he is.

Exeunt.

Enter Sebastian and Antonio.

Seb. I would not by my will haue troubled you,
But since you make your pleasure of your paines,
I will no further chide you.

Ant. I could not stay behind you: my desire
(More sharper than filed steele) did spur me forth,
And not all Loue to see you (though so much
As might haue drawne one to a longer voyage)
But iealousie what might befall your trauell,
Being skilesse in these parts, which to a stranger
Vnguided and vnfriended, often prooues
Rough and vnhospitable. My willing loue,
The rather by these arguments of feare,
Set forth in your pursuit.

Seb. My kinde Antonio,
I can no other answer make but thanks,
And thanks, and euer thanks: often good turnes
Are shuffled off with such vnmuch pay, you take
That repaid: what tell me of a sea-Mans chiding,
Or what is worse, of the wracke of the deepe
Can be to him, whose more than all is gone?
Some adde to the hazard, need flowes in him selfe,
Where such abound.

Ant. But come what may, I do adore thee so,
That danger shall seeme sport, and I will go.

Seb. A determinate voyage meere extremity,
Both of the rode and me, we will not walke
The ribbes of the dead Sea-Monsters, I am well.
But if you please to shake off all my taking,
I thinke it well done, and as you shall finde
Your selfe in peace and humane kindnesse welcome.

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio, and Attendants.

Duke. Will you make me beleeue that I am not sent for you?

Vio. Goe too, your Ilands, 'tis too much proued so.

Duke. Still so cruell?

Vio. Still so constant.

Duke. Still so vnkinde?

Vio. Still so true.

Duke. What shall I thinke on this Cesario?

that they come from my Neece, and that she is in loue with him?

Clar. My purpose is indeed a horse of that colour.

An. And your horse now would make him an Asse.

Mal. Asse I doe not.

An. O but I doe now.

Mal. Sir Toby, I would not haue you think that my desire of having the Letter, and holding him vp in that hope, doth any way iustifie your wrongs to him. Notwithstanding, I would be glad he did amend his folly.

To. Can you hinder him from writing?

An. I haue good wishes.

To. Nay but say true, do's it worke vpon him?

Mal. I know not, but I think it does: you are best to haue your Horse againe, and any spirit of loue that goes my horse as well as Loue, hurts not him. But you'l needs before I goe?

An. I will so: if I thought that tricke of Sir Toby's would proue what's vile and dishonest in it, I would not for my life haue a hand in't.

To. Fie on him Iezabel: he is now in some commerce with my Lord's Foole, about sweet-meats and Lady-fingers, and thither will I now follow him, to make one among their friendships.

Mal. Farewell Cosin Andrew: if you loue Sir Toby, follow him: I know he is diuersely offended.

An. Pray you sir, why?

Mal. The iniury done him in his seruant, is a shrewd vexation to him: adde to it, the perplexity of his Mistris, and his owne feare of her displeasure (shee purposing to bestow her selfe vpon the Count) which may make him digest it as a blow in the heart. Goe, you cannot follow a better guide: follow him, and if he be drunke, as I feare he will be ere you can ouertake him, you shall finde him in the company of the most opposite Foole that Illyria can afford him: and to a mans vnderstanding, there is not a more tedious Animall then a drunken Foole.

An. I'le make one of the best in Illyria, for I will follow him.

Mal. Get you to your horse, and away: I know you will hold me but a dull Neighbour, my Cosin.

An. Well, I'le follow him: if I haue any horse-wit, I'le follow him by the smell.

Mal. Farewell dry hay: till we meet againe, I wish you wit.

An. I will not giue my part of a good Dinner for it.

Mal. Farewell.

An. Well, I'le follow him, and giue him indifferent ill words: I cannot hold him worse then in words.

To. I did impeach the yong Gentleman to the Count Orsino, for I know the yong Gentleman hath a sweet Beard to his face.

An. As any man in Illyria, whatsoeuer he be, vnder the degree of my betters: and yet I will not compare with an old man.

To. What is his name?

An. Viola.

To. What's that?

An. My sweet Knight.

To. What is his name?

An. Viola.

To. Viola? Why Viola?

An. In Greeke, Viola: in Latine, a Violet: in Spanish, Viola: and in Vrginian, Viola: marry in Portugall, Ianua: call him Viola.

To. Accost, accost.

An. I would not by my will haue troubled him: nor might I do it with gentlenesse, moralitie, nicenesse, or any handsome warrantable ground: he shall finde himselfe most feelingly personated. I can write very like my Lady your Neece: on a Nonscript, one of her owne stamps, strange mistakes: set downe the manner of the Duke Orsino's comming: how much man-like he is, how full of Courtship. I will do it.

To. Excellent: I smell a deuice.

An. I haue't in my nose too.

To. He shall thinke by the Letters that thou wilt drop, that they come from my Neece, and that she is in loue with him.

An. My purpose is indeed a horse of that colour.

An. And your horse now would make him an Asse.

Mal. Asse I doe not.

An. O but I doe now.

Mal. Sir Toby, I would not haue you think that my desire of having the Letter, and holding him vp in that hope, doth any way iustifie your wrongs to him. Notwithstanding, I would be glad he did amend his folly.

To. Can you hinder him from writing?

An. I haue good wishes.

To. Nay but say true, do's it worke vpon him?

*An

Can bide the beating of so strong a passion,
As loue doth giue my heart: no woman's heart
So big, to hold so much: they lacke retention.
Alas, their loue may be call'd appetite,
No motion of the Liuer, but the Palate,
That suffer surfet, cloyment, and reuolt;
But mine is all as hungry as the Sea,
And can digest as much, make no compare
Betweene that loue a woman can beare me,
And that I owe Olivia.

Vio. I but I know

Du. What dost thou know?

Vio. Too well what loue women to men may owe:
In faith they are as true of heart, as we.
My Father had a daughter lou'd a man
As it might be perhaps, were I a woman
I should your Lordship

Du. And what's her story?

Vio. A blanke my Lord. She neuer told her loue,
But let concealment like a worme i'th' bud
Feed on her damaske cheeke: she pin'd in thought,
And with a greene and yellow melancholy,
She sate like Patience on a Monument,
Smiling at grief. Was not this loue indeed?
We men may say more, swear more, but indeed
Our shewes are more than will: for still we proue
Much in our vowes, but little in our loue.

Du. But di'd thy sister of her loue my Boy?

Vio. I am all the daughters of my Father's house,
And all the brothers too: and yet I know not.
Sir, shall I to this Lady?

Du. I prythee do.
Thy manner of thy entertainment shall more commend thee
My loue to her is pilgrimage: dearer than
My Father's seate, richer than my life,
My vowes cannot expresse it halfe.

Exeunt

Scena Quinta.

Enter Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.

To. Come on, there is sixe pence for you: let's haue a song.

And. There's a testrill of me too: if one knight giue a

Clo. Would you haue a Loue-song, or a song of good life?

To. A loue-song, a loue-song.

And. I: I care not for good life.

Clo. Then is this for me, i'faith. What is your Argument?

To. Care-you-not.

And. Care-you-not? Faith tis eas'ie enough to please him.

Clo. Then come kill me a browne Bull. Let me see, why then the Spirit is common: euery man mortall, that it is a Nothing, and the Fellow whose Song we would haue, doth but sing from the matter inward, as we clowns vtter it after the Tabor.

And. Excellent good, i'faith.

To. Good, good.

Clo. What is Loue? 'Tis not hereafter,
Present mirth hath present laughter:
What's to come is still vnsure.
In delay there lies no plenty,
Then come kisse me sweet and twenty,
Youth's a stuffe will not endure.

And. A mellancholy, I had rather than forty shillings I had such a legge, and so sweet a breath to sing, as the Fool has. In sooth thou wast in very gracious fooling last night, when thou spokest of Pigrogromitus, of the Vapians passing the Equinoctiall of Queubus: 'twas very good, i'faith. I sent thee sixpence for thy leman: hadst it?

Clo. I did impeticos thy gratillity: for Malvolio's nose is no whipstocke. My Lady has a white hand, and the Myrmidons are no bottle-ale houses.

And. Excellent: why this is the best fooling, when all is done. Now a song.

To. Come on, there is sixp

Mal. Ioue knowes I loue, but who, Lips do not moue, no man must know. No man must know. What followes? The numbers alter'd: No man must know, If this should be thee Maluolio?

To. Marrie hang thee brocke.

Mal. I may command where I adore, but silence like a Lucrece knife.

With bloodlesse stroke my heart doth gore, M. O. A. I. doth sway my life.

Fa. A fustian riddle.

To. Excellent Wench, I say.

Mal. M. O. A. I. doth sway my life. Nay but first let me see, let me see, let me see.

Fab. What dish a poyson has she dresst him?

To. And with what wing the stallion checkes at it?

Mal. I may command, where I adore: Why shee may command me: I serue her, she is my Ladie. Why this is euident to any formall capacitie. There is no obstruction in this, and the end: What should that Alphabeticall position portend, if I could make that resemble something in me? Softly, M. O. A. I.

To. O, I, make vp that, he is now at a cold scent.

Fab. Sowter will cry vpon't for all this, though it bee as ranke as a Fox.

Mal. M. Maluolio, M. why that begins my name.

Fab. Did not I say he would worke it out, the Curre is excellent at faults.

Mal. But then there is no consonancy in the sequell that suffers vnder probation: A. should follow, but O. comes

Fa. And O shall end, I hope.

To. I, or Ile cudgell him, and make him cry O.

Mal. And then I comes behind.

Fa. I, and you had any eye behinde you, you might see more detraction at your heeles, then fortunes before you.

Mal. M, O, A, I. This simulation is not as the former: and yet to crush this a little, it would bow to me, for euery one of these Letters are in my name. Soft, here followes prose: If this fall into thy hand, reuolue. In my starres I am aboue thee, but be not afraid of greatnesse: Some are become great, some atcheeues greatnesse, and some haue greatnesse thrust vpon 'em. Thy fates open their hands, let thy blood and spirit embrace them, and to inure thy selfe to what thou art like to be: cast thy humble slough, and appeare fresh. Be opposite with a kinsman, surly with seruants: Let thy tongue tang arguments of state; put thy selfe into the tricke of singularitie. Shee thus aduises thee, that sighes for thee. Remember who commended thy yellow stockings, and wish'd to see thee euer crosse garter'd: I say remember, goe too, thou art made if thou desir'st to be so: If not, let me see thee a seruing-man still, the fellow of seruants, and not worthie to touch Fortunes fingers. Farewell. Shee that would alter seruices with thee, thy fortunate vnhappy daylight and champian discouers not more: This is open. I will be proud, I will read politicke Authors, I will baffle Sir Toby, I will wash off grosse acquaintance, I will be point deuice, the very man. I do not now foole my selfe, to let imagination iade me; for euery reason excites to this, that my Lady loues me. She did commend my yellow stockings of late, shee did praise my legge being crosse-gartered, and in this she manifests her selfe to my loue, & with a kinde of iniunction drawes me to these habites of her liking. I thanke my starres, I am happy: I will be strange, stout, in yellow stockings, and crosse Gartered, euen with the swiftnesse of putting on. Ioue, and my starres be praised. Heere is yet a postscript. Thou canst not choose but know who I am. If thou entertainst my loue, let it appeare in thy smiling, thy smiles become thee well. Therefore in my presence still smile, deere my sweete, I prethee. Ioue I thanke thee, I will smile, I will do euery thing that thou wilt haue me. Exit

Fab. I will not giue my part of this sport for a pension of thousands to be paid from the Sophy.

To. I could marry this wench for this deuice.

An. So could I too.

To. And aske no other dowry with her, but such another iest.

Enter Maria.

An. Nor I neither.

Fab. Heere comes my noble gull catcher.

To. Wilt thou set thy foote o'my necke.

An. Or o'mine either?

To. Shall I play my freedome at tray-trip, and become thy bondslaue?

An. Ifaith, or I either?

Tob. Why, thou hast put him in such a dreame, that when the image of it leaues him, he must run mad.

Ma. Nay but say true, do's it worke vpon him?

To. Like Aqua vitæ with a Midwife.

Mar. If you will then see the fruites of the sport, marke his first approach before my Lady: hee will come to her in yeallow stockings, and 'tis a colour she abhorres, and crosse garter'd, a fashion she detests; and hee will smile vpon her, which will now be to her a scruple, and her opposition, hauing beene addicted to a melancholly, as she is, that cannot but turne him into a notable contempt. If you will see it follow me.

To. To the gates of Tartar, thou most excellent diuell of wit.

And Ile make one too Exeunt

Finis Actus secundus.

Actus Tertius, Scæna prima.

Enter Viola and Clowne

Vio. Saue thee Friend and thy Musick: dost thou liue by thy Tabor?

Clo. No sir, I liue by the Church.

Vio. Art thou a Churchman?

Clo. No such matter sir, I do liue by the Church: for I do liue at my house, and my house doth stand by the Church.

Vio. So thou maist say the Kings lyes by a begger, if a begger dwell neer him: or the Church stands by thy Tabor, if thy Tabor stand by the Church.

Clo. You haue said sir: To see this age: A sentence is but a cheu'rill glouue to a good witte, how quickely the wrong side may be turn'd outward.

Vio. Nay that's certaine: they that dally nicely with words, may quickely make them wanton.

Clo. I would therefore my sister had had no name Sir.

Vio. Why man?

Clo. Why sir, her names a word, and to dallie with that word, might make my sister wanton: But indeede words are very Rascals, since bonds disgrac'd them.

Vio. Thy reason man?

Clo.

Clo. Troth sir, I can yeeld you none without words, and words are growne so false, I am loath to proue reason with them.

Vio I warrant thou art a merry fellow, and car'st for nothing.

Clo. Not so sir, I do care for something: but in my conscience sir, I do not care for you: if that be to care for nothing sir, I would it would make you inuisible.

Vio. Art not thou the Lady Olivia's Foole?

Clo. No indeed sir, the Lady Olivia has no folly: shee will keepe no Foole sir, till she be married, and Fooles are as like husbands, as Pilchers are to Herrings, the Husband's the bigger, I am indeede not her Foole, but her corrupter of words.

Vio. I saw thee late at the Count Orsino's.

Clo. Foolery sir, does walke about the Orbe like the Sunne, it shines every where. I would be sorry sir, but the Foole should be as oft with your Master, as with my Mistris: I think I saw your wisedome there.

Vio Nay and thou passe vpon me, Ile no more with thee. Hold there's expences for thee.

Clo Now Ioues in his next commodity of hayre, send thee beard.

Vio. By my troth I'de fain grow my face out of my country to be rid of thee. Is it with you sir?

Clo What I pray thee good Mistris Mary Accost?

Vio You mistake knaue, accost is front her, boord her, woo her, assaile her.

Clo. I would therefore my sister had had name Penthesilea, for it growes matter for a Foole.

Vio. Fare you well gallant, and God saue your life.

Clo Sir, I haue not you by the hand: Mistris Mary, if you prized my Ladies fauour at any thing more than contempt, you would not giue meanes for this seruice to passe so: but I know sir, you care for nothing: but I will conster to them whence you come, who you are and what you would are out of my welkin, I might say Element, but the word is ouer-worne. exit

Vio. This fellow is wise enough to play the foole,
And to do that well, craues a kinde of wit:
He must obserue their mood on whom he iests,
The quality of persons, and the time:
And like the Haggard, check at euery Feather
That comes before his eye. This is a practise,
As full of labour as a Wise mans Art:
For folly that he wisely shewes is fit;
But wise men folly fall'n, quite taint their wit.

Enter Sir Toby and Andrew

To. Saue you Gentleman.

Clo. And you sir.

And. Dieu vous garde Monsieur.

Vio. Et vous aussi, vostre seruiteur.

And. I hope sir, you are, and I am yours.

To. Will you encounter the house, my Neece is desirous you should enter, if your trade be to her.

Vio. I am bound to your Neece sir, I meane she is the list of my voyage.

To. Taste your legges sir, put them to motion.

Vio. My legges do better vnderstand me sir, then I vnderstand what you meane by bidding me taste my legges.

To. I meane to go sir, to enter.

Vio. I will answer you with gate and entrance, but we are preuented.

Enter Olivia, and Gentlewoman.

Most excellent accomplish'd Lady, the heauens raine Odours on you.

And. That youth's a rare Courtier, raine odours, well.

Vio. My matter hath no voice Lady, but to your owne most pregnant and vouchsafed eare.

And. Odours, pregnant, and vouchsafed: Ile get 'em all three already.

Ol. Let the Garden doore be shut, and leaue me to my hearing. Giue me your hand sir.

Vio. My duty Madam, and most humble seruice.

Ol. What is your name?

Vio. Cesario is your seruants name, faire Princesse.

Ol. My seruant sir? 'Twas neuer merry world,
Since lowly feigning was call'd compliment:
You're seruant to the Count Orsino, youth.

Vio. And he is yours, and his must needs be yours:
Your seruants seruice, is your seruants duty,
And his duty vowes his duty vowes on you.

Ol. For him, I think not on him: for his thoughts,
Would they were blanks, rather then filled with me.

Vio. Madam, I come to whet your gentle thoughts
On his behalfe.

Ol. O by your leaue, I pray you,
I bad you neuer speake againe of him:
But would you vndertake another suite
I had rather heare you to solicite,
Then Musicke from the spheares.

Vio. Deere Lady.

Ol. Giue me leaue beseech you: I did send,
After the last enchantment you did heare,
A Ring in chace of you. So did I abuse
My selfe, my seruant, and I feare me you:
Vnder your hard construction must I sit,
To force that on you in a shame full cunning,
Which you knew none of yours. What might you think?
Haue you not set mine Honor at the stake,
And baited it with all th'vnmuzzled thoughts
That tyrannous heart can think? To one of your receiuing
Enough is shewne a Cypresse, not a bosome,
Hides my heart: so let me heare you speake.

Vio. I pity you.

Ol. That's a degree to loue.

Vio. No, not a grize: for 'tis a vulgar proofe
That very oft we pity enemies.

Ol. Why then me thinkes 'tis time to smile againe.
O world, how apt the poore are to be proud?
If one should be a prey, how much the better
To fall before the Lion, then the Wolfe?
Clocke strikes.
The clocke vpbraids me with the waste of time.
Be not afraid good youth, I will not haue you,
And yet when wit and youth is come to haruest,
Your wife is like to reape a proper man:
There lies your way, due West.

Vio. Then Westward hoe:
Grace and good disposition attend your Ladyship:
You'll nothing Madam to my Lord, by me?

Ol. Stay: I prethee tell me what thou think'st of me?

Vio. That you do think you are not what you are.

Ol. If I think so, I think the same of you.

Vio. Then think you right: I am not what I am.

Ol. I would you were, as I would haue you be.

Vio. Would it be better Madam, then I am?
I wish it might, for now I am your foole.

Ol. O what a deale of scorne, looks beautiful?
In the contempt and anger of his lip,
A murderous guilt shewes not it selfe more soone,
Then loue that would seeme hid: Loues night, is noone.
Cesario by the Roses of the Spring,
By maid-hood honor truth, and euery thing,
I loue thee so, that maugre all thy pride,

Nor wit, nor reason, can my passion hide:
Do not extort thy reasons from this clause,
For that I woo, thou therefore hast no cause:
But rather reason thus, with reason fetter;
Loue sought, is good, but giuen vnsought, is better.
Vio. By innocence I sweare, and by my youth,
I haue one heart, one bosome, and one truth,
And that no woman has, nor neuer none
Shall mistris be of it, saue I alone.
And so adieu good Madam, neuer more,
Will I my Master tease in youre behalfe.
Oli. Yet come againe: for thou perhaps mayst moue
That heart, which now abhorres, to like his loue. Exeunt

Scœna Secunda.

Enter Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.

And. No faith, Ile not stay a iot longer:
To. Thy reason deere venome, giue thy reason.
Fab. You must needes yeelde your reason, Sir Andrew?
And. Marry I saw your Neece doe more fauours to the Counts Seruingman, then euer she bestow'd vpon me: I saw't i'th Orchard.
To. Did she see thee the while, old boy, tell me that.
And. As plaine as I see you now.
Fab. This was a great argument of loue in her toward you.
And. S'light, will you make an Asse o'me.
Fab. I will proue it legitimate sir, vpon the Oathes of iudgement, and reason.
To. And they haue beene grand-Iurie men, since before Noah was a Sayler.
Fab. She did shew fauour to the youth in your sight, onely to exasperate you, to awake your dormouse valour, to put fire in your Heart, and brimstone in your Liuer: you should then haue accosted her, and with some excellent iests, fire-new from the mint, you should haue bang'd the youth into dumbenesse: this was look'd for at your hand, and this was balkt: the double gilt of this opportunitie you let time wash off, and you are now sayld into the North of my Ladies opinion, where you will hang like an ysicle on a Dutchmans beard, vnlesse you doe redeeme it, by some laudable attempt, either of valour or policie.
And. And't be any way, it must be with Valour, for policie I hate: I had as liefe be a Browne-ist, as a Politician.
To. Why then build me thy fortunes vpon the basis of valour. Challenge me the Counts youth to fight with him: hurt him in eleuen places, my Neece shall take note of it, and assure thy selfe, there is no loue-Broker in the world, can more preuaile in mans commendation with woman, then report of valour.
Fab. There is no way but this Sir Andrew.
And. Will either of you beare me a challenge to him?
To. Go, write it in a martial hand, be curst and briefe: it is no matter how witty, so it be eloquent, and full of inuention: taunt him with the licence of Inke: if thou thou'st him some thrice, it shall not be amisse, and as many Lyes, as will lye in thy sheete of paper, although the sheete were bigge enough for the bedde of Ware in England, set em downe, go about it. Let there be gall enough in thy inke, though thou write with a Goose-pen, no matter: about it.
And. Where shall I finde you?
To. Wee'l call thee at the Cubiculo: Go.
Exit Sir Andrew.
Fa. This is a deere Manakin to you Sir Toby.
To. I haue beene deere to him lad, some two thousand strong, or so.
Fa. We shall haue a rare Letter from him; but you'le not deliuer it.
To. Neuer trust me then: and by all meanes stirre on the youth to an answer. I thinke Oxen and waine-ropes cannot hale them together. For Andrew, if he were open'd and you finde so much blood in his Liuer, as will clog the foote of a flea, Ile eate the rest of th'anatomy.
Fab. And his opposit the youth beares in his visage no great presage of cruelty.

Enter Maria.

To. Looke where the youngest Wren of mine comes.
Mar. If you desire the spleene, and will laughe your selues into stitches, follow me; yond gull Malvolio is turned Heathen, a verie Renegatho; for there is no Christian that meanes to be saued by beleeuing rightly, can euer beleeue such impossible passages of grossenesse. He's in yellow stockings.
To. And crosse garter'd?
Mar. Most villanously, like a Pedant that keepes a Schoole i'th Church. I haue dogg'd him like his murtherer. He does obey euery point of the Letter that I dropt, to betray him. He does smile his face into more lines then is in the new Map, with the augmentation of the Indies: you haue not seene such a thing as 'tis. I can hardly forbeare hurling things at him. I know my Ladie will strike him: if she doe, he'le smile and take't for a great fauour.
To. Come bring vs, bring vs where he is.

Scœna Tertia.

Enter Sebastian and Anthonio.

Seb. I would not by my will haue troubled you,
But since you make your pleasure of your paines,
I will no further chide you.
Ant. I could not stay behinde you: my desire
(More sharpe then filed steele) did spurre me forth,
And not all loue to see you (though so much
As might haue drawne one to a longer voyage)
But iealousie, what might befall your trauell,
Being skilleste in these parts: which to a stranger,
Vnguided, and vnfriended, often prooue
Rough, and vnhospitable. My willing loue,
The rather by these arguments of feare
Set forth in your pursuite.
Seb. My kinde Anthonio,
I can no other answer make, but thankes,
And thankes: and ever oft good turnes,
Are shuffel'd off with such vncurrant pay:
But were my worth, as is my conscience firme,

You

You should finde better dealing: what's to do?
Shall we go see the reliques of this Towne?
Ant. To morrow sir, best first go see your Lodging?
Seb. I am not weary, and 'tis long to night
I pray you let vs satisfie our eyes
With the memorials, and the things of fame
That do renowne this City.
Ant. Would you'd pardon me:
I do not without danger walke these streetes
Once in a sea-fight 'gainst the Count his gallies,
I did some service, of such note indeede,
That were I tane heere, it would scarse be answer'd.
Seb. Belike you slew great number of his people
Ant. The offence is not of such a bloody nature,
Albeit the quality of the time, and quarrell
Might well haue giuen vs bloody argument:
It might haue since bene answer'd in repaying
What we tooke from them, which for Traffiques sake
Most of our City did. Onely my selfe stood out,
For which if I be lapsed in this place
I shall pay deere.
Seb. Do not then walke too open.
Ant. It doth not fit me: hold sir, here's my purse,
In the South Suburbes at the Elephant
'Is best to lodge: I will bespeake our dyet,
Whiles you beguile the time, and feed your knowledge
With viewing of the Towne, there shall you haue me.
Seb. Why I your purse?
Ant. Haply your eye shall light vpon some toy
You haue desire to purchase; and your store
I thinke is not for idle Markets, sir.
Seb. Ile be your purse-bearer, and leaue you
For an houre.
Ant. To th'Elephant.
Seb. I do remember. Exeunt.

Scæna Quarta.

Enter Olivia and Maria.

Ol. I haue sent after him, he sayes hee'l come:
How shall I feast him? What bestow of him?
For youth is bought more oft, then begg'd, or borrow'd
I speake too loud. Where's Malvolio, he is sad, and civill,
And suites well for a seruant with my fortunes,
Where is Malvolio?
Mar. He's coming Madame:
But in very strange manner. He is sure possest Madam.
Ol. Why what's the matter, does he raue?
Mar. No Madam, he does nothing but smile, your Ladyship were best to haue some guard about you, if he come, for sure the man is tainted in's wits.
Ol. Go call him hither.

Enter Malvolio.

I am as madde as hee,
If sad and merry madnesse equall bee.
How now Malvolio?
Mal. Sweet Lady, ho, ho.
Ol. Smil'st thou? I sent for thee vpon a sad occasion.
Mal. Sad Lady, I could be sad.
This does make some obstruction in the blood:
This crosse gartering, but what of that?
If it please the eye of one, it is with me as the very true Sonnet is: Please one, and please all.
Mal. Why how dost thou man?
What is the matter with thee?
Mal. Not black in my mind, though yellow in my legges: It did come to his hands, and Commaunds shall be executed. I think we do know the sweet Romane hand.
Ol. Wilt thou go to bed Malvolio?
Mal. To bed? I sweet heart, and Ile come to thee.
Ol. God comfort thee. Why dost thou smile so, and kisse thy hand so oft?
Mar. How do you Malvolio?
Mal. At your request?
Yes Nightingales answere Dawes.
Mar. Why appeare you with this ridiculous boldnesse before my Lady.
Mal. Be not afraid of greatnesse: 'twas well writ.
Ol. What meanst thou by that Malvolio?
Mal. Some are borne great.
Ol. Ha?
Mal. Some atchieue greatnesse.
Ol. What sayst thou?
Mal. And some haue greatnesse thrust vpon them.
Ol. Heauen restore thee.
Mal. Remember who commended thy yellow stockings.
Ol. Thy yellow stockings?
Mal. And wish'd to see thee crosse gartered.
Ol. Crosse gartered?
Mal. Go too, thou art made, if thou desir'st to be so.
Ol. Am I made?
Mal. If not, let me see thee a seruant still.
Ol. Why this is very Midsommer madnesse.

Enter Seruant.

Ser. Madame, the young Gentlemen of the Count Orsino is returned, I could hardly entreate him backe: he attends your Ladyships pleasure.
Ol. Ile come to him.
Good Maria, let this fellow be look'd too. Where's my Cosine Toby, let some of my people haue a speciall care of him, I would not haue him miscarrie for the halfe of my Dowry. Exit
Mal. Oh ho, do you come neere me now: no worse man than sir Toby to looke to me. This concurres directly with the Letter, she sends him on purpose, that I may appeare stubborne to him: for she incites me to that in the Letter. Cast thy humble slough, sayes she: be opposite with a Kinsman, surly with seruants, let thy tongue tang with arguments of state, put thy selfe into the tricke of singularity: and consequently sets downe the manner how: as a sad face, a reuerend carriage, a slow tongue, in the habite of some Sir of note, and so forth. I haue limde her, but it is Loues doing, and Loue make me thankefull. And when she went away now, let this Fellow be look'd too. Fellow? not Malvolio, nor after my degree, but Fellow. Why euery thing adheres together, that no dramme of a scruple, no scruple of a scruple, no obstacle, no incredulous or vnsafe circumstance. What can be saide? Nothing that can be, can come betweene me and the full prospect of my hopes. Well Loue, not I, is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

Enter Toby, Fabian, and Maria.

To. Which way is he, in the name of sanctity. If all the diuels of hell be drawne in little, and Legion himselfe possest him, yet Ile speake to him.

Fab. Heere he is, heere he is: how ist with you sir? How ist with you man?

Mal. Go off, I discard you: let me enioy my private: go off.

Mar. Lo, how hollow the fiend speakes within him; did not I tell you? Sir Toby, my Lady prayes you to haue a care of him.

Mal. Ah ha, does she so?

To. Go too, go too: peace, peace, we must deale gently with him: Let me alone. How do you Maluolio? How ist with you? What man, defie the diuell; consider, hee's an enemy to mankinde.

Mal. Do you know what you say?

Mar. La you, and you speake ill of the diuell, how he takes it at heart. Pray God he be not bewitch'd.

Fab. Carry his water to th'wise woman.

Mar. Marry and it shall be done to morrow morning if I liue. My Lady would not loose him for more then Ile say.

Mal. How now mistris?

Mar. Oh Lord

To. Prethee hold thy peace, this is not the way: Doe you not see you moue him? Let me alone with him

Fa. No way but gentlenesse, gently, gently: the Fiend is rough, and will not be roughly vs'd.

To. Why how now my bawcock? how dost § chuck?

Mal. Sir.

To. I biddy, come with me. What man, tis not for gravity to play at cherrie-pit with Satan. Hang him foul Collier.

Mar. Get him to say his prayers, good sir Toby get him to pray.

Mal. My prayers Minx.

Mar. No I warrant you, he will not heare of godlinesse.

Mal. Go hang your selues all: you are ydle shallowe things, I am not of your element, you shall knowe more hereafter. Exit

To. Ist possible?

Fa. If this were plaid vpon a stage now, I could condemne it as an improbable fiction.

To. His very genius hath taken the infection of the deuice man.

Mar. Nay pursue him now, least the deuice take ayre, and taint.

Fa. Why we shall make him mad indeede

Mar. The house will be the quieter.

To. Come, we'l haue him in a darke room & bound My Neece is already in the beleefe that he's mad: we may carry it thus for our pleasure, and his penance, til our very pastime tyred out of breath, prompt vs to haue mercy on him: at which time, we will bring the deuice to the bar and crowne thee for a finder of madmen: but see, but see.

Enter Sir Andrew.

Fa. More matter for a May morning.

And. Heere's the Challenge, reade it I warrant there's vinegar and pepper in't.

Fab. Is't so sawcy?

And. I, is't? I warrant him: do but read.

To. Giue me

Youth whatsoeuer thou art, thou art but a scurvy fellow.

Fa. Good, and valiant.

To. Wonder not, nor admire not in thy mindo why I doe call thee so, for I will shew thee no reason for't. (Law

Fa. A good note, that keepes you from the blow of §

To. Thou comst to the Lady Olivia, and in my sight she vses thee kindly: but thou lyest in thy throat, that is not the matter I challenge thee for.

Fa. Very breefe, and to exceeding good sence-lesse.

To. I will way-lay thee going home, where if it be thy chance to kill me.

Fa. Good.

To. Thou kilst me like a rogue and a villaine.

Fa. Still you keepe o'th windie side of the Law: good.

Tob. Farthewell, and God haue mercy vpon one of our soules. He may haue mercy vpon mine, but my hope is better, and so looke to thy selfe. Thy friend as thou vsest him, & thy sworne enemie, Andrew Ague-cheeke.

To. If this Letter moue him not, his legges cannot: Ile giu't him.

Mar. You may haue verie fit occasion for't: he is now in some commerce with my Ladie, and will by and by depart.

To. Go sir Andrew, scout mee for him at the corner of the Orchard like a bum-Baylie: so soone as euer thou seest him, draw, and as thou draw'st, sweare horrible: for it comes to passe oft, that a terrible oath, with a swaggering accent sharpely twang'd off, giues manhoode more approbation, then euer proofe it selfe would haue earn'd him. Away.

And. Nay let me alone for swearing. Exit

To. Now will not I deliuer his Letter, for the behauiour of the yong Gentleman, giues him out to be of good capacity, and breeding: his employment betweene his Lord and my Neece, confirmes no lesse. Therefore, this Letter being so excellently ignorant, will breed no terror in the youth: he will finde it comes from a Clodde-pole. But sir, I will deliuer his Challenge by word of mouth; set vpon Ague-cheeke a notable report of valor, and driue the Gentleman (as I know his youth will aptly receiue it) into a most hideous opinion of his rage, skill, furie, and impetuositie. This will so fright them both, that they will kill one another by the looke, like Cockatrices

Enter Olivia and Viola.

Fab Heere he comes with your Neece, giue them way till he take leaue, and presently after him.

To I will meditate the while vpon some horrid message for a Challenge.

Ol. I haue said too much vnto a hart of stone,
And laid mine honour too vnchary on't:
There's something in me that reproues my fault:
But such a head-strong potent fault it is,
That it but mockes reproofe.

Vio. With the same hautour that your passion beares,
Goes on my Masters greefes.

Ol. Heere, weare this Iewell for me, tis my picture:
Refuse it not, it hath no tongue, to vex you:
And I beseech you come againe to morrow.
What shall you aske of me that Ile deny,
That honour (sau'd) may vpon asking giue.

Vio. Nothing but this, your true loue for my master.

Ol. How with mine honor may I giue him that,
Which I haue giuen to you.

Vio I will acquit you.

Ol. Well, come againe to morrow: far-thee-well,
A Fiend like thee might beare my soule to hell.

Enter Toby and Fabian.

To. Gentleman, God saue thee.

Vio

Vio. And you sir.

To. That defence thou hast, betake the too'e: of what nature the wrongs are thou hast done him, I know not: but thy intercepter full of despight, bloody as the Hunter, attends thee at the Orchard end. dismount thy tucke, be yare in thy preparation, for thy assaylant is quick, skilfull, and deadly.

Vio. You mistake sir I am sure, no man hath any quarrell to me: my remembrance is very free and cleere from any image of offence done to any man.

To. You'l finde it otherwise I assure you. therefore, if you hold your life at any price, betake you to your gard for your opposite hath in him what youth, strength, skill, and wrath, can furnish man withall.

Vio. I pray you sir what is he?

To. He is knight dubb'd with vnhatch'd Rapier, and on carpet consideration, but he is a dueller in private brall, soules and bodies hath he diuore'd three, and his incensement at this moment is so implacable, that satisfaction can be none, but by pangs of death and sepulcure. Hob, nob, is his word giue or take it.

Vio. I will returne againe into the house, and desire some conduct of the Lady. I am no fighter, I haue heard of some kinde of men, that put quarrells purposely on others, to taste their valour: belike this is a man of that quirke

To. Sir, no: his indignation deriues it selfe out of a very competent iniurie, therefore get you on, and giue him his office. Backe you shall not to the house, vnlesse you vndertake that with me, which with as much safetie you might answer him: therefore on, or strippe your sword starke naked. for meddle you must that's a certain, or forsweare to weare iron about you.

Vio. This is as vncivil as strange. I beseech you, doe me this courteous office, as to know of the Knight what my offence to him is: it is something of my negligence, nothing of my purpose.

To. I will doe so. Signeur Fabian, stay you by this Gentleman, till my returne. Exit Toby.

Vio. Pray you sir, do you know of this matter?

Fab. I know the knight is incenst against you, euen to a mortall arbitrement, but nothing of the circumstance more.

Vio. I beseech you what manner of man is he?

Fab. Nothing of that wonderfull promise to read him by his forme, as you are like to finde him in the proofe of his valour. He is indeede sir, the most skilfull, bloody, & fatall opposite that you could possibly haue found in any part of Illyria: will you walke towards him, I will make your peace with him, if I can.

Vio. I shall bee much bound to you for't: I am one, that had rather go with sir Priest, then sir knight: I care not who knowes so much of my mettle. Exeunt.

Enter Toby and Andrew.

To. Why man hee's a verie deuell, I haue not seen such a firago: I had a passe with him, rapier, scabberd, and all and he gues me the stucke in with such a mortall motion that it is inevitable: and on the answer, he payes you as surely, as your feete hits the ground they step on. They say, he has bin Fencer to the Sophy.

And. Pox on't I'le not meddle with him.

To. I but he will not now be pacified, Fabian can scarse hold him yonder.

An. Plague on't, and I thought he had beene valiant, and so cunning in Fence, I'de haue seene him damn'd ere I'de haue challeng'd him. Let him let the matter slip, and Ile giue him my horse, gray Capilet.

To. Ile make the motion: stand heere, make a good shew on't, this shall end without the perdition of soules, marry I'le ride your horse as well as I ride you.

Enter Fabian and Viola.

I haue his horse to take vp the quarrell, I haue perswaded him the youths a duell.

Fa. He is as horribly conceited of him and pants, & lookes pale as if a Beare were at his heeles.

To. There's no remedie sir, he will fight with you for's oath sake. marrie hee hath better bethought him of his quarrell, and he is now desirous that now scarce to bee worth talking of therefore draw for the supportance of his vowe, he protests he will not hurt you

Vio. Pray God defend me a little thing would make me tell them how much I lacke of a man.

Fab. Giue ground if you see him furious.

To. Come sir Andrew, there's no remedie, the Gentleman will for his honors take haue one bowt with you he cannot by the Duello auoide it. but hee has promised me, as he is a Gentleman and a Soldiour, he will not hurt you Come on, to't.

And. Pray God he keepe his oath.

Enter Antonio.

Vio. I do assure you 'tis against my will

Ant. Put vp your sword if this yong Gentleman Haue done offence, I take the fault on me.
If you offend him, I for him defie you.

To. You sir? Why, what are you?

Ant. One sir, that for his loue dares yet do more Then you haue heard him brag to you he will.

To. Nay, if you be an vndertaker, I am for you.

Enter Officers.

Fab. O good sir Toby hold: heere come the Officers.

To. Ile be with you anon.

Vio. Pray sir, put your sword vp if you please.

And. Marry will I sir: and for that I promis'd you Ile be as good as my word. Hee will beare you easily, and reines well

1 Off. This is the man, do thy Office

2 Off. Antonio, I arrest thee at the suit of Count Orsino

Ant. You do mistake me sir.

1 Off. No sir, no iot: I know your fauour well:
Though now you haue no sea-cap on your head:
Take him away, he knowes I know him well.

Ant. I must obey. This comes with seeking you:
But there's no remedie, I shall answer it:
What will you do now my necessitie
Makes me to aske you for my purse. It greeues mee
Much more, for what I cannot do for you,
Then what befals my selfe: you stand amaz'd,
But be of comfort.

2 Off. Come sir away.

Ant. I must entreat of you some of that money.

Vio. What money sir?
For the fayre kindnesse you haue shew'd me heere,
And part being prompted by your present trouble,
Out of my leane and low ability
Ile lend you some coyne: my hauing is not much,
Ile make diuision of my present with you:
Hold, there's halfe my Coffer.

Ant. Will you deny me now,
Is't possible that my deserts to you
Can lacke perswasion. Do not tempt my misery,
Least that it make me so vnsound a man
As to vpbraid you with those kindnesses

That I haue done for you.

Vio. I know of none,

Nor know you by voyce, or any feature:

I hate ingratitude more in a man,

Then lying, vainenesse, babling drunkennesse,

Or any taint of vice whose strong corruption

Inhabits our frayle blood.

Ant. O heauens themselues.

2. Off. Come away sir, hold your peace.

Ant. Let me speake a little. This youth that you see

Releeu'd me from the sea when I was sicke,

And promis'd me his purse and dearest loue,

Most venerable worthy that Sebastian

1. Off. Away. What's that to vs, the time goes by: Away.

Ant. But oh, how vildely doth this world proue this God?

Thou hast Sebastian done good feature, shame,

In Nature, there's no blemish but the minde:

None can be call'd deform'd, but the vnkinde.

Virtue is beauty, but the beautious euill,

Are empty trunkes o'erflourished by the deuill.

1. Off. Away.

Ant. I know not.

Vio. How often by thy selfe thou hast refus'd

That which now you call promise?

Is it not well done?

Ant. Excellently done, if God did all.

Vio. 'Tis in grace (Antonio) to learne: farewell sir,

There's purse for you, when shall we visit you?

Ant. Let me yet know of you whither you are bound.

Vio. No sooth sir, my determinate voyage is meere extrauagancy.

But I perceiue in you so excellent a touch of modesty, that you will not extort from me what I am willing to keepe in: therefore it shall content you to be ignorant of mine estate, vntill my returne.

Ant. In the mean time, what name ys that I shall loue in vaine?

That the remembrance of my more deserts may not extinguish at your returne.

Vio. My name is call'd Roderigo: Write for mine sake,

The paine you haue in writing, I'le embrace:

Let me still know of you, and all is done.

Now sir, haue I met you againe? there's for you.

Ant. Why what's the matter?

Vio. Blame not this haste of mine: if you meane well,

Now go with me and with this holy man

Into the next voyde house, where we will coupled be

Still in this habit, till I haue mine,

For in your company I will be seene,

Temptations are rife, and I feare you.

Tob. A very dishonest paltry boy, and more a coward then a Hare, his dishonesty appeares, in leauing his friend here in necessity, and denying him: and for his cowardship, aske Toby.

Ant. Sir, I did not.

Tob. A Coward, a most deuout Coward, religious in it.

Ant. Sir, I did neuer lend him a penny, but he requited me with cowardly, base, and ingrateful words.

Ant. And I do so.

Fab. Come, let's see the euent.

Tob. I dare lay any money, 'twill be nothing yet. Exeunt

Actus Quartus, Scena prima.

Enter Sebastian and Clowne.

Clo. Will you make me beleeue, that I am not sent for you?

Seb. Go too, go too, thou art a foolish fellow,

Let me be clear of thee.

Clo. Well held out yfaith: No, I do not know you, nor I am not sent to you by my Lady, to bid you come speake with her, nor your name is not Master Cesario, and this is not my nose neyther. Nothing that is so is so.

Seb. I prethee vent thy folly somewhere else, thou know'st not me.

Clo. Vent my folly? He has heard that word of some great man, and now applyes it to a foole. Vent my folly: I am afraid this great lubber the World will proue a Cockney. I prethee now vngird thy strangenes, and tell me what I shall vent to my Lady? Shall I vent to her that thou art coming?

Seb. I prethee foolish greeke depart from me, there's money for thee, if you tarry longer, I shall giue worse payment.

Clo. By my troth thou hast an open hand, these Wise-men that giue fooles money, get themselues a good report after fourteene yeares purchase.

Enter Antonio, Toby and Fabian.

Ant. Now sir, haue I met you againe? there's for you.

Seb. Why there's for thee, and there, and there,

Are all the people mad?

Tob. Hold sir, or Ile throw your dagger ore the house

Clo. This will I tell my Lady straight, I would not be in some of your coats for two pence.

Tob. Come on sir, hold.

Ant. Nay let them alone: Ile go another way to worke with him: Ile haue an action of Battery against him, if there be any law in Illyria: though I strooke him first, yet it's no matter for that.

Seb. Let go thy hand.

Tob. Come sir, I will not let you go. Come my young Cocke-rell, and you your weapon drawne: I say, Come on.

Seb. Now, be free from me. What would you? I do not vse to weare my weapon drawne, or wrong any man.

Tob. What, what? Nay then I must haue an Ounce or two of this malapert blood from you.

Enter Oliuia.

Oli. Hold Toby, on thy life I charge thee hold.

Tob. Madam.

Oli. Will it be euer thus? Vngracious wretch,

Fit for the Mountaines, and the barbarous Caues,

Where manners nere were preach'd: out of my sight,

Be not offended, deere Cesario.

Rudesby be gone: I prethee gentle friend,

Let thy fayre wisedome, not thy passe of way

Intimate thy stay with me, and I entreat thee

Away with this rude creature, and I entreat thee

Againe to my house, and hold more precious

All the iniunctions that thou shalt impose,

Then they haue borne of late, that thou euen now

Mayst smile at this: Thou shalt not choose but goe:

Do not denie, beshrew his soule for me,

He started one poore heart of mine in thee.

Seb. What relish is in this? How runs the streame?

Or I am mad, or else this is a dreame.

Let fancie still my sense in Lethe steepe,

If it be thus to dreame, still let me sleepe.

Oli. Nay come I prethee, would thou'dst be ruled by me.

Seb. Madam, I will.

Oli. O say so, and so be. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Maria and Clowne.

Mar. Nay, I prethee put on this gown, & this beard, make him beleeue thou art sir Topas the Curate, doe it quickly. Ile call sir Toby the whilst.

Clo. Well, Ile put it on, and I will dissemble my selfe in't: and I would I were the first that euer dissembled in in such a gowne I am not tall enough to become the function well, nor leane enough to bee thought a good Student: but to be said an honest man and a good house-keeper goes as fairely, as sodainly, a scored phrase & a great scholler. The Competitors enter.

Enter Toby.

To. Iaue bleste thee M. Parson.

Clo. Bonos dies Sir Toby: for as the olde hermit of Prage that never saw pen and inke, very wittily said to a Neece of King Gorboduc, that that is, is: so I being Master Parson, am Master Parson: for what is that but that, and is but is?

To. To him Sir Topas.

Clow. What hoa, I say, Peace in this prison.

To. The knaue counterfeits well: a good knaue.

Mal. Who calls there?

Clo. Sir Topas the Curate who comes to visit Malvolio the

To. Well said Master Parson.

Mal. Sir Topas, never was man thus wronged: good Sir Topas

Clo. Out hyperbolicall fiend, how vexest thou this man? talkest thou nothing but of Ladies?

To. Well said Master Parson.

Mal. Sir Topas, never was man thus wronged, good Sir Topas, I am no more mad than you are, make the triall of it in any constant question.

Clo. What is the opinion of Pythagoras concerning Wild-fowle?

Mal. That the soule of our Grandam might haply inhabit a Bird.

Clo. What thinkest thou of his opinion?

Mal. I think nobly of the soule, and no way approue his opinion.

Clo. Fare thee well: remaine thou still in darkenesse: thou shalt hold the opinion of Pythagoras ere I will allow of thy wits, and fear to kill a Woodcocke, lest thou dispossesse the soule of thy Grandam. Fare thee well.

Mal. Sir Topas, Sir Topas.

To. My most exquisite Sir Topas.

Clo. Nay I am for all waters.

Mar. Thou might'st haue done this without thy beard and gowne, he sees thee not.

To. To him in thine owne voyce, and bring me word how thou findst him: I would we were well rid of this knauery. If he may be conueniently deliuered, I would he were, for I am now so farre in offence with my Neece, that I cannot pursue with any safetie this sport to the vpshot. Come by and by to my Chamber. Exit

Clo. Hey Robin, iolly Robin, tell me how thy Lady does.

Mal. Foole

Clo. My Lady is vnkind, pardon

Mal. Foole.

Clo. Alas why is she so.

Mal. Foole, I say.

Clo. She loues another. Who calles, ha?

Mal. Good Foole, as euer thou wilt deserue wits and mine owne, come to a Candle, and paper, as I am a Gentleman, I will liue to be thankefull to thee for't.

Clo. Master Malvolio?

Mal. I good Foole.

Clo. Alas sir, how fell you besides your fiue wits?

Mal. Foole, there was neuer man so notoriously abus'd: I am as well in my wits (foole) as thou art.

Clo. But as well? then you are mad indeed, if you be no better in your wits than a foole.

Mal. They haue heere maliciously conspired my madnesse, and penn'd

Clo. Advise you what you say, the minister is heere. Malvolio, Malvolio, thy wits the heauens restore, endeauour thy selfe to sleepe, and leaue thy vaine bibble babble.

Mal. Sir Topas.

Clo. Maintaine no words with him good fellow. Who I Sir Topas? marry God restore you your wits. Foole, foole, while thou liu'st, take heed of the deuill, and leaue to be a Foole.

Exit

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sebastian.

This is the aire, that is the glorious Sunne,
This pearle she gaue me, I do feele and see't,
And though 'tis wonder that enwraps me thus,

Yet

Yet 'tis not madneſſe. Where's Anthonio then,
I could not finde him at the Elephant,
Yet there he was, and there I found this credite,
That he did range the towne to ſeeke me out,
His counſell now might do me golden ſeruice,
For though my ſoule diſputes well with my ſence,
That this may be ſome error, but no madneſſe,
Yet doth this accident and flood of Fortune,
So farre exceed all inſtance, all diſcourſe,
That I am readie to diſtruſt mine eyes,
And wrangle with my reaſon that perſwades me
To any other truſt, but that I am mad,
Or elſe the Ladies mad; yet if 'twere ſo,
She could not ſway her houſe, command her followers,
Take, and giue backe affayres, and their diſpatch,
With ſuch a ſmooth, diſcreet, and ſtable bearing
As I perceiue ſhe do's: there's ſomething in't
That is deceiueable. But heere the Lady comes.

Enter Olivia, and Prieſt.

Ol. Blame not this haſte of mine: if you meane well
Now go with me, and with this holy man
Into the Chantry by: there before him,
And vnderneath that conſecrated roofe,
Plight me the full aſſurance of your faith,
That my moſt iealious, and too doubtfull ſoule
May liue at peace. He ſhall conceale it,
Whiles you are willing it ſhall come to note,
What time we will our celebration keepe
According to my birth, what do you ſay?

Seb. Ile follow this good man, and go with you,
And hauing ſworne truth, euer will be true

Ol. Then lead the way good father, & heauens ſo ſhine,
That they may fairely note this acte of mine. Exeunt.

Finis Actus Quartus.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Clowne and Fabian.

Fab. Now as thou lou'ſt me, let me ſee his Letter

Clo. Good M. Fabian, grant me another requeſt.

Fab. Any thing.

Clo. Do not deſire to ſee this Letter.

Fab. This is to giue a dogge, and in recompence deſire my dogge againe.

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio, and Lords.

Duke. Belong you to the Lady Olivia, friends?

Clo. I ſir, we are ſome of her trappings.

Duke. I know thee well: how doeſt thou my good Fellow?

Clo. Truely ſir, the better for my foes, and the worſe for my friends.

Du. Iuſt the contrary, the better for thy friends.

Clo. No ſir, the worſe.

Du. How can that be?

Clo. Marry ſir, they praiſe me, and make an aſſe of me, now my foes tell me plainly, I am an Aſſe: ſo that by my foes ſir, I profit in the knowledge of my ſelfe, and by my friends I am abuſed, ſo that concluſions to be as kiſſes, if your foure negatiues make your two affirmatiues, why then the worſe for my friends, and the better for my foes.

Du. Why this is excellent.

Clo. By my troth ſir, no: though it pleaſe you to be one of my friends.

Du. Thou ſhalt not be the worſe for me, there's gold.

Clo. But that it would be double dealing ſir, I would you could make it another.

Du. O you giue me ill counſell.

Clo. Put your grace in your pocket ſir, for this once, and let your fleſh and blood obey it.

Du. Well, I will be ſo much a ſinner to be a double dealer: there's another.

Clo. Primo, ſecundo, tertio, is a good play, and the olde ſaying is, the third payes for all: the triplex ſir, is a good tripping meaſure, or the bells of S. Bennet ſir, may put you in minde, one, two, three.

Du. You can foole no more money out of mee at this throw: if you will let your Lady know I am here to ſpeak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.

Clo. Marry ſir, lul aby to your bountie till I come a-gen. I go ſir, but I would not haue you to thinke, that my deſire of hauing is the ſinne of couetouſneſſe: but as you ſay ſir, let your bounty take a nappe, I will awake it anon Exit

Enter Anthonio and Officers.

Vio. Here comes the man ſir, that did reſcue mee.

Du. That face of his I do remember well,
yet when I ſaw it laſt, it was beſmear'd
As blacke as Vulcan, in the ſmoake of warre:
A bawbling Veſſell was he Captaine of,
For ſhallow draught and bulke vnprizable,
With which ſuch ſcathfull grapple did he make,
With the moſt noble bottome of our Fleete,
That very enuy, and the tongue of loſſe
Cride fame and honor on him: What's the matter?

1 Offi. Orſino, this is that Anthonio
That tooke the Phœnix, and her fraught from Candy,
And this is he that did the Tiger boord
When your yong Nephew Titus loſt his legge;
Heere in the ſtreets, deſperate of ſhame and ſtate,
In priuate brabble did we apprehend him

Vio. He did me kindneſſe ſir, drew on my ſide,
But in concluſion put ſtrange ſpeech vpon me,
I know not what 'twas, but diſtraction.

Du. Notable Pyrate, thou ſalt-water Theeſe,
What fooliſh boldneſſe brought thee to their mercies,
Whom thou in termes ſo bloudie, and ſo deere
Haſt made thine enemies?

Ant. Orſino: Noble ſir,
Be pleas'd that I ſhake off theſe names you giue mee:
Anthonio neuer yet was Theeſe, or Pyrate,
Though I confeſſe, on baſe and ground enough
Orſino's enemie. A witcheraft drew me hither:
That moſt ingrateſull boy there by your ſide,
From the rude ſeas enrag'd and foamy mouth
Did I redeeme: a wracke paſt hope he was:
His life I gaue him, and did thereto adde
My loue without retention, or reſtraint,
All his in dedication. For his ſake,
Did I expoſe my ſelfe (pure for his loue)
Into the danger of this aduerſe Towne,
Drew to defend him, when he was beſet:
Where being apprehended, his falſe cunning
(Not meaning to partake with me in danger)
Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance,

And

And grew a twentie yeeres removed thing
While one would winke: denide me mine owne purse,
Which I had recommended to his vse,
Not halfe an houre before.
Vio. How can this be?
Du. When came he to this Towne?
Ant. To day my Lord: and for three months before,
No intrim, not a minutes vacancie,
Both day and night did we keepe companie.
Enter Olivia and attendants.
Du. Heere comes the Countesse, now heaven walkes on earth:
But for thee fellow, fellow thy words are madnesse,
Three monthes this youth hath tended vpon mee,
But more of that anon. Take him aside.
Ol. What would my Lord, but that he may not haue,
Wherein Olivia may seeme seruiceable?
Cesario, you do not keepe promise with me.
Vio. Madam:
Du. Gracious Olivia.
Ol. What do you say Cesario? Good my Lord.
Vio. My Lord would speake, my duttie hushes me.
Ol. If it be ought to the old tune my Lord,
It is as fat and fulsome to mine eare
As howling after Musicke.
Du. Still so cruell?
Ol. Still so constant Lord.
Du. What to perseuerancie? you vnciuill Ladie
To whose ingrate, and vnauspicious Altars
My soule the faithfull'st offrings haue breath'd out
That ere deuotion tender'd. What shall I do?
Ol Euen what it please my Lord, that shal become him
Du. Why should I not, (had I the heart to do it)
Like to th'Egyptian theefe, at point of death
Kill what I loue: (a sauage iealousie,
That sometime sauours nobly) but heare me this:
Since you to non-regardance cast my faith,
And that I partly know the instrument
That screwes me from my true place in your fauour:
Liue you the Marble-breasted Tirant still.
But this your Minion, whom I know you loue,
And whom, by heauen I sweare, I tender dearely,
Him will I teare out of that cruell eye,
Where he sits crowned in his masters spight
Come boy with me, my thoughts are ripe in mischiefe:
Ile sacrifice the Lambe that I do loue,
To spight a Rauens heart within a Doue
Vio. And I most iocund, apt, and willingly,
To do you rest, a thousand deaths would dye.
Ol. Where goes Cesario?
Vio. After him I loue,
More then I loue these eyes, more then my life,
More by all mores, then ere I shall loue wife.
If I do feigne, you witnesses aboue
Punish my life, for tainting of my loue.
Ol. Aye me detested, how am I beguil'd?
Vio. Who does beguile you? who does do you wrong?
Ol. Hast thou forgot thy selfe? Is it so long?
Call forth the holy Father.
Du. Come, away.
Ol. Whether my Lord? Cesario, Husband, stay.
Du. Husband?
Ol. I Husband. Can he that deny?
Du. Her husband, sirrah?
Vio. No my Lord, not.
Ol. Alas, it is the basenesse of thy feare,
That makes thee strangle thy propriety:
Feare not Cesario, take thy fortunes vp,
Be that thou know'st thou art, and then thou art
As great as that thou fear'st.
Enter Priest.
O welcome Father:
Father, I charge thee by thy reuerence
Heere to vnfold, though lately we intended
To keepe in darkenesse, what occasion now
Reueales before 'tis ripe, what thou dost know
Hath newly past, betweene this youth, and me,
Priest. A Contract of eternall bond of loue,
Confirm'd by mutuall ioynder of your hands,
Attested by the holy close of lippes,
Strengthned by enterchangement of your rings,
And all the Ceremonie of this compact
Seal'd in my function, by my testimony:
Since when, my watch hath told me, toward my graue
I haue trauail'd but two houres.
Du. O thou dissembling Cub: what wilt thou be
When time hath sow'd a grizzle on thy case?
Or will not else thy craft so quicke grow,
That thine owne trip shall be to thee vnawares:
Farewell, and take her, but direct thy feete,
Where thou, and I (henceforth) may neuer meet
Vio. My Lord, I do protest.
Ol. O do not sweare,
Hold little faith, though thou hast too much feare.

Enter Sir Andrew.
And. For the loue of God a Surgeon, send one presently to sir Toby
Ol. What's the matter?
And. H'as broke my head a-crosse, and has giuen Sir Toby a bloody Coxcombe too: for the loue of God your helpe, I had rather then forty pound I were at home.
Ol. Who has done this sir Andrew?
And. The Counts Gentleman, one Cesario: we tooke him for a Coward, but hee's the verie diuell incardinate
Du. My Gentleman Cesario?
And Od's lifelings heere he is: you broke my head for nothing, and that that I did, I was set on to do't by sir Toby
Vio. Why do you speake to me, I neuer hurt you:
you drew your sword vpon me without cause,
But I bespake you faire, and hurt you not

Enter Toby and Clowne.
And. If a bloody coxcombe be a hurt you haue hurt me: I think you set nothing by a bloody Coxecombe. Heere comes sir Toby halting, you shall heare more: but if he had not beene in drinke, hee would haue tickel'd you other gates then he did.
Du. How now Gentleman? how ist with you?
To. That's all one, has hurt me, and there's th end on't. Sot, didst see Dicke Surgeon, sot?
Clo. O he's drunke sir Toby an houre agone: his eyes were set at eight i'th morning.
To. Then he's a Rogue, and a passy measures pauyn: I hate a drunken rogue.
Ol. Away with him? Who hath made this hauocke with them?
And. Ile helpe you sir Toby, because we'll be drest together.
To. Will you helpe an Asse-head, and a coxcombe, & a knaue: a thin fac'd knaue, a gull?

Ol.

Get him to bed, and let his hurt be look'd too.

Enter Sebastian.

Seb. I am sorry Madam I have hurt your kinsman:
But had it beene the brother of my blood,
I must have done no lesse with wit and safety.
You throw a strange regard vpon me, and by that
I do perceiue it hath offended you:
Pardon me (sweet one) euen for the vowes
We made each other, but so late ago

Du. One face, one voice, one habit, and two persons,
A naturall Perspective, that is, and is not

Seb. Antonio? O my deere Antonio,
How have the houres rack'd, and tortur'd me,
Since I have lost thee?

Ant. Sebastian are you?

Seb. Fear'st thou that Antonio?

Ant. How have you made diuision of your selfe,
An apple cleft in two, is not more twin
Then these two creatures. Which is Sebastian?

Ol. Most wonderfull

Seb. Do I stand there? I never had a brother:
Nor can there be that Deity in my nature
Of heere, and euery where. I had a sister,
Whom the blinde waues and surges have deuour'd.
Of charity, what kinne are you to me?
What Countreyman? What name? What Parentage?

Vio Of Messaline: Sebastian was my Father,
Such a Sebastian was my brother too.
So went he suited to his watery tombe
If spirits can assume both forme and suite,
You come to fright vs.

Seb. A spirit I am indeed:
But am in that dimension grossely clad,
Which from the wombe I did participate.
Were you a woman, as the rest goes euen,
I should my teares let fall vpon your cheeke,
And say, thrice welcome drowned Viola.

Vio. My father had a moale vpon his brow.

Seb. And so had mine.

Vio. And dide that day when Viola from her birth
Had numbred thirteene yeares.

Seb. O that record is lively in my soule,
He finished indeed his mortall acte
That day that made my sister thirteene yeares.

Vio. If nothing lets to make vs happie both,
But this my masculine vsurp'd attyre.
Do not embrace me, till each circumstance,
Of place, time, fortune, do co-here and iumpe
That I am Viola, which to confirme,
Ile bring you to a Captaine in this Towne,
Where lye my maiden weeds: by whose gentle helpe,
I was preserv'd to serue this Noble Count.
All the occurrence of my fortune since
Hath beene betweene this Lady, and this Lord.

Seb. So comes it Lady, you have beene mistooke.
But Nature to her bias drew in that.
You would have bin contracted to a Maid,
Nor are you therein (by my life) deceiu'd,
You are betroth'd both to a maid and man.

Du. Be not amaz'd, right noble is his blood.
If this be so, as yet the glasse seemes true,
I shall have share in this most happy wracke,
Boy, thou hast said to me a thousand times,
Thou never should'st loue woman like to me.

Vio. And all those sayings, will I over sweare,
And all those swearings keepe as true in soule,
As doth that Orbed Continent, the fire,
That severs day from night.

Du. Give me thy hand,
And let me see thee in thy womans weedes.

Vio. The Captaine that did bring me first on shore
Hath my Maides garments: he vpon some Action
Is now in durance, at Maluolio's suite,
A Gentleman, and follower of my Ladies.

Ol. He shall inlarge him: fetch Maluolio hither,
And yet alas, now I remember me,
They say poore Gentleman, he's much distract.

Enter Clowne with a Letter, and Fabian.

A most extracting frensie of mine owne
From my remembrance, clearly banisht his.
How does he sirrah?

Cl. Truely Madam, he holds Belzebub at the staues end as well as a man in his case may do: has heere writ a letter to you, I should have given't you to day morning. But as a madmans Epistles are no Gospels, so it skilles not much when they are deliuer'd.

Ol Open't, and read it.

Clo. Looke then to be well edified, when the Foole deliuers the Madman. By the Lord Madam.

Ol. How now, art thou mad?

Clo. No Madam, I do but reade madnesse: and your Ladyship will have it as it ought to bee, you must allow Vox.

Ol. Prethee reade i'thy right wits.

Clo. So I do Madona: but to reade his right wits, is to reade thus: therefore, perpend my Princesse, and give eare.

Ol. Read it you, sirrah

Fab. Reads. By the Lord Madam, you wrong me, and the world shall know it: Though you have put mee into darkenesse, and given your drunken Cosine rule over me, yet have I the benefit of my senses as well as your Ladieship. I have your owne letter, that induced mee to the semblance I put on; with the which I doubt not, but to do my selfe much right, or you much shame: thinke of me as you please. I leave my duty a little vnthought of, and speake out of my injury. The madly vs'd Maluolio.

Ol. Did he write this?

Clo. I Madame

Du. This sauours not much of distraction

Ol. See him deliuer'd Fabian, bring him hither.
My Lord, so please you, these things further thought on,
To thinke me as well a sister, as a wife,
One day shall crowne th'alliance on't, so please you,
Heere at my house, and at my proper cost.

Du. Madam, I am most apt t'embrace your offer:
Your Master quits you: and for your service done him,
So much against the mettle of your sex,
So farre beneath your soft and tender breeding,
And since you call'd me Master, for so long:
Heere is my hand, you shall from this time bee
your Masters Mistris

Ol. A sister, you are she

Enter Maluolio.

Du. Is this the Madman?

Ol. I my Lord, this same: How now Maluolio?

Mal. Madam, you have done me wrong,
Notorious wrong.

Ol. Have I Maluolio? No.

Mal. Lady you have, pray you peruse that Letter.
You must not now denie it is your hand,
Write from it if you can, in hand, or phrase,

Or

Or say, tis not your seale, nor your inuention:
You can say none of this. Well, grant it then,
And tell me in the modestie of honor,
Why you haue giuen me such cleare lights of fauour,
Bad me come smiling and crosse-garter'd to you,
To put on yellow stockings, and to frowne
Vpon Sir Toby, and the lighter people
And acting this in an obedient hope,
Why haue you suffer'd me to be imprison'd,
Kept in a darke house, visited by the Priest,
And made the most notorious geck and gull,
That ere inuention play'd on? tell me why?
Ol. Alas Maluolio, this is not my writing,
Though I confesse much like the Character:
But out of question, 'tis Marias hand.
And now I do bethinke me, it was she
First told me thou wast mad; then cam'st in smiling,
And in such formes, which here were presupposd
Vpon thee in the Letter. Prethee be content,
This practice hath most shrewdly past vpon thee:
But when we know the graunds and authors of it,
Thou shalt be both the Plaintiffe and the Iudge
Of thine owne cause.
Fab. Good Madam, heare me speake,
And let no quarrell, nor no brauerie come,
Taint the condition of this present houre,
Which I haue wonder'd at. In hope it shall not,
Most freely I confesse, my selfe and Toby
Set this deuice against Maluolio here,
Vpon some stubborne and vncourteous parts
We had conceiued against him. Maria writ
The Letter, at sir Tobyes great importance,
In recompence whereof, he hath married her:
How with a sportfull malice it was followed,
May rather plucke on laughter then reuenge,
If that the iniuries be iustly weigh'd,
That haue on both sides past.
Ol. Alas poore Foole, how haue they baffel'd thee!
Clo. Why some are borne great, some atchieue greatnesse, and some haue greatnesse throwne vpon them. I was one sir, in this Enterlude, one sir Topas sir, but that's all one. By the Lord Foole, I am not mad: but do you remember, Madam, why laugh you at such a barren rascall; and you smile not he's gagg'd: and thus the whirligigge of time, brings in his reuenges.
Mal. Ile be reuenged on the whole packe of you?
Ol. He hath been most notoriously abus'd.
Du. Pursue him, and entreate him to a peace.
He hath not told vs of the Captaine yet,
When that is knowne, and golden time consents
A solemne Combination shall be made
Of our deere soules. Meane time sweet sir,
We will not part from hence. Cesario come
(For so you shall be while you are a man)
But when in other habites you are seene,
Orsino's Mistris, and his fancies Queene. Exeunt

Clowne sings.

When that I was and a little tine boy,
with hey, ho, the winde and the raine
A foolish thing was but a toy,
for the raine it raineth euery day.

But when I came to mans estate,
with hey ho &c
Gates Knaues and Theeues men shut their gate,
for the raine &c.

But when I came alas to wiue,
with hey ho &c.
By swaggering could I neuer thriue,
for the raine &c.

But when I came vnto my bed,
with hey ho &c
With toſpotes still had drunken heades,
for the raine &c.

A great while ago the world begon,
hey ho, &c.
But that's all one, our Play is done,
and we'l striue to please you euery day.

FINIS.

The Winters Tale.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Camillo and Archidamus.

Arch. If you shall chance (Camillo) to visit Bohemia, on the like occasion whereon my Services are now on foot, you shall see (as I have said) great difference betwixt our Bohemia and your Sicilia.

Cam. I think this coming Summer, the King of Sicilia means to pay Bohemia the Visitation, which he justly owes him.

Arch. Wherein our Entertainment shall shame vs we will be left to our Losses, for indeed—

Cam. Beseech you—

Arch. Verily I speake it in the freedome of my knowledge: we cannot with such magnificence—in so rare—I know not what to say.—We will give you sleepe Drinkes, that your Senses (vnintelligent of our insufficiency) may, though they cannot praise vs, as little accuse vs.

Cam. You pay a great deale too deare for what's given freely.

Arch. Believe me, I speake as my vnderstanding instructs me, and as mine honesty puts it to vtterance.

Cam. Sicilia cannot shew himselfe ouer-kind to Bohemia. They were trayn'd together in their Childhoods; and there rooted betwixt them then such an affection, which cannot choose but branch now. Since their more mature Dignities, and Royall Necessities, made separation of their Societie, their Encounters (though not Personall) have been Royally attorneyed with enterchange of Gifts, Letters, louing Embassies, that they have seem'd to be together, though absent: shooke hands, as ouer a Vast, and embraced, as it were, from the ends of opposed Winds. The Heauens continue their Loues.

Arch. I thinke there is not in the World, either Malice or Matter to alter it. You have an vnspeakable comfort of your young Prince Mamillius: it is a gentleman of the greatest Promise, that euer came into my Note.

Cam. I very well agree with you in the hopes of him: it is a gallant Child, one, that indeed Physicks the Subiect, makes old Hearts fresh: they that went on Crutches ere he was borne, desire yet their Life, to see him a Man.

Arch. Would they else be content to die?

Cam. Yes; if there were no other excuse, why they should desire to liue.

Arch. If the King had no Sonne, they would desire to liue on Crutches till he had one.

Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Leontes, Hermione, Mamillius, Polixenes, Camillo.

Pol. Nine Changes of the Watry-Starre hath been
The Shepheards Note, since we have left our Throne
Without a Burthen: Time as long again
Would be fill'd vp (my Brother) with our Thanks;
And yet we should, for perpetuitie,
Goe hence in debt: And therefore, like a Cypher
(Yet standing in rich place, I may) multiply
With one "I thank you" many thousandfolds more,
That goe before it.

Leo. Stay your Thanks a while,
And pay them when you part.

Pol. Sir, that's to morrow.
I am question'd by my fears, of what may chance,
Or breed vpon our absence, that may blow
No sneaping Winds at home, to make vs say,
This is put forth too truly. Besides, I haue stay'd
To tire your Royalty.

Leo. We are tougher, Brother,
Than you can put vs to't.

Pol. No longer stay.

Leo. One Seue'night longer.

Pol. Very sooth, to morrow.

Leo. We'll part the time betweene's then: and in that
Ile no gainesay it.

Pol. Press me not (beseech you) so.
There is no Tongue that moues, none, none i'th' World
So soone as yours, could win me: so it should now,
Were there necessitie in your request, although
'Twere needfull I denyed it. My Affaires
Doe euen drag me homeward: which to hinder,
Were (in your Loue) a Whip to me: my stay,
To you a Charge, and Trouble: to saue both,
Farewell (our Brother.)

Leo. Tongue-tied our Queene? speake you.

Her. I had thought (Sir) to haue held my peace, vntill
You had drawne Oathes from him, not to stay. You (Sir)
Charge him too coldly. Tell him, you are sure
All in Bohemia's well: this satisfaction,
The by-gone day proclaym'd. Say this to him,
He's beat from his best ward.

Leo. Well said, Hermione.

Her. To tell, he longs to see his Sonne, were strong:
But let him say so then, and let him goe;
But let him sweare so, and he shall not stay,
We'll thwack him hence with Distaffes.
Yet of your Royall presence (Ile aduenture
The borrow of a Weeke. When at Bohemia
You take my Lord, Ile giue him my Commission,
To let him there a Moneth, behind the Gest
Prefix'd for's parting: yet (good deed, Leontes,
I loue thee not a iarre o'th' Clock, behind

What Lady she her Lord. You'le stay?
Pol. No, Madame.
Her. Nay, but you will?
Pol. I may not verely.
Her. Verely?
You put me off with limber Vowes: but I,
Though you would seek t'vnsphere the Stars with Oaths,
Should yet say (Sir) no going. Verely
You shall not goe: a Lady's Verely'is
As potent as a Lord's. Will you goe yet?
Force me to keepe you as a Prisoner,
Not like a Guest: so you shall pay your Fees
When you depart, and save your Thanks. How say you?
My Prisoner? or my Guest? by your dread Verely,
One of them you shall be.
Pol. Your Guest then, Madame:
To be your Prisoner, should import offending;
Which is for me, lesse easie to commit,
Then you to punish.
Her. Not your Gaoler then,
But your kind Hostesse. Come, Ile question you
Of my Lord's Tricks, and yours, when you were Boyes.
You were pretty Lordings then?
Pol. We were (faire Queene)
Two Lads, that thought there was no more behind,
But such a day to morrow, as to day,
And to be Boy eternall.
Her. Was not my Lord
The verier Wag o'th' two?
Pol. We were as twyn'd Lambs, that did frisk i'th' Sun,
And bleat the one at th'other: what we chang'd,
Was innocence for innocence: we knew not
The Doctrine of ill-doing, nor dream'd
That any did. Had we pursu'd that life,
And our weake Spirits ne're been higher rear'd
With stronger blood, we should haue answer'd Heauen
Boldly, not guiltie; the Imposition clear'd,
Hereditarie ours.
Her. By this we gather
You haue tript since.
Pol. O my most sacred Lady,
Temptations haue since then been borne to's: for
In those vnfledg'd dayes, was my Wife a Girle;
Your precious selfe had then not crost's the eyes
Of my young Play-fellow.
Her. Grace to boot.
Of this make no conclusion, least you say
Your Queene and I are Deuils: yet goe on,
Th'offences we haue made you doe, wee'le answere,
If you first sinn'd with vs: and that with vs
You did continue fault; and that you slipt not
With any, but with vs.
Leo. Is he woon yet?
Her. Her'le stay (my Lord.)
Leo. At my request, he would not:
Hermione (my dearest) thou never spoak'st
To better purpose.
Her. Never?
Leo. Never, but once.
Her. What? haue I twice said well? when was't before?
I prethee tell me: cram's with praise, and make's
As fat as tame things: One good deed, dying tongueleſſe,
Slaughters a thousand waiting vpon that.
Our praises are our Wages. You may ride's
With one soft Kisse a thousand Furlongs, ere
With Spur we heat an Acre. But to th' Goale:
My last good deed, was to entreat his stay.
What was my first? it has an elder Sister,
Or I mistake you: O, would her Name were Grace,
But once before I spoke to th' purpose? when?
Nay, let me haue't: I long
Leo. Why, that was when
Three crabbed Monethshad sowr'd themselues to death,
Ere I could make thee open thy white Hand:
And clap thy selfe my Loue; then didst thou vtter,
I am yours for euer.
Her. 'Tis Grace indeed.
Why lo-you now; I haue spoke to th' purpose twice.
The one, for euer earn'd a Royall Husband,
Th'other, for some while a Friend.
Leo. Too hot, too hot:
To mingle friendship farre, is mingling bloods.
I haue Tremor Cordis on me: my heart dances,
But not for ioy; not ioy. This Entertainment
May a free face put on: derive a Liberty
From Heartinesse, from Bountie, fertile Bosome,
And well become the Agent: 't may; I grant:
But to be paddling Palmes, and pinching Fingers,
As now they are, and making practis'd Smiles
As in a Looking-Glasse; and then to sigh, as 'twere
The Mort o'th' Deere: oh, that is entertainment
My Bosome likes not, nor my Browes. Mamillius,
Art thou my Boy?
Mam. I, my good Lord.
Leo. I'fecks
Why that's my Bawcock: what? has't smutch'd thy Nose?
They say it is a Copy out of mine. Come Captaine,
We must be neat; not neat, but cleanly, Captaine:
And yet the Steere, the Heyfer, and the Calfe,
Are all call'd Neat. Still Virginalling
Vpon his Palme? How now (you wanton Calfe)
Art thou my Calfe?
Mam. Yes, if you will (my Lord.)
Leo. Thou want'st a rough pash, & the shoots that I haue
To be full, like me: yet they say we are Almost as like as Egges; Women say so,
(That will say any thing.) But were they false
As o're-dy'd Blacks, as Wind, as Waters; false
As Dice are to be wish'd, by one that fixes
No borne 'twixt his and mine; yet were it true,
To say this Boy were like me. Come (Sir Page)
Looke on me with your Welkin eye: sweet Villaine,
Most dear'st, my Collop: Can thy Dam, may't be
Affection? thy Intention stabs the Center.
Thou do'st make possible things not so held,
Communicat'st with Dreames (how can this be?)
With what's vnreall: thou coactiue art,
And fellow'st nothing. Then 'tis very credent,
Thou may'st co-ioyne with something, and thou do'st,
(And that beyond Commission) and I find it,
(And that to the infection of my Braines,
And hardning of my Browes.)
Pol. What means Sicilia?
Her. He something seemes vnsettled.
Pol. How? my Lord?
Leo. What cheere? how is't with you, best Brother?
Her. You look as if you held a Brow of much distraction.
Are you mou'd (my Lord?)
Leo. No, in good earnest.
How sometimes Nature will betray its folly?
Its tendernesse? and make it selfe a Pastime
To harder bosomes? Looking on the Lynes

Of

Of my Boyes face, me thoughts I did recoyle
Twentie three yeeres, and saw my selfe vn-breech'd,
In my greene Velure Coat, my Dagger muzzel'd,
Lest I (that am his Mother) should publish him
(As Ornaments oft dares) too dangerous:
How like (me thought) I then was to this Kercher,
But Sir, good me-thinkes you was then Maid-like,
Wanton, apish, and blushing to the eye,
Hot, hasty, like a Feauer, to and fro,
Fearefully both cold and feuerous.
Whether this Practice have some truth in it,
I doe not know: but I obserue in those
That haue too much of Boldnesse in their Youth,
Or too much Shame, (which seldome comes alone)
Euen to their Childrens Childhood.
How now Boy?
Mam. I am like you say.
Leo. Come Sir Page,
Looke on me with your Welkin eye: sweet Villaine,
Most dear'st, my Collop: Can thy Dam? may't be?
Affection! thy Intention stabs the Center:
Thou do'st make possible things not so held,
Communicat'st with Dreames; (how can this be?)
With what's vnreall: thou coactiue Art,
And fellow'st nothing: then 'tis very credent
Thou may'st co-joyne with something: and thou do'st,
(And that beyond Commission) and I find it,
(And that to the infection of my Braines
And hardning of my Browes.)
Pol. What meane you Sir,
That you thus heape vpon your Wife these thoughts?
Leo. Why, Happily you heard too: on the instant
She drew her Lippe aside: was not that done
To any Eare that hearkned? Feele your owne Talke,
Speake this to your famous Affection,
Affection! that dispenses with it selfe,
Power no Motion but it: Not to my Sonne,
Nor any of his Creatures, but my Wife,
Hide full Sayle to her Lord I'th Dungeon,
Your Mothers Office, and her Name there?
Call my sweet Boy, Infant, Trifle, Jeast,
Footboy, Thumbe, or Ring, might she play Saint George,
And send vp Dragons as faire as Katherine,
Be shooting Gallants? Fie vpon't, foh, foh!
Mothers, and Fathers know all these locks:
Not what is spoke, thought, done, at these light howres:
Slackens and stirs the Nature of her Slippe.
'Tis warpt. Hearke Polixenes, something it is
That does vndoe my Credit, see the Game is vp.
Cam. I had drunke, but for the great Occasion
Of speaking my amazement, with that Businesse
I could haue time to looke on. Good my Lord,
How haue you dream'd since we parted? Allow
My breathing that hath vrg'd it selfe to know,
The Conference was sluttish?
Leo. Futler, thou dar'st not
Vndresse me: Come, I know thou dar'st not: Do:
Dar'st thou not Antick, say I touch Bohemia,
And touch my Wife, my Bed, my Throne, imbrace
Corruptibly? Is shee not expos'd to Dust?
Am I not free? Stand I not Enough before
Polixenes? Beare me to him.
Cam. Sir, my Lord,
Arrest your Fancy: Almost from my Payment,
Ere I could make thee open thy white Hand,
And clap thyselfe my Loue: then didst thou vtter
I am yours for euer.
Cam. It is Fancy in him,
And call it Fancy, or what thing you will,
The Issue is but seriously bad enough,
And that you might well enough endure,
Had I fair Play: and our Friends
You'd pickt a hundred Seuerall Plots for Me:
Giuen me Scope, and Cue: but now all's marr'd,
As you shall feele: doing it, in Dread, as Gaolers
To hurry me to my Graue: but know (my Lord)
If euer I were wilfully dishonest,
Hauing their Offer, and my Time prepar'd,
Which would haue sham'd their Sweetnesse, my Affection,
And haue nam'd it, that would: vnto the vildest
Light Wenches Reputation: I did know it,
And my Reward was sure: and my Truth knowne
Off and on at Pleasure: Pleasure, which doe lye
Euen when they are tasted, as a Blanket
Hot in the Sun, Coole to be laid vpon,
And greeting well, is nothing.
Why then should I hazard for it, more than for
My Dyet, my Repose, my Life, which all depend
On your displeasure? And suppose, that vnarm'd Sir
Haue not my Life for Forfeit, euery houre
Of my whole Time here, assures it not.
Now, no Conspiracie, Treason, Murder,
Or in Thought, can be laid to me, nor any
Exception, that conceales it from me.
Leo. Ha?
Cam. Stayes here longer.
Leo. I, but why?
Cam. To satisfie your Highnesse, and the Entreaties
Of our most gracious Mistris.
Leo. Satisfie?
The Entreaties of your Mistris? Satisfie?
Let that suffice. I haue trusted thee Camillo
With all the neerest things to my Heart, as well
My Chamber-Councels, as my Hearts Secrets,
Hast pluck'd my Heart from my Breast, left the wounds bleeding,
Which must try with some losse.
Cam. 'Tis good Lords.
Leo. First thy Father
Call him a Flatterer, haue not Courts enough
To haue that Truth supply'd?
Affection! thy Intention stabs the Center:
Thou do'st make possible things not so held,
Communicat'st with Dreames; (how can this be?)

Cam. 'Tis good Lords.
Leo. First thy Father
Call him a Flatterer, haue not Courts enough
To haue that Truth supply'd?

My Wife a ſlipperie? If thou wilt confeſſe,
Or elſe be impudently negatiue,
To haue nor Eyes, nor Eares, nor Thought, then ſay
My Wife's a Holy-Horſe-deſerues a Name
As ranke as any Flax-Wench, that puts-to
Before her troth-plight: ſay't, and iuſtify't.
Cam. I would not be a ſtander-by, to heare
My Soueraigne Miſtreſſe clouded ſo, without
My preſent vengeance taken: ſhrew my heart,
You neuer ſpoke what did become you leſſe
Then this, which to reiterate, were ſin
As deepe as that, though true.
Leo. Is whiſpering nothing?
Is leaning Cheeke to Cheeke? is meeting Noſes?
Kiſſing with inſide Lip? ſtopping the Cariere
Of Laughter, with a ſigh? (a Note infallible
Of breaking Honeſtie:) horſing foot on foot?
Skulking in corners? wiſhing Clocks more ſwift?
Houres, Minutes? Noone, Mid-night? and all Eyes
Blind with the Pin and Web, but theirs; theirs only,
That would vnſeene be wicked? Is this nothing?
Why then the World, and all that's in't, is nothing,
The couering Skie is nothing: Bohemia nothing,
My Wife is nothing, nor Nothing haue theſe Nothings,
If this be nothing.
Cam. Good my Lord, be cur'd
Of this diſeaſed Opinion, and betimes,
For 'tis moſt dangerous.
Leo. Say it be, 'tis true.
Cam. No, no, my Lord.
Leo. It is: you lye, you lye:
I ſay thou lyeſt Camillo, and I hate thee,
Pronounce thee a groſſe Lowt, a mindleſſe Slaue,
Or elſe a hoouering Temporizer, that
Canſt with thine eyes at once ſee good and euill,
Inclining to them both: were my Wiues Liuer
Infected (as her life) ſhe would not liue
The running of one Glaſſe.
Cam. Who does infect her?
Leo. Why he that wears her like her Medull, hanging
About his neck, Bohemia: who, if I
Had ſeruants true about me, that bare eyes
To ſee alike mine Honor, as their Profits,
(Their owne particular Thriftes) they would do that
Which ſhould vndoo more doing: I, and thou
His Cup-bearer, whom I from meane eſtate
Haue bred vp at mine owne Table, who may'ſt ſee
I am, ay, I'le ſpeake it, in a Free Opinion:
Haſt clean my Bed, I haue reaſon to be-ſpice a Cup,
To giue mine Enemy a laſting Winke.
Which Draught to me, were coſtiue as
Cam. Sir (my Lord)
I could do this, and that with no raſh Potion,
But with a ling'ring Dram that ſhould not worke
Maliciouſly, like Poiſon. But I cannot Beleeue this Crack to be in my dread Miſtreſſe
(So ſouereignely being Honorable.)
I haue lou'd thee,
Leo. Make that thy queſtion, and goe rot:
Do't not thinke I am ſtaddy, to vnfold,
Diſappoint my ſelfe in mine vexation?
Sully the purity and whiteneſſe of my Sheetes
(Which to preſerue, is Sleepe; which being ſpotted,
Is Goades, Thornes, Nettles, Tayles of Waſpes)
Giue ſcandall to the blood o'th' Prince, my Sonne,
(Who I doe thinke is mine, and loue as mine)
Without ripe moouing to't? Would I doe this?
Could man ſo blench?
Cam. I muſt beleeue you (Sir)
I doe, and will fetch off Bohemia for't:
Prouided, that when hee's remou'd, your Highneſſe
Will take againe your Queene, as yours at firſt,
Euen for your Sonnes ſake, and thereby for ſealing
The Iniurie of Tongues, in Courts and Kingdomes
Known, and ally'd to yours.
Leo. Thou do'ſt aduiſe me,
Euen ſo as I mine owne courſe haue ſet downe:
Ile giue no blemiſh to her Honor, none.
Cam. My Lord,
Goe then; and with a countenance as cleare
As Friendſhip weares at Feaſts, keepe with Bohemia,
And with your Queene: I am his Cup-bearer,
If from me he haue wholeſome Beueridge,
Account me not your Seruant.
Leo. This is all:
Do't and thou haſt the one halfe of my heart;
Do't not, thou ſplit'ſt thine owne.
Cam. Ile do't, my Lord.
Leo. I will ſeeme friendly, as thou haſt aduis'd me. Exit.
Cam. O miſerable Lady. But for me,
What caſe ſtand I in? I muſt be the poyſoner
Of good Polixenes, and my ground to do't,
Is the obedience to a Maſter, one,
Who in rebellion with himſelfe will haue
All that are his, ſo too. To do this deed,
Promotion followes. If I could find example
Of thouſands that had ſtruck anointed Kings,
And flouriſh'd after, I'd not do't. But ſince
Nor Brand, nor Starre, nor Story, nor Parchment beares not one,
Let Villanie it ſelfe forſweare't. I muſt
Forſake the Court: to do't, or no, is certaine
To me a breake-neck. Happy Starre raigne now,
Here comes Bohemia. Enter Florizell.
Pol. This is ſtrange: Me thinkes
My fauor here begins to warpe. Not ſpeake?
Good day Camillo.
Cam. Hayle moſt Royall Sir.
Pol. What is the Newes i'th' Court?
Cam. None rare (my Lord.)
Pol. The King hath on him ſuch a countenance,
As he had loſt ſome Prouince, and a Region
Lou'd as he loues himſelfe: euen now I met him
With cuſtomarie complement, when for
Wot'ſt thou what mou'd his eyes to't? contrary, not calling
A Lord of ſuch deſert, nodded for me, and
So leaues me, to conſider what is breeding,
That changes thus his Manners.
Cam. I dare not know (my Lord.)
Pol. How, dare not? doe not? doe you know, and dare not
Be intelligent to me, 'tis thereabouts:
For to your ſelfe, what you doe know, you muſt,
And cannot ſay, you dare not. Good Camillo,
Your chang'd complexions are to me a Mirror,
Which ſhewes me mine chang'd too: for I muſt be
A partie in this alteration, finding
My ſelfe thus alter'd with't.
Cam. There is a ſickneſſe
Which puts ſome of vs in diſtemper, but
I cannot name the Diſeaſe, and it may be caught
Of you, that yet are well.
Pol. How caught of me?
Make me not ſighted like the Baſiliſque.

I haue

I haue look'd on thousands, who haue sped the better
By my regard, but kill'd none so: Camillo,
As you are certainely a Gentleman thereto
Clerke-like experienc'd, which no lesse adornes
Our Gentry, then our Parents Noble Names,
In whose successe we are gentle: I beseech you,
If you know ought which do's behoue my knowledge,
Thereof to be inform'd, imprison't not
In ignorant concealement
Cam. I may not answere
Pol. A Sickenesse caught of me, and yet I well?
I must be answer'd. Do'st thou heare Camillo,
I conjure thee, by all the parts of man,
Which Honor do's acknowledge, whereof the least
Is not this Suit of mine, that thou declare
What incidency thou do'st ghesse of harme
In creeping toward me? how farre off, how neere,
Which way to be preuented if to me.
If not, how best to beare it.
Cam. Sir, I will tell you,
Since I am charg'd in Honor, and by him
That I thinke Honorable: therefore marke my counsaile,
Which must be euen as swiftly followed as
I meane to vtter it; or both your selfe, and me,
Cry lost, and so good night.
Pol. On, good Camillo.
Cam. I am appointed him to murther you.
Pol. By whom, Camillo?
Cam. By the King.
Pol. For what?
Cam. He thinkes, nay with all confidence he sweares,
As he had seen't, or beene an Instrument
To vice you to't, that you haue touch't his Queene
Forbiddenly
Pol. Oh then, my best blood turne
To an infected Gelly, and my Name
Be yok'd with his, that did betray the Best:
Turne then my freshest Reputation to
A sauour, that may strike the dullest Nostrill
Where I arriue, and my approch be shun'd,
Nay hated too, worse then the great'st Infection
That ere was heard, or read
Cam. Sweare his thought ouer
By each particular Starre in Heauen, and
By all their Influences; you may as well
Forbid the Sea for to obey the Moone,
As (or by Oath) remoue, or (Countaile) shake
The Fabrick of his Folly, whose foundation
Is pyl'd vpon his Faith, and will continue
The standing of his Body
Pol. How should this grow?
Cam. I know not: but I am sure 'tis safer to Auoid what's growne, then question how 'tis borne.
If therefore you dare trust my honestie,
That lyes enclosed in this Trunke, which you
Shall beare along impawed, away to Night,
Your Followers I will whisper to the Businesse,
And will by twoes, and threes, at seuerall Posternes,
Clearе them o'th' Citie: For my selfe, Ile put
My fortunes to your seruice (which are here
By this discouerie lost.) Be not vncertaine,
For by the honor of my Parents, I
Haue vttred Truth: which if you seeke to proue,
I dare not stand by; nor shall you be safer,
Then one condemned by the Kings owne mouth.
Thereon his Execution sworne.

Pol. I doe beleeue thee:
I saw his heart in's face. Giue me thy hand,
Be Pilot to me, and thy places shall Stil neighbour mine. My Ships are ready, and
My people did expect my hence departure
Two dayes agoe. This Iealousie
Is for a precious Creature: as shee's rare
Must it be great, and, as his Person's mightie,
Must it be violent, and, as he do's conceiue,
He is dishonor'd by a man, which euer
Profess'd to him: why his Reuenges must
In that be made more bitter. Feare ore-shades me
Good Expedition be my friend, and comfort
The gracious Queene part of his Theame, but nothing
Of his ill-ta'ne suspition. Come Camillo,
I will respect thee as a Father if
Thou bear'st my thoughts not hence: Let vs auoid
Cam. It is in mine authority to command
The Keyes of all the Posternes: Please your Highnesse
To take the vrgent houre. Come Sir, away.
Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Hermione, Mamillius, Ladies, Leontes, Antigonus, Lords.

Her. Take the Boy to you: he so troubles me,
'Tis past enduring.
Lady. Come (my gracious Lord)
Shall I be your Playfellow?
Mam. No, I'le none of you.
Lady. Why, my sweet Lord?
Mam. You'le kisse me hard, and speake to me, as if I were a Baby still. I loue you better.
2. Lady. And why so, my Lord?
Mam. Not for because
Your Browes are blacker (yet black-browes they say
Become some Women best, so that there be not Too much hayre there, but in a Semicircle,
Or a halfe-Moone, made with a Pen.)
2. Lady. Who taught 'this'?
Mam. I learn'd it out of Womens faces: pray now,
What colour are your eye-browes?
Lady. Blew (my Lord)
Mam. Nay, that's a mock. I haue seene a Ladies Nose
That has been blew, but not her eye-browes.
Lady. Harke ye,
The Queene (your Mother) rounds apace: we shall Present our seruices to a fine new Prince
One of these dayes, and then you'l wanton with vs,
If we would haue you.
2. Lady. She's spread of late
Into a goodly Bulke: good time encounter her!
Her. What wisdome stirs amongst you? Come Sir now
I am for you againe: 'Pray you keepe him,
And tell's a Tale.
Mam. Merry, or sad, shal't be?
Her. As merry as you will.
Mam. A sad Tale's best for Winter:
I haue one of Sprights, and Goblins.
Her. Let's haue that, good Sir.
Come on, sit downe: come on, and doe your best,
To fright me with your Sprights: you're powrefull at it.
Cham. There

Mam. There was a man.
Her. Nay,come sit downe: then on.
Mam. Dwelt by a Church-yard: I will tell it softly,
Yond Crickets shall not heare it.
Her. Come on then,and giu't me in mine eare.
Leon Was hee met there? his Traine? Camillo with him?
Lord. Behind the tuft of Pines I met them,never Saw I men scowre so on their way. I eyed them
Euen to their Ships.
Leo. How blest am I
In my iust Censure? in my true Opinion?
Alack,for lesser knowledge,how accurs'd,
In being so blest? There may be in the Cup
A Spider steep'd,and one may drinke; depart,
And yet partake no venome (for his knowledge
Is not infected) but if one present
Th'abhor'd Ingredient to his eye make knowne
How he hath drunke,he cracks his gorge, his sides
With violent Hefts: I haue drunke,and seene the Spider.
Camillo was his helpe in this,his Pandar:
There is a Plot against my Life,my Crowne;
All's true that is mistrusted: that false Villaine,
Whom I employ'd,was pre-employ'd by him.
He has discouer'd my Designe,and I
Remaine a pinch'd Thing; yea,a very Trick
For them to play at will: how came the Posternes
So easily open?
Lord. By his great authority,
Which often hath no lesse preuail'd,then so,
On your command.
Leo. I know't too well.
Giue me the Boy, I am glad you did not nurse him:
Though he do's beare some signes of me, yet you
Haue too much blood in him.
Her. What is this? Sport?
Leo. Beare the Boy hence,he shall not come about her,
Away with him: and let her sport her selfe
With that shee's big-with,for 'tis Polixenes
Has made thee swell thus.
Her But I'd say he had not;
And Ile be sworne you would beleeue my saying,
How e're you leane to th'Nay-ward.
Leo You (my Lords
Looke on her,marke her well; be but about
To say shee is goodly Lady,and
The iustice of your hearts will thereto adde
'Tis pitty shee's not honest: Honorable;
Praise her but for this her without-dore-Forme,
(Which on my faith deserues high speech) and straight
The Shrug,the Hum,or Ha,(these Petty-brands
That Calumnie doth vse. Oh,I am out,
That Mercy do's, for Calumnie will seare
Vertue it selfe: these Shrugs,these Hum's,and Ha's,
When you haue said shee's goodly,come betweene,
Ere you can say shee's honest: But be't knowne
(From him that has most cause to grieue it should be)
Shee's an Adultresse
Her Should a Villaine say so,
(The most replenish'd Villaine in the World)
He were as much more Villaine: you (my Lord)
Do but mistake.
Leo. You haue mistooke (my Lady)
Polixenes to Leontes. O thou thing
(Which I'le not call a Creature of thy place,
Least Barbarism (making me the precedent)
Should a like Language vse to all degrees,
And mannerly distinguishment leaue out,
Betwixt the Prince and Begger:) I haue said
Shee's an Adultresse, I haue said with whom:
More; shee's a Traytor,and Camillo is
A Federarie with her,and one that knowes
What she should shame to know her selfe,
But with her most vild Principall. that shee's
A Bed-swaruer,euen as bad as those
That Vulgars giue bold'st Titles; I,and priuy
To this their late escape.
Her. No (by my life)
Priuy to none of this: how will this grieue you,
When you shall come to clearer knowledge,that
You thus haue publish'd me? Gentle my Lord,
You scarce can right me throughly,then,to say
You did mistake.
Leo. No: if I mistake
In those Foundations which I build vpon,
The Centre is not bigge enough to beare
A Schoole-Boyes Top. Away with her,to Prison
He who shall speake for her,is a farre-off guiltie,
But that he speakes
Her. There's some ill Planet raignes,
I must be patient,till the Heauens looke
With an aspect more fauorable. Good my Lords,
I am not prone to weeping (as our Sex
Commonly are) the want of which vaine dew
Perchance shall dry your pities: but I haue
That honorable Griefe lodg'd here,which burnes
Worse then Teares drowne: beseech you all (my Lords)
With thoughts so qualified,as your Charities
Shall best instruct you,measure me; and so
The Kings will be performed.
Leo. Shall I be heard?
Her Who is't that goes with me? beseech your Highnes
My Women may be with me,for you see
My plight requires it. Do not weepe (mine Infants)
For thee to-day a Mother,and hereafter
Hard-hearted Father: poore Babes,
As I come out: this Action I now goe on,
Is for my better grace. Adieu (my Lord)
I neuer wish'd to see you sorry, now
I trust I shall: my Women come,you haue leaue.
Leo. Go,do our bidding hence.
Lord. Beseech your Highnesse call the Queene againe
Antig Be certaine what you do(Sir)least your Iustice
Proue violence, in the which three great ones suffer,
Your Selfe,your Queene,your Sonne.
Lord. For her (my Lord)
I dare my life lay downe,and will do't (Sir)
Please you t'accept it,that the Queene is spotlesse
I'th'eyes of Heauen, and to you (I meane
In this,which you accuse her.)
Antig. If it prone
Shee's otherwise, Ile keepe my Stables where
I lodge my Wife, Ile goe in couples with her:
Then when I feele,and see her,no farther trust her:
For euery inch of Woman in the World,
I,euery dram of Womans flesh is false,
If shee be.
Leo Hold your peaces.
Lord. Good my Lord.
Antig. It is for you we speake,not for our selues:
You are abus'd,and by some putter on,
That will be damn'd for't: would I knew the Villaine,

I would

I would Land-damme him : be ſhe honor-flaw'd,
I haue three daughters : the eldeſt is eleuen;
The ſecond, and the third, nine: and ſome fiue :
If this proue true, they'l pay for't. By mine Honor
I'le geld 'em all : fourteene they ſhall not ſee
To bring falſe generations : they are co-heyres,
And I had rather glib my ſelfe, then they Should not produce faire iſſue
Leo. Ceaſe, no more
You ſmell this buſineſſe with a ſence as cold
As is a dead-mans noſe : but I do ſee't and feel't,
As you feele doing thus : and ſee withall
The Inſtruments that feele.
Antig. If it be ſo,
We needs no graue to burie honeſty
There's not a graine of it, the face to ſweeten
Of the whole dungy-earth.
Leo. What? lacke I credit?
Lord. I had rather you did lacke then I (my Lord)
Vpon this ground : and more it would content me
To haue her Honor true, then your ſuſpition
Be blam'd for't how you might
Leo. Why what needs we
Commune with you of this? but rather follow
Our forceſull inſtigation? Our prerogatiue
Cals not your Counſailes, but our naturall goodneſſe
Imparts this : which if you, or ſtupified,
Or ſeeming ſo, in ſkill, cannot, or will not
Reliſh a truth, like vs : informe your ſelues,
We need no more of your aduice : the matter,
The loſſe, the gaine, the ord'ring on't,
Is all properly ours
Antig. And I wiſh (my Liege)
You had only in your ſilent iudgement tride it,
Without more ouerture.
Leo. How could that be?
Either thou art moſt ignorant by age,
Or thou wer't borne a foole : Camillo's flight
Added to their Familiarity
Which was as grоſſe, as euer touch'd conieCture,
That lack'd ſight onely, nought for approbation
But onely ſeeing, all other circumſtances
Made vp to'th deed) doth puſh-on this proceeding.
Yet, for a greater confirmation
(For in an Acte of this importance, 'twere
Moſt pitteous to be wilde) I haue diſpatch'd in poſt,
To ſacred Delphos, to Apollo's Temple,
Cleomines and Dion, whom you know
Of ſtuff'd-ſufficiency: Now, from the Oracle
They will bring all, whoſe ſpirituall counſaile had Shall ſtop or ſpurre me. Haue I done well?
Lord. Well done (my Lord.)
Leo. Though I am ſatisfide, and need no more
Then what I know, yet ſhall the Oracle
Giue reſt to th' mindes of others; ſuch as he Whoſe ignorant credulitie, will not Come vp to th' truth. So haue we thought it good
From our free perſon, ſhe ſhall be conſtraine,
Leaſt that the treachery of the two, fled hence,
Be left her to performe. Come follow vs,
We are to ſpeake in publique : for this buſineſſe
Will raiſe vs all.
Antig. To ſlaughter, as I take it,
If the good truth, were knowne Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Paulina, a Gentleman, Gaoler, Emilia.
Paul. The Keeper of the priſon, call to him
Let him haue knowledge who I am. Good Lady,
No Court in Europe is too good for thee,
What doſt thou then in priſon? Now good Sir,
You know me, do you not?
Gao. For a worthy Lady,
And one, who much I honour
Paul. Pray you then,
Conduct me to the Queene
Gao. I may not (Madam)
To the contrary I haue expreſſe commandment.
Paul. Here's ado, to locke vp honeſty & honour from
Th' acceſſe of gentle viſitors. Is't lawfull pray you
To ſee her Women? Any of them? Emilia
Gao. So pleaſe you (Madam)
To put a part theſe your attendants, I Shall bring Emilia forth.
Paul. I pray now call her
Withdraw your ſelues
Gao. And Madam,
I muſt be preſent at your Conference.
Paul. Well be't ſo, prethee.
Here's ſuch a-doe, to make no ſtaine, a ſtaine,
As paſſes colouring. Deare Gentlewoman,
How fares our gracious Lady?
Emil. As well as one ſo great, and ſo forlorne
May hold together. Ouer-nights, and greefes
(Which neuer tender Lady hath borne greater)
She is, ſomething before her time, deliuer'd.
Paul. A boy?
Emil. A daughter, and a goodly babe,
Luſty, and like to liue: the Queene receiues
Much comfort in't. Sayes, my poore priſoner,
I am innocent as you.
Paul. I dare be ſworne
These dangerous, vnſafe Lunes i'th King, beſhrew them:
He muſt be told on't, and he muſt the office
Becomes a woman beſt. I'le take vpon me,
If I proue honey-mouth'd, let my tongue bliſter.
And neuer to my red-look'd Anger be
The Trumpet any more: pray you (Emilia)
Commend my beſt obedience to the Queene,
If ſhe dares truſt me with her little babe,
I'le ſhew't the King, and vndertake to bee
Her Aduocate to th' lowd'ſt. We do not know
How he may ſoften at the ſight o'th Child:
The ſilence often of pure innocence
Perſwades, when ſpeaking fayles.
Emil. Moſt worthy Madam, your honor, and your goodneſſe is ſo euident,
That your free vndertakings cannot miſſe
A thriuing yſſue: there is no Lady liuing
So meete for this great errand, pleaſe your Ladiſhip
To viſit the next roome, I'le preſently
Acquaint the Queene of your moſt noble offer,
Who, but to day hammered of this deſigne,
But durſt not tempt a miſerie of honour
Leaſt ſhe ſhould be deny'd.

Paul

Paul. Tell her (Emilia)
Ile vſe that tongue I haue. If wit flow from't
As boldneſſe from my boſome, let't not be doubted
I ſhall do good.
Emil. Now be you bleſt for it.
Ile to the Queene: pleaſe you come ſomething neerer.
Gao. Madam, if't pleaſe the Queene to ſend the babe,
I know not what I ſhall incurre, to paſſe it,
Hauing no warrant
Paul. You needle not feare it (ſir)
This Child was prophet to the world, and ſ
By Law and proceſſe of great Nature, thus Free'd, and enfranchis'd, not a party to
The anger of the King, nor guilty of
(If any be) the treſpaſſe of the Queene.
Gao. I do beleeue it.
Paul. Do not you feare vpon your honor, I
Will ſtand betwixt you, and danger. Exeunt

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Leontes, Seruants, Paulina, Antigonus, and Lords.

Leo. Nor night, nor day, no reſt: It is but weakneſſe
To beare the matter thus: meere weakneſſe, if
The cauſe were not in being: part o'th cauſe,
She, th'Adultreſſe: for the harlot-King
Is ſhrin'd to my deare Anne, out of the blanke
And leuell of my braine: plot-proofe: but ſhee,
I can hooke to me: ſay that ſhe were gone,
Giuen to the fire, a moity of my reſt
Might come to me againe. Whoſe there?
Ser. My Lord.
Leo. How do's the boy?
Ser. He tooke good reſt to night: 'tis hop'd
His ſickneſſe is diſcharg'd.
Leo. To ſee his Nobleneſſe,
Conceyuing the diſhonour of his Mother.
He ſtraight declin'd, droop'd, tooke it deeply,
Faſten'd, and fix'd the ſhame on't in himſelfe:
Threw-off his Spirit, his Appetite, his Sleepe,
And downe-right languiſh'd. Leaue me ſolely: goe,
See how he fares. Fie, fie, no thought of him,
The very thought of my Reuenges that way
Recoyle vpon me: in himſelfe too mightie,
And in his parties, his Alliance: Let him be,
Vntill a time may ſerue. For preſent vengeance
Take it on her. Camillo, and Polixenes
Laugh at me: make their paſtime at my ſorrow:
They ſhould not laugh, if I could reach them, nor Shall ſhe, within my powre.
Enter Paulina.
Lord. You muſt not enter.
Paul. Nay rather (good my Lords) be ſecond to me:
Feare you his tyrannous paſſion more (alas)
Then the Queenes life? A gracious innocent ſoule,
More free, then he is iealous.
Anti. That's enough.
Ser. Madam; he hath not ſlept to night, commanded
None ſhould come at him.
Paul. Not ſo hot (good Sir)
I come to bring him ſleepe. 'Tis ſuch as you
That creepe like ſhadowes by him, and do ſ
At each his needleſſe heauings: ſuch as you
Nouriſh the cauſe of his awaking. I
Do come with words, as medicinall, as true;
(Honeſt, as either;) to purge him of that humor,
That preſſes him from ſleepe
Leo. What noyſe there, hoa?
Paul. No noyſe (my Lord) but needfull conference,
About ſome Goſſips for your Highneſſe.
Leo. How?
Away with that audacious Lady. Antigonus,
I charg'd thee that ſhe ſhould not come about me,
I knew ſhe would.
Anti. I told her ſo (my Lord)
On your diſpleaſures perill, and on mine,
She ſhould not viſit you
Leo. What? canſt not rule her?
Paul. From all diſhoneſtie he can: in this (Vnleſſe he take the courſe that you haue done)
Commit me, for commuting honor, truſt it,
He ſhall not rule me.
Anti. La-you now, you heare,
When ſhe will take the raine, I let her run,
But ſhee'l not ſtumble.
Paul. Good my Liege, I come
And I beſeech you heare me, who profeſſes
My ſelfe your loyall Seruant, your Phyſitian,
Your moſt obedient Counſailor: yet that dares
Leſſe appeare ſo, in comforting your Euils,
Then ſuch as moſt ſeeme yours. I ſay, I come
From your good Queene
Leo. Good Queene?
Paul. Good Queene (my Lord) good Queene,
I ſay good Queene,
And would by combate, make her good ſo, were I
A man, the worſt about you.
Leo. Force her hence.
Paul. Let him that makes but trifles of his eyes
Firſt hand me: on mine owne accord, Ile off,
But firſt, Ile do my errand. The good Queene
(For ſhe is good) hath brought you forth a daughter,
Heere 'tis. Commends it to your bleſſing
Leo. Out
A mankinde Witch? Hence with her, out o'dore:
A moſt intelligencing bawd.
Paul. Not ſo:
I am as ignorant in that, as you,
In ſo entit'ling me: and no leſſe honeſt
Then you are mad: which is enough, Ile warrant
(As this world goes) to paſſe for honeſt.
Leo. Traitors:
Will you not puſh her out? Giue her the Baſtard,
Thou dotard, thou art woman-tyr'd: vnrooſted
By thy dame Partlet heere. Take vp the Baſtard,
Take't vp, I ſay: giue't to thy Croane
Paul. For euer
Vnvenerable be thy hands, if thou
Tak'ſt vp the Princeſſe, by that forced baſeneſſe
Which he has put vpon't
Leo. He dreads his Wife.
Paul. So I would you did: then 'twere paſt all doubt
You'd call your children, yours.
Leo. A neſt of Traitors.
Anti. I am none, by this good light.
Paul. Nor I: nor any
But one that's heere: and that's himſelfe: for he,

The

The sacred Honor of himselfe, his Queenes,
His hopefull Sonnes, his Babes, betrayes to Slander,
Whose sting is sharper then the Sword; and will not
(For as the case now stands it is a Curse
He cannot be compell'd to't) once remove
The Root of his Opinion, which is rotten,
As ever Oake, or Stone was sound.
Leo. A Callat
Of boundlesse tongue, who late hath beat her Husband,
And now baits me: This Brat is none of mine,
It is the issue of Polixenes.
Hence with it, and together with the Dam,
Commit them to the fire.
Paul. It is yours
And, might we lay the old Proverb to your charge,
So like you 'tis the worse. Behold, my Lords,
Although the Print be little, the Whole Matter
And Copy of the Father: Eye, Nose, Lippe,
The trick of's Frowne, his Forehead, nay the Valley,
The pretty dimples of his Chin, and Cheeke; his Smiles
The very Mold, and Frame of Hand, Nayle, finger.
And thou good Goddesse Nature, which hast made it
So like to him that got it, if thou hast
The Ordering of the Mindes as well as Mindes,
Let not the Worke of the Divell be so lame,
To mock the Subject of it. Cressida was
As false as Vowes can make her.
Paul. She dares not
Call your Cheekes so, while they are crimson
For Feare, and not for Love.
Leo. Once more take her hence.
Paul. A most unworthy and unnaturall Lord
Can doe no more.
Leo. I'le have thee burnt.
Paul. I care not:
It is not the first time I ha're scap'd by Fire,
Nor the worst time to be burnt to day. Beare
Your Queene
Not a Queene, but a Traytor to you all,
Look to't, I say, she'le make you,
Worse then the Sea to vexed Neptune, are
Leo. Out A Crone,
Once more answer me, Were I a Tyran,
Where were't that I should finde a Friend to pleade
It? the rest know me one. Away with her
Paul. I pray you doe not push me, Ile be gone
Looke to your Babe my Lord, 'tis yours Ione tells her
A better day. Sir. What needs these hands?
You that are thus so tender o're his Follyes,
Will never doe him good, not one of you.
So, so. Farewell, we are gone. Exit
Leo. Thou Traytor, hast set on thy Wife to this.
My Child? away with't? even thou that hast
A heart so tender o're it, take it hence,
And see it instantly consum'd with fire.
Even thou, and none but thou. Take it up straight:
Within this houre bring me word 'tis done
(And by good testimony) or I'le seize thy life,
With what thou else call'st thine. If thou refuse,
And wilt encounter with my Wrath, say so,
The Bastard-brayes with thee are premeditated steeds
Shall dash out. Goe take it to the fire,
For thou sett'st on thy Wife.
Ant. I did not Sir
These Lords my Noble Fellowes, if they please
Can cleare me in't
Lords. We can my Royall Liege,
He is not guilty of her comming thither
Leo. You're liers all.
Lord. Beseech your Highnesse give us better credit:
We have alwayes truly seru'd you, and beseech
So to esteeme of us: and on our knees we beg,
(As recompence of our deare services
Past, and to come) that you doe change this purpose,
Which being so horrible, so bloody, must
Lead on to some foule Issue. We all kneele
Leo. I am a Feather for each Wind that blowes:
Shall I live on to see this Bastard kneele,
And call me Father? better burne it now,
Then curse it then. But be it; let it live.
It shall not neither. You Sir, come you hither:
You that have been so tenderly officious
With Lady Margerie your Mid-wife there,
To save this Bastards life: for this new Marriage,
Which may passe well enough, you shall not passe
Once more in Councell with us, shall not live
The Issue of your Royall Bed, Sir, but
Your Mother shall uphold my Friend your Husband,
And take your Trull. Looke to't: Come (my Lord)
To see his Nuptiall. Ere mine (wrong'd Friend)
Make thee a Widow; and thy Issue (borne
Our Daughter) by the Sword be lesse lamented
Then poore Mamillius, Royall Prince deceased.
Thy Mother's worth a thousand hundred Hermiones
If I chance to call her so. Goe to my Closet,
Take your vaine Doting. Heare me this my purpose:
Have these Gallants instantly to Ship
Polixenes and Hermione, and my Babe
Lodg'd in the Sea, in an appointed Barke
Lyme-hatch, or Milford, where the Wind
And Key of Ocean navigate, shall expect
Their Shipmans best direction to carry them
To Syracusa, their accustom'd freight
All done within the houre. Dispatch, and meet me
Within two dayes: for in the Temple I
Will all assemble. Come, come, no entreaty
Or speech worth your paines: I am an Adamant
To all Requests, certaine to what I purpose,
And to obtaine what I denie, am fixt
As Nature is, whose Rocks abide, and will Not yeeld to Waters worth. Lead away.
Ant. Prosperously to these Particulars
Attend their Businesse: till my Expedition
Be authoriz'd, keepe with my Liege, you Belong
Aboord the Tent, ready on the howre
(For by then I hope we shall dispatch)
Exit.
Lord. Not eate, nor sleepe
Untill our Fire-side.
Enter a Seruant.
Seru. Please your Highnesse, Posts
From those you sent to th' Oracle are come
An houre since: Cleomines and Dion,
Being well arriu'd from Delphos, are both landed,
Hasting to the Court.
Lord. So please you (Sir) their speed
Hath been beyond account.
Leo. Twenty three dayes
They have been absent: 'tis good speed: foretelling
The great Apollo suddenly will have
The great Apollo suddenly will have

The

The truth of this appeare. Prepare you Lords,
Summon a Session, that we may arraigne
Our most disloyall Lady: for as she hath
Been publikely accus'd, so shall she have
A iust and open Triall. While she lives,
My heart will be a burthen to me. Leave me,
And thinke vpon my bidding. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Cleomines and Dion.

Cleo. The Ayre, my Lord, does profit by your patience,
Your patience is the Command and Cure
Of all these ragefull Iudgements.
Dion. Yet the Law,
For what is done in publique Courts, may challenge
(Methinkes) of Iustice, more than the secrecie
Of priuate Closets, or the Shades of Night.
How could you more diuorce your selfe from Passion,
Had the whole World the Power to behold you?
Cleo. But of all, the blast
And the euen-dealing Voyce o'th'Oracle,
Kin to Ioues Thunder, so surpriz'd my Sense,
That I was nothing.
Dio. If th'euent o'th'Iourney
Proue as successefull to the Queene (O be't so)
As it hath been to vs, rare, pleasant, speedie,
The time is worth the vse on't.
Cleo. Great Apollo
Turne all to th'best: these Proclamations,
So forcing faults vpon Hermione,
I little like.
Dio. The violent carriage of it
Will clear, or end the Businesse: when the Oracle
(Thus by Apollo's great Diuine seal'd vp)
Shall the Contents discouer, something rare
Euen then will rush to knowledge. Goe: fresh Horses,
And gracious be the issue. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Leontes, Lords, Officers: Hermione (as to her Triall) Ladies: Cleomines, Dion.

Leo. This Sessions (to preface't, what follows)
Euen pushes 'gainst our heart. The partie try'd,
The Daughter of a King, our Wife, and one
Of vs too much belou'd. Let vs be clear'd
Of being tyrannous, since we so openly
Proceed in Iustice, which shall have due course,
Euen to the guilt or the emptinesse.
Produce the Prisoner.
Off. It please your Highnesse, to put off
Your Princely Maiesty, and chaire the Queene
According to your Court. Silence.
Her. Sir, I desire you do not make me
Turne o'er Authorities, Queene to the worthy Leontes, King of Sicilia, thou art here accused and arraigned of High Treason, committed with Adultery with Polixenes King of Bohemia, and conspiring with Camillo to take away the Life of our Soueraigne Lord the King, thy Royall Husband: the pretence whereof being by circumstances partly laid open thou (Hermione) contrary to the Faith and Allegeance of a true Subiect, didst counsaile and aide them, for their better safetie, to flie away by Night.
Her. Since what I am to say, must be but that Which contradicts my Accusation, and
The testimonie on my part, no other
But what comes from my selfe, it shall scarce boot me
To say, Not guilty: mine Integritie
Being counted Falshood, shall (as I expresse it)
Be so receiu'd. But thus: if Powres Diuine
Behold our humane Actions (as they doe)
I doubt not then, but Innocence shall make False Accusation blush, and Tyrannie
Tremble at Patience. You (my Lord, best knowne (Whom least will seeme to doe so, my past life
Hath been as continent, as chaste, as true,
As I am now vnhappy; which is more
Than Historie can patterne, though deuis'd,
And play'd, to take Spectators. For behold me,
A Fellow of the Royall Bed, which owe
A Moitie of the Throne, a great Kings Daughter,
The Mother to a hopefull Prince, here standing
To prate and talke for Life, and Honor, 'fore
Who please to come, and heare. For Life, I prize it
As I weigh Grace, which I would spare: for Honor,
'Tis a derriuation from me to mine,
And only that I stand for. I appeale
To your owne Conscience, Sir, before Polixenes
Came to your Court, how I was in your grace,
How merited to be so: Since he came,
With what encounter so vncurrant, I
Haue strayn'd t'appeare thus: if one iot beyond
The bound of Honor, or in act, or will
That way inclining, harden'd be the hearts
Of all that heare me, and my neer'st of kin
Cry fie vpon my Grace.
Leo. Your knees vp yet,
That any of these bolder Vices wanted
Lesse Impudence to gaine-say what they did,
Than to performe it first.
Her. That's true enough,
Though 'tis a saying (Sir) not due to me.
Leo. You will not owne it.
Her. More than Mistresse of,
Which comes to me in name of Fault, I must not
At all acknowledge. For Polixenes
(With whom I am accus'd) I doe confesse
I lou'd him, as in Honor he requir'd.
With such a kinde of Loue, as might become
A Lady like me; with a Loue, euen such,
So, and no other, as your selfe commanded:
Which, not to haue done, I think had been in me
Both Disobedience, and Ingratitude
To you, and toward your Friend, whose Loue had spoke
Euen such as it is, (too much) Infamie, freely,
That it was yours. Now for Conspiracie,
I know not how it tastes, though it be dish'd
For me to try: how. All I know of it,
Is, that Camillo was an honest man,
And why he left your Court, the Gods themselues
(Wotting no more than I) are ignorant.
Leo. You knew of his departure, as you know
What you haue vnderta'ne to doe in's absence.
Her. Sir,

Her. Sir,
You speake a Language that I vnderstand not:
My Life stands in the leuell of your Dreames,
Which Ile lay downe.
Leo. Your Actions are my Dreames.
You had a Bastard by Polixenes,
And I but dream'd it. As you were past all shame,
(Those of your Fact are so) so past all truth;
Which to deny, concernes more then auaile: for as
Thy Brat hath been cast out, like to it selfe,
No Father owning it (which is indeed
More criminall in thee then it) so thou
Shalt feele our Iustice, in whose easiest passage,
Looke for no lesse then death.
Her. Sir, spare your Threats
The Bugge which you would fright me with, I seeke
To me can Life be no commoditie:
The crowne and comfort of my Life (your Fauor)
I doe giue lost, for I doe feele it gone,
But know not how it went. My second Ioy
And first fruits of my body, from his presence
I am barr'd, like one infectious. My third comfort
(Starr'd most vnluckily) is from my breast
The innocent milke in it most innocent mouth)
Hal'd out to murther. My selfe on euery Post
Proclaym'd a Strumpet. With immodest hatred
The Child-bed priuiledge denyed which
To Women of all fashion. Lastly, hurried
Here, to this place, i'th' open ayre, before
I haue got strength of limit. Now (my Liege)
Tell me what blessings I haue here aliue,
That I should fear to die? Note that I am sure
But yet heare in: our part so flake me not: no life,
(I prize it not a straw, but for mine Honor,
Which I would free) if I shall be condemn'd
Vpon surmizes, all proofes sleepe else,
But what your Iealousies awake, I see not
'Tis richer, then not I. Your Honors all,
doe refuse me to the Oracle
Apollo be my Iudge.
Lord. This your request
Is altogether iust: therefore bring forth,
And in Apollo's Name, his Oracle.
Her. The Emperor of Russia was my Father.
Oh that he were aliue, and here beholding
His Daughters Tryall: that he did but see
The flatnesse of my misery, yet with eyes
Of Pitty, not Reuenge.
Officer. You here shall sweare vpon this Sword of Iustice,
That you (Cleomines and Dion) haue
Been both at Delphos and from thence haue brought
This seal'd vp Oracle, by the Hand deliuer'd
Of great Apollo's Priest: and that since then,
You haue not dar'd to breake the holy Seale,
Nor read the Secrets in't.
Cleo. Dio. All this we sweare.
Leo. Breake vp the Seales, and read.
Officer. Hermione is chaste, Polixenes blamelesse, Camillo a true Subiect, Leontes a iealous Tyrant, his innocent Babe truly begotten, and the King shall liue without an Heire, if that which is lost be not found.
Lords. Now blessed be the great Apollo.
Her. Prayed.
Leo. Hast thou read truth?
Offic. I (my Lord) euen so as it is here set downe.
Leo. There is no truth at all i'th Oracle.
The Sessions shall proceed: this is meere falsehood.
Ser. My Lord the King: the King?
Leo. What studied businesse?
Ser. O Sir, I shall be hated to report it.
The Prince your Sonne, with meere conceit and feare
Of the Queenes speed, is gone.
Leo. How? gone?
Ser. Is dead.
Leo. Apollo is angry, and the Heauens themselues
Doe strike at my Iniustice. How now there?
Paul. This Newes is mine: and to the Queene: Looke downe
And see what Death is doing.
Leo. Take her hence
Her heart is but o'recharg'd: she will recouer.
I haue too much beleeu'd mine owne suspition:
'Beseech you tenderly apply to her
Some remedies for life. Apollo pardon
My great profaneness 'gainst thine Oracle.
Ile reconcile me to Polixenes,
New woe my Queene, recall the good Camillo
(Whom I proclaime a man of Truth, of Mercy)
For being transported by my Iealousies
To bloody thoughts, and to reuenge, I chose
Camillo for the minister, to poison
My friend Polixenes: which had been done,
But that the good mind of Camillo tardied
My swift command: though I with Death, and with Reward did threaten and encourage him,
Not doing it and being done: he (most humane,
And fill'd with Honor) to my Kingly Guest
Vnclasp'd my practice, quit his fortunes here
(Which you knew great) and to the hazard
Of all Incertainties himselfe commended,
No richer than his Honor: How he glisters
Through my Rust? and how his Pietie
Does my deeds make the blacker?
Paul. Woe the while:
O cut my Lace, least my heart (cracking it)
Breake too.
Lord. What fit is this good Lady?
Paul. What studied torments (tyrant hid for Gaole?
Wrie'd in a Barrell of the Seas wildest Billow?
Or bound Leaden Coles? What old Dungeon euer
Held thing so vile, as thou? Which earthly Fact
Was worse than toward? Thy Tyranny
(Together working with thy Iealousies,
Fancies too weake for Boyes, too greene and Idle
For Girles of Nine) O think what they haue done,
And then run mad indeed, stare madnesse at all
That by-gone euils were but sports to it?
That to be hold it Polixenes, was nothing,
(That did but shew thee, of a Foole, inconstant,
And damnable ingratefull. Nor was much
Thy wish'd it should be so? (Ay, and the good Camillo)
To haue him kill a King: poore Trespasses,
More monstrous standing by: whereof I reckon
The casting forth to Crowes, thy Babe to sorrow,
To be vncertaine or little, shoot a Dead
Would haue chid me worse: and vnderstand me well,
Men set downe before you. Neuer
Of the young Prince what (most) is infamous
(Though by his seruice taken) here to carry
That could conceiue a grosse and foolish Sire
Blemish'd his gracious Dam: this is not, no,
Laid to thy answere: but the last: O Lords,
When I haue said, cry woe: the Queene, the Queene,

The

The sweet'st, deer'st creature's dead, & vengeance for't
Not drop'd downe yet.
Lord. The higher powres forbid.
Paul. I say she's dead: I'le swear't. If word, nor oath
Preuaile not, go and see: if you can bring
Tincture, or lustre in her lip, her eye
Heate outward, or breath within, Ile serue you
As I would do the Gods. But, O thou Tyrant,
Do not repent these things, for they are heauier
Then all thy woes can stirre; therefore I take thee
To nothing but despaire. A thousand knees,
Ten thousand yeares together, naked fasting,
Vpon a barren Mountaine, and still Winter
In storme perpetuall, could not moue the Gods
To looke that way thou wer't.
Leo. Go on, go on
Thou canst not speake too much. I haue deseru'd
All tongues to talke their bitt'rest.
Lord. Say no more,
How ere the businesse goes, you haue made fault
I'th boldnesse of your speech.
Paul. I am sorry for't,
All faults I make, when I shall come to know them,
I do repent. Alas, I haue shew'd too much
The rashnesse of a woman: he is touch'd
To the noble heart. What's gone and what's past helpe
Should be past griefe: do not receiue affliction
At my petition, I beseech you, rather
Let me be punish'd, that haue minded you
Of what you should forget. Now (good my Liege)
Sir, Royall Sir, forgiue a foolish woman.
The loue I bore your Queene (Lo, I haue done worse)
Ile speake of her no more, nor of your Children:
Ile not remember you of my owne Lord,
(Who is lost too:) take your patience to you,
And I'le say nothing.
Leo. Thou'lt mooue me
When most thou striu'st to comfort me, know much better,
Then to be pittied of thee. Prethee bring me
To the dead bodies of my Queene, and Sonne,
One graue shall be for both. Vpon them shall
The causes of their death appeare (vnto
Our shame perpetuall.) Once a day, Ile visit
The Chappell where they lye, and teares shed there
Shall be my recreation. So long as Nature
Will beare vp with this exercise, so long
I daily vow to vse it. Come, and leade me
To these sorrowes. Exeunt

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Antigonus, a Marriner, Babe, Sheepe-heard, and Clowne.

Ant. Thou art perfect then, our ship hath touch't vpon
The Deserts of Bohemia.
Mar. I (my Lord) and feare
We haue Landed in ill time: the skies looke grimly,
And threaten present blusters. In my conscience
The heauens with that we haue in hand, are angry,
And frowne vpon's.
Ant. Their sacred wil's be done: go get a-boord,
Looke to your barke, Ile not be long before
I call vpon thee.
Mar. Make your best haste, and go not Too-farre i'th Land: 'tis like to be lowd weather,
Besides this place is famous for the Creatures
Of prey, that keepe vpon't.
Ant. Go thou away,
Ile follow instantly.
Mar. I am glad at heart
To be so ridde o'th businesse. Exit
Ant. Come, poore babe;
I haue heard (but not beleeu'd) the Spirits o'th'dead
May walke againe: if such thing be, thy Mother
Appear'd to me last night: for ne're was dreame
So like a waking. To me comes a creature,
Sometimes her head on one side, some another,
I neuer saw a vessell of like sorrow
So fill'd, and so becomming: in pure white Robes
Like very sanctity she did approach
My Cabine where I lay: thrice bow'd before me,
And (gasping to begin some speech) her eyes
Became two spouts; the fury spent, anon
Did this breake from her. Good Antigonus,
Since Fate (against thy better disposition)
Hath made thy person for the Thrower-out
Of my poore babe, according to thine oath,
Places remote enough are in Bohemia,
There weepe, and leaue it crying: and for the babe
Is counted lost for euer, Perdita
I prethee call't: For this ingentle businesse
Put on thee, by my Lord, thou ne're shalt see
Thy Wife Paulina more: and so, with shrieks
She melted into Ayre. Affrighted much,
I did in time collect my selfe, and thought
This was so, and no slumber. Dreames, are toyes,
Yet for this once, yea superstitiously,
I will be squar'd by this. I do beleeue
Hermione hath suffer'd death, and that
Apollo would (this being indeede the issue
Of King Polixenes) it should here be laide
(Either for life, or death) vpon the earth
Of its right Father. Blossome, speed thee well,
There lye, and there thy character: there these,
Which may (if Fortune, please both breed thee (pretty)
And still rest thine. The storme begins, poore wretch,
That for thy mothers fault, art thus expos'd
To losse, and what may follow. Weepe I cannot,
But my heart bleedes: and most accurst am I
To be by oath enjoyn'd to this. Farewell,
The day frownes more and more: thou'rt like to haue
A lullaby too rough: I neuer saw
The heauens so dim, by day. A sauage clamor?
Well may I get a-boord. This is the Chace,
I am gone for euer. Exit pursued by a Beare.
Shep. I would there were no age betweene ten and three and twenty, or that youth would sleep out the rest: for there is nothing (in the betweene) but getting wenches with childe, wronging the Ancientry, stealing, fighting, hearke you now: would any but these boyes-braines of nineteene, and two and twenty hunt this weather? They haue scar'd away two of my best Sheepe, which I feare the Wolfe will sooner finde: then the Master: if any where I haue them, 'tis by the sea-side, brouzing of Ivy. Good-lucke (and 't be thy will) what haue we heere? Mercy on's, a Barne? A very pretty barne; A boy, or a Childe I wonder? (A pretty one, a very pretty one) sure some Scape; Though I am not booke-learn'd, yet I can can reade Waiting-Gentlewoman in the fcape: this hath beene some ſtaire-worke, some Trunke-worke, some behinde-doore worke: they were warmer that got this, then the poore Thing is heere. Ile take it vp for pity, yet I'le tarry till my ſonne come: he hallow'd but euen now. Whoa-ho-hoa.

Enter Clowne.

Clo. Hilloa, loa.

Shep. What? art ſo neere? If thou'lt ſee a thing to talke on, when thou art dead and rotten, come hither: what ayl'ſt thou, man?

Clo. I haue ſeene two ſuch ſights, by Sea & by Land: but I am not to ſay it is a Sea, for it is now the ſky: betwixt the firmament and it, you cannot thruſt a bodkins point.

Shep. Why boy, how is it?

Clo. I would you did but ſee how it chafes, how it rages, how it takes vp the ſhore, but that's the leaſt of: the moſt pitteous cry of the poore ſoules: ſometimes to ſee 'em, and not to ſee 'em: Now the Ship boaring the Moone with her maine Maſt, and anon ſwallowed with yeaſt and froth, as you'd thruſt a Corke into a hogſhead. And then for the Land-ſeruice, to ſee how the Beare tore out his ſhoulder bone, how he cried to me for helpe, and ſaid his name was Antigonus, a Nobleman: But to make an end of the Ship, to ſee how the Sea flap-dragon'd it: but firſt, how the poore ſoules roared, and the ſea mock'd them: and how the poore Gentleman roared, and the Beare mock'd him, both to one chop.

Shep. Name of mercy, when was this boy?

Clo. Now now: I haue not winked ſince I ſaw theſe ſights: the men are not yet cold vnder water, for the Beare hath but newly ſtept ſkin: and the bodies of the Mariners, and that now

Shep. Would I had bin by, to haue help'd the olde man.

Clo. I would you had beene by the ſhip ſide, to haue helpt her: there your charity would haue lack'd footing.

Shep. Heavy matters, heavy matters: but looke thee here boy. Now bleſſed be the great Bountie of Bohemia: thou haſt cauſe to pray for it, I with three thouſand pounds a yeare. Heere's a ſtrange alteration! Looke thee, a ſtrange-cloath'd thing: a Spirit: I'le hide me there: let me ſee: Now take vp, take vp Boy: open't ſo, let's ſee it: it was told me I ſhould be rich by the fairies. This is ſome Changeling: open't: what's within boy?

Clo. You're a mad olde man: If the ſinnes of your youth are forgiuen you, you're well to liue. Golde, all Golde!

Shep. This is Faiery Gold boy, and 'twill proue ſo: vp with it, keepe it cloſe: home, home, the next way. We are lucky boy, and to be ſo ſtill requires nothing but ſecrecie. Let my ſheepe go. Come, good boy, the next way home.

Clo. Go you the next way with your Findings, Ile go ſee if the Beare be gone from the Gentleman, and how much he hath eaten: they are never curſt out when they are hungry: if there be any of him left, Ile bury it.

Shep. That's a good deed: if thou may'ſt diſcerne by that which is left of him, what he is, fetch me to that end: I doubt not but ſhall.

Clowne. 'Marry will I: and you ſhall helpe to put him i'th' ground.

Shep. 'Tis a lucky day, boy, and we'l do good deeds on't. Exeunt

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Time, the Chorus.

Time. I that please ſome, try all: both joy and terror
Of good, and bad: that make, and vnfold error,
Now take vpon me (in the name of Time)
To vſe my wings: Impute it not a crime
To me, or my ſwift paſſage, that I ſlide
O'er ſixteene yeeres, and leaue the growth vntride
Of that wide gap, ſince it is in my power
To o'erthrow Law, and in one ſelfe borne houre
To plant, and o'erwhelme Cuſtome. Let me paſſe
The ſame I am, ere ancient'ſt Order was,
Or what is now receiu'd: I witneſſe to
The times that brought them in: ſo like a Doe
To'th' Queene of Bohemia: and make the beſt of it
That I can to your ſight turne my Glaſſe,
And giue my Tale, anew the due Meaſure
As I hold from the Sun. Accompt that I
Commaund to paſſe the minute, that I haue
Let paſſe the ſame, to this Relation
Which now I faithfully do. Leontes, he Hath ſeene you both: Eyes well enough.
Behold'ſt thou Polixenes, this Glaſſe
Filles in the rome twixt Bohemia,
And your Throne, Sicilia. Well met both
In your faire Iſſue. Three crowned Sweets
Which maieſtie, and Beauty intends
Vpon their ſeuerall Gracious Names.
Perdita, now grown in Grace
Equall with wond'ring. What of her enſues
I liſt not propheſie: but let Times newes
Be knowne when 'tis brought forth. A ſhepheards daughter,
And what to her adheres, which followes after,
Is the argument of Time. Of this allow,
If euer you haue ſpent time worſe, ere now:
If euer you haue heard Time to ſpeake,
Let this, make your eſtimate, beſt for my ſake. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Polixenes, and Camillo.

Pol. I pray thee (good Camillo) be no more importunate: 'tis a ſickneſſe denying thee any thing: a death to graunt this.

Cam. It is fifteene yeeres ſince I ſaw my Country: though I haue (for the moſt part) bin aired abroad, I deſire to lay my bones there. Beſides the penitent King (my Maſter) hath ſent for me, to whoſe feeling ſorrowes I might be ſome allay, or I o'erweene to thinke ſo, which is another ſpurre to my departure.

Pol. As thou lou'ſt me (Camillo) wipe not out the reſt of thy ſeruices, by leauing me now: the neede I haue of thee, thine owne goodneſſe hath made: better not to haue had thee, then thus to want thee: thou (hauing made me Buſineſſes (which none without thee, can ſufficiently manage) muſt either ſtay to execute them thy ſelfe, or take away with thee the very ſeruices thou haſt done: which if I haue not enough conſidered (as too much I cannot) to be more thankfull to thee ſhall be my ſtudie, and my profite therein, the heaping friendſhips. Of that fatall Country Sicilia, prethee ſpeake no more, whoſe very naming puniſhes me with the remembrance of that penitent (as thou calst him) and reconciled King my brother, whose losse of his most precious Queene & Children, are euen now to be a-fresh lamented. Say to me, when saw'st thou the Prince Florizell my son? Kings are no lesse vnhappy, their issue, not being gracious, then they are in loosing them, when they haue approued their Vertues.

Cam. Sir, it is three dayes since I saw the Prince: what his happier affayres may be, are to me vnknowne: but I haue (missingly) noted, he is of late much retyred from Court, and is lesse frequent to his Princely exercises then formerly he hath appeared

Pol. I haue considered so much (Camillo) and with some care, so farre, that I haue eyes vnder my seruice, which looke vpon his remouednesse, from whom I haue this Intelligence, that he is seldome from the house of a most homely shepheard: a man (they say) that from very nothing, and beyond the imagination of his neighbors, is growne into an vnspeakable estate.

Cam. I haue heard (sir) of such a man, who hath a daughter of most rare note: the report of her is extended more, then can be thought to begin from such a cottage.

Pol. That's likewise part of my Intelligence: but (I feare) the Angle that plucks our son thither. Thou shalt accompany vs to the place, where we will (not appearing what we are) haue some question with the shepheard; from whose simplicity, I think it not vneasie to get the cause of my sonnes resort thether. 'Prethe be my present partner in this businesse, and lay aside the thoughts of Sicilia.

Cam. I willingly obey your command.

Pol. My best Camillo, we must disguise our selues. Exit

Scena Tertia.

Enter Autolicus singing.

When Daffadils begin to peere,
With heigh the Doxy ouer the dale,
Why then comes in the sweet o'the yeere,
For the red blood raigns in't winters pale

The white sheete bleaching on the hedge,
With hey the sweet birds, O how they sing,
Doth set my pugging tooth an edge,
For a quart of Ale is a dish for a King

The Larke that tirra Lyra chaunts,
With heigh, the Thrush and the Jay:
Are Summer songs for me and my Aunts
Whil'st we lie tumbling in the hay.

I haue seru'd Prince Florizell, and in my time wore three pile, but now I am out of seruice

But shall I go mourne for that (my deere)
the pale Moone shines by night:
And when I wander here and there
I then do most go right
If Tinkers may haue leaue to liue,
and beare the Sow-skin Bowget,
Then my account I well may giue,
and in the Stockes auouch it.

My Trafficke is sheetes: when the Kite builds, looke to lesser Linnen. My Father nam'd me Autolicus, who being (as I am) litter'd vnder Mercurie, was likewise a snapper-vp of vnconsidered trifles: With Dye and drab, I purchas'd this Caparison, and my Reuennew is the silly Cheate. Gallowes, and Knocke, are too powerfull on the Highway. Beating and hanging are' terrors to me For the life to come, I sleepe out the thought of it. A prize, a prize.

Enter Clowne.

Clo. Let me see, euery Leauen-weather todder, euery tod yeeldes pound and odde shilling. fifteene hundred shorne, what comes the wooll too?

Aut. If the sprindge hold, the Cocke's mine.

Clo. I cannot do't without Compters Let mee see, what am I to buy for our Sheepe-shearing-Feast? Three pound of Sugar, fiue pound of Currence, Rice: What will this sister of mine do with Rice? But my father hath made her Mistris of the Feast, and she layes it on. Shee hath made-me four and twenty Nose-gayes for the shearers (three-man song-men, all, and very good ones) but they are most of them Meanes and Bales; but one Puritan amongst them, and he sings Psalmes to horne-pipes. I must haue Saffron to colour the Warden Pies, Mace, Dates, none; that's out of my note. Nutmegges, seuen a Race or two of Ginger, but that I may begge: Foure pound of Prewyns, and as many of Reysons o'th Sun.

Aut. Oh, that euer I was borne.

Clo. I'th'name of me,

Aut. Oh helpe me, helpe mee: plucke but off these ragges and then death, death.

Clo. Alacke poore soule, thou hast need of more rags to lay on thee, rather then haue these off.

Aut. Oh sir, the loathsomnesse of them offend me more then the stripes I haue receiued, which are mighty ones and millions.

Clo. Alas poore man, a million of beating may come to a great matter.

Aut. I am rob'd sir, and beaten: my money, and apparrell tane from me, and these detestable things put vpon me.

Clo. What, by a horse-man, or a foot-man?

Aut. A footman (sweet sir) a footman

Clo. Indeed, he should be a footman, by the garments he has left with thee if this bee a horseman's Coate, it hath seene very hot seruice. Lend me thy hand, Ile helpe thee. Come, lend me thy hand.

Aut. Oh good sir, tenderly, oh.

Clo. Alas poore soule.

Aut. Oh good sir, softly, good sir: I feare (sir) my shoulder-blade is out.

Clo. How now? Canst stand?

Aut. Softly, deere sir: good sir, softly: you ha done me a charitable office

Clo Dost lacke any mony? I haue a little mony for thee.

Aut. No, good sweet sir: no, I beseech you sir: I haue a Kinsman not past three quarters of a mile hence, vnto whome I was going: I shall there haue money, or any thing I want: Offer me no money I pray you, that killes my heart.

Clow. What manner of Fellow was hee that robb'd you?

Aut. A fellow (sir) that I haue knowne to goe about with Troll-my-dames: I knew him once a seruant of the Prince: I cannot tell good sir, for which of his Vertues it was, but hee was certainely Whipt out of the Court.

Clo.

Clo. His vices you would say: there's no vertue whipt out of the Court: they cherish it to make it stay there; and yet it will no more but abide.

Aut. Vices I would say (Sir.) I know this man well, he hath bene since an Ape-bearer, then a Procesle-seruer (a Bayliffe) then hee compaft a Motion of the Prodigall sonne, and married a Tinkers wife, within a Mile where my Land and Living lyes; and (having flowne ouer many knauish professions) he settled only in rogue: some call him Autolicus.

Clo. Out vpon him Prig, for my life Prig: he haunts Wakes, Faires, and Bear-baitings.

Aut. Very true sir: he sir, he: that's the Rogue that put me into this apparell.

Clo. Not a more cowardly Rogue in all Bohemia; If you had but look'd bigge, and spit at him, he'le haue runne.

Aut. I must confesse to you (sir) I am no fighter: I am falle of heart that way, & that he knew I warrant him.

Clo. How do you now?

Aut. Sweet sir, much better then I was: I can stand, and walke: I will even take my leaue of you, & pace softly towards my Kinsmans.

Clo. Shall I bring thee on the way?

Aut. No, good fac'd sir, no sweet sir.

Clo. Then farthewell, I must go buy Spices for our sheepe-shearing. Exit

Aut. Prosper you sweet sir. Your purse is not hot enough to purchase your spice. Ile be with you at your sheepe-shearing too: If I make not this Cheat bring out another, and the shearers proue sheepe, let me be vnrold, and my name put in the booke of Vertue

Song. Iog-on, Iog-on, the foot path way,
And merrily hent the Stile-a.
A merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad tyres in a Mile-a. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Florizell, Perdita, Shepherd, Clowne, Polixenes, Camillo, Mopsa, Dorcas, Seruants, Autolicus.

Flo. These your vnusual weeds, to each part of you
Do's giue a life: no Shepherdesse, but Flora
Peering in Aprils front. This your sheepe-shearing,
Is as a meeting of the petty Gods,
And you the Queene on't

Perd. Sir: my gracious Lord,
To chide at your extreames, it not becomes me:
(Oh pardon, that I name them) your high selfe
The gracious marke o'th' Land, you haue obscur'd
With a Swaines wearing: and me (poore lowly Maide)
Most Goddesse-like prank'd vp. But that our Feasts
In euery Messe haue folly, and the Feeders
Digeft with a Custome, I should blush
To see you so attyr'd: sworne I thinke,
To shew my selfe a glasse

Flo. I blesse the time.
When my good Falcon, made her flight a-crosse
Thy Fathers ground

Perd. Now Loue affoord you cause:
To me the difference forges dread (your Greatnesse Hath not beene vs'd to feare) euen now I tremble
To thinke your Father, by some accident
Should passe this way, as you did. Oh the Fates,
How would he looke, to see his worke, so noble,
Vilde y bound vp? What would he say? Or how Should I (in these my borrowed Flaunts) behold
The sternnesse of his presence?

Flo. Apprehend
Nothing but iollity: the Gods themselues
(Humbling their Deities to loue) haue taken
The shapes of Beasts vpon them. Iupiter,
Became a Bull, and bellowed: the greene Neptune
A Ram, and bleated: and the Fire-roab'd God
Golden Apollo, a poore humble Swaine,
As I seeme now. Their transformations,
Were neuer for a peece of beauty rarer,
Nor in a way so chaste: since my desires
Run not before mine honor: nor my Lusts
Burne hotter then my Faith.

Perd. O but Sir,
Your resolution cannot hold, when 'tis
Oppos'd (as it must be) by th' powre of the King:
One of these two must be necessities,
Which then will speake, that you must change this purpose,
Or I my life. (pose,

Flo. Thou dear Perdita,
With these forc'd thoughts, I prethee darken not
The Mirth o'th' Feast. Or Ile be thine, my Faire,
Or not my Fathers. For I cannot be Mine owne, nor any thing to any, if
I be not thine. To this I am most constant,
Though destinie say no. Be merry (Gentle)
Strangle such thoughts, as these, with any thing
That you beheld the while. Your Guests are comming:
Lift vp your countenance, as it were the day
Of celebration of that nuptiall, which
We two haue sworne shall come.

Perd. O Lady Fortune,
Stand you auspitious

Flo. See, your Guests approach,
Addresse your selfe to entertaine them sprightly,
And let's be red with mirth.

Shep. Fy (daughter) when my old wife liu'd: vpon
This day, she was both Pantler, Butler, Cooke,
Both Dame and Seruant: Welcom'd all: seru'd all,
Would sing her song and dance her turne: now here
At vpper end o'th' Table, now i'th' middle:
On his shoulder, and his: her face afire
With labour, and the thing she tooke to quench it
She would to each one sip. You are retyred,
As if you were a feasted one: and not
The Hostesse of the meeting. Pray you bid
These vnknowne friends to's welcome, for it is
A way to make vs better Friends, more knowne.
Come, quench your blushes, and present your selfe
That which you are, Mistris o'th' Feast. Come on,
And bid vs welcome to your sheepe-shearing,
As your good flocke shall prosper.

Perd. Sir, welcome.
It is my Fathers will, I should take on me
The Hostesses o'th' day: y'are welcome sir,
Giue me those Flowres there (Dorcas, Reuerend Sirs)
For you, there's Rosemary, and Rue, these keepe
Seeming, and Sauour all the Winter long
Grace, and Remembrance be to you both,
And welcome to our Shearing.

Pol. Shepherdesse,
(A faire one are you:) well you fit our ages
With flowres of Winter.
Perd. Sir, the yeare growing ancient,
Not yet on summers death, nor on the birth
Of trembling winter, the fayrest flowres o'th season
Are our Carnations, and streak'd Gilly-vors,
(Which some call Natures bastards) of that kind
Our rusticke Gardens barren, and I care not
To get slips of them.
Pol. Wherefore (gentle Maiden)
Do you neglect them?
Perd. For I have heard it said,
There is an Art, which in their piedneſſe shares
With great creating-Nature.
Pol. Say there be:
Yet Nature is made better by no meane,
But Nature makes that Meane: so ouer that Art,
(Which you say addes to Nature) is an Art
That Nature makes: you see (sweet Maid) we marry
A gentler Scion, to the wildest Stocke,
And make conceyue a barke of baser kinde
By bud of Nobler race. This is an Art
Which do's mend Nature: change it rather, but
The Art it selfe, is Nature.
Perd. So it is.
Pol. Then make your Garden rich in Gilly'vors,
And do not call them bastards.
Perd. Ile not put
The Dibble in earth, to set one slip of them:
No more then were I painted, I would wish
This youth should say 'twere well: and only therefore Desire to breed by me. Here's flowres for you:
Hot Lauender, Mints, Sauory, Marioram,
The Marygold, that goes to bed wi' the Sun,
And with him rises weeping: These are flowres
Of middle time, and I think they are given
To men of middle age. You're very welcome.
Cam. I should leaue grazing, were I of your flocke,
And eate no more.
Perd. Out alas:
You'ld be so leane, that blasts of January (Friend,
Would blow you through and through. Now (my fairest
I would I had some Flowres o'th Spring, that might Become your time of day: and yours, and yours,
That weare vpon your Virgin-branches yet
Your Maydenheads growing: O Proserpina,
For the Flowres now, that (frighted) thou let'st fall
From Dites Wagon. Daffadils,
That come before the Swallow dares, and take
The windes of March with beauty. Violets (dim,
But sweeter than the lids of Iunos eyes,
Or Cytherea's breath) pale Primroses,
That dye vnmarried, ere they can behold
Bright Phœbus in his strength (a Malady
Most incident to Maids) bold Oxlips, and
The Crowne-Imperiall: Lillies of all kinds,
The Flowre-de-Luce being one! O these I lacke,
To make you Garlands of (and my sweet friend,
To strew him o're, and o're.
Flo. What? like a Coarse?
Perd. No, like a Bank, for Loue to lye, and play on:
Not like a Coarse: or if not to be buried,
But quicke, and in mine armes. Come, take your flowres,
Me thinkes I play as I have seene them do
In Whitson-Pastorals: Sure this Robe of mine
Do's change my disposition.
Flo. What you do,
Still betters what is done. When you speake (Sweet)
I'ld haue you do it euer: When you sing,
I'ld haue you buy, and sell so: so giue Almes,
Pray so: and for the ord'ring your Affayres,
To sing them too. When you do dance, I wish you
A waue o'th Sea, that you might euer do
Nothing but that: moue still, still so:
And owne no other Function. Each your doing,
(So singular, in each particular)
Crownes what you are doing in the present deeds,
That all your Actes, are Queenes.
Perd. O Doricles,
Your praises are too large: but that your youth
And the true blood which peepes fearefully through't,
Do plainly giue you out an vnstain'd Shepherd
With wisedome, I might feare (my Doricles)
You woo'd me the faire way.
Flo. I thinke you haue
As little skill to feare, as I haue purpose
To put you to't. But come, our dance I pray,
Your hand (my Perdita) so Turtles paire
That neuer meane to part.
Perd. Ile sweare for 'em.
Pol. This is the prettiest Low-borne Lasse, that euer
Ran on the greene-sord: Nothing she do's, or seemes
But smackes of something greater then her selfe,
Too Noble for this place.
Cam. He tels her something
That makes her blood looke on't: Good sooth she is
The Queene of Curds and Creame.
Clo. Come on, strike vp.
Dorcas Mopsa must be your Mistresse: marry Garlick, to mend her kissing with.
Mop. Now in good time.
Clo. Not a word, a word, we stand vpon our manners.
Come, strike vp.
Here a Dance of Shepheards and Shepheardesses
Pol. Pray good Shepheard, what faire Swaine is this,
Which dances with your daughter?
Shep. They call him Doricles, and boasts himselfe
To haue a worthy feeding; but I haue it
Vpon his owne report, and I beleeue it.
He lookes like sooth: he sayes he loues my daughter
I thinke so too; for neuer gaz'd the Moone
Vpon the water, as he'l stand and reade
As 'twere my daughters eyes: and to be plaine,
I thinke there is not halfe a kisse to choose
Who loues another best.
Pol. She dances featly.
Shep. So she do's any thing, though I report it
That should be silent: If young Doricles
Do light vpon her, she shall bring him that
Which he not dreames of. Enter Seruant
Ser. O Master: if you did but heare the Pedler at the doore, you would neuer dance againe after a Tabor and Pipe: no, the Bag-pipe could not moue you: he sings seuerall Tunes, faster then you'l tell money: he vtters them as he had eaten ballads, and all mens eares grew to his Tunes.
Clo. He could neuer come better: he shall come in.
I loue a ballad but euen too well, if it be doleful matter merrily set downe: or a very pleasant thing indeede, and sung lamentably.

Ser.

Ser. He hath songs for man, or woman, of all sizes: No Milliner can so fit his customers with Gloues: he has the prettiest Loue-songs for Maids, so without bawdrie (which is strange.) with such delicate burthens of Dil-do's and Fadings: Iump-her, and thump-her; and where some stretch-mouth'd Rascall, would (as it were) meane mischeefe, and breake a fowle gap into the Matter, hee makes the maid to answere, Whoop, doe me no harme good man put's him off, slights him, with Whoop, doe me no harme good man

Pol. This is a braue fellow.

Cla. Beleeue mee, thou talkest of an admirable conceited fellow, has he any vnbraided Wares?

Ser. He hath Ribbons of all the colours i'th Rainebow; Points, more then all the Lawyers in Bohemia, can learnedly handle, though they come to him by th'gro-Inckles, Caddysles, Cambrickes, Lawnes: why he sings 'em ouer, as they were Gods, or Goddesses: you would think a Smocke were a shee-Angell, he so chaunts to the sleeue-hand, and the worke about the Square on't.

Cla. Pre'thee bring him in, and let him approach singing.

Perd. Forewarne him, that he vse no scurrilous words in's tunes.

Clow. You haue of these Pedlers, that haue more in them, then you'd thinke (Sister.)

Perd. I, good brother, or go about to thinke.

Enter Autolicus singing.

Lawne as white as driuen Snow,
Cypresse blacke as ere was Crow,
Gloues as sweete as Damaske Roses,
Maskes for faces, and for noses,
Bugle-bracelet, Necke-lace Amber,
Perfume for a Lady's Chamber:
Golden Quoifes and Stomachers
For my Lads to giue their Deares.
Pins, and poking-sticks of Steele.
What Maids lacke from head to heele:
Come buy of me, come, come buy, come buy,
Buy Lads, or else your Lasses cry. Come buy.

Cla. If I were not in loue with Mopsa, thou shouldst take no money of me, but being enthrall'd as I am, it will also be the bondage of certaine Ribbons and Gloues.

Mop. I was promis'd them against the Feast, but they come not too late now.

Dor. He hath promis'd you more then that, or there be lyars.

Mop. He hath paid you all he promis'd you: May be he has paid you more, which will shame you to giue him againe.

Cla. Is there no manners left among maids? Will they weare their plackets, where they should bear their faces? Is there not milking-time? When you are going to bed? Or kill-hole? To whistle of these secrets, but you must be tittle-tattling before all our guests? 'Tis well they are whispring: clamor your tongues, and not a word more.

Mop. I haue done; Come you promis'd me a tawdry-lace, and a paire of sweet Gloues.

Cla. Haue I not told thee how I was cozen'd by the way, and lost all my money.

Aut. And indeed Sir, there are Cozeners abroad, therefore it behooues men to be wary.

Cla. Feare not thou man, thou shalt lose nothing here.

Aut. I hope so sir, for I haue about me many parcels of charge.

Cla. What hast here? Ballads?

Mop. Pray now buy some: I loue a ballet in print, a life, for then we are sure they are true.

Aut. Here's one, to a very doleful tune, how a Vsurers wife was brought to bed of twenty money bagges at a burthen, and how she long'd to eate Adders heads, and Toads carbonado'd.

Mop. Is it true, thinke you?

Aut. Very true, and but a moneth old.

Dor. Blesse me from marrying a Vsurer.

Aut. Here's the Midwiues name to't: one Mist. Tale-Porter, and fiue or six honest Wiues, that were present. Why should I carry lyes abroad?

Mop. Pray you now buy it.

Cla. Come-on, lay it by: and let's first see more Ballads: We'l buy the other things anon.

Aut. Here's another ballad of a Fish, that appeared vpon the coast, on Wednesday the fourescore of April, forty thousand fathom aboue water, & sung this ballad against the hard hearts of Maids. It was thought she was a Woman, and was turn'd into a cold fish, for she would not exchange flesh with one that woo'd her. The ballad is very pittifull, and as true.

Dor. Is it true too, thinke you.

Aut. Fiue Iustices hands at it, and witnesses more then my packe will hold.

Cla. Lay it by too; another.

Aut. This is a merry ballad, but a very pretty one.

Mop. Let's haue some merry ones.

Aut. Why this is a passing merry one, and goes to the tune of two maids wooing a man: there's scarce a Maid westward but she sings it: 'tis in request, I can tell you.

Mop. We can both sing it: if thou'lt beare a part, thou shalt heare 'tis an excellent part.

Dor. We had the tenor on't, a moneth ago.

Aut. I can beare my part, you must know 'tis my occupation: haue at it with you.

Song. Get you hence, for I must go
Aut. Where it fits not you to know
Dor. Whether?
Mop. O whether?
Dor. Whether?
Mop. It becomes thy oath full well,
Thou to me thy secrets tell
Dor. Me too, let me to the Sheer
Mop. Or thy Flocks keep by the Grange, or Hill,
Dor. Let me goe with thee,
Aut. Neither.
Dor. What not her?
Aut. Neither:
Dor. Thou hast sworne my Loue to be,
Mop. Thou hast sworne it more to me
Then whether goest? Say whether?

Cla. We'l haue this song out anon by our selues. My Father and the Gentlemen are in sad talke, & we'l not trouble them. Come bring away thy pack after me. Wenches I'll buy for you both. Pedler let's haue the first choice, follow me girles.

Aut. And you shall pay well for 'em.

Song. Will you buy any Tape, or Lace for your Cape
My dainty Duck, my deare-a?
Any Silke, any Thread, any Toys for your head
Of the newest, and finest, fine wearing-a.
Come to the Peddler, Money's a meddler,
That doth vtter all men's ware-a Exit

Seruant. Master, there is three Carters, three Shepherds, three Neate-herds, three Swine-herds that haue made themſelues all men of haire, they cal themſelues Saltiers, and they haue a Dance, which the Wenches ſay is a gally-maufrey of Gambols, becauſe they are not in't: but they themſelues are o'th'minde (if it bee not too rough for ſome, that know little but bowling) it will pleaſe plentifully.

Shep. Away: We'l none on't; heere has beene too much homely foolery already. I know (Sir) we weary you.

Pol. You wearie thoſe that refreſh vs: pray let's ſee theſe foure-threes of Herdſmen.

Ser. One three of them, by their owne report (Sir,) hath danc'd before the King: and not the worſt of the three, but iumpes twelue foote and a halfe by th'ſquire.

Shep. Leaue your prating, ſince theſe good men are pleaſ'd, let them come in (but quickly now).

Ser. Why (they ſtay at doore Sir).

Heere a Dance of twelue Satyres.

Pol. O Father, you'l know more of that heereafter. Is it not too farre gone? 'Tis time to part them. He's ſimple, and tells much. How now (faire ſhepheard) Your heart is full of ſomething that takes Your minde from feaſting. Sooth, when I was yong, And handed Loue, as you do, I was wont To load my She with knackes: I would haue ranſackt The Pedlers ſilken treaſury, and powr'd it To her acceptance: you haue let him go, And nothing marted with him. If your Laſſe Interpretation ſhould abuſe, and call this Your lacke of loue, or bid him leaue, what after Were beſt to ſend for ſome her abſence ſued, To hinder his returne. No, hath her hand Feeling of her greene vaines, more ruddy then The Lawne ſhe worke's on? Hath ſhe any cunning In hand, tongue, eare, eye, motion, that will beare Our beſt obſeruation? Can ſhe ſing, reckon, dance, Or (should our Spring make preſent vſe of her) Tell vs from whence ſhe learn'd the ſtranger obſeruance? If ſo, ſhe hath not her Breeding, and her Generous Inheritance, from this poore Cottage, Her Princeſſe-like aire, her Goddeſſe-like pace, Are ſtrong reproouers of her Countrey-breeding. O maſter of a Feaſt, this Lady Is the ſubiect of my Hiſtory, and reaſon Why I ſpeake to her: ſhe is the Queene of Curds and Creame.

Clo. Sir, my Gheſſe is no leſſe.

Pol. Moſt Goddeſſe-like prank'd vp: But that our Feaſts In euery meane man's minde, made Gods by Feaſts, Are vſed more then in their Temples, where I ſhould haue fear'd diſhoneſty: how would (O Father) I thinke this Lady Would paſſe for Maid to Proſerpine? For Flowres now ſeaſon'd, are nor roſes, Lillies, Nor the blew Violets dedicate to Death, But ſweeter then the lids of Iuno's eyes, Or Cytherea's breath. Pray you a poſie.

Per. Here's flowres for you: Hot Lauender, Mints, Sauory, Marioram, the Marigold, That goes to bed wi'Sunne, and with him ryſes Weeping: theſe are flowres Of middle ſummer, and I think they are giuen To men of middle age. You're very welcome.

Cam. I ſhould leaue grazing, were I of your flocke, And only liue by gazing.

Per. Out alas: You'd be ſo leane, that blaſts of Ianuary Would blow you through and through. Now my fairſt friend, I would I had ſome Flowres o'th'Spring, that might Become your time of day: and yours, and yours, That weare vpon your virgin branches yet Your Maiden-heads growing: O Proſerpina, For the flowres now, that (frighted) thou let'ſt fall From Dis's Waggon: Daffadils, That come before the Swallow dares, and take The winds of March with beauty: Violets (dim, But ſweeter then the lids of Iuno's eyes, Or Cytherea's breath) Pale Primroſes, That die vnmarried, ere they can behold Bright Phœbus in his ſtrength (a malady Moſt incident to Maids) Bold Oxlips, and The Crowne Imperiall: Lillies of all kinds, The flowre-de-luce being one. O, theſe I lacke, To make you Garlands of, and my ſweet friend, To ſtrew him o're, and ore, that you will wed: And poore (but ſweet) and preſty fancies, will You take them off my hands: I'll take them ſtraight.

Flo. Old Sir, I know She prizes not ſuch trifles as theſe are: The gifts ſhe lookes from me, are packt and lockt Vp in my heart, which I haue giuen already, But not deliuer'd. O heare me breath my life Before this ancient Sir, whom (it ſhould ſeeme) Hath ſometime lou'd: I take thy hand, this hand, As ſoft as Doues-downe, and white as it, Or Ethyopians tooth, or the fan'd ſnow, that's bolted By th'Northerne blaſts, twice o're.

Pol. What follower this? How prettily th'yong Swaine ſeemes to waſh The hand, was faire before? I haue put you out, But to your proteſtation: Let me heare What you profeſſe.

Flo. Do, and be witneſſe too't.

Pol. And this my neighbour too?

Flo. And he, and more Then he, and men: the earth, the heauens, and all, That were I crown'd the moſt Imperiall Monarch Thereof moſt worthy, were I the fayreſt youth That euer made eye ſwerue, had force and knowledge More then was euer man, I would not prize them Without her Loue; for her, employ them all, Commend them, and condemne them to her ſeruice, Or to their owne perdition.

Pol. Fairely offer'd.

Cam. This ſhewes a ſound affection

Shep. But my Daughter, Say you the like to him.

Per. I cannot ſpeake So well (nothing ſo well) no, nor meane better By th'patterne of mine owne thoughts, I cut out The purity of his.

Shep. Take hands, a bargaine, And friends vnknowne, you ſhall beare witneſſe too: I giue my daughter to him, and will make Her Portion, equall his.

Flo. O, that muſt bee I'th'Vertue of your daughter: One being dead, I ſhall haue more then you can dreame of yet, Enough then for your wonder: but come-on, Contract vs fore theſe Witneſſes.

Shep. Come, your hand: And daughter, yours.

Pol. Soft Swaine a-while, beſeech you, Haue you a Father?

Flo. I haue: but what of him?

Pol. Knowes he of this?

Flo. He neither do's, nor ſhall.

Pol. Me-thinkes a Father, Is at the Nuptiall of his ſonne, a gueſt That beſt becomes the Table: Pray you once more Is not your Father growne incapeable Of reaſonable affayres? Is he not ſtupid With Age, and alring Rheumes? Can he ſpeake? heare? Know man, from man? Diſpute his owne eſtate? Lies he not bed-rid? And againe, do's nothing But what he did, being childiſh?

Flo. No good Sir, He has but (as) earth, and ampler ſtrength indeede Then moſt haue of his age.

Pol. By my white beard, You offer him (if this be ſo) a wrong Something vnfiliall. Reaſon my ſonne Should chooſe himſelfe a wife, but as good reaſon The Father (all whoſe ioy is nothing elſe But fayre poſterity) ſhould hold ſome counſaile In ſuch a buſineſſe.

Flo. I yeeld all this; But for ſome other reaſons (my graue Sir) Which 'tis not fit you know, I not acquaint My Father of this buſineſſe.

Pol. Let him know't.

Flo. He ſhall not.

Pol. Prethee let him.

Flo. No, he muſt not.

Shep. Let him (my ſonne) he ſhall not need to greeue At knowing of thy choice.

Flo. Come, come, he muſt not: Marke our Contract.

Pol. Marke your diuorce (yong ſir) Whom ſonne I dare not call. Thou art too baſe To be acknowledge. Thou a Scepters heire, That thus affects a ſheepe-hooke? Thou, old Traitor, I am ſorry, that by hanging thee, I can but ſhorten thy life one weeke. And thou, freſh peece Of excellent Witchcraft, whom of force muſt know The royall Foole thou coap'ſt with.

Shep. Oh my heart.

Pol. Ile haue thy beauty ſcratcht with briers & made More homely then thy ſtate. For thee (fond boy) If I may euer know thou doſt but ſigh, That thou no more ſhalt neuer ſee this knacke (as neuer I meane thou ſhalt) we'l barre thee from ſucceſſion, Not hold thee of our blood, no not our Kin, Farre then Deucalion off: (marke thou my words) Follow vs to the Court. Thou Churle, for this time (Though full of our diſpleaſure) yet we free thee From the dead blow of it. And you Enchantment,

Wor-

Worthy enough a Heard man  yes him too,
That makes himselfe (but for our Honor therein)
Vnworthy thee  I euer hence for ty, thou
These turne Fatches to  s entrance open,
Or hope his body  more, with thy embraces,
I will deuise a death, as cruell for thee
As thou art tender to't.  Exit
Tard. Euen here vndone:
I was not much a fear'd  for once, or twice
I was about to speake, and tell him plainely,
The selfe same Sun, that shines vpon his Court,
Hides not his visage from our Cottage, but
Lookes on alike. Will please you (Sir) be gone?
I told you what would come of this. Beest  ,
Of your owne vocation: take care  This dreame of mine
Being now awake, Ile Queene it no  ,
But milke my Ewes, and weepe.
Cam. Why how now Father,
Speake ere thou dyest.
Sup. I cannot speake, nor think,
Nor dare to know that which I know. O Sir,
You haue vndone a man of  , restore him
That thought to  , respect, neglect, yea,
To the speediest  ,
To eyed to be  , neeft by  , but now
Seuerely  , must put on my shrowd,  me
Where no Priest shouels  t. O cursed wretch,
That knew'st this was the  nce, and would'st vse more
To  gle in such a  , O  one vnlesse
I had  , neuer, neuer, I had seene
I had  e when I  re.  Exit
Flo. Why  ould you  o pon me?
I am  ory, not  ear'd  denyed
Beyond  gainst  What I was, am:
More  ming on, for  ching backe, not  wing
My  aft  wardly
Cam. Cr  ton  my Lord
You know my Father's  per  at this time
He will allow no  e  do gentle
You do  purpose to  s  ly
Wo  eem,  e you  ,  e Heire,
Then tell the  y  s Hy  cile feate
Come not  e  ction
Flo. I not  po
I take Camillo
Cam. I am  e, my Lord,
Per How often haue I told you 'twould be thus?
How often said my dignity would last
But till 'twer known?
Flo. It cannot fayle, but by
The  olation of my  ,  then
I let Nature crush the  s to heart  gether,
And marre the seeds within. I  pt  y lookes
From my face (Least  w pe me Father) I
Am  heyre to my affection.
Cam Be  s'd,
Flo. I am  ake my fa  e, if my Reason
Vn  thereto be obedient  I  ue reason
If not, my sences better pleas'd with madnesse,
Do bid it welcome.
Cam. This  s of  perate  r.)
Flo. So call it  but  dos tell me vow
I needs must think it  onesty. Camillo,
Not for Bohemia  or the pompe that may
Be  thereat  ie  s  for all the Sun sees, or
The close earth wombes, or the profound seas, hides
In vnknowne fadomes, will I breake my oath
To  s my faire beloued  Therefore, I pray you,
As you haue euer bin my Fathers honour'd friend,
When he shall misse me, as (in faith I meane not
To see him any more) cast your good counsailes
Vpon his passion. Let my  e, and Fortune
Tug for the time to come  This you may know,
And so deliuer, I am put to Sea
With her, who  eere, I cannot hold on shore:
And most opportune to  ceede, I haue
A Vessell  es  t by, but not prepar'd
For this  e  What course I meane to hold
Shall not  benefit your knowledge, nor Concerne me  e reporting.
Cam. O my Lord,
I  ould not  eere softer for aduice,
O  stronger  r  ecue.
Flo. Haste  ards,
Le  ease you by, or by
Cam. Hee  remoueable,
Re  d for night. Now were happy if
Hap  g I could  ame to  ercome my  ine,
Saue him from danger, do him loue and  nour,
Purchase the sight again of deere Sicilia,
And that vnhappy  g, my Master, whom
I so  e  ith to  e
Flo. Now good Camillo,
I am so  ast  with curious  e  ffe, that
I  eare not  crem  s.
Cam. Sir, I  ke
You haue  eard of my poore  ru  ces, I  lode
That  e  e  ter your  ers?
Flo. Very nobly
Haue you  ed  It  s my Fathers Mo  cke
To speake your deeds  or little of his care
To haue  em recompenc'd, as thought on.
Cam Well (my Lord)
If you may please to  e  , loue the K  g,
And through him, what's nearest to him, which is
Your gracious  e  embrace by my direction,
(Your  e  ous  ous  ed  ted protect
May  ter a  ration.  On my  or,
I  pose you where you shall haue such receiuing
As shall become your  e  e where you may
  ,  ect Mistris, from whom, I see
There's no  ion to  e  e but by
As  ers  ) your  e  Marry her,
And with my best  e  ours to your  ence.
Your discontenting Father, striue to qualifie
And bring him vp to  ing.
Flo. How Camillo
May this, almost a miracle) be done?
That I may call thee  ing, more then man.
And after that truft to thee.
Cam Haue you  ought  on
A place where we will go?
Flo. Not any yet
But as th'  ent  ing  ce dent is guiltie
To what we  ild  o, so we professe
Our selues to be the slaues of chance, and flyes
Of  ery  nde that blowes.
Cam. Then list to me
This follow  s  you will not change your purpose
But vndergo this flight, make for Sicilia,
And there present your  e, and your fayre Princesse,
(For so I see she must be, 'fore Leontes;

She shall be habited, as it becomes
The partner of your Bed. Me thinkes I see
Leontes opening his free Armes, and weeping
His Welcomes forth: asks thee there Sonne forgiuenesse,
As 'twere i'th' Fathers person: kisses the hands
Of your fresh Princesse, o're and o're diuides him
'Twixt his vnkindnesse, and his Kindnesse: th'one
He chides to Hell, and bids the other grow
Faster then Thought, or Time.
Flo. Worthy Camillo,
What colour for my Visitation, shall I
Hold vp before him?
Cam. Sent by the King your Father
To greet him, and to giue no colour for't. Sir,
The manner of your bearing towards him, with
What you (as from your Father) shall deliuer,
Things known betwixt vs three, Ile write you downe,
The which shall point you forth at euery sitting
What you must say: that he shall not perceiue,
But that you haue your Fathers Bosome there,
And speake his very Heart.
Flo. I am bound to you.
There is some sappe in this.
Cam. A Course more promising,
Then a wild dedication of your selues
To vnpath'd Waters, vndream'd Shores; most certaine,
To Miseries enough: no hope to helpe you,
But as you shake off one, to take another:
Nothing so certaine, as your Anchors, who
Doe their best office, if they can but stay you,
Where you'le be loth to be: besides you know,
Prosperity's the very bond of Loue
Whose fresh complexion, and whose heart together,
Affliction alters.
Perd. One of these is true:
I thinke Affliction may subdue the Cheeke,
But not take-in the Mind.
Cam. Yea? say you so?
There shall not, at your Fathers House, these seauen yeeres
Be borne another such.
Flo. My good Camillo,
She's as forward of her Breeding, as
She is i'th' rear'our Birth.
Cam. I cannot say, 'tis pitty
She lacks Instructions, for she seemes a Mistresse
To most that teach.
Perd. Your pardon Sir, for this,
Ile blush you Thanks.
Flo. My prettiest Perdita.
But O, the Thornes we stand vpon: (Camillo)
Preseruer of my Father, now of me,
The Medicine of our House: how shall we doe?
We are not furnish'd like Bohemia's Sonne,
Nor shall appeare in Sicilia.
Cam. My Lord,
Feare none of this. I thinke you know my fortunes
Doe all lye there: it shall be so my care,
To haue you royally appointed, as if
The Scene you play, were mine. For instance Sir,
That you may know you shall not want: one word.

Enter Autolycus.

Aut. Ha, ha, what a Foole Honestie is? and Trust (his sworne brother) a very simple Gentleman. I haue sold all my Trompery: not a counterfeit Stone, not a Ribbon, Glasse, Pomander, Browch, Table-booke, Ballad, Knife, Tape, Gloue, Shooe-tye, Bracelet, Horne-Ring, to keepe my Pack from fasting: they throng who should buy first, as if my Trinkets had beene hallowed, and brought a benediction to the buyer: by which meanes, I saw whose Purse was best in Picture; and what I saw, to my good vse, I remembred. My Clowne (who wants but something to be a reasonable man) grew so in loue with the Wenches Song, that hee would not stirre his Pettey-toes, till he had both Tune and Words, which so drew the rest of the Heard to me, that all their other Senses stucke in Eares: you might haue pinch'd a Placket, it was senceleſſe; 'twas nothing to geld a Cod-peece of a Purse: I would haue filed Keyes of that hung in Chaynes: no hearing, no feeling, but my Sirs Song, and admiring the Nothing of it. So that in this time of Lethargie, I picked and cut most of their Festiuall Purses. And had not the old-man come in with a Whoo-bub against his Daughter, and the Kings Sonne, and scar'd my Choughes from the Chaffe, I had not left a Purse aliue in the whole Army.
Cam. Nay, but my Letters by this meanes being there
So soone as you arriue, shall cleare that doubt.
Flo. And those that you'le procure from King Leontes
Cam. Shall satisfie your Father.
Perd. Happy be you:
All that you speake, shewes fayre.
Cam. Who haue we here?
We'le make an Instrument of this: omit
Nothing may giue vs aide.
Aut. If they haue ouer-heard me now, why hanging.
Cam. How now (good Fellow)
Why shak'st thou so? Feare not (man)
Here's no harme intended to thee.
Aut. I am a poore Fellow, Sir.
Cam. Why, be so still: here's no body will steale that from thee: yet for the out-side of thy pouerty, we must make an exchange; therefore dis-case thee instantly (thou must thinke there's a necessitie in't) and change Garments with this Gentleman: Though the penny-worth (on his side, be the worst, that euer touch'd any Seruant
Aut. I am a poore Fellow, Sir: (I know ye well enough.)
Cam. Nay prethee dispatch: the Gentleman is halfe flead already.
Aut. Are you in earnest, Sir? (I smell the trick on't.)
Flo. Dispatch, I prethee.
Aut. Indeed I haue had Earnest, but I cannot with conscience take it.
Cam. Vnbuckle, vnbuckle.
Fortunate Mistresse (let my prophecie
Come home to ye) you must retire your selfe
Into some Couert; take your sweet-hearts Hat
And pluck it ore your Browes, muffle your face,
Dis-mantle you, and (as you can) disliken
The truth of your owne seeming, that you may
(For I doe feare eyes ouer) to Ship-boord
Get vndescry'd.
Perd. I see the Play so lyes,
That I must beare a part.
Cam. No remedie:
Haue you done there?
Flo. Should I now meet my Father,
He would not call me Sonne
Cam. Nay, you shall haue no Hat:
Come Lady, come: Farewell (my friend.)
Aut. Adieu, Sir.
Flo. O Perdita. what haue we twaine forgot?

'Pray

Pray you a word.

Cam. What I doe next, shall be to tell the King
Of this escape, and whither they are bound;
Wherein, my hope is, I shall so prevaile,
To force him after, to whose company
I shall re-view Sicilia; for whose sight,
I have a Womans Longing.

Flo. Fortune speed vs:
Thus we set on (Camillo) to th' Sea-side.

Cam. The swifter speed, the better. Exeunt

Aut. I understand the businesse, I heare: it to have an open eare, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, as needfull for a Cut-purse, a good Nose is requisite also, to smell out worke for th' other Senses. I see this is the time that the unjust man doth thriue. What an exchange were this been without boote? What a boote is here, with this exchange? Sure the Gods doe this yeere connive at vs, and we may doe any thing extempore. The Prince himselfe is about a peece of Iniquity, stealing away from his Father with his Clog at his heeles. If I had but two houres of this Trade, I might advance my selfe to a Side-Boord, or a Corner-Cupboord, or a Lay-Stall: I would the more kindely accept it, and the gallowes should be my Steeple. Enter Clowne and Shepheard.

Aside, aside, here is more matter for a hot brayne: Every Lanes end, every Shop, Church, Session, Hanging, yeelds a carefull man worke.

Clowne. See, see what a man you are now? there is no other way, but to tell the King she's a Changeling, and none of your flesh and blood.

Shep. Nay but heare me.

Clow. Nay, but heare me.

Shep. Goe too then.

Clow. She being none of your flesh and blood, your flesh and blood has not offended the King, and so your flesh and blood is not to be punish'd by him. Shew those things you found about her, those secret things, about what (the no) with her. This being done, let the Law goe whistle: I warrant you.

Shep. I will tell the King all, every word, yea and his Sonnes pranckes too, who, I may say, is no honest man, neither to his Father nor to me, to goe about to make me the Kings Brother in Law.

Clow. Indeed Brother in Law was the farthest off you could haue beene to him, and then your Blood had beene the dearer by I know how much an ounce.

Aut. Very wisely (Puppies.)

Shep. Well: let vs to the King: there is that in this Farthell, will make him scratch his Beard.

Aut. I know not what impediment this Complaint may be to the flight of my Master.

Clo. 'Pray heartily he be at Pallace.

Aut. Though I am not naturally honest, I am so sometimes by chance: Let me pocket vp my Pedlers excrement. How now (Rustiques) whither are you bound?

Shep. To th' Pallace (and it like your Worship.)

Aut. Your Affaires there? what? with whom? the Condition of that Farthell? the place of your dwelling? your names? your ages? of what having? breeding, and any thing that is fitting to be knowne, discouer?

Clo. We are but plaine fellowes Sir.

Aut. A Lye; you are rough, and hairy. Let me haue no lying; it becomes none but Tradesmen, and they often giue vs (Souldiers) the Lye, but we pay them for it with stamped Coyne not stabbing Steele, therefore they doe not giue vs the Lye.

Clo. Your Worship had like to haue given vs one, if you had not taken your selfe with the manner.

Shep. Are you a Courtier, and't like you Sir?

Aut. Whether it like me, or no, I am a Courtier. Seest thou not the ayre of the Court, in these enfoldings? Hath not my gate in it, the measure of the Court? Receiues not thy Nose Court-Odour from me? Reflect I not on thy Baseneſſe, Court-Contempt? Think'st thou, for that I insinuate, at'toaze from thee thy Businesse, I am therefore no Courtier? I am Courtier Cap-a-pe: and one that will eyther push-on, or pluck back, thy Businesse there, whereupon I command thee to open thy Affaire.

Shep. My Businesse Sir, is to the King.

Aut. What Aduocate hast thou to him?

Shep. I know not (and't like you.)

Clo. Aduocate's the Court-word for a Pheazant: say you haue none.

Shep. None, Sir: I haue no Pheazant Cock nor Hen.

Aut. How blessed are we that are not simple men? Yet Nature might haue made me as these are,
Therefore I will not disdaine.

Clo. This cannot be but a great Courtier.

Shep. His Garments are rich, but he weares them not handsomely.

Clo. He seemes to be the more Noble in's reproofe. A great man, I'le warrant, I know by the picking on's Teeth.

Aut. The Farthell there? What's i' the Farthell? Wherefore that Box?

Shep. Sir, there lyes such Secrets in this Farthell and Box, which none must know but the King, and which he shall know within this houre, if I may come to speake to him.

Aut. Art thou so fast? thy Condition and thy Ship tell me thou art trim: but I see in thy face, as thou wert a Carpenters Mate, that blowes himselfe with Phisicke: but what thou dost (as thou art a Cut-purse) I shall not feele, for turning the Inside of my Gowne Outward, I shall not see thy Fact. Yet know I how much an ounce.

Shep. Sir, I see by your Garment, you haue seene the King, and his Affaires.

Aut. Thou know'st he is at Pallace, he is gone aboord a new Ship, to purge Melancholy, and ayre himselfe: for if thou be'st capable of things serious, thou must know the King is full of griefe.

Shep. So 'tis said Sir: about his Sonne, that should haue married a Shepheards Daughter.

Aut. If that Shepheard be not in hand-fast to let him fly: there is like to be the hottest Loue-broyle in Christendome, that happens this hundred yeere. But what with the Hearke of this Counsell? If this Old Man haue not offended the King, he cannot choose, vnlesse he feele a Palsie vpon him, make scrapes with his Heeles, and with his Head bow to his Knees, creeping like vnto his Graue. I smell the Businesse, and the Transportation preuailes on't.

Shep. So 'tis said Sir: about his Sonne, that should haue married a Shepheards Daughter.

Tell me(for you seeme to be honest plaine men)what you haue to the King: being something gently consider'd,Ile bring you where he is aboord, tender your persons to his presence, whisper him in your behalfes; and if it be in man, besides the King,to effect your Suites, here is man shall doe it.

Clow. He seemes to be of great authoritie: close with him, giue him Gold; and though Authoritie be a stubborne Beare, yet he is oft led by the Nose with Gold: shew the in-side of your Purse to the out-side of his hand, and no more adoe. Remember ston'd, and flay'd alriue.

Shep. And't please you(Sir)to vndertake the Businesse for vs, here is that Gold I haue: Ile make it as much more, and leaue this young man in pawne, till I bring it you.

Aut. After I haue done what I promised?

Shep. I Sir.

Aut. Well, giue me the Moitie: Are you a partie in this Businesse?

Clow. In some sort, Sir: but though my case be a pittifull one,I hope I shall not be flayd out of it.

Aut. Oh, that's the case of the Shepheards Sonne hang him,hee'le be made an example

Clow. Comfort,good comfort: We must to the King, and shew our strange sights: he must know 'tis none of your Daughter, nor my Sister: we are gone else. Sir,I will giue you as much as this old man do's, when the Businesse is performed,and remaine(as he sayes)your pawne till it be brought you.

Aut. I will trust you. Walke before toward the Sea-side, goe on the right hand, I will but looke vpon the Hedge,and follow you.

Clow. We are blest'd,in this man: as I may say, euen blest'd.

Shep Let's before,as he bids vs: he was prouided to doe vs good.

Aut. If I had a mind to be honest,I see Fortune would not suffer mee: shee drops Booties in my mouth. I am courted now with a double occasion: Gold,and a meanes to doe the Prince my Master good, which,who knowes how that may turne backe to my aduancement?) I will bring these two Moales,these blind-ones,aboord him. If he thinke it fit to shoare them againe, and that the Complaint they haue to the King, concernes him nothing, let him call me Rogue, for being so farre officious, for I am proofe against that Title,and what shame else belongs to't. To him will I present them,there may be matter in it. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Leontes,Cleomines Dion,Paulina Seruants Hermiol. Perdita

Cleo. Sir,you haue done enough,and haue perform'd A Saint-like Sorrow. No fault could you make, Which you haue not redeem'd; indeed pay'd downe More penitence,then done trespas: At the last Doe,as the Heauens haue done; forget your euill, With them,forgiue your selfe.

Leo. Whilest I remember Her,and her Vertues, I cannot forget My blemishes in them,and so still thinke of The wrong I did my selfe: which was so much, That Heire-lesse it hath made my Kingdome,and Destroy'd the sweet'st Companion, that ere man Bred his hopes out of,true

Paul. Too true(my Lord.) If one by one,you wedded all the World, Or from the All that are,tooke something good, To make a perfect Woman; she you kill'd, Would be vnparallell'd.

Leo. I thinke so. Kill'd? She I kill'd? I did so: but thou strik'st me Sorely,to say I did: it is as bitter Vpon thy Tongue,as in my Thought. Now,good now, Say so but seldome

Cleo. Not at all, good Lady: You might haue spoken a thousand things,that would Haue done the time more benefit,and grac'd Your kindnesse better.

Paul. You are one of those Would haue him wed againe.

Dio If you would not so, You pitty not the State,nor the Remembrance Of his most Soueraigne Name: Consider little, What Dangers,by his Highnesse faile of Issue, May drop vpon his Kingdome,and deuoure Incertaine lookers on. What were more holy, Then to reioyce the former Queene is well? What holyer,than for Royalties repayre, For present comfort,and for future good, To blesse the Bed of Maiestie againe With a sweet Fellow to't?

Paul There is none worthy, (Respecting her that's gone) besides the Gods Will haue fulfill'd their secret purposes: Is't not the Daunce Apollo got? Is't not the tenor of his Oracle, That King Leontes shall not haue an Heire, Till his lost Child be found? Which, that it shall, Is all as monstrous to our humane reason, As my Antigonus to breake his Graue, And come againe to me, who,on my life, Did perish with the Infant. 'Tis your councell, My Lord should to the Heauens be contrary, Oppose against their wills. Care not for Issue, The Crowne will find an Heire. Great Alexander Left his to th' Worthiest: so his Successor Was like to be the best

Leo. Good Paulina, Who hast the memorie of Hermione I know in honor: O,that euer I Had squar'd me to thy councell: then,euen now, I might haue look'd vpon my Queenes full eyes, Haue taken Treasure from her Lippes.

Paul. And left them More rich,for what they yeelded.

Leo. Thou speak'st truth: No more such Wiues,therefore no Wife: one worse, And better vs'd,would make her Sainted Spirit Againe possesse her Corps,and on this Stage (Where we Offendors now appeare) Soule-vext, And begin,why to me?

Paul. Had she such power, She had iust such cause.

Leo. She had, and would incense me To murther her I married.

Paul. I

Paul. I should so:
Were I the Ghost that walk'd, I'd bid you marke
Her eye, and tell me for what dull part in't
You chose her: then I'd shrieke, that euen your eares
Should rift to heare me, and the words that follow'd,
Should be, Remember mine
Leo. Starres, Starres,
And all eyes else, dead coales: feare thou no Wife;
Ile haue no Wife, Paulina.
Paul. Will you sweare
Neuer to marry, but by my free leaue?
Leo. Neuer (Paulina) so be blest my Spirit.
Paul Then good my Lords, beare witnesse to his Oath.
Cleo. You tempt him ouer-much.
Paul. Vnlesse another,
As like Hermione, as is her Picture,
Affront his eye.
Cleo. Good Madame, I haue done.
Paul. Yet if my Lord will marry: if you will, Sir;
No remedie but you will: Giue me the Office
To chuse you a Queene: she shall not be so young
As was your former, but she shall be such
As (walk'd your first Queenes Ghost) it should take ioy
To see her in your armes.
Leo. My true Paulina,
We shall not marry, till thou bidst vs.
Paul. That
Shall be when your first Queene's againe in breath:
Neuer till then.

Enter a Seruant

Ser. One that giues out himselfe Prince Florizell, Sonne of Polixenes with his Princesse (she
The fairest I haue yet beheld) desires accesse
To your high presence.
Leo. What with him? he comes not
Like to his Fathers Greatnesse: his approach
(So out of circumstance, and suddaine) tells vs,
'Tis not a Visitation fram'd, but forc'd
By need, and accident. What Traine?
Ser. But few,
And those but meane.
Leo. His Princesse (say you) with him?
Ser. I: the most peerelesse peece of Earth, I thinke,
That ere the Sunne shone bright on.
Paul. Oh Hermione,
As euery present Time doth boast it selfe
Aboue a better, gone; so must thy Graue
Giue way to what's seene now. Sir, you your selfe
Haue said, and writ so; but your writing now
Is colder then that Theame: she had not beene,
Nor was not to be equall'd, thus your Verse
Flow'd with her Beautie once, 'tis shrewdly ebb'd,
To say you haue seene a better.
Ser. Pardon, Madame:
The one, I haue almost forgot (your pardon)
The other, when she has obtain'd your eye,
Will haue your Tongue too. This is a Creature,
Would she begin a Sect, might quench the zeale
Of all Professors else; make Proselytes
Of who she but bid follow.
Paul. How? not women?
Ser. Women will loue her, that she is a Woman
More worth then any Man: Men, that she is
The rarest of all Women.
Leo. Goe Cleomines,
Your selfe (assisted with your honor'd Friends)
Bring them to our embracement. Still 'tis strange,
He thus should steale vpon vs. Exit.
Paul. Had our Prince
(Iewel of Children) seene this houre, he had payr'd
Well with this Lord; there was not full a moneth
Betweene their births.
Leo. 'Prethee no more; cease: thou know'st
He dyes to me againe, when talk'd-of: sure
When I shall see this Gentleman, thy speeches
Will bring me to consider that, which may Vnfurnish me of Reason. They are come.

Enter Florizell, Perdita, Cleomines and others.

Your Mother was most true to Wedlock, Prince,
For she did print your Royall Father off,
Conceiuing you. Were I but twentie one,
Your Fathers Image is so hit in you,
(His very Ayre) that I should call you Brother,
As I did him, and speake of something wildly
By vs performd before. Most dearely welcome,
And your faire Princesse (Goddesse) oh, alas,
I lost a couple, that 'twixt Heauen and Earth
Might thus haue stood, begetting wonder, as
You (gracious Couple) doe: and then I lost
(All mine owne Folly) the Societie,
Amitie too of your braue Father, whom
(Though bearing Misery) I desire my life
Once more to looke on him.
Flo. By his command
Haue heere touch'd Sicilia, and from him
Giue you all greetings, that a King (at friend)
Can send his Brother: and but Infirmitie
(Which waits vpon worne times) hath something seiz'd
His wish'd Ability, he had himselfe
The Lands and Waters, 'twixt your Throne and his,
Measur'd, to looke vpon you; whom he loues
(He bad me say so, more then all the Scepters,
And those that beare them, liuing.
Leo. Oh my Brother,
(Good Gentleman) the wrongs I haue done thee, stirre
Afresh within me, and these thy offices
(So rarely kind) are as Interpreters
Of my behind-hand slacknesse. Welcome hither,
As is the Spring to th'Earth. And hath he too
Expos'd this Paragon to th'feareful vsage
(At least vngentle) of the dreadfull Neptune,
To greet a man, not worth her paines; much lesse,
Th'aduenture of her person?
Flo. Good my Lord,
She came from Libia
Leo. Where the Warlike Smalus,
That Noble honor'd Lord, is fear'd, and lou'd?
Flo. Most Royall Sir,
From thence: from him, whose Daughter
His Teares proclaym'd his parting with her: thence
(A prosperous South-wind friendly) we haue crost,
To execute the Charge my Father gaue me,
For visiting your Highnesse. My best Traine
I haue from your Sicilian Shores dismiss'd,
Who for Bohemia bend, to signifie
Not onely my successe in Libia (Sir)
But my arriuall, and my Wiues, in safetie
Heere, where we are.
Leo. The blessed Gods
Purge all Infection from our Ayre, whilest you
Doe Clymate here: you haue a holy Father,
A graceful Gentleman, against whose person

(So

(So facred as it is) I haue done ſinne,
For which, the Heauens (taking angry note)
Haue left me Iſſue-leſſe: and your Father's bleſs'd
(As he from Heauen merits it) with you,
Worthy his goodneſſe. What might I haue been,
Might I a Soone and Daughter now haue look'd on,
Such goodly things as you?

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Moſt Noble Sir,
That which I ſhall report, will beare no credit,
Were not the prooſe ſo nigh. Pleaſe you (great Sir)
Bohemia greets you from himſelfe, by me:
Deſires you to attach his Sonne, who has
(His Dignitie, and Duties both caſt off)
Fled from his Father, from his Hopes, and with A Shepheards Daughter.

Leo. Where's Bohemia? ſpeake:

Lord. Here, in your Citie: I now came from him.
I ſpeake amazedly, and it becomes
My meruaile, and my Meſſage. To your Court
Whiles he was haſtning (in the Chaſe, it ſeemes,
Of this faire Couple) meetes he on the way
The Father of this ſeeming Lady, and
Her Brother, hauing both their Country quitted,
With this young Prince.

Flo. Camillo has betray'd me;
Whoſe honor, and whoſe honeſtie till now,
Endur'd all Weathers.

Lord. Lay't ſo to his charge:
He's with the King your Father.

Leo. Who? Camillo?

Lord. Camillo (Sir:) I ſpake with him: who now
Has theſe poore men in queſtion. Never ſaw I
Wretches ſo quake: they kneele, they kiſſe the Earth;
For weare their ſelues as often, as they ſpeake:
Bohemia ſtops his eares, and threatens them
With diuers deaths, in death.

Perd. Oh my poore Father:
The Heauen ſets Spyes vpon vs, will not haue
Our Contract celebrated.

Leo. You are married?

Flo. We are not (Sir) nor are we like to be:
The Starres (I ſee) will kiſſe the Valleyes firſt:
The odds for high and low's alike.

Leo. My Lord,
Is this the Daughter of a King?

Flo. She is,
When once ſhe is my Wife.

Leo. That once (I ſee) by your good Fathers ſpeed,
Will come-on very ſlowly. I am ſorry
(Moſt ſorry) you haue broken from his liking,
Where you were ty'd in duetie: and as ſorry,
Your Choiſe is not ſo rich in Worth, as Beautie,
That you might well enioy her.

Flo. Deare, looke vp:
Though Fortune (viſible an Enemie,
Should chaſe vs with my Father; powre no leſt
Hath ſhe to change our Loues. Beſeech you (Sir)
Remember, ſince you ow'd no more to Time
Than I; ſo nor now much thought of ſuch Affections,
Step forth mine Aduocate: at your requeſt,
My Father will graunt precious things, as Trifles.

Leo. Would he doe ſo, I'ld beg your precious Miſtris,
Which he counts but a Trifle.

Pau. Sir (my Liege)
You haue done enough, and too much, youth in't: not a moneth
'Fore your Queene dy'd, ſhe was more worth ſuch gazes,
Then what you looke on now.

Leo. I thought of her,
Euen in theſe Looke I made. But your Petition
Is yet vn-anſwer'd: I will to your Father:
Your Honor not o're-throwne by your deſires,
I am friend to them, and you: Vpon which Errand
I now goe toward him: therefore follow me,
And marke what way I make: Come good my Lord.

Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Antigonus, and a Gentleman.

Ant. Beſeech you (Sir) were you preſent at this Relation?

Gent. 1. I was by at the opening of the Fardell, heard the old Shepheard deliuer the manner how he found it: Whereupon (after a little amazedneſſe) we were all commanded out of the Chamber: only this (me thought) I heard the Shepheard ſay, he found the Child.

Ant. I would moſt gladly know the iſſue of it.

Gent. 1. I make a broken deliuerie of the Buſineſſe; but the changes I perceiued in the King and Camillo, were very Notes of admiration: they ſeem'd almoſt, with ſtaring on one another, to teare the Caſes of their Eyes. There was ſpeech in their dumbneſſe, Language in their very geſture: they look'd as they had heard of a World ranſom'd, or one deſtroyed: a notable paſſion of Wonder appeared in them. But the wiſeſt beholder, that knew no more but ſeeing, could not ſay, if the importance were Ioy, or Sorrow; but in the extremitie of the one, it muſt needs be.

Enter another Gentleman.

Here comes a Gentleman, that happily knowes more: The Newes, Rogero.

Gent. 2. Nothing but Bon-fires: the Oracle is fulfill'd: the Kings Daughter is found: ſuch a deale of wonder is broken out within this houre, that Ballad-makers cannot be able to expreſſe it.

Enter another Gentleman.

Here comes the Lady Paulina's Steward: he can deliuer you more. How goes it now (Sir.) This Newes (which is called true) is ſo like an old Tale, that the veritie of it is in ſtrong ſuſpition: Ha's the King found his Heire?

Gent. 3. Moſt true, if euer Truth were pregnant by Circumſtance: That which you heare, you'le ſweare you ſee, there is ſuch vnitie in the proofes. The Mantle of Queene Hermione's, her Iewell about the Neck of it, the Letters of Antigonus found with it, which they know to be his Character, the Maieſtie of the Creature, in reſemblance of the Mother: the Affection of Nobleneſſe, which Nature ſhewes aboue her Breeding, and many other Euidences, proclayme her, with all certaintie, to be the Kings Daughter. Did you ſee the meeting of the two Kings?

Gent 2. No.

Gent. 3. Then haue you loſt a Sight which was to be ſeene, cannot be ſpoken of. There might you haue beheld one Ioy crowne another, ſo and in ſuch manner, that it ſeem'd Sorrow wept to take leaue of them: for their Ioy waded in teares. There was caſting vp of Eyes, holding vp of Hands, with Countenance of ſuch diſtraction, that they were to be knowne by Garment, not by Fauor.

Our

Our King being ready to leape out of himselfe for ioy of his found Daughter; as if that Ioy were now become a Losse, cryes, Oh, thy Mother, thy Mother: then askes Bohemia forgiuenesse, then embraces his Sonne-in-Law: then againe worryes him, for Daughter, with clapping her Now he thanks the old Shepheard (which stands by, like a Weather-bitten Conduit, of many Kings reigne.) I never heard of such another Encounter, which lames Report to follow it, and vndo's description to boot.

Gent. 2. What, pray you, became of Antigonus that carryed hence the Child?

Gent. 3. Like an old Tale still, which will haue matter to rellish a good Faith in it, and little Truth, seeming Truth, which you heare, makes my offices with a part exempt. The Storme whereon I haue the Relation, was so like an Element in the Sea-fight, that to say it raged, and was tempestuous, is for the Mariner worne and beaten; and to say it was boysterous and cruell, is for the Nouice vnpractis'd. He first saw the Bay-Mares like the Horses of the Sea, before he could distinguish of their Sexes; and therefore could not say if the Spirit of Nature had gone with this Particular Accident. The Affayres of this Court, so diuersely painted in the Fortunes of our Behauiours, that for the most part it was to be maruayled whether it were a Tragedy or Comedy: for the Nobler they were indeed, the neerer they came to Sorrow: So were the Sorrowfull borne to the basenesse of Clownes, shaded with more then Clownish Fortune.

Gent. 1. Not the Duke himselfe, the Case standing as it doth, could chuse but finde Compassion.

Gent. 3. For Mamillius, a braue Child, worthy more Noble Mother then he had, by Possession of a Royall Fortune, and likely to haue answered Expectation: how he mended, after the Recouery of his Sister, is beyond Beleefe. Shee (I mean) that so promisingly is gone, and lost: for which the Father (now single) is so sorry, that he is vowed to seeke downe-right with the Heauens, to set downe by comparison, whose Sorrow is greatest: how shall we do to know it?

Gent. 1. That we learne by his King-like Brother, his wife, and Issue, who now reape the Harmes of his Passion.

Gent. 3. How the Iealousie of Camillo and Antigonus, that parted hence with the Child, and losse of their Noble Fellowes, touch'd the Sicilian Bosome: Hopefull Mamillius is dead, and the Care of the Children is all the Subiect that both Kingdomes haue, and none greater betweene them.

Gent. 2. Reuenges vpon her? Poore Lady, she may liue to haue hard Time to repent.

Gent. 3. Now the Sicilian Bosome will make him (I thinke) of so full, that flowing ouer 'twixt him and his dumbe Iudgements, he's like to finde his Remedy: Apt enough, I dare say, if the Powers abroad could as soone giue Comfort, as he shall neede it: for the Young Prince (now his Hope) is set downe after Hermione's Graue, into a Sadnesse, that I feare will driue him hastily after her. Shall we thither, and with our Company peece the Rejoycing?

Gent. 1. Who would be thence, that has his Eye retir'd? Moue in Obedience. Possesse our Absence makes vs vnhandsome to our Knowledge. Let's along. Exit.

Aut. Now had I not the dash of my former Life in me, would Preferment drop on my head. I brought the old Man and his Sonne aboord the Prince: told him, I heard them talke of a Fardell, and I know not what: but he at that time ouer-fond of the Shepheards Daughter (so he then tooke her to be) who began to be much Sea-sick, and himselfe little better, extremity of Weather continuing, this Mystery remained vndiscouer'd. But 'tis all one to me: for had I been the finder-out of this Secret, it would not haue relish'd among my other discredits.

Enter Shepherd and Clowne.

Here come those I haue done good to against my will, and already appearing in the blossomes of their Fortune.

Shep. Come Boy, I am past more Children: but thy Sonnes and Daughters will be all Gentlemen borne.

Clow. You are well met Sir: you denied to fight with me this other day, because I was no Gentleman borne. See you these Clothes? say you see them not, and think me still no Gentleman borne: You were best say these Robes are not Gentlemen: he that beholds me, shall say I am a Gentleman borne: but he'l say there's no matter for such Gentlemen borne: you were best say these Robes are not Gentlemen borne: Giue me the Lye: doe, and try whether I am not now a Gentleman borne.

Aut. I know you are now Sir a Gentleman borne.

Clow. I, and haue been so any time these foure houres.

Shep. And so haue I: and I cry more Gentlemen, then I haue yeares and Money to bestow on them, and none but the King omnes and euery where we stood, and had more teares then we could lacke to cry for the Queene, and her Children, and the Good King her Husband, which we haue made good with our Handkerchiefes.

Aut. Bee's not the Sonne of a Woman for these Teares.

Clow. I'le swore (if I could haue remembred a Lye) as big as any, to sweare you were no Sonne of mine.

Aut. Why, that's some comfort. What, Passenger?

Clow. Master, I haue seene Ships plye like Burre-thornes, to and fro, hoyst like Cockle-shells, and their Sailes as white as Mowlds or Snow, when the Blasts haue blowne them all to peeces. Passenger?

Aut. I smell the Trickes of a Knaue: I haue a sweet Fellow to a Fardell: Good Master, Passenger.

Shep. Nay, you shall see my Basket.

Clow. Nay, but my Fardell first.

Aut. I, it is in my Power to haue you both: Shewe it.

Clow. Here is it Sir: it hath been the Ruine of Speculation here, if it proue a rich one early.

Aut. Vnbinde the Fardell: Softly, softly: Aha, Boy, but art well borne? Open't, and shewe what's within.

Clow. I, and Money enough.

Aut. If the Seruice were now to be done, I'de choose it should be with such Rich Pay. Let me see: Vnfold it well.

Clow. Imprimis, a Robe of Tissue, cloth of Siluer, and Siluer Lace, and imbroidered with Orient Pearle, and a Diadem discouered.

Aut. Let me see: How came you by it?

Clow. A wonder, Master: I was a Shepheard, you know, when the Prince (why's Sonne) was fauour'd and affected by the Princesse from Bohemia. When I was but three Times Seuen yeares old, I was the best Cudgell-player in the Countrey: and I had a Rogue for my Seruant, who in my Mind, was a wondrous Man at his Weapon. Well, he is run out of Seruice now, and set vp: he had but Foure and Twenty Yeares, and three Months, when I taught him his Trade. Let me see: what was I about to say? Foure and Twenty Yeares, and three Months.

Aut. I thinke so: you were about to say so.

Clow. No, Sir: I was about to say, he was Foure and Twenty Yeares old, and that I was the first that euer taught him a Blow.

Aut. And how old is the Child then?

Clow. The Child: I meane not the Child, but my Seruant.

Aut. Leaue your Prating: since these Good Men are pleased, let them be vse their Affayres. Do you know me?

Clow. Not a whit, Master: not yet, but I shall be more obseruant.

Aut. Know you these two?

Clow. Not well Master, not well: I know him to be a Notable Coward, which others (more Valiant then he, and yet but Men) may offend, and he shall pocket vp Wrongs. Also he is a Great Fauourer of Forraine Wines and Liquors.

Aut. Come, you are well vnderstood: Stand you Authorized vpon your owne Report, and I'le worke with you.

Clow. Come, Father: be Honest, Act Nobly: Remember my Fortune.

Shep. You may say it, but not sweare it.

Clow. Not sweare it, now I am a Gentleman? Let Boores and Franklins say it, I'le sweare it.

Shep. How if it be false, Sonne?

Clow. If it be ne're so false, a true Gentleman may sweare it, in the behalfe of his friend: And I'le sweare to the Prince thou art a tall Fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt not be drunke: but I know thou art no tall Fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt be drunke: but I'le sweare it, and I would thou would'st be a tall Fellow of thy hands.

Aut. I will proue so, Sir, to my power.

Clow. I, by any meanes prooue a tall Fellow: If I do not wonder how thou dar'st venture to be drunke, not being a tall Fellow: trust me not. Hark, the Kings and the Princes our Kinsman, are come to see the Queenes Picture. Come, follow vs: we'le be thy good Masters. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Leontes, Polixenes, Florizell, Perdita, Camillo, Paulina, Hermione, and Traine.

Leo. O graue and good Paulina, the great comfort That I haue had of thee?

Cc Paul. What

Paul. What (Soueraigne Sir)
I did not well, I meant well: all my Seruices
You haue paid home. But that you haue vouchsaf'd
(With your Crown'd Brother, and these your contracted Heires of your Kingdomes) my poore House to visit;
It is a surplus of your Grace, which neuer
My life may last to answere.
Leo. O Paulina,
We honor you with trouble: but we came
To see the Statue of our Queene. Your Gallerie
Haue we pass'd through, not without much content
In many singularities, but we saw not
That which my Daughter came to looke vpon,
The Statue of her Mother.
Paul. As she liued peerelesse,
So her dead likeneſſe I doe well beleeue
Excells whatsoeuer yet you look'd vpon,
Or hand of Man hath done: therefore I keepe it
Louely, apart. But here it is: prepare
To see the Life as liuely mock'd, as euer
Still Sleepe mock'd Death: behold, and say 'tis well.
I like your silence, it the more shewes-off
Your wonder: but yet speake, first you (my Liege)
Comes it not something neere?
Leo. Her naturall Posture.
Chide me (deare Stone) that I may say indeed
Thou art Hermione; or rather, thou art she.
In thy not chiding; for she was as tender
As Infancie, and Grace. But yet Paulina,
Hermione was not so much wrinckled, nothing
So aged as this seemes.
Pol. O, not by much.
Paul. So much the more our Caruers excellence.
Which lets go-by some sixteene yeeres, and makes her
As she liu'd now.
Leo. As now she might haue done,
So much to my good comfort, as it is Now piercing to my Soule. Oh, thus she stood,
Euen with such Life of Maiestie (warme Life,
As now it coldly stands) when first I woo'd her.
I am asham'd. Does not the Stone rebuke me,
For being more Stone than it? Oh Royall Peece:
There's Magick in thy Maiestie, which has
My Euils coniur'd to remembrance; and
From thy admiring Daughter tooke the Spirits,
Standing like Stone with thee.
Perd. And giue me leaue,
And doe not say 'tis Superstition, that
I kneele, and then implore her Blessing. Lady,
Deere Queene, that ended when I but began,
Giue me that hand of yours, to kisse.
Paul. O, patience
The Statue is but newly fix'd; the Colour's
Not dry.
Cam. My Lord, your Sorrow was too sore laid-on,
Which sixteene Winters cannot blow away,
So many Summers dry: scarce any Ioy
Did euer so long liue; no Sorrow,
But kill'd it selfe much sooner.
Pol. Deere my Brother,
Let him that was the cause of this, haue powre
To take-off so much griefe from you, as he
Will peece vp in himselfe.
Paul. Indeed my Lord,
If I had thought the sight of my poore Image
Would thus haue wrought you (for the Stone is mine)
I'd not haue shew'd it.
Leo. Doe not draw the Curtaine.
Paul. No longer shall you gaze on't, least your Fancie
May thinke anon, it moues.
Leo. Let be, let be.
Would I were dead, but that me thinkes already.
(What was he that did make it?) See (my Lord)
Would you not deeme it breath'd? and that those veines
Did verily beare blood?
Pol. Masterly done
The very Life seemes warme vpon her Lippe.
Leo. The fixure of her Eye has motion in't,
As we are mock'd with Art.
Paul. Ile draw the Curtaine:
My Lord's almost so farre transported, that
Hee'le thinke anon it liues.
Leo. Oh sweet Paulina,
Make me to thinke so twentie yeeres together:
No setled Senses of the World can match
The pleasure of that madnesse. Let't alone.
Paul. I am sorry (Sir) I haue thus farre stir'd you: but
I could afflict you farther.
Leo. Doe Paulina:
For this Affliction has a taste as sweet
As any Cordiall comfort. Still me thinkes
There is an ayre comes from her. What fine Chizzell
Could euer yet cut breath? Let no man mock me,
For I will kisse her.
Paul. Good my Lord, forbeare:
The ruddinesse vpon her Lippe, is wet:
You'le marre it, if you kisse it; staine your owne
With Oyly Paintings: shall I draw the Curtaine.
Leo. No: not these twentie yeeres.
Perd. So long could I
Stand-by, a looker-on.
Paul. Either forbeare,
Quit presently the Chappell, or resolue you
For more amazement: if you can behold it,
I'le make the Statue moue indeed; descend,
And take you by the hand: but then you'le thinke
(Which I protest against) I am assisted
By wicked Powers.
Leo. What you can make her doe,
I am content to looke on: what to speake,
I am content to heare: for 'tis as easie
To make her speake, as moue.
Paul. It is requir'd
You doe awake your Faith: then all stand still:
On: those that thinke it is vnlawfull Businesse
I am about, let them depart.
Leo. Proceed.
No foot shall stirre.
Paul. Musick; awake her: Strike.
'Tis time: descend; be Stone no more: approach:
Strike all that looke vpon with meruaile: Come:
Ile fill your Graue vp: stirre: nay, come away:
Bequeath to Death your numnesse: (for from him,
Deare Life redeemes you) you perceiue she stirres:
Start not: her Actions shall be holy, as
You heare my Spell is lawfull: doe not shun her,
Vntill you see her dye againe; for then
You kill her double: Nay, present your Hand:
When she was young, you woo'd her: now, in age,
Is she become the Suitor?
Leo. Oh she's warme:
If this be Magick, let it be an Art

Law-

Lawfull as Eating.

Pol. She embraces him.

Cam. She hangs about his necke,
If she pertaine to life, let her speake too.

Pol. I, and make it manifest where she has liu'd,
Or how stolne from the dead?

Paul. That she is liuing,
Were it but told you, should be hooted at
Like an old Tale: but it appeares she liues,
Though yet she speake not. Marke a little while:
Please you to interpose (faire Madam) kneele,
And pray your Mothers blessing: turne good Lady,
Our Perdita is found.

Her. You Gods looke downe,
And from your sacred Vials powre your graces
Vpon my daughters head: Tell me (mine owne)
Where hast thou bin preserued? Where liu'st? How found
Thy Fathers Court? For thou shalt heare that,
Knowing by Paulina (that the Oracle
Gaue hope thou wast in being) haue preserued
Myselfe, to see the yssue.

Paul. There's time enough for that,
Least they desire (vpon this push) to trouble
Your ioyes, with like Relation. Go together
You precious winners all: your exultation
Partake to euery one. I (an old Turtle)
Will wing me to some withered bough, and there
My Mate (that's neuer to be found againe)
Lament, till I am lost.

Leo. O peace Paulina:
Thou shouldst a husband take by my consent,
As I by thine a Wife. This is a Match,
And made betweene's by Vowes. Thou hast found mine,
But how, is to be question'd: for I saw her
(As I thought) dead: and haue (in vaine) said many
A prayer vpon her graue. Ile not seeke farre
(For him, I partly know his minde) to finde thee
An honourable husband. Come Camillo,
And take her by the hand: whose worth, and honesty
Is richly noted: and here iustified
By Vs, a payre of Kings. Let's from this place.
What? Looke vpon my Brother: both your pardons,
That ere I put betweene your holy lookes
My ill suspicions: This your Son-in-law,
And Sonne vnto the King, whom heauens directing
Is troth-plight to your daughter. Good Paulina,
Lead vs from hence, where we may leysurely
Each one demand, and answere to his part
Perform'd in this wide gap of Time, since first
We were disseuer'd. Hastily lead away. Exeunt.

The Names of the Actors.

Leontes King of Sicilia.
Mamillius, yong Prince of Sicilia.
Camillo
Antigonus } Foure
Cleomines } Lords of Sicilia.

Perdita, Daughter to Leontes and Hermione
Paulina, wife to Antigonus.

Emilia, a Lady
Polixenes, King of Bohemia
Florizell Prince of Bohemia.
Old Shepheard, reputed Father of Perdita
Clowne his Sonne.
Autolicus, a Rogue.
Archidamus a Lord of Bohemia.
Other Lords, and Gentlemen and Seruants.
Shepheards, and Shepheardesses

FINIS

The life and death of King Iohn.

Actus Primus, Scena Prima.

Enter King Iohn, Queene Elinor, Pembroke, Essex, and Salisbury, with the Chattylion of France

King Iohn.

Now say Chatillion, what would France with vs?

Chat. Thus (after greeting) speakes the King of France,
In my behaviour to the Maiestie,
The borrowed Maiestie of England heere.

Elea. A strange beginning, borrowed Maiestie?

K. Iohn. Silence (good mother) heare the Embassie.

Chat. Philip of France, in right and true behalfe
Of thy deceased brother, Geffreys sonne,
Arthur Plantagenet, lawes most lawfull claime
To this faire Iland, and the Territories:
To Ireland, Poyctiers, Anioy, Torayne, Maine,
Desiring thee to lay aside the sword
Which sways vsurpingly these seuerall titles,
And put the same into young Arthurs hand,
Thy Nephew, and right royall Soueraigne.

K. Iohn. What followes if we disallow of this?

Chat. The proud controlment of this precious Iewell,
The blood and dearth this controlment must poure forth,
To make heauen shine with a calme countenance,
All ports and hauens shut, and the yong Babe
Lulled with the noise of warlike Ensignes,
Rocke for his owne graue. Thus in mighty hate,
Will he sweep on, and doe vast obstacles,
And plucke confusion vpon those that hinder.
Heere haue we war for war, and blood for blood,
Controlment for controlment: so answer France.

Chat. Then take my Kings defiance from my mouth,
The farthest limit of my Embassie

K. Iohn. Beare mine to him, and so depart in peace,
Be thou as lightning in the eyes of France;
For ere thou canst report, I will be there
The thunder of my Cannon shall be heard.
So hence: be thou the trumpet of our wrath,
And sullen prologue of your owne decay.
An honourable conduct let him haue,
Pembroke looke too't: Farewell Chatillion.

Exit Chat. and Pem.

Elea. What now my sonne, haue I not ere now told
How that ambitious Constance would not cease
Till she had kindled France and all the world,
Vpon the right and party of her sonne.
This might haue been prouented, and made whole
With very easie arguments of loue,
Which now the manage of two kingdomes must
With fearefull bloudy issue arbitrate.

K. Iohn. Our strong possession, and our right for vs.

Eli. Your strong possession much more then your right,
Or else it must go wrong with you and me.
So much my conscience whispers in your eare,
Which none but heauen, and you and I, shall heare.

Enter a Sheriffe.

Essex. My Liege, here is strange controuersie
Come from the Country to be iudged by you
That e're I heard: shall I produce the men?

K. Iohn. Let them approach.
Our Abbeys and our Priories shall pay
This expedition with their meanest plate.
What men are you?

Enter Robert Faulconbridge, and Philip

Philip. Your faithfull subiect I a gentleman,
Borne in Northamptonshire, and eldest sonne
As I suppose, to Robert Faulconbridge,
A Souldier by the Honor-giuing hand
Of Coeur-de-lion Knighted in the field.

K. Iohn. What art thou?

Robert. The selfe same, and accord to what my brother Faulconbridge

K. Iohn. Remember'st thou aught of this thy fathers?

Philip. Most certaine of one mother, mighty King,
That is well known: and as I thinke one father.
But for the certaine knowledge of that truth,
I put you ore to heauen, and to my mother,
Of that I doubt, as all men's children may.

Elea. Out on thee rude man, thou dost shame thy mother,
And wound her honor with this diffidence.

Philip. I Madame? No, I haue no reason for it,
That is my brothers plea, and none of mine,
The which if he can prooue, a pops me out,
At least from faire fiue hundred pound a yeere.
Heauen guard my mothers honor, and my Land.

K. Iohn. A good blunt fellow: why being younger borne
Doth he lay claime to thine inheritance?

Philip. I know not why, except to get the land.
But once he slanderd me with bastardy:
But whether I be as true begot or no,
That still I lay vpon my mothers head,
But that I am as well begot my Liege
(Faire fall the bones that tooke the pains for me)
Compare our faces, and be Iudge your selfe
If old Sir Robert did beget vs both,
And were our father, and this sonne like him:
O old Sir Roberts Father, on my knee
I giue heauen thankes I was not like to thee.

K. Iohn. Why what a mad-cap hath heauen lent vs here?

Elea. He hath a tricke of Coeur-de-lions face,
The accent of his tongue affecteth him
Do you not read some tokens of my sonne
In the large compositon of this man?

K.Iohn. Mine eye hath well examined his parts,
And findes them perfect Richard: sirra speake,
What doth moue you to claime your brothers land.
Philip. Because he hath a half-face like my father:
With halfe that face would he haue all my land,
A halfe-fac'd groat, fiue hundred pound a yeere?
Rob. My gracious Liege, when that my father liu'd,
Your brother did imploy my father much.
Phil. Well sir, by this you cannot get my land,
Your tale must be how he employ'd my mother.
Rob. And once dispatch'd him in an Embassie
To Germany, there with the Emperor
To treat of high affaires touching that time:
Th'aduantage of his absence tooke the King,
And in the meane time soiourn'd at my fathers;
Where how he did preuaile, I shame to speake:
But truth is truth, large lengths of seas and shores
Betweene my father, and my mother lay,
As I haue heard my father speake himselfe
When this same lusty gentleman was got:
Vpon his death bed he by will bequeath'd
His lands to me, and tooke it on his death
That this my mothers sonne was none of his;
And if he were, he came into the world
Full fourteene weekes before the course of time:
Then good my Liedge let me haue what is mine,
My fathers land, as was my fathers will.
K.Iohn. Sirra, your brother is Legittimate,
Your fathers wife did after wedlocke beare him
And if she did play false, the fault was hers,
Which fault lyes on the hazards of all husbands
That marry wiues: tell me, how if my brother
Who as you say, tooke paines to get this sonne,
Had of your father claim'd this sonne for his,
Insooth, good friend I, your father might haue kept
This Calfe, bred from his Cow from all the world
Insooth he might then if he were my brothers,
My brother might not claime him, nor your father
Being none of his, refuse him: this concludes,
My mothers sonne did get your fathers heyre,
Your fathers heyre must haue your fathers land.
Rob. Shal then my fathers Will be of no force,
To dispossesse that childe which is not his.
Phil. Of no more force to dispossesse me sir,
Then was his will to get me, as I think.
Eli. Whether hadst thou rather be a Faulconbridge,
And like thy brother to enioy thy land:
Or the reputed sonne of Cordelion,
Lord of thy presence, and no land beside.
Bast. Madam, and if my brother had my shape
And I had his, sir Roberts his like him,
And if my legs were two such riding rods,
My armes, such eele skins stuft, my face so thin,
That in mine eare I durst not sticke a rose,
Lest men should say, looke where three farthings goes,
And to his shape were heyre to all this land,
Would I might neuer stirre from off this place,
I would giue it euery foot to haue this face:
It would not be sir nobbe in any case.
Elinor. I like thee well: wilt thou forsake thy fortune,
Bequeath thy land to him, and follow me?
I am a Souldier, and now bound to France.
Bast. Brother, take you my land, Ile take my chance;
Your face hath got fiue hundred pound a yeere,
Yet sell your face for fiue pence and 'tis deere:
Madam, Ile follow you vnto the death.
Elinor. Nay, I would haue you go before me thither.
Bast. Our Country manners giue our betters way.
K.Iohn. What is thy name?
Bast. Philip my Liege, so is my name begun,
Philip, good old Sir Roberts wiues eldest sonne.
K.Iohn. From henceforth beare his name
Whose forme thou bearest:
Kneele thou downe Philip, but rise more great,
Arise Sir Richard, and Plantagenet.
Bast. Brother by th'mothers side, giue me your hand,
My father gaue me honor, yours gaue land:
Now blessed be the houre by night or day
When I was got, Sir Robert was away.
Ele. The very spirit of Plantagenet:
I am thy grandame Richard, call me so.
Bast. Madam by chance, but not by truth, what though;
Something about a little from the right,
In at the window, or else ore the hatch:
Who dares not stirre by day, must walke by night,
And haue is haue, how ere men doe catch:
Neere or farre off, well wonne is still well shot,
And I am I, how ere I was begot.
K.Iohn. Goe, Faulconbridge, now hast thou thy desire,
A landlesse Knight, makes thee a landed Squire:
Come Madam, and come Richard, we must speed
For France, for France, for it is more then need.
Bast. Brother adieu, good fortune come to thee,
For thou wast got i'th way of honesty.

Exeunt all but bastard.

Bast. A foot of Honor better then I was,
But many a many foot of Land the worse.
Well, now can I make any Ioane a Lady,
Good den Sir Richard, Godamercy fellow,
And if his name be George, Ile call him Peter,
For new made honor doth forget mens names:
'Tis too respective, and too sociable
For your conuersion, now your traueller,
He and his tooth-picke at my worships messe,
And when my knightly stomacke is suffis'd,
Why then I sucke my teeth, and catechize
My picked man of Countries: my deare sir,
Thus leaning on mine elbow I begin,
I shall beseech you; that is question now,
And then comes answer like an Abcy booke:
O sir, sayes answer, at your best command,
At your employment, at your seruice sir:
No sir, saies question, I sweet sir at yours,
And so ere answer knowes what question would,
Sauing in Dialogue of Complement,
And talking of the Alpes and Appenines,
The Perenean and the riuer Po,
It drawes toward supper in conclusion so.
But this is worshipfull society,
And fits the mounting spirit like my selfe;
For he is but a bastard to the time
That doth not smoake of obseruation,
And so am I whether I smacke or no:
And not alone in habit and deuice,
Exterior forme, outward accoutrement;
But from the inward motion to deliuer
Sweet, sweet, sweet poyson for the ages tooth,
Which though I will not practise to deceiue,
Yet to auoid deceit I meane to learne;
For it shall strew the footsteps of my rising:
But who comes in such haste in riding robes?

What

What woman post is this? hath she no husband
That will take paines to blow a horne before her?
O me, 'tis my mother: how now good Lady,
What brings you heere to Court so hastily?

Enter Lady Faulconbridge and Iames Gurney.

Lady. Where is that slaue thy brother? where is he?
That holds in chase mine honour vp and downe.
Bast. My brother Robert, old Sir Roberts sonne:
Colbrand the Gyant, that same mighty man,
Is it Sir Roberts sonne that you seeke so?
Lady. Sir Roberts sonne, I thou vnreuerend boy,
Sir Roberts sonne? why scorn'st thou at sir Robert?
He is Sir Roberts sonne, and so art thou.
Bast. Iames Gurney, wilt thou giue vs leaue a while?
Gour. Good leaue good Philip.
Bast. Philip, sparrow, Iames,
There's toyes abroad, anon ile tell thee more.

Exit Iames.

Madam, I was not old Sir Roberts sonne,
Sir Robert might haue eat his part in me
Vpon good Friday, and ne're broke his fast
Sir Robert could doe well, marrie to confesse
Could get me sir Robert could not doe it,
We know his handy-worke: therefore good mother
To whom am I beholding for these limmes?
Sir Robert neuer holpe to make this legge
Lady. Hast thou conspired with thy brother too,
That for thine owne gaine shouldst defend mine honor?
What meanes this scorne, thou most vntoward knaue?
Bast. Knight, knight good mother Basilico-like
What, I am dub'd, I haue it on my shoulder.
But mother, I am not Sir Roberts sonne,
I haue disclaim'd Sir Robert and my land,
Legitimation, name, and all is gone,
Then good my mother, let me know my father,
Some proper man I hope, who was it mother?
Lady. Hast thou denied thy selfe a Faulconbridge?
Bast. As faithfully as I deny the deuil
Lady King Richard Cordelion was thy father,
By long and vehement suit I was seduc'd
To make roome for him in my husbands bed
Heauen lay not my transgression to my charge,
That art the issue of my deere offence
Which was so strongly vrg'd past my defence.
Bast Now by this light were I to get againe,
Madam I would not wish a better father:
Some sinnes doe beare their priuiledge on earth,
And so doth yours: your fault, was not your folly,
Needs must you lay your heart at his dispose,
Subiected tribute to commanding loue,
Against whose fury and vnmatched force,
The awelesse Lion could not wage the fight,
Nor keepe his Princely heart from Richards hand:
He that perforce robs Lions of their hearts,
May easily winne a womans: aye my mother,
With all my heart I thanke thee for my father:
Who liues and dares but say, thou didst not well
When I was got, Ile send his soule to hell.
Come Lady I will shew thee to my kinne,
And they shall say, when Richard me begot,
If thou hadst said him nay, it had beene sinne;
Who sayes it was, he lyes, I say 'twas not.

Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter before Angiers, Philip King of France, Lewis, Dauphin, Austria, Constance, Arthur.

Lewis. Before Angiers well met braue Austria,
Arthur that great fore-runner of thy blood,
Richard that rob'd the Lion of his heart,
And fought the holy Warres in Palestine,
By this braue Duke came early to his graue
And for amends to his posteritie,
At our importance hether is he come,
To spread his colours boy, in thy behalfe,
And to rebuke the vsurpation
Of thy vnnaturall Vncle, English Iohn,
Embrace him, loue him, giue him welcome hether.
Arth. God shall forgiue you Cordelions death
The rather, that you giue his off-spring life,
Shadowing their right vnder your wings of warre:
I giue you welcome with a powerlesse hand,
But with a heart full of vnstained loue,
Welcome before the gates of Angiers Duke.
Lewis. A noble boy, who would not doe thee right?
Aust. Vpon thy cheeke lay I this zealous kisse,
As seale to this indenture of my loue
That to my home I will no more returne
Till Angiers, and the right thou hast in France,
Together with that pale, that white-fac'd shore,
Whose foot spurnes backe the Oceans roaring tides,
And coopes from other lands her Ilanders,
Euen till that vtmost corner of the West
Salute thee for her King, till then faire boy
Will I not thinke of home, but follow Armes
Const. O take his mothers thanks, a widdowes thanks,
Till your strong hand shall helpe to giue him strength,
To make a more requitall to your loue.
Aust. The peace of heauen is theirs lift their swords
In such a iust and charitable warre.
King. Well, then to worke our Cannon shall be bent
Against the browes of this resisting towne,
Call for our cheefest men of discipline,
To cull the plots of best aduantages.
We'll lay before this towne our Royal bones,
Wade to the market-place in French-mens bloud,
But we will make it subiect to this boy
Con. Stay for an answer to your Embassie,
Least vnaduis'd you staine your swords with bloud,
My Lord Chattillon may from England bring
That right in peace which heere we vrge in warre,
And then we shall repent each drop of bloud,
That not rash haste to indirectly shedde.

Enter Chattillon.

King A wonder Lady: lo vpon thy wish
Our Messenger Chattillon is arriu'd,
What England sayes, say breefely gentle Lord,
We coldly pause for thee, Chatillon speake.
Chat. Then turne your forces from this paltry siege,
And stirre them vp against a mightier taske:
England impatient of your iust demands,
Hath put himselfe in Armes, the aduerse winds

Whose leisure I haue staid, haue giuen him time
To land his Legions all as soone as I:
His marches are expedient to this towne,
His forces strong, his Souldiers confident:
With him along is come the Mother Queene,
An Ace stirring him to blood and strife,
With her her Neece, the Lady Blanch of Spaine,
With them a Bastard of the Kings deceast,
And all th'vnsettled humors of the Land,
Rash, inconsiderate, fiery voluntaries,
With Ladies faces, and fierce Dragons spleenes,
Haue sold their fortunes at their natiue homes,
Bearing their birth-rights proud on their backs,
To make a hazard of new fortunes heere.
In briefe, a brauer choyce of dauntlesse spirits
Then now the English bottomes haue waft ore,
Did neuer flote vpon the swelling tide,
To doe offence and scathe in Christendome.
The interruption of their chartred drums
Cuts off more circumstance, they are at hand,
To parlie or to fight, therefore prepare
Kin. How much vnlook'd for, is this expedition.
Aust. By how much vnexpected, by so much
We must awake indeuor for defence,
For courage mounteth with occasion,
Let them be welcome then, we are prepar'd.

Enter K. of England, Bastard, Queene, Blanch, Pembroke, and others.

K. John. Peace be to France: if France in peace permit
Our iust and lineall entrance to our owne,
If not, bleede France, and peace ascend to heauen.
Whiles we Gods wrathful agent doe correct
Their proud contempt that beates his peace to heauen.
Fran. Peace be to England, if that warre returne
From France to England, there to liue in peace.
England we loue, and for that England's sake,
With burden of our armor heere we sweate.
This toyle of ours should be a worke of thine;
But thou from louing England art so farre,
That thou hast vnder-wrought his lawfull King,
Cut off the sequence of posterity,
Out-faced Infant State, and done a rape
Vpon the maiden vertue of the Crowne
Looke heere vpon thy brother Geffreyes face,
These eyes, these browes, were moulded out of his;
This little abstract doth containe that large,
Which died in Geffrey: and the hand of time,
Shall draw this briefe into as huge a volume
That Geffrey was thy elder brother borne,
And this his sonne, England was Geffreys right,
And this is Geffreyes: in the name of God:
How comes it then that thou art call'd a King,
When liuing blood doth in these temples beat
Which owe the crowne, that thou ore-maistereſt?
K. John From whom hast thou this great commission
To draw my answer from thy Articles? (France,
Fra. From that supernal Iudge that stirs good thoughts
In any breast of strong authoritie,
To looke into the blots and staines of right,
That Iudge hath made me guardian to this boy,
Vnder whose warrant I impeach thy wrong,
And by whose helpe I meane to chastise it.
K. John. Alack thou dost vsurpe authoritie.
Fran. Excuse it: is to beat vsurping downe.
Queen. Who is it thou dost call vsurper France?
Const. Let me make answer: thy vsurping sonne.
Queen. Out insolent, thy bastard shall be King,
That thou maist be a Queen, and checke the world.
Con. My bed was euer to thy sonne as true
As thine was to thy husband, and this boy
Liker in feature to his father Geffrey
Then thou and John, in manners being as like,
As rain to water, or deuill to his dam: me;
My boy a bastard? by my soule I thinke
His father neuer was so true begot,
It cannot be, and if thou wert his mother. (ther
Queen. Theres a good mother boy, that blots thy fa-
Const. There's a good grandame boy
That would blot thee.
Aust. Peace.
Bast. Heare the Cryer.
Aust What the deuill art thou?
Bast. One that will play the deuill sir with you,
And a may catch your hide and you alone
You are the Hare of whom the Prouerb goes
Whose valour plucks dead Lyons by the beard;
Ile smoake your skin-coat and I catch you right,
Sirra looke too't, yfaith I will, yfaith
Blan. O well did he become that Lyons robe,
That did disrobe the Lion of that robe.
Bast It hes as sightly on the backe of him
As great Alcides shooes vpon a Asse.
But Asse, Ile take that burthen from your backe,
Or lay on that shall make your shoulders cracke
Aust What cracker is this same that deafes our eares
With this abundance of superfluous breath?
King Lewis, determine what we shall doe straight.
Lew. Women & fooles, breake off your conference
King John, this is the very sum: me of all:
England and Ireland, Anjoy, Torayne, Maine,
In right of Arthur doe I claime of thee:
Wilt thou resigne them, and lay downe thy Armes?
John. My life as soone: I doe defie thee France,
Arthur of Britaine, yeeld thee to my hand,
And out of my deere loue Ile giue thee more,
Then ere the coward hand of France can win,
Submit thee boy.
Queen. Come to thy grandame child.
Const. Doe childe, goe to yt grandame childe,
Giue grandame kingdome, and it grandame will
Giue yt a plum, a cherry, and a figge,
There's a good grandame.
Arthur. Good my mother peace,
I would that I were low laid in my graue,
I am not worth this coyle that's made for me. (weepes.
Qu. Mo. His mother shames him so, poore boy hee
Con. Now shame vpon you where she does or no,
His grandames wrongs, and not his mothers shames
Drawes those heauen-moouing pearles frō his poore eies,
Which heauen shall take in nature of a fee:
I, with these Christall beads heauen shall be brib'd
To doe him Iustice, and reuenge on you.
Qu. Thou monstrous slanderer of heauen and earth.
Con. Thou monstrous Iniurer of heauen and earth,
Call not me slanderer, thou and thine vsurpe
The Dominations, Royalties, and rights
Of this oppressed boy; this is thy eldest sonnes sonne,
Infortunate in nothing but in thee:

Thy

Thy sinnes are visited in this poore childe,
The Canon of the Law is laide on him,
Being but the second generation
Removed from thy sinne-conceiuing wombe.
Iohn. Bedlam haue done.
Con. I haue but this to say,
That he is not only plagued for her sin,
But God hath made her sinne and her, the plague
On this removed issue, plagued for her,
And with her plague her sinne: his injury
Her injurie the Beadle to her sinne,
All punish'd in the person of this childe,
And all for her, a plague vpon her.
Qu. Thou vnaduised scold, I can pronounce
A Will, that barres the title of thy sonne.
Con. I who doubts that, a Will: a wicked will,
A womans will, a cankred Grandams will.
Fra. Peace Lady, pause, or be more temperate,
It is vnbeseemes this presence to cry ayme
To these ill tuned repetitions:
Some Trumpet summon hither to the walles
These men of Angiers, let vs heare them speake,
Whose tongues they admit, Arthur or Iohn.

Trumpet sounds
Enter a Citizen vpon the walles.

Cit. Who is it that hath warn'd vs to the walles?
Fra. 'Tis France, for England.
Iohn. England for it selfe:
You men of Angiers, and my louing subiects.
Fra. You louing men of Angiers, Arthurs subiects,
Our Trumpet call'd you to this gentle parle.
Iohn. For our aduantage, therefore heare vs first:
These flagges of France that are aduanced heere
Before the eye and prospect of your Towne,
Haue hither march'd to your endamagement.
The Canons haue their bowels full of wrath,
And ready mounted are they to spit forth
Their Iron indignation 'gainst your walles:
All preparation for a bloody siedge
And merciles proceeding, by these French.
Comfort your Cities eies, your winking gates:
And but for our approch, those sleeping stones,
That as a waste doth girdle you about
By the compulsion of their Ordinance,
By this time from their fixed beds of lime
Had bin dismounted, and wide hauocke made
For bloody power to rush vpon your peace.
But on the sight of vs your lawfull King,
Who painefully with much expedient march
Haue brought a counter-checke before your gates,
To saue vnscratch'd your Cities threatned cheekes:
Behold the French amaz'd vouchsafe a parle,
And now instead of bullets wrapt in fire
To make a shaking feuer in your walles,
They shoote but calme words, folded vp in smoake,
To make a faithlesse errour in your eares,
Which trust accordingly kinde Citizens,
And let vs in. Your King, whose labour'd spirits
Fore-wearied in this action of swift speede,
Craues harbourage within your Cities walles.
France When I haue saide, make answer to vs both.
Loe in this right hand, whose protection
Is most diuinely vow'd vpon the right
Of him it holds, stands yong Plantagenet,
Sonne to the elder brother of this man,
And King ore him, and all that he enioyes:
For this downe-troden equity, we tread
In warlike march, these greenes before your Towne,
Being no further enemy to you
Then the constraint of hospitable zeale,
In the releefe of this oppressed childe,
Religiously prouokes. Be pleased then
To pay that dutie which you truly owe,
To him that owes it, namely, this yong Prince,
And then our Armes, like to a muzled Beare,
Saue in aspect, hath all offence seal'd vp:
Our Cannons malice vainly shall be spent
Against th'involuerable clouds of heauen,
And with a blessed and vn-vext retyre,
With vnhack'd swords, and Helmets all vnbruis'd,
We will beare home that lustie blood againe,
Which heere we came to spout against your Towne,
And leaue your children, wiues, and you in peace
But if you fondly passe our proffer'd offer,
'Tis not the roundure of your old-fac'd walles,
Can hide you from our messengers of Warre,
Though all these Englishi, and their discipline
Were harbour'd in their rude circumference:
Then tell vs, Shall your Citie call vs Lord,
In that behalfe which we haue challeng'd it?
Or shall we giue the signall to our rage,
And stalke in blood to our possession?
Cit. In breefe, we are the King of Englands subiects
For him, and in his right, we hold this Towne.
Iohn. Acknowledge then the King, and let me in.
Cit. That can we not: but he that proues the King
To him will we proue loyall, till that time
Haue we ramm'd vp our gates against the world.
Iohn. Doth not the Crowne of England, proue the King?
And if not that, I bring you Witnesses
Twice fifteene thousand hearts of Englands breed
Bast. Bastards and else.
Iohn. To verifie our title with their liues.
Fran. As many and as well-borne bloods as those.
Bast. Some Bastards too.
Fran. Stand in his face to contradict his claime
Cit. Till you compound whose right is worthiest,
We for the worthiest hold the right from both.
Iohn. Then God forgiue the sinne of all those soules,
That to their euerlasting residence,
Before the dew of euening fall, shall fleete
In dreadfull triall of our kingdomes King.
Fran. Amen, Amen, mount Cheualiers to Armes.
Bast. Saint George that swindg'd the Dragon,
And ere since sits on's horsebacke at mine Hostesse dore
Teach vs some fence. Sirrah, were I at home
At your owne sirrah, with your Lionnesse,
I would set an Oxe-head to your Lyons hide
And make a monster of you.
Aust. Peace, no more.
Bast. O tremble, for you heare the Lyon rore.
Iohn. Vp higher to the plaine, where wel't set forth
In best appointment all our Regiments.
Bast. Speed then to take aduantage of the Field.
Fra. It shall be so, and at the other hill
Command the rest to stand. God and our right. Exeunt
Heere after excursions, Enter the Herald of France with Trumpets to the gates.
F. Her You men of Angiers open wide your gates,
And let yong Arthur Duke of Britaine in,

Who by the hand of France, this day hath made
Much worke for teares in many an English mother,
Whose sonnes lye scattered on the bleeding ground:
Many a widdowes husband groueling lies,
Coldly embracing the discoloured earth,
And victorie with little losse doth play
Vpon the dancing banners of the French,
Who are at hand triumphantly displayed
To enter Conquerors, and to proclaime
Arthur of Britaine, England's king, and yours.

Enter English Herald with Trumpet.

E. Her. Reioyce you men of Angiers, ring your bels,
King Iohn, your king and Englands, doth approach,
Commander of this hot malicious day.
Their Armours that marcht hence so siluer bright,
Hither returne all gilt with Frenchmens blood.
There stucke no plume in any English Crest,
That is remoued by a staffe of France.
Our colours do returne in those same hands
That did display them when we first marcht forth.
And like a iolly troope of Huntsmen come
Our lustie English, all with purpled hands,
Dide in the dying slaughter of their foes,
Open your gates, and giue the Victors way.

Hubert. Heralds, from off our towres we might behold
From first to last, the on-set and retyre
Of both your Armies, whose equality
By our best eyes cannot be censured (powers.
Blood hath bought blood, and blowes haue answerd
Strength matcht with strength, and power confronted power.
Both are alike, and both alike we like
One must proue greatest. While they weigh so euen,
We hold our Towne for neither: yet for both.

Enter the two Kings with their powers, at seuerall doore.

Iohn. France, hast thou yet more blood to cast away?
Say, shall the current of our right run on,
Whose passage vext with thy impediment,
Shall leaue his natiue channell, and ore-swell
with course disturbed euen thy confining shores,
Vnlesse thou let his siluer Water keepe
A peacefull progresse to the Ocean.

Fra. England thou hast not sau'd one drop of blood
In this hot tryall more then we of France,
Rather lost more. And by this hand I sweare
That sweayes the earth this Climate ouer-looker,
Before we will lay downe our iust-borne Armes,
We'll put thee downe, gainst whom these Armes we weare
Or adde a royall number to the dead, (beare,
Gracing the scrowle that tels of this warres losse,
With slaughter coupled to the name of kings.

Bast. Ha Maiesty: how high thy glory towres,
When the rich blood of kings is set on fire:
Oh now doth death line his dead chaps with steele,
The swords of souldiers are his teeth, his phangs,
And now he feasts, mousing the flesh of men
In vndetermin'd differences of kings.
Why stand these royall fronts amazed thus?
Cry! vnckle kings, backe to the stained field
You equall Potents, fierie kindled spirits,
Then let confusion of one part confirme
The others peace: till then, blowes, blood, and death.

Iohn. Whose party do the Townesmen yet admit?

Fra. Speake Citizens for England, whose your king.

Hub. The king of England, when we know the king.

Fra. Know him in vs, that here hold vp his right.

Iohn. In vs, that are our owne great Deputie,
And beare possession of our Person here,
Lord of our presence Angiers, and of you.

Fra. A greater powre then We denies all this,
And till it be vndoubted, we do locke
Our former scruple in our strong barr'd gates:
Kings of our feare, vntill our feares resolu'd
Be by some certaine king purg'd and depos'd.

Bast. By heauen, these scroyles of Angiers flout you kings,
And stand securely on their battelments,
As in a Theater, whence they gape and point
At your industrious Scenes and acts of death.
Your Royall presences be rul'd by mee,
Do like the Mutines of Ierusalem,
Be friends a-while, and both conioyntly bend
Your sharpest Deeds of malice on this Towne.
By East and West let France and England mount
Their battering Canon charged to the mouthes,
Till their soule-fearing clamours haue braul'd downe
The flinty ribbes of this contemptuous Citie,
I'd play incessantly vpon these Iades,
Euen till vnfenced desolation
Leaue them as naked as the vulgar ayre.
That done, disseuer your vnited strengths,
And part your mingled colours once againe,
Turne face to face, and bloody point to point:
Then in a moment Fortune shall cull forth
Out of one side her happy Minion,
To whom in fauour she shall giue the day,
And kisse him with a glorious victory.
How like you this wilde counsell mighty States,
Smacks it not something of the police?

Iohn. Now by the sky that hangs about our heads,
I like it well. France, shall we knit our powres
And lay this Angiers euen with the ground,
Then after fight who shall be king of it?

Bast. And if thou hast the mettle of a king,
Being wrong'd as we are by this peeuish Towne:
Turne thou the mouth of thy Artillerie,
As we will ours, against these sawcie walles,
And when that we haue dasht them to the ground,
Why then defie each other, and pell-mell,
Make worke vpon our selues, for heauen or hell.

Fra. Let it be so: say, where will you assault?

Iohn. We from the West will send destruction
Into this Cities bosome.

Aust. I from the North.

Fran. Our Thunder from the South,
Shall raine their drift of bullets on this Towne.

Bast. O prudent discipline! From North to South:
Austria and France shoot in each others mouth.
Ile stirre them to it: Come, away, away.

Hub. Heare vs great kings, vouchsafe awhile to stay
And I shall shew you peace, and faire-faced league:
Win you this Citie without stroke, or wound,
Rescue those breathing liues to dye in beds,
That heere come sacrifices for the field.
Perseuer not, but heare me mighty kings.

Iohn. Speake on with fauour, we are bent to heare.

Hub. That daughter there of Spaine, the Lady Blanch
Is neere to England, looke vpon the yeeres
Of Lewis the Dolphin, and that louely maid.
If lustie loue should go in quest of beauty,

Where

Where should he finde it fairer, then in Blanch.
If zealous loue should go in search of vertue,
Where should he finde it purer then in Blanch?
If loue ambitious, sought a match of birth,
Whose veines bound richer blood then Lady Blanch?
Such as she is, in beautie, vertue, birth,
Is the yong Dolphin every way complete,
If not complete of, say he is not shee,
And she againe wants nothing, to name want,
If want it be not, that she is not he:
He is the halfe part of a blessed man,
Left to be finished by such as she,
And she a faire diuided excellence,
Whose fulnesse of perfection lyes in him.
O two such siluer currents, when they ioyne
Do glorifie the bankes that bound them in
And two such shores, to two such streames made one,
Two such controlling bounds shall you be, kings,
To these two Princes, if you marrie them.
This Warre that hath no bosome but for blood,
Whose womb vnapt for this cursed birth of death,
Can nurse the weake wing'd Rumour vp and downe,
That shakes the superstitious blisse of fold death
Ouer his raggues. Here's a large mouth indeede,
That spits forth death, and mountaines, rockes, and seas,
Talkes as familiarly of roaring Lyons,
As maids of thirteene do of puppy dogges.
What Cannoneere begot this lustie blood,
He speakes plaine Cannon fire, and smoake, and bounce,
He giues the bastinado with his tongue,
Our eares are cudgell'd, not a word of his
But buffets better then a fist of France.
Zounds I was neuer so bet out of words,
Since I first call'd my brothers father Dad.
Qu. Eli. Son, list to this conioyned choyce, make this match
Giue with our Neece a dowrie large enough,
For by this knot, thou shalt so surely tye
Thy now vnsur'd assurance to the Crowne,
That yon greene boy shall haue no Sunne to ripe
The bloome that promiseth a mightie fruite
I see a yeelding in the lookes of France.
Marke how they whisper, vrge them while their soules
Are capeable of this ambition,
Least zeale now melted by the windie breath
Of soft petitions, pittie and remorse,
Coole and congeale againe to what it was.
Hub. Why answer not the double Maiesties,
This friendly treaty of our threatned Towne.
Fra. Speake England first, that hath been forward first
To speake vnto this Citie, what say you?
John If that the Dolphin there thy Princely sonne,
Can in this booke of Beautie read, I loue:
Her Dowrie shall weigh equall with a Queene:
For Anglers, and faire Touraine, Maine, Poyctiers,
And all that we vpon this side the Sea,
(Except this Citie now by vs possest)
Findes sutable to our Crowne and Dignitie,
Shall gild her bridall bed and make her rich
In titles, honors, and promotions,
As she in beautie, education, blood,
Holdes hand with any Princesse of the world.
Fra What sai'st thou boy? looke in the Ladies face.
Dol. I do my Lord, and in her eie I find
A wonder, or a wondrous miracle,
The shadow of my selfe form'd in her eye,
Which being but the shadow of your sonne,
Becomes a sonne and makes your sonne a shadow.
I do protest I neuer lou'd my selfe
Till now, infixed I beheld my selfe,
Drawne in the flattering table of her eie.
whispers with Blanch.
Bast. Drawne in the flattering table of her eie,
Hang'd in the frowning wrinkle of her brow,
And quarter'd in her heart, he doth espie
Himselfe loues traytor, this is pittie now;
That hang'd, and drawne, and quartered there should be
In such a loue, so vile a lout as he.
Lan. My vnckles wrongs in this respect is mine,
If he see ought in you that makes him like,
That any thing he sees which moues his liking,
I can with ease translate it to my will:
Or if you will, to speake more properly,
I will enforce it easily to my loue.
Further I will not flatter you, my Lord,
That all I see in you is worthie loue,
Then that thy selfe vouchsafe to shine on her,
And this imperiall throne of Kings allow
Sweet Lady this loue, would not I prouide it,
I could put by a Lady.
Blanch You are young Prince Dolphin, and fair enough to woo,
And for your Vnckles sake I will not say you nay.
Fra Now Citizens of Angiers ope your gates,
Let in that amitie which you haue made,
For at Saint Maries Chappell presently,
The rites of marriage shall be solemnized.
Is not the Lady Constance in this troope?
I know she is not for this match made vp,
Her presence would haue interrupted much.
Where is she and her sonne, tell me, who knowes?
Dol. She is sad and passionate at your Highnes Tent
Fra. And by my faith, this league that we haue made
Will giue her sadnesse very little cure:
Brother of England, how may we content
This widdow Lady? In her right we came,
Which we God knowes, haue turn'd another way,
To our owne vantage.
John. We will aleage vp all,
For wee'l create yong Arthur Duke of Britaine
And Earle of Richmond, and this rich faire Towne

We

We make him Lord of. Call the Lady Constance,
Some speedy Messenger bid her repaire
To our solemnity: I trust we shall,
(If not fill vp the measure of her will)
Yet in some measure satisfie her so,
That we shall stop her exclamation,
Go we as well as haste will suffer vs,
To this vnlook'd for vnprepared pompe. Exeunt.

Bast. Mad world, mad kings, mad composition
Iohn to stop Arthurs Title in the whole,
Hath willingly departed with a part,
And France, whose armour Conscience buckled on,
Whom zeale and charitie brought to the field,
As Gods owne souldier, rounded in the eare,
With that same purpose-changer, that sly deuel,
That Broker, that still breakes the pate of faith,
That dayly break-vow, he that winnes of all,
Of kings, of beggers, old men, yong men, maids,
Who hauing no externall thing to loose,
But the word Maid, cheats the poore Maide of that
That smooth-fac'd Gentleman, tickling commoditie,
Commoditie, the byas of the world,
The world, who of it selfe is peyzed well,
Made to run euen, vpon euen ground;
Till this aduantage, this vile drawing byas,
This sway of motion, this commoditie,
Makes it take head from all indifferency,
From all direction, purpose, course, intent.
And this same byas, this Commoditie,
This Bawd, this Broker, this all-changing-word,
Clap'd on the outward eye of fickle France,
Hath drawne him from his owne determin'd ayd,
From a resolu'd and honourable warre,
To a most base and vile-concluded peace.
And why rayle I on this Commoditie?
But for because he hath not wooed me yet:
Not that I haue the power to clutch my hand,
When his faire Angels would salute my palme,
But for my hand, as vnattempted yet,
Like a poore begger, raileth on the rich.
Well, whiles I am a begger, I will raile,
And say there is no sin but to be rich.
And being rich, my vertue then shall be,
To say there is no vice, but beggerie
Since Kings breake faith vpon commoditie,
Gaine be my Lord, for I will worship thee. Exit

Actus Secundus

Enter Constance, Arthur, and Salisbury.

Con. Gone to be married? Gone to sweare a peace?
False blood to false blood ioyn'd. Gone to be freinds?
Shall Lewis haue Blanch, and Blanch those Prouinces?
It is not so, thou hast misspoke, misheard,
Be well aduis'd, tell ore thy tale againe.
It cannot be, thou do'st but say 'tis so,
I trust I may not trust thee, for thy word
Is but the vaine breath of a common man:
Beleeue me, I doe not beleeue thee man,
I haue a Kings oath to the contrarie.
Thou shalt be punish'd for thus frighting me,
For I am sicke, and capeable of feares,
Oppreſt with wrongs, and therefore full of feares,
A widdow, husbandles, subiect to feares,
A woman naturally borne to feares;
And though thou now confesse thou didst but iest
With my vext spirits, I cannot take a Truce,
But they will quake and tremble all this day
What dost thou meane by shaking of thy head?
Why dost thou looke so sadly on my sonne?
What meanes that hand vpon that breast of thine?
Why holdes thine eie that lamentable rheume,
Like a proud riuer peering ore his bounds?
Be these sad signes confirmers of thy words?
Then speake againe, not all thy former tale,
But this one word, whether thy tale be true.

Sal. As true as I beleeue you thinke them false,
That giue you cause to proue my saying true.

Con. Oh if thou teach me to beleeue this sorrow,
Teach thou this sorrow, how to make me dye,
And let beleefe, and life encounter so,
As doth the furie of two desperate men,
Which in the very meeting fall, and dye.
Lewis marry Blanch? O boy, then where art thou?
France friend with England, what becomes of me?
Fellow be gone: I cannot brooke thy sight,
This newes hath made thee a most vgly man

Sal. What other harme haue I good Lady done,
But spoke the harme, that is by others done?

Con. Which harme within it selfe so heynous is,
As it makes harmefull all that speake of it.

Ar. I do beseech you Madam be content.

Con. If thou that bidst me be content, wert grim
Vgly, and slanderous to thy Mothers wombe,
Full of vnpleasing blots, and sightlesse staines,
Lame, foolish, crooked, swart, prodigious,
Patch'd with foule Moles, and eye-offending markes,
I would not care, I then would be content,
For then I should not loue thee: no, nor thou
Become thy great birth, nor deserue a Crowne.
But thou art faire, and at thy birth (deare boy)
Nature and Fortune ioyn'd to make thee great.
Of Natures guifts, thou mayst with Lillies boast,
And with the halfe-blowne Rose. But Fortune, oh,
She is corrupted, chang'd, and wonne from thee,
Sh adulterates hourely with thine Vncle Iohn,
And with her golden hand hath pluckt on France
To tread downe faire respect of Soueraignetie,
And made his Maiestie the bawd to theirs
France is a Bawd to Fortune, and king Iohn,
That strumpet Fortune, that vsurping Iohn:
Tell me thou fellow, is not France forsworne?
Euenom him with words, or get thee gone,
And leaue those woes alone, which I alone
Am bound to vnder-beare

Sal. Pardon me Madam,
I may not goe without you to the kings.

Con. Thou maist, thou shalt, I will not go with thee,
I will instruct my sorrowes to be proud,
For greefe is proud, and makes his owner stoope,
To me and to the state of my great greefe.
Let kings assemble: for my greefe's so great
That no supporter but the huge firme earth
Can hold it vp: here I and sorrowes sit,
Heere is my Throne, bid kings come bow to it.

Actus

Actus Tertius, Scæna prima.

Enter King Iohn, France, Dolphin, Blanch, Elianor, Philip, Austria, Constance.

Fran 'Tis true (faire daughter) and this blessed day,
Ever in France shall be kept festivall:
To solemnize this day the glorious Sunne
Stayes in his course, and playes the Alchymist,
Turning with splendor of his precious eye
The meager cloddy earth to glistering gold:
The yearely course that brings this day about,
Shall never see it out a holy day.
Const A wicked day, and not a holy day.
What hath this day deserv'd? what hath it done,
That it in golden letters should be set
Among the high tides in the Kalender?
Nay, rather turne this day out of the weeke,
This day of shame oppression perjury.
Or if it must stand still, let Wives with childe
Pray that their burthens may not fall this day,
Least that their hopes prodigiously be crost:
But on this day let Sea-men feare no wracke,
No bargaines breake that are not this day made;
This day all things begun, come to ill end,
Yea faith it selfe to hollow falsehood change.
Fra By heaven Lady, you shall have no cause
To curse the faire proceedings of this day
Have I not pawn'd to you my Majestie?
Const. You have beguil'd me with a counterfeit
Resembling Majestie, which being touch'd and tride,
Proves valueless: you are forsworne, forsworne,
You came in Armes to spill mine enemies bloud,
But now in Armes, you strengthen it with yours.
The grasping vigor, and rough frowne of Warre
Is cold in amitie, and painted Peace
And our oppression hath made up this league:
Armes, armes, you heavens, against these perjur'd Kings,
A widdow cries, be husband to me (heavens)
Let not the howres of this ungodly day
Weare out the dayes of Peace, before Sun-set,
Set armed discord twixt these perjur'd Kings,
Heare me, Oh, heare me.
Aust. Lady Constance, peace
Const War, war no peace, peace is to me a warre
O Lymoges, O Austria, thou dost shame
That bloody spoyle: thou slave, thou wretch, & coward,
Thou little valiant, great in villanie,
Thou ever strong upon the stronger side;
Thou Fortunes Champion, that do'st never fight
But when her humorous Ladiship is by
To teach thee safety: thou art perjur'd too,
And soothest up greatnesse. What a foole art thou,
A ramping foole, to brag, and stamp, and sweare,
Upon my party: thou cold blooded slave
Hast thou not spoke like thunder on my side?
Been sworne my Souldier, bidding me depend
Upon thy starres, thy fortune, and thy strength,
And dost thou now fall over to my foes?
Thou weare a Lyons hide, doff it for shame,
And hang a Calues skin on those recreant limbes.
Aust. O that a man should speake those words to me.
Phil And hang a Calues-skin on those recreant limbs
Aust Thou dar'st not say so villaine for thy life.
Phil And hang a Calues-skin on those recreant
Iohn. We like not this, thou dost forget thy selfe

Enter Pandulph.

Fra Heere comes the holy Legat of the Pope.
Pan. Haile you annointed deputies of heaven,
To thee King Iohn my holy errand is.
I Pandulph of faire Millane Cardinall,
And from Pope Innocent the Legate heere,
Doe in his name religiously demand
Why thou against the Church our holy Mother,
So wilfully dost spurne; and force perforce
Keepe Stephen Langton chosen Archbishop
Of Canterbury from that holy See
This in our foresaid holy Fathers name
Pope Innocent, I doe demand of thee
Iohn What earthie name to Interrogatories
Can taste the free breath of a sacred King?
Thou canst not Cardinall devise a name
So slight, unworthy, and ridiculous
To charge me to an answere as the Pope.
Tell him this tale, and from the mouth of England,
Adde thus much more, that no Italian Priest
Shall tythe or toll in our dominions;
But as we, under heaven, are supreame head,
So under him that great supremacy
Where we doe reigne we will alone uphold
Without th'assistance of a mortall hand.
So tell the Pope, all reverence set apart
To him and his usurp'd authoritie.
Fra. Brother of England, you blaspheme in this.
Iohn Though you and all the Kings of Christendom
Are led so grossely by this meddling Priest,
Dreame on the curse that money may buy out,
And by the merit of vile gold, drosse, dust,
Purchase corrupted pardon of a man,
Who in that sale sells pardon from himselfe.
Though you, and all the rest so grossely led,
This juggling witchcraft with revenue cherish,
Yet I alone alone doe me oppose
Against the Pope, and count his friends my foes.
Pand Then by the lawfull power that I have,
Thou shalt be curst and excommunicate,
And blessed shall he be that doth revolt
From his Allegeance to an heretique,
And meritorious shall that hand be call'd,
Canonized and worshipp'd as a Saint,
That takes away by any secret course
Thy hatefull life
Con. O lawfull let it be
That I have roome with Rome to curse a while.
Good Father Cardinall, cry thou Amen
To my keene curses; for without my wrong
There is no tongue hath power to curse him right.
Pan. There's Law and Warrant (Lady) for my curse.
Const And for mine too when Law can do no right,
Let it be lawfull, that Law barre no wrong.
Law cannot give my child his kingdome heere;
For he that holds his Kingdome, holds the Law
Therefore since Law it selfe is perfect wrong,
How can the Law forbid my tongue to curse?
Pand Philip of France, on perill of a curse,
Let goe the hand of that Arch heretique,
And raise the power of France upon his head,
Unlesse he doe submit himselfe to Rome.
Eleo Look'st thou pale France? do not let go thy hand.
Con. Looke to that Devill, lest that France repent,

And

And by disioyning hands hell lose a soule
Aust. King Philip, listen to the Cardinall.
Bast. And hang a Calues-skinne on his recreant limbs.
Aust. Well ruffian, I must pocket vp these wrongs,
Because,
Bast. Your breeches best may carry them.
John. Philip, what saist thou to the Cardinall?
Con. What should he say, but as the Cardinall?
Dolph Bethinke you father, for the difference
Is purchase of a heauy curse from Rome,
Or the light losse of England, for a friend:
Forgoe the easier.
Blan. That's the curse of Rome.
Con. O Lewis, stand fast, the deuil tempts thee heere
In likenesse of a new vntrimmed [redacted]
Blan. The Lady Constance speakes not from her faith,
But from her need.
Con. Oh, if thou grant my need,
Which only lives but by the death of faith,
That need, must needs inferre this principle,
That faith would liue againe by death of need
O then tread downe my need, and faith mounts vp,
Keepe my need vp, and faith is trodden downe.
John. The king is moued, and answers not to this
Con. O be remoued from him, and answere well.
Aust Do so king Philip hang no more in doubt
Bast. Hang nothing but a Calues skin most sweet lout
Fra. I am perplext, and know not what to say
Pan. What canst thou say, but will perplex thee more?
If thou stand excommunicate, and curst?
Fra. Good reuerend father, make my person yours,
And tell me how you would bestow your selfe?
This royall hand and mine are newly knit,
And the conjunction of our inward soules
Married in league, coupled, and linkt together
With all religious strength of sacred vowes,
The latest breath that gaue the sound of words
Was deepe-sworne faith, peace, amity, true loue
Betweene our kingdomes and our royall selues,
And euen before this truce, but new before,
No longer then we well could wash our hands,
To clap this royall bargaine vp of peace,
Heauen knowes they were besmear'd and ouer-staind
With slaughters pencill; where reuenge did paint
The fearefull difference of incensed kings
And shall these hands so lately purg'd of bloud?
So newly ioyn'd in loue? so strong in both,
Vnyoke this seysure, and this kinde regreete?
Play fast and loose with faith? so iest with heauen,
Make such vnconstant children of our selues
As now againe to snatch our palme from palme:
Vn-sweare faith sworne, and on the marriage bed
Of smiling peace to march a bloody hoast,
And make a ryot on the gentle brow
Of true sincerity? O holy Sir
My reuerend father, let it not be so;
Out of your grace, deuise, ordaine, impose
Some gentle order, and then we shall be blest
To doe your pleasure, and continue friends.
Pand. All forme is formelesse, Order orderlesse,
Saue what is opposite to England's loue.
Therefore to Armes, be Champion of our Church,
Or let the Church our mother breathe her curse,
A mothers curse, on her reuolting sonne:
France, thou maist hold a serpent by the tongue,
A cased Lion by the mortall paw,
A fasting Tyger safer by the tooth,
Then keepe in peace that hand which thou dost hold.
Fra. I may dis-ioyne my hand, but not my faith.
Pand. So mak'st thou faith an enemy to faith,
And like a ciuill warre setst oath to oath,
Thy tongue against thy tongue. O let thy vow
First made to heauen, first be to heauen perform'd,
That is, to be the Champion of our Church,
What since thou sworst, is sworne against thy selfe,
And may not be performed by thy selfe,
For that which thou hast sworne to doe amisse,
Is not amisse when it is truely done:
And being not done, where doing tends to ill,
The truth is then most done not doing it
The better Act of purposes mistooke,
Is to mistake again, though indirect,
Yet indirection thereby growes direct,
And falshood, falshood cures, as fire cooles fire
Within the scorched veines of one new burn'd.
It is religion that doth make vowes kept,
But thou hast sworne against religion:
By what thou swear'st against the thing thou swear'st,
And mak'st an oath the suretie for thy truth,
Against an oath the truth, thou art vnsure
To sweare, sweares onely not to be forsworne,
Else what a mockerie should it be to sweare?
But thou dost sweare, onely to be forsworne,
And most forsworne, to keepe what thou dost sweare,
Therefore thy later vowes, against thy first,
Is in thy selfe rebellion to thy selfe
And better conquest neuer canst thou make,
Then arme thy constant and thy nobler parts
Against these giddy loose suggestions:
Vpon which better part, our prayrs come in,
If thou vouchsafe them. But if not, then know
The perill of our curses light on thee
So heauy, as thou shalt not shake them off
But in despaire, dye vnder their blacke weight.
Aust. Rebellion, flat rebellion.
Bast. Wil't not be?
Will not a Calues-skin stop that mouth of thine?
Dau. Father, to Armes.
Blanch. Vpon thy wedding day?
Against the blood that thou hast married?
What, shall our feast be kept with slaughtered men?
Shall braying trumpets, and loud churlish drums
Clamors of hell, be measures to our pomp?
O husband heare me: aye, alacke, how new
Is husband in my mouth? euen for that name
Which till this time my tongue did nere pronounce;
Vpon my knee I beg, goe not to Armes
Against mine Vncle.
Const. O, vpon my knee made hard with kneeling,
I doe pray to thee, thou vertuous Dauphin,
Alter not the doome fore-thought by heauen.
Blan. Now shall I see thy loue, what motiue may
Be stronger with thee, then the name of wife?
Con. That which vpholdeth him, that thee vpholds,
His Honor, Oh thine Honor, Lewis thine Honor.
Dolph. I muse your Maiesty doth seeme so cold,
When such profound respects doe pull you on?
Pand. I will denounce a curse vpon his head.
Fra. Thou shalt not need. England, I will fall frō thee
Const. O faire returne of banish'd Maiestie.
Elea. O foule reuolt of French inconstancy.
Eng. France, thou shalt rue this houre within this houre.

Bast.

Bast. Old Time the clocke setter, y bald sexton Time:
Is it as he will? well then, France shall rue.
Blo. The Sun's orecast with blood: faire day adieu,
Which is the side that I must goe withall?
I am with both, each Army hath a hand,
And in their rage, I having hold of both,
They whurle asunder, and dismember me.
Husband, I cannot pray that thou maist winne
Vncle, I needs must pray that thou may'st loose:
Father, I may not wish the fortune thine:
Grandam, I will not wish thy wishes thriue:
Who-euer wins on that side shall I loose
Assured loose, before the match be plaid.
Dolph. Lady, with me, with me thy fortune lies.
Blo. There where my fortune liues there my life dies.
John. Cosen, goe draw our puissance together.
France, I am burn'd vp with inflaming wrath,
A rage, whose heat hath this condition
That nothing can allay, nothing but blood,
The bloud, and deere valu'd bloud of France.
Fra. Thy rage shall burne thee vp, & thou shalt turne
To ashes, ere our blood shall quench that fire:
Looke to thy selfe, thou art in icopardie.
John. No more then he that threats. To Arms let's hie.

Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Alarums, Excursions. Enter Bastard with Austria's head.

Bast. Now by my life, this day grows wondrous hot,
Some ayery Deuil houers in the skie,
And powres downe mischiefe. Austria's head lye there,
Enter Iohn, Arthur, Hubert.
While Philip breathes.
Iohn. Hubert, keepe this boy. Philip make vp,
My Mother is assailed in our Tent,
And I am I feare.
Bast. My Lord, I rescued her,
Her Highnesse is in safety, feare you not:
But on my liege, for very little paines
Will bring this labor to an happy end. Exit

Alarums, excursions, Retreat. Enter Iohn, Elenor, Arthur, Bastard, Hubert, Lords.

Iohn. So shall it be, your Grace shall stay behinde
So strongly guarded. Cosen, looke not sad,
Thy Grandame loues thee, and thy Vncle will
As deere be to thee, as thy father was.
Arth. O this will make my mother die with griefe.
Iohn. Cosen away for England, haste before,
And ere our comming see thou shake the bags
Of hoording Abbots, imprisoned angells
Set at liberty: the fat ribs of peace
Must by the hungry now be fed vpon:
Vse our Commission in his vtmost force.
Bast. Bell, Booke & Candle, shall not driue me back,
When gold and order bids me to come on
I leaue your highnesse. Grandame, I will pray
(If euer I remember to be holy)
For your faire safety: so I kisse your hand.
Ela. Farewell gentle Cosen.
Iohn. Coz, farewell.
Ela. Come hether little kinsman, harke, a worde.
Iohn. Come hether Hubert. O my gentle Hubert,
We owe thee much: within this wall of flesh
There is a soule counts thee her Creditor,
And with aduantage meanes to pay thy loue:
And my good friend, thy voluntary oath
Liues in this bosome, deerely cherished.
Giue me thy hand, I had a thing to say,
But I will fit it with some better time.
By heauen Hubert, I am almost asham'd
To say what good respect I haue of thee.
Hub. I am much bounden to your Maiesty.
Iohn. Good friend thou hast no cause to say so yet,
But thou shalt haue: and creepe time ne're so slow,
Yet it shall come, for me to doe thee good.
I had a thing to say, but let it goe.
The Sunne is in the heauen, and the proud day,
Attended with the pleasures of the world,
Is all too wanton, and too full of gawdes
To giue me audience: If the midnight bell
Did with his yron tongue, and brazen mouth
Sound on into the drowzie race of night:
If this same were a Church yard where we stand,
And thou possessed with a thousand wrongs:
Or if that surly spirit melancholy
Had bak'd thy bloud, and made it heauy, thicke,
Which else runnes tickling vp and downe the veines,
Making that idiot laughter keepe mens eyes,
And straine their cheekes to idle merriment,
A passion hatefull to my purposes.
Or if that thou could'st see me without eyes,
Heare me without thine eares, and make reply
Without a tongue, vsing conceit alone,
Without eyes, eares, and harmefull sound of words:
Then, in dispight of brooded watchfull day,
I would into thy bosome powre my thoughts:
But ah, I will not: yet I loue thee well,
And by my troth I think thou lou'st me well.
Hub. So well, that what you bid me vndertake,
Though that my death were adiunct to my Act,
By heauen I would doe't.
Iohn. Do not I know thou would'st?
Good Hubert, Hubert, Hubert, throw thine eye
On yon young boy: Ile tell thee what my friend,
He is a very serpent in my way,
And wheresoere this foot of mine doth tread,
He lies before me: dost thou vnderstand me?
Thou art his keeper.
Hub. And Ile keepe him so,
That he shall not offend your Maiesty.
Iohn. Death.
Hub. My Lord.
Iohn. A Graue.
Hub. He shall not liue.
Iohn. Enough.
I could be merry now, Hubert, I loue thee.
Well Ile not say what I intend for thee.
Remember. Madam, fare you well.
Ile send those powers o're to your Maiesty.
Ela. My blessing goe with thee.
Iohn. For England Cosen, goe.
Hubert shall be your man, attend on you
With all true duetie. On toward Calice, hoa.

Exeunt.

Scena

Scæna Tertia.

Enter France, Dolphin, Pandulpho, Attendants.

Fra. So by a roaring Tempest on the flood,
A whole Armado of conuicted saile
Is scattered and dis-ioyn'd from fellowship
Pand. Courage and comfort, all shall yet goe well.
Fra. What can goe well, when we haue runne so ill?
Are we not beaten? Is not Angiers lost?
Arthur tane prisoner? diuers deere friends slaine?
And bloudy England into England gone,
Ore-bearing interruption spight of France?
Dol. What he hath won, that hath he fortified.
So hot a speed, with such aduice disposd,
Such temperate order in so fierce a cause,
Doth want example: who hath read, or heard
Of any kindred-action like to this?
Fra. Well could I beare that England had this praise,
So we could finde some patterne of our shame.

Enter Constance.

Looke who comes heere? a graue vnto a soule,
Holding th'eternall spirit against her will,
In the vile prison of afflicted breath
I prethee Lady goe away with me.
Con. Lo, now, now see the issue of your peace.
Fra. Patience good Lady, comfort gentle Constance.
Con. No, I defie all Counsell, all redresse,
But that which ends all counsell, true Redresse:
Death, death, O amiable, louely death,
Thou odoriferous stench: sound rottennesse,
Arise forth from the couch of lasting night,
Thou hate and terror to prosperitie,
And I will kisse thy detestable bones,
And put my eye-balls in thy vaulte browes,
And ring these fingers with thy household wormes,
And stop this gap of breath with fulsome dust,
And be a Carrion Monster like thy selfe,
Come, grin on me, and I will thinke thou smil'st,
And busse thee as thy wife: Miseries Lawe,
O come to me.
Fra. O faire affliction, peace.
Con. No, no, I will not, hauing breath to cry
O that my tongue were in the thunders mouth,
Then with a passion would I shake the world,
And rowze from sleepe that fell Anatomy
Which cannot heare a Ladies feeble voyce,
Which scornes a modern Inuocation.
Pand. Lady you vtter madnesse, and not sorrow
Con. Thou art holy to belye me so,
I am not mad: this haire I teare is mine,
My name is Constance, I was Geffreyes wife,
Young Arthur is my sonne, and he is lost,
I am not mad, I would to heauen I were,
For then 'tis like I should forget my selfe.
O, if I could, what griefe should I forget?
Preach some Philosophy to make me mad,
And thou shalt be Canoniz'd (Cardinall.)
For, being not mad, but sensible of greefe,
My reasonable part produces reason
How I may be deliuer'd of these woes,
And teaches mee to kill or hang my selfe:
If I were mad, I should forget my sonne,
Or madly thinke a babe of clowts were he;
I am not mad: too well, too well I feele
The different plague of each calamitie.
Fra. Binde vp those tresses: O what loue I note
In the faire multitude of those her haires;
Where but by chance a siluer drop hath falne,
Euen to that drop ten thousand wiery fiends
Doe glew themselues in sociable griefe,
Like true, inseparable, faithfull loues,
Sticking together in calamitie.
Con. To England, if you will.
Fra. Binde vp your haires
Con. Yes that I will: and wherefore will I do it?
I tore them from their bonds, and cride aloud,
O, that these hands could so redeeme my sonne,
As they haue giuen these hayres their libertie:
But now I enuie at their libertie,
And will againe commit them to their bonds,
Because my poore childe is a prisoner.
And Father Cardinall, I haue heard you say
That we shall see and know our friends in heauen
If that be true, I shall see my boy againe;
For since the birth of Cain, the first male-childe
To him that did but yesterday suspire,
There was not such a gracious creature borne:
But now will Canker-sorrow eat my bud,
And chase the native beauty from his cheeke,
And he will looke as hollow as a Ghost,
As dim and meager as an Agues fitte,
And so he'll dye: and rising so againe,
When I shall meet him in the Court of heauen
I shall not know him: therefore neuer, neuer
Must I behold my pretty Arthur more.
Pand. You hold too heynous a respect of greefe
Const. He talkes to me, that neuer had a sonne.
Fra. You are as fond of greefe, as of your children.
Con. Greefe fills the roome vp of my absent child:
Lies in his bed, walkes by his side, sees me with his shape,
Puts on his pretty looks, repeats his words,
Remembers me of all his gracious parts,
Stuffes out his vacant garments with his forme;
Then, haue I reason to be fond of greefe?
Fare you well: had you such a losse as I,
I could giue better comfort then you doe.
I will not keepe this forme vpon my head,
When there is such disorder in my witte
O Lord, my boy, my Arthur, my faire sonne,
My life, my ioy, my food, my all the world:
My widow-comfort, and my sorrowes cure. Exit.
Fra. I feare some out-rage, and Ile follow her. Exit.
Dol. There's nothing in this world can make me ioy,
Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale,
Vexing the dull eare of a drowsie man;
And bitter shame hath spoyl'd the sweet words taste,
That it yeelds nought but shame and bitternesse.
Pand. Before the curing of a strong disease,
Euen in the instant of repaire and health,
The fit is strongest: Euils that take leaue
On their departure, most of all shew euill:
What haue you lost by losing of this day?
Dol. All daies of glory, ioy, and happinesse.
Pan. If you had won it, certainely you had.
No, no: when Fortune meanes to men most good,
Shee lookes vpon them with a threatning eye:
'Tis strange to thinke how much King Iohn hath lost
In this which he accounts so clearely wonne.

Are

Are not you grieu'd that Arthur is his prisoner?
Dol. As heartily as he is glad he hath him
Pan. Your minde is all as youthful as your blood.
Now heare me speake with a prophetick spirit
For euen the breath of what I meane to speake,
Shall blow each dust, each straw, each little rub
Out of the path which shall directly lead
Thy foote to Englands Throne. And therefore marke
John hath seiz'd Arthur, and it cannot be,
That whiles warme life playes in that infants veines,
The misplac'd John should entertaine an houre,
One minute, nay one quiet breath of rest.
A Scepter snatch'd with an vnruly hand,
Must be as boysterously maintain'd as gain'd.
And he that stands vpon a slipp'ry place,
Makes nice of no vilde hold to stay him vp:
That John may stand, then Arthur needs must fall,
So be it, for it cannot be but so.
Dol. But what shall I gaine by yong Arthurs fall?
Pan. You are the right of Lady Blanch your wife,
May then make all the claime that Arthur did.
Dol. And lose it, life and all, as Arthur did.
Pan. How green you are, and fresh in this old World?
John layes you plots: the times conspire with you,
For he that steepes his safetie in true blood,
Shall neuer sleepe but bloodily inough.
This Act so euilly borne shall coole the hearts
Of all his people, and freeze vp their zeale,
That none so small aduantage shall step forth
To checke his reigne, but they will cherish it.
No natural exhalation in the skie,
No scope of Nature, no distemper'd day,
No common winde, no customed euent,
But they will plucke away his naturall cause,
And call them Meteors, prodigies and signes,
Abortiues, presages, and tongues of Heauen,
Plainly denouncing vengeance vpon John.
Lew. May be he will not touch yong Arthurs life,
But hold himselfe safe in his prisonment.
Pan. O Sir, when he shall heare of your approach,
If that yong Arthur be not gone already,
Euen at that newes he dies: and then the hearts
Of all his people shall reuolt from him,
And kisse the lippes of vnacquainted change,
And picke strong matter of reuolt, and wrath
Out of the bloody fingers ends of John.
Me thinkes I see this hurley all on foote;
And O, what better matter breeds for you,
Than I haue nam'd. The Bastard Falconbridge
Is now in England ransacking the Church,
Offending Charity: If but a dozen French
Were there in Armes, they would be as a Call
To traine ten thousand English to their side;
Or, as a little snow, tumbled about,
Anon becomes a Mountaine. O noble Dolphine,
Go with me to the King, 'tis wonderfull,
What may be wrought out of their discontent
Now that their soules are topfull of offence,
For England go; I will whet on the King.
Dol. Strong reasons makes strange actions: let vs go,
If you say I, the King will not say no. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus, Scæna prima.

Enter Hubert and Executioners.

Hub. Heate me these Irons hot, and looke thou stand
Within the Arras: when I strike my foote
Vpon the bosome of the ground, rush forth
And binde the boy, which you shall finde with me
Fast to the chaire: be heedfull: hence, and watch.
Exec. I hope your warrant will beare out the deed.
Hub. Vncleanly scruples: feare not you: looke to't.
Yong Lad come forth, I haue to say with you.

Enter Arthur.

Art. Good morrow Hubert.
Hub. Good morrow little Prince.
Art. As little Prince, hauing so great a Title
To be more Prince, as may be: you are sad.
Hub. Indeed I haue been merrier.
Art. Mercie on me.
Me thinkes no body should be sad but I:
Yet I remember, when I was in France
Yong Gentlemen would be as sad as night
Onely for wantonnesse. By my Christendome,
So I were out of prison, and kept Sheepe
I should be as merry as the day is long:
And so I would be here, but that I doubt
My Vncle practises more harme to me.
He is afraid of me, and I of him.
Is it my fault, that I was Geffreys sonne?
No indeede is not: and I would to heauen
I were your sonne, so you would loue me, Hubert.
Hub. If I talke to him, with his innocent prate
He will awake my mercie, which lies dead:
Therefore I will be sodaine, and dispatch.
Art. Are you sicke Hubert? you look pale to day.
In sooth I would you were a little sicke,
That I might sit all night and watch with you
I warrant I loue you more than you do me.
Hub. His words do take possession of my bosome.
Read here yong Arthur. How now foolish rheume?
Turning dispitious torture out of doore?
I must be breefe, least resolution drop
Out at mine eyes, in tender womanish teares.
Can you not read it? Is it not faire writ?
Art. Too fairely Hubert, for so foule effect.
Must you with hot Irons, burne out both mine eyes?
Hub. Yong Boy, I must.
Art. And will you?
Hub. And I will.
Art. Haue you the heart? When your head did but ake,
I knit my handkercher about your browes
(The best I had, a Princesse wrought it me)
And I did neuer aske it you againe.
And with my hand, at midnight held your head,
And like the watchfull minutes, to the houre,
Still and anon cheer'd vp the heauy time;
Saying, what lacke you? and where lies your greefe?
Or what good loue may I performe for you?
Many a poore mans sonne would haue lyen still,
And ne're haue spoke a louing word to you.
But you, at your sicke seruice had a Prince:
Nay, you may thinke my loue was crafty loue,
And call it cunning. Do, and if you will,

If heauen be pleas'd that you muſt vſe me ill,
Why then you muſt. Will you put out mine eyes?
Theſe eyes, that neuer did, nor neuer ſhall
So much as frowne on you.
Hub. I haue ſworne to do it
And with hot Irons muſt I burne them out.
Art. Ah, none but in this Iron Age, would do it:
The Iron of it ſelfe, though heate red hot,
Approaching neere these eyes, would drinke my teares,
And quench this fierie indignation,
Euen in the matter of mine innocence:
Nay, after that, conſume away in ruſt,
But for containing fire to harme mine eye:
Are you more ſtubborne hard, then hammer'd Iron?
And if an Angell ſhould haue come to me,
And told me Hubert ſhould put out mine eyes,
I would not haue beleeu'd him: no tongue but Huberts.
Hub. Come forth: Do as I bid you do.
Art. O ſaue me Hubert, ſaue me: my eyes are out
Euen with the fierce looke of these bloody men.
Hub. Giue me the Iron I ſay, and binde him heere.
Art. Alas, what need you be ſo boiſtrous rough?
I will not ſtruggle, I will ſtand ſtone ſtill
For heauen ſake Hubert let me not be bound.
Nay heare me Hubert, driue theſe men away,
And I will ſit as quiet as a Lambe
I will not ſtirre, nor wince, nor ſpeake a word,
Nor looke vpon the Iron angerly
Thruſt but theſe men away, and Ile forgiue you,
What euer torment you do put me too.
Hub. Go ſtand within: let me alone with him.
Exec. I am beſt pleas'd to be from ſuch a deede.
Art. Alas, I then haue chid away my friend,
He hath a ſterne looke, but a gentle heart:
Let him come backe, that his compaſſion may
Giue life to yours.
Hub. Come (boy) prepare your ſelfe.
Art. Is there no remedie?
Hub. None, but to loſe your eyes.
Art. O heauen: that there were but a moth in yours,
A graine, a duſt, a gnat, a wandering haire,
Any annoyance in that precious ſenſe:
Then feeling what ſmall things are boyſterous there,
Your vilde intent muſt needs ſeeme horrible.
Hub. Is your promiſe? Go too, hold your tong.
Art. Hubert the vtterance of a brace of tongues,
Muſt needes want pleading for a paire of eyes:
Let me not hold my tongue: let me not Hubert,
Or Hubert, if you will cut out my tongue,
So I may keepe mine eyes. O ſpare mine eyes,
Though to no vſe, but ſtill to looke on you.
Loe, by my troth, the Inſtrument is cold,
And would not harme me.
Hub. I can heate it, Boy.
Art. No, in good ſooth: the fire is dead with griefe,
Being create for comfort, to be vs'd
In vndeſerued extreames: See elſe your ſelfe,
There is no malice in this burning cole,
The breath of heauen, hath blowne his ſpirit out,
And ſtrew'd repentant aſhes on his head.
Hub. But with my breath I can reuiue it Boy.
Art. And if you do, you will but make it bluſh,
And glow with ſhame of your proceedings, Hubert:
Nay, it perchance will ſparkle in your eyes:
And, like a dogge that is compell'd to fight,
Snatch at his Maſter that doth tarre him on.
All things that you ſhould vſe to do me wrong
Deny their office: onely you do lacke
That mercie, which fierce fire, and Iron extends,
Creatures of note for mercy, lacking vſes.
Hub. Well, ſee to liue: I will not touch thine eye,
For all the Treaſure that thine Vnckle owes,
Yet am I ſworne, and I did purpoſe, Boy,
With this ſame very Iron, to burne them out
Art. O now you looke like Hubert. All this while
You were diſguis'd.
Hub. Peace: no more. Adieu,
Your Vnckle muſt not know but you are dead.
Ile fill theſe dogged Spies with falſe reports:
And, pretty childe, ſleepe doubtleſſe, and ſecure,
That Hubert for the wealth of all the world,
Will not offend thee.
Art. O heauen! I thanke you Hubert.
Hub. Silence, no more; go cloſely in with mee.
Much danger do I vndergo for thee. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter John, Pembroke, Salsbury, and other Lordes.

John. Heere once againe we ſit, once againe crown'd
And look'd vpon, I hope, with cheareful eyes
Pem. This once again (but that your Highneſſe pleas'd,
Was once ſuperfluous: you were Crown'd before,
And that high Royalty was nere pluck'd off
The faiths of men, nere ſtained with reuolt.
Freſh expectation troubled not the Land
With any long'd-for-change, or better State.
Sal. Therefore, to be poſſeſs'd with double pompe,
To guard a Title, that was rich before;
To gilde refined Gold, to paint the Lilly,
To throw a perfume on the Violet,
To ſmooth the yce, or adde another hew
Vnto the Raine-bow; or with Taper-light
To ſeeke the beauteous eye of heauen to garniſh,
Is waſtefull, and ridiculous exceſſe.
Pem. But that your Royall pleaſure muſt be done,
This acte, is as an ancient tale new told,
And, in the laſt repeating, troubleſome,
Being vrged at a time vnſeaſonable.
Sal. In this the Antique, and well noted face
Of plaine old forme, is much diſfigured,
And like a ſhifted winde vnto a ſaile,
It makes the courſe of thoughts to fetch about,
Startles, and frights conſideration:
Makes ſound opinion ſicke, and truth ſuſpected,
For putting on ſo new a faſhion'd robe.
Pem. When Workemen ſtriue to do better then well,
They do confound their skill in couetouſneſſe,
And oftentimes excuſing of a fault,
Doth make the fault the worſe by th'excuſe.
As patches ſet vpon a little breach,
Diſcredite more in hiding of the fault,
Then did the fault before it was ſo patch'd.
Sal. To this effect, before you were new crown'd
We breath'd our Counſell: but it pleas'd your Highneſſe
To ouer-beare it, and we are all well pleas'd,
Since all, and euery part of what we would
Doth make a ſtand, at what your Highneſſe will.

John.

Iob. Some reasons of this double Corronation
I haue possest you with, and think them strong.
And more, more strong, then lesser is my feare
I shall indue you with. Meane time, but aske
What you would haue reform'd, that is not well,
And well shall you perceiue, how willingly
I will both heare, and grant you your requests.
Pem. Then I, as one that am the tongue of these
To found the purposes of their hearts,
Both for my selfe, and them, but chiefe of all
Your safety, for the which, my selfe and them
Bend their best studies, heartily request
Th'infranchisement of Arthur, whose restraint
Doth moue the murmuring lips of discontent
To breake into this dangerous argument,
If what in rest you haue, in right you hold,
Why then your feares (which as they step on stepps
The stepps of wrong, the moue you to new vp
Your tender kinsman, and to choake his dayes
With barbarous ignorance, and deny his youth
The rich aduantage of good exercise:
That the time's enemies may not haue this
To grace occasions, let it be our suite,
That you haue bid vs aske his libertie,
Which for our goods, we do no further aske,
Then whereupon our weales on you depending,
Counts it your weale he haue his liberty.
Enter Hubert.
Iohn. Let it be so. I do commit his youth
To your direction. Hubert, what newes with you?
Pem. This is the man I should do the bloody deed.
He shew'd his warrant to a friend of mine,
The image of a wicked heynous fault
Lives in his eye: that close aspect of his,
Do shew the mood of a much troubled breast,
And I do fearefully beleeue 'tis done,
What we so fear'd he had a charge to do.
Sal. The colour of the King doth come, and go
Betweene his purpose and his conscience,
Like Heraldry vpon two dastall bastones set
His passion is so ripe, it needs must breake.
Pem. And when it breakes, I feare will issue thence
The foule corruption of a sweet childes death.
Iohn. We cannot hold mortalities strong hand
Good Lords, although my will to giue, is giuing,
The suite which you demand is gone, and dead.
He tells vs Arthur is deceas'd to night.
Sal. Indeed we feare his sickenesse was past cure.
Pem. Indeed we heard how neere his death he was,
Before the child himselfe felt he was sicke:
This must be answer'd either here, or hence.
Iob. Why do you bend such solemne browes on me?
Thinke you I beare the Shearres of destiny?
Haue I commaunded ought that you haue done?
Sal. It is apt, and to be so, and it shame
That Greatnesse should so grossely offer it,
So thrust it on your graine, and to farewell
Pem. Stay yet (Lord Salisbury) Ile go with thee,
And finde th'inheritance of this poore child,
His little kingdome of a forced grace
That blood which ow'd the breadth of all this Ile,
Three foot of it doth hold: bad world the while
This must not be thus borne, this will breake out
To all our sorrowes, and ere long I doubt. Exeunt
Iohn. They burne in indignation. I repent. Enter Mes.
There is no sure foundation set on blood:
No certaine life atchieu'd by others death.
A fearefull eye thou hast. Where is that blood,
That I haue seene inhabite in those cheekes?
So foule a skie, cleeres not without a storme,
Poure downe thy weather: how goes all in France?
Mes. From France to England, neuer such a powre
For any forraigne preparation,
Was leuied in the body of a land
The Copie of your speede is learn'd by them.
For when you should be told they do prepare,
The tydings comes that they are all arriu'd.
Iob. O where hath our Intelligence bin drunke?
Where hath it slept? Where is my Mothers care?
That such an Army could be drowne in France,
And she not heare of it?
Mes. My Liege, her eare
Is stopt with dust: the first of Aprill died
Your noble mother, and as I heare, my Lord,
The Lady Constance in a frenzie died
Three dayes before: but this from Rumors tongue
I do my selfe vniuerse, or false I know not.
Iohn. Withhold thy speed, dreadfull Occasion.
O make a league with me 'till I haue pleas'd
My discontented Peeres. What? Mother dead?
How wildely then walkes my Estate in France?
Vnder whose conduct came those powres of France,
That thou for truth giu'st out are landed here?
Mes. Vnder the Dolphin.
Enter Bastard and Peter of Pomfret.
Iob. Thou hast made me giddy
With these ill tydings. Now? What says the world
To your proceedings? Do not seeke to stuffe
My head with more ill newes, for it is full.
Bast. But if you be a feard to heare the worst,
Then let the worst vn-heard, fall on your head.
Iohn. Beare with me Cosin, for I was amaz'd
Vnder the tide; but now I breath'd againe
Aloft the flood, and can giue audience
To any tongue, speake of what it will.
Bast. How I haue sped among the Clergymen,
The summes I haue collected shall expresse
But as I trauail'd hither through the land,
I finde the people strangely fantasied,
Possest with rumors, full of idle dreames,
Not knowing what they feare, but full of feare.
And here a Prophet that I brought with me
From forth the streets of Pomfret, whom I found
With many hundreds treading on his heeles,
To whom he sung in rude harsh sounding rimes,
That ere the next Ascension day at noone,
Your Highnes should deliuer vp your Crowne.
Iohn. Thou idle Dreamer, wherefore did'st thou so?
Pet. Foreknowing that the truth will fall out so.
Iohn. Hubert, away with him: imprison him,
And on that day at noone, whereon he sayes
I shall yeeld vp my Crowne, let him be hang'd
Deliuer him to safety, and returne,
For I must vse thee. O my gentle Cosen,
Hear'st thou the newes abroad, who are arriu'd?
Bast. The French (my Lord) men's mouths are full of it
Besides I met Lord Bigot, and Lord Salisburie
With eyes as red as new enkindled fire,
And others more, going to seeke the grace
Of Arthur, whom they say is kept to night, on your
Iohn. Gentle kinsman, go (suggestion
And thrust thy selfe into their Companies,

I haue a way to winne their loues againe:
Bring them before me
Bast. I will seeke them out
Iohn. Nay, but make haste: the better foote before
O, let me haue no subiect enemies,
When aduerse Forreyners affright my Townes
With dreadfull pompe of stout inuasion.
Be Mercurie, let feathers to thy heeles,
And flye (like thought) from them, to me againe.
Bast. The spirit of the time shall teach me speed Exit
Iohn. Spoke like a sprightly Noble Gentleman
Go after him: for he perhaps shall needs
Some Messenger betwixt me, and the Peeres,
And be thou he
Mes. With all my heart, my Liege.
Iohn. My mother dead?

Enter Hubert

Hub. My Lord, they say fiue Moones were seene to Foure fixed, and the fift did whirle about (night.
The other foure, in wondrous motion
Iohn. Fiue Moones?
Hub. Old men, and Beldames, in the streets
Do prophesie vpon it dangerously:
Yong Arthurs death is common in their mouths,
And when they talke of him, they shake their heads,
And whisper one another in the eare
And he that speakes, doth gripe the hearers wrist,
Whilst he that heares, makes fearefull action
With wrinkled browes, with nods, with rolling eyes.
I saw a Smith stand with his hammer (thus)
The whilst his Iron did on the Anuile coole,
With open mouth swallowing a Taylors newes,
Who with his Sheeres, and Measure in his hand,
Standing on slippers, which his nimble haste
Had falsely thrust vpon contrary feete,
Told of a many thousand warlike French,
That were embattailed, and ranked in Kent
Another leane, vnwash'd Artificer,
Cuts off his tale, and talkes of Arthurs death.
Iohn. Why seek'st thou to possesse me with these feares?
Why vrgest thou so oft yong Arthurs death?
Thy hand hath murdred him. I had a mighty cause
To wish him dead, but thou hadst none to kill him.
Hub. No had (my Lord?) why, did you not prouoke me?
Iohn. It is the curse of Kings, to be attended
By slaues, that take their humours for a warrant,
To breake within the bloody house of life,
And on the winking of Authoritie
To vnderstand a Law, to know the meaning
Of dangerous Maiesty, when perchance it frownes
More vpon humour, then aduis'd respect.
Hub. Heere is your hand and Seale for what I did.
Iohn. Oh, when the last accompt 'twixt heauen & earth
Is to be made, then shall this hand and Seale
Witnesse against vs to damnation.
How oft the sight of meanes to do ill deeds,
Make deeds ill done? Had'st not thou beene by,
A fellow by the hand of Nature mark'd,
Quoted, and sign'd to do a deede of shame,
This murther had not come into my minde.
But taking note of thy abhorr'd Aspect,
Finding thee fit for bloody villanie
Apt, liable to be employ'd in danger,
I faintly broke with thee of Arthurs death
And thou, to be endeered to a King,
Made it no conscience to destroy a Prince.
Hub. My Lord.
Iohn. Had'st thou but shooke thy head, or made a pause
When I spake darkely, what I purposed
Or turn'd an eye of doubt vpon my face;
As bid me tell my tale in expresse words;
Deepe shame had struck me dumbe, made me break off,
And those thy feares, might haue wrought feares in me
But, thou didst vnderstand me by my signes,
And didst in signes againe parley with sinne,
Yea, without stop, didst let thy heart consent,
And consequently, thy rude hand to acte
The deed, which both our tongues held vilde to name.
Out of my sight, and neuer see me more
My Nobles leaue me, and my State is braued,
Euen at my gates, with rankes of forraigne powres;
Nay, in the body of this fleshly Land,
This kingdome, this Confine of blood, and breathe
Hostilitie, and ciuill tumult reignes
Betweene my conscience, and my Cosins death.
Hub. Arme you against your other enemies
Ile make a peace betweene your soule, and you.
Yong Arthur is aliue. This hand of mine
Is yet a maiden, and an innocent hand.
Not painted with the Crimson spots of blood,
Within this bosome, neuer entered yet
The dreadfull motion of a murderous thought.
And you haue slander'd Nature in my forme,
Which howsoeuer rude exteriorly,
Is yet the couer of a fayrer minde,
Then to be butcher of an innocent childe
Iohn. Doth Arthur liue? O haste thee to the Peeres,
Throw this report on their incensed rage,
And make them tame to their obedience.
Forgiue the Comment that my passion made
Vpon thy feature, for my rage was blinde,
And foule imaginarie eyes of blood
Presented thee more hideous then thou art.
Oh, answer not; but to my Closset bring
The angry Lords, with all expedient haste,
I coniure thee but slowly: run more fast. Exeunt

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Arthur on the walles.

Ar. The Wall is high, and yet will I leape downe.
Good ground be pittifull, and hurt me not:
There's few or none do know me, if they did,
This Ship-boyes semblance hath disguis'd me quite,
I am afraide, and yet Ile venture it.
If I get downe, and do not breake my limbes,
Ile finde a thousand shifts to get away;
As good to dye, and go; as dye, and stay
Oh me, my Vnckles spirit is in these stones,
Heauen take my soule, and England keep my bones. Dies

Enter Pembroke, Salisbury, & Bigot

Sal. Lords, I will meet him at S. Edmondsbury,
It is our safetie, and we must embrace
This gentle offer of the perilous time.
Pem. Who brought that Letter from the Cardinall?
Sal. The Count Melune, a Noble Lord of France,
Whose priuate with me of the Dolphines loue,
Is much more generall, then these lines import.

Big.

Big. To morrow morning let vs meete him then.
Sal. Or rather then set forward, for 'twill be
Two long dayes iourney (Lords) or ere we meete.
Enter Bastard.
Bast. Once more to day well met, distempered Lords,
The King by me requests your presence straight.
Sal. The king hath dispossest himselfe of vs,
We will not line his thin bestained cloake
With our pure Honors, nor attend the foote
That leanes the prince of blood, where ere he walkes
Returne, and tell him so: we know the worst.
Bast. What ere you thinke, good words I thinke were best.
Sal. [illegible] and not of any power to doe a litle.
Bast. [illegible] your greene
[illegible] you had power to doe.
Pem. [illegible] hath spirit enough
Bast. [illegible] to vent his anger, on himselfe.
Sal. This is a prison: What is he lyes here?
P. Oh death, made proud with pure & princely beauty,
The earth had not a hole to hide this deede.
Sal. Murther, as hatefull what he hath done,
Doth lay it open to vrge on reuenge.
Big. Or when he doom'd this Beautie to a graue,
Found it too precious Princely for a graue.
Sal. Sir Richard, what thinke you? you haue beheld,
Or haue you eyes, or hearing, or conceiuing sence?
Or do you almost thinke although you see,
That you do see? Could thought, without this obiect
Forme such another? This is the very top,
The height the Creast or Crest vnto the Crest
Of murthers Armes: This is the bloodiest shame,
The wildest Stratagem, the vildest stroke
That ere walld eye, or wrathfull iarring rage
Presented to the teares of soft remorse.
Pem. All murthers past, do stand excused in this:
And this so sole, and so vnmatcheable,
Shall giue a holinesse, a iustice,
To the yet vnbegotten sinne of times:
And prooue a weake, blood-shed, but a rash,
Exampled by this heynous spectacle.
Bast. It is a damned and a bloody worke,
The graceles action of a heauy hand,
If that it be the worke of any hand.
Sal. If that it be the worke of any hand?
We had a kinde of light, what would ensue.
It is the shamefull worke of Hubert and,
The practise, and the purpose of the King:
From whose obedience I forbid my soule,
Kneeling before this ruine of sweete life,
And breathing to his breathlesse Excellence
The Incense of a Vow, a holy Vow
Neuer to taste the pleasures of the world,
Neuer to be infected with delight,
Nor conuersant with Ease and Idlenesse,
Till I haue set a glory to this hand,
By giuing it the worship of Reuenge.
Pem. Big. Our soules religiously confirme thy words.
Enter Hubert.
Hub. Lords, I am hot with haste in seeking you,
Arthur doth liue: the King hath sent for you.
Sal. Oh he is bold, and blushes not at death,
Auant thou hatefull villaine, get thee gone. (to the Law?
Hub. I am no villaine. Sal. Must I rob
Bast. Your sword is bright sir, put it vp againe.
Sal. Not till it hew the murtherers skin.
Hub. Stand backe Lord Salsbury stand backe I say:
By heauen, I think my sword's as sharpe as yours,
I would not haue you (Lord) forget your selfe,
Nor tempt the danger of my true defence;
Least I by marking of your rage, forget your Worth, your Greatnesse, and Nobility.
Big. Out dunghill: dar'st thou braue a Nobleman?
Hub. Not for my life: But yet I dare defend
My innocent life against an Emperor.
Sal. Thou art a Murtherer.
Hub. Do not prouoke me so:
Yet I am none. Whose tongue so ere speakes false,
Not truely speakes: who speakes not truly, Lies.
Pem. Cut him to pieces.
Bast. Keepe the peace I say.
Sal. Stand by, or I shall gall you Faulconbridge.
Bast. Thou wert better gall the deuil Salsbury:
If thou but frowne on me, or stirre thy foote,
Or teach thy hasty spleene to do me shame,
I'le strike thee dead. Put vp thy sword betime,
Or I'le so maule you and your toasting-Iron,
That you shall think you had but slept in hell,
Sal. Well, ere we part, thou wilt be throughly reconcil'd
Faulconbridge?
See how he vrges, as a Murtherer!
Hub. Lord Salsbury, I say we
Pem. [illegible] Prince?
Hub. 'Tis not the first time I left him well:
I stood [illegible] I had power to, and will weepe
My share of teares, or more, ere they be spent.
Sal. Trust not those cunning waters of his eyes,
For villanies is not without such rheume,
And he long traded in it, makes it seeme
Like Riuers of remorse and Innocency.
Away with me, all you whose soules abhorre
Th'vncleane fauours of a Slaughter house,
For I am stifled with this smell of sinne.
Big. Away, to[illegible], to the Dolphin there.
Pem. Heare me, stay: [illegible] Ex. Lords
Bast. There goes a good warke you offer to doe of this fare worke
Beyond the infant'st thought: I'le not be iudge,
(I [illegible] this deed to death) as iudge I damn'd Hubert.
Hub. Do but [illegible]
[illegible]. Heare me speake.
Bast. Death [illegible]
The word is as blacke as night, nothing is so blacke,
Thou art more deepe damn'd than Prince Lucifer.
There is not yet so ougly a fiend of hell
As thou shalt be, if thou shalt kill this childe.
Hub. Vpon my soule
Bast. If thou dost but consent
To this most cruell Act: do but despaire,
And if thou want'st a Cord, the smallest thred
That euer Spider twisted from her wombe
Will serue to strangle thee. A rush will be a beame
To hang thee on. Or wouldst thou drowne thy selfe,
Put but a little water in a spoone,
And it shall be as all the Ocean,
Enough to stifle such a villaine vp.
I do suspect thee very grieuously.
Hub. If I in act, consent, or sinne of thought
Be guiltie of the stealing that sweete breath
Which was embounded in this beauteous clay,
Let hell want paines enough to torture me
I left him well.
Bast. Go, beare him in thine armes.
I am amaz'd me thinkes, and lose my way
Among the thornes, and dangers of this world.

How eaſie doſt thou take all England vp,
From forth this morſe of dead Royaltie?
The life, the right, and truth of all this Realme
Is fled to heauen: and England now is left
To tug and ſcamble, and to part by th'teeth
The vn-owed intereſt of proud ſwelling State:
Now for the bare pickt bone of Maieſty,
Doth dogged warre briſtle his angry creſt,
And ſnarleth in the gentle eyes of peace:
Now Powers from home, and diſcontents at home
Meet in one line: and vaſt confuſion waites
As doth a Rauen on a ſicke-falne beaſt,
The imminent decay of wreſted pompe
Now happy he, whoſe cloake and center can
Hold out this tempeſt. Beare away that childe,
And follow me with ſpeed: Ile to the King:
A thouſand buſineſſes are briefe in hand,
And heauen it ſelfe doth frowne vpon the Land. Exit.

Actus Quartus, Scena prima.

Enter King John and Pandolph, attendants.

K. John. Thus haue I yeelded vp into your hand
The Circle of my glory.
Pan. Take againe
From this my hand, as holding of the Pope
Your Soueraigne greatneſſe and authoritie.
John. Now keep your holy word, go meet the French,
And from his holieſſe vſe all your power
To ſtop their marches 'fore we are inflam'd:
Our diſcontented Counties doe reuolt;
Our people quarrell with obedience,
Swearing allegeance, and the loue of ſoule
To ſtranger blouds, to forren Royalty;
This inundation of miſtempred humor,
Reſts by you only to be qualified.
Then pauſe not: for the preſent time's ſo ſicke,
That preſent medeine muſt be miniſtred,
Or ouerthrow incureable enſues.
Pand. It was my breath that blew this Tempeſt vp,
Vpon your ſtubborne vſage of the Pope
But ſince you are a gentle conuertite,
My tongue ſhall hufh againe this ſtorme of warre,
And make faire weather in your bluſtring land
On this Aſcenſion day, remember well,
Vpon your oath of ſeruice to the Pope,
Goe I to make the French lay downe their Armes. Exit.
John. Is this Aſcenſion day? did not the Prophet
Say, that before Aſcenſion day at noone,
My Crowne I ſhould giue off? euen ſo I haue:
I did ſuppoſe it ſhould be on conſtraint,
But (heau'n be thanked) it is but voluntary.

Enter Baſtard.

Baſt. All Kent hath yeelded: nothing there holds out
But Douer Caſtle: London hath receiued
Like a kinde Hoſt, the Dolphin and his powers.
Your Nobles will not heare you, but are gone
To offer ſeruice to your enemy:
And wild amazement hurries vp and downe
The little number of your doubtfull friends.
John. Would not my Lords returne to me againe
After they heard yong Arthur was aliue?
Baſt. They found him dead, and caſt into the ſtreets,
An empty Caſket, where the Iewell of life
By ſome damn'd hand was robd, and tane away.
John. That villaine Hubert told me he did liue.
Baſt. So on my ſoule he did, for ought he knew
But wherefore doe you droope? why looke you ſad?
Be great in act, as you haue beene in thought
Let not the world ſee feare and ſad diſtruſt
Gouerne the motion of a kingly eye
Be ſtirring as the time, be fire with fire,
Threaten the threatner, and out-face the brow
Of bragging horror: So ſhall inferior eyes
That borrow their behauiours from the great,
Grow great by your example, and put on
The dauntleſſe ſpirit of reſolution.
Away, and gliſter like the god of warre
When he intendeth to become the field
Shew boldneſſe and aſpiring confidence.
What, ſhall they ſeeke the Lion in his denne,
And fright him there? and make him tremble there?
O let it not be ſaid: forrage, and runne
To meet diſpleaſure farther from the doores,
And grapple with him ere he come ſo nye.
John. The Legat of the Pope hath beene with mee,
And I haue made a happy peace with him,
And he hath promiſd to diſmiſſe the Powers
Led by the Dolphin.
Baſt. Oh inglorious league
Shall we vpon the footing of our land,
Send fayre-play-orders, and make compromiſe,
Inſinuation, parley, and baſe truce
To Armes inuaders? ſhall a beardleſſe boy,
A cockred-ſilken wanton braue our fields,
And flheſh his ſpirit in a warre-like toyle,
Mocking the aire with colours idly ſpred,
And finde no checke? Let vs my Liege to Armes:
Perchance the Cardinall cannot make your peace,
Or if he doe, let it at leaſt be ſaid
They ſaw we had a purpoſe of defence.
John. Haue thou the ordering of this preſent time.
Baſt. Away then with good courage: yet I know
Our Partie may well meet a prowder foe. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter (in Armes) Dolphin, Salisbury, Meloone, Pembroke, Bigot, Souldiers.

Dol. My Lord Meloone, let this be copied out,
And keepe it ſafe for our remembrance:
Returne the preſident to theſe Lords againe,
That hauing our faire order written downe,
Both they and we, peruſing ore theſe notes
May know wherefore we tooke the Sacrament,
And keepe our faithes firme and inuiolable.
Sal. Vpon our ſides it neuer ſhall be broken,
And Noble Dolphin, albeit we ſweare
A voluntary zeale, and an vn-vrg'd Faith
To your proceedings: yet beleeue me Prince,
I am not glad that ſuch a ſore of Time
Should ſeeke a plaiſter by contemn'd reuolt,
And heale the inueterate Canker of one wound,

By

By making many. Oh it greeues my soule,
That I must draw this metaphore from my Text
To be a widdow-maker, oh, and there
Where honourable rescue, and defence
Cries out vpon the name of Austria.
But such is the infection of the time,
That for the earth and Peny-worth of our right,
We cannot deale but with the very hand
Of sterne Iniustice, and confused wrong.
And is not pitty, (oh my grieued friends)
That we, the sonnes and children of this Ile,
Was borne to see so sad an houre as this,
Wherein we step after a stranger, march
Vpon her gentle bosom, and fill vp
Her Enemies rankes? I must withdraw and weepe
Vpon the spot of this enforced cause,
To grace the Gentry of a Land remote,
And follow vnacquainted colours heere.
What heere? O Nation that thou could'st remoue,
That Neptunes Armes who clippeth thee about
Would bear thee from the knowledge of thy seate,
And plant thee ore in Paynim heere,
Where these two Christian Armies might combine
The bloud of malice, in a vaine of league,
And not to spet so shrew'd a breach we make.
Dolph. A noble temper dost thou shew in this,
And great affections wrastling in thy bosome
Doth make an earthquake of Nobility:
Oh, what a noble combat hath fought
Betweene compulsion, and a braue respect:
Let me wipe off this honourable dewe,
That siluerly doth progresse on thy cheekes
My heart is full as great as Lyons teares,
Being a ordinary Inundation.
But this effusion of such manly drops,
This shower, blowne vp by tempest of the soule,
Startles mine eyes, and makes me more amazd
Then had I seene the vaine the top of heauen
Figur'd quite ore with burning Meteors.
Lift vp thy brow renowned Salisbure,
And with a great heart heauen saues the sonne:
Commend these waters to those baby-eyes
That neuer saw the giuer of warre inraged,
Nor met with Fortune, other then at feasts,
Full warm of blood, of mirth, of gossiping
Come, come, for thou shalt thrust thy hand as deepe
Into the purse of rich prosperity
As Lewis himselfe: so Nobles shall you all,
That knit your sinewes to the strength of mine.
Enter Pandulphe.
And euen there, methinkes an Angell spake,
Looke where the holy Legate comes apace,
To giue vs warrant from the hand of heauen,
And on our actions set the name of right
With holy breath.
Pand. Haile noble Prince of France.
The next is this: King John hath reconcil'd
Himselfe to Rome, his spirit is come in,
That so stood out against the holy Church,
The great Metropolis and Sea of Rome.
Therefore thy threatning Colours now wind vp,
And tame the sauage spirit of wilde warre,
That like a Lion foster'd vp at hand,
It may lie gently at the foot of peace,
And be no further harmefull than in shewe.
Dol. Your Grace shall pardon me, I will not backe:
I am too high-borne to be propertied
To be a secondary at controll,
Or vseful seruing-man, and Instrument
To any Soueraigne State throughout the world.
Your breath first kindled the dead coale of warres,
Betweene this chastiz'd kingdome and my selfe,
And brought in matter that should feed this fire;
And now 'tis farre too huge to be blowne out
With that same weake wind, which enkindled it.
You taught me how to know the face of right,
Acquainted me with interest to this Land,
Yea thrust this enterprize into my heart,
And come ye now to tell me Iohn hath made
His peace with Rome? what is that peace to me?
I by the honour of my marriage bed
After young Arthur claime this Land for mine,
And now it is halfe conquer'd, must I backe,
Because that Iohn hath made his peace with Rome?
Am I Rome's slaue? What penny hath Rome borne?
What men prouided? What munition sent
To vnderprop this Action? Is't not I
That vndergoe this charge? Who else but I,
And such as to my claime are liable,
Sweat in this businesse, and maintaine this warre?
Haue I not heere the best Cards for the game
To winne this easie match, plaid for a Crowne?
And shall I now giue ore the yeelded Set?
No, no, on my soule it neuer shall be said.
Pand. You looke but on the outside of this worke.
Dol. Outside or inside I will not returne
Till my attempt so much be glorified,
As to my ample hope was promised
Before I drew this gallant head of warre,
And cull'd these fiery spirits from the world
To out-looke Conquest, and to winne renowne
Euen in the iawes of danger, and of death.
What lusty Trumpet thus doth summon vs?
Enter Bastard.
Bast. According to the fayre play of the world,
Let me haue audience: I am come to speake
My Lord's Lord of Miramane, from the King
I come to learne how you haue dealt for him.
And as you answer, I doe know the scope
And warrant limited vnto my tongue.
Dol. The Dolphin is too wilfull opposite
And will not temporize with my entreaties.
He flatly sayes, he'l not lay downe his Armes.
Bast. By all the blood that ever fury breath'd,
The youth speaks well. Now heare our English King,
For thus his royalty doth speake in me:
He is prepar'd, and reason too he should,
This apish and vnmannerly approach,
This harnest Masque, and vnadui sed Reuell,
This vnheard sawcinesse and boyish Troopes,
The King doth smile at, and is well prepar'd
To whip this dwarfish warre, this Pigmy Armes
From out the circle of his Territories.
That hand which had the strength, euen at your doore,
To cudgell you and make you take the hatch,
To diue like Buckets in concealed Wells,
To crouch in litter of your stable planks,
To lye like pawnes, lock'd vp in chests and trunckes,
To hug with swine, to seeke sweet safety out
In vaults and prisons, and to thrill and shake,

Euen

Euen at the crying of your Nations crow,
[illegible] voyce a[illegible]med Englishman.
Shall that victorious hand be feebled heere,
That in your Chambers gaue you chastisement?
No: know the gallant Monarch is in Armes,
And like an Eagle, o're his ayerie towres,
To fowle annoyance that comes neere his Nest;
And you degenerate, you ingrate Reuolts,
you bloudy Neroes, ripping vp the wombe
Of your deere Mother-England: blush for shame:
For your owne Ladies, and pale-visag'd Maides,
Like Amazons, come tripping after drummes:
Their thimbles into armed Gantlets change,
Their Needles to Lances, and their gentle hearts
To fierce and bloody inclination.
Dol. There end thy braue, and turn thy face in peace,
We grant thou canst out-scold vs: fare thee well,
We hold our time too precious to be spent
With such a brabler.
Pem. Giue it vtterance speake.
Bast. No, I will speake.
Dol. We will attend to neyther:
Strike vp the drummes, and let the tongue of warre
Plead for our interest, and our being heere.
Bast. Indeede your drums being beaten, will cry out;
And so shall you, being beaten: do but start
An eccho with the clamor of thy drumme,
And euen at hand, a drumme is readie brac'd,
That shall reuerberate all, as lowd as thine
Sound but another, and another shall
As lowd as thine) rattle the Welkins eare,
And mocke the deepe mouth'd Thunder: for at hand
(Not trusting to this halting Legate heere,
Whom he hath us'd rather for sport, then neede)
Is warlike John: and in his fore-head sits
A bare-rib'd death, whose office is this day
To feast vpon whole thousands of the French.
Dol. Strike vp our drummes, to finde this danger out.
Bast. And thou shalt finde it (Dolphin) do not doubt
Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Alarums. Enter Iohn and Hubert.

Iohn. How goes the day with vs? oh tell me Hubert.
Hub. Badly I feare; how fares your Maiestie?
Iohn. This Feauer that hath troubled me so long,
Lyes heauie on me: oh, my heart is sicke.
Enter a Messenger.
Mes. My Lord: your valiant kinsman Falconbridge,
Desires your Maiestie to leaue the field,
And [illegible] whither, which way you go.
Iohn. Tell me to whom he's Swinsted, at the Abbey there.
Mes. Be it good or bad for the great supply,
That was expected by the Dolphin heere
Are wrack'd three nights ago on Goodwin sands.
This news was brought to Richard but euen now,
The French fight coldly, and retyre themselues.
Iohn. Ay me, this tyrant Feauer burnes mee vp,
And will not let me welcome this good newes.
Set on toward Swinsted: to my Litter straight,
Weakenesse possesseth me, and I am faint. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Salisbury, Pembroke, and Bigot.
Sal. I did not thinke the King so stor'd with friends.
Pem. Vp once againe: put spirit in the French,
If they miscarry: we miscarry too.
Sal. That misbegotten diuell Falconbridge,
In spight of spight, alone vpholds the day.
Pem. They say King Iohn sore sick, hath left the field.
Enter Meloon wounded.
Mel. Lead me to the Reuolts of England heere.
Sal. When we were happie, we had other names.
Pem. It is the Count Meloone.
Sal. Wounded to death.
Mel. Fly Noble English, you are bought and sold,
Vnthred the rude eye of Rebellion,
And welcome home againe discarded faith,
Seeke out King Iohn, and fall before his feete:
For if the French be Lords of this loud day,
He meanes to recompence the pa[illegible]es you take,
By cutting off your heads: Thus hath he sworne,
And I with him, and many moe with mee,
Vpon the Altar at S. Edmondsbury,
Euen on that Altar, where we swore to you
Deere Amity, and euerlasting loue.
Sal. May this be possible? May this be true?
Mel. Haue I not hideous death within my view,
Retaining but a quantity of life,
Which bleeds away, euen as a torme of waxe
Resolueth from his figure 'gainst the fire?
What in the world should make me now deceiue,
Since I must loose the vse of all deceite?
Why should I then be false, since it is true
That I must dye heere, and liue hence, by Truth?
I say againe, if Lewis do win the day,
He is forsworne, if ere those eyes of yours
Behold another day breake in the East:
But euen this night, whose blacke contagious breath
Already smoakes about the burning Crest
Of the old, feeble, and day-wearied Sunne,
Euen this ill night, your breathing shall expire,
Paying the fine of rated Treachery,
Euen with a treacherous fine of all your liues:
If Lewis, by your assistance win the day.
Commend me to one Hubert, with your King;
The loue of him, and this respect besides
(For that my Grandsire was an Englishman)
Awakes my Conscience to confesse all this.
In lieu whereof, I pray you beare me hence
From forth the noise and rumour of the Field;
Where I may thinke the remnant of my thoughts
In peace, and part this bodie and my soule
With contemplation, and deuout desires.
Sal. We do beleeue thee, and beshrew my soule,
But I do loue the fauour, and the forme
Of this most faire occasion, by the which
We will vntread the steps of damned flight,
And like a bated and retired Flood,
Leauing our rankenesse and irregular course,
Stoope lowe within those bounds we haue ore-look'd,
And calmely run on in obedience
Euen to our Ocean, to our great King Iohn.
My arme shall giue thee helpe to beare thee hence,

For

For I do see the cruell pangs of death
Right in thine eye. Away, my friends, new flight,
And happie newnesse, that intends old right. Exeunt

Scena Quinta.

Enter Dolphin, and his Traine.

Dol. The Sun of heauen (me thought) was loth to set;
But stayd, and made the Westerne Welkin blush,
When English measure backward their owne ground
In faint Retire: Oh bravely came we off,
When with a volley of our needlesse shot,
After such bloody toile, we bid good night,
And wonn'd our tott'ring colours clearely vp,
Last in the field, and almost Lords of it.

Enter a Messenger

Mes. Where is my Prince, the Dolphin?
Dol. Heere: what newes?
Mes. The Count Melcomb is slaine. The English Lords
By his perswasion, are againe falne off,
And your supply, which you haue wish'd so long,
Are cast away, and sunke on Goodwin sands.
Dol. Ah foule, shrew'd newes. Beshrew thy very hart
I did not think to be so sad to night
As this hath made me. Who was he that said
King John did flie an houre or two before
The stumbling night did part our wearie powres?
Mes. Who euer spoke it, it is true my Lord.
Dol. Well: keepe good quarter, & good care to night,
The day shall not be vp so soone as I,
To try the faire aduenture of to morrow. Exeunt

Scena Sexta.

Enter Bastard and Hubert, seuerally.

Hub. Whose there? Speake hoa, speake quickely, or I shoote
Bast. A Friend. What art thou?
Hub. Of the part of England.
Bast. Whether doest thou go?
Hub. What's that to thee?
Why may not I demand of thine affaires,
As well as thou of mine?
Bast. Hubert, I thinke.
Hub. Thou hast a perfect thought:
I will vpon all hazards well beleeue
Thou art my friend, that know'st my tongue so well:
Who art thou?
Bast. Who thou wilt: and if thou please
Thou maist be-friend me so much, as to thinke
I come one way of the Plantagenets.
Hub. Vnkinde remembrance: thou, & endles night,
Haue done me shame: Braue Soldier, pardon me,
That any accent breaking from thy tongue,
Should scape the true acquaintance of mine eare.
Bast. Come, come: sans complement, What newes abroad?
Hub. Why heere walke I, in the black brow of night
To finde you out
Bast. Brieefe then: and what's the newes?
Hub. O my sweet sir, newes fitting to the night,
Blacke, fearefull comfortlesse, and horrible.
Bast. Shew me the very wound of this ill newes,
I am no woman, Ile not swound at it.
Hub. The King I feare is poysond by a Monke,
I left him almost speechlesse, and broke out
To acquaint you with this euill, that you might
The better arme you to the sodaine time,
Then if you had at leisure knowne of this.
Bast. How did he take it? Who did taste to him?
Hub. A Monke I tell you, a resolued villaine
Whose bowels sodainly burst out. The King
Yet speakes, and peradventure may recouer.
Bast. Who didst thou leaue to tend his Maiesty?
Hub. Why know you not? The Lords are all come backe,
And brought Prince Henry in their compaine,
At whose request the king hath pardoned them,
And they are all about his Maiestie
Bast. Withhold thine indignation, mighty heauen,
And tempt vs not to beare aboue our power
I tell thee Hubert, halfe my power this night
Passing these Flats, are taken by the Tide,
These Lincolne-Washes haue deuoured them,
My selfe well mounted hardly haue escap'd.
Away before: Conduct me to the king,
I doubt he will be dead, or ere I come Exeunt

Scena Septima.

Enter Prince Henry, Salisbury and Bigot

Hen. It is too late, the life of all his blood
Is touch'd, corruptible: and his pure braine
(Which some suppose the soules frayle dwelling house)
Doth by the idle Comments that it makes,
Fore-tell the ending of mortality.

Enter Pembroke

Pem. His Highnesse yet doth speak, & holds beleefe,
That being brought into the open ayre,
It would allay the burning qualitie
Of that fell poison which assayleth him.
Hen. Let him be brought into the Orchard heere:
Doth he still rage?
Pem. He is more patient
Then when you left him; euen now he sung.
Hen. Oh vanity of sicknesse: fierce extreames
In their continuance, will not feele themselues.
Death hauing praide vpon the outward parts
Leaues them insensible, and his siege is now
Against the winde, the which he pricks and wounds
With many legions of strange fantasies,
Which in their throng, and presse to that last hold,
Confound themselues. 'Tis strange that death should sing.
I am the Symet to this pale faint Swan,
Who chaunts a doleful hymne to his owne death,
And from the organ-pipe of frailety sings
His soule and body to their lasting rest.
Sal. Be of good comfort (Prince) for you are borne
To set a forme vpon that indigest
Which he hath left so shapelesse, and so rude.

Iohn brought in.

Iohn. I marrie, now my soule hath elbow roome,

It

It would not out at windowes, nor at doores,
There is so hot a summer in my bosome,
That all my bowels crumble vp to dust:
I am a scroled forme drawne with a pen
Vpon a Parchment, and dagges are my teares
Do I shrinke vp
Hen. How fares your Maiesty?
Iob. Poyson'd, ill fare: dead, forsooke, cast off,
And none of you will bid the winter come
To thrust his yce fingers in my maw,
Nor let my kingdomes rivers take their course
Through my burned bosome, nor worke the Nothe
To make my blacke conceiuing wombe a flood,
And coniect me with cold: I beg no more of you much,
I beggs cold comfort and you are so straight
And so vngratefull, you deny me that
Hen. O that there were some vertue in my teares,
That might recure you.
Iohn. Too late for that.
Within me is a hell and there the poyson
Is, as a deed, done to my selfe:
On vnrecouerable consequence ground,
Enter a Messenger.
Bast. Of Kent, braue Hubert, way for violent motion
And speede, to comfort your Maiesty
Iohn. O Cozen, thou art come to set mine eye
The sockle of my soule doth leane vpon,
And all the shrowes that were vp in my commission,
Are turned to one thred, one little haire
My heart hath one poore string to stay it by,
Which holds but till my Hubert view thee,
And the vile state of this thy visit, breake,
And module of confounded royalty.
Bast. The Dolphin is preparing hitherward,
Where heauen he knowes how we shall answer him,
For in a night the best part of my powre,
As I vpon aduantage did remoue,
Were in the washes all vnwarily,
Deuoured by the vnexamined flood
Sal. You breath these dead newes in as dead an eare
My Liege, my Lord: but now a King now dead.
Hen. The sonne of Heauen, and earth, helpe
What lunacy of the world, what hope, what stay,
When this was now a King, and now is clay?
Bast. Art thou gone so? I do but stay behinde,
To do the office for thee, of reuenge,
And then my soule shall waite on thee to heauen,
As it on earth hath beene thy seruant still.
Now, now you Starres, that moue in your right spheres,
Where be your powres? Shew now your mended faiths,
And instantly returne with me againe,
To push destruction and perpetuall shame
Out of the weake doore of our fainting Land
Straight let vs seeke, or straight we shall be sought,
The Dolphine rages at our very heeles.
Sal. It seemes you know not then so much as we,
The Cardinall Pandulph is within at rest
Who halfe an houre since came from the Dolphin,
And brings from him such offers of our peace,
As we with honor and respect may take,
With purpose presently to leaue this warre.
Bast. He will the rather doate, when he sees
Our states well trim'd to our defence.
Sal. Nay, 'tis in a manner done already
For many carriages he hath dispatch'd
To the sea side, and put his cause and quarrell
To the disposing of the Cardinall,
With whom your selfe, my selfe and other Lords
If you think meete, this afternoone will poast
To consummate this businesse happily.
Bast. Let it be so, and you my noble Prince,
With other Princes that may be best prepar'd,
Shall waite vpon your Fathers Funerall.
Hen. At Worster must his bodie be interr'd,
For so he will'd it.
Bast. Thither shall it then,
And happily may your sweet selfe put on
The lineall state, and glorie of the Land,
To whom with all submission on my knee,
I do bequeath my faithfull seruices
And true subiection
Sal. And the like tender of our loue we make
To rest without a spot for euermore
Hen. I haue a kinde soule, that would giue thankes,
And knowes not how to do it, but with teares
Bast. O let vs pay the time but needfull woe,
Since it hath beene before hand with our greefes,
This England neuer did nor neuer shall
Lye at the proud foote of a Conqueror,
But when it first did helpe to wound it selfe.
Now, these her Princes are come home againe,
Come the three corners of the world in Armes,
And we shall shocke them: Naught shall make vs rue,
If England to it selfe, do rest but true. Exeunt.

The life and death of King Richard the Second.

Actus Primus, Scæna Prima.

Enter King Richard, Iohn of Gaunt, with other Nobles and Attendants.

King Richard

Old Iohn of Gaunt, time-honoured Lancaster,
Hast thou according to thy oath and bond
Brought hither Henry Herford thy bold son
Heere to make good thy boistrous late appeale,
Which then our leysure would not let vs heare,
Against the Duke of Norfolke, Thomas Mowbray?

Gaunt. I haue my Liege

King. Tell me moreouer, hast thou sounded him,
If he appeale the Duke on ancient malice,
Or worthily as a good subiect should
On some known ground of treacherie in him.

Gaunt. As neere as I could sift him on that argument,
On some apparant danger seene in him,
Aym'd at your Highnesse, no inueterate malice.

King. Then call them to our presence face to face,
And frowning brow to brow, our selues will heare
Th'accuser, and the accused, freely speake,
High stomack'd are they both, and full of ire,
In rage, deafe as the sea, hasty as fire.

Enter Bullingbrooke and Mowbray.

Bul. Many yeares of happy dayes befall
My gracious Soueraigne, my most louing Liege.

Mow. Each day still better others happinesse,
Vntill the heauens enuying earths good hap,
Adde an immortall title to your Crowne.

King. We thanke you both, yet one but flatters vs,
As well appeareth by the cause you come,
Namely, to appeale each other of high treason.
Cousin of Hereford, what dost thou obiect
Against the Duke of Norfolke, Thomas Mowbray?

Bul. First, heauen be the record to my speech,
In the deuotion of a subiects loue,
Tendering the precious safetie of my Prince,
And free from other misbegotten hate.
Come I appealant to this Princely presence.
Now Thomas Mowbray do I turne to thee,
And marke my greeting well. for what I speake,
My body shall make good vpon this earth,
Or my diuine soule answer it in heauen.
Thou art a Traitor, and a Miscreant;
Too good to be so, and too bad to liue,
Since the more faire and christall is the skie,
The vglier seeme the cloudes that in it flye.
Once more, the more to aggrauate the note,
With a restraint Traitors name stuffe I thy throte,
And wish (so please my Soueraigne) ere I moue,
What my tongue speaks, my right drawn sword may proue.

Mow. Let not my cold words here accuse my zeale
'Tis not the triall of a Womans warre,
The bitter clamour of two eager tongues
Can arbitrate this cause betwixt vs twaine
The blood is hot that must be cooled for this.
Yet can I not of such tame patience boast,
As to be hush, and naught at all to say
First the fayre reuerence of your Highnesse curbes me,
From giuing reynes and spurre to my free speech,
Which else would post, vntill it had returned
These terms of treason doubly down his throat.
Setting aside his high blouds Royalty,
And let him be no kinsman to my Liege,
I do defie him, and I spit at him,
Call him a slanderous Coward, and a Villaine
Which to maintaine, I would allow him odds,
And meete him, were I tide to runne a Moote,
Egall to Horse and Armes, sword, Launce, or Shafte,
In the defence of mine Honor and my Name.
Or any other ground inhabitable,
Where euer Englishman durst set his foote.
Meane time let this defend my loyaltie,
By all my hopes most falsely doth he lie.

Bul. Pale trembling Coward, there I throw my gage,
Disclaiming here the kindred of a King,
And lay aside my high blouds Royalty,
Which feare, not reuerence makes thee to except.
If guilty dread haue left thee so much strength
As to take vp mine Honors pawne, then stoope.
By that, and all the rites of Knighthood else,
Will I make good against thee arme to arme,
What I haue spoken, or thou canst deuise.

Mow. I take it vp, and by that sword I sweare,
Which gently laid my knight-hood on my shoulder,
Ile answer thee in any faire degree,
Or Chiualrous designe of knightly triall
And when I mount, aliue may I not light,
If I be Traitor, or vniustly fight.

King. What doth our Cousin lay to Mowbrayes charge?
It must be great that can inherite vs,
So much as of a thought of ill in him.

Bul. Looke what I said, my life shall prooue it true,
That Mowbray hath receiued eight thousand Nobles,

In

[illegible] bidings for your Highnesse Souldiers,
[illegible] detain'd for new employments,
[illegible] Lord, and all our Vnckle.
[illegible] and with them Bullingbrooke,
[illegible] were to the vtmost Verge
[illegible] ever,
[illegible] threescore yeeres
[illegible] Lawes,
[illegible] head and spring.
[illegible]
Vpon his [illegible] good
That he [illegible] Duke of Glousters death,
[illegible]
And consequently [illegible] Coward,
[illegible] dreames of blood,
With [illegible] crying *Aduenger*es,
(Deere Lord, out of the cauernes of the earth,
To [illegible] through chastisement
And by the glorious worth of my descent,
This arme shall do't, or this life be spent.

King. How high a pitch his resolution soares!
Thomas of Norfolke, what say'st thou to this?

Mow. O let the Noble Gentleman blow fayre,
And [illegible] face,
[illegible]
[illegible] blood,
How God, and [illegible] hate to foule a lyar!

King. Harry, vpon [illegible] eyes dearer,
Were he my Brother, nay our Kingdomes Heyre,
As [illegible] brothers tongue,
Now by my Scepters awe, I make a vow,
Such [illegible] to our sacred blood,
Should [illegible], not pertaunze
[illegible] my vpright soule.
Here our Lieutenant Mowbray part to part,
[illegible],
[illegible]

Mow. [illegible] heart.
[illegible] yeeres,
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible] Accompt,
[illegible]
Now [illegible] Eye [illegible],
[illegible]
Neglected my sworne duty [illegible]
For you my noble Lord of Lancaster,
The [illegible] Fathers toward,
Once [illegible],
[illegible]
[illegible]
I [illegible],
I doe [illegible],
Your Graces pardon, and I hope I had it.
[illegible]
[illegible] a Varlet,
[illegible]
[illegible],
And [illegible] my gage
Vpon [illegible] Traitors foote,
To proue my self a loyall Gentleman,
[illegible] best blood chamber'd in his bosome
[illegible],
Your Highnesse to assigne our Triall day.

King. Wrath-kindled Gentleman be rul'd by me,
Let's purge this choller without letting blood
This we prescribe, though no Physition,
Deepe malice makes too deepe incision.
Forget, forgiue, conclude, and be agreed,
Our Doctors say, This is no time to bleed.
Good Vncle, let this end where it begun,
We'll calme the Duke of Norfolke, you, your son.

Gaunt. To be a make-peace shall become my age.
Throw downe (my sonne) the Duke of Norfolkes gage.

King. And Norfolke, throw downe his.

Gaunt. When Harry when? Obedience bids,
Obedience bids I should not bid again.

King. Norfolke, throw downe, we bidde; there's no boote.

Mow. My life thou shalt command, but not my shame,
The one my duty owes, but my faire name
Despight of death, that liues vpon my graue
To dark'd shonours vse, thou shalt not haue
I am disgrac'd, impeach'd, and baffled heere,
Pierc'd to the soule with slanders venom'd speare
The which no balme can cure, but his heart-blood
Which breath'd this poyson.

King. Rage must be withstood
Giue me his gage. Lyons make Leopards tame.

Mow. Yea, but not change his spots: take but my shame,
And I resigne my gage. My dearest deere Lord,
The purest treasure mortall times afford
Is spotlesse reputation: that away,
Men are but gilded loame, or painted clay.
A Iewell in a ten-times barr'd vp Chest,
Is a bold spirit, a loyall breast
Mine Honour is my life, both grow in one
Take Honour from me, and my life is done.
Then (deere my Liege) mine Honour let me try,
In that I liue, and for that will I dye.

King. Cousin, throw downe your gage,
Do you begin.

Bol. O heauen defend my soule from such foule sin.
Shall I seeme Crest-fallen in my fathers sight,
Or with pale beggar fear, impeach my height
Before this out-dar'd dastard? Ere my tongue,
Shall wound mine honour with such feeble wrong,
Or sound so base a parle: my teeth shall teare
The slauish motiue of recanting feare,
And spit it bleeding in his high disgrace,
Where shame doth harbour, euen in Mowbrayes face.

Exit Gaunt

King. We were not borne to sue, but to command;
Which since we cannot do to make you friends,
Be ready (as your liues shall answer it)
At Couentree, vpon S. Lamberts day
There shall your Swords and Lances arbitrate
The swelling difference of your settled hate
Since we cannot attone you, you shall see
Iustice design the Victors Chiualrie.
Lord Marshall, command our Officers at Armes,
Be ready to direct these home Alarmes. Exeunt

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Gaunt, and Duchesse of Glouster.

Gaunt. Alas, the part I had in Glousters blood,
Doth more solicite me then your exclaimes,
To stirre against the Butchers of his life.

But

But since correction lyeth in those hands
Which made the fault that we cannot correct,
Put we our quarrell to the will of heauen,
Who when they see the howres ripe on earth,
Will raigne hot vengeance on offenders heads.
Duc. Findes brotherhood in thee no sharper spurre?
Hath loue in thy old blood no liuing fire?
Edwards seuen sonnes, whereof thy selfe art one)
Were as seuen vyoles of his Sacred blood
Or seuen faire branches springing from one roote:
Some of those seuen are dride by natures course,
Some of those branches by the Destinies cut:
But Thomas my deere Lord, my life, my Gloster,
One Vyoll full of Edwards Sacred blood,
One flourishing branch of his most royall roote
Is crackt, and all the precious liquor spilt
Is hackt downe, and his summer leaues all vaded
By Enuies hand and Murders bloody Axe
Ah Gaunt, his blood was thine, that bed, that wombe
That mettle, that selfe mould that fashion'd thee,
Made him a man, and though thou liu'st and breathest,
Yet art thou slaine in him: thou dost consent
In some large measure to thy fathers death,
In that thou seest thy wretched brother die,
Who was the modell of thy Fathers life.
Call it not patience Gaunt, it is despaire:
In suffring thus thy brother to be slaughtered,
Thou shew'st the naked pathway to thy life,
Teaching stern murther how to butcher thee:
That which in meane men we intitle patience
Is pale cold cowardice in noble breasts.
What shall I say, to safegard thine owne life,
The best way is to venge my Gloster death.
Gaunt. Heauen's is the quarrell: for heauen's substitute
His Deputy anointed in his sight,
Hath caus'd his death: the which if wrongfully
Let heauen reuenge: for I may neuer lift
An angry arme against his Minister.
Duc. Where then alas may I complaine my selfe?
Gaunt. To heauen, the widdowes Champion and defence
Duc. Why then I will. Farewell old Gaunt,
Thou goest to Couentree, there to behold
Our Cousine Hereford, and fell Mowbray fight:
Oh sit my husbands wrongs on Herfords speare,
That it may enter butcher Mowbrayes breast:
Or if misfortune miss the first carreere,
Be Mowbrayes sinnes so heauy in his bosome,
That they may breake his foaming Courtiers backe
And throw the rider headlong in his Lists
A Caytiffe recreant to my Cousin Hereford
Farewell old Gaunt, thy sometimes brothers wife
With her companion Griefe, must end her life.
Gaunt. Sister farewell, I must to Couentree,
As much good stay with thee, as go with mee.
Duc. Yet one word more: Griefe boundeth where it falls,
Not with the empty hollownes but weight:
I take my leaue, before I haue begun,
For sorrow ends not, when it seemeth done.
Commend me to my brother Edmund Yorke
Lo, this is all: nay yet depart not so,
Though this be all, do not so quickly go,
I shall remember more. Bid him (Oh what?)
With all good speed at Plashey visit mee
Alacke, and what shall good old Yorke there see
But empty lodgings, and vnfurnished walles,
Vn-peopled Offices, vntroden stones?
And what heare there for welcome, but my groanes?
Therefore commend me, let him not come there,
To seeke out sorrow, that dwels euery where
Desolate, desolate will I hence and die,
The last leaue of thee, takes my weeping eye Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Marshall, and Aumerle

Mar. My Lord Aumerle is Harry Herford arm'd
Aum. Yea at all points, and longs to enter the lists
Mar. He is much beholding to the cause is with him.
Aum. Why is he not then?
Mar. He is gone to take his Armes,
For lots of new Milan armour, which did once belong to the Duke of Ireland,
Aum. Who came with a message from the King to the Duke of Lancaster?
Mar. The same.
Aum. Whose man is he now?
Mar. He is his owne man.
Aum. Whose armes does he beare?
Mar. Sable a Fesse Argent.
Aum. His word?
Mar. Loyaltie me lyeth.
Aum. Whose Crest?
Mar. A white Beare, chained and Muzzled Gules.
Aum. Who is his Competitor?
Mar. Thomas Mowbray Duke of Norfolke,
Aum. Why then the Champions are prepared, and nothing wants but the Combatants.
Mar. Not so, for they are both come.
Aum. Who is his Second?
Mar. The Lord Marshall.
Aum. Why not the Duke of Surrey?
Mar. He is sent Ambassador into France.
Aum. Where is the Duke my father with the Dutchesse?
Mar. He is in the throng of Lookers on, to see the Combat.
Aum. Is he mounted?
Mar. No, he walkes on foote.
Aum. Is the Duke of Surrey returned?
Mar. No, my Lord.
Aum. Is the Lord Marshall mounted?
Mar. No, he walkes on foote.
Aum. Is the Duke of Norfolke ready?
Mar. He is.
Aum. Is the King come?
Mar. He is.
Aum. Is the Lord Marshall ready?
Mar. He is

[illegible] leaue
[illegible] our seuerall friends.
Mar. The Appellant in all dutie greets your Highnes,
And craues to kisse your Royall hand, and take his leaue
[illegible] We will descend and fold him in our armes
Cousin Hereford, as your selfe doth will,
So pleases vs the order of this loyall fight
Fare ye well, my blood, which willfully,
I grant we may, but not exchange your dead.
[illegible] Oh our noble eye prophane a teare
For me, if the gorie bowels of their Speare
As confident, as is the Falcons flight
Against a bird, do I with Mowbray fight
My louing Lord, I take my leaue of you,
Of you my Noble Cousin Lord Aumerle,
Not sicke, although I haue to do with death,
But what the more, as I feele my selfe well
Lo, as at English feasts so I regreete
The daintiest last, to make the end most sweet.
O thou the earthly author of my blood,
Whose youthfull spirit in me regenerate,
Doubly diuorcing [illegible] bones from head,
Teaching their [illegible] to my dead,
And from the [illegible] of my prayers,
And [illegible] my [illegible],
Thy [illegible] and [illegible],
[illegible]
[illegible] thee prophetous
Be [illegible],
And [illegible],
[illegible] Cause
[illegible] enemy
Rouze vp this [illegible] blood, deuise [illegible].
Iohn. Mine innocencie and Saint George to thrive
Mow. How euer [illegible] my lot,
There [illegible], or this [illegible] King, And [illegible] Throne,
A [illegible],
Neere to thy Princely heart, [illegible],
Controuersie of [illegible], imbrace
[illegible] power vpon [illegible],
More than my dancing soule doth celebrate
This feast of Battell, with mine Aduersarie.
Most mighty Liege and my companion Peeres,
Take from my mouth the [illegible] years,
As gentle, and as [illegible],
Go to [illegible].
Rich. Farewell, my Lord, securely I espy
Vertue with Valour, couched in thine eye
Order the [illegible] Marshall, and begin
Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster and Derby,
Receiue thy Launce, and [illegible] thy right.
[illegible] Strong as a towre in hope, I cry Amen
Mar. Go beare this Lance to Thomas Duke of Norfolke
1 Her. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derbie,
Stands here for God his Soueraigne, and him heere,
Oppos'd to be found false, and recreant,
To accuse the Duke of Norfolke, Thomas Mowbray,
A Traitor to his God, his King and him,
And dares him to set forward to the fight
2 Her. Here standeth Thomas Mowbray Duke of Norfolk
On paine to be found false and recreant,
Both to defend himselfe, and to approue
Henry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
To God, his Soueraigne, and to him disloyall:
Courageously, and with a free desire
Attending but the Signal to begin. A charge sounded
Mar. Sound Trumpets, and set forward Combatants
Stay, the King hath throwne his Warder downe
Rich. Let them lay by their Helmets & their Speares,
And both returne backe to their Chaires againe.
Withdraw with vs, and let the Trumpets sound,
While we return these Dukes what we decree.
A long Flourish
Draw neere and list
What with our Councell we haue done.
For that our Kingdomes earth should not be soyld
With that deere blood which it hath fostered,
And for our eyes do hate the dire aspect
Of ciuill wounds ploughd vp with neighbors swords,
Which to redeuz'd vp with boyst'rous vntun'd drummes,
With harsh resounding Trumpets dreadful bray,
And grating shocke of wrathfull iron Armes,
Might from our quiet Confines fright faire peace,
And make vs wade euen in our kindreds blood
Therefore we banish you our Territories
You Cousin heere vpon paine of death,
Till twice five Summers haue enricht our fields,
Shall not regreet our faire dominions,
But tread the stranger paths of banishment.
Bol. Your will be done. This must my comfort be,
That Sunne that warmes you heere, shall shine on me.
And those his golden beames to you heere lent,
Shall point on me, and gild my Banishment.
Rich. Norfolke, for thee remaines a heauier doombe,
Which I with some vnwillingnesse pronounce.
The sly slow houres shall not determinate
The dateless limit of thy deere exile
The hope and earth shall to thee, O Neuer to returne,
Breath I against thee vpon paine of life.
Mow. A heauy sentence, my most Soueraigne Leige,
And all vnlook'd for from your Highnesse mouth.
A deere offence in me deepe amazement,
As to be cast forth in the common ayre
Haue I deserued at your Highnesse hands.
The Language I haue learn'd these forty yeares
My natiue English, now must lye dead,
And now my tongue to you is turn'd to me,
Which is my Enemy now, a thing to me,
Or else a well deserued Scourge for me,
Which to a Verball Nouice, Vvall, or a Rod,
Or else a canning gentlewoman cast vp,
Or being open, put into my hands
That knowes no touch to tune the harmony.
Within my mouth you haue engaol'd my tongue,
Doubly portcullist with my teeth and lippes,
And dull, vnfeeling, barren ignorance,
Is made my Gaoler to attend on me
I am too old to fawne vpon a Nurse,
Too farre in yeares to be a pupill now
What is thy sentence then, but speechlesse death,
Which robs my tongue from breathing natiue breath.
Rich. It boots thee not to be compassionate,
After our sentence, plaining comes too late.
Mow. Then thus I turne me from my countries light
To dwell in solemne shades of endlesse night.
Rich. Returne againe, and take an oath with thee.
Lay on our Royall sword, your banisht hands;
Sweare by the duty that you owe to heauen
(Our part therein we banish with your selues)
To keepe the Oath that we administer.
You neuer shall (so helpe you Truth, and Heauen)
Embrace each others loue in banishment,
Nor euer looke vpon each others face,

Nor

Nor euer write, regreete, or reconcile
This lowring tempest of your home-bred hate,
Nor euer by aduice purpose meete,
To plot, contriue, or compasse any ill
Gainst Vs, our State, our Subiects, or our Land.
Bus. I sweare.
Mow. And I to keepe all this.
Bus. Nor ought, to part, as to mine enemie,
By this time (had the king permitted vs
One of the times we had walkt forth in peace,
Baniht thy treacherous periurie by death,
As now we flesh'd with thee our swords in blood.
Confirm'd his Treasons ere we parted hence,
Since thou art to go beare a guilty tongue.
Mow. No Traitor tongue tels Traitor things,
My blood is pure as thine, be sure.
And I am ready to approue my cause
Put what thou dar'st, beleeue, thou shalt not know,
And time it is, when raging Rage is tam'd,
Lest we vnmuzzle Enuie ouer-long
Sate locked in the Caskets of our breasts, &c.
Bus. Were, enuious Lords of Hereford,
Fleete-ground and Tyber-water,
Had I remembred blood on both your faces
Ere I had wayd Sir Iohn of Gaunts gift,
Returne we to the house of Commons heere
Yor. How like a carmen seem'st thou now to me,
For anger? Were I, and your sex to vse,
I would send word to the proudest King
Caunt. You know I am too old to heare my shame
Let these reuiue in you reuenge on me
Lest you forget the times you liu'd by
Loue me yet yeares, and let me loue you dead
Yor. Mine eares are open, but my heart is shut,
My heart, like Marble, to your moane and teares,
Caunt. Let not a mother heare her sonnes complaint,
Nor mourning widow dying, ere I come,
Sit penny-worths of sighes from your soft breasts,
Nor let my kindred surfeit on the sowre
That sauce to sweet meate is prepared for me,
But stop no way, in speed I meane
Thy word is current with him for my death,
But dead, thy kingdome cannot buy my breath.
Rich. Thy sonne is banisht vpon good aduice,
Whereto thy tongue a party-verdict gaue
Why yet our Edicte speakes but yeares to come?
Caun. Things sweet to taste proue oft in operation
You vrg'd me as a Iudge, but had you been
You would haue beene more pittifull.
And, Lookt I when some of you shed teares,
was too strict to make mine eyes to flow,
But you gaue eare to my vnwilling tongue
Against my will to do my selfe this wrong.
Rich. Cousin farewell: and Vncle bid him so:
Six yeares we banish him, and he shall go. Exit
Yorke.
Aum. Cosine farewell: what presence must not know
From where you do remaine, let paper show.
Mow. My Lord no leaue take I, for I will ride
As farre as land will let me, by your side
Caunt. O to what purpose dost thou hoord thy words,
That thou returnst no greeting to thy friends?
Bus. I haue too few to take my leaue of you,
When the tongues office should be prodigall,
To breath th'abundant dolour of the heart.
Caun. Thy grecte is but a cold one for a time
Bus. Were a warme greetes present for that time
Caun. Parting are but greete makes of enemies.
Bus. Come that could I with thorough Rogers cure
Caun. My heart will sigh when I depart to thee,
And not with such a heated Passenger
Caun. I come a pilgrim of my weary steps
I come a stile, where at I now will rest
Let not us ewe of thy attendance
Caun. O who can hold a fire in his hand
By thinking on the frosty Caucasus,
Or cloy the appetite with sugred words
With thoughts on death instead of Nectar,
Or wallow naked in December snow
By thinking on the fiery Sirrian starre
O no, the apprehension of the good
Giues but the greater feeling to the worse
Fell sorrow's tooth doth neuer rancle more
Then when it bites but lanceth not the sore
Caun. Come, come, my sonne, I pray thee speedily wa
Hasty thy speed is euen wanton,
Bus. Should I haue wisht a thousand yeares had gone,
My Mother, and my Nurse that bore me yet
Were on the ground
Ile not be moand, thou shalt not lend a teare

Scena Quarta.

Enter King Aumerle with seuen or eight.
King. We did obserue. Cosine Aumerle,
How farre brought you high Herford on his way?
Aum. I brought high Herford if you call him so,
but to the next high way, and there I left him.
King. And say, what store of parting teares were shed?
Aum. Faith none for me, except the Northeast wind which then grew bitter with speaking of the word,
Did driue my teares backe in my discontent.
King. What said our Cousin when you parted with him?
Aum. Farewell: and for my part I added nought
Sweet to prophesie the short time of his exile
To make him hast apace in Italy,
Could wish him ten times faster home againe.
Marry would the word be welcomer, I doubt
And twenty times he swore then he would hast,
He had no home but in our Mothers loue,
But when he word did rest he would be gone
Rich. Here comes our Cousin Buckingham,
We count him now at Barkly-castle sure,
Where our kinsman comes to greet vs heere,
Our eare is open to thy tale my Lord,
Our eare is open to thy tale my Lord,
Observe his Courtship to the common people,
How he can come to seeme familiar,
With humble, and affable courtesie,
What letters he will send down to his wife,
Wooing poore Craftes-men, with the craft of soules,
And patient vnder-bearing of his Fortune,
As 'twere to banish their affects with him.
Off goes his bonnet to an Oyster wench,

A brace of Draymen bid Gods speed him well,
And had the tribute of his supple knee,
With thankes my Countrymen, my louing friends,
As were our England in reuersion his,
And we our Vassals won at higher hope.
Gaunt. Well, you imagine & well you imagine of your loues
Now for the fetters, with the which we yoake
Expedient manage must be made my Liege
Ere further leasure, yeelding times and stayes
For their aduantage, and your highnesse scathe.
Rich. We haue with a leaden hand
And on our Coffers, with a silent care
And liberall largenesse are growne somewhat light,
We are inforced to farme our royall Realme,
The reuenue whereof shall furnish vs
For our affayres in hand: If that come short
Our Subiects next degree in hope to buy
We will make forfeit of their charters
What yet we will not of our owne good will,
The one and th'other we exact for loane
For we will make for Ireland presently
Enter Bagot.
Bagot what newes?
Bag. Old Gaunt is very sicke my Liege,
Suddenly taken, and hath sent poste haste
To entreat your Maiesty to visit him.
Rich. Where lyes he?
Bag. At Ely house
Rich. Now put it God in the Physitians mind,
To helpe him to his graue immediately,
The liuing of his coffers shall make Coates
To decke our Souldiers for these Irish warres.
Come Gentlemen, let vs all go visit him
Pray heauen we may make haste, and come too late. Exit

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Gaunt, sicke, with the Duke of

Gaun. Will the King come that I may breathe my last
In wholesome counsell to his vnstaid youth?
Yor. Vex not your selfe, and strive not with your breath,
For all in vaine comes counsell to his eare.
Gaun. O but they say the tongues of dying men
Inforce attention like deepe harmony,
Where words are scarce they are seldome spent in vaine,
For they breath truth, that breath their words in paine.
He that no more must say, is listned more,
Then they whom youth & ease haue taught to glose,
More are mens ends marke (no mens eares) before,
The setting Sun, and Musicke at the close
As the last taste of sweetes, is sweetest last,
Writ in remembrance, more then things long past,
Though Richard my life counsell would not heare,
My death-bed tale, may yet vnstaid his eare.
Yor. No, it stands pitty with other flattering sounds
As praises of his state: then there are found
Lasciuious Meeters, to whose venom sound
The open eare of youth doth alwayes listen,
Report of fashions in proud Italy,
Whose manners still our tardie apish Nation
Limpes after in base imitation
Where doth the world thrust forth a vanity,
So it be new, there's no respect how vile,
That is not quickly buz'd into his eares?
That all too late comes counsell to be heard,
Where will doth mutiny with wits regard
Direct not him, whose way himselfe will choose,
'Tis breath thou lackst, and that breath wilt thou loose
Gaunt. Me thinkes I am a Prophet new inspir'd,
And thus expiring, do foretell of him,
His rash fierce blaze of Ryot cannot last,
For violent fires soone burne out themselues,
Small showres last long, but sodaine stormes are short,
He tyres betimes, that spurs too fast betimes,
With eager feeding, food doth choake the feeder
Light vanity, insatiate cormorant,
Consuming meanes soone preyes vpon it selfe
This royall Throne of Kings, this sceptred Isle,
This earth of Maiesty, this seate of Mars,
This other Eden, demy paradise,
This Fortresse built by Nature for her selfe,
Against infection, and the hand of warre
This happy breed of men, this little world,
This precious stone, set in the siluer sea,
Which serues it in the office of a wall,
Or as a Moate defensiue to a house,
Against the enuy of lesse happier Lands,
This blessed plot, this earth, this Realme, this England
This Nurse, this teeming wombe of Royall Kings
Feard by their breed, and famous by their birth,
Renowned for their deeds, as far from home,
For Christian seruice, and true Chiualrie,
As is the sepulchre in stubborne Iury
Of the World-ransoming Crosse, the Lord Sonne.
This land of such deare soules, this dear dear Land,
Deare for her reputation through the world,
Is now leas'd out (I die pronouncing it)
Like to a Tenement or pelting Farme
England bound in with the triumphant sea,
Whose rocky shore beates backe the enuious siege
Of watery Neptune, is now bound in with shame,
With inky blots, and holdings dishonourable,
That pale and dead with chamber-lyers and ills
Of foule sinke-sucking sloth, hath not the power
To walke the limits of his Infancie.
Ah would the scandall vanish with my life,
How happy then were my ensuing death?

Enter King, Queene, Aumerle, Bushy, Greene, Bagot, Ros, and Willoughby.

Yor. The King is come, deale mildly with his youth,
For young hot colts being rag'd do rage the more.
Qu. How fares our noble Vncle Lancaster?
Rich. What comfort man? how is't with aged Gaunt?
Gaun. O how that name befits my composition:
Old Gaunt indeed, and gaunt in being old:
Within me griefe hath kept a tedious fast,
And who abstaines from meate, that is not gaunt?
For sleeping England long time haue I watcht,
Watching breeds leannesse, leannesse is all gaunt
The pleasure that some Fathers feede vpon,
Is my strict fast, I meane my Childrens lookes,
And therein fasting, hast thou made me gaunt:
Gaunt am I for the graue, gaunt as a graue,
Whose hollow wombe inherits nought but bones.
Rich. Can sicke men play so nicely with their names
Gaun. No, misery makes sport to mocke it selfe
Since thou dost seeke to kill my name in me,

I

I mocke my name (great King) to flatter thee.
Ric. Should dying men flatter those that liue?
Gaun. No, no, men liuing flatter those that dye
Rich. Thou now a dying, sayst thou flatter'st me.
Gaun. Oh no, thou dyest, though I the sicker be.
Rich. I am in health, I breath, I see thee ill.
Gaun. Now he that made me, knowes I see thee ill:
Ill in my selfe to see, and in thee, seeing ill,
Thy death-bed is no lesser then the Land,
Wherein thou lyest in reputation sicke,
And thou too carelesse patient as thou art,
Commit'st thy anointed body to the cure
Of those Physitians, that first wounded thee:
A thousand flatterers sit within thy Crowne,
Whose compasse is no bigger then thy head,
And yet incaged in so small a Verge,
The waste is no whit lesser then thy Land:
Oh had thy Grandsire with a Prophets eye,
Seene how his sonnes sonne, should destroy his sonnes,
From forth thy reach he would haue laid thy shame,
Deposing thee before thou were possest,
Which art possest now to depose thy selfe.
Why (Cosine) were thou Regent of the world,
It were a shame to let his Land by lease:
But for thy world enioying but this Land,
Is it not more then shame, to shame it so?
Land-lord of England art thou, and not King:
Thy state of Law, is bond-slaue to the law,
And ——
Rich. And thou, a lunaticke leane-witted foole,
Presuming on an Agues priuiledge,
Dar'st with thy frozen admonition
Make pale our cheeke, chasing the Royall blood
With fury, from his natiue residence?
Now by my Seates right Royall Maiestie,
Wer't thou not Brother to great Edwards sonne,
This tongue that runs so roundly in thy head,
Should run thy head from thy vnreuerent shoulders.
Gaun. Oh spare me not, my brothers Edwards sonne,
For that I was his Father Edwards sonne:
That blood already (like the Pellican)
Thou hast tapt out, and drunkenly caroust.
My brother Gloucester, plaine well meaning soule
(Whom faire befall in heauen 'mongst happy soules)
May be a president, and witnesse good,
That thou respect'st not spilling Edwards blood:
Ioyne with the present sicknesse that I haue,
And thy vnkindnesse be like crooked age,
To crop at once a too-long withered flowre.
Liue in thy shame, but dye not shame with thee,
These words hereafter, thy tormentors bee.
Conuey me to my bed, then to my graue,
Loue they to liue, that loue and honor haue. Exit
Rich. And let them dye, that age and sullens haue,
For both hast thou, and both become the graue.
Yor. I do beseech your Maiestie impute his words
To wayward sicklinesse, and age in him:
He loues you on my life, and holds you deere
As Harry Duke of Herford, were he heere.
Rich. Right, you say true: as Herfords loue, so his:
As theirs, so mine, and all be as it is.

Enter Northumberland.

Nor. My Liege, olde Gaunt commends him to your Maiestie.
Rich. What saies he?
Nor. Nay nothing, all is said:
His tongue is now a stringlesse instrument,
Words, life, and all, old Lancaster hath spent.
Yor Be Yorke the next, that must be bankrupt so,
Though death be poore, it ends a mortall wo
Rich The ripest fruit first falls, and so doth he,
His time is spent, our pilgrimage must be:
So much for that. Now for our Irish warres,
We must supplant those rough rug-headed Kernes,
Which liue like venom, where no venom else
But only they, haue priuiledge to liue.
And for these great affayres do aske some charge
Towards our assistance, we do seize to vs
The plate, coine, reuennewes, and moueables,
Whereof our Vncle Gaunt did stand possest.
Yor How long shall I be patient? Oh how long
Shall tender dutie make me suffer wrong?
Not Glousters death, nor Herfords banishment,
Nor Gauntes rebukes, nor Englands priuate wrongs,
Nor the preuention of poore Bullingbrooke,
About his marriage, nor my owne disgrace
Haue euer made me sowre my patient cheeke,
Or bend one wrinkle on my soueraignes face:
I am the last of noble Edwards sonnes,
Of whom thy Father Prince of Wales was first,
In warre was neuer Lion rag'd more fierce
In peace was neuer gentle Lam more mild,
Than was that young and Princely Gentleman.
His face thou hast, for euen so look'd he
Accomplish'd with the number of thy howres
But when he frown'd, it was against the French,
And not against his friends: his noble hand
Did win what he did weare: and spent not that
Which his triumphant fathers hand had won.
His hands were guilty of no kindreds blood,
But bloody with the enemies of his kinne
Oh Richard Yorke is too farre gone with greefe,
Or else he neuer would compare betweene
Rich. Why Vncle,
What's the matter?
Yor. Oh my Liege, pardon me if you please, if not
I pleas'd not to be pardon'd, am content withall.
Seeke you to seize, and gripe into your hands
The Royalties and Rights of banish'd Herford?
Is not Gaunt dead? and doth not Herford liue?
Was not Gaunt iust? and is not Harry true?
Did not the one deserue to haue an heyre?
Is not his heyre a well-deseruing sonne?
Take Herfords rights away, and take from time
His Charters, and his customarie rights:
Let not to morrow then insue to day,
Be not thy selfe. For how art thou a King
But by faire sequence and succession?
Now afore God (God forbid I say true)
If you do wrongfully seize Herfords right,
Call in his Letters Patents that he hath
By his Attorneyes generall to sue
His Liuerie, and deny his offer'd homage,
You plucke a thousand dangers on your head,
You loose a thousand well-disposed hearts,
And pricke my tender patience to those thoughts
Which honor and allegeance cannot thinke.
Ric. Thinke what you will, we seize into our hands,
His plate, his goods, his money, and his lands
Yor. Ile not be by the while: My Liege farewell,

What will ensue hereof, there's none can tell.
But by bad coniectures may be vnderstood,
That their euents can neuer fall out good. Exit.
Kech. Go Bushie to the Earle of Wiltshire streight,
Bid him repaire to vs to Ely house,
To see this businesse: to morrow next
We will for Ireland, and 'tis time, I trow:
And we create in absence of our selfe
Our Vncle Yorke, Lord Gouernor of England:
For he is iust, and alwayes lou'd vs well.
Come on our Queene, to morrow must we part,
Be merry, for our time of stay is short. Flourish.

Manet North. Willoughby & Ross.

Nor. Well Lords, the Duke of Lancaster is dead.
Ross. And living too, for now his sonne is Duke.
Wil. Barely in title, not in reuennew.
Nor. Richly in both, if iustice had her right.
Ross. My heart is great, but it must break with silence,
Ere't be disburthen'd with a liberall tongue.
Nor. Nay speake thy mind: & let him ne'r speak more
That speakes thy words againe to do thee harme.
Wil. Tends that thou'dst speake to th'Du. of Hereford,
If it be so, out with it boldly man,
Quicke is mine eare to heare of good towards him.
Ross. No good at all that I can do for him,
Vnlesse you call it good to pitie him,
Bereft and gelded of his patrimonie.
Nor. Now afore heauen, 'tis shame such wrongs are borne,
In him a royall Prince, and many moe
Of noble blood in this declining Land;
The King is not himselfe, but basely led
By Flatterers, and what they will informe
Merely in hate 'gainst any of vs all,
That will the King seuerely prosecute
'Gainst vs, our liues, our children, and our heires.
Ross. The Commons hath he pil'd with grieuous taxes
And quite lost their hearts: the Nobles hath he finde
For ancient quarrels, and quite lost their hearts.
Wil. And daily new exactions are deuis'd,
As blankes, benevolences, and I wot not what:
But what o'Gods name doth become of this?
Nor. Warres hath not wasted it, for warr'd he hath not.
But basely yeelded vpon compromise,
That which his Ancestors atchieu'd with blowes
More hath he spent in peace, then they in warres.
Ross. The Earle of Wiltshire hath the realme in Farme.
Wil. The Kings growne bankrupt like a broken man.
Nor. Reproach and dissolution hangeth ouer him.
Ross. He hath not money for these Irish warres
(His burthenous taxations notwithstanding)
But by the robbing of the banish'd Duke.
Nor. His noble Kinsman, most degenerate King:
But Lords, we heare this fearefull tempest sing,
Yet seeke no shelter to auoid the storme?
We see the winde sit fore vpon our sailes,
And yet we strike not, but securely perish
Ross. We see the very wracke that we must suffer,
And vnauoyded is the danger now
For suffering so the causes of our wracke.
Nor. Not so: euen through the hollow eyes of death,
I spie life peering: but I dare not say
How neere the tidings of our comfort is.
Wil. Nay let vs share thy thoughts, as thou dost ours
Ross. Be confident to speake Northumberland,
We three, are but thy selfe, and speaking so,
Thy words are but as thoughts, therefore be bold.
Nor. Then thus: I haue from Port le Blanc
A Bay in Britaine, receiu'd intelligence,
That Harry Duke of Herford, Rainold Lord Cobham,
That late broke from the Duke of Exeter,
His brother Archbishop, late of Canterbury,
Sir Thomas Erpingham, Sir Iohn Ramston,
Sir Iohn Norberie, Sir Robert Waterton, & Francis Quoint,
All these well furnish'd by the Duke of Britaine,
With eight tall ships, three thousand men of warre
Are making hither with all due expedience,
And shortly meane to touch our Northerne shore:
Perhaps they had ere this, but that they stay
The first departing of the King for Ireland.
If then we shall shake off our slauish yoake,
Impe out our drooping Countries broken wing,
Redeeme from broking pawne the blemish'd Crowne,
Wipe off the dust that hides our Scepters gilt,
And make high Maiestie looke like it selfe,
Away with me in poste to Rauenspurgh,
But if you faint, as fearing to do so,
Stay, and be secret, and my selfe will go.
Ross. To horse, to horse, vrge doubts to them y feare.
Wil. Hold out my horse, and I will first be there.
Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Queene, Bushy, and Bagot.

Bush. Madam, your Maiesty is too much sad,
You promis'd when you parted with the King,
To lay aside selfe-harming heauinesse,
And entertaine a cheerefull disposition.
Qu. To please the King, I did: to please my selfe
I cannot do it: yet I know no cause
Why I should welcome such a guest as greefe,
Saue bidding farewell to so sweet a guest
As my sweet Richard: yet againe me thinkes,
Some vnborne sorrow, ripe in fortunes wombe
Is coming towards me, and my inward soule
With nothing trembles, at something it greeues,
More then with parting from my Lord the King.
Bush. Each substance of a greefe hath twenty shadowes
Which shewes like greefe it selfe, but is not so:
For sorrowes eye, glazed with blinding teares,
Diuides one thing intire, to many obiects,
Like perspectiues, which rightly gaz'd vpon
Shew nothing but confusion, ey'd awry,
Distinguish forme: so your sweet Maiestie
Looking awry vpon your Lords departure,
Finde shapes of greefe, more then himselfe to waile,
Which look'd on as it is, is naught but shadowes
Of what it is not: then thrice-gracious Queene,
More then your Lords departure weep not, more's not seene;
Or if it be, 'tis with false sorrowes eie,
Which for things true, weepe things imaginary.
Qu. It may be so: but yet my inward soule
Perswades me it is otherwise: how ere it be,
I cannot but be sad; so heauy sad,
As though on thinking on no thought I thinke,
Makes me with heauy nothing faint and shrinke.
Bush. 'Tis nothing but conceit (my gracious Lady.)

Queene.

Qu. 'Tis nothing leſſe: conceit is ſtill deriu'd
From ſome fore father greefe, mine is not ſo,
For nothing hath begot my ſomething greefe,
Or ſomething, hath the nothing that I greeue,
'Tis in reuerſion that I do poſſeſſe,
But what it is, that is not yet knowne, what
I cannot name, 'tis nameleſſe woe I wot.

Enter Greene.

Gree. Heauen ſaue your Maieſty, and welcome Gentlemen:
I hope the King is not yet ſhipt for Ire and.
Qu. Why hop'ſt thou ſo? 'Tis better hope he is:
For his deſignes crane haſt, his haſt good hope,
Then wherefore doſt thou hope he is not ſhipt?
Gre. That he our hope, might haue retyr'd his power,
and driuen into diſpaire an enemies hope,
Who ſtrongly hath ſet footing in this Land.
The baniſh'd Bullingbrooke repeales himſelfe,
And with vp-lifted Armes is ſafe arriu'd
At Rauenſpurg.
Qu. Now God in heauen forbid.
Gr. O Madam 'tis too true: and that is worſe,
The L. Northumberland, his young ſonne Henrie Percie,
The Lords of Roſſe, Beaumond, and Willoughby,
With all their powrefull friends are fled to him.
Buſh Why haue you not proclaim'd Northumberland
And the reſt of the reuolted faction, Traitors?
Gre. We haue: whereupon the Earle of Worceſter
Hath broke his ſtaffe, reſign'd his Stewardſhip,
And all the houſhold ſeruants fled with him to Bullinbrook.
Qu. So Greene, thou art the midwife of my woe,
And Bullinbrooke my ſorrowes dismall heyre:
Now hath my ſoule brought forth her prodigie,
And I a gaping new deliuered mother,
Haue woe to woe, ſorrow to ſorrow ioyn'd.
Buſh. Diſpaire not Madam.
Qu. Who ſhall hinder me?
I will diſpaire, and be at enmitie
With couzening hope; he is a Flatterer,
A Paraſite, a keeper backe of death,
Who gently would diſſolue the bands of life,
Which falſe hopes linger in extremity.

Enter Yorke.

Gre. Heere comes the Duke of Yorke.
Qu. With ſignes of warre about his aged necke,
Oh full of carefull buſineſſe are his lookes:
Vncle, for heauens ſake ſpeake comfortable words.
Yor. Comfort's in heauen, and we are on the earth,
Where nothing liues but croſſes, care and greefe:
Your husband he is gone to ſaue farre off,
Whilſt others come to make him looſe at home:
Heere am I left to vnder-prop his Land,
Who weake with age, cannot ſupport my ſelfe
Now comes the ſicke houre that his ſurfet made,
Now ſhall he try his friends that flatter'd him.

Enter a ſeruant.

Ser. My Lord, your ſonne was gone before I came.
Yor. He was? Ay me, how full of griefe am I:
The Nobles they are fled, the Commons they are cold,
And will I feare reuolt on Hereford's ſide.
Sirra, get thee to Plaſhy to my ſiſter Gloſter,
Bid her ſend me preſently a thouſand pound,
Hold, take my Ring.
Ser. My Lord, I had forgot
To tell your Lordſhip, to day I came by, and call'd there,
But I ſhall grieue you to report the reſt.
Yor. What is't knaue?
Ser. An houre before I came, the Dutcheſſe di'de.
Yor. Heau'n for his mercy, what a tide of woes
Come ruſhing on this wofull Land at once?
I know not what to do: I would to heauen
(So my vntruth had not prouok'd him to it)
The King had cut off my head with my brothers.
What, are there poſtes diſpatcht for Ireland?
How ſhall we do for money for theſe warres?
Come ſiſter (Cozen I would ſay) pray pardon me.
Go fellow, get thee home, prouide ſome Carts,
And bring away the Armour that is there.
Gentlemen, will you muſter men?
If I know how, or which way to order theſe affaires
Thus diſorderly thruſt into my hands,
Neuer beleeue me. Both are my kinſmen,
Th'one is my Soueraigne, whom both my oath
And duetie bids defend: th'other againe
Is my kinſman, whom the King hath wrong'd,
Whom conſcience, and my kindred bids to right:
Well, ſomewhat we muſt do: Come Cozen,
Ile diſpoſe of you. Gentlemen, go muſter vp your men,
And meet me preſently at Barkley Caſtle:
I ſhould to Plaſhy too: but time will not permit,
All is vneuen, and euery thing is left at ſix and ſeuen. Exit
Buſh. The winde ſits faire for newes to go to Ireland,
But none returnes: For vs to leuy power
Proportionable to th'enemy, is all impoſſible.
Gr. Beſides our neereneſſe to the King in loue,
Is neere the hate of thoſe loue not the King.
Ba And that's the wauering Commons, for their loue
Lies in their purſes, and whoſo empties them,
By ſo much fils their hearts with deadly hate.
Buſh Wherein the king ſtands generally condemn'd
Bag. If iudgement lye in them, then ſo do we,
Becauſe we haue beene euer neere the King.
Gr. Well I wot, for refuge ſtraight to Briſtoll Caſtle,
The Earle of Wiltſhire is arriude there.
Buſh. Thither will I with you, for little office
Will the hateſull Commons performe for vs,
Except like Curres, to teare vs all in peeces.
Will you go along with vs?
Bag No, I will to Ireland to his Maieſtie:
Farewell, it hearts preſages be not vaine,
We three here part, that neu'r ſhall meete againe.
Buſ That's as Yorke thriues to beate back Bullinbrooke.
Gr. Alas poore Duke, the taſke he vndertakes
Is numbring ſands, and drinking Oceans drie,
Where one on his ſide fights, thouſands will flye.
Buſh. Farewell at once, for once, for all, and euer.
Well we may meete againe.
Bag. I feare me neuer. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter the Duke of Hereford, and Northumberland.

Bul. How farre is it my Lord to Berkley now?
Nor. Beleeue me noble Lord,
I am a ſtranger heere in Glouſterſhire,
Theſe high wilde hilles, and rough vneeuen waies,
Drawes out our miles, and makes them wearieſome:
And yet our faire diſcourſe hath beene as ſugar,

Maki n

Making the hard way sweet and delectable:
But I bethinke me, what a wearie way
From Rauenspurgh to Cottshold will be found,
In Rosse and Willoughby, wanting your companie,
Which I protest hath very much beguild
The tedioussesse, and processe of my trauell:
But theres is sweetned with the hope to haue
The present benefit that I possesse;
And hope to ioy, is little lesse in ioy,
Then hope enioy'd: By this, the wearie Lords
Shall make their way seeme short, as mine hath done,
By sight of what I haue, your Noble Companie.
Bull. Of much lesse value is my Companie,
Then your good words: but who comes here?

Enter H. Percie.

North. It is my Sonne, young Harry Percie,
Sent from my Brother Worcester: Whence soeuer.
Harry, how fares your Vnckle?
Percie. I had thought, my Lord, to haue learn'd his health of you.
North. Why, is he not with the Queene?
Percie. No, my good Lord, he hath forsook the Court,
Broken his Staffe of Office, and dispersit
The Household of the King.
North. What was his reason?
He was not so resolu'd, when we last spake together.
Percie Because your Lordship was proclaimed Traitor.
But hee, my Lord, is gone to Rauenspurgh,
To offer seruice to the Duke of Hereford,
And sent me ouer by Barkely, to discouer
What power the Duke of Yorke had leuied there,
Then with direction to repaire to Rauenspurgh.
North. Haue you forgot the Duke of Hereford (Boy.)
Percie. No, my good Lord; for that is not forgot
Which ne're I did remember: to my knowledge,
I neuer in my life did looke on him.
North. Then learne to know him now: this is the Duke.
Percie. My gracious Lord, I tender you my seruice,
Such as it is, being tender, raw, and young,
Which elder dayes shall ripen, and confirme
To more approued seruice, and desert.
Bull. I take thee gentle Percie, and be sure
I count my selfe in nothing else so happy,
As in a Soule remembring my good Friends:
And as my Fortune ripens with thy Loue,
It shall be still thy true Loues recompence,
My Heart this Couenant makes, my Hand thus seales it.
North. How farre is it to Barkely? and what stirre
Keepes good old Yorke there, with his Men of Warre?
Percie. There stands the Castle, by yond tuft of Trees,
Mann'd with three hundred men as I haue heard,
And in it are the Lords of Yorke, Barkely, and Seymor,
None else of Name, and noble estimate.

Enter Rosse and Willoughby.

North. Here come the Lords of Rosse and Willoughby,
Bloody with spurring, fierie red with haste.
Bull. Welcome my Lords, I wot your loue pursues
A banisht Traytor; all my Treasurie
Is yet but vnfelt thankes, which more enrich'd,
Shall be your loue, and labours recompence.
Rosse. Your presence makes vs rich, most Noble Lord.
Willo. And farre surmounts our labour to attaine it.
Bull. Euermore thankes, th'Exchequer of the poore,
Which till my infant-fortune comes to yeeres,
Stands for my Bounty. But who comes here?

Enter Barkely.

North. It is my Lord of Barkely, as I ghesse.
Bark. My Lord of Hereford, my Message is to you.
Bull. My Lord, my Answere is to Lancaster,
And I am come to seeke that Name in England,
And I must finde that Title in your Tongue,
Before I make reply to aught you say.
Bark. Mistake me not, my Lord, 'tis not my meaning
To raze one Title of your Honor out.
To you, my Lord, I come (what Lord you will)
From the most glorious of this Land,
The Duke of Yorke, to know what pricks you on
To take aduantage of the absent time,
And fright our Native Peace with selfe-borne Armes

Enter Yorke.

Bull. I shall not need transport my words by you,
Here comes his Grace in Person. My Noble Vnckle.
York. Shew me thy humble heart, and not thy knee,
Whose duetie is deceiuable, and false.
Bull. My gracious Vnckle.
York. Tut, tut, Grace me no Grace, nor Vnckle me,
I am no Traytors Vnckle; and that word Grace,
In an vngracious mouth, is but prophane.
Why haue these banish'd, and forbidden Legges,
Dar'd once to touch a Dust of Englands Ground?
But more then why, why haue they dar'd to march
So many miles vpon her peaceful Bosome,
Frighting her pale-fac'd Villages with Warre,
And ostentation of despised Armes?
Com'st thou because th'anoynted King is hence?
Why foolish Boy, the King is left behind,
And in my loyall Bosome lies his power.
Were I but now the Lord of such hot youth,
As when braue Gaunt, thy Father, and my selfe
Rescued the Black Prince, that yong Mars of men,
From forth the Ranks of many thousand French:
Oh then, how quickly should this Arme of mine,
Now Prisoner to the Palsie, chastise thee,
And minister correction to thy Fault.
Bull. My gracious Vnckle, let me know my Fault,
On what Condition stands it, and wherein?
York. Euen in Condition of the worst degree,
In grosse Rebellion, and detested Treason:
Thou art a banish'd man, and here art come
Before th'expiration of thy time,
In brauing Armes against thy Soueraigne.
Bull. As I was banish'd, I was banish'd Hereford,
But as I come, I come for Lancaster.
And Noble Vnckle, I beseech your Grace
Looke on my Wrongs with an indifferent eye.
You are my Father, for me thinkes in you
I see old Gaunt aliue. Oh then my Father,
Will you permit, that I shall stand condemn'd
A wandring Vagabond; my Rights and Royalties
Pluckt from my armes perforce, and giuen away
To vpstart Vnthrifts? Wherefore was I borne?
If that my Cousin King, be King of England,
It must be graunted, I am Duke of Lancaster
You haue a Sonne, Aumerle, my Noble Kinsman.
Had you first died, and he beene thus trod downe,
He should haue found his Vnckle Gaunt a Father,
To rowze his Wrongs, and chase them to the bay.
I am denyde to sue my Liuerie here,
And yet my Letters Patents giue me leaue:
My Fathers goods are all distraynd, and sold,
And these, and all, are all amisse imployd.

What

What would you haue me doe? I am a Subiect,
And challenge Law: Attorneyes are denyd me;
And therefore personally I lay my claime
To my Inheritance of free Discent.

North. The Noble Duke hath been too much abus'd.

Ross. It stands your Grace vpon, to doe him right.

Wills. Base men by his endowments are made great.

York. My Lords of England, let me tell you this,
I haue had feeling of my Cousins Wrongs,
And labour'd all I could to doe him right:
But in this kind, to come in braving Armes,
Be his owne Carter, and cut out his way,
To find out Right with Wrong, it may not be:
And you that doe abett him in this kinde,
Cherish Rebellion, and are Rebells all.

North. The Noble Duke hath sworne his comming is
But for his owne; and for the right of that,
We all haue strongly sworne to giue him ayd,
And let him neuer see Ioy, that breakes that Oath.

York. Well, well, I see the issue of these Armes,
I cannot mend it, I must needes confesse,
Because my power is weake, and all ill left:
But if I could, by him that gaue me life
I would attach you all, and make you stoope
Vnto the Soueraigne Mercy of the King.
But since I cannot, be it knowne to you,
I doe remaine as Neuter. So fare you well,
Vnlesse you please to enter in the Castle,
And there repose you for this Night.

Bull. An offer Vncle, that we will accept:
But we must winne your Grace to goe with vs
To Bristow Castle, which they say is held
By Bushy, Bagot, and their Complices,
The Caterpillers of the Commonwealth,
Which haue been sworne to weed, and plucke away.

York. It may be I will go with you, but yet Ile pawse,
For I am loth to breake our Countries Lawes:
Nor Friends, nor Foes, to me welcome you are,
Things past redresse, are now with me past care. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Salisbury, and a Captaine.

Capt. My Lord of Salisbury, we haue stayd ten dayes,
And hardly kept our Countreymen together,
And yet we heare no tidings from the King,
Therefore we will disperse our selues: Farewell.

Sal. Stay yet another day, thou trustie Welchman,
The King reposeth all his confidence in thee.

Capt. 'Tis thought the King is dead: we will not stay;
The Bay-trees in our Countrey are all wither'd,
And Meteors fright the fixed Starres of Heauen:
The pale-fac'd Moone lookes bloody on the Earth,
And lanke-look'd Prophets whisper fearefull change;
Rich men looke sad, and Ruffians dance and leape,
The one in feare, to loose what they enioy,
The other to enioy by Rage, and Warre:
These signes fore-run the death of Kings.
Farewell, our Countreymen are gone and fled,
As well assur'd Richard their King is dead. Exit.

Sal. Ah Richard, with eyes of heauie mind,
I see thy Glory like a shooting Starre,
Fall to the base Earth, from the Firmament:
Thy Sunne sets weeping in the lowly West,
Witnessing Stormes to come, Woe, and Vnrest:
Thy Friends are fled, to wait vpon thy Foes,
And crossely to thy good, all fortune goes. Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Bullingbrooke Yorke, Northumberland, Lord Percie, Willoughby, with Bushie and Greene Prisoners.

Bull. Bring forth these men.
Bushie and Greene, I will not vex your soules,
(Since presently your soules must part your bodies)
With too much vrging your pernicious liues,
For all the which, see heere the enemy of me,
Executes some soules of your deathes.
You haue misled a Prince, a Royall King,
A happie Gentleman in Blood, and Lineaments,
By you vnhappied, and disfigured cleane:
You haue in manner with your sinfull houres
Made a Diuorce betwixt his Queene and him,
Broke the possession of a Royall Bed,
And stayn'd the beauty of a faire Queenes Cheekes,
With teares drawne from her eyes, with your foule wrongs.
My selfe a Prince, by fortune of my birth,
Neere to the King in blood, and neere in loue,
Till you did make him mis-interprete me,
Haue stoopt my neck vnder your iniuries,
And sigh'd my English breath in forraine Clouds,
Eating the bitter bread of banishment;
Whil'st you haue fed vpon my Signories,
Dispark'd my Parkes, and fell'd my forrest Woods;
From mine owne Windowes torne my Houshold Coat,
Raz'd out my Impresa, leauing me no signe,
Saue mens opinions and my liuing blood,
To shew the World I am a Gentleman.
This and much more, much more then twice all this,
Condemnes you to the death: See them deliuered ouer
To execution, and the hand of death.

Bushie. More welcome is the stroake of death to me,
Then Bullingbrooke to England.

Greene. My comfort is, that Heauen will take our soules,
And plague Injustice with the paines of Hell.

Bull. My Lord Northumberland, see them dispatcht.
Vncle you say the Queene is at your House,
For Heauens sake fairely let her be entreated,
Tell her I send to her my kind commends;
Take speciall care my Greetings be deliuered.

York. A Gentleman of mine I haue dispatcht
With Letters of your loue to her at large.

Bull. Thanke me, my Vncle: come Lords away,
To fight with Glendower and his Complices,
A while to worke, and after holiday.

Exeunt.

Scena

Scena Secunda.

Drums. Flourish and Colours

Enter Richard. Aumerle, Carlile, and Souldiers

Bish. Barkloughly Castle call you this at hand?

Aum. Yea, my Lord. How brooks your Grace the ayre,
After your late tossing on the breaking Seas?

King. Needs must I like it well. I weep for joy
To stand upon my Kingdome once againe.
Deere Earth I do salute thee with my hand,
Though Rebels wound thee with their horses hoofes
As a long parted Mother with her Child,
Plays fondly with her teares and smiles in meeting;
So weeping, smiling greet I thee my Earth,
And do thee favour with my Royall hands.
Feed not thy Soveraines foe, my gentle Earth,
Nor with thy sweets comfort his ravenous sense,
But let thy spightfull, venom'd Snakes, Adders,
And comming neere thy boystrous Sovereigne,
Do him no harme with their deceitfull wiles,
Untread my steps, and when he sues to thee,
Creep time-obsequious as they use to Adders,
Wreathing their lowe tongues, which with compliment
Throw their envy'd Speares as far from hurt
Mocke not my vengeance, gentle Earth, O let
The Lanket sting, and lurking Adder spot
Prouoked Soule my sacred Native King,
Shall altered venders like Rebellious Arme,
Our feare not my Lord, that Power that made you King
Hath power to keepe you King, in spight of all.
Aum. He means, my Lord, that we are too remisse,
Whilst Bullingbrooke through our feare,
Growes strong and great, in substance and in friends.
King. Discomfortable Cousin, know'st thou not,
That when the searching eye of Heaven is hid
Behind the Globe, that lights the lower World,
Then Theeves and Robbers range abroad unseene
In Murthers and in Outrages boldly here
But when from under this Terrestriall Ball
He fires the proud tops of the Eastern Pines,
And darts his light through every Guilty hole,
Then Murthers, Treasons, and detested sinnes,
The Cloake of Night being pluckt from off their backs,
Stand bare and naked, trembling at themselves.
So when this Theefe, this Traytor Bullingbrooke,
Who all this while hath revell'd in the Night,
Whilst we were wandring with the Antipodes,
Shall see us rising in our throne the East,
His Treasons will sit blushing in his face,
Not able to endure the sight of Day,
But self affrighted tremble at his sinne.
Not all the Water in the rough rude Sea
Can wash the Balme off from an anointed King,
The breath of worldly men cannot depose
The Deputy elected by the Lord.
For every man that Bullingbrooke hath prest
To lift shrewd Steele against our Golden Crowne,
Heaven for his Richard hath in heavenly pay

A glorious Angell: then if Angels fight,
Weake men must fall, for Heaven still guards the right.

Enter Salisbury

Welcome my Lord, how farre off lyes your Power?

Sal. Nor neere nor farther off, my gracious Lord,
Then this weake arme: discomfort guides my tongue,
And bids me speake of nothing but despaire.
One day too late, I feare me my Noble Lord,
Hath clouded all thy happie dayes on earth.
O call back Yesterday, bid Time returne,
And thou shalt have twelve thousand fighting men.
To day, to day, unhappie day too late
Ore-threwes thy loves, friends, Fortune, and thy State,
For all the Welchmen hearing thou wert dead,
Are gone to Bullingbrooke, disperst and fled.

Aum. Comfort my Liege, why looks your Grace so pale?

King. But now the blood of twenty thousand men
Did triumph in my face, and they are fled,
And till so much blood thither come againe,
Have I not reason to looke pale, and dead?
All Soules that will be safe, flye from my side,
For time hath set a blot upon my pride.

Aum. Comfort my Liege, remember who you are.

King. I have told sad stories for Antiquities sake.
Awaste to my sad Master, no man forces
I weepe, and fast, and watch, and pray, and die.
Aum. Nay, nay, my Liege, this must not be so.
Are you not stout, and lusty, wreake your wrongs,
Strike while the Iron is hot, and while you live,
Live valiantly, we come to you with Powers
Equivalent to the heavy Victorious hope
Of Powers, which your Enemie brings along.
Enter Scroope.
Scroope. More health and happinesse than my Liege

There is more comfort in your cheerfull eye,
Than these sad Armes can promise by their looke.
Say, gentle Scroope, what newes of every Cousin, Earle,
And every Friend to our Affaires? Care?
Scroope. Your Friends (most gracious Lord) are every where,
Greater than your Foes, which (well I wot)
Will, ere they come, be quite confounded.
Here comes the Duke, Yorke, Northumberland,
Enter Yorke, Northumberland.
Ros. Would, Bristow, Salisbury, Berkley, Castle Dearne,
Were safely landed on the Coast of Wales.
Yorke. Would Duke of Yorke, thou hadst the wish'd for aide.
Scroope. Gloucester, Bristow, and Salisbury,
Have gotten Head, and strength in Glamorgan.
Their Armies are full strong, and daily grow,
Whilst Fame with Trumpet tongue proclaimes your Love
Against thy Majesty, and gives with Women's Voyces,
Store to speake large and cap their emulations
Unto the new-come Armes: yea, they Crowne
Every Beadsman learne to bend the Bowes
Of double fatal Yew against thy State.
Yea Distaffe Women manage rusty Pols:
Against thy Seate both young and old rebell,
And all goes worse than I have power to tell.

King. Too well, too well thou tell'st a Tale so ill.
Where is the Earle of Wiltshire? where is Bagot?
What is become of Bushie? where is Greene?

That they haue let the dangerous Enemie
Meature our Confines with such peacefull dayes?
If we preuaile their heeles shall pay for it.
I warrant they haue made peace with Bullingbrooke
Scroope. Peace haue they made with him indeed (my Lord)
Rich. O Villains, Vipers, damn'd without redemption
Dogges, easie wooon to fawne on any man,
Snakes in my heart-blood warm'd, that sting my heart,
Three Dukedoms all three as true to me
As bended Knees to Kings, as sword to Traitors,
Would they make peace? terrible Hell make warre
Vpon their spotted Soules for this Offence
Scroope. Sweet Loue (I see) changing his property,
Turnes to the sowrest and most deadly hate
Againe vncurbe their Sute, and peace is made
With Heauen, and not with Heauen those from your eyes
Haue felt the worst of Deaths destroying wounds,
And lye full low grau'd in the hollow ground.
Aum. Is Salisbury, Greene, and the Earle of Wiltshire dead?
Scroope. I, all of them at Bristow lost their heads
Aum. Where is the Duke my Father with his Power?
Rich. No matter where; of comfort no man speake
Let's talke of Graues, of Wormes, and Epitaphs,
Make Dust our Paper, and with Rayne our Eyes
Write Sorrow on the Bosome of the Earth
Let's chuse Executors, and talke of Wills:
And yet not so; for what can we bequeath,
Saue our deposed bodies to the ground?
Our Lands, our Liues, and all are Bullingbrookes,
And nothing can we call our owne, but Death,
And that small Modell of the barren Earth,
Which serues as Paste, and Couer to our Bones
For Heauen sake kneele we downe vpon the ground,
And talke of Graues, of Wormes, and Epitaphs
How some haue been deposed, some slaine in warre,
Some haunted by the Ghosts they haue deposed,
Some poysoned by their Wiues, some sleeping kill'd,
All murthered: for within the hollow Crowne
That rounds the mortall Temples of a King,
Keepes Death his Court, and there the Antique sits
Scoffing his State, and grinning at his Pompe,
Allowing him a breath, a little Scene,
To Monarchize, be feared, and kill with lookes,
Infusing him with selfe and vaine conceit
As if this Flesh, which walls about our Life,
Were Brasse impregnable: and humor'd thus,
Comes at the last, and with a little Pinne
Bores through his Castle Walls, and farewell King.
Couer your heads, and mock not flesh and blood
With solemne Reuerence: throw away Respect,
Tradition, Forme, and Ceremonious duty,
For you haue but mistooke me all this while:
I liue with Bread like you, feele Want,
Taste Griefe, need Friends: subjected thus,
How can you say to me, I am a King?
Car. My Lord, wise men ne're waile their present woes,
But presently preuent the ways to waile.
To feare the foe, since feare oppresseth strength,
Giues in your weakenesse, strength vnto your foe;
Feare, and be slaine, no worse can come to fight,
And fight and die, is death destroying death
Where fearing dying, payes death seruile breath.
Aum. My Father hath a Power, enquire of him,
And learne to make a Body of a Limbe
Rich. Thou chid'st me well: proud Bullingbrooke I come
To change Blowes with thee, for our day of Doome
This ague fit of feare is ouer-blowne,
An easie taske it is to winne our owne.
Say Scroope, where lyes our Vnckle with his Power?
Speake sweetly man, although thy lookes be sowre.
Scroope. Men iudge by the complexion of the Skie
The state and inclination of the day;
So may you by my dull and heauy Eye
My Tongue hath but a heauier Tale to say:
I play the Torturer, by small and small
To lengthen out the worst, that must be spoken
Your Vnckle Yorke is ioyn'd with Bullingbrooke,
And all your Northerne Castles yeelded vp,
And all your Southerne Gentlemen in Armes
Vpon his Faction.
Rich. Thou hast said enough,
Beshrew thee Cousin, which did'st lead me forth
Of that sweet way I was in, to despaire:
What say you now? What comfort haue we now?
By Heauen I'le hate him euerlastingly,
That bids me be of comfort any more.
Goe to Flint Castle, there I'le pine away,
A King, Woes slaue, shall Kingly Woe obey:
That Power I haue, discharge, and let 'em goe
To ear the Land, that hath some hope to grow,
For I haue none. Let no man speake againe
To alter this, for counsell is but vaine.
Aum. My Liege, one word.
Rich. He does me double wrong
That wounds me with the flatteries of his tongue
Discharge my followers: let them hence away,
From Richards Night, to Bullingbrookes faire Day.
Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter with Drum and Colours Bullingbroke, Harry, Northumberland, and Attendants

Bull. So that by this intelligence we learne
The Welchmen are dispers'd, and Salisbury
Is gone to meet the King, who lately landed
With some few priuate friends, vpon this Coast.
North. The newes is very faire and good, my Lord,
Richard not farre from hence, hath hid his head.
York. It would beseeme the Lord Northumberland,
To say King Richard: alack the heauie day,
When such a sacred King should hide his head.
North. Your Grace mistakes; only to be briefe,
Left his Title out.
York. The time hath been,
Would you haue been so briefe with him he would
Haue been so briefe with you, to shorten you,
For taking so the Head, your whole heads length.
Bull. Mistake not (Vnckle) further than you should.
York. Take not good Cousin, further than you should,
Least you mistake the Heauens are ore your head
Bull. I know it Vnckle, and oppose not my selfe Against their will. But who comes here?
Enter Percie
Welcome Harry: what, will not this Castle yeeld?
Per. The Castle royally is mann'd, my Lord,
Against thy entrance.
Bull. Roy-

Bull. Royally? Why, it containes no King?
Per. Yes my good Lord,
It containes heauen King, King Richard vses
[illegible] amisse of your Lone and Stroke,
[illegible] the Lord Aumarle, Lord Salisbury,
[illegible] Stephen Scroope, besides a Clergie man
[illegible] reuerence which cannot erre
[illegible] Oh, beware, beware of Bishop Carlile
[illegible] Noble Lords,
[illegible] Castle,
[illegible] breathe [illegible]
[illegible] Fares, and [illegible]
[illegible] vpon [illegible]
[illegible] grace
[illegible] come
[illegible] Power,
[illegible] Land,
[illegible] ages
[illegible] Power,
[illegible] Blood,
[illegible] men,
[illegible] make
[illegible] Land,
[illegible] new
[illegible] Dye,
[illegible] reach
[illegible] Deuice,
[illegible] Armes
[illegible] Coast
[illegible] Water.

Farewell our taxed Treasure [illegible] Armes, &c.
[illegible]
See, see King [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[

My Subiects,for a payre of carued Saints,
And my large Kingdome,for a little Graue,
A little little Graue,an obscure Graue.
Or Ile be buryed in the Kings high-way,
Some way of common Trade,where Subiects feet
May hourely trampe on their Soueraignes Head:
For on my heart they tread now,whilest I liue;
And buryed once,why not vpon my Head?
Aumerle,thou weep'st (my tender-hearted Cousin,
Wee'le make foule Weather with dispightfull Teares.
Our sighes,and they,shall lodge the Summer Corne,
And make a Dearth in this fresh-reuiuing Land.
Or that we play the Wantons with our Woes,
And make some pretty Match,with shedding Teares?
As thus,to drop them still vpon one place,
Till they haue fretted vs a payre of Graues,
Within the Earth;and therein laid?there lyes
Two Kinsmen,digg'd their Graues with weeping Eyes?
Would not this ill,if well exprest,moue,
Talke but my Griefe,and you mock at mee.
Most mighty Prince,my Lord Northumberland,
What sayes King Bullingbrooke? Will his Maiestie
Giue Richard leaue to liue,till Richard dies?
You make a Legge,and Bullingbrooke sayes I
North. My Lord,in the base Court he doth attend
To speake with you,may't please you to come downe.
Rich. Downe,downe I come,like glist'ring Phaeton,
Wanting the manage of vnruly Iades.
In the base Court? base Court,where Kings grow base,
To come at Traytors Calls,and doe them Grace
In the base Court come down: down Court,down King,
For night-Owles shriek,where mounting Larks should sing.
Bull. What sayes his Maiestie?
North. Sorrow,and griefe of heart
Makes him speake fondly,like a frantick man:
Yet he is come.
Bull. Stand all apart,
And shew fit duetie to his Maiestie.
My gracious Lord.
Rich. Faire Cousin,
You debase your Princely Knee,
To make the base Earth proud with kissing it.
Me rather had,my Heart might feele your Loue,
Then my vnpleas'd Eye see your Courtesie.
Vp Cousin vp,your Heart is vp I know,
Thus high at least,although your Knee be low.
Bull. My gracious Lord,I come but for mine owne
Rich. Your owne is yours,and I am yours,and all
Bull. So farre be mine,my most redoubted Lord,
As my true seruice shall deserue your Loue.
Rich. Well you deserue:
They well deserue to haue,
That know the strong'st,and surest way to get.
Vnckle giue me your Hand: nay,dry your Eyes,
Teares shew their Loue,but want their Remedies.
Cousin,I am too young to be your Father,
Though you are old enough to be my Heire.
What you will haue,Ile giue,and willing too,
For doe we must,what force will haue vs doe.
Set on towards London.
Cousin,is it so?
Bull. Yea,my good Lord.
Rich. Then I must not say,no.

Flourish. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter the Queene,and two Ladies.

Qu. What sport shall we deuise here in this Garden,
To driue away the heauie thought of Care?
La. Madame,we'le play at Bowles.
Qu. 'Twill make me think the World is full of Rubs,
And that my fortune runnes against the Byas.
La. Madame,we'le Dance
Qu. My Legges can keepe no measure in Delight,
When my poore Heart no measure keepes in Griefe
Therefore no Dancing Girle,some other sport.
La. Madame we'le tell Tales.
Qu. Of Sorrow,or of Griefe?
La. Of either,Madame.
Qu. Of neyther Girle
For if of Ioy,being all a stranger to it,
I doe remember me the more of Sorrow.
Or if of Griefe,being alone opprest with it,
I shall make mine own the more of Sorrow.
Or if of Griefe or Ioy,some touch or taste
Of Ioy to driue away the time of Woe,
And what I want,it boots not to complaine.
La. Madame I'le sing.
Qu. 'Tis well that thou hast cause
But thou shouldst please me better,would'st thou weepe.
La. I could weepe,Madame,would it doe you good.
Qu. And I could sing,would weeping doe me good,
And neuer borrow any Teare of thee.

Enter a Gardiner and two Seruants.

But stay,here comes the Gardiners,
Let's step into the shadow of these Trees.
My wretchednesse,vnto a Rowe of Pinnes,
They'le take for Sta[illegible] for euery one doth so,
Against a Change,Woe is fore-runne with Woe.
Gard. Goe binde thou vp yond dangling Apricocks,
Which like vnruly Children make their Sire
Stoope with oppression of their prodigall weight
Giue some supportance to the bending Twigges.
Goe thou,and like an Executioner
Cut off the heads of too fast growing sprayes,
That looke too lofty in our Common-wealth:
All must be euen,in our Gouernment.
You thus imploy'd,I will goe root away
The noysome Weedes that without profit suck
The Soyle of fertile iuice from wholesome flowers.
Ser. Why should we,in the compasse of a Pale,
Keepe Law and Forme,and due Proportion,
Shewing as in a Modell our firme Estate?
When our Sea-walled Garden,the whole Land,
Is full of Weedes,her fairest Flowers choakt vp,
Her fruit-trees all vnprun'd,her Hedges ruin'd,
Her knots disorder'd and her wholesome Herbes
Swarming with Caterpillers.
Gard. Hold thy peace.
He that hath suffer'd this disorder'd Spring,
Hath now himselfe met with the Fall of Leafe.
The Weedes that his broad-spreading Leaues did shelter,
That seem'd,in eating him to hold him vp,
Are pluckt vp Root and all by Bullingbrooke:
I meane,the Earle of Wiltshire,Bagot,Greene.

Ser. What are they dead?
Gard. They are,
And Bullingbrooke hath seiz'd the wasteful King
Oh, what pity is it, that he had not so trim'd
And dress'd his Land as we this Garden, at time of yeare,
And wound the Barke, the skin of our fruit-trees,
Least being ouer-prest with Sappie Blood,
With too much riches it confound it selfe?
Had he done so, to great and growing men,
They might haue liu'd to beare, and he to taste
Their fruites of duetie. Superfluous branches
We lop away, that bearing boughes may liue:
Had he done so, he had not borne the Crowne,
Which waste of idle houres hath quite throwne downe.
Ser. What think you the King shall be depos'd?
Gard. Depress'd he is already, and depos'd
'Tis doubted he will liue. Letters came last night
To a deere Friend of the Duke of Yorkes,
That tell black tydings.
Qu. Oh, I am prest to death, through want of speaking:
Thou old Adam likenesse set to dresse this Garden:
How dares thy harsh rude tongue sound this vnpleasing
What Euer, what Serpent hath suggested thee, (newes
To make a second Fall of cursed man?
Why dost thou say, King Richard is deposed,
Dar'st thou (thou little better thing than earth)
Diuine his downfall? Say, where, when, and how Cam'st thou by this ill tydings? Speake thou wretch.
Gard. Pardon me Madame, Little ioy haue I
To breath this newes: yet what I say, is true;
King Richard, he is in the mighty hold
Of Bullingbrooke, their Fortunes both are weigh'd:
In your Lords Scale, is nothing but himselfe,
And some few Vanities, that make him light:
But in the Balance of great Bullingbrooke,
Besides himselfe, are all the English Peeres,
And with that odds he weighes King Richard downe.
Post you to London, and you will find it so,
I speake no more than euery one doth know.
Qu. Nimble Mischance, that art so light of foote,
Doth not thy Embassage belong to me?
And am I last that know it? O thou think'st
To serue me last, that giu'st me before the rest.
Diuorce not woe from woe, but let it rest
Vpon the Center of Tragedie,
To feast at London, London shall be wee:
What was I borne to be the scourge and hate,
Should grace the Triumph of great Bullingbrooke.
Gardner, for telling me these newes of woe,
I would the Plants thou graft'st may neuer grow. Exit.
G. Poore Queene, so that thy State might be no worse,
I would my skill were subiect to thy curse:
Here did she drop a teare, here in this place
Ile set a Banke of Rew, sowre Herbe of Grace:
Rue, euen for ruth, here shortly shall be seene,
In the remembrance of a Weeping Queene. Exit.

Actus Quartus. Scœna Prima.

Enter as to the Parliament Bullingbrooke, Aumerle, Northumberland, Percie, Fitz-Water, Surrey, & a Bible, Abbot of Westminster, Herauld, Officers, and Bagot.

Bullingbrooke. Call forth Bagot.
Now Bagot, freely speake thy minde,
What thou do'st know of Noble Glousters death:
Who wrought it with the King, and who perform'd
The bloody Office of his Timelesse end.
Bag. Then set before my face, the Lord Aumerle
Bul. Cosin, stand forth, and looke vpon that man.
Bag. My Lord Aumerle, I know your daring tongue
Scornes to vnsay, what it hath once deliuer'd.
In that dead time, when Glousters death was plotted,
I heard you say, Is not my arme of length,
That reacheth from the restfull English Court
As farre as Calice, to my Vnkles head.
Amongst much other talke, that very time,
I heard you say, that you had rather refuse
The offer of an hundred thousand Crownes,
Then Bullingbrookes returne to England; adding withall,
How blest this Land would be in this your Cosins death.
Aum. Princes, and Noble Lords!
What answer shall I make to this base man?
Shall I so much dishonor my faire Starres,
On equall termes to giue him chastisement?
Either I must, or haue mine honor soyl'd
With th'Attaindor of his slanderous Lippes.
There is my Gage, the manuall Seale of death
That markes thee out for Hell. Thou lyest,
And will maintaine what thou hast said, as falce,
In thy heart blood, though being all too base
To staine the temper of my Knightly sword.
Bul. Bagot forbeare, thou shalt not take it vp.
Aum. Excepting one, I would he were the best
In all this presence, that hath mou'd me so.
Fitz. If that thy valour stand on sympathize:
There is my Gage, Aumerle, in Gage to thine:
By that faire Sunne, that shewes me where thou stand'st,
I heare thee say (and vauntingly thou spak'st it)
That thou were't cause of Noble Glousters death.
If thou denied it, twenty times thou lyest,
And I will turne thy falshood to thy hart,
Where it was forged, with my Rapiers point.
Aum. Thou dar'st not Coward, liue to see the day
Fitz. Now by my Soule, I would it were this houre.
Aum. Fitzwater thou art damn'd to hell for this.
Per. Aumerle thou lyest, his Honor is as true
In this Appeale, as thou art all vniust:
And that thou art so, there I throw my Gage
To prooue it on thee, to the extreamest point
Of mortall breathing. Seize it, if thou dar'st.
Aum. And if I do not, may my hands rot off,
And neuer brandish more reuengefull Steele,
Ouer the glittering Helme of my Foe.
Surrey. My Lord Fitz-water
I do remember well, the very time
Aumerle and you did talke.
Fitz. My Lord,
'Tis very true: You were in presence then,
And you can witnesse with me, this is true.
Surrey. As true, by heauen,
As Heauen it selfe is true.
Fitz. Surrey, thou Lyest
Surrey. Dishonourable Boy;
That Lye, shall lie so heauy on my Sword,
That it shall render Vengeance, and Reuenge,
Till thou the Lye-giuer, and that Lye, doe lye
In earth as quiet as thy Fathers Scull.
In proofe whereof, there is mine Honors pawne,
Engage it to the Triall, if thou dar'st.

Fitz.

Fitzw. How fondly do'ſt thou ſpurre a forward Horſe?
If I dare eate, or drinke, or breathe, or liue,
I dare meete Surrey in a Wildernesſe,
And ſpit vpon him, whileſt I ſay he Lyes,
And Lyes, and Lyes: there is my Bond of Faith,
To tye thee to my ſtrong Correction.
As I intend to thriue in this new World,
Aumerle is guilty of my true Appeale
Beſides, I heard the baniſh'd Norfolke ſay,
That thou Aumerle didſt ſend two of thy men,
To execute the Noble Duke at Calis.
Aum. Some honeſt Chriſtian truſt me with a Gage,
That Norfolke lyes: here doe I throw downe this,
If he may be repeal'd, to try his Honor.
Bull. These differences ſhall all reſt vnder Gage,
Till Norfolke be repeal'd: repeal'd he ſhall be,
And (though mine Enemie) reſtor'd againe
To all his Lands and Seigneuries: when hee's return'd,
Againſt Aumerle we will enforce his Tryall.
Carl. That honorable day ſhall ne're be ſeene.
Many a time hath baniſh'd Norfolke fought
For Ieſus Chriſt, in glorious Chriſtian field
Streaming the Enſigne of the Chriſtian Croſſe,
Againſt black Pagans, Turkes, and Saracens
And toyl'd with workes of Warre, retyr'd himſelfe
To Italy, and there at Venice gaue
His Body to that pleaſant Countries Earth,
And his pure Soule vnto his Captaine Chriſt,
Vnder whoſe Colours he had fought ſo long.
Bull. Why Biſhop is Norfolke dead?
Carl. As ſure as I liue, my Lord.
Bull. Sweet peace conduct his ſweet Soule
To the Boſome of good old Abraham
Lords Appellants, your differences ſhall all reſt vnder gage,
Till we aſſigne you to your dayes of Tryall.

Enter Yorke.

Yorke. Great Duke of Lancaſter, I come to thee
From plume-pluckt Richard, who with willing Soule
Adopts thee Heire, and his high Scepter yeelds
To the poſſeſſion of thy Royall Hand.
Aſcend his Throne, deſcending now from him,
And long liue Henry, of that Name the fourth
Bull. In Gods Name Ile aſcend the Regall Throne
Carl. Marry, Heauen forbid.
Worſt in this Royall Preſence may I ſpeake,
Yet beſt beſeeming me to ſpeake the truth
Would God, that any in this Noble Preſence
Were enough Noble, to be vpright Iudge
Of Noble Richard: then true Noblenesſe would
Learne him forbearance from ſo foule a Wrong.
What Subiect can giue Sentence on his King?
And who ſits here, that is not Richards Subiect?
Theeues are not iudg'd, but they are by to heare,
Although apparant guilt be ſeene in them:
And ſhall the figure of Gods Maieſtie,
His Captaine, Steward, Deputie elect,
Anoynted, Crown'd, planted many yeeres,
Be iudg'd by Subiect, and inferior breath,
And he himſelfe not preſent? Oh, forbid it, God,
That in a Chriſtian Climate, Soules refin'de
Should ſhew ſo heynous, black, obſcene a deed.
I ſpeake to Subiects, and a Subiect ſpeakes,
Stirr'd vp by Heauen, thus boldly for his King.
My Lord of Hereford here, whom you call King,
Is a foule Traytor to proud Herefords King.
And if you Crowne him, let me propheſie,
The bloud of Engliſh ſhall manure the ground,
And future Ages groane for this foule Act.
Peace ſhall go ſleepe with Turkes and Infidels,
And in this Seat of Peace, tumultuous Warres
Shall Kinne with Kinne, and Kinde with Kinde confound.
Diſorder, Horror, Feare, and Mutinie
Shall here inhabite, and this Land be call'd
The field of Golgotha and dead mens Sculles.
Oh, if you reare this Houſe, againſt this Houſe
It will the woefulleſt Diuiſion proue,
That euer fell vpon this curſed Earth.
Preuent it, reſiſt it, and let it not be ſo,
Leaſt Child, Childs Children, cry againſt you Woe.
North. Well haue you argu'd Sir: and for your paines,
Of Capitall Treaſon we arreſt you here.
My Lord of Weſtminſter, be it your charge,
To keepe him ſafely, till his day of Tryall.
May it pleaſe you, Lords to graunt the Commons Suit?
Bull. Fetch hither Richard, that in common view
He may reſigne his Crowne to Henry.
Yorke. I will his Conduct. Exit.
Bull. Lords, you that here are vnder our Arreſt,
Procure your Sureties for your Dayes of Anſwer.
Little are we beholding to your Loue,
And little looke for at your helping Hands.

Enter Richard and Yorke.

Rich. Alack, why am I ſent for to a King,
Before I haue ſhooke off the Regall thoughts
Wherewith I reign'd? I hardly yet haue learn'd
To inſinuate, flatter, bowe, and bend my Knee.
Giue Sorrow leaue a while, to tutor me
To this ſubmiſſion. Yet I well remember
The fauorſt Mignions: were they not mine?
Did they not ſometime cry All hayle to me?
So Iudas did to Chriſt: but he in twelue,
Found truth in all but one, I in twelue thouſand, none.
God ſaue the King: will no man ſay Amen?
Am I both Prieſt and Clarke? well then, Amen
God ſaue the King, although I be not he.
And yet Amen, if Heauen doe make him mee.
To doe what ſeruice am I ſent for hither?
Yorke. To doe that office of mine owne good will,
Which tyre Maieſtie had made me ouer.
The Reſignation of thy State and Crowne
To Henry Bullingbrooke.
Rich. Giue me the Crowne. Here Couſin ſeize the Crowne:
Here Couſin on this ſide my Hand, on that ſide thine.
Now is this Golden Crowne like a deepe Well,
That owes two Buckets, filling one another,
The emptier euer dancing in the ayre,
The other downe vnſeene and full of Water.
That Bucket downe and full of Teares am I,
Drinking my Griefes whilſt you mount vp on high.
Bull. I thought you had been willing to reſigne.
Rich. My Crowne I am: but ſtill my Griefes are mine:
You may my Glories and my State depoſe,
But not my Griefes: ſtill am I King of thoſe.
Bull. Part of your Cares you giue me with your Crowne.
Rich. Your Cares ſet vp do not pluck my Cares downe.
My Care, is loſſe of Care, by old Care done,
Your Care, is gaine of Care, by new Care wonne:
The Cares I giue, I haue, though giuen away,
They tend the Crowne yet ſtill with me they ſtay.
Bull. Are you contented to reſigne the Crowne?

Rich. I, no, no, I for I must nothing be.
Therefore no, no, for I resigne to thee.
Now, marke the water that I shed for it,
I give this heauie Crowne with mine owne Hand,
And this vnwieldie Scepter with my Hand,
The pompe of Kingly state with my Heart,
With mine owne Breath release all duteous Oathes,
All Pompe and Maiestie I do forsweare
My Manors, Rents, Reuenues I forgoe;
My Acts, Decrees and Statutes I recall:
God pardon all Oathes that are broke to me,
God keepe all Vowes vnbroke are made to thee.
Make me, that nothing haue, nothing craue,
And thou with all pleas'd, that hast all atchiu'd.
Long may'st thou liue in Richards seate to sit,
And soone lye Henry dead, that stirr'd thee vp.
God saue King Henry, vnking'd Richard sayes,
And send him many yeeres of Sunne-shine dayes.
What more remaines?

North. No more, but that you read
These Accusations, and these grieuous Crimes
Committed by your Person, and your Followers,
Against the State and Profit of this Land:
That by confessing them, the Cup of Woe
May passe away with them and them from you.

Rich. Must I do so? and must I ravell out
My weau'd vp follies? Gentle Northumberland,
If thy offences were vpon record,
Would it not shame thee in so faire a troupe
To read a lesson against Kings anoynted?
Thou art too blame, I must confesse with Pilate,
Haue done with me, let sorrow haue with me,
And thou with all pardon'd, sit high in Heauen.
But Lord, thou wilt not, for I feele it well,
Nor soothe thy selfe with least vniustice so,
As to make perfect Periurie in Heauen,
Let it suffice I haue sworne, and broke my Othes,
Vpon my head and all this Nation sinne,
And if I be depos'd, till my Sorrow dye,
Let Heauen watch thee on the day of Iustice.
Now mine eyes part with some Teares I shed:
Now Wash away this Vncton from my Hands:
And let my Tongue vnanoynted with that Oyle,
Be blister'd with the Curses I shall lay
On thee, and those that doe aduance thy Pride.
Now Sorrow goe and pitch thy Mansion
In some stout Heart of Enemie or Friend,
Thus I perfume my Griefe, and spend my Plaints
On this base Breath, vnworthy to breathe Sighes:
Now Mock the Sorrowes that vnmake a King:
Now Teares I harmelesse
Now
Now
Now

What euer I shall happen to deuise.
I see your Browes are full of Discontent,
Your Heart of Sorrow, and your Eyes of Teares.
Come home with me to Supper, Ile lay a Plot
Shall shew vs all a merry day. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Queene and Ladies.

Qu. This way the King will come, this is the way
To Iulius Cæsars ill-erected Tower:
To whose flint Bosome, my condemned Lord
Is doom'd a Prisoner, by proud Bullingbrooke
Here let vs rest, if this rebellious Earth
Haue any resting for her true Kings Queene.

Enter Richard and Guard.

But soft, but see, or rather doe not see,
My faire Rose wither: yet look vp, behold,
That you in pitie may dissolue to dew,
And wash him fresh againe with true-lou'e Teares.
Ah thou, the Model where old Troy did stand,
Thou Map of Honor, thou King Richards Tombe,
And not King Richard: thou most beauteous Inne,
Why should hard-fauor'd Griefe be lodg'd in thee,
When Triumph is become an Ale-house Guest.

Rich. Ioyne not with griefe, fairе Woman, do not so,
To make my end too sudden: learne good Soule,
To thinke our former State a happie Dreame,
From, which awak'd, the truth of what we are,
Shewes vs but this. I am sworne Brother (Sweet)
To grim Necessitie; and hee and I
Will keepe a League till Death. Hie thee to France,
And Cloyster thee in some Religious House:
Our holy lives must win a new Worlds Crowne,
Which our prophane houres here haue stricken downe.

Qu. What, is my Richard both in shape and minde
Transform'd, and weaken'd? Hath Bullingbrooke
Depos'd thine Intellect? hath he been in thy Heart?
The Lyon dying, thrusteth forth his Paw,
And wounds the Earth, if nothing else, with rage
To be o're-pow'r'd: and wilt thou, Pupill-like,
Take thy Correction mildly, kisse the Rodde,
And fawne on Rage with base Humilitie,
Which art a Lyon, and a King of Beasts?

Rich. A King of Beasts indeed: if aught but Beasts,
I had been still a happy King of Men.
Good (sometime Queene) prepare thee hence for France:
Thinke I am dead, and that euen here thou tak'st,
As from my Death-bed, my last living leaue.
In Winters tedious Nights sit by the fire
With good old folkes, and let them tell thee Tales
Of woefull Ages, long agoe betide.
And ere thou bid good-night, to quit their griefe,
Tell thou the lamentable fall of me,
And send the hearers weeping to their Beds.
For why? the senselesse Brands will sympathize
The heauie accent of thy moouing Tongue,
And in compassion, weepe the fire out:
And some will mourne in ashes, some coale-black,
For the depos'ing of a rightfull King.

Enter Northumberland.

North. My Lord, the mind of Bullingbrooke is chang'd.
You must to Pomfret, not vnto the Tower.
And Madame, there is order ta'ne for you:
With all swift speed, you must away to France.

Rich. Northumberland, thou Ladder wherewithall
The mounting Bullingbrooke ascends my Throne,
The time shall not be many houres of age,
More then it is, ere foule sinne, gathering head,
Shall breake into corruption: thou shalt thinke,
Though he diuide the Realme, and giue thee halfe,
It is too little, helping him to all:
He shall thinke, that thou which know'st the way
To plant vnrightfull Kings, wilt know againe,
Being ne're so little vrg'd another way,
To pluck him headlong from the vsurped Throne.
The Loue of wicked friends conuerts to Feare;
That Feare, to Hate; and Hate turnes one, or both,
To worthie Danger, and deserued Death.

North. My guilt be on my Head, and there an end:
Take leaue and part, for you must part forthwith.

Rich. Double-doores do (bad men) ye violate
A two-fold Marriage, 'twixt my Crowne, and me,
And then betwixt me, and my married Wife.
Let me vn-kisse the Oath 'twixt thee, and me;
And yet not so, for with a Kisse 'twas made.
Part vs, Northumberland: I, towards the North,
Where shiuering Cold and Sicknesse pines the Clyme:
My Queene to France: from whence, set forth in pompe,
She came adorned hither like sweet May;
Sent back like Hollowmas or short'st of day.

Qu. And must we be diuided? must we part?

Rich. I, hand from hand (my Loue) and heart frō heart.

Qu. Banish vs both, and send the King with me.

North. That were some Loue, but little Policy.

Qu. Then whither he goes, thither let me goe.

Rich. So two together weeping, make one Woe.
Weepe thou for me in France; I, for thee heere:
Better farre off, then neere, be ne're the neere.
Goe count thy Way with Sighes; I, mine with Groanes.

Qu. So longest Way shall haue the longest Moanes.

Rich. Twice for one step Ile groane, the Way being short,
And peece the Way out with a reasie heart.
Come, come, in wooing Sorrow 'tis behoofe,
Since we sing it there is such length in Griefe:
One Kisse shall stop our mouthes, and dumbely part;
Thus giue I mine, and thus take I thy heart.

Qu. Giue me mine owne againe 'twere no good part,
To take on me to keepe, and kill thy heart.
So, now I haue mine owne againe, be gone,
That I may striue to kill it with a groane.

Rich. We make Woe wanton with this fond delay:
Once more adieu; the rest, let Sorrow say. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Yorke, and his Duchesse.

Duch. My Lord you told me you would tell the rest,
When weeping made you breake the story off,
Of our two Cousins coming into London.

Yorke. Where did I leaue?

Duch. At that sad stoppe, my Lord,
Where rude mis-gouern'd hands, from Windowes tops,
Threw dust and rubbish on king Richards head.

Yorke. Then

Yorke. Then, as I said, the Duke, great Bullingbrooke,
Mounted vpon a hot and fierie Steed,
Which his aspiring Rider seem'd to know,
With slow, but stately pace, kept on his course:
While all tongues cride, God saue thee Bullingbrooke.
You would haue thought the very windowes spake,
So many greedy looks of young and old,
Through Casements darted their desiring eyes
Vpon his visage: and that all the walles,
With painted Imagery had said at once,
Iesu preserue thee, welcome Bullingbrooke.
Whilst he, from one side to the other turning,
Bare-headed, lower than his proud Steeds neck,
Bespake them thus, I thank you Countrymen:
And thus still doing, still passed along.
Duch. Alas poore Richard, where rides he the whilst?
Yorke. As in a Theater, the eyes of men
After a well grac'd Actor leaues the Stage,
Are idly bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious:
Euen so, or with much more contempt, mens eyes
Did scowle on Richard: no man cride, God saue him:
No ioyful tongue gaue him his welcome home,
But dust was throwne vpon his Sacred head,
Which with such gentle sorrow he shooke off,
His face still combating with teares and smiles
(The badges of his grieefe and patience)
That had not God (for some strong purpose) steel'd
The hearts of men, they must perforce haue melted,
And Barbarism itself haue pitied him.
But heauen hath a hand in these euents,
To whose high will, we bound our calme contents
To Bullingbrooke, are we sworne Subiects now,
Whose State, and Honor, I for aye allow.
Enter Aumerle.
Duch. Heere comes my sonne Aumerle.
Yorke. Aumerle that was,
But that is lost, for being Richard friend,
And Madam, you must call him Rutland now.
I am in Parliament pledge for his truth,
And lasting fealtie to the new-made King.
Duch. Welcome my sonne: who are the Violets now,
That strew the green lap of the new-come Spring?
Aum. Madam, I know not, nor I greatly care not,
God knowes, I had as leefe be none, as one.
Yorke. Well, bare you well in this new-spring of time
Least you be cropt before you come to prime.
What newes from Oxford? Hold those Iusts & Triumphs?
Aum. For aught I know my Lord, they do.
Yorke. You will be there I know.
Aum. If God prevent not, I purpose so.
Yorke. What Seale is that that hangs without thy bosome?
Yea, look'st thou pale? Let me see the Writing.
Aum. My Lord, 'tis nothing.
Yorke. No matter then who see it,
I will be satisfied, let me see the Writing.
Aum. I do beseech your Grace to pardon me,
It is a matter of small consequence,
Which for some reasons, I would not haue seene.
Yorke. Which for some reasons, I meane to see:
I feare, I feare.
Duch. What should you feare?
'Tis nothing but some bond that he is entred into
For gay apparell against the Triumph.
Yorke. Bound to himselfe? What doth he with a Bond
That he is bound to? Wife, thou art a foole.
Boy let me see the Writing.
Aum. I do beseech you pardon me, I may not shew it.
Yor. I will be satisfied, let me see it I say. Snatches it.
Treason, foule Treason, Villaine, Traitor, Slaue.
Duc. What's the matter, my Lord?
Yorke. Hoa, who's within there? Saddle my horse.
Heauen for his mercy: what treachery is heere?
Duc. Why, what is it my Lord?
Yorke. Giue me my boots, I say. Saddle my horse.
Now by my Honor, my life, my troth,
I will apeach the Villaine.
Duc. What is the matter?
Yorke. Peace foolish Woman.
Duc. I will not peace. What is the matter Sonne?
Aum. Good Mother be content, it is no more
Then my poore life must answer.
Duc. Thy life answer?
Enter Seruant with Boots.
Yor. Bring me my Boots, I will vnto the King.
Duc. Strike him Aumerle. Poore boy, thou art amaz'd,
Hence Villaine, neuer more come in my sight.
Yor. Giue me my Boots, I say.
Duc. Why Yorke, what wilt thou do?
Wilt thou not hide the Trespasse of thine owne?
Haue we more Sonne? Or are we like to haue?
Is not my teeming date drunke vp with time?
And wilt thou plucke my faire Sonne from mine Age,
And rob me of a happy Mothers name?
Is he not like thee? Is he not thine owne?
Yor. Thou fond mad woman
Wilt thou conceale this darke Conspiracy?
A dozen of them here haue tane the Sacrament,
And interchangeably set downe their hands
To kill the King at Oxford.
Duc. He shall be none:
We'll keepe him here: then what is that to him?
Yor. Away fond woman: were he twenty times my Son, I would appeach him.
Duc. Hadst thou groan'd for him as I haue done,
Thou would'st be more pitifull.
But now I know thy mind, thou do'st suspect
That I haue been disloyall to thy bed,
And that he is a bastard not thy Sonne:
Sweet Yorke, sweet husband, be not of that minde:
He is as like thee, as a man may see,
Not like to me, or any of my kin,
And yet I loue him.
Yorke. Make way, vnruly Woman. Exit
Duc. After Aumerle. Mount thee vpon his horse,
Spurre post, and get before him to the King,
And beg thy pardon, ere he do accuse thee,
Ile not be long behind: though I be old,
I doubt not but to ride as fast as Yorke:
And neuer will I rise vp from the ground,
Till Bullingbrooke haue pardon'd thee: Away be gone. Exit

Scena Tertia.

Enter Bullingbrooke, Percie, and other Lords.
Bul. Can no man tell of my vnthrifty Sonne?
'Tis full three months since I did see him last.
If any plague hang ouer vs, 'tis he,
I would to heauen my Lords he might be found:
Enquire at London, 'mongst the Tauernes there:

For

For there (they say) he daily doth frequent,
With vnrestrained loose Companions,
Euen such (they say) as stand in narrow Lanes,
And rob our Watch, and beate our passengers,
Which he, young wanton, and effeminate Boy
Takes on the point of Honor, to support
So dissolute a crew.

Per. My Lord some two dayes since I saw the Prince,
And told him of those Triumphes held at Oxford.

Bul. And what (my to the Gallant?

Per. His answer was, he would vnto the Stewes,
And from the common'st creature pluck a Gloue
And weare it as a fauour, and with that
He would vnhorse the lustiest Challenger.

Bul. As dissolute as desperate, yet through both,
I see some sparkes of better hope, which elder dayes
May happily bring forth. But who comes here?

Enter Aumerle.

Aum. Where is the King?

Bul. What meanes our Cosin, that he stares
And looks so wildely?

Aum. God saue your Grace. I do beseech your Maiesty
To haue some conference with your Grace alone.

Bul. Withdraw your selues, and leaue vs here alone:
What is the matter with our Cosin now?

Aum. For euer may my knees grow to the earth,
My tongue cleaue to my roofe within my mouth,
Vnlesse a Pardon, ere I rise, or speake.

Bul. Intended, or committed was this fault?
If on the first, how heynous ere it be,
To win thy after loue, I pardon thee.

Aum. Then giue me leaue, that I may turne the key,
That no man enter, till my tale be done.

Bul. Haue thy desire. Yorke within.

Yor. My Liege beware, looke to thy state,
Thou hast a Traitor in thy presence there.

Bul. Villaine I'le make thee safe.

Aum. Stay thy reuengefull hand, thou hast no cause to feare.

Yorke. Open the doore, lest rebell-like we force
Shall I for loue speake treason to thy face?
Open the doore, or I will breake it open.

Enter Yorke.

Bul. What is the matter (Vncle) speak, recouer breath,
Tell vs how neere is danger,
That we may arme vs to encounter it.

Yor. Peruse this writing here, and thou shalt know
The reason that my haste forbids me show.

Aum. Remember as thou read'st, thy promise past:
I do repent me, read not my name there,
My heart is not confederate with my hand.

Yor. It was (villaine, ere thy hand did set it downe.
I tore it from the Traitors bosome, King.
Feare, and not Loue, begets his penitence;
Forget to pitty him, least thy pitty proue
A Serpent, that will sting thee to the heart.

Bul. O heinous, strong, and bold Conspiracie,
O loyall Father of a treacherous Sonne:
Thou sheere, immaculate, and siluer fountaine,
From whence this streame, through muddy passages
Hath had his current, and defiled him selfe.
Thy ouerflow of good, conuerts to bad,
And thy abundant goodnesse shall excuse
This deadly blot, in thy digressing sonne.

Yorke. So shall my Vertue be his Vices bawd,
And he shall spend mine Honour, with his Shame;
As thriftlesse Sonnes, their scraping Fathers Gold.
Mine honour liues, when his dishonor dies,
Or my shamed life, in his dishonor lies.
Thou kill'st me in his life, giuing him breath,
The Traitor liues, the true man's put to death.

Duchesse within.

Duch. What hoa! my Liege! for heauens sake let me in.

Bul. What shrill-voic'd Suppliant, makes this eager cry?

Duch. A woman, and thine Aunt (great King) 'tis I.
Speake with me, pitty me, open the doore,
A Beggar begs, that neuer begg'd before.

Bul. Our Scene is alter'd from a serious thing,
And now chang'd to the Beggar, and the King.
My dangerous Cosin, let your Mother in,
I know she's come, to pray for your foule sin.

Yorke. If thou do pardon, whosoeuer pray,
More sinnes for this forgiuenesse prosper may.
This festred ioynt cut off, the rest rest sound,
This let alone, will all the rest confound.

Enter Duchesse.

Duch. O King, beleeue not this hard-hearted man,
Loue, loyall, and not fearefull, none but mine.

Yor. Thou frantick woman, what dost thou make here,
Shall thy old dugges, once more a Traitor reare?

Duch. Sweet Yorke be patient, heare me gentle Liege.

Bul. Rise vp good Aunt.

Duch. Not yet, I thee beseech.
For euer will I kneele vpon my knees,
And neuer see day, that the happy sees,
Till thou giue ioy, vntill thou bid me ioy
By pardoning Rutland, my transgressing Boy.

Aum. Vnto my mothers prayres, I bend my knee.

Yorke. Against them both, my true ioynts bended be.

Duch. Pleades he in earnest? look vpon his face,
His eyes do drop no teares, his prayers are in iest.
His words come from his mouth, ours from our breast.
He prayes but faintly, and would be denied,
We pray with heart, and soule, and all beside.
His weary ioynts would gladly rise, I know,
Our knees shall kneele, till to the ground they grow:
His prayers are full of false hypocrisie,
Ours of true zeale, and deepe integritie.
Our prayers do out-pray his, then let them haue
That mercy, which true prayers ought to haue.

Bul. Good Aunt stand vp.

Duch. Nay do not say stand vp.
But Pardon first, and afterwards stand vp.
And if I were thy Nurse, thy tongue to teach,
Pardon should be the first word of thy speech.
I neuer long'd to heare a word till now.
Say Pardon (King,) let pitty teach thee how
The word is short, but not so short as sweet,
No word like Pardon, for Kings mouths to meet.

Yorke. Speake it in French, King, say Pardonne moy.

Duch. Dost thou teach pardon, Pardon to destroy?
Ah my sowre husband, my hard-hearted Lord,
That sets the word it selfe, against the word.
Speake Pardon as 'tis current in our Land,
The chopping French we do not vnderstand.
Thine eye begins to speake, set thy tongue there,
Or in thy piteous heart, plant thou thine eare,
That hearing how our plaints and prayres do pearce,
Pitty may moue thee, Pardon to rehearse.

Bul. Good Aunt, stand vp.

Duch. I do not sue to stand,
Pardon is all the suite I haue in hand.

Bul.

Bul. I pardon him, as heauen shall pardon mee.
Dut. O happy vantage of a kneeling knee:
Yet am I ficke for feare: Speake it againe,
Twice saying Pardon, doth not pardon twaine,
But makes one pardon strong.
Bul. I pardon him with all my hart.
Dut. A God on earth thou art.
Bul. But for our trusty brother-in-Law, the Abbot,
With all the rest of that consorted crew,
Destruction straight shall dogge them at the heeles:
Good Vncle helpe to order seuerall powres
To Oxford, or where ere these Traitors are:
They shall not liue within this world I sweare,
But I will haue them if I once know where.
Vncle farewell, and Cosin adieu:
Your mother well hath prai'd, and proue you true.
Dut. Come my old son, I pray heauen make thee new. Exeunt.

Enter Exton and Seruants

Exe. Did'st thou not marke the King what words hee spake?
Haue I no friend will rid me of this liuing feare:
Was it not so?
Ser. Those were his very words.
Exe. Haue I no Friends? quoth he: he spake it twice,
And vrg'd it twice together, did he not?
Ser. He did.
Exe. And speaking it, he wistly look'd on me,
As who should say, I would thou wer't the man
That would diuorce this terror from my heart,
Meaning the King at Pomfret: Come, let's goe;
I am the Kings Friend, and will rid his Foe. Exit.

Scæna Quarta.

Enter Richard.

Rich. I haue bin studying, how to compare
This Prison where I liue, vnto the World:
And for because the world is populous,
And heere is not a Creature, but my selfe,
I cannot do it; yet Ile hammer't out.
My Braine, Ile proue the Female to my Soule,
My Soule, the Father: and these two beget
A generation of still breeding Thoughts;
And these same Thoughts, people this Little World
In humors, like the people of this world,
For no thought is contented. The better sort,
As thoughts of things Diuine, are intermixt
With scruples, and do set the Faith it selfe
Against the Faith: as thus: Come little ones & then again,
It is as hard to come, as for a Camell
To thred the posterne of a Needles eye.
Thoughts tending to Ambition, they do plot
Vnlikely wonders; how these vaine weake nailes
May teare a passage through the Flinty ribbes
Of this hard world, my ragged prison walles:
And for they cannot, dye in their owne pride.
Thoughts tending to Content, flatter themselues,
That they are not the first of Fortunes slaues,
Nor shall not be the last. Like silly Beggars,
Who sitting in the Stockes, refuge their shame
That many haue and others must sit there;
And in this Thought, they finde a kind of ease,
Bearing their owne misfortune on the backe
Of such as haue before indur'd the like.
Thus play I in one Prison, many people,
And none contented. Sometimes am I King;
Then Treason makes me wish my selfe a Beggar,
And so I am. Then crushing penurie,
Perswades me, I was better when a King:
Then am I king'd againe: and by and by,
Thinke that I am vn-king'd by Bullingbrooke,
And straight am nothing. But what ere I am, Musick
Nor I, nor any man, that but man is,
With nothing shall be pleas'd, till he be eas'd
With being nothing. Musicke do I heare?
Ha, ha? keepe time: How sowre sweet Musicke is,
When Time is broke, and no Proportion kept?
So is it in the Musicke of mens liues:
And heere haue I the daintinesse of eare,
To heare time broke in a disorder'd string:
But for the Concord of my State and Time,
Had not an eare to heare my true Time broke.
I wasted Time, and now doth Time waste me:
For now hath Time made me his numbring clocke;
My Thoughts are minutes; and with Sighes they iarre,
Their watches on vnto mine eyes, the outward Watch,
Whereto my finger, like a Dials point,
Is pointing still, in cleansing them from teares.
Now sir, the sound that tells what houre it is,
Are clamorous groanes, that strike vpon my heart,
Which is the Bell: so Sighes, and Teares, and Groanes,
Shew Minutes, Houres, and Times: but my Time
Runs posting on, in Bullingbrookes proud ioy,
While I stand fooling heere, his Iacke o'th Clocke.
This Musicke mads me, let it sound no more,
For though it haue holpe madmen to their wits,
In me it seemes, it will make wise-men mad.
Yet blessings on his heart that gaues it me;
For 'tis a sign of loue, and loue to Richard,
Is a strange Brooch, in this all-hating world.

Enter Groome

Groo. Haile Royall Prince.
Rich. Thanks Noble Peere,
The cheapest of vs, is ten groates too deere.
What art thou? And how com'st thou hither?
Where no man euer comes but that sad dogge
That brings me food, to make misfortune liue?
Groo. I was a poore Groome of thy Stable (King)
When thou wer't King: who trauelling towards Yorke,
With much adoo, at length haue gotten leaue
To looke vpon my (sometimes Royall) masters face.
O how it yern'd my heart, when I beheld
In London streets, that Coronation day,
When Bullingbrooke rode on Roane Barbary,
That horse, that thou so often hast bestrid,
That horse, that I so carefully haue drest.
Rich. Rode he on Barbary? Tell me gentle Friend,
How went he vnder him?
Groo. So proudly, as if he had disdain'd the ground.
Rich. So proud, that Bullingbrooke was on his backe;
That Iade hath eate bread from my Royall hand.
This hand hath made him proud with clapping him.
Would he not stumble? Would he not fall downe
(Since Pride must haue a fall) and breake the necke
Of that proud man, that did vsurpe his backe?
Forgiuenesse horse: Why do I raile on thee,
Since thou created to be aw'd by man
Wast borne to beare? I was not made a horse,

And yet I beare a burthen like an Asse,
Spur-gall'd, and tyred by jaunting Bullingbrooke.

Enter Keeper with a Dish.

Keep. Peelow, giue place, heere is no longer stay.
Rich. If thou loue me, 'tis time thou were away.
Groo. What my tongue dares not, that my heart shall say. Exit.
Keep. My Lord, will't please you to fall too?
Rich. Taste of it first, as thou were't wont to doo.
Keep. My Lord Exton of Pierce of Exton,
Who lately came from the King, commands the contrary
Rich. The diuell take Henrie of Lancaster, and thee,
Patience is stale, and I am weary of it.
Keep. Helpe, helpe, helpe

Enter Exton and Seruants.

Ri. How now, what meanes Death in this rude assault?
Villaine, thine owne hand yeelds thy death's instrument,
Go thou and fill another roome in hell.
Exton strikes him downe.
That hand shall burne in neuer-quenching fire,
That staggers thus my person. Exton, thy fierce hand,
Hath with the Kings blood, stain'd the Kings own land
Mount, mount my soule, thy seate is vp on high,
Whil'st my grosse flesh sinkes downeward, heere to dye.
Exton. As full of Valor, as of Royall Blood,
Both haue I spilt: Oh would the deed were good.
For now the diuell, that told me I did well,
Sayes, that this deede is chronicled in hell.
This dead King to the liuing King, Ile beare,
Take hence the rest, and giue them burials heere. Exit

Scœna Quinta.

Flourish. Enter Bullingbrooke, Yorke, with other Lords & attendants.

Bul. Kinde Vncle Yorke, the latest newes we heare,
Is that the Rebels haue consum'd with fire
Our Towne of Ceester in Glocestershire,
But whether they be tane or slaine, we heare not

Enter Northumberland.

We come my Lord. What is the newes?
Nor. First to thy Sacred State, wish I all happinesse.
The next newes is, I haue to London sent
The heads of Salsbury, Spencer, Blunt, and Kent.
The manner of their taking may appeare
At large discoursed in this paper heere.
Bul. We thanke thee gentle Percy for thy paines,
And to thy worth will addere gracious gaines.

Enter Fitz-waters.

Fitz. My Lord, I haue from Oxford sent to London,
The heads of Brocas, and Sir Bennet Seely,
Two of the dangerous consorted Traitors,
That sought at Oxford, thy dire ouerthrow
Bul. Thy paines Fitzwaters shall not be forgot,
Right Noble is thy merit, well I wot.

Enter Percy and Carlile.

Per. The grand Conspirator, Abbot of Westminster,
With clog of Conscience, and sowre Melancholy,
Hath yeelded vp his breath to the graue
But heere is Carlile, living to abide
Thy kingly doome, and sentence of his pride.
Bul. Carlile this is your doome
Choose out some secret place, some reuerend roome
More than thou hast, and with it ioy thy life:
So as thou liu'st in peace, die free from strife:
For though mine enemy thou hast euer beene,
High sparkes of Honor, in thee haue I seene.

Enter Exton with a Coffin.

Exton. Great King, within this Coffin I present
Thy buried feare. Heere all breathlesse lies
The mightiest of thy greatest enemies
Richard of Bourdeaux, by my hand bereft
Bul. Exton, I thanke thee not, for thou hast wrought
A deede of Slaughter, with thy fatall hand,
Vpon my head, and all this famous Land
Exton. From your owne mouth, my Lord, did I this deed.
Bul. They loue not poyson, that do poyson need,
Nor do I thee, though I did wish him dead,
I hate the Murtherer, loue him murthered.
The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labour,
But neuer shall my sword, nor Percies, for it.
With Caine go wander through the shade of night,
And neuer shew thy head by day, nor light.
Lords, I protest my soules woe to be,
That blood should sprinkle me to make me grow.
Come mourne with me, for that I do lament,
And put on sullen Blacke incontinent.
I'le make a voyage to the Holy land,
To wash this blood off from my guilty hand.
March sadly after, grace my mourning heere,
In weeping after this vntimely Beere. Exeunt.

FINIS.

The First Part of Henry the Fourth,
with the Life and Death of HENRY Sirnamed HOT-SPVRRE.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter the King, Lord Iohn of Lancaster, Earle of Westmerland, with others.

King.

So shaken as we are, so wan with care,
Finde we a time for frighted Peace to pant,
And breath short-winded accents of new broils
To be commenc'd in Strands a-farre remote:
No more the thirsty entrance of this Soile,
Shall daube her lippes with her owne children blood
Nor more shall trenching Warre channell her fields,
Nor bruise her Flowrets with the Armed hoofes
Of hostile paces: Those opposed eyes,
Which like the Meteors of a troubled Heauen,
All of one Nature, of one Substance bred,
Did lately meete in the intestine shocke,
And furious close of ciuil Butchery,
Shall now in mutuall well-beseeming ranks
March all one way, and be no more opposed
Against Acquaintance, Kindred and Allies:
The edge of Warre, like an ill-sheathed knife,
No more shall cut his Master. Therefore friends,
As far as to the Sepulchre of Christ,
Whose Soldier now, vnder his blessed Crosse
We are impressed and ingag'd to fight,
Forthwith a power of English shall we leuie,
Whose armes were moulded in their Mothers wombe,
To chace these Pagans in those holy fields,
Ouer whose Acres walk'd those blessed feete
Which fourteene hundred yeares ago were nail'd
For our aduantage on the bitter Crosse.
But this our purpose is a twelue-month old,
And bootlesse 'tis to tell you we will go:
Therefore we meete not now. Then let me heare
Of you my gentle Cousin Westmerland,
What yesternight our Counsell did decree,
In forwarding this deere expedience.

West. My Liege, This haste was hot in question,
And many limits of the charge set downe
But yesternight: when all athwart there came
A Post from Wales loaden with heauy Newes;
Whose worst was, That the Noble Mortimer,
Leading the men of Herefordshire to fight
Against the irregular and wilde Glendower,
Was by the rude hands of that Welshman taken,
And a thousand of his people butchered.
Vpon whose dead corpes there was such misuse,
Such beastly, shamelesse transformation,
By those Welshwomen done, as may not be (Without much shame) re-told or spoken of.

King. It seemes then, that the tidings of this broile,
Brake off our businesse for the Holy land.

West. This matcheth with your hard imposition, my gracious Lord,
For more vneuen and vnwelcome Newes
Came from the North, and thus it did report:
On Holy-roode day, the gallant Hotspurre there,
Young Harry Percy, and braue Archibald,
That euer-valiant and approued Scot,
At Holmedon met, where they did spend
A sad and bloody houre
As by discharge of their Artillerie,
And shape of likely-hood the newes was told:
For he that brought it, there in the very heate
And pride of their contention did take horse,
Vncertaine of the issue any way.

King. Here is a deere and true-industrious friend,
Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his Horse,
Staind with the variation of each soyle,
Betwixt that Holmedon, and this Seat of ours:
And he hath brought vs smooth and welcome newes.
The Earle of Douglas is discomfited,
Ten thousand bold Scots, two and twenty Knights
Balk'd in their owne blood did Sir Walter see
On Holmedon Plaines. Of Prisoners, Hotspurre tooke
Mordake Earle of Fife, and eldest sonne
To beaten Douglas, and the Earle of Athell,
Of Murry, Angus, and Menteith.
And is not this an honourable spoyle?
A gallant prize? Ha Cosin, is it not? Infaith it is.

West. A Conquest for a Prince to boast of.

King. Yea, there thou mak'st me sad & mak'st me sin,
In enuy that my Lord Northumberland
Should be the Father of so blest a Sonne
A Sonne, who is the Theame of Honors tongue;
Amongst a Groue, the very straightest Plant,
Who is sweet Fortunes Minion, and her Pride.
Whil'st I by looking on the praise of him,
See Riot and Dishonor staine the brow
Of my young Harry. O that it could be prou'd,
That some Night-tripping Fairy, had exchang'd
In Cradle-clothes, our Children where they lay,
And call'd mine Percy, his Plantagenet.

The

Then would I haue his Harry, and he mine:
But let him from my thoughts. What think you Coze
Of this young Percies pride? The Prisoners
Which he in this aduenture hath surpriz'd,
To his owne vse he keepes, and sends me word
I shall haue none but Mordake Earle of Fife.
West. This is his Vnckles teaching. This is Worcester
Malcuolent to you in all Aspects:
Which makes him prune himselfe, and bristle vp
The crest of Youth against your Dignity.
King. But I haue sent for him to answer this:
And for this cause awhile we must neglect
Our holy purpose to Ierusalem.
Coson, on Wednesday next, our Councell we will hold
At Windsor, and so informe the Lords:
But come your selfe with speed to vs againe,
For more is to be said, and to be done,
Then out of anger can be vttered.
West. I will my Liege. Exeunt

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Henry Prince of Wales, Sir Iohn Falstaffe and Poines.

Fal. Now Hal, what time of day is it Lad?

Prince Thou art so fat-witted with drinking of olde Sacke and vnbuttoning thee after Supper, and sleeping vpon Benches in the afternoone that thou hast forgotten to demand that truely, which thou wouldest truely know. What a deuel hast thou to do with the time of the day? vnlesse houres were cups of Sacke, and minutes Capons, and clockes the tongues of Bawdes and dials the signes of Leaping-houses, and the blessed Sunne himselfe a faire hot Wench in Flame-coloured Taffata; I see no reason, why thou shouldest bee so superfluous, to demand the time of the day.

Fal. Indeed you come neere me now Hal, for we that take Purses go by the Moone and seuen Starres, and not by Phœbus hee, that wandring Knight so faire. And I prythee sweet Wagge, when thou art King, as God saue thy Grace, Maiesty I should say, for Grace thou will haue none.

Prin What none?

Fal. No, not so much as will serue to be Prologue to an Egge and Butter.

Prin. Well, how then? Come roundly roundly.

Fal. Marry then, sweet Wagge, when thou art King, let not vs that are Squires of the Nights body, be call'd Theeues of the Dayes beautie. Let vs be Diana's Foresters, Gentlemen of the Shade, Minions of the Moone, and let men say, we be men of good Gouernment, being gouerned as the Sea is, by our noble and chaste mistris the Moone, vnder whose countenance we steale.

Prin. Thou say'st well, and it holds well too: for the fortune of vs that are the Moones men, doeth ebbe and flow like the Sea, being gouerned as the Sea is, by the Moone. As for proofe. Now a Purse of Gold most resolutely snatch'd on Monday night, and most dissolutely spent on Tuesday Morning; got with swearing, Lay by: and spent with crying, Bring in: now, in as low an ebbe as the foot of the Ladder, and by and by in as high a flow as the ridge of the Gallowes.

Fal. Thou say'st true Lad. and is not my Hostesse of the Tauerne a most sweet Wench?

Prin. As is the hony, my old Lad of the Castle: and is not a Buffe Ierkin a most sweet robe of durance?

Fal. How now? how now mad Wagge? What in thy quips and thy quiddities? What a plague haue I to doe with a buffe-Ierkin?

Prin. Why, what a poxe haue I to doe with my Hostesse of the Tauerne?

Fal. Well, thou hast call'd her to a reckoning many a time and oft.

Prin. Did I euer call for thee to pay thy part?

Fal. No, Ile giue thee thy due, thou hast paid all there.

Prin. Yea and elsewhere, so far as my Coine would stretch, and where it would not, I haue vs'd my credit.

Fal. Yea, and so vs'd it, that were it heere apparant, that thou art Heire apparant. But I prythee sweet Wag, shall there be Gallowes standing in England when thou art King, and resolution thus obrob'd as it is, with the rustie curbe of old Father Antickes the Law? Doe not thou when thou art a King, hang a Theefe.

Prin. No, thou shalt.

Fal. Shall I? O rare! Ile be a braue Iudge.

Prin. Thou iudgest false already. I meane, thou shalt haue the hanging of the Theeues, and so become a rare hangman.

Fal. Well Hal, well: and in some sort it iumpes with my humour, as well as waiting in the Court, I can tell you.

Prin. For obtaining of suites?

Fal. Yea, for obtaining of wiues, whereof the Hangman hath no lease, for their liues: for thy part, I am as melancholy as a Gyb Cat, or a lugg'd Beare.

Prin. Or an Old Lyon, or a Louers Lute.

Fal. Yea, or the Drone of a Lincolnshire Bagpipe.

Prin. What say'st thou to a Hare, or the Melancholy of Moore Ditch?

Fal. Thou hast the most vnsauory similes, and art indeed the most comparatiue rascallest sweet young Prince. But Hal, I prythee trouble me no more with vanity, I would to God thou and I knew where a Commodity of good names were to be bought. An olde Lord of the Councell rated me the other day in the street about you sir, but I marked him not, and yet he talk'd very wisely, and in the street too.

Prin. Thou did'st well, for no man regards it.

Fal. O, thou hast damnable iteration, and art indeed able to corrupt a Saint. Thou hast done much harme vnto me Hal, God forgiue thee for it. Before I knew thee Hal I knew nothing, and now I am (if a man should speake truly) little better then one of the wicked. I must giue ouer this life, and I will giue ouer: and I do not, I am a Villaine. Ile be damn'd for euer a Kings sonne in Christendome.

Prin. Where shall we take a purse to morrow, Iacke?

Fal. Where thou wilt Lad, Ile make one: and yet I do not, call me Villaine, and baffle me.

Prin. I see a good amendment of life in thee: From Praying, to Purse-taking.

Fal. Why, Hal, 'tis my Vocation Hal: 'Tis no sin for a man to labour in his Vocation.

Poines. Now shall we know if Gads hill haue set a Watch. O, if men were to be saued by merit, what hole in Hell were hot enough for him? This is the most omnipotent Villaine, that euer cryed, Stand, to a true man.

Prin. Good morrow Ned.

Poines.

Poins. Good morrow sweet Hal. What saies Monsieur Remorse? What saies Sir John Sacke and Sugar Iacke? How agrees the Diuell and thee about thy Soule, that thou soldst him on Good-friday last, for a Cup of Madera and a cold Capons legge?

Prin. Sir John stands to his word, the Diuell shall haue his bargaine, for he was neuer yet a breaker of Prouerbs. He will giue the Diuell his due.

Poins. Then art thou damn'd for keeping thy word with the Diuell.

Prin. Else he had damn'd for cozening the Diuell.

Poy. But my Lads, my Lads, to morrow morning by foure a clocke early at Gads-hill, there are Pilgrimes going to Canterbury with rich Offerings, and Traders riding to London with fat Purses. I haue visards for you all, you haue horses for your selues. Gads-hill lyes to night in Rochester, I haue spoke of Supper to morrow in Eastcheape; we may do it as secure as sleepe. If you will go, I will stuffe your Purses full of Crownes; if you will not, tarry at home and be hang'd.

Fal. Heare ye Yedward, if I tarry at home and go not, Ile hang you for going.

Poy. You will chops.

Fal. Hal, wilt thou make one?

Prin. Who, I rob? I a Theefe? Not I.

Fal. There's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee, nor thou camst not of the blood royall, if thou darst not stand for ten shillings.

Prin. Well then, once in my dayes Ile be a mad-cap.

Fal. Why that's well said.

Prin. Well, come what will, Ile tarry at home.

Fal. Ile be a Traitor then, when thou art hang'd.

Prin. I care not.

Poins. Sir John, I prythee leaue the Prince & me alone, I will lay him downe such reasons for this aduenture, that he shall go.

Fal. Well, maist thou haue the Spirit of perswasion, and he the eares of reasonings, that what thou speakest, may moue, and what he heares may be beleeued, that the true Prince may (for recreation sake) proue a false theefe; for poore abuses of time, want countenance. Farewell, you shall finde me in Eastcheape.

Prin. Farewell the latter Spring. Farewell Alhollown Summer.

Poy. Now, my good sweet Honey Lord, ride with vs to morrow. I haue a deuice that will draw them all three from their Purses, whereto they shall not know how to giue any colour. Item, when they haue the booty, if you and I do not rob them, cut this head from my shoulders.

Prin. But how shall we part with them in setting forth?

Poy. Why we will set forth before or after them, and appoint them a place of meeting, wherein it is at our pleasure to faile; which they shall haue no sooner atchieued, but wee'l set vpon them.

Prin. I, but tis like that they will know vs by our horses, by our habits, and by euery other appointment to be our selues.

Poy. Tut our horses they shall not see. Ile tye them in the wood, our vizards we will change after we leaue them: and sirrah, I haue Cases of Buckram for the nonce, to immaske our noted outward garments.

Prin. But I doubt they will be too hard for vs.

Poy. Well, for two of them, I know them to bee as true bred Cowards as euer turn'd backe: and for the third if he fight longer then he sees reason, Ile forswear Armes. The vertue of this Ieast will be, the incompr[e]hensible lies that this fat Rogue will tell vs, when we meete at Supper: how thirty at least he fought with, what Wardes, what blowes, what extremities he endured: and in the reproofe of these, lyes the Ieast.

Prin. Well, Ile go with thee, prouide vs all things necessary, and meete me to morrow night in Eastcheape, there Ile sup. Farewell.

Poy. Farewell, my Lord. Exit Poynes.

Prin. I know you all, and will a-while vphold
The vnyoak'd humor of your idlenesse:
Yet heerein will I imitate the Sunne,
Who doth permit the base contagious cloudes
To smother vp his Beauty from the world,
That when he please againe to be himselfe,
Being wanted, he may be more wondred at,
By breaking through the foule and vgly mists
Of vapours, that did seeme to strangle him.
If all the yeare were playing holidaies,
To sport, would be as tedious as to worke;
But when they seldome come, they wisht-for come,
And nothing pleaseth but rare accidents.
So when this loose behauiour I throw off,
And pay the debt I neuer promised;
By how much better then my word I am,
By so much shall I falsifie mens hopes:
And like bright Mettall on a sullen ground,
My reformation glittering o're my fault,
Shall shew more goodly, and attract more eyes,
Then that which hath no foyle to set it off.
Ile o're-throw, to make offence a skill,
Redeeming time, when men think least I will.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter the King, Northumberland, Worcester, Hotspure, Sir Walter Blunt, and others.

King. My blood hath beene too cold and temperate,
Vnapt to stirre at these indignities,
And you haue found me, for accordingly,
You tread vpon my patience: But be sure,
I will from henceforth rather be my Sonne,
A glaiue, and rod to beat on, then my condition
Which hath beene smooth as Oyle, soft as young Downe,
And therefore lost that Title of respect,
Which the proud soule ne're payes, but to the proud.

Wor. Our house (my Soueraigne Liege) little deserues
The scourge of greatnesse to be vsed on it,
And that same greatnesse too, which our owne hands
Haue holpe to make so portly.

Nor. My Lord.

King. Worcester get thee gone: for I do see
Danger and disobedience in thine eye.
O sir, your presence is too bold and peremptory,
And Maiestie might neuer yet endure
The moody Frontier of a seruant brow.
You haue good leaue to leaue vs. When we need
Your vse and counsell, we shall send for you.
You were about to speake.

North. Yea, my good Lord.

Those

Those Prisoners in your Highnesse demanded,
Which Harry Percy here at Holmedon took,
Were all perfect, lustie, and with such strength vented
As was deliuered ouer to your Maiesty.
Whether enuy or misprision,
Was guilty of this fault, and not my Sonne
Hot. My Liege, I do deny no part of it.
But, remember me, the fight was hote,
When I was vrg'd with Rage, and extreame Toyle,
Breathlesse, and all bestaind with sweat, and blood,
Came there a certaine Lord, neat and trimly drest,
Fresh as a Bride-groome, and his chin new reapt,
Shewd like a stubble Land at Haruest home.
He was perfumed like a Milliner,
And 'twixt his finger and his Thumbe, he held
A Pouncet box, which euer and anon
He gaue his Nose, and took't away againe.
Who therewith angry, when it next came there,
Took it in scorne. And still he smild, and talkt:
And as the Souldiers bore dead bodies by,
He cal'd them vntaught Knaues, vnmannerly,
To bring a slouenly vnhandsome Corse
Betwixt the Wind, and his Nobility.
With many Holiday, and Lady tearme
He question'd me. Among the rest demanded
My Prisoners, in your Maiesties behalfe.
I then all smarting, with my wounds being cold,
(To be so pestered with a Popinjay)
Out of my grace and patience,
Answer'd neglectingly, I know not what:
He should, or should not: For he made me mad,
To see him shine so brisk, and smell so sweet,
And talke so like a Waiting Gentlewoman,
Of Guns, & Drums, and Wounds (God saue the mark)
And telling me the Souereignst thing on earth
Was Parmacity, for an inward bruise:
And that it was great pity, so it was,
This villanous Saltpeter should be digg'd
Out of the bowels of the harmelesse earth,
Which many a good Tall Fellow had destroyd
So Cowardly. And but for these vile Guns,
He would himselfe haue been a Souldier.
This bald, vnioynted Chat of his, my Lord,
Made me to answer indirectly, as I said:
And I beseech you, let not report
Come current for an Accusation
Betwixt my Loue, and your high Maiesty.
Lunt. The circumstance consider'd, good my Lord,
Whatsoeuer Harry Percie then had said,
To such a person, and in such a place,
At such a time, with all the rest retold,
May reasonably die, and neuer rise
To do him wrong, or any way impeach
What then he said, so he vnsay it now.
King. Why yet doth he deny his Prisoners,
But with prouiso, and exception,
That we at our owne charge, shall ransome straight
His Brother-in-Law, the foolish Mortimer,
Who on my soule, hath wilfully deseru'd
The Steepe, Tarpeian death, Vastalls fit to dye,
Against their Prince, I care not who, or how:
Now by my Scepter, and my Soules hope of Glory,
Into his ruine, immitigable Eare
Hath daily powr'd such Speech, I vnderstand,
Before the Gentle Sleepe, shall sleepe me vp,
Shall we buy Treason? and indent with Fears,
When they haue lost and forfeited themselues?
No on the barren Mountaines let him starue:
For I shall neuer hold that man my friend,
Whose tongue shall aske me for one penny cost,
To ransome home reuolted Mortimer.
Hot. Reuolted Mortimer?
He neuer did fall off, my Soueraigne Liege,
But by the chance of Warre: to proue that true,
Needs no more but one tongue, for all those Wounds,
Those mouthed Woundes, which valiantly he tooke,
When on the gentle Seuern's sedgy Bank,
In one day fifteene times, they set on him:
In foure fiue houres, thirty at least:
And from a Graue, vndigested, vnfelt,
Where the cold Earth, halfe a yeare had slept,
Darre I appeach one of that Honour? Why,
Is not a Captiue Noble, by the Law
As free as any Liege-man of the Land,
If not more free than many Liege-men are?
Call for Out-lawries, and they will appeare
As soone as Lightning, seas, and Warres appeare.
And for your Brothers-in-Law, the Earle of March,
Whom God preserue better than you would wish,
Is now residing heere, within this Land,
Euen in our sight, and care. Pardon me Sir,
If I rise, and plucke my Gloues.
Why should a Warre be lost, before the Needer?
Lord Marshall, and my selfe, will speed alone.
Lunt. Speake not so rashly, your Vncle Mortimer
Is not so guilty of his Nephewes Rising,
As plots imagin'd by his Enemies.
And harke you my Lord of Northumberland,
You shall haue Letters from me to day:
In deed it is the Counsell of vnwisedome,
To fasten on an Enemy, another Foe,
And let the Foe himselfe alone.
Hot. Imperfect Enuy, Neighbour to Disease,
And feeding on the Maladies it feeds vpon:
That Warre, or Women haue their Infancie,
Turne it a while, perhaps it may proue Warre,
Now by this Hand, I keepe it but a Graue,
Where it shall tanne, and grow to Puissance,
And let our Friends beware how they preserue
Sicke Fellowes, and blind Moules, to make a Warre.
Lunt. Well I haue done, and wish but for my part,
Rather to haue too little, than too much.
Hot. So doe I: and I thinke we shall haue some Affaires of Moment, shortly after Easter.
Lunt. Perhaps no more: but I must heare your Loues,
Faith I am loth to heare, what you oppose
Against this Proiect, and it is my Fault.
Hot. Yesterday my Lord, as your Highnesse knowes,
Armed and very well attended,
Rode vp to Glendours Countrey, and to speak
Vnto that Braggart Gentleman, Owen Glendour,
Had sent me word, that early in the Morning,
He must attend his Highnesse at his Tent.
Hot. Where stayed for him, I did assay his Patience,
But being fretted in my Common-wealth,
And quickly come to Chollericke Choller,
Requested him to go.
Lunt. Yet more Occasion for your Patience.
Hot. Heard you the Starres of Heauen were falne?
Had I heard passe the Seas a League,
And at the Moone were it but a Day old?
Doth it still raine? Good Vncle take your Patience,
And winke at Wrongs.
Hot. Cousin, I am too young to take Counsell
Of such a Weather-fac'd Consideration,
And limit me this Time. Yet I do wish,
Not wishing Time were giuen me longer heere.
Hot. Heare how he interprets himselfe vpon particulars.
Lunt. His Answer was, he would vnto the Deuill,
Before the Newes of Warre, yet ripe in it,
Should make a Start for Feare of Enemies,
And so hot Valour, coldly, and timorously.
Hot. Now by my Sword, I could haue better spoke.
And to the Purpose, that is certainly.
But I tell you my Lord fine Captaine,
Looke when he feares, he smells out Warre.
Time nourishes his Cause, which else would sicken and die,
Betweene his greatnesse, and my Relation.
And betweene my Tame, and his vntam'd Conditions,
There is no Limit, Measure, Stint, nor Bound,
Will the King come, that I may breathe my Horse,
And bid him so indeed?
Lunt. I may not haue it so, he will not come.
Hot. Well, he may come on his Necke for me.
The Deuill take him, one that makes Bridges to feare his Enemie,
Swearing he comes not ouer: and he comes not ouer,
To breake his Faith, he cannot come:
The King is kinde, and well we know the Kings
Our Friends, and Vowes, and Confidences,
Defie the Booke, and Tables of the Law,
Sweare, and Lye, and breake with all the World.
Hot. Well I haue done, and end: I pray your Lordships,
All to the Presence, there to giue our Duties,
As well to chide me, as the waighty Difficulties
And high Designes about to grow vpon vs.
Come Vnkle, lead the way.
Hot. Now by the Starres that shine vpon my Helme,
I'll make a Ghastly Day for Englands Beauty.
Seuen Horses haue I skipt withall this Morning,
And Galloway-nags, like Pigeons, haue flowne
Reuiuers, and Recoyles, to and fro,
Since foure a Clocke.
Hot. Your Father may go to the Wall, and the King too.
Before I'll leese this Match-play of Aduantage,
O'rethrow the Law, ride with a Thousand Beades
Downe to my Journeys end. Tarry the Grooming of my Horse?
Not for a Hope of Gaine, a Kingdome.
Hot. Come, come, go in with me, 'tis after Midnight,
And to be plaine, I do not loue to Dine alone.
Hot. Not so, 'tis Philosophy to eate alone,
Meate and Keepe Cold, are the Lawes, and Prouerbes
Of Nice, and Dull Complaints. Lord Lumley, goe to bed,
Your Wife sits long after you, full of your Cares,
Stopping vnruly Mouthes, full of Impatience.
Hot. Yes Patience is quite beaten out of doore,
And leaues no Place; yet Lumley to bed.
Hot. Not yet my Nephew? In debt that Battell lookes,
Or else the Feare of it, behinde.
Hot. Why then the Powers are deepe.
Hot. Is the Glendour with them?
Hot. No Glendour is not with them.
Hot. Then he purposes not to be there.
He came not through the Mountaines with his Power,
And close incamped.
Hot. How knowes he this?
Hot. Why he is walking one three times now,
Hard by from Shrewsbury, Clad in Mud to the Knees,
His Horse all foam'd with Trauell, and himselfe
Tyr'd with the Beating of his Spurres.
Hot. What a Deuill sits on his Face?
Is his Mother, his Wife, his Brother dead?
Hot. Why no, he rides but Northward to Holmedon,
To meet Sir Michael Veron, and Sir Richard Stapley,
Are these my Letters, come in such a Hurry?
Hot. Why should they not come in Hurry?
Are not you on the Readie? While we
Defer our Loue, so much our Businesse suffers.
Meane time, but harke you Vncle, what's the Newes?
Hot. Why Letters of Preparation,
That the Scot is prepar'd against Barwicke.
Stay, and breathe awhile.
Thou hast halfe a Tale to tell vs of Newes.
Hot. Yes, that there came a Ballad in my Pocket,
The last Night.
Hot. Why, so did there come to me many a thing,
I do not an houre before I came from Shrewsbury.
Hot. But my Tale is of Newes.
Hot. Of Horses, Armes, and Men,
Of Authority, Bent, and Resolution,
Thicke as the Autumne Leaues.
Hot. Some of them set forward, some vpon their Iourney,
All expected here: and the Newes is cold.
Hot. Now by my Troth, you haue a lustie Newes,
Of Dangerous Maner, as a Time is like to be.
Hot. But for mine owne part, my Lord, I could be well contented,
There were no more Perill in the Matter,
Then in the Report: Do not you fear it.
Looke to your Horses, Gentlemen, I haue seene the Time,
With my Long Sword, I would haue made foure tall Fellowes
Skip like Rats.
Hot. Haue you seene the Time?
Hot. Come, come, let's all to Bed.
Hot. Wednesday by Seuen,
Ile send your Horses, meete me Early there,
And there I'll sup. Farewell.
Hot. Farewell my Lord.

Hot. But soft I pray you; did King Richard then Proclaime my brother Mortimer,
Heyre to the Crowne?
Nor. He did, my selfe did heare it.
Hot. Nay then I cannot blame his Cousin King,
That wish'd him on the barren Mountaines starue.
But shall it be, that you that set the Crowne
Vpon the head of this forgetfull man,
And for his sake wore the detested blot
Of murtherous Subornation? Shall it be,
That you a world of curses vndergoe,
Being the Agents or base second meanes,
The Cords, the Ladder, or the Hangman rather?
O pardon, if that I descend so low,
To shew the Line, and the Predicament
Wherein you range vnder this subtle King.
Shall it for shame be spoken in these dayes,
Or fill vp Chronicles in time to come,
That men of your Nobility and Power,
Did gage them both in an vniust behalfe,
As both of you (God pardon it) have done,
To put downe an Vsurper, that ere long
And shall it in more shame be further spoken,
That you are fool'd, discarded, and shooke off
By him, for whom these shames ye vnderwent?
No, yet time serues, wherein you may redeeme
Your banish'd Honors, and restore your selues
Into the good thoughts of the world againe:
Reuenge the jeering and disdain'd contempt
Of this proud King, who studies day and night
To answer all the Debt he owes vnto you,
Euen with the bloody Payment of your deaths:
Therefore I say——
Wor. Peace Cousin, say no more.
And now I will vnclaspe a Secret booke,
And to your quicke conceiuing Discontents,
Ile read you Matter, deepe and dangerous,
As full of peril and aduentrous Spirit,
As to ore-walke a Current, roaring loud
On the vnsteadfast footing of a Speare.
Hot. If he fall in, good night, or sinke or swimme:
Send danger from the East vnto the West,
So Honour crosse it from the North to South,
And let them grapple: The blood more stirres
To rouze a Lyon, than to start a Hare.
Nor. Imagination of some great exploit,
Drives him beyond the bounds of Patience.
Hot. By Heauen, me thinkes it were an easie leap,
To plucke bright Honor from the pale-faced Moone,
Or dyue into the bottome of the deepe,
Where Fathom-line could neuer touch the ground,
And pluck vp drowned Honor by the Locks,
So he that doth redeeme her thence, might weare
Without Corriuall, all her Dignities:
But out vpon this halfe-faced Fellowship.
Wor. He apprehends a World of Figures here,
But not the forme of what he should attend.
Good Cousin, giue me audience for a-while,
And list to me.
Hot. I cry you mercy.
Wor. Those same Noble Scottes
That are your Prisoners——
Hot. I'le keepe them all.
By Heauen, he shall not haue a Scot of them
No, if a Scot would saue his Soule, he shall not:
I'le keepe them, by this Hand.
Wor. You start away,
And lend no eare vnto my purposes.
Those Prisoners you shall keepe.
Hot. Nay, I will, that's flat.
He said, he would not ransome Mortimer:
Forbad my tongue to speake of Mortimer.
But I will finde him when he lyes asleepe,
And in his eare, Ile hollo Mortimer.
Nay, I'le haue a Starling shall be taught to speake
Nothing but Mortimer, and giue it him,
To keepe his anger still in motion.
Wor. Heare you Cousin a word.
Hot. All studies heere I solemnly defie,
Saue how to gall and pinch this Bullingbrooke,
And that same Sword and Buckler Prince of Wales.
But that I loue the Fauour and the Wit,
And would be glad he met with some Aduance,
I would maintaine you with a Pot-gun shot,
And you in a Peece-shot.
Wor. Farewell Kinsman: I'le talke to you
When you are better temper'd to attend.
Nor. Why what a Wasp-tongue & impatient fool
Art thou, to breake into this Womans mood,
Tying thine eare to no tongue but thine owne?
Hot. Why look you, I am whipt & scourg'd with rods,
Nettled, and stung with Pismires, when I heare
Of this vile Politician Bullingbrooke.
In Richards time: What do ye call the place?
A plague vpon't, it is in Glocestershire.
'Twas, where the madcap Duke his Vncle kept,
His Vncle Yorke, where I first bow'd my knee
Vnto this King of Smiles, this Bullingbrooke.
When you and he came backe from Ramspurgh.
Nor. At Barkley Castle.
Hot. You say true.
Why what a candy deale of courtesie
This fawning Greyhound then did proffer me:
Look when his infant Fortune came to age,
And gentle Harry Percy, and kinde Cousin.
O, the Deuill take such Cozeners: God forgiue me,
Good Vncle tell your tale, for I haue done.
Wor. Nay, if you melt, goe forth and take your part.
When I shall finde you weeping, beare you selfe
Hot. I have done, enough.
Wor. Then once more to your Scottish Prisoners.
Deliuer them vp without their ransome straight,
And make the Dowglas come to you more yeerely
For powres in Scotland: which for diuers reasons
Which I shall send you written, be assur'd
Will easily be granted you, my Lord.
Your Scottish Scotland being thus imploy'd,
Shall keepe you to the bosome creepe
Of that same noble Prelate, well belou'd,
The Archbishop.
Hot. O Yorke, is't not?
Wor. True, who beares hard
His Brothers death at Bristow, the Lord Scroope.
I speake not this in estimation
As what I think might be, but what I know
Is ruminated, plotted and set downe,
And only stayes but to behold the face
Of that occasion that shall bring it on.
Hot. I smell it.
Vpon my life, it will do wond'rous well.
Nor. Before the game is a-foot, thou still let'st slip.
Hot. Why, it cannot choose but be a Noble plot,

And then the power of Scotland, and of Yorke
To ioyne with Mortimer, Ha.
Wor. And so they shall.
Hot. Infaith it is exceedingly well aym'd.
Wor. And 'tis no little reason bids vs speed,
To saue our heads, by raising of a Head:
For, beare our selues as euen as we can,
The King will always thinke him in our debt,
And thinke, we thinke our selues vnsatisfied,
Till he hath found a time to pay vs home.
And see already, how he doth begin to
To make vs strangers to his lookes of loue.
Hot. He does, he does, we'l be reueng'd on him
Wor. Cousin, farewell. No further go in this,
Then I by Letters shall direct your course
When time is ripe (which will be looked for) ere.
Ile steale to Glendower and you, Mortimer,
Where you, and Douglas, and our powres at once,
As I will fashion it, shall happily meete,
To beare our fortunes in our owne strong armes,
Which now we hold at much vncertainty.
Nor Farewell good Brother, we shall thriue, I trust
Hot. Vncle, adieu: O let the houres be short,
Till fields, and blowes, and groanes, applaud our sport Exeunt

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Carrier with a Lanterne in his hand.

1.Car. Heigh-ho, an't be not foure by the day, Ile be hang'd. Charles waine is ouer the new Chimney, and yet our horse not packt. What Ostler?
Ost. Anon, anon.
1.Car. I prethee Tom, beate Cuts Saddle, put a few Flockes in the point: the poore Jade is wrung in the withers, out of all cesse.

Enter another Carrier.

2.Car. Pease and Beanes are as danke here as a Dog, and this is the next way to giue poore Iades the Botes: This house is turned vpside downe since Robin the Ostler dyed.
1.Car. Poore fellow neuer ioy'd since the price of oates rose, it was the death of him.
2. Car. I thinke this is the most vengeance house in all London rode for Fleas: I am stung like a Tench.
1.Car. Like a Tench? There is ne're a King in Christendome, could be better bit, then I haue been since the first Cocke.
2.Car. Why, you will allow vs ne're a Iourden, and then we leake in your Chimney: and your Chamber-lye breeds Fleas like a Loach.
1.Car. What Ostler, come away, and be hang'd: come away.
2.Car. I haue a Gammon of Bacon, and two razes of Ginger, to be deliuered as farre as Charing-crosse.
1.Car. The Turkies in my Pannier are quite starued. What Ostler? A plague on thee, hast thou neuer an eye in thy head? Can'st not heare? And 'twere not as good a deed as drinke, to breake the pate of thee, I am a very Villaine. Come and be hang'd, hast no faith in thee?

Enter Gads-hill.

Gad. Good-morrow Carriers. What's a clocke?
1.Car. I thinke it be two a clocke.
Gad. I prethee lend me thy Lanthorne to see my Gelding in the stable.
1.Car. Nay soft I pray ye, I know a trick worth two of that.
Gad. I prethee lend me thine.
2.Car. I when, canst tell? Lend mee thy Lanthorne (quoth a) marry Ile see thee hang'd first.
Gad. Sirra Carrier: What time do you mean to come to London?
2.Car. Time enough to goe to bed with a Candle, I warrant thee. Come neighbour Mugges, we'l call vp the Gentlemen, they will along with company, for they haue great charge. Exeunt

Enter Chamberlaine.

Gad. What ho, Chamberlaine?
Cham. At hand quoth Pick-purse.
Gad. That's euen as faire, as at hand quoth the Chamberlaine: For thou variest no more from picking of Purses, then giuing direction, doth from labouring. Thou knowest the plot, how.
Cham. Good morrow Master Gads-Hill, it holds current that I told you yesternight. There's a Franklin in the wilde of Kent hath brought three hundred Markes with him in Gold: I heard him tell it to one of his company last night at Supper; a kinde of Auditor, one that hath abundance of charge too (God knowes what) they are vp already, and call for Egges and Butter. They will away presently.
Gad. Sirra, if they meete not with S. Nicholas Clarkes, Ile giue thee this necke.
Cham. No, Ile none of it: I prythee keepe that for the Hangman, for I know thou worshippest S. Nicholas as truely as a man of falshood may.
Gad. What talkest thou to me of the Hangman? If I hang, Ile make a fat payre of Gallowes. For, if I hang, old Sir John hangs with mee, and thou know'st he's no Starueling. Tut, there are other Troians that thou dream'st not of, the which (for sport sake) are content to doe the Profession some grace; that would (if matters should be look'd into) for their owne Credit sake, make all whole. I am ioyned with no Foot-land-Rakers, no Long-staffe six-penny-strikers, none of these mad Mustachio-purple-hu'd Maltworms, but with Nobility, and Tranquillity, Burgomasters, and great Oneyers, such as can hold in, such as will strike sooner then speake; and speake sooner then drinke, and drinke sooner then pray: and yet I lye, for they pray continually vnto their Saint the Commonwealth; or rather, not to pray to her, but prey on her, for they ride vp & downe on her, and make her their Boots.
Cham. What, the Commonwealth their Boots? Will she hold out water in foule way?
Gad. She will; Iustice hath liquor'd her. We steale as in a Castle cocke-sure: we haue the receit of Fern-seede, we walke inuisible.
Cham. Nay, I think rather, you are more beholding to the Night, then to the Fern-seed, for your walking inuisible.
Gad. Giue me thy hand.
Thou shalt haue a share in our purpose,
As I am a true man.
Cham. Nay, rather let mee haue it, as you are a false Theefe.
Gad. Goe to: Homo is a common name to all men. Bid the Ostler bring the Gelding out of the stable. Farewell, ye muddy Knaue. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Prince, Poynes, and Peto.

Poynes. Come shelter, shelter: I have removed Falstaffs Horse, and he frets like a gumd Velure.

Prin. Stand close.

Enter Falstaffe.

Fal. Poynes, Poynes, and be hang'd Poynes.

Prin. Peace ye fat-kidney'd Rascall, what a brawling dost thou keepe?

Fal. What Poynes! Hal?

Prin. He is walk'd up to the top of the hill, Ile go seek him.

Fal. I am accurst to rob in that Theefe company: that Rascall hath removed my Horse, and tied him I know not where. If I travell but foure foot by the squire further a foote, I shall breake my winde. Well, I doubt not but to dye a faire death for all this, if I scape hanging for killing that Rogue. I have forsworne his company hourely any time this two and twenty yeare, & yet I am bewitcht with the Rogues company. If the Rascall have not given me medicines to make me love him, I'le be hang'd: it could not be else: I have drunke Medicines. Poynes, Hal, a Plague vpon you both. Bardolph, Peto: I'le starue ere I rob a foote further. And 'twere not as good a deede as to drinke, to turne True-man, and to leave these Rogues, I am the veriest Varlet that ever chewed with a Tooth. Eight yards of vneuen ground, is threescore & ten miles a foot with me: and the stony-hearted Villaines know it well enough. A plague vpon't, when Theeues cannot be true one to another. They whistle.

Whew: a plague light vpon you all. Giue my Horse you Rogues: giue me my Horse, and be hang'd.

Prin. Peace ye fat guttes, lye downe, lay thine eare close to the ground, and list if thou can heare the tread of Trauellers.

Fal. Have you any Leuers to lift me vp again being downe? 'Sblood I'le not beare mine owne flesh so far a foot again for all the coyne in thy Fathers Exchequer. What a plague meane ye to colt me thus?

Prin. Thou lyest, thou art not colted, thou art vncolted.

Fal. I prethee good Prince Hal, helpe me to my horse, good Kings sonne.

Prin. Out you Rogue, shall I be your Ostler?

Fal. Go hang thy selfe in thine owne heire-apparent Garters: If I be ta'ne, Ile peach for this: and I have not Ballads made on all, and sung to filthy tunes, let a Cup of Sacke be my poyson: when a Jest is so forward, & a foote too, I hate it.

Enter Gads-hill.

Gad. Stand.

Fal. So I do against my will.

Poyn. O 'tis our Setter, I know his voyce.
Bardolfe, what newes?

Bar. Case ye, case ye; on with your Vizards, there's money of the Kings comming downe the hill, 'tis going to the Kings Exchequer.

Fal. You lie ye rogue, 'tis going to the Kings Tauerne.

Gad. There's enough to make vs all.

Fal. To be hang'd.

Prin. You foure shall front them in the narrow Lane: Ned and I, will walke lower: if they scape from your encounter, then they light on vs.

Peto. But how many be of them?

Gad. Some eight or ten.

Fal. Will they not rob vs?

Prin. What, a Coward Sir John Paunch?

Fal. Indeed I am not John of Gaunt your Grandfather; but yet no Coward, Hal.

Prin. Wee'l leave that to the proofe.

Poyn. Sirra Jacke, thy horse stands behinde the hedge, when thou need'st him, there thou shalt finde him. Farewell, and stand fast.

Fal. Now cannot I strike him, if I should be hang'd.

Prin. Ned, where are our disguises?

Poyn. Heere hard by. Stand close.

Fal. Now my Masters, happy man be his dole, say I: every man to his businesse.

Enter Trauellers.

Tra. Come Neighbors: the boy shall leade our Horses downe the hill: We'l walke a-foot a while, and ease our Legges.

Theeues. Stay.

Tra. Ieshu bestow vs.

Fal. Stand: lay downe your weapons: kneele downe on your knees, and yeeld vp your liues.

Tra. Lord pitty vs.

Fal. Stand close with them: cut the villaines throates: a whorson Caterpillars: Bacon-fed Knaues, they hate vs by nature, for taking downe their fat. Downe with them, fleece them.

Tra. O, we are vndone, both we and ours for euer.

Fal. Hang ye gorbellied knaues, are you vndone? No ye Fat Chuffes, I would your store were heere. On Bacons, on, what ye knaues? Young men must liue, you are Grand Iurors, are ye? We'l iure ye faith.

Heere they rob them, and binde them. Enter the Prince and Poynes.

Prin. The Theeues have bound the True-men: Now could thou and I rob the Theeues, and go merily to London, it would be argument for a Weeke, Laughter for a Moneth, and a good iest for ever.

Poynes. Stand close, I heare them comming.

Enter Theeues againe.

Fal. Come my Masters, let vs share, and then to horse before day: and the Prince and Poynes be not two arrant Cowards, there's no equity stirring. There's no more valour in that Poynes, than in a wilde Ducke.

Prin. Your money.

Poyn. Villaines.

As they are sharing, the Prince and Poynes set vpon them. They all run away, leauing the booty behind them.

Prince. Got with much ease. Now merrily to Horse: The Theeues are scattered, and possest with fear so strongly, that they dare not meet each other: each takes his fellow for an Officer. Away good Ned, Falstaffe sweates to death, and Lards the leane earth as he walkes along: were't not for laughing, I should pitty him.

Poyn. How the Rogue roar'd. Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Hotspurre solus reading a Letter.

But for mine owne part, my Lord, I could be well contented to be there, in respect of the loue I beare your house.

He

He could be contented: Why is he not then? In respect of the loue he beares our houſe. He ſhewes in this, he loues his owne Barne better then he loues our houſe. Let me ſee ſome more. The purpoſe you undertake is dangerous. Why that's certaine: 'Tis dangerous to take a Cold, to ſleepe, to drinke: but I tell you (my Lord fooliſh) out of this Nettle, Danger; we pluck this Flower, Safety. The purpoſe you undertake is dangerous, the Friends you haue named uncertaine, the Time it ſelfe vnfurniſhed, and your whole Plot too light, for the counterpoiſe of ſo great an Oppoſition. Say you ſo, ſay you ſo: I ſay vnto you againe, you are a ſhallow cowardly Hinde, and you Lye. What a lacke-braine is this? I proteſt, our plot is as good a plot as euer was laid; our Friends true and conſtant: A good Plot, good Friends, and full of expectation: An excellent plot, very good Friends. What a froſty ſpirited rogue is this? Why, my Lord of Yorke commends the plot, and the generall courſe of the action. By this hand, if we were now by this Rascall, I could braine him with his Ladies Fan. Is there not my Father, my Vncle, and my ſelfe, Lord Edmund Mortimer, my Lord of Yorke, and Owen Glendower? Is there not beſides the Douglas? Haue I not all their ſeuerall letters to meete me in Armes by the ninth of the next Moneth? and are they not ſome of them ſet forward already? What a Pagan Rascall is this? An Infidel! Ha, you ſhall ſee now (in very ſincerity of feare and cold heart) will he to the King, and diſcouer vs all our proceedings. O, I could diuide my ſelfe, and go to buffets, for moouing ſuch a diſh of ſkim'd Milke with ſo honourable an Action. Hang him, let him tell the King we are prepared. I will ſet forward to night.

Enter his Lady.

How now Kate, I muſt leaue you within theſe two houres.

La. O my good Lord, why are you thus alone?
For what offence haue I this fortnight been
A baniſh'd woman from my Harries bed?
Tell me (ſweet Lord) what is't that takes from thee
Thy ſtomacke, pleaſure, and thy golden ſleepe?
Why doſt thou bend thine eyes vpon the earth?
And ſtart ſo often when thou ſit'ſt alone?
Why haſt thou loſt the freſh bloud in thy cheekes?
And giuen my Treaſures and my rights of thee,
To thicke-ey'd muſing, and curſt melancholy?
In my ſweet-ſlumbers, (by thy ſide haue watcht,
And heard thee murmure tales of Iron Warres,
Speake termes of manage to thy bounding Steed,
Cry courage to the field. And thou haſt talk'd
Of Sallies, and Retires; Trenches, Tents,
Of Palizadoes, Frontiers, Parapets,
Of Baſiliskes, of Canon, Culuerin,
Of Priſoners ranſome, and of Souldiers ſlaine,
And all the current of a headdy fight.
Thy ſpirit within thee hath been ſo at Warre,
And thus hath ſo beſtir'd thee in thy ſleepe,
That beds of ſweate hath ſtood vpon thy Brow,
Like bubbles in a late-diſturbed Streame,
And in thy face ſtrange motions haue appear'd,
Such as we ſee when men reſtrain their breath
On ſome great ſodaine haſt. O what portents are theſe?
Some heauie buſineſſe hath my Lord in hand,
And I muſt know it: elſe he loues me not.

Hot. What ho; Is Gilliams with the Packet gone?

Ser. He is my Lord an houre agone.

Hot. Hath Butler brought thoſe horſes frõ the Sheriffe?

Ser. One horſe, my Lord, he brought euen now.

Hot. What Horſe? A Roane, a crop eare, is it not?

Ser. It is my Lord.

Hot. That Roane ſhall be my Throne. Well, I will backe him ſtraight. Eſperance, bid Butler lead him forth into the Parke.

La. But heare you, my Lord.

Hot. What ſay'ſt thou my Lady?

La. What is it carries you away?

Hot. Why, my horſe, my Loue, my horſe.

La. Out you mad-headed Ape, a Weazell hath not ſuch a deale of Spleene, as you are toſt with. In faith I'le know your buſineſſe Harry, that I will. I feare my Brother Mortimer doth ſtirre about this Title, and hath ſent for you to line his enterprize. But if you go——

Hot. So farre-foot, I ſhall be weary, Loue.

La. Come, come, you Paraquito, anſwer me directly vnto this queſtion, that I demand. In faith I'le breake thy little finger Harry, if thou wilt not tell me true.

Hot. Away, away you trifler. Loue, I loue thee not, I care not for thee Kate: this is no world
To play with Mammets, and to tilt with Lips.
We muſt haue bloudie Noſes, and crack'd Crownes,
And paſſe them current too. Gods me my horſe!
What ſay'ſt thou Kate? what would'ſt thou haue with me?

La. Do's not he loue me? Do's not he not meane it?

Well, ſo I am then. For if he loue me not,
I will not loue my ſelfe. Do's not he loue me?
Nay, tell me if thou pleaſe it in a ieſt or no.

Hot. Come, wilt thou ride with me?
And when I am a horſe-backe, I will ſweare
I loue thee infinitely. But harke you Kate,
I may not, haue you not made ſome queſtion of me,
Whether I go, nor reaſon whereabout.
Whether I muſt, I muſt: and to conclude,
This Euening muſt I leaue thee, gentle Kate.
I know you wiſe, but yet no further wiſe
Than Harry Percies wife. Conſtant you are,
But yet a woman: and for ſecreſie
No Lady cloſer. For I will beleeue
Thou wilt not vtter what thou do'ſt not know,
And ſo farre will I truſt thee gentle Kate.

La. How ſo farre?

Hot. Not an inch further. But harke you Kate,
Whither I go, thither ſhall you go too
To-day will I ſet forth, to-morrow you.
Will this content you Kate?

La. It muſt of force. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Prince and Poines.

Prin. Ned prethee come out of that fat roome & lend me thy hand to laugh a little.

Poines. Where haſt bene Hall?

Prin. With three or foure loggerheads, amongſt three or foureſcore Hogſheads. I haue ſounded the very baſe ſtring of humanity. Sirra, I am ſworne brother to a leaſh of Drawers, and can call them by their names as Tom Dicke, and Francis. They take it already vpon their confidence, that though I be but Prince of Wales, yet I am the King of Courteſie: telling me flatly I am no proud Jack like Falſtaffe, but a Corinthian, a lad of mettle, a good boy, and when I am King of Eng. I ſhall command all the good Lads in Eaſt-cheape. They call drinking deepe, dying Scarlet; and when you breath in your watering, then

——ry hem, and bid you play it off. To conclude, I am —— rd a proficient in one quarter of an houre, that I can ma w th any Tinker in his owne Language during my life. I tell thee Ned, thou hast lost much honor, that thou wer't not with me i' this action: but sweet Ned, to sweeten which name of Ned, I giue thee this pennyworth of Sugar, clapt euen now into my hand by an vnder Skinker, one that neuer spake other English in his life, then Eight shillings and six pence, and, You are welcome: with this shrill addition, Anon, Anon sir, Score a Pint of Bastard in the Halfe Moone, or so. But Ned, to driue away time till Falstaffe come, I prythee doe thou stand in some by-roome, while I question my puny Drawer, to what end hee gaue me the Sugar, and do neuer leaue calling Francis, that his Tale to me may be nothing but, Anon: step aside, and I shall shew thee a President.

Poines. Francis

Prin. Thou art perfect.

Poin. Francis.

Enter Drawer

Fran. Anon, anon sir, looke downe into the Pomgarnet, Ralfe.

Prince. Come hither Francis

Fran. My Lord.

Prin. How long hast thou to serue, Francis?

Fran. Forsooth fiue yeares, and as much as to——

Poin. Francis.

Fran. Anon, anon sir.

Prin. Fiue yeares: Berlady a long Lease for the clinking of Pewter. But Francis, darest thou be so valiant, as to play the coward with thy Indenture, & shew it a faire paire of heeles, and run from it?

Fran. O Lord sir, Ile be sworne vpon all the Books in England, I could finde in my heart.

Poin. Francis.

Fran. Anon, anon sir.

Prin. How old art thou, Francis?

Fran. Let me see, about Michaelmas next I shall be——

Poin. Francis.

Fran. Anon sir, pray you stay a little, my Lord.

Prin. Nay but harke you Francis, for the Sugar thou gauest me, 'twas a pennyworth, was't not?

Fran. O Lord sir, I would it had bene two.

Prin. I will giue thee for it a thousand pound: Aske me when thou wilt, and thou shalt haue it.

Poin. Francis.

Fran. Anon, anon.

Prin. Anon Francis? No Francis, but to morrow Francis: or Francis on Thursday: or indeed Francis when thou wilt. But Francis.

Fran. My Lord.

Prin. Wilt thou rob this Leatherne Ierkin, Christall button, Not-pated, Agat ring, Puke stocking, Caddice garter, Smooth tongue, Spanish pouch.

Fran. O Lord sir, who do you mean?

Prin. Why then your browne Bastard is your onely drinke: for looke you Francis, your white Canuas doublet will sully. In Barbary sir, it cannot come to so much.

Fran. What sir?

Poin. Francis.

Prin. Away you Rogue, dost thou heare them call?

Here they both call him, the Drawer stands amazed, not knowing which way to go.

Enter Vintner.

Vint. What, stand'st thou still, and hear'st such a calling? Looke to the Guests within: My Lord, olde Sir Iohn with halfe a dozen more, are at the doore: shall I let them in?

Prin. Let them alone awhile, and then open the doore, Poines.

Enter Poines

Poin. Anon, anon sir.

Prin. Sirra, Falstaffe and the rest of the Theeues, are at the doore, shall we be merry?

Poin. As merrie as Crickets my Lad. But harke yee, What cunning match haue you made with this iest of the Drawer? Come, what's the issue?

Prin. I am now of all humors, that haue shewed themselues humors, since the old dayes of goodman Adam, to the pupill age of this present twelue a clock at midnight. What's a clocke Francis?

Fran. Anon, anon sir.

Prin. That euer this Fellow should haue fewer words than a Parrot, and yet the son of a Woman: his industry is vp-stairs and downe-stayres, his eloquence the parcell of a reckoning. I am not yet of Percies mind, the Hotspurre of the North, he that kills me some six or seauen dozen of Scots at a Breakfast, washes his hands, and cries to his wife; Fie vpon this quiet life, I want worke. O my sweet Harry (sayes she) how many hast thou kill'd to day? Giue my Roane horse a drench (sayes hee) and answeres, some fourteene, an houre after: a trifle, a trifle. I prethee call in Falstaffe, Ile play Percy, and that damn'd Brawne shall play Dame Mortimer his wife. Rivo, sayes the drunkard. Call in Ribs, call in Tallow.

Enter Falstaffe.

Poin. Welcome Iacke, where hast thou beene?

Fal. A plague of all Cowards I say, and a Vengeance too, marry and Amen. Giue me a cup of Sacke Boy. Ere I lead this life long, Ile sowe nether stocks, and mende them too. A plague of all cowards. Giue me a Cup of Sacke, Rogue. Is there no Vertue extant?

Prin. Didst thou neuer see Titan kisse a dish of Butter, pitifull hearted Titan that melted at the sweete Tale of the Sunne? If thou didst, then behold that compound.

Fal. You Rogue, heere's Lime in this Sacke too: there is nothing but Roguery to be found in Villanous man yet a Coward is worse then a Cup of Sacke with Lime in it. A Villanous Coward, go thy wayes old Iacke, die when thou wilt, till a true bred Cowards head come vpon the shoulders of euery good good mans sonne, and be not let downe with euery dudgeon dagger a Drawing Englishman: & one of them is fat and growes old, God help the while, a bad world I say. I would I were a Weauer, I could sing all manner of songs. A plague of all Cowards, I say still.

Prin. How now Woolsacke, what mutter you?

Fal. A Kings Sonne? If I do not beate thee out of thy Kingdome with a dagger of Lath, and driue all thy Subiects afore thee like a flocke of Wilde-geese, Ile neuer weare haire on my face more. You Prince of Wales?

Prin. Why you horson round man? what's the matter?

Fal. Are you not a Coward? Answer me to that, and Poines there?

Prin. Ye fatte paunch, and yee call mee Coward, Ile stab thee.

Fal. I call thee Coward? Ile see thee damn'd ere I call thee Coward: but I would giue a thousand pound I could run as fast as thou canst. You are straight enough in the shoulders, you care not who sees your backe. Call you that backing of your friends? a plague vpon such backing: giue me them that will face me. Giue me a Cup of Sack, I am a Rogue if I drunke to day.

that

Prince. O Villaine, thy Lippes are scarce wip'd since thou drunk'st last.

Falst. All's one for that. He drinkes
A plague of all Cowards still, say I.

Prince. What's the matter?

Falst. What's the matter? here be foure of vs, haue ta'ne a thousand pound this Morning.

Prince. Where is it, Jacke? where is it?

Falst. Where is it? taken from vs, it is: a hundred vpon poore foure of vs.

Prince. What, a hundred, man?

Falst. I am a Rogue, if I were better at hand Sword with a dozen of them two hours together. I haue escap'd by miracle. I am eight times thrust through the Doublet, foure through the Hose, my Buckler cut through and through, my Sword hackt like a Hand-saw, ecce signum. I neuer dealt better since I was a man: all would not do. A plague of all Cowards: let them speake: if they speake more or lesse then truth, they are Villaines, and the sonnes of darkenesse.

Prince. Speake sirs, how was it?

Gad. We foure set vpon some dozen.

Falst. Sixteene, at least, my Lord.

Gad. And bound them.

Peto. No: no: they were not bound.

Falst. Yes, Rogue, they were bound, euery man of them, or I am a Iew else a Iew-bred Iew.

Gad. As we were sharing, some sixe or seuen fresh men set vpon vs.

Falst. And vnbound the rest, and then come in the other.

Prince. What, fought ye with them all?

Falst. All? I know not what ye call all: but if I fought not with fifty of them, I am a bunch of Radish: if there were not two or three and fifty vpon poore olde Jacke, then am I no two-legg'd Creature.

Poins. Pray Heauen, you haue not murthered some of them.

Falst. Nay, that's past praying for. I haue peppered two of them: Two I am sure I haue payed, two Rogues in Buckrom Suites. I tell thee what, Hal, if I tell thee a Lye spit in my face, call me Horse: thou knowest my olde word: here I lay, and thus I bore my point, foure Rogues in Buckrom let drive at me.

Prince. What, foure? thou saydst but two, euen now.

Falst. Foure Hal, I told thee foure.

Poins. I, so I said.

Falst. These foure came all a-front, and mainly thrust at me: I made no more adoe, but tooke all their seuen points in my Target thus.

Prince. Seuen? why there were but foure, euen now.

Falst. In Buckrom.

Poins. I, foure, in Buckrom Suites.

Falst. Seuen, by these Hilts, or I am a Villaine else.

Prin. Prethee let him alone, we shall haue more anon.

Falst. Dost thou heare me Hal?

Prin. I, and marke thee too, Jacke.

Falst. Do so, for it is worth the listning too: these nine in Buckrom, that I told thee of.

Prin. So, two more already.

Falst. Their Points being broken.

Poins. Downe fell his Hose.

Falst. Began to giue me ground: but I followed me close, came in foot and hand; and with a thought, seuen of the eleuen I pay'd.

Prin. O monstrous! eleuen Buckrom men growne out of two?

Falst. But as the Deuill would haue it, three mis-begotten Knaues, in Kendall Greene, came at my Back, and let driue at me, (for it was so darke, Hal, that thou could'st not see thy Hand.

Prin. These lyes are like the Father that begets them, grosse as a Mountaine, open, palpable. Why thou clay-brayn'd Guts, thou Knotty-pated Foole, thou Horson obscene greasie Tallow Catt.

Falst. What, art thou mad? art thou mad? is not the truth, the truth?

Prin. Why, how could'st thou know these men in Kendall Greene, when it was so darke, thou could'st not see thy Hand? Come, tell vs your reason: what say'st thou to this?

Poins. Come: your reason Jack, your reason.

Falst. What, vpon compulsion? No: were I at the Strappado, or all the Racks in the World, I would not tell you on compulsion. Giue you a reason on compulsion? If reasons were as plentie as Blacke-berries, I would giue no man a Reason vpon compulsion, I.

Prin. I'le be no longer guilty of this sinne. This sanguine Coward, this Bed-presser, this horse-backe-breaker, this huge Hill of Flesh.

Falst. Away, you starueling, you Elfe-skin, you dried Neats-tongue, Bulls-pizzle, you stocke-fish: O for breath to vtter. What is like thee? you Tailors-yard, you sheath, you bow-case, you vile standing tucke.

Prin. Well, breath-a-while, and then to it againe: and when thou hast tyr'd thy selfe in base comparisons, heare me speake but this.

Poins. Marke Iacke.

Prin. We two saw you foure set on foure, and bound them, and were Masters of their Wealth. Marke now, how a plaine Tale shall put you downe. Then did we two, set on you foure, and with a word, outfac'd you from your prize, and haue it: yea, and can shew it you here in the House. And Falstaffe, you carried your Guts away as nimbly, with as quicke dexterity, and roar'd for mercy, and still ran and roar'd, as euer I heard Bull-Calfe. What a Slaue art thou, to hacke thy Sword as thou hast done, and then say it was in fight. What trick? what deuice? what starting hole canst thou now finde out, to hide thee from this open and apparant shame?

Poines. Come: let's heare Iacke. What trick hast thou now?

Fal. I know ye as well as he that made ye. Why heare ye my Masters, was it for me to kill the Heire apparant? Should I turne vpon the true Prince? Why thou know'st I am as valiant as Hercules: but beware Instinct, the Lion will not touch the true Prince. Instinct is a great matter. I was a Coward on Instinct. I shall think the better of my selfe, and thee, during my life; I, for a valiant Lion, and thou for a true Prince. But Lads, I am glad you haue the Mony. Hostesse clap to the doores: watch to night, pray to morrow. Gallants, Lads, Boyes, Hearts of Gold, all the good Titles of Fellowship come to you. What, shall we be merry? shall we haue a Play extempory?

Prin. Content, and the argument shall be, thy running away.

Fal. Ah, no more of that Hal, and thou louest me.

Enter Hostesse.

Host. My Lord, the Prince?

Prin.

Prin. How now my Lady the Hoſteſſe, what ſay'ſt thou to me?

Hoſteſſe. Marry, my Lord, there is a Noble man of the Court at doore would ſpeake with you: hee ſayes, hee comes from your Father.

Prin. Giue him as much as will make him a Royall man, and ſend him backe againe to my Mother.

Falſt. What manner of man is hee?

Hoſteſſe. An old man.

Falſt. What doth Granſtie out of his Bed at Midnight? Shall I giue him his anſwere?

Prin. Prethee doe Iacke.

Falſt. Faith, and Ile ſend him packing. Exit.

Prince. Now Sirs: you fought faire; ſo did you Peto, ſo did you Bardol: you are Lyons too, you ranne away vpon inſtinct: you will not touch the true Prince; no, fie

Bard. Faith, I ranne when I ſaw others runne

Prin. Tell mee now in earneſt, how came Falſtaffe's Sword ſo hackt?

Peto. Why, he hackt it with his Dagger, and ſaid, hee would ſweare truth out of England, but hee would make you beleeue it was done in fight, and perſwaded vs to doe the like.

Bard. Yea, and to tickle our Noſes with Spear-graſſe, to make them bleed, and then to beſlubber our garments with it, and ſweare it was the blood of true men. I did that I did not this ſeuen yeeres before, I bluſht to heare his monſtrous deuices.

Prin. O Villaine, thou ſtoleſt a Cup of Sacke eighteene yeeres ago, and were taken with the manner, and euer ſince thou haſt bluſht extempore: thou hadſt fire and ſword on thy ſide, and yet thou ranſt away; what inſtinct hadſt thou for it?

Bard. My Lord, doe you ſee theſe Meteors? doe you behold theſe Exhalations?

Prin. I doe.

Bard. What thinke you they portend?

Prin. Hot Liuers, and cold Purſes.

Bard. Choler, my Lord, if rightly taken.

Prin. No, if rightly taken, Halter.

Enter Falſtaffe.

Heere comes leane Iacke, heere comes bare-bone. How now my ſweet Creature of Bombaſt, how long is't ago, Iacke, ſince thou ſaw'ſt thine owne Knee?

Falſt. My owne Knee? When I was about thy yeeres (Hal) I was not an Eagles Talent in the Waiſt, I could haue crept into any Alderman's Thumbe-Ring: a plague of ſighing and griefe, it blowes a man vp like a Bladder. There's villanous Newes abroad: heere was Sir Iohn Bruce from your Father; you muſt goe to the Court in the Morning. The ſame mad fellow of the North, Percy; and he of Wales, that gaue Amamon the Baſtinado, and made Lucifer Cuckold, and ſwore the Deuill his true Liege-man vpon the Croſſe of a Welch-hooke; what a plague call you him?

Poin. O, Glendower.

Falſt. Owen, Owen; the ſame, and his Sonne in Law Mortimer, and old Northumberland, and the ſprightly Scot of Scots, Douglas, that runnes a Horſe-backe vp a Hill perpendicular.

Prin. Hee that rides at high ſpeede, and with a Piſtoll kills a Sparrow flying.

Falſt. You haue hit it.

Prin. So did he neuer the Sparrow.

Falſt. Well, that Raſcall hath good mettall in him; hee will not runne.

Prin. Why, what a Raſcall art thou then, to praiſe him ſo for running?

Falſt. A Horſe-backe (ye Cuckoe) but a foot hee will not budge a foot.

Prin. Yes Iacke, vpon inſtinct.

Falſt. I grant ye, vpon inſtinct: Well, hee is there too, and one Mordake, and a thouſand blew-Cappes more. Worceſter is ſtolne away by Night. thy Fathers Beard is turn'd white with the Newes; you may buy Land now as cheape as ſtinking Mackrell.

Prin. Then 'tis like, if there come a hot Sunne, and this cruell buffeting hold, wee ſhall buy Maiden-heads as they buy Hob-nayles by the Hundreds.

Falſt. By the Maſſe Lad, thou ſay'ſt true, it is like wee ſhall haue good trading that way. But tell me Hal, art not thou horrible afear'd? thou being Heire apparant, could the World picke thee out three ſuch Enemyes againe as that Fiend Douglas, that Spirit Percy, and that Deuill Glendower? Art not thou horrible afraid? Doth not thy blood thrill at it?

Prin. Not a whit: I lacke ſome of thy inſtinct.

Falſt. Well, thou wilt be horrible chollericke to morrow, when thou commeſt to thy Father. If thou doe follow me, practiſe an anſwere.

Prin. Doe thou ſtand for my Father, and examine me vpon the particulars of my Life.

Falſt. Shall I? content: This Chayre ſhall be my State, this Dagger my Scepter, and this Cuſhion my Crowne.

Prin. Thy State is taken for a Ioyn'd-ſtoole, thy Golden Scepter for a Leaden Dagger, and thy precious Rich Crowne, for a pittifull bald Crowne.

Falſt. Well, and the fire of Grace be not quite out of thee now ſhalt thou be moued. Giue me a Cup of Sacke to make mine eyes looke redde, that it may be thought I haue wept, for I muſt ſpeake in paſſion, and I will doe it in King Cambyſes vaine.

Prin. Well, heere is my Legge

Falſt. And heere is my ſpeech: ſtand aſide Nobility.

Hoſteſſe. This is excellent ſport, yfaith.

Falſt. Weepe not, ſweet Queene, for trickling teares are vaine.

Hoſteſſe. O the Father, how hee holdes his countenance?

Falſt. For Gods ſake Lords, conuey my truſtfull Queen, For teares doe ſtop the flood-gates of her eyes.

Hoſteſſe. O rare, he doth it as like one of theſe harlotry Players, as euer I ſee.

Falſt. Peace good Pint-pot, peace good Tickle-braine Harry. I doe not only maruell where thou ſpendeſt thy time; but alſo, how thou art accompanied: For though the Camomile, the more it is troden, the faſter it growes; yet Youth, the more it is waſted, the ſooner it weares. Thou art my Sonne: I haue partly thy Mothers Word, partly my Opinion; but chiefely, a villanous tricke of thine Eye, and a fooliſh hanging of thy nether Lippe, that doth warrant me. If then thou be Sonne to mee, heere lyeth the point: why, being Sonne to me, art thou ſo poynted at? Shall the bleſſed Sonne of Heauen proue a Micher, and eate Black-berryes? a queſtion not to be aſkt. Shall the Sonne of England proue a Theefe, and take Purſes? a queſtion to be aſkt. There is a thing, Harry, which thou haſt often heard of, and it is knowne to many

many in our Land, by the Name of Pitch: this Pitch, as ancient Writers doe report, doth defile, so doth the company thou keepest: for Harry, now I doe not speake to thee in Drinke, but in Teares, not in Pleasure, but in Passion; not in Words only, but in Woes also: and yet there is a vertuous man, whom I have often noted in thy company, but I know not his Name.

Prin. What manner of man, and it like your Majestie?

Falst. A goodly portly man, yfaith, and a corpulent, of a cheerefull Looke, a pleasing Eye, and a most noble Carriage, and as I think, his age some fifty, or by'r Lady inclining to threescore; and now I remember me, his Name is Falstaffe: if that man should be lewdly given, he deceiveth me, for Harry, I see Vertue in his Lookes. If then the Tree may be knowne by the Fruit, as the Fruit by the Tree, then peremptorily I say unto thee, that Falstaffe hath not his fellow. And let me see now, thou wanton Varlet, tell me, where hast thou been this month?

Prin. Dost thou speake like a King? doe thou stand for me, and I'le play my Father.

Falst. Depose me: if thou dost it halfe so gravely, so majestically, both in word and matter, hang me up by the heeles for a Rabbet sucker or a Poulters Hare.

Prin. Well, here I am set.

Falst. And here I stand: judge my Masters.

Prin. Now Harry, whence come you?

Falst. My Noble Lord, from Eastcheape.

Prin. The complaints I heare of thee are grievous.

Falst. 'Sblood, my Lord, they are falſe. Nay, I'le tickle ye for a young Prince.

Prin. Sweare'st thou, ungracious Boy? henceforth ne're looke on me. Thou art violently carried away from Grace: there is a Devill haunts thee, in the likenesse of a fat old Man; a Tunne of Man is thy Companion. Why dost thou converse with that Trunke of Humors, that Bolting-Hutch of Beastliness, that swolne Parcell of Dropsies, that huge Bombard of Sacke, that stuffed Cloake-bagge of Guts, that roasted Manning Tree Ox with the Pudding in his Belly, that reverend Vice, that grey Iniquity, that Father Ruffian, that Vanity in yeares? wherein is he good, but to taste Sacke, and drinke it? wherein neate and cleanly, but to carve a Capon, and eate it? wherein cunning, but in Craft? wherein Crafty, but in Villanie? wherein Villanous, but in all things? wherein worthy, but in nothing?

Falst. I would your Grace would take me with you: whom meanes your Grace?

Prince. That villanous abominable misleader of Youth, Falstaffe, that old white-bearded Satan.

Falst. My Lord, the man I know.

Prince. I know thou doſt.

Falst. But to say, I know more harme in him then in my ſelfe, were to say more than I know. That he is old (the more the pitty) his white haires doe witneſſe it: but that he is (saving your reverence) a Whore-master, that I utterly deny. If ſacke and ſugar be a fault, Heaven helpe the Wicked: if to be olde and merry be a ſinne, then many an old Host that I know, is damn'd: if to be fat, be to be hated, then Pharaohs lean Kine are to be loved. No, my good Lord, banish Peto, banish Bardolph, banish Poines: but for ſweet Jacke Falſtaffe, kinde Jacke Falſtaffe, true Jacke Falſtaffe, valiant Jacke Falſtaffe, and therefore more valiant, being as he is olde Jacke Falſtaffe, banish not him thy Harryes company, banish plumpe Jacke, and banish all the World.

Prince. I doe, I will.

Enter Bardolph running.

Bard. O, my Lord, my Lord, the Sheriffe, with a most monſtrous Watch, is at the doore.

Falſt. Out you Rogue, play out the Play: I have much to ſay in the behalfe of that Falſtaffe.

Enter the Hoſteſſe.

Hoſteſſe. O, my Lord, my Lord.

Falſt. Heigh, ho, an't, the Devill rides upon a Fiddle-ſtick: what's the matter?

Hoſteſſe. The Sheriffe and all the Watch are at the doore: they are come to ſearch the Houſe, ſhall I let them in?

Falſt. Do'ſt thou heare Hal, never call a true peece of Gold a Counterfeit: thou art eſſentially made, without ſeeming ſo.

Prince. And thou a naturall Coward, without inſtinct.

Falſt. I deny your Major: if you will deny the Sheriffe, ſo: if not, let him enter. If I become not a Cart as well as another man, a plague on my bringing up. I hope I ſhall as ſoone be ſtrangled with a Halter, as another.

Prince. Goe hide thee behinde the Arras: the reſt walke up above. Now my Maſters, for a true Face and good Conſcience.

Falſt. Both which I have had: but their date is out, and therefore I'le hide me. Exit.

Prince. Call in the Sheriffe.

Enter Sheriffe and the Carrier.

Prince. Now Maſter Sheriffe, what is your will with me?

Sher. First pardon me, my Lord. A Hue and Cry hath followed certaine men unto this house.

Prince. What men?

Sher. One of them is well knowne, my gracious Lord, a grosſe fat man.

Car. As fat as Butter.

Prince. The man, I doe aſſure you, is not here, For I my ſelfe at this time have employ'd him. And Sheriffe, I will engage my word to thee, That I will by to-morrow Dinner time, Send him to answer thee, or any man, For any thing he ſhall be charg'd withall: And ſo let me entreat you, leave the house.

Sher. I will, my Lord: there are two Gentlemen Have in this Robbery loſt three hundred Marks.

Prince. It may be ſo: if he have robb'd theſe men, He ſhall be anſwerable: and ſo farewell.

Sher. Good Night, my Noble Lord.

Prince. I think it is good Morrow, is it not?

Sher. Indeede, my Lord, I think it be two a Clocke. Exit.

Prince. This oyly Rascall is known as well as Paules: goe call him forth.

Peto. Falſtaffe faſt aſleepe behinde the Arras, and ſnorting like a Horſe.

Prince. Harke, how hard he fetches breath. Search his Pockets. &c.

He searcheth his Pockets, and findeth certaine Papers

Prince. What hast thou found?

Poto. Nothing but Papers, my Lord

Prince. Let's see, what be they? reade them.

Poto. Item, a Capon. ... ij.s.ij.d.
Item, Sawce ... ij.d.
Item, Sacke, two Gallons. ... v.s.viij.d.
Item, Anchoues and Sacke after Supper. ... ij.s.vj.d.
Item Bread. ... ob.

Prince. O monstrous, but one halfe penny-worth of Bread to this intollerable deale of Sacke? What there is set downe, keepe close, wee'le reade it at more aduantage: there let him sleepe till day. Ile to the Court in the Morning. Wee must all to the Warres, and thy place shall be honorable. Ile procure this fat Rogue a Charge of Foot, and I know his death will be a Match of Twelue-score. The Money shall be pay'd backe againe with aduantage. Be with me betimes in the Morning: and so good morrow Poto

Poto. Good-morrow, good my Lord. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Hotspurre, Worcester, Lord Mortimer, Owen Glendower.

Mort. These promises are faire, the parties sure,
And our induction full of prosperous hope.

Hotsp. Lord Mortimer, and Cousin Glendower,
Will you sit downe?
And Vncle Worcester: a plague vpon it,
I haue forgot the Mappe.

Glend. No, here it is:
Sit Cousin Percy, sit good Cousin Hotspurre:
For by that Name, as oft as Lancaster doth speake of you,
His Cheeke lookes pale, and with a rising sigh
He wisheth you in Heauen.

Hotsp. And you in Hell, as oft as he hearres Owen Glendower spoke of.

Glend. I cannot blame him: At my Natiuitie,
The front of Heauen was full of fierie shapes,
Of burning Cressets: and at my Birth,
The frame and foundation of the Earth
Shak'd like a Coward.

Hotsp. Why so it would haue done at the same season, if your Mothers Cat had but kitten'd, though your selfe had neuer beene borne.

Glend. I say the Earth did shake when I was borne.

Hotsp. And I say the Earth was not of my minde,
If you suppose, as fearing you, it shooke.

Glend. The Heauens were all on fire, the Earth did tremble.

Hotsp. Oh, then the Earth shooke
To see the Heauens on fire,
And not in feare of your Natiuitie.
Diseased Nature oftimes breakes forth
In strange eruptions: and the teeming Earth
Is with a kinde of Colicke pincht and vext,
By the imprisonment of vnruly Winde
Within her Wombe: which for enlargement striuing,
Shakes the old Beldame Earth, and tombles downe
Steeples, and mosse-grownie Towers. At your Birth,
Our Grandam Earth, hauing this distemperature,
In passion shooke.

Glend. Cousin, of many men
I doe not beare these Crossings. Giue me leaue
To tell you once againe, that at my Birth
The front of Heauen was full of fierie shapes,
The Goates ranne from the Mountaines, and the Heards
Were strangely clamorous to the frighted fields
These signes haue markt me extraordinarie,
And all the courses of my Life doe shew,
I am not in the Roll of common men.
Where is the Liuing, clipt in with the Sea,
That chides the Bankes of England, Scotland, and Wales
Which calls me Pupill, or hath read to me?
And bring him out, that is but Womans Sonne,
Can trace me in the tedious wayes of Art,
And hold me pace in deepe experiments

Hotsp. I thinke there's no man speakes better Welsh: Ile to Dinner.

Mort. Peace Cousin Percy, you will make him mad.

Glend. I can call Spirits from the vastie Deepe.

Hotsp. Why so can I, or so can any man,
But will they come, when you doe call for them?

Glend. Why, I can teach thee, Cousin, to command the Deuill.

Hotsp. And I can teach thee, Cousin, to shame the Deuill,
By telling truth. Tell truth, and shame the Deuill.
If thou haue power to raise him, bring him hither,
And Ile be sworne, I haue power to shame him hence.
Oh, while you liue, tell truth, and shame the Deuill.

Mort. Come, come, no more of this vnprofitable Chat.

Glend. Three times hath Henry Bullingbrooke made head
Against my Power: thrice from the Banks of Wye,
And sandy-bottom'd Seuerne, haue I sent him
Bootlesse home, and Weather-beaten backe.

Hotsp. Home without Boots,
And in foule Weather too,
How scapes he Agues in the Deuills name?

Glend. Come, here's the Mappe.
Shall wee diuide our Right,
According to our three-fold order taene?

Mort. The Arch-Deacon hath diuided it
Into three Limits, very equally:
England, from Trent, and Seuerne, hitherto,
By South and East, is to my part assign'd:
All Westward, Wales, beyond the Seuerne shore,
And all the fertile Land within that bound,
To Owen Glendower: And deare Coze, to you
The remnant Northward, lying off from Trent.
And our Indentures Tripartite are drawne:
Which being sealed enterchangeably,
(A Businesse that this Night may execute)
To morrow, Cousin Percy, you and I,
And my good Lord of Worcester, will set forth,
To meete your Father, and the Scottish Power,
As is appointed vs, at Shrewsbury.
My Father Glendower is not readie yet,
Nor shall wee needs his helpe these fourteene dayes.
Within that space, you may haue drawne together
Your Tenants, Friends, and neighbouring Gentlemen.

Glend. A shorter time shall send me to you, Lords:
And in my Conduct shall your Ladies come,
From whom you now must steale, and take no leaue,
For there will be a World of Water shed,

Vpon

Vpon the part of your Wife and you.
Hosp. Meeres [illegible] Mort [illegible] from Burton here,
In quart [illegible] not one of yours.
See, Powers Ruer comes [illegible],
And cuts me from the best of all my Land,
A huge fat Marre, a mile and more Cantre out.
He hauer [illegible] with speed downe,
And here the [illegible] Riuer Trent shall run,
In a new Channell, fare and euenly
It shall not wind with [illegible] any Sedge,
To [illegible] of [illegible] Bottome here.
Glend. Not wonder [illegible]
Mort. Yea, but marke how he bears his course,
And runnes me [illegible] with head aduantage out of [illegible],
Casting the [illegible] Current quite,
As [illegible] the [illegible] takes from vs.
Worc. Yea, but [illegible] charge vnto the Riuer there,
And on [illegible] Name [illegible] Law,
And [illegible] against the Land.
Hot. I [illegible] to [illegible] Courage with [illegible].
Glen. I can [illegible] stand.
Hot. Why [illegible]?
Glend. No, [illegible].
Hot. Why [illegible]?
Glend. Why [illegible].
Hot. I [illegible] marry, [illegible] stand out then, speake it in Welsh.
Glend. I can speake English, Lord as well as you,
For I was train'd vp in the English Court,
Where being but young, I framed to the Harpe
Many a [illegible] Dance, [illegible] well,
And gaue the Tongue a [illegible] Ornament,
A Vertue that was neuer seene in you.
Hot. Marry and I am [illegible] it with all my heart,
I had rather be a Kitten and cry mew,
Then one [illegible] these Meeter Ballad-mongers
I had rather heare a Brazen Candlestick turn'd,
Or a dry Wheele grate on the Axle tree,
And that would set my teeth nothing on edge:
Nothing so much, as mincing Poetry,
'Tis like the forc't gate of a shuffling Nagge.
Glend. Come you shall haue Trent turn'd.
Hosp. I [illegible] am I growne to this Land
To any well [illegible] end,
But to the world Barganet, make one,
Come I to [illegible] part of a Moyre
And see the Lady stares draw out, shall we be gone?
Glend. The Moone shines fayre,
You may away by Night:
Be halted, [illegible] and waited all,
Breake with your Wiues, of your departure hence:
I am afraid, my Daughter will run mad,
So much she doteth on her Mortimer. Exit
Mort. Fie, Cousin Percy, how you crosse my Father.
Hosp. I cannot chuse: sometime he angers me,
With telling me of the Moldwarpe and the Ant,
Of the Dreamer Merlin, and his Prophecies,
And of a Dragon, and a finne-lesse Fish,
A clip-winged Griffin, and a moulten Raucn,
A couching Lyon, and a ramping Cat,
And such a deale of skimble skamble Stuffe,
As puts me from my Faith. I tell you what,
He held me last Night at least nine houres,
In reckoning vp the seuerall Deuils Names,
That were his Lacqueyes:

I cry'd hum, and well, goe too,
But mark'd him not a word. O, he is as tedious
As a tyred Horse, a railing Wife,
Worse then a smoakie house. I had rather liue
With Cheese and garlicke in a Windmill farre,
Then feede on Cates, and haue him talke to me,
In any Summer-House in Christendome.
Mort. Exceeding well read and profited
In strange [illegible]
Valiant as a [illegible],
And as [illegible],
Sheds teares [illegible],
He [illegible] temper [illegible]
An [illegible],
Well [illegible],
I [illegible],
Mingles [illegible],
With [illegible],
[illegible],
Hot. Infidell, I [illegible] to wife for shame,
And [illegible] home enough.
To [illegible] patience.
Yea, [illegible] this fault
Through [illegible] Cowardice, Coward Blood,
And [illegible],
Yet [illegible],
Deepe [illegible],
[illegible],
I [illegible],
Vpon [illegible],
Be [illegible].
Hosp. Will [illegible]
Come [illegible]
Heere [illegible], and take our leaue.

Enter Glendower with the Ladie.

Mort. This is the [illegible], that angers me,
My [illegible],
Glend. My Daughter weepes, [illegible] part a while,
She'le be a Souldier too, she'le [illegible],
[illegible] and sing to my Aunt Percy.

Glendower speakes to her in Welsh, and she answers him in the same.

Glend. [illegible] heere
A [illegible],
O [illegible] good vpon.

The Lady speakes in Welsh.

Mort. I vnderstand thy Lookes, that pretty Welsh
Which thou powr'dst downe from these swelling Heauens,
I am too perfect in, and but for shame,
In such a parley should I answere thee.

The Lady againe in Welsh.

Mort. I vnderstand thy Kisses, and thou mine,
And that's a feeling disputation:
But I will neuer be a Truant, Loue,
Till I haue learn'd thy Language: for thy tongue

Mor-

Makes Welsh as sweet as Ditties highly penn'd,
Sung by a fayre Queene in a Summers Bowre,
With ravishing Division to her Lute.
Glend. Nay, if you melt, then will she runne madde.

The Lady speakes againe in Welsh.

Mort. O I am Ignorance it selfe in this.
Glend. Sit, and attend.
Come, come, you Pupil lay your Head with mine,
And rest your gentle Head upon her Lappe,
And the will sing the Song that pleaseth you,
And on your Eyelids Crowne the God of Sleepe,
Charming your blood with pleasing heavinesse,
Making such difference betwixt Wake and Sleepe,
As is the difference betwixt Day and Night,
The houre before the Heavenly Harnest'd Teeme
Begins his Golden Progresse in the East.
Mort. With all my heart I'le sit and heare her sing
By that time will our Booke, I think, be drawne.
Glend. Do so.
And those Musitians that shall play to you,
Hang in the Aire a thousand Leagues from hence;
And straight they shall be here: sit, and attend.
Hotsp. Come Kate, thou art perfect in lying, downe
Come, quicke, quicke, that I may lay my head in thy Lappe.
Lady. Go ye giddy Goose.

The Musicke plays.

Hotsp. Now I perceive the Devill understands Welsh,
And 'tis no marvell he is so humorous.
By'r Lady he is a good Musitian.
Lady. Then would you be nothing but Musicall,
For you are altogether governed by humours.
Lye still, ye Thiefe, and heare the Lady sing in Welsh.
Hotsp. I had rather heare Lady, my Brach howle in Irish.
Lady. Would'st have thy Head broken?
Hotsp. No.
Lady. Then be still.
Hotsp. Neyther 'tis a Womans fault.
Lady. Now God helpe thee.
Hotsp. To the Welsh Ladies bed.
Lady. What's that?
Hotsp. Peace, she sings.

Here the Lady sings a Welsh Song.

Hotsp. Come, I'le have your Song too.
Lady. Not mine, in good sooth.
Hotsp. Not yours, in good sooth? You are as hot a Cumbrian as ever broke Bread, and that's a wonder: and yet not a Cumbrian neither: am I deceived? Speake againe.
Lady. I will not sing.
Hotsp. 'Tis the next way to turne Taylor, or be Red-breast teacher. And the Indentures be drawne, Ile away within these two houres: and so come in when ye will. Exit.
Glend. Come, come, Lord Mortimer, you are as slow,
As hot Lord Percy is on fire to goe.
By this our Booke is drawne: we'le but seale,
And then to Horse immediately.
Mort. With all my heart. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the King, Prince of Wales, and others.

King. Lords, give us leave:
The Prince of Wales and I,
Must have some private conference.
But be neere at hand,
For we shall presently have need of you.
Exeunt Lords.
I know not whether Heaven will have it so,
For some displeasing service I have done,
That in his secret Doome out of my Blood,
He'le breede Revengement and a Scourge for me:
But thou do'st in thy passages of Life,
Make me believe, that thou art only markt
For the hot vengeance, and the Rod of heaven
To punish my Mistreadings. Tell me else,
Could such inordinate and low desires,
Such poore, such bare, such lewd, such meane attempts,
Such barren pleasures, rude society,
As thou art matcht withall, and grafted too,
Accompanie the greatnesse of thy blood,
And hold their levell with thy Princely heart?
Prince. So please your Majesty, I would I could Quit all offences with as cleare excuse,
As well as I am doubtlesse I can purge
My selfe of many I am charg'd withall:
Yet such extenuation let me begge,
As in reproofe of many Tales devis'd,
Which oft the Eare of Greatnesse needes must heare,
By smiling pick-thankes, and base Newes-mongers;
I may for some things true, wherein my youth
Hath faulty wandred and irregular,
Finde pardon on my true submission.
King. Heaven pardon thee.
Yet let me wonder Harry,
At thy affections, which do hold a Wing
Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors.
Thy place in Councell thou hast rudely lost,
Which by thy younger Brother is supply'de;
And art almost an alien to the hearts
Of all the Court and Princes of my blood.
The hope and expectation of thy time
Is ruin'd, and the Soule of every man
Prophetically do fore-thinke thy fall.
Had I so lavish of my presence beene,
So common hackney'd in the eyes of men,
So stale and cheape to vulgar Company,
Opinion, that did helpe me to the Crowne,
Had still kept loyall to possession,
And left me in reputelesse banishment,
A fellow of no marke, nor likelyhood.
By being seldome seene, I could not stirre,
But like a Comet, I was wondred at,

That

That men would tell their Children, This is he
Others would say, Where, which is Bullingbrooke.
And then I stole all Courtesie from Heauen,
And dreft my selfe in such humilitie,
That I did pluck Allegeance from mens hearts,
Loud shouts and Salutations from their mouthes,
Euen in the presence of the Crowned King.
Thus I did keepe my Person fresh and new,
My Presence, like a Robe Pontifical,
Ne're seene, but wonder'd at: and so my State,
Seldome but sumptuous, showed like a Feast,
And won by rarenesse such solemnitie.
The skipping King, he ambled vp and downe
With shallow Iesters, and rash bauen Wits,
Soone kindled, and soone burnt: carded his State,
Mingled his Royalty with Capring Fooles,
Had his great Name profaned with their Scornes,
And gaue his Countenance, against his Name,
To laugh at gibing Boyes, and stand the push
Of euery Beardlesse vaine Comparatiue:
Grew a Companion to the common Streetes,
Enfeoffed himselfe to Popularitie,
That being daily swallowed by mens Eyes,
They surfeited with Honey, and began
To loath the Taste of Sweetnesse, whereof a little
More than a little, is by much too much.
So when he had occasion to be seene
He was but as the Cuckow is in Iune,
Heard, not regarded, seene, but with such Eyes,
As sicke and blunted with Communitie,
Affoord no extraordinary gaze,
Such as is bent on Sunne-like Maiestie,
When it shines seldome in admiring Eyes
But rather drowz'd, and hung their eyelids downe,
Slept in his face, and rendred such aspect
As Cloudie men vse to their aduersaries,
Being with his presence glutted, gorged, and full.
And in that very Line, Harry standest thou
For thou hast lost thy Princely Priuiledge,
With vile participation. Not an Eye
But is a-weary of thy common sight,
Saue mine, which hath desired to see thee more
Which now doth that I would not haue it do,
Make blind it selfe with foolish tender nesse.
Prince. Shall I be net'red, my most gracious Lord,
Be more my selfe.
King. For all the World,
As thou art to this houre was Richard then,
When I from France set foot at Rauenspurgh,
And euen as I was then, is Percy now:
Now by my Scepter, and my Soule to boot,
He hath more worthy interest to the State
Then thou the shadow of Succession,
For of no Right, nor colour like to Right,
He doth fill fields with Harnesse in the Realme,
Turnes head against the Lyons armed Iawes,
And being no more in debt to yeeres, than thou,
Leades ancient Lords, and reuerend Bishops on
To bloody Battailes, and to crutch'd Armes.
What neuer-dying Honor hath he got,
Against renowned Douglas? whose high Deedes,
Whose hot Incursions, and great Name in Armes,
Holds from all Soldiers chiefe Maiority,
And Military Title Capitall
Through all the Kingdomes that acknowledge Christ,
Three times hath Hotspur Mars, in swathing Clothes,
This Infant Warrior, in his enterprises,
Discomfited great Douglas, ta'ne him once,
Enlarged him, and made a friend of him,
To fill the mouth of deepe Defiance vp,
And shake the peace and safety of our Throne.
And what say you to this? Percy, Northumberland,
The Arch-bishops Grace of Yorke, Douglas, Mortimer
Capitulate against vs, and are vp.
But wherefore do I tell these newes to thee?
Why Harry, doe I tell thee of my Foes,
Which art my neerest and dearest Enemie?
Thou that art like enough, through vassall Feare,
Base Inclination, and the start of Spleene,
To fight against me vnder Percies pay,
To dogge his heeles, and curtsie at his frowns,
To show how much thou art degenerate.
Prince. Do not think so, you shall not finde it so:
And Heauen forgiue them, that so much haue sway'd
Your Maiesties good thoughts away from me:
I will redeeme all this on Percies head,
And in the closing of some glorious day,
Be bold to tell you, that I am your Sonne,
When I will weare a Garment all of Blood,
And staine my fauours in a bloody Maske,
Which washt away, shall scowre my shame with it.
And that shall be the day, whene're it lights,
That this same Child doth cancell Honor and Renowne,
This gaine and Hotspur, that is sharpe-visaged Knight,
And your vnthought-of Harry chance to meet
For euer: Honor hangs on his Helme.
Why doubt you, were I ore-ruled or no, and on my head
My Fathers sins are scal'd. For the time will come,
That I shall make this Northerne Youth exchange
His glorious Deedes for my Indignities.
Percy is but my Factor, good my Lord,
To engrosse vp glorious Deedes on my behalfe:
And I will call him to so strict account,
That he shall render euery Glory vp,
Yea euen the slightest worship of his time,
Or I will teare the Reckoning from his Heart.
This in the Name of Heauen, I promise here:
The which if I performe, and do suruiue,
I doe beseech your Maiestie, may salue
The long-grauen Wounds of my Intemperance:
If not, the end of Life cancells all Bands,
And I will die a hundred thousand Deaths,
Ere breake the smallest parcell of this Vow.
King. A hundred thousand rebels die in this:
Thou shalt haue Charge, and soueraigne trust herein.

Enter Blunt.

How now good Blunt? thy Lookes are full of speed.
Blunt. So hath the Businesse that I come to speake of.
Lord Mortimer of Scotland hath sent word,
That Douglas and the English Rebels met
The eleuenth of this moneth, at Shrewsbury:
A mighty and a fearefull Head they are,
(If Promises be kept on euery hand)
As euer offered foule play in a State.
King. The Earle of Westmerland set forth to day:
With him we sent the Lord Iohn of Lancaster,
For this aduertisement is fiue dayes old.
On Wednesday next, Harry thou shalt set forward:
On Thursday, we our selues will march.
Our meeting is Bridgenorth: and Harry, you shall march

Through Glocestershire: by watch account,
Our Businesse valued some twelve dayes hence,
Our generall Forces at Bridgenorth shall meete.
Our Hands are full of Businesse: let's away,
Advantage feedes him fat, while men delay. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Falstaffe and Bardolph.

Fal. Bardolph, am I not falne away vilely, since this last action? do I not hate? do I not dislike? Why my skinne hangs about me like an old Lady's loose Gowne; I am withered like an old Apple-John. Well, I'le repent, and that suddenly, while I am in some liking; I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent. And I have not forgotten what the inside of a Church is made of, I am a Peppercorne, a Brewer's Horse: the inside of a Church! Company, villanous Company hath been the spoyle of me.

Bard. Sir Iohn, you are so fretfull, you cannot live long.

Fal. Why there it is: Come sing me a bawdy Song, make me merry. I was as vertuously given, as a Gentleman need to be, vertuously enclined, and I did not abuse my selfe in any kinde, above once in a quarter of an houre, pay the Score, and make all even. I did not above once or twice a day, loose my Money at Dice, my Good-name (I feare) by Drinking, and Drabbing. I have not walk'd above two miles afoote, so much for my Stomacke, and have not kept company with any man of reputation, these two and fifty yeares, but sometimes with my betters: and yet now I am growne so melancholy, that I could finde in my heart to repent. Where's my Page? Boy? Where's my Page? Go, see if you can finde him, if you can finde him, I'le give you a Penny.

Bard. Sir Iohn, you are so fretfull, you cannot live long.

Fal. Why there it is: Come sing me a bawdy Song, make me merry. I was as vertuously given, as a Gentleman need to be, vertuously enclined, and I did not abuse my selfe in any kinde, above once in a quarter of an houre, pay the Money that I borrowed three or foure times, lie every night in good compasse, and now I lie out of all order, out of compasse.

Bard. Why you are so fat, Sir Iohn, that you must needs be out of all compasse, out of all reasonable compasse, Sir Iohn.

Fal. Do thou amend thy Face, and I'le amend my Life: Thou art our Admirall, thou bearest the Lanterne in the Poope, but 'tis in the Nose of thee; thou art the Knight of the burning Lampe.

Bard. Why, Sir Iohn, my Face does you no harme.

Fal. No, I'le be sworne: I make as good use of it, as many a man doth of a Death's-Head, or a Memento Mori: I never see thy Face, but I thinke upon Hell-fire, and Dives that lived in Purple; for there he is in his Robes, burning, burning. If thou wert any way given to vertue, I would sweare by thy Face; my Oath should be, By this Fire. But thou art altogether given over; and wert indeede, but for the Light in thy Face, the Son of utter Darkenesse. When thou ran'st up Gads-Hill in the Night, to catch my Horse: I did not think, that thou hadst been an Ignis fatuus, or a Ball of Wild-fire, there's no Purchase in Money. O thou art a perpetuall Triumph, an everlasting Bone-fire-Light: thou hast saued me a thousand Markes in Links and Torches, walking with thee in the Night betwixt Tauerne and Tauerne. But the Sacke that thou hast drunke me, would have bought me Lights as good cheape, as the deerest Chandlers in Europe. I have maintain'd that Salamander of yours with fire, any time this two and thirtie yeares, Heauen reward me for it.

Bard. I would my Face were in your Belly.

Fal. So should I be sure to be heart-burn'd.

Enter Hostesse.

How now, Dame Partlet the Hen, have you enquir'd yet who pick'd my Pocket?

Hostesse. Why Sir Iohn, what doe you thinke, Sir Iohn? doe you thinke I keepe Theeues in my House? I have searched, I have enquired, so has my Husband, Man by Man, Boy by Boy, Seruant by Seruant: the tight'st of a hayre was never lost in my house before.

Fal. Ye lye Hostesse: Bardolph was shau'd, and lost many a hayre; and I'le be sworne my Pocket was pick'd. Go, you are a Woman, go.

Hostesse. Who I? I defie thee: I was never call'd so in mine owne house before.

Fal. Go to, I know you well enough.

Hostesse. No, Sir Iohn, you do not know me, Sir Iohn: I know you, Sir Iohn: you owe me Money, Sir Iohn, and now you picke a quarrell, to beguile me of it: I bought you a dozen of Shirts to your backe.

Fal. Dowlas, filthy Dowlas: I have given them away to Bakers Wiues, and they have made Boulters of them.

Hostesse. Now as I am a true Woman, Holland of eight shillings an ell. You owe Money here besides Sir Iohn, for your Diet, and by-Drinkings, and Money lent you, foure and twenty pounds.

Prince. He had his part of it, let him pay.

Hostesse. He? alas he is poore, he hath nothing.

Fal. How? Poore? Looke vpon his face. What call you rich? Let them coyne his Nose, let them coyne his Cheekes, I'le not pay a Denier. What, will you make a Yonker of me? Shall I not take mine ease in mine Inne, but I shall have my Pocket pick'd? I have lost a Seale-Ring of my Grandfathers worth forty Marke.

Hostesse. I have heard the Prince tell him, I know not how oft, that that Ring was Copper.

Fal. How? the Prince is a Iacke, a Sneake-Cuppe: and if hee were heere, I would cudgell him like a Dogge, if hee would say so.

Enter the Prince marching, and Falstaffe meets him, playing on his Truncheon like a Fife.

Fal. How now Lad? is the Winde in that Doore? Must we all march?

Bard. Yea, two and two, Newgate fashion.

Hostesse. My Lord, I pray you heare me.

Prince. What say'st thou, Mistresse Quickly? How does thy Husband? I loue him well, hee is an honest man.

Hostesse. Good, my Lord, heare mee.

Fal. Prethee let her alone, and list to mee.

Prince. What say'st thou, Iacke?

Fal. The other Night I fell asleepe heere behind the Arras, and had my Pocket pickt: this House is turn'd Bawdy-house, they picke Pockets.

Prince. What didst thou lose, Iacke?

Fal. Wilt thou beleeue me, Hal? Three or foure Bonds of fortie pound apeece, and a Seale-Ring of my Grandfathers.

Prince. A Trifle, some eight-penny matter.

Host. So I told him, my Lord, and I said, I heard your Grace say so: and (my Lord) hee speakes most vilely of you, like a foule-mouth'd man as hee is, and said, hee would cudgell you.

Prince. What hee did not?

Host. There's neyther Faith, Truth, nor Woman-hood in me else.

Fal. There's

Falst. There's no more faith in thee [illegible] a fluxe Prune; nor no more truth in thee, then in a drawne Fox: and for Woman-hood, Maid-marian may be the Deputies wife of the Ward to thee. Go you nothing go.

Host. Say what thing? what thing?

Falst. What thing? why a thing to thanke heauen on.

Host. I am no thing to thanke heauen on, I would thou shouldst know it. I am an honest mans wife, and setting thy Knighthood aside, thou art a knaue to call me so.

Falst. Setting thy womanhood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

Host. Say, what beast, thou knaue thou?

Fal. What beast? Why an Otter.

Prin. An Otter, sir Iohn? Why an Otter?

Fal. Why? She's neither fish nor flesh, a man knowes not where to haue her.

Host. Thou art vnworthy to say so; thou, or any man knowes where to haue me, thou knaue thou.

Prince. Thou say'st true Hostesse, and he slanders thee most grossely.

Host. So he doth you, my Lord, and sayde this other day, You ought him a thousand pound.

Prince. Sirrah, do I owe you a thousand pound?

Falst. A thousand pound Hal? A Million. Thy loue is worth a Million, thou owest me thy loue.

Host. Nay my Lord, he cal'd you Iacke, and said hee would cudgell you.

Fal. Did I, Bardolph?

Bar. Indeed Sir Iohn you said so.

Fal. Yea, if he said my Ring was Copper.

Prince. I say 'tis Copper. Dar'st thou be as good as thy word now?

Fal. Why Hal thou know'st as thou art but a man, I dare; but as thou art a Prince, I feare thee, as I feare the roaring of the Lyons Whelpe.

Prince. And why not as the Lyon?

Fal. The King himselfe is to be feared as the Lyon. Do not thou when thou art King, hang a Theefe.

Prin. No, if it should, how would thy guttes fall about thy knees. But sirra: There's no roome for Faith, Truth, nor Honesty, in this bosome of thine. It is all filled vp with Guttes and Midriffe. Charge an honest Woman with picking thy pocket? Why thou horrible impudent embost Rascall, if there were any thing in thy Pocket but Tauerne Reckonings, Memorandums of Bawdie houses, and one poore penny-worth of Sugar-candie to make thee long-winded, if thy pocket were enrich'd with any other iniuries but these, I am a Villaine. And yet you will stand to it, you will not Pocket vp wrong. Art thou not asham'd?

Fal. Do thou heare Hal? Thou knowest in the state of Innocency, Adam fell: and what should poore Iacke Falstaffe do, in the dayes of Villany? Thou seest, I haue more flesh then another man, and therefore more frailty. You confesse then you pickt my Pocket?

Prin. It appeares so by the Story.

Fal. Hostesse, I forgiue thee.
Go make ready Breakfast, loue thy Husband,
Looke to thy Seruants, and cherish thy Guests.
Thou shalt find me tractable to any honest reason.
Thou seest, I am pacified still.
Nay, I prethee be gone.

Exit Hostesse.

Now Hal, to the newes at Court for the Robbery, Lad? How is that answered?

Prin. O my sweet Beefe:
I must still be good Angell to thee.
The Monie is paid backe againe.

Fal. O, I do not like that paying backe, 'tis a double Labour.

Prin. I am good Friends with my Father, and may do any thing.

Fal. Rob me the Exchequer the first thing thou do'st, and do it with vnwash'd hands too.

Bard. Do my Lord.

Prin. I haue procured thee Iacke a Charge of Foot.

Fal. I would it had beene of Horse. Where shall I finde one that can lead well? O, for a fine theefe, of two and twentie, or thereabout. I am heynously vnprouided. Well, God be thanked for these Rebels, they offend none but the Vertuous. I loue them, I praise them.

Prin. Bardolph.

Bar. My Lord.

Prin. Go beare this Letter to Lord Iohn of Lancaster.
To my Brother Iohn. This to my Lord of Westmerland.
Go Poines, to horse, for thou and I,
Haue thirtie miles to ride yet ere dinner time.
Iacke, meet me to morrow i' the Temple Hall
At two a clocke in the afternoone,
There shalt thou know thy Charge, and there receiue
Money and Order for their Furniture.
The Land is burning, Percie stands on hye,
And either they, or we must lower lye.

Fal. Rare words! braue world.
Hostesse my breakfast, come:
O, I could wish this Tauerne were my drumme.

Exeunt omnes.

Actus Quartus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Harrie Hotspurre, Worcester, and Douglas.

Hot. Well said, my Noble Scot, if speaking truth
In this fine Age, were not thought flatterie,
Such attribute should Douglas haue,
As not a Soldier of this seasons stampe,
Should go so generall currant through the world.
By heauen I cannot flatter: I defie
The Tongues of Soothers. But a Brauer place
In my heart's loue, hath no man than you he[illegible].
Nay task me to my word, approue me Lord.

Dou. Thou art the King of Honor.
No man so potent breathes vpon the ground,
But I will Beard him.

Enter a Messenger.

Hot. Do so, and 'tis well. What Letters hast there?
I can but thanke you.

Mess. These Letters come from your Fathers.

Hot. Letters from him?
Why comes he not himselfe?

Mes. He cannot come, my Lord,
He is grieuous sicke.

Hot. How? has he the leysure to be sicke now,
In such a iustling time? Who leades his power?
Vnder whose Gouernment come they along?

Hen. His letters bears his mind, not these words.
Prin. [illegible] keepes his dore.
Hen. [illegible] my Lord, your Councell set forth
[illegible] of my departure hence,
[illegible]
[illegible] should be sent to me, and where,
[illegible]
[illegible] how
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Falstaffe and Bardolph.

Falst. Bardolph, get thee before to Couentry, fill me a Bottle of Sack: our Souldiers shall march through, wee'le to Sutton-cop-hill to Night.

Bard. Will you giue me Money, Captaine?

Falst. Lay out, lay out.

Bard. This Bottle makes an Angell.

Falst. And if it do, take it for thy paines: and if it make twentie, take them all, Ile answere the coynage. Bid my Lieutenant Peto meete me at the Townes end.

Bard. I will Captaine: farewell. Exit.

Falst. If I be not ashamed of my Souldiers, I am a sowter-Garnet. I haue misvs'd the Kings Presse damnably. I haue got, in exchange of a hundred and three Souldiers, three hundred and odde Pounds. I presse me none but good Householders, Yeomens Sonnes: inquire me out contracted Bachelers, such as had rather pay, then men: all shotes, and twice as many Commodities, are taken as my Money is. Well, I haue led my rag-of-Muffins where they are peppered: there's not three of my hundred and fifty left aliue, and them is the Rascall-hearted vagabond Prodigals, lately come from Swine-keeping, from eating Draffe and Husks. A mad fellow met me on the way, and told me, I had vnloaded all the Gibbets, and prest the dead bodyes. No eye hath seene such scar-Crowes. I'le not march through Couentry with them, that's flat. Nay, and the Villaines march wide betwixt the Legges, as if they had Gyues on, for indeede, I had the most of them out of Prison. There's not a shirt and a halfe in all my Company: and the halfe shirt is two Napkins tackt together, and throwne ouer the shoulders like a Heralds Coat, without sleeues: and the Shirt, to say the truth, stolne from my Host of S. Albones, or the red-Nose Inne-keeper of Daintry. But that's all one, they'le finde Linnen enough on euery Hedge.

Enter the Prince, and the Lord of Westmerland.

Prince. How now blowne Iacke? how now Quilt?

Falst. What Hall, How now mad Wag: what a Deuill do'st thou in Warwickshire? My good Lord of Westmerland, I cry you mercy, I thought your Honour had already beene at Shrewsbury.

West. Faith Sir Iohn, 'tis more then time that I were there, and you too: but my Powers are there alreadie. The King, I can tell you, lookes for vs all: we must away all to Night.

Falst. Tut, neuer feare me, I am as vigilant as a Cat, to steale Creame.

Prince. I think to steale Creame indeed, for thy theft hath already made thee Butter: but tell me, Iacke, whose fellowes are those that come after?

Falst. Mine, Hal, mine.

Prince. I did neuer see such pittifull Rascals.

Falst. Tut, tut, good enough to toste Foode for Powder, foode for Powder: they'le fill a Pit, as well as better: tush, man, mortall men, mortall men.

Westm. I, but Sir Iohn, me thinkes they are exceeding poore and bare, too beggarly.

Falst. Faith, for their pouertie, I know not where they had that: and for their bareneſſe, I am sure they neuer learn'd that of me.

Prince. No, Ile be sworne, vnleſſe you call three fingers on the Ribbes bare. But sirra, make haste, Percy is already in the field.

Falst. What, is the King encamp'd?

Westm. He is, Sir Iohn, I feare we shall stay too long.

Falst. Well, to the latter end of a Fray, and the beginning of a Feast, fits a dull fighter, and a keene Guest.

Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Hotspur, Worcester, Douglas, and Vernon.

Hotsp. Well'e fight with him to Night.

Worc. It may not be.

Doug. You giue him then aduantage.

Vern. Not a whit.

Hotsp. Why say you so? Looks he not for supply?

Vern. So do we.

Hotsp. His is certaine, ours is doubtfull.

Worc. Good Cousin be aduis'd, stirre not to Night.

Vern. Do not, my Lord.

Doug. You do not counsell well:
You speake it out of feare and cold heart.

Vern. Do me no slander, Douglas: by my Life,
And I dare well maintaine it with my Life,
If well-respected Honour bid me on,
I hold as little counsell with weake feare,
As you my Lord, or any Scot that this day liues.
Let it be seene to morrow in the battell,
Which of vs feares.

Doug. Yea, or to night.

Vern. Content.

Hotsp. To night, say I.

Vern. Come, come, it may not be.
I wonder much, being men of such great leading as you are,
That you foresee not what impediments
Drag backe our expedition: certaine Horse
Of my Cousin Vernons are not yet come vp.
Your Vnckle Worcesters Horse came but to day,
And now their pride and mettell is asleepe,
Their courage with hard labour tame and dull,
That not a Horse is halfe the halfe of himselfe.

Hotsp. So are the Horses of the Enemie
In generall, iourney bated, and brought low.
The better part of ours are full of rest.

Worc. The number of the King exceedeth ours:
For Gods sake, Cousin, stay till all come in.

The Trumpet sounds a Parley. Enter Sir Walter Blunt.

Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the King,
If you vouchsafe me hearing, and respect.
Hotsp. Welcome, Sir Walter Blunt
And would to God you were of our determination
Some of vs loue you well: and euen those some
Enuie your great deseruings, and good name,
Because you are not of our qualitie,
But stand against vs like an Enemie.
Blunt. And Heauen defend, but still I should stand so,
So long as out of Limit, and true Rule,
You stand against anoynted Maiestie.
But to my Charge.
The King hath sent to know
The nature of your Griefes, and whereupon
You conjure from the Breast of Ciuill peace,
Such bold Hostilitie, teaching his dutious Land
Audacious Cruelty. If that the King
Haue any way your good Deserts forgot,
Which he confesseth to be manifold,
He bids you name your Griefes, and with all speed
You shall haue your desires, with interest,
And Pardon absolute for your selues, and these,
Herein mis-led, by your suggestion.
Hotsp. The King is kind:
And well we know, the King
Knowes at what time to promise, when to pay.
My Father, my Vnckle, and my selfe,
Did giue him that same Royaltie he weares:
And when he was not sixe and twentie strong,
Sicke in the Worlds regard, wretched, and low,
A poore vnminded Out-law, sneaking home,
My Father gaue him welcome to the shore
And when he heard him sweare, and vow to God,
He came but to be Duke of Lancaster,
To sue his Liuerie, and beg his Peace,
With teares of Innocency, and terrors of Zeale,
My Father, in kinde heart and pitty mou'd,
Swore him assistance, and performe it too.
Now, when the Lords and Barons of the Realme
Perceiu'd Northumberland did lean to him,
The more and lesse came in with Cap and Knee,
Met him in Boroughs, Cities, Villages,
Attended him on Bridges, stood in Lanes,
Layd Gifts before him, proffer'd him their Oathes,
Gaue him their Heires, as Pages followed him,
Euen at the heeles, in golden multitudes.
He presently, as Greatnesse knowes it selfe,
Steps me a little higher than his Vow
Made to my Father, while his blood was poore,
Vpon the naked shore at Ravenspurgh:
And now forsooth, takes on him to reforme
Some certaine Edicts, and some strait Decrees,
That lye too heauy on the Commonwealth,
Cryes out vpon abuses, seemes to weepe
Ouer his Countries Wrongs: and by this Face,
This seeming Brow of Iustice, did he winne
The hearts of all that he did angle for.
Proceed no further, cut me off the Heads
Of all the Fauorites, that the absent King
In deputation left behinde him here,
When hee was personall in the Irish Warre.
Blunt. Tut, I came not to heare this.
Hotsp. Then to the point.
In short time after, he deposed the King.
Soone after that, depriu'd him of his Life:
And in the neck of that, task't the whole State.
To make that worse, suffer'd his Kinsman March,
Who is, and euery Owner were plac'd,
Indeede his King, to be engag'd in Wales,
There, without Ransome, to lye forfeited:
Disgrac'd me in my happie Victories,
Sought to intrap me by intelligence,
Rated my Vnckle from the Councell-Boord,
In rage dismiss'd my Father from the Court,
Broke Oath on Oath, committed Wrong on Wrong,
And in conclusion, drone vs to seeke out
This Head of safetie: and withall, to pry
Into his Title: the which wee finde
Too indirect, for long continuance.
Blunt. Shall I returne this answer to the King?
Hotsp. Not so, Sir Walter.
Wee'le with-draw awhile
Goe to the King, and let there be impawn'd
Some suretie for a safe returne againe,
And in the Morning early shall my Vnckle
Bring him our purposes: and so farewell.
Blunt. I would you would accept of Grace and Loue.
Hotsp. And't may be, so we shall.
Blunt. Pray Heauen you doe. Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Enter the Arch Bishop of Yorke, and Sir Michell

Arch. Hie, good Sir Michell, beare this sealed Briefe
With winged haste to the Lord Marshall,
This to my Cousin Scroope, and all the rest
To whom they are directed.
If we knew how much they doe import,
You would make haste.
Sir Mich. My good Lord, I guesse their tenor.
Arch. Like enough you doe.
To morrow, good Sir Michell, is a day,
Wherein the fortune of ten thousand men
Must bide the touch. For Sir, at Shrewsbury,
As I am truly given to vnderstand,
The King with mighty and quick raysed Power,
Meetes with Lord Harry: and I feare Sir Michell,
What with the sicknesse of Northumberland,
Whose Power was in the first proportion,
And what with Owen Glendowers absence thence,
Who with them was rated firmely too,
And comes not in, ouer-rul'd by Prophecies,
I feare the Power of Percy is too weake,
To wage an instant tryall with the King.
Sir Mich. Why my good Lord you need not feare,
There is Douglas and Lord Mortimer.
Arch. No, Mortimer is not there
Sir Mich. But there is Mordake Vernon, Lord Harry Percy,
And there is my Lord of Worcester,
And a Head of gallant Warriors,
Noble Gentlemen.

Arch. And

Arch. And so there is but very little King that's drawne
The Royall Head of all the Land together
The Prince of Wales, Lord Iohn of Lancaster,
The Noble Westmerland and warlike Blunt,
And many more Corriuals, and deare men
Of estimation, and command in Armes.
Sir M. Doubt not my Lord of all be well opposd
Arch. I hope no letter lesse fortune to care,
And to present the worst, Sir Michaell speed
For if Lord Marsh be not, and the King
Discouers vs, power, he meanes to leaue vs,
For he hath heard of our Conniuance,
And, tis but wisedome to make strong against vs,
Therefore make all, I may say we presume
Those letters hasted for, to reach Sir Michaell. Exeunt.

Alius Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter the King, Prince of Wales, Lord Iohn of Lancaster,
[illegible]

King. How bloodily the Sunne begins to peere
Aboue yon busky hill, the day looks pale
At his distemperature.
Prin. The Southern wind
Doth play the Trumpet to his purposes,
And by his hollow whistling in the leaues,
Foretels a tempest and a blustring day.
King. Then with the losers let it sympathize,
For nothing can seeme foule to those that win.
The Trumpet sounds.
Enter Worcester.

King. How now my Lord of Worster? 'Tis not well
That you and I should meet vpon such termes,
As now we meet. You haue deceiu'd our trust,
And made vs doffe our easie robes of peace,
To crush our old limbes in vngentle Steele:
This is not well, my Lord, this is not well.
What say you to it? will you againe vnknit
This churlish knot of all abhorred warre?
And moue in that obedient Orbe againe,
Where you did giue a faire and naturall light,
And be no more an exhal'd Meteor,
A prodigie of Feare, and a Portent
Of broached Mischeefe to the vnborne Times?
Wor. Heare me, my Liege:
For mine owne part, I could be well content
To entertaine the lag-end of my life
With quiet houres. For I do protest,
I haue not sought the day of this dislike.
King. You haue not sought it? how comes it then?
Fal. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it.
Prin. Peace, chewet peace.
Wor. It pleas'd your Maiesty, to turne your lookes
Of Fauour, from my Seruice, and from our House,
And yet I must remember you my Lord,
We were the first, and dearest of your Friends.
For you, my staffe of Office did I breake
In Richards time, and poasted day and night
To meet you on the way, and kisse your hand,
When yet you were in place, and in account
Nothing so strong and fortunate as I;
It was my Selfe, my Brother, and his Sonne,
That brought you home and boldly did outdare
The dangers of the time. You swore to vs,
And you did swear that Oath at Doncaster,
That you did nothing purpose 'gainst the State,
Nor claime no further, then your new-falne right,
The seate of Gaunt Duke of Lancaster.
To this, we swore our aide. But in a short space,
It rain'd downe Fortune showring on your head,
And such a flood of Greatnesse fell on you,
What with our helpe, what with the absent King,
What with the iniuries of wanton time,
The seeming sufferances that you had borne,
And the contrarious winds that held the King
So long in the vnlucky Irish Warres
That all in England did repute him dead,
And from this swarme of fayre aduantages,
You tooke occasion to be quickly woo'd,
To gripe the generall sway into your hand,
Forgot your Oath vpon the Doncaster,
And being now trimm'd in thine owne deceits,
You start about to patch and edge your faith
With this same copesmate of base Pouerty,
That smoothing smooth'ring flattery. I come to you
As Spirits of Noate warned and so long,
Now my Side-Conscience calls you to my Heele.
Tell me, if you hold not that Morne more thrifty,
To adde vnto your last Offence a Kingdome,
Which the false hand of well-fac'd Fortune proffers.
Prin. Rebellion had mistaken him before.
Wor. Looke to it, Grandsire, with your mouth thus stopt,
You shall not haue the allowance of an Earle,
Nor a Heart-string to call Father.
For mine owne part, Lords, I did decline the offer,
Proffer'd me by the Welsh Owen Glendower,
Till I heard how you had dealt with Hotspur
And his Power, at Shrewsbury, and then I came
Darting my Light on you, my Sonne in Law,
And my deere Friends, the Lord of Northumberland,
Whose Warres, and whose Friendship daily grew
Full to the Tide. Your Liberall Hand then vp Lifted to the Crowne, but your first Enterprize
Was to embrace the Proffer of meere Power,
Euen such as we had spent our Blouds withall.
And when it came to pinch, and to assure
The Lasting Peace, to mortize it with Faire Oathes,
Such as are made most Holy by the Sworne,
And gilded with the Guildry of Braue Hearts,
Then was I sent home from the Marches,
To parley my Sweet Friend to this Enterview,
Where Order should be taken for my Griefe.
In briefe, the Articles of our Couenant
Stood vpon Sifting, and no part I find
Of all those Euen Scales, weighing Equall Gaine
Of Priuiledge, Charter, Ransome, or Deliuerance,
But flye the Light. And for my Life, my Liege,
I rest as one vpon a Tenure, and Death
Is alwayes Entred as my Absolute Heire.
Then set before my Eyes the Danger of my Trust,
Growne great by your Protection, sicke by your Subtracting.
And last of all, consider the Assurance
Of Times, on whose Wings I might ouer-peere
The Shortnesse of my Life, hauing both Ball and Marke
Before mine Eyes, without Hope to faile,
Or Fortune shifting the Marke, and in a word,
Prosperity, that euer Failes to Teach vs
Vnto our Ruine. Why should I then be false?
Since not the Glasse more apt to break then I.
Looke for no lesse of Truth in me, then Doubt in you.
King. And I haue heard your Griefes, so dare we enter thee,
Albeit, considerations infinite

Do

Do make against it. No good Worke, no,
We loue our people well; euen those we loue
That are misled vpon your Cousins part:
And will they take the offer of our Grace:
Both he, and they, and you, yea, euery man
Shall be my Friend againe, and I'le be his.
So tell your Cousin, and bring me word
What he will do. But if he will not yeeld,
Rebuke and dread correction wait on vs,
And they shall do their Office. So be gone,
We will not now be troubled with reply,
We offer faire, take it aduisedly.

Exit Worcester.

Prin. It will not be accepted, on my life,
The Douglas and the Hotspurre both together,
Are confident against the world in Armes.

King. Heare therefore, euen I leader to his charge,
For on their answer will we set on them;
And God befriend vs, as our cause is iust. Exeunt.

Manet Prince and Falstaffe.

Fal. Hal, if thou see me downe in the battell,
And bestride me, so 'tis a point of friendship.

Prin. Nothing but a Colossus can do thee that friendship.
Say thy prayers, and farewell.

Fal. I would it were bed-time, Hal, and all well.

Prin. Why, thou owest God a death.

Fal. 'Tis not due yet, would be loth to pay him before his day. What need I be so forward with him that calls not on me? Well, 'tis no matter, Honour pricks me on. But how if Honour pricke me off when I come on? How then? Can Honour set to a leg? No. Or an arme? No. Or take away the griefe of a wound? No.
Honour hath no skill in Surgery then? No. What is Honour? A word. What is that word Honour? Aire. A trim reckoning. Who hath it? He that died a Wednesday. Doth he feele it? No. Doth he heare it? No. Is it insensible then? Yea, to the dead. But will it not liue with the liuing? No. Why? Detraction will not suffer it. Therefore I'le none of it. Honour is a meere Scutcheon, and so ends my Catechisme. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Worcester, and Sir Richard Vernon.

Wor. O no, my Nephew must not know, Sir Richard,
The liberall kinde offer of the King.

Ver. 'Twere best he did.

Wor. Then are we all vndone.
It is not possible, it cannot be,
The King should keepe his word in louing vs,
He will suspect vs still, and finde a time
To punish this offence in other faults:
Suspition will shall be stucke full of eyes,
Whole Treasons liuery shall be sowed in the Foxe,
Who, well inclosed in the Lyons shag-hide,
Will scape vntouch'd, and scorne Inquisitors.
For we shall locke (as men doe in a Map)
The dangers of the Land, but not know how
To shunne them. Therefore it is requisite,
As well to know the vtmost of our hope,
As what we feare. Therefore my Nephew must
Be still kept in, lest wanting him, our Friends
Grow key-cold, and looke strangely on vs.

Ver. Why, my good Vncle, you mistake the King:
He bears a Temper of more Confidence
Than you imagine.

Wor. Yet he still remembers
The hot blood he is of, and the boldnesse
Of his youth, which euen in the quietest close
Of peace will breake out: and in my Conscience,
He will not trust vs, this we may assure him of.
He knowes the power we haue, and so will hope
Before the time we will inforce our hopes.

Ver. Be sure not to acquaint him with your feares:
Feare and Reuenge, friend to Destruction both,
Like Gallants rushing out of Tauerns doores,
Full of Resolue, while none doth know what hee is.

Wor. Which I could well be without, but that I doe
Open my Griefes to him, to qualifie
The rage and yeelding of his Iniuries.

Ver. If all the Grieues are true that you haue told,
How strongly doe you thinke to proue
Our Nephew guilty of Reuenge?

Wor. Easily,
As proue him guilty of high Treason, late
Broke out in Armes against the King.

Ver. Some light displeasures done him, in regard
Of Reputation and of Honour,
Are thrust on him by the Necessity
Of Present Times.

Wor. O no, my Nephew must not know, Sir Richard,
The liberall kinde offer of the King.

Ver. 'Twere best he did.

Wor. Then are we all vndone.

As what we feare. Therefore my Nephew must
Be still kept in, lest wanting him, our Friends
Grow key-cold, and looke strangely on vs.

Ver. Why, my good Vncle, you mistake the King:
He beares a Temper of more Confidence
Than you imagine.

Wor. Yet he still remembers
The hot blood he is of, and the boldnesse
Of his youth, which euen in the quietest close
Of peace will breake out: and in my Conscience,
He will not trust vs, this we may assure him of.

Ver. Some light displeasures done him, in regard
Of Reputation and of Honour,
Are thrust on him by the Necessity
Of Present Times.

Wor. Oh, yes, my Nephew must not know of this.
And an adopted name of Preuiledge,
A haire-brain'd Hotspurre, gouern'd by a Spleene:
All his offences liue vpon my head,
And on his Fathers. We did traine him on,
And his corruption being taken from vs,
We as the Spring of all, shall pay for all.
Therefore good Cousin, let not Harry know
In any case, the offer of the King.

Ver. Deliuer what you will, I say 'tis so.
Heere comes your Cousin.

Enter Hotspurre.

Hot. My Vncle is return'd,
Deliuer vp my Lord of Westmerland.
Vncle, what newes?

Wor. The King will bid you battell presently.

Dow. Defie him by the Lord of Westmerland.

Hot. Lord Douglas, Go you and tell him so.

Dow. Marry and shall, and very willingly.

Exit Douglas.

Hot. There is no seeming mercy in the King.

Hot. Did you beg any? God forbid.

Wor. I told him gently of our grieuances,
Of his Oath-breaking: which I mended thus,
By now forswearing that he is forsworne,
He calls vs Rebels, Traitors, and will scourge
With haughty armes, this hatefull name in vs.

Enter Douglas.

Dow. Arme Gentlemen, to Armes, for I haue thrown
A braue defiance in King Henries teeth.
And Westmerland that was engag'd did beare it,
Which cannot choose but bring him quickly on.

Wor. The Prince of Wales stept forth before the King,
And Nephew, challeng'd you to single fight.

Hot. O would the quarrell lay vpon our heads,
And that no man might draw short breath to day,
But I and Harry Monmouth. Tell me, tell me,
How shew'd his Talke of Seeming cold Demeanor?

Ver. No, by my Soule, I neuer in my life
Did see a Carriage more remou'd,
More vnderfooted with a Regular Deportance to a Brother, than he
To gentle exercise, and proofe of Armes.
He gaue you all the Duties of a Man,
Trimm'd vp your praises with a Princely tongue,
Spoke your deseruings like a Chronicle,
Making you euer better than his praise,
By still dispraising praise valew'd with you:
And which became him like a Prince indeed,
He made a blushing cital of himselfe,
And chid his Trewant youth with such a Grace,
As if the passages were a double spirit
Of teaching, and of learning instantly.
There did he pause. But let me tell the World,
If he outlue the enuie of this day,
England did neuer owe so sweet a hope,
So much misconstrued in his Wantonnesse.

Hot. Cousin, I thinke thou art enamored
On his Follies: neuer did I heare
Of any Prince so wild at liberty.
But be he as he will, yet once ere night,
I will imbrace him with a Souldiers armes,
That he shall shrinke vnder my curtesie.
Armes, armes with speed. And Fellowes, Soldiers, Friends,
Better consider what you haue to do,
That I that haue not well the gift of Tongue,

Can

Scena Tertia.

So many of his shadowes thou hast met,
And not the very King. I haue two Boyes
Seeke Percy and thy selfe about the Field:
But seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily,
I will assay thee: so defend thy selfe.

Dou. I feare thou art another counterfeit:
And yet in faith thou bear'st thee like a King:
But mine I am sure thou art whoe're thou be,
And thus I win thee. They fight, the K. being in danger,
Enter Prince.

Prin. Hold vp thy head vile Scot, or thou art like
Neuer to hold vp againe: the Spirits
Of valiant Shirley, Stafford, Blunt are in my Armes;
It is the Prince of Wales that threatens thee,
Who neuer promises, but he meanes to pay.
They fight, Douglas flyeth.
Cheerely My Lord: how fare's your Grace?
Sir Nicholas Gawsey hath for succour sent,
And so hath Clifton: Ile to Clifton straight.

King. Stay, and breathe awhile.
Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion,
And shew'st thou makest some tender of my life
In this faire rescue thou hast brought to me.

Prin. O heauen, they did me too much injury,
That euer said I hearkned to your death.
If it were so, I might haue let alone
The insulting hand of Douglas ouer you,
Which would haue beene as speedy in your end,
As all the poysonous Potions in the world,
And sau'd the Treacherous labour of your Sonne.

K. Make vp to Clifton, Ile to Sir Nicholas Gawsey. Exit
Enter Hotspur.

Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth.

Prin. Thou speak'st as if I would deny my name.

Hot. My name is Harry Percie.

Prin. Why then I see a very valiant rebel of that name.
I am the Prince of Wales, and think not Percy,
To share with me in glory any more:
Two Starres keepe not their motion in one Sphere,
Nor can one England brooke a double reigne,
Of Harry Percy, and the Prince of Wales.

Hot. Nor shall it Harry, for the houre is come
To end the one of vs, and would to heauen,
Thy name in Armes, were now as great as mine.

Prin. Ile make it greater, ere I part from thee,
And all the budding Honors on my Crest,
Ile crop to make a Garland for my head.

Hot. I can no longer brooke thy Vanities. Fight.
Enter Falstaffe.

Fal. Well said Hal, to it Hal. Nay you shall finde no Boyes play heere I can tell you.
Enter Douglas; he fights with Falstaffe, who falls downe as if he were dead, and the Prince kills Percie.

Hot. O Harry thou hast rob'd me of my youth:
I better brooke the losse of brittle life,
Then those proud Titles thou hast won of me.
They wound my thoughts worse then thy sword my flesh.
But thought's the slaue of life, and Life, Time's foole;
And Time that takes survey of all the world,
Must haue a stop. O, I could prophesie,
But that the earthy and cold hand of death,
Lies on my Tongue. No Percy, thou art dust
And food for

Prin. For Worms braue Percy. Farewell great heart:
Ill-weau'd Ambition, how much art thou shrunke?
When that this bodie did containe a spirit,
A Kingdome for it was too small a bound.
But now two paces of the vilest Earth
Is roome enough. This Earth that beares thee dead,
Beares not aliue so stout a Gentleman.
If thou wert sensible of courtesie,
I should not make so great a shew of Zeale.
But let my fauours hide thy mangled face,
And euen in thy behalfe Ile thanke my selfe
For doing these fayre Rites of Tendernesse.
Adieu, and take thy praise with thee to heauen,
Thy ignomy sleepe with thee in the graue,
But not remembred in thy Epitaph.
What? Old Acquaintance? Could not all this flesh
Keepe in a little life? Poore Iacke, farewell:
I could haue better spar'd a better man.
O, I should haue a heauy misse of thee,
If I were much in loue with Vanity.
Death hath not strucke so fat a Deere to day,
Though many dearer in this bloody fray.
Imbowell'd will I see thee by and by,
Till then, in blood, by Noble Percie lye. Exit
Falstaffe ariseth vp.

Falst. Imbowell'd? If thou imbowell me to day, Ile giue you leaue to powder me, and eat me too to morrow. 'Twas time to counterfeit, or that hotte Termagant Scot had paid me scot and lot too. Counterfeit? I am no counterfeit: to die, is to be a counterfeit, for he is but the counterfeit of a man, who hath not the life of a man: but to counterfeit dying, when a man thereby liueth, is to be no counterfeit, but the true and perfect image of life indeede. The better part of Valour, is Discretion, in the which better part, I haue saued my life. I am afraid of this Gun-powder Percy though he be dead. How if he should counterfeit too, and rise? I am afraid he would proue the better counterfeit. Therefore Ile make him sure: yea, and Ile sweare I kill'd him. Why may not he rise as well as I? Nothing confutes me but eyes, and no-body sees me. Therefore sirra, with a new wound in your thigh, come you along with me. Takes Hotspur on his backe.
Enter Prince and Iohn of Lancaster.

Prin. Come Brother Iohn, full braue hast thou fleshed thy Maiden sword.

Iohn. But soft, whom haue we heere?
Did you not tell me this fat man was dead?

Prin. I did, I saw him dead,
Breathlesse and bleeding on the ground. Art thou aliue?
Or is it fantasie that playes vpon our eye-sight?
I prethee speake, we will not trust our eyes
Without our eares. Thou art not what thou seem'st.

Fal. No, that's certaine. I am not a double man: but if I be not Iacke Falstaffe then am I a Iacke. There is Percy, if your Father will do me any Honour, so: if not, let him kill the next Percie himselfe. I looke to be either Earle or Duke, I can assure you.

Prin. Why Percy I kill'd my selfe, and saw thee dead.
